O'Tawa Cymbals

these musical cymbals formed the heart of the drumheller harp. (VD)

Otek, Senni

this woman was a native of the planet Lianna, born to parents who were both engineers for Sienar Fleet Systems. Senni herself was curious and inquisitive, and chafed at the Imperial indoctrination holo-vids she was forced to watch as a child. When she tried to contact a rebel cell on Lianna, the Empire traced her movements and arrested her family for treason. Senni herself barely escaped when the local Alliance agents rescued her, but her parents were killed in a subsequent rescue attempt. Senni joined the Alliance as a technician, and eventually became a member of Korren Starchaser's scouting team. She served aboard the Jedi Dreamer as the senior technician. (SWJ13)

Oth

this female name was common among the Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Other, The

a member of a large number of aliens who have existed for eons in the depths of space, descending from a race of sentient machines created by a race that was wiped out when their sun went supernova. Their race has grown stagnant, and they long for excitement and risks. One such risk became a problem for them, as it caused violence and destruction, and they were forced to recover it. (LCS)

Otherspace

this was the name given to a vast expanse of dead, lifeless worlds floating in a dark gray nothingness near a huge black hole. It was known to a small group of deep-space explorers, as well as the Charon race, whose homeworld was located near the black hole. Otherspace was dominated by clouds of energy which swirl and swarm around starships, causing problems with navigational and communications systems. The stars found in Otherspace appeared as smaller black holes, and many of their planets were scoured by the Charon and their death cult. Often, starships which suffered hyperdrive malfunctions while traveling through hyperspace got deposited into otherspace, where they wandered aimlessly, unable to maintain their shipboard systems and unable to resist the Charon. (OS, UANT)

Otherspace

this specialized obstacle was used on swoopchasing courses. It was similar in design to The Channel, in that it was a completely enclosed portion of the race course. However, there was no light inside the Otherspace arena to guide the riders. Instead, a series of infrared beacons marked out the path which the riders must take. This required that riders quickly put on a set of infrared goggles prior to entry, or they would be utterly blind inside the arena. Alien races who could see in both the visible and infrared spectra were at a slight advantage on courses with this obstacle. Because of the high level of danger involved with the Otherspace obstacle, the only sanctioned races which use it are open to experts with several years of experience. Outlaw races used Otherspace at any level, and often booby-trapped the Otherspace arena with ion flares to momentarily blind those riders wearing infrared goggles. (BSS)

Otherworld Encounter

this adventure supplier was located on Cloud City, and provided paying customers with a chance to hike across the surface of Bespin's inner core in a virtual-reality environment. To ensure that patrons are

Othona, Dalus

this man served as the Provost of the Alderaan University, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN4)

Othone, Johun

this man was the Padawan learner who was chosen by Lord Hoth, more than 1,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. Othone had been promoted to the rank of Jedi Knight just before Hoth's death at the Battle of Ruusan, and petitioned the Old Republic Senate to fund a memorial to the sacrifices made by the Army of Light in protecting the galaxy. While the Senate readily agreed to fund such a memorial, the Jedi Council denied Othone's request. They said that any memorial to such an act of destruction might serve to draw more attention to it, and that Lord Hoth and his forces were simply doing their duty. Othone was outraged, and he pleaded his case before the media. As popular opinion swelled behind the "callousness of the Jedi", Othone took his Senate funding and traveled to Ruusan to erect the memorial himself. At the site of the decisive struggle in the Battle of Ruusan, Othone created the Valley of the Jedi in honor of his fallen Master and comrades. (PJSB) manufactured by Arantha Communications, this device allowed its owner to listen into a variety of orbital transmissions. Using a frequency scanner, the OTM-900 provided access to communications between picket ships and port authorities, local police forces, and starship pilots. It had a limited range of fifteen light-years, but provided users with a glimpse of what was happening above them. (GFT)

OTM-900

Otoga 222 Droid

this was a series of worker droid, similar in stature to the DUM-series of pit droids. Often cheaper than the Cyrillian DUM droids, these droids are sometimes used by podracers. The Otoga 222 has a small, humanoid body topped by a small, wheel-shaped head. (SW1, SWI50)

Otoh Gunga

this was the largest city of the Gungan race, located deep within the waters of Lake Paonga, on the planet Naboo. Boss Nass ruled a tribe Gungans from this bubble city in the period leading up to the Battle of Naboo. During the Trade Federation's occupation of Naboo, the Gungans abandoned the city and fled to their sacred place, hoping to avoid the war. In the wake of the Battle of Naboo, Otoh Gunga became overcrowded, as it became something of a tourist attraction to those beings who visited Naboo. (SW1, IG1, SON, OWS)

Otoh Gunga Bongomeken Cooperative

this Gungan construction facility was responsible for making many of the underwater transport craft used by the Gungans on the planet Naboo. They built the bongo submersibles as well as the Mantaris transport ship. The origins of this facility can be traced to the Bongomeken Collective, more than 3,000 years prior to the Battle of Naboo. (X1, GB)

Otoh Gunga Challenge

this was the greatest of all gungan bongo races, held in the city of Otoh Gunga and open to any individual who could pilot a single-engine bongo at speeds of at least 100 longos. It was held annually in the Otoh Gunga Gardens, with the course wrapping around its lower levels before opening into Lake Paonga. The race wound around a sacred mountain before returning to the Otoh Gunga Gardens. During the years prior to the Battle of Naboo, the race was attended primarily by Gungans. After the Battle of Naboo, however, the race became popular with many beings from across the galaxy, much to the chagrin of many Gungans. (GMR4)

Otoh Gunga Garden

this was one of the most wondrous natural areas found in the city of Otoh Gunga, located beneath the waters of the planet Naboo. (GMR4)

Otoh Gunga Transit Authority

this was the primary governmental body created by the Gungan leaders of Otoh Gunga during the years following the Battle of Naboo. As the city of Otoh Gunga was opened to tourists and visitors, the Otoh Gunga Transit Authority was formed to address the needs for public transportation, both within the city of Otoh Gunga and to other locations across Naboo. (GMR4)

Otoh Gunga Zoological Research Facility

developed by the Gungans of Otoh Gunga, this facility sought to ensure the continued existence of some of Naboo's rarest and most endangered species of plants and animals. (E1A9)

Otoh Sancture

this ancient, underwater city was the stronghold of the Gungans who were part of the clan led by Boss Gallo, some 3,000 years before the Battle of Naboo. Located in the oceans of Naboo, the city was known as a hub for commerce and trade, since Boss Gallo chose to remain neutral during the inter-clan battles fought amongst the Gungans. However, the prosperity of Otoh Sancture made Boss Rogoe fear that Boss Gallo might have the power to sway the battles, and so Boss Rogoe sent his forces to wipe out Otoh Sancture and eliminate Boss Gallo. Despite the destruction of Otoh Sancture, Boss Gallo survived and eventually united the Gungan people. (GB)

Otoh Villages

this was the name given to the bubble buildings on the outskirts of the city of Otoh Gunga. It was in the Otoh Villages that most of the Gungans who lived in the city had their residences. (IWE1)

Otolla

this is the name of one of the two major races of Gungans found on the planet Naboo. Unlike their Ankura cousins, the Otolla Gungans were tall and muscular, and had reddish skin coloration which faded to tan on their undersides. Their haillu were also much longer and more pronounced than those of the Ankura race, and their eyes sat up on short stalks. (IG1)

Otranto

Ottega Sector

this area of the galaxy, located in the Lesser Plooroid Cluster, contains the Quelii, Ottega (Ithorian), and Dathomir planetary systems. It is located near the Outer Rim territories. At the time Prince Isolder is trying to win Leia's hand in marriage, it is almost completely controlled by the Imperial warlord Zsinj. The latest astrogation charts show that the Ottega Sector has 75 planets and 622 natural satellite moons. (DE, CPL, SWSB)

Ottekvar, Harlan

this man was a popular holofilm star, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Best known for his work in SuperKnight: The Awakening and Webb Tenger: PeaceBuster, Ottekvar's casting as Lord Baltharog in the film version of the popular game Quest for Quasar was met with stern opposition from the game's fans. They felt that Ottekvar was 0.03 meters too short to play Baltharog. (HNN5)

Ottethan System

galactic star system which was the seat of the Ottethan warlord, who ruled eleven other systems as well. It was located at the far edge of the galaxy. Vima-da-Boda's daughter Neema was executed there for trying to use the Dark Side of the Force against the Ottethan warlord. This system is also home to a colony of rancors. (DE1, DESB)

Otto

this former Imperial Army General had a less-than-distinguished career which was only prolonged because of his friendship with Admiral Motti. An obese bumbler, Otto lost a number of key battles against the Alliance early in the Galactic Civil War, and barely avoided being executed by Darth Vader. When his position became perilous, Otto found himself stationed on the planet Lok, thanks to the machinations of Motti. Otto, however, was less than appreciative, feeling that the Empire owed him a luxury suite on Bespin's Cloud City for his service. Shortly before after the Battle of Hoth, Otto defected from Imperial service, stole an AT-ST scout walker, and fled Lok. He ended up on Tatooine, where he participated in the demolition derbies staged by Jabba the Hutt. Otto hoped to win the series of contests with his modified AT-ST, thereby winning enough credits to purchase property on Cloud City. (SWD)

Otuana, Bink

this man was believed to have been native to the planet Alderaan, but all records of his birth and life were lost when the planet was destroyed by the first Death Star. Like his buddy, Tag Greenley, Bink was believed to have joined the Alliance, and briefly served with the Alderaanian Guard. However, both were caught by Imperial forces when the Tantive IV was apprehended over Tatooine. According to popular legend, Bink and Tag escaped by overpowering two stormtroopers, stealing their armor, and pretending to be Imperial soldiers aboard the Devastator. Upon reaching the first Death Star, Tag and Bink tried to escape in a pair of stolen TIE Fighters, but had to watch in horror as the Death Star destroyed Alderaan. Their ships were nearly intercepted by Han Solo and the Millennium Falcon, but managed to outrace the freighter to the Death Star. As the legend goes, Bink and Tag were the two stormtroopers on guard duty when Obi-Wan Kenobi disabled the Death Star's tractor beam, allowing the Millennium Falcon to escape. It was believed that the pair escaped the destruction of the Death Star at the Battle of Yavin by stealing the Lambda-class shuttle Tydirium, calling in a favor from Lando Calrissian to avoid Boba Fett and reach the Alliance near Calamari. They were deemed heroes, despite the fact that they had originally deserted their posts aboard the Tantive IV, a fact that they worked hard to hide. They later agreed to help Lando infiltrate Jabba the Hutt's palace on Tatooine, but were discovered by Boba Fett and fed to the sarlacc. Only the bounty hunter's own tumble into the creature's mouth saved all three of them. Tag and Bink were then sworn to secrecy, never to reveal Boba Fett's inappropriate fall into the sarlacc. (TBAD, T12) this modified light freighter was used by the Alliance to intercept the crew of the Wanderer as they tried to return to Miser. It was also used to rescue Ackbar during the discovery of the Shantipole Project. (IC, SFS)

Out System Scout Vessel

manufactured by Loronar, this 63-meter ship was used by Alpha and Beta missions searching for habitable planets. Manned by a crew of 4 and a single gunner, this vessel also carried four passengers. They ships had decent hyperdrive capabilities, and was armed with a single, turret-mounted laser cannon. (SN)

Outbound Flight

this was the name given to the unusual starship created for the Outbound Flight Project. Six full-sized Dreadnaughts were linked together around a central fuselage to provide propulsion, navigation and computer systems, and weapons and shielding systems. Each Dreadnaught was connected to the others by a series of connecting turbolifts, and these turbolifts were also attached to the central core. A unique configuration of repulsor beams moved the liftcars between locations at rapid speeds. Within the core were storage facilities to for food, water, and fuel. Living quarters were primarily located in the Dreadnaughts themselves. Artificial gravity was maintained each of the seven areas, and specialized systems worked to adjust the gravity in the turbolift cars to ensure that beings moving from ship to ship were always feeling the correct orientation. When the Outbound Flight Project was destroyed, on the orders of Supreme Chancellor Palpatine, its remains came to rest on a planetoid in the area of Chiss space known as the Redoubt. The attack was highly surgical, with most strikes targetting only weapons, shields, and drive systems. The Survivors and their families began at once to try and re-establish the computers and life-support systems of the six Dreadnaughts, and eventually managed to get most of the ships back to running. They were incapable of flight, however, as five of the six Dreadnaughts were buried beneath tons of rocky debris. Only the number four ship - designated D-Four - remained aboveground, which posed serious health risks due to its exposure to interstellar radiation. Thus, the main living areas were established in D-Five, and the nursery center was established in D-Six. Access to the number one ship was blocked due to damage suffered in the crash, so the colony's main command center was moved to D-Four, where it could intercept any visitors. Luckily for those beings who survived the attack, the central supply core was undamaged, leaving them with a wealth of food, water, and other supplies. In order to survive, the existing decks aboard the Dreadnaughts were refitted for use as hospitals, schools, and other essential facilities that could keep the newly-christened Outbound Flight Colony alive and viable. The job of making the badly damaged Dreadnaughts workable was successful mainly due to the number of droids that were repaired and activated by the Survivors. The fact that the Outbound Flight came to rest in the Redoubt posed a number of problems when first contact was made with the survivors, since they were technically uninvited guests, and had no right to be there. (SQ)

Outbound Flight Colony

this was the name adopted by the survivors of the Outbound Flight Project, after they were able stabilize the remains of the Outbound Flight and restore it to a working - but not flyable - state. The Colony was governed by the laws of The Charter, which provided for a Managing Council to oversee the operations of the Colony, and a group of Peacekeepers to maintain order. After the Vagaari threat was eliminated, the Colony's members grudgingly agreed to accompany the Outbound Flight Colony to Nirauan, staying as far away from the New Republic as they could. (SQ)

Outbound Flight Project

Outbound Flight was a project financed by the Old Republic and the Jedi Knights during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. The goal of the project was to search out and catalog life outside the galaxy. A secondary goal was to discover other races which were sensitive to the Force. The project called for a huge starship - which became known as Outbound Flight - to serve as the base of operations for the exploration team. This starship turned out to be more like a mobile space station, consisting of six full-sized Dreadnaughts attached around a central storage core. It was launched from Yaga Minor, just prior to the Clone Wars. Note, however, that Dark Force Rising places this event 47 years before the Clone Wars. The main group of explorers was led by six Jedi Masters, of which Jorus C'baoth was presumably the senior member, and twelve Jedi Knights. 50,000 other individuals, including the crew and their families, also went along on the mission. A wealth of supplies was stored in the central core ship, and it was believed that the Trade Federation donated some supposedly surplus droidekas for defensive measures. The initial leg of the mission took them through the Unknown Regions, where they ran into the Chiss. Chancellor Palpatine, realizing that the Jedi Knights needed to be exterminated in order for him to realize his goals, assigned a huge, fifteen-ship task force to intercept and destroy the mission, along with its six Jedi Masters. They met up with Thrawn, who was in command of the Chiss Expansionary Defense, and he wiped out all the ships save one. This one was allowed to return to the Republic with news of their defeat. Among the survivors was Kinman Doriana, who convinced Thrawn of the necessity for eliminating the Outbound Flight Project. Thrawn agreed to help, and wiped out the Jedi when they arrived. This was the first of many actions that led to Thrawn being exiled from his people. Following the loss of the Jedi

Masters, whose exact consequences were withheld by Palpatine, the Outbound Flight Project was abandoned. The remains of the Outbound Flight starship were found nearly fifty years later by Chiss explorers, who agreed that the remains should be turned over to Luke Skywalker and his new Jedi Knights. The Dreadnaughts were partially buried into the surface of a remote planetoid. (HTTE, DFR, BW, VOF, SQ)

Outcasts

this was the term used to describe those T'Syriel who refused to follow the example of Keral Longknife and put aside their generations-long struggle against the human natives of Shiva IV. Longknife cast them out of the cities, forcing them to eke out an existence in the wastelands of the planet. The Outcasts hated the city-dwellers for this reason, and often raided outlying settlements, killing anyone they found and looting all foodstuffs and supplies. (MC53)

Outcasts

this was the term used to describe those members of society on the planet Taris who were banished to the lower levels of the cityscape. The Outcasts were primarily non-humans and lower-class humans who lacked wealth or power to maintain a position in the Upper City. (KOTOR)

Outer Circle

this was the name used by the Daan and the Melida to describe the outer section of the city of Zehava, beyond the border of the Inner Hub. The Daan controlled the Outer Circle some thirteen years before the Battle of Naboo, having driven the Melida into the Inner Hub shortly after the Twenty-Second Battle of Zehava. (DOD)

Outer Curved Street

this was the name of the broad, curving thoroughfare that led out of the city of Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine. (IWSt)

Outer Distance

this settlement, found on the planet Nam Chorios, is one of the furthest settlements from Hweg Shul. (POT)

Outer Javin Company

based on the planet Gerrenthum, this was the name of the corporation founded by Ecclessis Figg and his young bride, Yarith. With Ecclessis' brains and Yarith's credits, the Outer Javin Company mapped and exploited the Greater Javin area of the galaxy. Ecclessis Figg made a number of profitable deals with the Lutrillians and the Nothoiin, ensuring that the use of the Greater Javin provided an economic benefit for all major planets and races in the area. By the time of the New Order, the Outer Javin Company was the only publically-traded aspect of the vast Figg enterprise. (WOA33, WOA34)

Outer Los

this ice ball was the fifth and outermost planet in the Recopi System. (CCW)

Outer Region Foxar Base

this New Republic Scout Service base was active shortly after the Battle of Bilbringi. (GG8)

Outer Rim Oreworks

this mining corporation was based in the Outer Rim Territories, and was known for its use of questionable methods to strip-mine planets in quick order. Once a planet was completely mined - or when it began to cost more to continue mining than profits could sustain - the world was abandoned, often with serious environmental damage. Although the corporation's basic tenets were quite humanitarian, the actual day-to-day operations of ORO were anything but that. Men like Hugo Bartyn were promoted to positions of power within the corporation, and the existence of native sentient species on many worlds was covered up to ensure that mining rights could be procured. Some 500 years after the establishment of the operations on Lamaredd, ORO was forced to pull out when it was revealed that Hugo Bartyn had nearly exterminated the entire Menahuun race in order to secure the mines on Lamaredd. (WOA10, GMR7)

Outer Rim Sieges

this was the name used to describe the series of battles and skirmishes that took place at the edges of the Old Republic's scope of galactic control, during the last stages of the Clone Wars. The Outer Rim Sieges took a heavy toll on both the Grand Army of the Republic and the Jedi Knights, as both bodies were stretched exceptionally thin in order to counteract the actions of the Separatists. At the height of the fighting, nearly half of Coruscant's own home fleet was dispatched to the Outer Rim. Unknown to the Jedi and Army, the Outer Rim Sieges were actually part of a much larger plan established by Darth Sidious, and executed by Count Dooku and the Separatists. After nearly three years of fighting, the Old Republic had managed to drive the Separatists out of the Core Worlds, forcing the Separatists to regroup in the Outer Rim. Believing the Core to be safe, Chancellor Palpatine and the leaders of the Jedi Order pursued the Separatists to far-flung worlds. Often, entire fleets were dedicated to a single mission, such as the hunts for Count Dooku on Tythe and the Separatist leaders at Belderone. These sieges were part of Sidious' plan to spread the Grand Army of the Republic as thin as possible, and the Jedi Order even thinner. Then, when the moment was right, Sidious ordered General Grievous to launch an all-out attack on Coruscant itself. Despite the Republic's victory at Coruscant, Grievous managed to escape to the Outer Rim, and the Republic was forced to continue fighting in order to prevent Grievous from being able to regroup for another attack. This continuation of fighting only served to further the plans of Darth Sidious, who knew that the Jedi who were leading the battle groups would be scattered and unable to return quickly. After Palpatine issued the command to execute Order 66, clone commanders across the Outer Rim turned on their Jedi Generals and executed them. Thus began the Jedi Purge, solidifying Palpatine's control of the galaxy. (OWS, LEV, IS3)

Outer Rim Territories

a section of the galaxy which contains Tatooine and Ryloth. This sector of the galaxy has long marked the farthest edges of galactic expansion, since it represented a huge amount of space beyond the Inner Rim Territories, which were known simply as The Rim. For this reason, Emperor Palpatine committed most of his more heinous atrocities there. The Outer Rim was under the control of Grand Moff Tarkin and the first Death Star, until the Moff and his space station were destroyed in the Battle of Yavin. (SW, HTTE, COTF)

Outer Rim Trade Consortium

this group of Outer Rim trading concerns sprang up during the early years of the New Order, in an effort to address the lack of Imperial support the Outer Rim's businesses was getting. The Consortium spent much of its time cataloging and documenting the various Outer Rim exports that were provided to the Empire, in the hopes of ensuring adequate compensation. The Consortium felt that most of the Empire's credits were going to Core World aristocrats, while Outer Rim farmers and laborers were working for a pittance. Behind the scenes, the Consortium supported the efforts of the Alliance, and even registered several freighters and transports - actually owned by the Alliance - under its own name. (RESB)

Outer Rim Wars

Outer Rim, The

a name given to the furthest reaches of the Invisible Sector of Imperial City, on Coruscant. It represents the areas in which the aliens who live there are trying to expand their territory. (WG)

Outer Spine

this was a term used by many spacers to indicate the most remote parts of the Corellian Trade Spine, beginning at the intersection with the Rimma trade Route at Yag'Dhul and moving rimward. Many parts of the Outer Spine had only been traveled for several centuries, despite the fact that much of the Corellian Trade Spine had been established millennia before. (WOA33)

Outer Zuma

this area of the galaxy was located below the galactic plane, and sat below the area of the galaxy known as the Inner Zuma. Both areas of the galaxy were located along the border between the Outer Rim Territories and the area of the Unknown Regions known as Wild Space. The Outer Zuma was made up of four galactic sectors: Fusai, Ikenomin, Kakani, and Sugai. Much of the Outer Zuma was uncharted until about 1,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. Several centuries before the Battle of Yavin, the Inner and

Outer Zuma regions were considered part of the Unknown Regions, until explorers began scouting their locations and pushing the boundaries of known space ever outward. However, eddies and sinkholes in the hyperspace continuum in the area led to many lost expeditions and the formation of exceptionally dangerous travel routes. (GMR9)

Outer-Rim Rum Drop

this was a popular mixed drink, developed on an unspecified Outer Rim world during the last decades of the Old Republic. It was distinguished by its reddish color, which swirled and changed as the drink was consumed. (LFCW)

Outland Mining

this Old Republic mining corporation was large enough to maintain its own defense fleet, but much of the fleet was nationalized by the Old Republic in the wake of the Trade Federation's actions leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Could this refer to Offworld Mining? (RP)

Outland Region

a sparsely-populated area of the planet Rydonni Prime. (SWJ9)

Outland Region

this far-ranging area of Imperial space was patrolled by Wilhuf Tarkin during the early years of the New Order. This may be another reference to the Outer Rim Territories. (CSWDW)

Outland Rifle

this was a form of slugthrower that fired larger slugs. Thus, it was capable of doing more damage to a target. The Outland Rifle had an internal magazine that held eight slugs. (GMR4)

Outland Transit Station

Dexter Jettster once owned a weapons shop on this space station, located along the edge of Hutt Space. The station was covered with a transparisteel dome, that provided it with an open-air feeling. Much of the station was given over to street-like rows of shops and stores, where virtually anything could be purchased...for the right price. During the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo, the station was owned by the Toydarian Rozatta, who was a friend and accomplice of Jango Fett. After the station was attacked by the Bando Gora Force witches, Dexter sold his interests to Jango Fett and fled to Coruscant. The Bando Gora attack was followed swiftly by an assault from the bounty hunter Montross, who killed Rozatta in order to lure Jango back to the station. Rozatta provided Jango with information on the Bando Gora, and explained that Montross had set a series of thermal charges throughout the station. As he fled, Jango watched the Outland Transit Station explode, putting an end to his holdings there. (SWDB, GMR10, SWRPG2, BH)

Outlander

this game of chance was a complex and fashionable game during the last decades of the Old Republic. It was usually played on a rotating holoboard, but was adapted for play on the HoloNet when it became popular. (HNN4, IWE2)

Outlander Clans

this was one of the primary clans of S'kytri which were native to the planet Skye. Although the Outlander Clans were given one seat on the Supreme Council, its members were not allowed a chance to rule Skye like the Highland and Lowland Clans. Like the other clans, the Outlander Clans were formed from forty-two unique family groups. (GMR1)

Outlander Club

this was a noted nightclub and gambling hall, located on Vos Gesal Street on the planet Coruscant some ten years after the Battle of Naboo. The club was owned by Volven Roxe, who was financed by a shady group of Columi investors. The club was named for the fact that it originally was a small establishment that catered to the aficionados of the game Outlander. It was here that Zam Wesell tried to ambush Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker, after they foiled a second assassination attempt on the life of Senator Padme' Amidala. The Outlander Club was once a stylish establishment that catered to many of Coruscant's elite, but the continued growth of the city-world meant that the Outlander was quickly deemed 'passe' by its clientele. Over the years, the Outlander became known as a haven for the seedier natives of Coruscant. It was also rumored that an Anzati stalked the Club's clientele, although many believed this was just a story devised to make the Club more attractive. Note that Inside the Worlds of Star Wars: Episode II indicates that the Outlande Club was owned by the Baath Brothers. (OWS, AOTCN, SWDB, CCW, IWE2)

Outlanders Organized Crime

this was the name given to the "family" of criminal organizations which were active on the Outland Transit Station during the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo. The OOC had its fingers in virtually every aspect of life aboard the station, and often used them in helped to police its own members. Any bounties that needed to be placed to bring in rogues or deserters were often placed by the sanitation or public works agencies, in return for a certain amount of "protection" from the OOC. (BH)

Outlaw Tech

any of the various starship mechanics who work outside the realm of legal starship modifications and paperwork. They do custom work for a fair price. They also have the skills to forge starship IDs and Authority Waivers. (HSE)

OutlawTech

this company, named for the breed of mechanics who would perform most illegal modifications for a fair price, developed several lock-breaking and combination-detection tools during the early years of the New Republic. (TTSB)

Outlier Systems

a collection of star systems in the Corellian Sector which are extremely introverted. They are by far the most secretive worlds in the sector, and have been said to make the Corellian System look open-minded. Many of the Corellian System's Imperial functionaries fled that system following the death of Emperor Palpatine, and took up residence in the Outlier Systems. There, they regained political offices, and work with the Diktat to govern the sector. (AC)

Outlink Four

this was the designation of an unfinished Outlink, attached to the Spaarti Creations facility on Cartao during the height of the Clone Wars. Pilester Binalie never revealed the existence of the fourth Outlink, since it was never fully completed. However, it was later used as a was to free Commander Roshton and the forces of the Army of the Republic which were trapped inside the Spaarti complex by Separatist armies. (SWI70)

Outlink One

this was one of three storage facilities maintained by Spaarti Creations, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Outlink One was located near an apartment complex which served as living quarters for the non-married employees of Spaarti Creations. (SWI68)

Outlink Three

this was one of three storage facilities maintained by Spaarti Creations, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Outlink Three was located near an apartment complex which served as living quarters for those human employees of Spaarti Creations who had families. (SWI68)

Outlink Two

this was one of three storage facilities maintained by Spaarti Creations, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Outlink Two was located near an apartment complex which served as living quarters for those Cranscoc employees of Spaarti Creations who had families. (SWI68)

Outpost

this small world was the outermost planet in the Bissillirus System. It was covered with plains of frozen ammonia, but was the site of a research base established by Unilliten Industries. (GMK)

Outpost

this Imperial Carrack-class cruiser served as a recon ship during the Battle of Nar Shaddaa. (THG)

Outpost

this Imperial deep-space platform was the base used by the shuttle Tydirium, before it was captured by the Alliance prior to the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Outpost 5440

this was the name given to the Imperial outpost that was established in Ugnorgrad, on the floating facility known as the Ugnaught Surface, during the Imperial occupation of Bespin. After the Imperials were driven off Cloud City, the outpost was abandoned. The Ugnaughts reclaimed the facility, and turned it into housing, business facilities, and a HoloNet relay station. (PH)

Outpost 8

this was the designation used to describe one of the largest chunks of frozen rock and ice which orbited in the ring around the planet Constancia. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, Outpost 8 was one of a multitude of asteroids that were used by the natives of Constancia as defensive positions. Like its companions, Outpost 8 was studded with a variety of turbolaser and ion weapons, which could be brought to bear on starships intruding on Constancia's system. (LAT1)

Outpost Beta

this Rebel sentry station, located on Hoth, reported the drop of the Imperial Army just before the Battle of Hoth. The commander at Outpost Beta was portrayed by James Eckhouse in the Star Wars: The Empire Strikes Back Radio Drama on National Public Radio. (ESBR)

Outpost Cinder

this Alliance Special Forces base was established on a ridge overlooking the Empire's Bid'Jerma Detention Block, in an effort to liberate the high concentration of Alliance prisoners at the facility. (HAS)

Outpost Shear

this was one of the primary Separatist bases on the planet Jabiim, during the early stages of the Clone Wars. It was captured by the Army of the Republic, but at the loss of the Republic's own Shelter Base. (SWI69)

Ou'tranoi

an alien device of unknown powers and usage. (RPG)

Outreachial

the lizardfly species inhabited the cliffs located above this city. (SWCP)

Outrider

Dash Rendar's modified Corellian Engineering Corporation YT-2400 freighter, the Outrider was painted ebony black to blend in with the depths of space. Rendar has taken the stock YT-2400 and added a KGDefender ion engine system, a Griffyn/Y2TG hyperdrive, and a pair of modified Dymek double laser cannons. Much of the upgrade and modification work was done by Bolabo Hujaan on Byblos. (SE, EGV, SESB)

Outrider Ganglia

this was the term used to describe the tendrils which hung from the body of a Yuuzhan Vong worldship. These membranous tendrils were connected to a host of coralskippers, which were deployed to unfurl the ganglia into a sail-like structure. When fully deployed, the outrider ganglia acted like cosmic sails, helping to provide propulsion for the worldship. (NEGV)

Outrunner

an Alliance modified light freighter used for Project Shantipole. (SFS)

Outside Threat Indicator Array

called an OTIA for short, this sensor package allows a pilot in an unshielded TIE starfighter to quickly recognize when his ship has been targetted. It indicates whether a starfighter, capital ship, or platform/station has locked on to it. (TIE)

Outsider Citadels

this was the name of the contained cities maintained by the offworlders who lived on the planet Cerea. Because the native Cereans discouraged the use of high technology, offworlders were limited in their use to the Citadels. Many Cerean elders despised the Citadels for the pollution and waste they produced. (PTR)

Outstanding Threat to Order

this was essentially an order of martial law, used by the leaders of the planet Junction 5 during the last decades of the Old Republic. It was enforced whenever an enemy of the state was loose on the planet. (LOJ)

Outward Bound

this modified Vangaard Pathfinder was owned and operated by Jobany Cyrs. The ship had been in his family for several generations, and was considered an heirloom. It was virtually in original condition, with minor modifications to its computer and drive systems. (BSS)

Outworlder City

a city on the planet Ergeshui. In the Ergesh language, the name of the city is Oorglush, which can be translated as Dry Ground, Safe At Last, or Sanity. Outworlder City is covered by a transparent dome that allows the inhabitants to control the climate to suit their needs. It was built to allow off-worlders visiting Ergesh to live in comfort, if they weren't used to the swampy environment. Very few Ergesh enter the city, considering it too sterile. It is connected to Erglush by the planet's living monorail, a system of vines that grow bean-shaped pods. These pods travel along the vines via expulsion of natural gases and photosynthetic charges. (PG2)

Outworlds

this was an area of the galaxy far from most hyperspace routes. (MC16)

Ouway, Ekam

this Imperial governor replaced Stant Rosswell on Indu San. Where Rosswell maintained the New Order while allowing the natives to thrive, Ouway was a hard-line supporter of Palpatine's doctrines. Many of the favors that business leaders on Indu San had obtained under Rosswell dried up, and Ouway was despised. When the natives rose up against him, Ouway fled the system in a show of cowardice that rivaled his staunch support of the New Order. (SWJ6)

Ov Taraba

this was one of the most prominent - and expensive - universities of the planet Onderon. It was established some 4,000 years before the advent of the New Order. (TOJC)

OV600

this truth serum, created by 'Geneering Products, detects the physical symptoms of a lie and reacts to them. OV600 causes the victim's flesh to break out in a painful rash. If the lies are strong enough, the drug has the capability to induce so much pain that the victim dies. (CFG)

Ova

this planet suddenly collapsed in upon itself and disappeared, shortly after the Battle of Naboo. The collapse of the planet caught a starship which was passing by, dragging the ship and its crew into an infinite abyss. The Jedi Council feared that the planet's collapse was somehow related to the Witches of Dathomir. They had found a small temple on Ova, which bore markings and glyphs that told of Dathomir as the source of the temple's power. The destruction of Ova caused a distortion in the space around the planet, disrupting interstellar traffic for many weeks. This distortion forced the Jedi mission to rescue

Quinlan Vos to be delayed, stranding Quin on Dathomir for many days beyond his mission's parameters. (SWIE)

ova

this Shyriiwook word was used as the suffix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "eye", "gazer", or "seeker". It could be attached to a prefix by itself, or combined with other suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Over the Rile

this was a section of Bridis City, on Bridin Anchorage. (GG11)

Overden

Selonian term for their governmental body. (AS)

Overhang

this was the name given to the inhabited area just outside the main spaceport of the planet Entralla, located within the boundary of Nexus City. The majority of the beings living in the Overhang were native to Entralla, and worked menial jobs at the spaceport. Very little sunlight reaches the group, as it is blocked out by the tall buildings. (SWJ4)

Overlook, The

this was another name for the mountain Teldanus, located on the planet Gorothe Prime. (GSE)

Overlord, Belgar

this man and his partner, Roth Skimm, were a pair of freelance explorers who stumbled upon a habitable world on the edge of the Core Worlds some 600 years before the Battle of Naboo. They named the planet Belgaroth, and the system became known as the Belgaroth System. Before they could turn the system into a way station and turn a profit for their efforts, however, they shot and killed each other over a disputed game of cards. (CCW)

Overmind

the name given to the controlling consciousness of the taurill. It controls all of its individual minds at one time, although it tends to get distracted very easily. (DS)

Overracer

see Mobquet Overracer (DARK)

Oversector

part of the Tarkin Doctrine, an Oversector was to be created from those star systems in which open rebellion was just starting. Existing sector boundaries no longer mattered; the existing sectors would simply be included in an Oversector's boundaries. The combined military might of the Oversector could then be used to quell any rebellious activities. (ISB, DSTC)

Oversector Outer

this Imperial Oversector was the first such area defined by Palpatine, and was set up for Grand Moff Tarkin. It contained much of the Outer Rim Territories. (DSTC)

Overseer of Prison Worlds

this was the title given to the being - a member of the Old Republic's Senate security committee - who oversaw the activities and maintenance of the Republic's many prison facilities. (JQ8)

Overtown

this was the pleasure sector of Corinth City, and was the primary center of pro-Imperial sentiments during the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ10)

O-Via

this Keganite woman worked in the Animal Circle, and was a friend of O-Melie. (FFT)

Oviedo Engineering

this vast research and development organization expanded its corporate portfolio many years before the onset of the Clone Wars, branching out to manufacture a variety of military vehicles and weapons systems. Oviedo Engineering was forced to dismantle its operations after its Director, Lorca Oveido, was arrested on conspiracy charges after faking his death and plotting to sell rigged weaponry to Wat Tambor and the Confederacy of Independent Systems. (T22)

Oviedo, Lorca

this man was the Director of Oviedo Engineering, during the last years of the Old Republic. Distinguished by his impeccable clothing and flowing mustaches, Oviedo tried to make a small fortune by negotiating with Wat Tambor of the Confederacy of Independent Systems. Oviedo had already agreed to sell his weapons systems to the Grand Army of the Republic, and was planning to allow the Separatists to use special identification chips in the weapons to track the locations and movements of the Republic's ground forces. In order to ensure the success of this plan, Director Oviedo arranged for a malfunction aboard his starship, while returning from a conference on Aviles Prime. The malfunction forced the ship to revert to realspace near Asturias, where it was attacked by Separatist forces. Oviedo's ship managed to land on the remote moon, as did a handful of the clone commandos assigned to protect him. It was the clones who discovered Oviedo's plans, which might have allowed the sale of rigged weapons to occur, even as it made Oviedo something of a hero for surviving the "attack." Oviedo even tried to bribe the commandos, but their loyalty to the Old Republic was absolute. He was returned to Coruscant by commando Theta-288, the only member of his squad to survive the affair. Unfortunately, Oviedo died from "sudden respiratory failure" before he could be interrogated. It was unclear whether his death was a suicide or not. (T22)

O-Vieve

this ancient Keganite woman ruled the planet with V-Tan some thirteen years prior to the Battle of Naboo. They were known as the Benevolent Guides, and revered the prophecies which claimed that a visitation by the Jedi Knights would destroy Kegan society. To this end, they perpetuated the belief in the General Good and kept Kegan isolated from the rest of the galaxy. O-Vieve herself was somewhat precient, and had visions of the purge of the Jedi Knights and the legions of stormtroopers enforcing Emperor Palpatine's New Order. Unfortunately, Qui-Gon Jinn and Adi Gallia - the two Jedi Masters on Kegan to determine the Force sensitivity of O-Lana - couldn't believe that such an evil force would one day take control of the galaxy, and ignored her visions. However, as the Jedi revealed more and more about the greater galaxy, the Keganite population began to doubt the rulership of O-Vieve and V-Tan. In the end, the populace voted to overthrow the Benevolent Guides and join the Old Republic. (FFT)

Oviloid

this mammalian creature was known for the large litters produced by the females, in which the cubs were neatly arranged in the nest. (SWED)

Ovise I

this was the innermost planet in the Ovise System, found in the Modell Sector of the galaxy. (GMR9)

Ovise II

this was the second planet in the Ovise System, found in the Modell Sector of the galaxy. (GMR9)

Ovise III

this planet, the third world in the Ovise System of Modell Sector, was an urban world dominated by factories. Because of the unregulated growth of industry on the planet, Ovise III was considered a polluted world by the time the New Republic took control of the Inner Zuma region. (GMR9)

Ovise IV

this was the fourth planet in the Ovise System, found in the Modell Sector of the galaxy. (GMR9)

Ovise V

this gas giant was located in the Modell Sector of the galaxy. It was orbited by several inhabitable moons, and was known as a source of tibanna gas. (GMR9)

Ovkhevam

this Noghri male was a member of the clan Bakh'tor, and was one of the many who worked the verdant canyon known as the "future of Honoghr" during the early years of the New Republic. It was Ovkhevam who greeted Luke Skywalker when he arrived on Honoghr to repair his starship. (TLC)

Ovolyan

a large, bantha-sized reptiloid native to Laboi II, the ovolyan are the primary prey for the Laboi. In turn, the ovolyan hunt small Laboi for food. (GG4)

Ovrax IV

the planet on which Evar Orbus purchased Snit. (TJP)

Ow

this is the white star that is the binary of Roti, at the center of the Roti-Ow System. (GG4)

Owaw

this name was common among Ithorian females. Although such names do not generally have meaning, Ithorians who studied their race's history learned that the name referred to the leaves of the pale green waw tree. (GCG)

Oweg

an Imperial Navy Captain, in command of the Valiant during the height of the New Order. (ISB)

Owell

this was one of the many Ferroans who were living on the planet Zonama Sekot during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Like Darak and Rowel, Owell eventually came to trust Luke Skywalker and the Jedi Knights who arrived on the planet to seek its assistance in resolving the conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong. When Zonama Sekot made a blind jump into hyperspace to avoid the sabotage of Nom Anor, the Ferroans were forced to flee underground to avoid the ecological damage that occurred on the surface. Owell, along with Darak and Rowel, made many trips into the wilderness to look for survivors, often with the help of the Jedi. (UF)

Owen, Nile

this Imperial Moff was in control of Rayter Sector during the Galactic Civil War. He was a thin man with hawk-like features, and although he always wore his military attire, Owen also preferred furred cloaks. Owen's demeanor is one of controlled force, and he is an intimidating individual to most people. He is a model Imperial officer, and served on several Victory-class Star Destroyers before advancing to the position of Rayter Sector Moff. When the Farool Brothers approached him with a plan to discredit the Alliance, he grudgingly supported it. He allowed them to capture Crying Dawn Singer, but when Nak Farool issued a holotransmission stating that Owen was unsympathetic and couldn't assist in rescuing the Shashay, Owen became furious. He executed Nak Farool on the spot, and commanded Jonnas Perrsta to contain the Shashay. When the Alliance stepped in to rescue Crying Dawn Singer, Owen ordered the Impending Doom to cut them off. Neither objective was met, and Owen carried a deep-seated grudge for the Alliance and its agents from that point on. In the wake of the Imperial defeat at the Battle of Endor, Moff Owen took out his frustration by executing an entire company of soldiers from the First Sun Mobile Regiment for killing all Alliance troops before questioning them. This forced Maska Zural to re-evaluate his group's alliance with the Empire. (TA, SWJ15)

Owens, Tully

this man made his home in the walled city of Cjaalysce'l, on Socorro. There, he worked as the chief mechanic at the docking piers, and his crews were known for their adherence to Caelli-Merced standards. A former smuggler of some renown, Tully was brought into the Caelli-Merced Syndicate by Tait Ransom, who introduced him to Pret Swain. (BSS)

Owner

a device which can control a number of droids fitted with restraining devices. (TB)

Owners' League

this loose union of casino and brothel owners is the counterpart of the Exotic Entertainers' Union. (SE)

OWO-1

this was one of the command battle droids sent by Nute Gunray to check to see if Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi had been killed by poison gas, shortly after they were dispatched to resolve the Trade Federation's blockade of Naboo. Distinguished by its yellow coloration, OWO-1 had a communications package built into its backpack, and provided audio and video back to Gunray's command center until it was cut down by the Jedis' lightsabers. (IS1)

Owprhin

one of the seven major clans of Ammuud. (CSA)

Owr'apa

this deadly predator roamed the fungal plains of the planet Yvara, feeding on the abundant zeebucks and inept Yvarema. Owr'apa were ambush predators, submerging themselves in watering holes and waiting for their prey to get too close to the water. Once prey was selected, the owr'apa lunged out of the water, taking the creature by surprise and dragging it back underwater. Owr'apa had a specialized breathing snorkel which allowed them to breath while underwater. (KR)

Owris

a harmless, blob-like creature found in the forests of Endor's Sanctuary Moon. (ECAR)

Oxbel

a Devaronian on Tatooine at about the same time Labria was living in Mos Eisley. Oxbel was Labria's brother and, like Labria, arrived on Tatooine and has yet to leave. Unlike his brother, however, Oxbel has no ambition to make something of himself. He deals in worthless information gathered from his drunken stupors in the alleys of Mos Eisley. (GG7, TME)

Oxidizer

this was the brand name of Gandorthral Atmospherics' basic breathing mask. It was unusual among similar devices in that its complex scrubber system never needed to be replaced, just recharged. However, the Oxidizer required that the wearer be in an atmosphere that had moderate levels of oxygen which could be extracted. Thus, it was not effective in the vacuum of space. (AEG)

Oxin

an Alliance container group supplying Admiral Harkov and the Protector fleet in the Ottega System during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Oxite

this ore is mined on the planet known as Oasis, in the middle of the Maelstrom. (RM)

Oxon

this was one of the primary cities of the planet Naboo. During the Separatist crisis that engulfed the galaxy some ten years after the Battle of Naboo, Queen Jamillia opened Oxon - along with Theed and Kwilaan - to refugees who were fleeing the upheaval. (SFT, HNN5)

Oxygen Symbiote

a clear, gelatinous creature native to Calamari, it has the ability to filter pure oxygen from water. The Mon Calamari use them as breathing masks when swimming in the Calamari seas. The symbiote is placed over the nose and mouth, and it adheres to the skin. The symbiote then filters oxygen to the wearer's nose and mouth while keeping the water out. (DA)

Oxywater

a name used by the Sunesi, and other races, to describe bacta. (SWJ10)

O-Yani

this elderly Keganite woman was the caretaker who tended to O-Lana, during the child's infancy. (FFT)

Oz

this name was given to female Zabrak, although its original meaning was lost over time. The Basic translation of the name meant "egg". (GCG)

Ozlyn Gox

this was the capital city of the planet Gravlex Med. (HNN4)

Ozone Chamber

found in many spas and resorts, an ozone chamber has a number of uses for humans and aliens. (HSL)

Ozrei

this was a common name among the Nagai race. (UANT, GMR1)

Ozrei N'takkilomandrife

see Knife (GMR1)

Ozu

this agricultural planet was located on the rimward edge of the Anoat Sector of the galaxy. The inhabitants of the planet maintained an insular society. (WOA33)

Ozz

this Ugnaught was the King of his people, leading the Terend Council from the city of Ugnorgrad, during the early years of the New Republic. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, he worked hard to make Cloud City a better place for the Ugnaughts to live, a goal that was made easier by Lando Calrissian's humanitarian stance on employing the Ugnaughts. After Calrissian fled Cloud City and the outpost was garrisoned by the Empire, Ozz found himself and his people virtually enslaved by Imperial Governor Treece, who exploited Ugnaught labor to cover up his own embezzlement of Imperial funds. Ozz and his Ugnaughts staged an insurrection against Imperial Captain Treece in the wake of the Battle of Hoth, planting a series of twelve bombs around Cloud City and hoping to destroy it once and for all. When Calrissian returned to try and liberate the city, Ozz reluctantly agreed to accept his help. Together, they managed to defeat Treece's forces and evict the Imperial garrison from the outpost. (EGA, SWDB, MC57, PH)

Ozzel, Kendal

a native of Carida, Kendal Ozzel was the last in a long line of land owners on the planet. As the second son, Kendal was not his father's designated heir, and joined the Imperial armed forces to prove himself. It was rumored that Ozzel gained his position because his family had close ties to the Imperial Navy, especially after he attained the rank of Admiral. It was Ozzel who presided over the dishonorable discharge of Han Solo, after the young cadet ignored his superior officer's orders and freed a Wookiee slave. He was given the command of the Star Destroyer Executor, which allowed the Imperial Naval Staff to keep an eye on Vader while he hunted down the Alliance. Ozzel was placed in charge of the fleet that attacked Hoth, and brought the fleet out of lightspeed just outside the Hoth System. He felt that the surprise arrival of the fleet would shock the Alliance. Instead, the presence of the fleet was quickly noted by the Alliance, which gave them time to prepare their escape. Ozzel was killed by Vader for his failure to cleanly capture the Hoth base. Ozzel was portrayed by Michael Sheard in Star Wars: The Empire Strikes Back, and by Peter Michael Goetz for the The Empire Strikes Back Radio Drama on National Public Radio. (ESB, ESB, MTS, THG, OWS)

Ozzel, Mann

this man, a distant ancestor of Imperial Admiral Kendal Ozzel, was generally credited with organizing the trading of Carida's mineral rights to offworld concerns. These actions brought the Ozzel family, as well as the planet, great wealth over time. (SWDB)

Ozz's Palace

this was the name given to the immense facility that served as King Ozz's base of operations, located in the city of Ugnorgrad on the floating city known as the Ugnought Surface. (PH)

 P ***

P-100 Salvage Droid

this immense automaton was used by scrap collectors to gather up metallic debris. A pair of circular wings extend from the main cylinder, and were equipped with re-grav plates to pick up the scrap. Modified conveyor belts carry the debris into the holding bays, located inside the central cylinder. Also stored within the main cylinder were three dome-shaped pick-up droids, which had manipulator arms for retrieving delicate scrap items. Note that the Star Wars Databank indicates that the P-100 was the smaller, dome-shaped recovery droid. (IWE1, SWDB)

P-12

this was a model of Sirplex shield generator, used on starships such as the ZH-25 Questor. (SS)

P127

the designation of Astronav's top-of-the-line starship course plotter. It could plot multiple-jump courses in no time. (IJ)

P2-D19

this outdated P2-series astromech repair droid was stationed aboard the Black Ice. Skolos programmed P2-D19 to attack the team of Alliance agents which was attempting to take control of the Black Ice. (BI)

P2-series Droid

this was Industrial Automaton's first attempt to build an astromech droid. Large and cumbersome, the P2-series was eventually scrapped when Industrial Automaton was served with a technology-infringement lawsuit by former executives of Industrial Intelligence. However, after the suit was settled, the basic design of the P2 series was reused in the development of the R2 series. These droids were plagued by a series of minor, though annoying, design glitches, including a poorly-coded maneuverability routine that caused the P2 to bump into objects. Also, the P2 could only communicate via its video screen or an input jack, making their application to certain starship systems tricky. The P2 was controlled by the Intellex II computer brain. (IG1, BI, FTD, SWJ7)

P-34

this Mobquet combat speeder was designed for use by the Empire. However, it never got beyond the prototype stage, as its basic design failed to meet the Empire's minimum requirements. (GSE)

P-38

see Porax-38 \(X3\)

P39

this A9-series driller droid worked for the Tredway family in the mines of 24 Tredway, in the Sil'Lume Asteroid Belt. After Imperial Governor Parnell attacked 24 Tredway and killed Axton Tredway's wife, P39 and a group of other droids sacrificed themselves to allow Luke Skywalker, Gideon Smith, and Sidney Shortfang to rescue Dena Tredway from harm. (JH)

P-59

this destroyer droid was in command of the group sent to kill Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi, after the Jedi managed to survive the poison gas and squadron of battle droids sent to assassinate them. The Jedi were aboard the Trade Federation command ship at the request of Chancellor Valorum, who hoped to settle their dispute with the planet Naboo. P-59 and its companions were the first of the destroyer droids to have shield generators installed for added protection. (IS1)

P-60

this destroyer droid was part of the group sent to kill Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi, after the Jedi managed to survive the poison gas and squadron of battle droids sent to assassinate them. The group of destroyers was under the command of unit P-59, and its members were the first of the destroyer droids to have shield generators installed for added protection. (CCG13)

P-71

this was Drolan Plasteel's version of the Wookiee crossbow. It was produced many centuries before the Galactic Civil War, and was essentially a repeating projectile launcher contained in a stylish, plasteel shell. (NEGW) meaning "late", this was one of the most common names among Rodian females. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Pa

Pa Gara

this was the name of a noted Blood Carver, famous in the history of the planet Batorine. (UANT)

Pa Tho

this race created the unusual transportation system later known as the Great Subcrustal Tubeway before they died out. (TT)

PA90,842-N024/B

this subdirectory of the Sector Ranger Database documented the illegal trade of exporting shaaks from Naboo, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SON)

PA-9r

a long range tachyon detection array. (SCRE)

Pa'aal

Tal Fraan learned the ways of the human race while stationed on this moon, the primary natural satellite of the fifth planet in the N'zoth system. It was here that the Yevetha confined all the Imperials they captured when they took control of the Black Sword shipyards, shortly after the Battle of Endor. (SOL, TT)

Paaloc

this rare form of Yuuzhan Vong incense was burned by only the most exalted individuals of their species. Any individual not of sufficient social status caught with the incense was subject to execution for overstepping their bounds. The scent of burning paaloc was said to resemble that of the ancient and forgotten Yuuzhan Vong homeworld, and was only recognizable as a distant memory. (EVR)

Pablo-Jill

this male Ongree served as a Jedi Knight during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. His participation in a mission to Ord Mantell helped bring about a temporary peace on that planet. Master Pablo-Jill never took a Padawan learner before he was dispatched with Mace Windu to confront the Separatist forces on Geonosis. (SWDB)

Pabs Tyerell

see Deland Tyerell (HNN4)

Pac

this alias was used by a Cerean male who was a member of the Cularin Militia, after he and his comrades - Mack and Grunt - decided to speak out against the "so-called Expansion Manifesto" that was attributed to Reodo Artom. The trio of soldiers believed that the document was a great description of the morals of exploration, but it failed to take into account the true necessities of combat. They agreed to participate in an interview with Yara Grugara on Eye on Cularin, but the inane reporter made a mockery of their opinions. Pac tried to salvage the interview, despite the ineptitude of his comrades, claiming that war was necessary to defending one's rights to freedom and existence. (LFCW)

PAC20

this was the model number of Fabritech's visual wrist communication system. It provided the user with audio and video communication capabilities, allowing the user to see and hear another being. (EGW)

Paca, Magir

this Garosian was one of the leaders of the New Republic's underground on Garos IV. He was one of the original founders of the Committee of Seven for Garosian Unification, and was a close friend of Tork Winger. Paca served as an assistant to the Minister of Commerce on Garos IV when the Empire moved in to take control of the planet, and used his position to gather information and intelligence on the Empire's movements. He was discovered during an Imperial audit, but managed to elude arrest after Alex Winger discovered his name in an Imperial datafile on suspected criminals. Paca fled public service, and went into hiding to protect himself. (SWJ1)

Pacanth Reach

a cluster of stars located in the Outer Rim Territories, the Pacanth Reach was conquered by the Epicanthix people. (SESB)

Pacci

this K-Wing bomber pilot was part of the Fifth Battle Group squadrons sent to assist in the New Republic's first attempt to blockade Doornik-319. He was killed when the Yevethan resisted and fought back. (SOL)

Pace

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Pace, Anki

this woman was a Doctor of Xenoarcheology at the University of Agamar during the second decade of the New Republic. A friend of Koyi Komad, she was knowledgeable in the area of Jedi relics and artifacts, and was concerned that many sites were being robbed of Jedi lore before they could be adequately studied and archived. Doctor Pace once told Corran Horn that a colleague had discovered a site, only to wake up the next morning to find the site scoured of artifacts and her memory erased about what she had found. Horn suspected that some of the vigilante Jedi Knights had stolen the artifacts, but he had no proof. Doctor Pace led the group of students who traveled to Bimmiel to search for ancient relics, and was one of the first to discover the remains of a Yuuzhan Vong warrior on the planet. (DTO)

Pacifier

this was a model of Telgorn transport ship. The Cavrilhu Pirates used several highly-modified Pacifiers as smuggling and pirate ships. (SOP)

Pacifog

this mind-altering substance was created in an Imperial laboratory in orbit around Kadril, under the direction of Darth Vader, sometime after the Battle of Yavin. Pacifog had the unique ability to emphasize the weakest traits of beings, traits which could be used by the Empire to achieve its own goals. However, in order to ensure that Imperial troops who used pacifog were not subjected to its effects, Darth Vader ordered a huge quantity of kunda stones from Dal Quirz and the Kadrillians. Kunda stone was grown in zero-gravity labs, and could absorb and filter out pacifog. Vader planned to use the kunda stones in manufacturing filter masks for Imperial troops. Unfortunately for Vader, pacifog had an intense reaction to human biology, swiftly reducing human flesh to a frothy ooze. (NEGC, LAT3)

Pacithhip

this alien race was native to the planet Shimia, in the Outer Rim Territories. They have a long, pointed head which is dominated by two long, thin, pointed tusks. These tusks were atrophied versions of much larger tusks used by the ancestors of modern Pacithhip to dig up roots. The nose of the Pacithhip is elephantine, although the nostrils are located close to the skull. The trunk ends with the being's mouth. Two large, black eyes are located at the top of the skull. The shape and size of their tusks established an individual's place in society, as there were three basic genetic patterns which led to the growth of tusks. Based on the genes they carried, an individual Pacithhip would become a warrior, a scholar, or a farmer. The body of the average Pacithhip was stout and round, with tiny legs that barely moved them along. (CCG9, AE)

Packered Mortar Gun

a rifle-sized weapon that shoots small mortar charges. (DF)

Packet

this Yuuzhan Vong measurement was used to indicate the number of individuals in a group. It was equivalent to roughly 80 individuals. (UF)

PackTrack

manufacturers of the 41LT-R Mechanical Universal Labor Eliminator droid series, also known as MULE droids. Note that The Essential Guide to Droids indicates that PackTrack was the brand name of the 41LT-R droid, which was produced by Les Tech. (GG8, SWJ14, EGD)

Pacnorval Defense Systems, Limited

this minor weapons manufacturer produced a wide range of sonic weapons. (EGW)

Pad

this was a common name given to male Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Pad 12

the Flurry was parked on this landing platform on Bakura, during the struggle against the Ssi-ruuvi just after the Battle of Endor. (TB)

Pada

this was a species of intelligent, yellow-furred bipeds with pumpkin-shaped faces and clawed hands. Padas had large earflaps and a pair of short horns on their heads. They were excellent climbers, and their slit-pupiled eyes could see well in the dark. The Pada had an extremely well-developed sense of honor and a deep respect for life, and were forbidden to kill another being, even in self-defense. (JH)

Pada-Jedi

Cerasi used this somewhat derogatory term to describe Obi-Wan Kenobi. (DOD)

Padak

this bounty hunter was considered a walking weapons arsenal by his peers in Qulok's Fist. An immense man even without his yellow-gold blast armor on, Padak was known to have had just one goal in life: "to do good death." He lacked good planning and stealth skills, but made up for them with pure aggression. (DARK)

Padaunete, Thrynka

this woman served as the leader of The People's Inquest, the grass-roots Jedi watchgroup which formed during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Padaunete was one of the first beings to take up the formal protest of the training of Ludi Billane, the infant rescued from the destruction of her home city of Domitree, on Ord Thoden. The Jedi Council refused to allow Ludi's mother Jonava, who had also survived the earthquakes, to take baby Ludi back to Ord Thoden. Padaunete then arranged for Jonava to appear on the talkshow Essence, an event that drew even more beings to their cause. In response to the show's airing, Padaunete claimed that the Jedi Knights were nothing more than a cult, set on brainwashing young beings to carry out their nefarious plans. Despite her high ideals, when a group of holofeature producers approached Jonava and Thrynka about a movie based on their efforts, both quickly traveled to Kassido to help with casting. During this time, the Old Republic shut down The People's Inquest on a variety of semi-legal claims, and Thrynka was forced to go into hiding. Her desire to expose the truth remained intact, however, and Thrynka managed to secure a HoloNet node on an remote Outer Rim world to restart The People's Inquest during the height of the Clone Wars. (HNN4, HNN5, SWI71)

Padawan

this is a Jedi term for a young student of the Force. During the height of the Old Republic, beings who were strong with the Force were identified at a young age for training, often before their first year of life. Young beings were transported to the Jedi Temple on Coruscant, where they were brought up to respect the Force and the life it suffuses. Trainees were allowed to train until they were chosen as Padawan learners by a Jedi Master, or until they were thirteen years old. If a learner was not chosen as a Padawan by his thirteenth birthday, it was decided that the young student would never have the drive and skills to become a full Jedi Knight, and they were given lesser assignments by the Jedi Council. Each Padawan was distinguished by a short, close-cropped hairstyle which was accented by a thin braid. The braid's length, together with small beads braided into the hair, denoted the Padawan's level of training. On the occasion of a Padawan's thirteenth birthday, solemn reflection and meditation were required by the student, and the Master often gave them a meaningful gift. (PTR, SW1, RF, HP)

Padawan, The

Padawan's Resource Guide

this document was produced by the Jedi Masters who controlled the Almas Academy. It contained all the basic information an aspiring student of the Force would need to understand how the Almas Academy differed from the Jedi Temple on Coruscant. It also documented the three convergent paths a student at the Almas Academy had to traverse: the Jedi philosophy, and how it applied to their individual nature; the Jedi peace, and how deeply a student can attune himself to the Force; and the Jedi promise, in which a student must face their greatest fears in order to pledge themselves to the Jedi Code. (WOTC)

Padda

this Twi'lek and his cousin, Quink, re-established Chabak's, the casino owned by their uncle on Zirtran's Anchor. Padda was the younger of the two cousins, and was also more reckless and inexperienced. His parents were quite powerful on his homeworld of Ryloth, and they made sure that Quink was blamed for anything that went wrong at Chabak's. (SWJ5)

Paddie, Ister

this man, a native of the planet Sermeria, represented his homeworld as a Senator to the Old Republic, during the era of the Clone Wars. He succeeded Lanus Wrede in the position of Senator, after Wrede committed suicide. (OWS, HNN4)

Paddocks, The

this was one of the largest open-air markets found in Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine. It was established for the auction and sale of various forms of livestock, although it evolved into an informal zoo over the years. During the height of the New Order, the Paddocks was owned and operated by Cruegar, a Gungan who knew his clientele and their needs. (GMR7)

Paddox, Theus

this man was the High Lord of House Pelagia during the height of the New Order. He was very young when Pelagia fell from power, but married into House Cadriaan in an effort to regain its position. His marriage to the daughter of Lady Bathos, along with financial investments with House Cadriaan, helped Paddox begin rebuilding House Pelagia's status. It was later discovered, by the crew of the Bright Seeker shortly after the Battle of Hoth, that Theus's younger brother and sister, Trad and Verinia, were secreted away aboard the Regal Destiny during the Mecetti Purge. (PGT, TSIA)

Paddox, Trad

this youth was the younger brother of Theus Paddox. Trad and his sister, Verinia, were lost aboard the Regal Destiny when it fled during the Mecetti Purge, more than twenty years before the Battle of Hoth. Trad was just eight years old at the time, and was placed in stasis by Mistress Winslo when the ship was sabotaged. The bodies of Trad and Verinia were recovered by Captain Nils Wender and the crew of the Bright Seeker, then turned over to House Pelagia for reanimation. (TSIA)

Paddox, Verinia

this youth was the younger sister of Theus Paddox. Verinia and her brother, Trad, were lost aboard the Regal Destiny when it fled during the Mecetti Purge, more than twenty years before the Battle of Hoth. Verinia was just ten years old at the time, and was placed in stasis when the ship was sabotaged. The bodies of Trad and Verinia were recovered by Captain Nils Wender and the crew of the Bright Seeker, then turned over to House Pelagia for reanimation. (TSIA)

Paddy Frogs

these flat, bloated amphibians are native to the planet Klatooine. Jabba the Hutt used to consume these creatures as appetizers. He preferred them preserved in brandy, which added flavor and kept these vicious little frogs from attacking each other. (TJP)

Padlink

this device was designed to be attached to a standard datapad, providing access to a mainframe computer system. (SWJ10)

Padme

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Padon

this green-skinned, alien being introduced Canderous Ordo to Carth Onasi and Bastila Shan, on the planet Taris, during the height of the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Paecian

this was the secondary language spoken on the planet Dathomir, after the Basic tongue. (EGP)

Paecian Empire

an ancient empire founded about 3000 years before Han Solo won the planet Dathomir in a sabacc match, shortly after the Battle of Endor. (CPL)

Pa'ela

this was the Menahuun word for the life-energies that permeated the planet Lamaredd. The word pa'ela literally meant "holy blood", and was believed by many Jedi Knights to be the Force. (GMR7)

Paemos

this young man was among the many Force-sensitive individuals who were exiled to the planet Dathomir during the early years of the New Order, because he was perceived as a threat by Emperor Palpatine. Paemos became something of an aide to Rohak, and was with the old man when he discovered the location for the Village of Aurilia. (SWGAL)

Paffen

this Imperial commander was left on Lucazec to await the return of a Fallanassi who could read the hidden messages left behind by the elders. He was killed by Luke Skywalker when he tried to abduct Akanah. Note that Shield of Lies indicates that Paffen poisoned himself, rather than be captured by Skywalker on Lucazec. (BTS, SOL)

Pagda Luwa

this was a noted member of the Mrissi race. (UANT)

Page

this young being was a student at the Jedi Temple on Coruscant during the last years of the Old Republic. (YDR)

this young man was from the planet Corulag. He disapproved of his father's position as a pampered Imperial Senator, and was none too happy when his father sent him to the Academy. However, Page turned the situation to his own goals, and used the freedom from his father to study all sorts of things about the military. He graduated with honors, and was assigned as a scout in General Veers' command in the Army. He defected to the Alliance after hearing one of Princess Leia's anti-Imperial speeches on Coruscant, agreeing with her assessment of the Empire and the state of the galaxy. Page stayed on after witnessing the heroic efforts of Luke Skywalker and Han Solo. Page was recruited by Crix Madine as a commando, and he was part of Bren Derlin's troops on Hoth, as well as Solo's assault team at Endor. His non-descript good looks made him blend in with most crowds, allowing him to "disappear" in plain sight. When Derlin took a desk job following the Battle of Endor, Page was promoted to Lieutenant, but refused to be promoted further, having seen that rank had nothing to do with the level of commitment from Solo or Skywalker. Note that the Star Wars Customizable Card Game - Endor Expansion claims Page was already a Lieutenant prior to the Battle of Endor. When the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy began, Page found himself once again on the front lines. He agreed to a naval posting, garnering the rank of Captian and serving under Pash Cracken aboard the Memory of Ithor during Operation Trinity. When the ship exploded, it was believed that Judder and Pash were both killed in the explosion. However, both managed to reach lifepods and escape the blast, only to be captured by the Yuuzhan Vong and incarcerated on Selvaris. He was eventually rescued by the New Republic after Thorsh managed to escape the prison camp and provide the Republic with the location of Selvaris, only to be trapped on Caluula Station with Han Solo and the Millennium Falcon. It was there that Page left Cracken, returning with the Solos to Calamari. (HTTE, COTF, HTSB, HTTEC, CCG10, RESB, FP, UF)

Page's Commandos

another name for the Katarn Commandos, a special-forces group led by Lieutenant Judder Page of the New Republic. (HTTE, COTF, HTSB, FP)

Pagh

this was an Ansionian exclamation of disgust. (APS)

Pah, Vinsho

this man was one of Chancellor Finis Valorum's personal guards, during the period leading up to the Battle of Naboo. It was Pah's quick thinking that helped save Valorum from an attack by The Flail, during Zegmon Pent's attempt to assassinate Valorum. (SWRPG)

Pahgan

Pa'hir'al City

this was the capital city of the planet Urce. (AIR)

Paig

this was a Fallanassi world. (BTS)

Paige-Tarkin, Shayla

this woman represented her homeworld of Eriadu, as well as the planets of Seswenna Sector, to the Old Republic Senate, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. She was adamant in her support of the Republic, in the whirlwind of secession movements which engulfed the Republic. She was one of Chancellor Palpatine's strongest supporters, and grew increasingly worried about his health as the Clone Wars ground on. (HNN4, JT)

Painted Door Street

a street located in Plawal, on Belsavis. Nubblyk the Slyte had a house on this street, which was taken over by Roganda Ismaren. (COJ)

Pair O'Dice Casino

a casino located in the Yerith Bepin hotel on Cloud City over Bepin. (GG2)

Pak, Tal

this rat-fced man was a notorious smuggler. Tal Pak and his partner, Vassk, agreed to help the Alliance by providing them with the location of a supply cache on Tatooine, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He was later betrayed by his partner when the Twi'lek sold out to the Empire. (SWJ2)

Pake

an Alliance X-Wing pilot killed in action over M'haeli. (ROC)

Pak-It Gear Bag

this SoroSuub gear bag is essentially a backpack used by spacers to carry personal effects. (PSG)

Pakk

this Herglic term could be used to indicate a Herglic pod community, a city, or a planet, depending on the context in which it was used. (PGT)

Pakka

this Trianii cub was the son of Atuarre and Keehee. He was kidnapped and interrogated by the Corporate Sector' Security Police during the annexation of Fibuli, and hadn't spoken since that time when Atuarre managed to rescue him during a prisoner transfer. Pakka and his mother teamed up with Rekkon to investigate the disappearances of individuals in the Corporate Sector. He assists Han Solo and his mother in infiltrating Stars' End and liberating the people kept there. After this, Pakka tried to return to school and lead a normal life, but he had become something of a celebrity on Fibuli. He adjusted quickly, and soon was drawn out of his shell. (HSE, CSA)

Pakkallo, Sena

this aging woman served as a medical officer at the Imperial garrison on Bakura during the height of the Galactic Civil War. A veteran of several missions to harsh worlds, Pakkallo once treated Wilek Nereus for a parasitic disorder on OrulShai II. Nereus remembered her compassion, and eventually hired her to serve on Bakura. She hoped that a non-combat position would make her life easier, but Nereus' cruel methods of keeping the peace kept her more than busy. She grew bitter working for the Empire, and even considered joining the Alliance. She didn't know how to contact them, so she smuggled medical supplies to the Bakuran underground. In the wake of the Battle of Bakura, Pakkallo decided to join the fledgling New Republic. (TBSB)

Pakkerd Light Transport

this false corporation was set up on Ession by the Imperial warlord Zsinj, under the alias of Oan Pakkerd. The company's records listed Vanter Raffin as the chief officer, and Hola Paskalian as the chief of security. During the height of the Empire, Pakkerd was a division of Sienar Fleet Systems that built TIE Fighters and TIE Interceptors. After the death of Palpatine at Endor, Pakkerd was sold off. Since that time, it has produced a wide range of repulsorlift vehicles. Zsinj had actually been building new TIE Fighters, which he hoped to get assigned to the Implacable before the New Republic could stop him. Unfortunately, with the help of the captured Night Caller, the Republic was able to knock out the Pakkerd plant and rob Zsinj of his reinforcements. (WS)

Pako Ramoon

a planet located in the Grohl Sector, Pako Ramoon was the site of TransGalMeg's corporate headquarters. Diskio and K'lial Khzrry were instrumental in the Alliance's attempt to infiltrate the TGM headquarters. (CRO)

Pakoukou

this was a Mon Calamari deity. (T4)

Pakrik Major

this planet orbited its primary star with its less-populated sister, Pakrik Minor. It is located in the Kanchen Sector. (SOP)

Pakrik Minor

this small, sparsely-populated sister to the planet Pakrik Minor is the primary world which grows tallgrain. It is the capitol world of the Kanchen Sector. (SOP)

Pakuuni

primary planet in the Pakuuni System. (TIE)

Pakuuni System

a haven for pirates and smugglers around the time of the Battle of Hoth. Intergalactic trade there was dangerous, at best. Thrawn, then an Imperial Vice Admiral, attempted to set up a new installation there. From this base, Thrawn could then restore order to the system. (TIE)

Pal

this was a common component used to create the names given to Cerean males. In general, male Cereans given an individual name, which is added to the names of their father and grandfather. Complete male names are arranged based on harmony and cadence, but the literal meanings are arranged to ensure proper descriptions. The name Pal referred to an individual's quickness of mind, cunning, or initiative. (GCG)

Pala Kwi'teksa

this young Twi'lek girl was a slave in Mos Espa, and was a friend of young Anakin Skywalker. Before arriving on Tatooine, Pala was first enslaved by the Toydarian baron Begubb. Begubb had demanded an annual payment of ryll spice to "protect" her village, and when the natives couldn't pay, Begubb took the smartest and brightest children instead. She was educated at Madame Vansitt's Charm Academy to be an assassin, and was sold to Lord Tantos shortly before Anakin defeated Sebulba in the Boonta Eve Classic podrace. However, she and Anakin discovered a group of Ghostling children captured by Sebulba, and they tried their best to rescue them from Gradulla the Hutt. Gardulla was able to identify Pala from a flake of skin found in Gardulla's dungeons, and Madame Vansitt had no choice but to destroy Pala. Luckily for Pala, Anakin had given her a signal jammer to wear, which blocked the destruction transmission. After helping the Ghostlings reach Bantha Rock and the ship of Rakir Banai, Pala escaped Tatooine with Dorn. (E1A5, E1A7, E1A8)

Palace Courtyard

this wide, circular courtyard was built near Naboo's Theed Palace, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. The courtyard was split into two halves, with a tree-lined walkway running down the middle. The courtyard was created to foster and encourage enlightened thought and practice, in the wake of the brutal invasion of the Trade Federation. Holographic murals imbedded in the colonnade wall defining the courtyard's boundaries portrayed many of Naboo's greatest philosophers and artists, in keeping with the courtyard's themes. Just before the onset of the Clone Wars, many of the workers staged work stoppages and strikes in protest of the working conditions during the construction of the courtyard, but were swiftly arrested and silenced by the local security forces. (IWE2)

Palace Dargul

governmental seat on the planet Dargul. (JS)

Palace Guard

this was the division of the Royal Naboo Security Force which was responsible for security in and around the royal and governmental buildings of Naboo. Palace of Light located in the city of Lola Curich on Lianna, the Palace of Light is an amusement pavilion encompassing over 600 different games of skill and chance. Food can also be ordered in several quick-food restaurant booths scattered throughout the pavilion. (ML)

Palace of Peace

this was the name given to the central governmental building of Peace City, on the planet Ylesia, after the Yuuzhan Vong took control of the planet and turned it over to the Peace Brigade. As a gruesome reminder of Ylesia's past, and a deterrent to any attempt to recover it, the dried skin of a Hutt leader was hung over the entrance. (Y)

Palace of Splendid Harmony

this was the name of the governmental seat of the Rajah of Virujansi. The Rajah sat in the Ever Radiant Throne. During the height of the Clone Wars, the 6,000-year-old Palace took a good deal of damage during Separatist attacks, but was saved by the work of Anakin Skywalker and Obi-Wan Kenobi. (RC, SWI72)

Palace of the Woolamander

this was one of the ancient, elaborate structures found in the jungles of Yavin Four. Its construction was attributed to the ancient Massassi, although its exact origins were lost in history. In the years following the death of Emperor Palpatine, the Alliance Senate used it as a meeting place. It was named by the Alliance engineers who discovered, although not because there was any indication it was used to worship the woolamander. Instead, when they found it, a pack of woolamanders was found nesting in the ruins. After the Senate agreed to allow Jedi Master Luke Skywalker to establish a training facility on Yavin 4, the Palace of the Woolamander was discovered to be the resting place of the Golden Globe. (GDV, HTF, ISU, GG, P)

Palace Plaza

this was the name of the wide, open avenue which led from Theed Palace through the Triumphal Arch and out into the city proper, on the planet Naboo. (IWE1)

this Ceran noble was a compatriot of Mynnic the Jedi, and often worked with Mynnic's team during the years following the Battle of Naboo. (GMR6)

Palisade

this coastal community was located on the largest equatorial island found on the planet Kabal. Like many other outlying locations, the Palisade community avoided Imperial bombardment during the Galactic Civil War. Kabal's capital city suffered great damage because of the planetary leadership's neutral stance during the war, but more remote locations were ignored. Much of the community was contained in the sprawling estate of Tyro Viveca, and what remained as public property was used as a marketplace. Most of the planet's saltfish processing was done in Palisade. (GMR1)

Palisade Starport Control

this was the central traffic control center that serviced the starport located in the community of Palisade, on the planet Kabal, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GMR1)

Palkandi Brokerage House

Pallin

this man served the Imperial Remnant as a Lieutenant, and was in command of the garrison on Ord Sedra when the Yuuzhan Vong tried to subjugate the planet. He managed to send out a short distress signal before communications were jammed, and the communication was intercepted by Kyle Katarn and Jan Ors. They diverted from their original plan to meet Pallin on Ord Sedra, where they developed a plan to defeat the Yuuzhan Vong. Although the alien invaders were defeated, Pallin felt that he had let his people down. The invasion occurred on his first command watch, and he was forced to call in help from the New Republic. Katarn quickly pointed out that it was Pallin who made the decision to send out the distress signal, which allowed the Republic agents to assist in freeing hundreds of innocent people. Their efforts nearly were for naught when Pallin's officers failed to secure their Yuuzhan Vong captives, and he was forced to call for help from Kyle and Jan to eliminate the aliens. (T21)

Palm Diary

Palm-key

a locking mechanism that is keyed by the imprint of the user's palm. (TB)

Pal-Nada

this Force-wielding Cerean used his influence to steal and the resell starships for large profits, during the height of the New Order. His base of operations was on the planet Jenenma, in the Blinders district of Sahl-Evin. He took over the criminal organization which had been left behind by a Hutt crimelord who had simply left it behind, and Pal-Nada turned it into his own small empire. He ruled with an iron fist, strictly forbidding powered weapons of any kind within The Blinders district. Any being caught with a weapon was soundly beaten by the Sahl-Evin port authority, which was Pal-Nada's payroll. This gave his organization a strong sense of order and conduct, while bringing the official law of Sahl-Evin into his fold. (WOA17, WOA19)

Palo

this young man, a native of the planet Naboo, was a member of the Legislative Youth Program at the same time Padme' Amidala was participating. Padme' was a couple of years yougner than Palo, and had a crush on the boy. Palo eventually went into the art field, while Padme' pursued a career in politics. (AOTCN)

Palomella

a flowering plant which has beautiful turquoise blossoms. (COJ)

Pa'lowick

this strange amphibian race was bipedal in stature, and was native to the planet Lowick. Their bodies are bulbous, and measure about a meter in diameter. Their reedy legs support the main body, which acts as a torso as well as a head. Pa'lowick have no distinct neck, and their eyes and snouts sits atop their torso. Their eyes are located at the end of short stalks, and their snouts contain their nostrils and mouths. The mouth of a Pa'lowick is surrounding by thick lips, and has very few teeth. A larger mouth, located at the base of the snout, is present in young individuals, but seemed to be absorbed into the facial skin as the Pa'lowick aged. They have greenish-yellow skin that runs to light brown, and are spotted with blue-green markings. As a race, Pa'lowicks were natural scavengers with incredible patience, and maintained ritualistic ways of doing nearly everything in their lives. (CCG9, AE, EGA, UANT)

Palpatine

Palpatine served his homeworld of Naboo, as well as thirty-six other inhabited planets, as a Senator in the Old Republic. He was first elected to represent the human population of Naboo some 52 years before the Battle of Yavin. Unknown to virtually every being in the galaxy, Palpatine was also a student of the Dark Side of the Force who trained on Korriban. Palpatine used his political savvy to develop alliances with other power-hungry individuals to begin his own bid for power, and was instrumental in the rise to power of the Trade Federation. He used the Trade Federation - with its cowardly Neimoidian leaders - to force the Old Republic to see its stagnant ways. After manipulating his Queen, Amidala, to call for a vote of no-confidence in Supreme Chancellor Valorum, Palpatine put himself at the forefront of the coming elections. In a vote which was based on sympathy for Naboo and the many alliances Palpatine had forged, he was voted to replace Valorum at the age of fifty. While remaining unobtrusive and often helpful, Palpatine manipulated the Old Republic until it began to crumble from within, remaining in his position as Chancellor well beyond the normal term length. He worked behind the scenes - using his alter ego of Darth Sidious - to push the Republic to the brink of destruction. As crises arose, Palpatine the compassionate leader would rue the need for accepting an extension to his term as Chancellor, vowing to lay down his powers soon afterward. However, Palpatine the schemer made sure that things continued to decay, in order to further solidify his position of power. The most crucial situation he faced was the threat of the Separatists, led by Count Dooku. After learning of the capture of Obi-Wan Kenobi on Geonosis, and upon discovering the clone army that had originally been ordered by Jedi Master Sifo-Dyas, Palpatine called for the creation of an Army of the Republic to combat the Separatists. He accepted another term of office - essentially, an indefinite extension of his current term - when Jar-Jar Binks recommended that the Chancellor be given emergency powers to combat Dooku's Separatists. He then forced the Military Creation Act into law and assumed control of the war. He later assumed complete control of the galaxy and himself Emperor. A student in the ways of the Dark Side of The Force, Palpatine was also a xenophobe, though he used aliens when it suited him. Through his use of the Dark Side, he gained a large body of knowledge on the use of clones to become virtually immortal. The fresh supply of new bodies ensured that the destructive power of the Dark Side never killed him. Near the end of the Clone Wars, Palpatine recognized the strength of Anakin Skywalker, and insinuated himself into Anakin's life as a confidante and advisor. He used Anakin's anger and aggression as a fulcrum, and twisted the young Jedi to the Dark Side of the Force. It was also during this time that the Jedi Order began to investigate the existence of Darth Sidious, the Sith Lord who was Palpatine's alter ego. Palpatine supported the efforts of the Jedi to locate Sidious, since he could track them and eliminate them during the search. Following the First Battle of Coruscant, Palpatine revealed to Anakin Skywalker that he was none other than Darth Sidious. After Anakin brought this news to the Jedi Council, Mace Windu and several other Jedi Masters confronted Palpatine to arrest him. Palpatine proved to be more than a match for the Jedi, killing the other Masters and enlisting the help of Anakin to dispatch Mace Windu. Palpatine used this event, which he called the Jedi Rebellion, to assume complete control of the Senate and outlaw the Jedi Order. Palpatine then accepted Anakin as his apprentice, naming him Darth Vader. Although he was forced to recover Anakin's body from Mustafar and rebuild it, Palpatine continued to teach Vader in the ways of the Dark Side. However, Palpatine also knew that Anakin had been married to Padme' Amidala, and that there was the possibility that Vader might have had children. Palpatine ruled the galaxy as Emperor for nearly 25 years, until he was killed by Darth Vader aboard the second Death Star, over the Forest Moon of Endor. It was believed that Palpatine had been using his connection to the Force to control the minds and will of the Imperial Fleet at Endor, and that his death caused the surviving Imperial ships to lose their coordination, allowing the Alliance forces to win the Battle of Endor. Although Palpatine's body was consumed by the fierce power generators in the battle station, his spirit survived, albeit injured and without a strong connection to the Dark Side of the Force. It took the disembodied Palpatine so long to reach the planet Byss that he was nearly drained of any power in the Dark Side. Once on Byss, though, he was able to contact Sate Pestage, who readied a new cloned body for the Emperor. Palpatine spent years recovering his powers in the Dark Side, all the while watching the Empire crumble under the sheer luck of the New Republic. He had hopes for Grand Admiral Thrawn, but the alien's death only helped Palpatine gain more power. When he emerged from hiding on Byss, he sought to retake the galaxy using World Devastators. He was also trying to turn Luke Skywalker to the Dark Side, which he nearly succeeded in doing. However, the presence of Luke's sister, Leia Organa, and her unborn child pulled Luke back to the Light Side. Together, they turned the Emperor's rage back on himself, and destroyed yet another incarnation of the evil Emperor. Since this last body was killed on Byss, Palpatine had an easier time placing his spirit into a new clone. However, Luke managed to destroy all of the remaining clones Palpatine had ready for use, and so when his body began to deteriorate, he started searching for Anakin Solo again. He quickly began launching new attacks against the New Republic, this time with a weapon known as the Galaxy Gun. Skywalker enlisted the aid of the Ysanna - a race of Force-sensitives descended from ancient Jedi stock - as well as the assistance of Empatajayos Brand, to confront the Emperor on Onderon. There, Palpatine's dying body tried desperately to reach Anakin Solo. Brand intervened, though, and consumed the Emperor's spirit within his own. Both Brand and Palpatine died on Onderon. Later, during the rise of Second Imperium, a group of former Imperial Royal Guards began using their experience with Palpatine to actually pretend to be the Emperor reborn. Using carefully spliced holoivid segments, they were able to project a perfect image of the Emperor, and were also able to synthesize speech from recordings. Whenever they traveled, they used droids to carry a large isolation chamber which ostensibly housed the reborn Palpatine. Their ruse fooled Brakiss and the leaders of the Shadow Academy, until they were discovered in the aftermath of the battle over Yavin 4. Clive Revill supplied Palpatine's voice in Star Wars: Episode V - The Empire Strikes Back, while Ian McDiarmid portrayed the Emperor himself in Star Wars: Episode VI - Return of the Jedi. Palpatine was also portrayed by Paul Hecht for the The Empire Strikes Back Radio Drama on National Public Radio. (SW, ESB, ESB, ROTJ, DE1, HTTE, DE2, EE, DK, SW1, IG1, OWS, COD, GB, AOTC, AOTCN, LEV, IS3)

Palpatine Triumphant

this work of art was created by Venthan Chassu. It was the final work he created before his untimely death. It depicted a resplendent Palpatine sitting on a throne comprised of bones. The bones of the throne were broken and shattered, but the skulls revealed the species from which they came. Palpatine wore a maniacal expression on his face, and many of Chassu's supporters wondered what the true message of the work was meant to be. (TFE)

Palpatine's Secret Police

this was a phrase used by many beings in the galaxy to describe the Jedi Knights, during the height of the Clone Wars. It was started after the Battle of Geonosis, when the general public learned that the Jedi had agreed to serve as military leaders in the Grand Army of the Republic. The phrase found even more widespread usage after many disgruntled Jedi left the Order of their own free will, and began to speak of their former comrades as "Palpatine's Secret Police." (YDR)

Palpatones

this band, which featured Max Rebo Twelve alumni Joh Yowza, Rystall, and Greeata, was popular during the early years of the New Republic. Fronted by Greeata's wondrous voice, the Palpatones reached the peak of their fame with the hit song, Kick the Ranat. (SWI67)

Palud

this lupine humanoid was a native of Vorzyd 5, and supported the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. He was captured by Blackhole, along with Paxin, Luke Skywalker, and Leia Organa. When they attempted to escape, Palud was killed by Imperial forces. His son, Choyd, held Luke and Leia responsible for his father's death. (CSWEA)

Paluruvu

this violet-colored perfume, made in the Dzavak Lakes province on the planet Ansion, had a scent which was often described as flamboyant. Too much of the scent, however, acted as a mild form of sedative, and put the user into a deep sleep. Certain Alwari clans often used concentrated paluruvu to render individuals unconscious. (APS)

Panagakos, Tahji

this young street orphan was just eleven years old at the height of the Galactic Civil War. She was known for her ability to locate people, and many of the criminal organizations as well as the legitimate businesses employed her as a freelance messenger. (BSS)

Panaka

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Panaka

this dark-skinned human served as the Captain of Queen Amidala's royal guard on the planet Naboo. Panaka personally supervised the Queen's weapons and self-defense training, and was also in charge of security at the Theed Palace. While not openly xenophobic, Panaka was well-known for his dislike of the Gungan people. In his youth, Panaka joined the Old Republic's Special Forces team in order to gain experience fighting the pirates which marauded the Naboo System. He was forced to return to Naboo when his sister died in a live-fire exercise while training with the Palace Guard. Upon returning to civilian duty, Panaka served under Captain Magneta, and quickly made his presence known on Naboo. He worked to revise many of the planet's military doctrines and practices. Eventually, Panaka was appointed Captain of the Guard when Magneta resigned, and made every effort to protect the new Queen of the Naboo, Amidala. Ensuring that the Queen would always be safe, Panaka supervised the selection of five handmaidens to support Amidala. Each girl was chosen for her loyalty and strength, as well as her resemblance to Amidala. When the Trade Federation blockaded the planet, Panaka stood beside his Queen, and helped her ensure her safety by switching her with Padme, one of her handmaidens. Later, Panaka accompanied the Queen to Coruscant, along with Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi. Panaka was unconvinced that the Jedi were working for the Queen's own good, but deferred to her judgement. When they returned to Naboo with plans to break the blockade themselves, Panaka supported his Queen's plans, although he was quick to point out the inherent flaws. When the Battle of Naboo broke out, Panaka was in his customary position, fighting beside Amidala and helping her capture Nute Gunray. Coupled with the destruction of the Droid Control Ship and the defeat of the Federation's droid armies, freed the planet Naboo from the blockade. Panaka himself remained loyal to the leaders of Naboo, and remained on the planet to supervise the protection for Queen Jamillia. Later, after the Clone Wars and the advent of Emperor Palpatine's New Order, it was believed that Panaka became a political figure, accepting the title and position of Moff while remaining loyal to Palpatine. It was also believed that it was Panaka who provided Palpatine with information on the secret marriage of Padme' and Anakin Skywalker. Captain Panaka was portrayed by Hugh Quarshie in the film Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace. (SW1, OWS, JQA, IG1, NEGC, IWST, VD3)

this man, distinguished by his stooped posture and well-tended goatee, was a freelance smuggler who accompanied Doctor Frayne to Geonosis, just after the onset of the Clone Wars. When Pandoor learned of Frayne's mission to Geonosis, he infiltrated her team by waylaying one of her assistants and using his credentials to gain access to their ship. Frayne surprised him by not turning him in, but by asking him to join her expedition. However, as soon as they were on Geonosis, Frayne stunned Pandoor and left him with Jedi Knight Jyl Somtay. Somtay managed to get them free, and they made their way to the surface. Pandoor feared that she would turn him in to the Republic authorities, but she agreed to work with him to relocate Frayne and bring her to justice. During their trek, he revealed that he was once a student of xenoarchaeology at the University of Ketaris. When the school went bankrupt, he took up smuggling as a way to obtain the relics and artifacts that had captivated him. After they located Frayne's body and avoided the nexu that had killed her, Pandoor observed that they made a good team, and that Somtay should join him as a smuggler. She scoffed at the idea, and threatened him with physical harm if he tried to persuade her. In an underground lab, they discovered a Geonosian sonic blaster that was capable of shifting its frequency with every blast, which would have made it unstoppable by the Jedi. Pandoor managed to steal the weapon and tried to use it against her, but the nexu returned and mauled him. Somtay managed to fight it off, and dragged Pandoor to a place where she could bind him and turn him over to the authorities. (SWI79)

Panib

Panib, Grell

this Imperial Captain was known as a belligerent individual. A native of the colony world of Heffrin, he grew up in a mining town and learned to use his fists before using his mouth. He was conscripted into the Imperial Army after one too many brawls, and his military career was stalled by his frequent fighting. He eventually got posted to Bakura, where Petr Thanas spent three years teaching him about command and how to control his aggression. When Thanas surrendered his forces after the Battle of Bakura and agreed to join the fledgling New Republic, Panib left with him. Panib worked to help train the meager Bakuran military into a viable defense, and later earned the rank of General in the Bakuran Defense Fleet. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion, when it seemed that Bakura was ready to form an alliance with the P'w'eck, Panib was forced to assume control of the planet when Prime Minister Cundertol was kidnapped. Panib placed Bakura under martial law until the situation could be resolved. When Cundertol returned to Bakura, Panib agreed to lift order declaring martial law and work with the leaders to ensure a safe consecration of Bakura by the Keeramak. Panib was unprepared for the treachery of both Cundertol and Deputy Prime Minister Blaine Harris, and found himself in a leadership position when both were killed or driven off in separate events. As his first act, Panib signed a peace treaty with Lwothin of the P'w'eck Emancipation Movement. He agreed to send Bakuran ships to Lwhekk to help ensure that the native P'w'eck population was freed. (TBSB, FH2)

Panjandrum

this was the term used on the planet Kalarba to indicate an individual's status as representative to the Imperial Senate. (NEGC)

Panjarra, Teela

this six-month-old baby girl was discovered to be extremely Force-sensitive by Yoda and Mace Windu, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. She was held on Corulag by the scientist Frexton, who refused to release her to the Jedi. Frexton hoped to perform experiments on the child in order to determine the source of a Jedi's strength. He tried to flee Corulag, but was caught in the crossfire of the Bartokk attempt to level the Academy. The Bartokks had been hired by Groodo the Hutt, and Frexton was too frightened to escape. Yoda managed to defeat the Bartokks and rescue both Frexton and Teela, who had spent much of her time in a Live Organism Comfort Conveyor while in Frexton's care. (E1A4)

Pankpa

this was the Huttese word for "spaceship." (GMR5)

Pann

this young Jedi Knight discovered the Codex and discovered some of its uses. (GMH)

Panner

this was one of the Ugnaught people's blood professions, passed down from generation to generation within a family. Panners were known for their skills in mining rare gases. (GG2)

Panno

this Dresselian scout and commando was recruited by Crix Madine to join the Alliance. He rose quickly through the ranks, and held the rank of Major at the time of the Battle of Endor. He assisted Madine in planning the logistics of strike operations of all kinds. (CCG11)

Panorama

this was a pleasure ship which traveled the Tion Hegemony during the height of the New Order. (SWJ4)

Panos, Galen

this man, the High Lord of House Reena during the height of the New Order, was a former Dean at Reena University. Unlike his predecessors, who chafed at the position of House Reena in Tapani Sector politics, Lord Panos was content with his stature. He cultivated relationships with other Houses in order to bring House Reena into position as a swing vote, controlling enough of the Great Council's seats to act as the deciding factor in many situations. He was known as a brilliant man, with great expertise in a variety of physical and computer-related sciences. He maintained a secret neuro-computer jack near his right ear, which allowed him to download tremendous amounts of data and knowledge to his brain, thereby maintaining his stature. (PGT, LOE)

Pan-preneur

this species of amphibious race of creatures is believed to be genetically related to the Mon Calamari, although many amphibious races share similar characteristics. The Pan-preneur are distinguished from the Mon Calamari by their skin, which is much more warty, and their heads, which are heavily ridged rather than smooth and streamlined. Both species share huge, round eyes that protrude from the sides of their heads. (SWJ8)

Panshee

this was an Ewok tribe, one of the many tribes which contributed to the effort to defeat the Empire during the Battle of Endor. (SWJ1)

Pantang Scale of Aero-techno Advancement

this evolutionary scale was developed to assist historians and xenoarchaeologists in classifying a civilization's level of technology. It never found wide-spread usage, however, since it rated the technology required to build a landspeeder equivalent to that required to build an Imperial-class Star Destroyer. (VP)

Pan-Tapani Historical Society

this university club was originally formed at the Mrlsst Academy, and was dedicated to keeping Tapani Sector independent from the Empire. The Society also spoke out against the Freeworlds Region's reliance on Imperial funding. In reality, the Society was a cover for Doctor Arkeld's Justice Action Network cell. It was founded about eight years before the Battle of Endor by Arkeld himself, and was secretly funded by Bel Janius. (LOE)

Panteer, Heeth

this man was a native of the planet Alderaan, and grew up with members of the Organa family during the early years of the New Order. Heeth and his younger brother, Raal, were in the Ryloth System when their homeworld was destroyed by the first Death Star. As the surviving heirs of the Panteer family, the two owned an "inhospitable" moon in the system, although the actual location was luxurious enough to call their vacation home. The moon housed a large collection of Alderaanian flora and fauna, and was partially set aside as a hunting preserve. In the wake of the Battle of Yavin, Leia Organa traveled to the moon, hoping that the Panteers would allow the Alliance to use it as a new base. Heeth, however, wanted nothing to do with the idea, demanding a high price for his cooperation. He correctly surmised that Leia's actions aboard the first Death Star led to Alderaan's destruction, albeit without her influence, and didn't want the same thing to happen to his family's moon. When Raal took Leia on a safari through the preserve but they failed to return, Heeth took a speeder and set out to locate them. Although he reached them quickly, Raal had nonetheless died from the bite of a morp. Raal's death only hardened Heeth's resolve to stay out of the rebellion, and he ordered Leia to leave as quickly as possible. (SWEPH)

Panteer, Raal

this man was a native of the planet Alderaan, and grew up with members of the Organa family during the early years of the New Order. An old friend of Leia Organa, Raal and his older brother Heeth were in the Ryloth System when their homeworld was destroyed by the first Death Star. The two owned an "inhospitable" moon in the system, although the actual location was more than accommodating. The moon was actually the Panteer family's vacation home, and they were there when Alderaan was destroyed. It was to this moon that Leia Organa traveled, in the wake of the Battle of Yavin, to approach Raal about helping the Alliance find a new base. She hesitated briefly, though, worried that Raal had never gotten over the breakup of their relationship. Although Raal was happy to be reunited with Leia, he was surprised to learn of her connections to the Alliance. When Leia asked about the possibility of the Panteers' allowing the Alliance to use their moon as a new base, Raal was more than happy to agree with Leia's plan, although Heeth refused to allow it. To get away from his brother's negativity, Raal took Leia for a safari through the preserve housed on the moon, but a dragonsnake attacked their speeder. Stranded in the jungle, Raal was attacked by a veermok, but Leia managed to shoot the creature before it could kill him. Raal's luck didn't hold, though, and he was badly bitten by a morp. His dying wish was to have one more kiss from Leia, which she gladly gave. Unfortunately, Heeth was able to locate their position just after Raal died. (SWEPH)

Panthac

a carnivorous, predatory creature native to Mantessa, the panthac was a small but strong beast. They averaged less than a meter in length, but had sharp claws and mottled or striped coloring. The exact coloration of the panthac served to blend it into its surroundings, and the mane of hair around its neck serves to break up its appearance. Panthacs are fearless creatures which hunted in large packs, so as to bring down prey much larger than any individual. (TLC, TTSB, SWJ7, ANT)

Panto

the primary star in the Panto System. Three planets orbit the star, all of which cater to entertainment and escapism. (DFRSB)

Panto Prime

a deep-space station located in the Panto System. It is a luxurious casino and resort station, although it pales when compared to those found on the planet Pantolomin. (DFRSB)

Pantol

this fish was native to the shallow oceans of Vaynai, and was feared because of its poisonous defense system. The body of the pantol was protected by a mass of sharp, brittle spines, which were hollow and contained a dangerous toxin. When a predator or unsuspecting being was punctured by one or more of these spines, they broke off inside the flesh, releasing the toxin into the victim's bloodstream. This toxin caused paralysis in short order, allowing the slow-moving pantol to escape. (GMR8)

Pantolomin

first, and primary, planet in the Panto system, Pantolomin was a tropical world with three continents and five major islands in a vast, colorful ocean. The major tourist attractions here including the underwater cruises through the beautiful coral reefs. Pantolomin rotates once every 24 standard hours, and orbits the star Panto once every 349 local days. (DFR, DFRSB)

Pantolomin Halfback

named for the way that half its back breaks the surface of the water when it swims, this creature is native to the planet Pantolomin. It can either swim with its long, fin-like farms, or it can move through the water on its side. When swimming this way, the halfback retracts its front fins and uses its tail for propulsion. These creatures were sometimes referred to as "living canvasses" because of the way in which they altered their skin coloration to suit their mood and posture. The halfback was once believed to be a source of food to the Barabel race, but any attempts by the Barabels to raise halfbacks failed miserably. (SWJ4)

Pap

this Cavrilhu pirate worked in the electronics shop of the Kauron asteroid base. (SOP)

Papanoida

this Wroonian male was a Baron in a royal family, and was a friend of Senator Chi Eekway during the final years of the Old Republic. In the wake of the First Battle of Coruscant, Papanoida provided information to the Jedi Council that General Grievous was not on Utapau, despite information gathered by Clone Intelligence Units in the Outer Rim Territories. It was then assumed that Papanoida was acting as a double agent Baron Papanoida was portrayed by George Lucas in Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (OWS, IS3, VD3, SWDB)

Paparak Cross-cut

this was an engineering technique that was used to weaken the structural integrity of a structure. The idea was to cut through the supporting material - stone, duracrete, or durasteel - at such an angle to allow the being who made the cuts to escape just before the structure came crashing down. (VOF, GMR10)

Paploo

this was a common name for Ewok males. Like other Ewok names, it referred to a spirit or character in the Ewoks' mythology. (GCG)

Paploo

according to Ewok legend, this Ewok prince was hidden among a humble family to avoid being killed. (GCG)

Paploo

this Ewok was the son of Warok. Paploo helped the Alliance find the shield generator on Endor, and then stole an Imperial speeder bike to create a diversion for the Alliance forces. Paploo was also one of Kneesaa's best friends, and helped her drive away the Phlogs. Paploo was portrayed by Kenny Baker in Star Wars: Episode VI - Return of the Jedi. (ROTJ, ECAR, CCG10)

Papfak

an alien race characterized by its turquoise tentacles. (TME)

Paquallis III

this urban world is the site of the headquarters for the Benelex House of bounty hunters. (SWG6, TOD, GG10)

Paqwe

this is the native race of the planet Paqwepori. (TT)

Paqwepori

an autonomous planet aligned with the New Republic. It was the monarchical holding of the Paqwe family, and the native race was known as the Paqwe. (BTS, TT)

Par

this was one of the most common male names among the Corellian population. (GMR9)

Par Drann

this Yevetha was the proctor in command of the thrustship Tholos, and was assigned to guard the Black Nine shipyards. Like many of the proctors promoted by Nil Spaar to fill positions in his Navy, Par Drann had never seen actual combat. When the New Republic warships Vanguard, Folna, and Indomitable arrived at Black Nine and tried to take out the installation, Par Drann used the familiar dogma of "the closest enemy is the greatest threat" in his approach to the battle. This cost him his ship and his life, because he kept changing his focus of fire as the Republic ships moved through the battle. (TT)

Par Ontham's Guide to Etiquette

this was one of the most published and revised books on the subject of social etiquette produced in the galaxy. It continued to be updated throughout the early years of the New Republic. (TG)

Parabelt

this was another form of personal jetpack, produced during the height of the New Order. A pair of propellant tanks were worn on the back, attached to the main drive unit. (MC65)

Paracelus Minor

this planet was one of many worlds that saw intense fighting during the Clone Wars. (LEV)

Parada

this planet is known as the homeworld of the womback. (SWJ8)

Parade of Ghosts

this Entrallan spectacle commemorates the deeds of many of the planet's mythical heroes. The Parade occurs on Lunar Night, the night when Entralla's single moon passes closest to the planet. (SWJ4)

Paradise Road

this was one of the smaller roadways that were found in the city of Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine. It branched off from Spacers Row. (IWST)

Paradise Square

this was the primary entertainment district of Tasariq City, on the planet Tasariq, during the height of the New Order. (SWJ15)

Paradise System

a star system inhabited and controlled by the Ugors, it was made up of asteroids rather than planets. The asteroids themselves orbited a fragment of the first Death Star, which was flung into space when the battle station was destroyed during the Battle of Yavin. Hidden within the fragment, which was known as the Holiest of Holies to the Ugors, was a prototype gravity well projector. The projector mysteriously reactivated itself, and the power of the gravity well began drawing orbital debris and asteroids into the system. The natural effects of gravity eventually created the asteroid field. The Ugors, over the years, turned the system into a huge junkyard. The Imperial starmaps labeled the system as J21-Z65. When the Alliance discovered the presence of the gravity well projector in the Paradise System, they dispatched an assault team to recover it before the Imperials could find it. Without the attraction of the projector, the Paradise System slowly flung itself apart over the following decades. (GG4, SH, SWDB)

Paradise System Junkyard

this is the Imperial designation of the Ugors' collection of garbage and relics contained within the Paradise System. The Ugors were able to operate it under Imperial sanction. Contained within the Junkyard was a large section of the first Death Star known to the Ugors as the Holiest of Holies, a fact discovered by the Alliance agents who were searching for the Elusive. Within the wreckage was Obi-Wan Kenobi's lightsaber and a spare helmet and cape once owned by Darth Vader, as well as the prototype gravity well generator that created the original asteroid field. When the Alliance recovered the projector, the Paradise System and its Junkyard eventually flung itself apart without the central gravity source. (SH, SWDB)

Paradour Enterprises

this corporation produced a number of chemical synthesizers for use in creating new and unique perfumes and scents, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GFT)

Paragon

Tyed Kant's major starport, it houses a tradeport, administrative center, and about 90 percent of the planet's population. It provides most of the technology a landing pad can't. (SN)

Pa'rak

this was the second of N'zoth's three moons. (CCW)

Paraleptin

this was one of the most potent neurotoxins in existence during the height of the Clone Wars. (MBS)

Paralight System

a combination of mechanical and electro-optical subsystems tied into a ship's hyperdrive, the paralight system is responsible for taking the pilot's commands and converting them to the appropriate set of reactions within the main drive. (ESB)

Para-light System

another name for a starship's hyperdrive. (ESBN)

Paralope

this small, mammalian creature was native to the plains of Corellia, where it was the favored prey of the sand panther. (T)

Paralysis Cord

this was a form of energized, whip-like cord used by police agencies and bounty hunters to capture a target. (NEGC)

Paralysis Field

this was a form of defensive shielding system. (SOL)

Paralysis Ray

this was another term for the bolt of coherent light emitted by a blaster weapon that was set to stun. (MC1)

Paralysis Weapon

this hybrid weapon, based on Ssi-ruuvi weapons augmented by Yuuzhan Vong biotechnology, was created during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. It was first deployed on the Sh'ner-class cruisers Errinung'ka and Firrinree, when the Keeramak led an assault force to Bakura. (FH2)

Paramatan

this forested planet was known as the only refuge of the Great Oopik. (COG)

Paramexor Guild of Hunters

this was a bounty-hunting guild founded by Janq Paramexor. Paramexor required that the members of the Guild only hunted murderers, a restriction that many hunters found quite profitable. (GG10)

Paramexor, Janq

this man was once a brash, swaggering military officer whose opinion of himself was somewhat inflated. However, during a duel he was forced to fight to protect his honor, Janq was severely injured and lost the use of his legs. He was forced to live the rest of his life in a repulsorchair, and nearly committed suicide before some friends convinced him that his skills were better put to use elsewhere. With the support of his comrades, Janq rebuilt his life and eventually formed the Paramexor Guild of Hunters. He demanded that any hunter who joined his guild should hunt only those creatures who have found pleasure in killing their fellow creatures, and the Guild only paid for the acquisition of murderers. (GG10)

Paran

this ancient city, located on Derilyn, was filled with ancient ruins. It was the third-largest city on the planet, with roughly 512,000 residents when it was annihilated by bombardment from Imperial Star Destroyers when the Empire subjugated the planet. Less than 3,000 beings survived the assault. (PG3)

Para-roll

a Dornean pastry. (BTS)

Parasite Shower

this strong, astringent shower was given to miners and other laborers to kill off any parasites which had attached themselves to their skin. This ensured that the barracks in which the laborers worked were not infested with diseases. (JH)

Paraster Daskalion

this was the name of one of the few Tarro who were living in the galaxy during the early years of the New Republic. (UANT)

Paravacc 1.X

this parasite-repelling vaccine was developed by Uukaablian MedCorp. The vaccine is transported in a cylinder of polished metal. One end of the cylinder is placed against a victim's neck, and a stud at the other end injects the vaccine. Paravacc 1.X causes a slight headache, but other ill effects are encountered if used as directed. Prolonged use (more than three consecutive days) has been found to cause damaging effects on the user's nervous system. (KO)

Parcelus Minor

this relatively unimportant world was the site of a savage battle during the height of the Clone Wars. The planet itself was unremarkable, with only a few landmasses that were dominated by odorous swamp forests. These forests, however, were amazingly fast-growing, and the native populations struggled on a daily basis to keep the plantlife in check. Those who had visited Parcelus Minor often commented that the planet had "too much life" to be normal. The forces of the Army of the Republic were woefully unprepared for the scope of the Separatist forces on the planet, and were outnumbered ten-to-one before a rogue Separatist General took matters into his own hands. He ordered an orbital bombardment of Parcelus Minor, destroying Republic and Separatist forces alike in order to take control of the planet. The plantlife on the planet immediately caught fire, since it exuded the resin known as tzeotine, setting the entire planet ablaze in no time. (RDE)

Parck, Voss

this Imperial Captain was a member of a proud and distinguished Core family, and graduated with honors from the Imperial Academy on Corulag. He quickly earned command of the Strikefast, and later overruled Mosh Barris' command to wipe out an strangely inhabited world in the Unknown Regions, thereby bringing Thrawn to the Emperor's attention. Barris felt that Parck's actions cost him his career, as Thrawn was embraced by the Emperor and Parck was promoted along with the alien. When Thrawn was exiled to the Unknown Regions for a political snafu, Palpatine also banished Parck, demoting him from Captain to Commander and assigning him to the crew of the Admonitor as Captain Niriz's first officer. While Thrawn eventually returned to the known galaxy, Parck disappeared from active duty when Thrawn established a compound on the planet Nirauan. Parck remained there, guarding what became known as the Hand of Thrawn. (TFE, VOF, SWJ7, SWJ11)

Pardoner

this was another name for the Yuuzhan Vong god known as Yun-Shuno. (DW)

Pa'red

this was the third of N'zoth's three moons. (CCW)

Pareesh D'Thot

this was Nada Synnt's new starship, purchased shortly after the Battle of Hoth. He used the ship to help a team of smugglers "lose" Imperial raw material shipments. (SWJ10)

Parein II 4

this planet is located in the Sarin Sector of the Outer Rim. (GG9)

Parein Sweetgreen Fruit

this fruit, grown on Parein II 4, is one of the main ingredients in the creation of Daranu. The shells of the fruit are used as serving vessels, imparting their unique flavor to the drink. (GG9)

Parek

this Alliance scout was a member of the Gray Griffins, when they were captured on Alluuvia by the Scourge. Parek was the first scout released by the Scourge, in order to deliver a ransom note to Radell. Parek was distinguished by his short stature and hairless, bronze skin. In many ways, Parek resembled a fish, with three gills on each side of his head and a ridge of spines covering his head, neck, and back. (OE)

Par'Ell, Dunan

this man was in charge of security at the Ace of Sabres casino complex on Kluistar. He was a former Imperial officer who resigned under unusual circumstances, and his records do not even indicate who or where he served while in the military. After leaving the military, he founded Universal Guardians, Incorporated, and began providing security services to the highest bidders. He personally oversaw the security at the Ace of Sabres. Par'Ell was known as a master of martial arts, and was skilled in the techniques of the k'Jtari. His eyes contained retinal implants, giving him a mirror-like gaze that unnerved a great many people. He could speak two dozen languages with ease, and he wore a red cloak that many claim was part of the uniform he wore as a Royal Imperial Guard. (WSV)

Parella Jiramma Baco

this Hutt crimelord was one of Popara's biggest rivals during the last decades of the Old Republic. After the institution of the New Order, Parella became something of a business partner with Popara, working from his base on Nar Shaddaa when business required them to work together. Known as a shrewish individual with a nasty streak, Parella was an athletic Hutt who preferred to hunt whirlbats on Nal Hutta instead of lounging in the leisure of ill-gotten gains. However, Parella recognized that an alliance with the Anjiliac clan would be beneficial to his own endeavors. However, instead of currying favor from Popara, Parella focused his efforts on creating an alliance with Mika, Popara's youngest offspring. When Popara was murdered and Mika fled Anjiliac Towers, Parella decided to rethink his strategy, and chose to endear himself to Zonnos by hunting down Popara's killer. Parella was known as The Hunter for good reason: he was one of the few Hutts who actually left his lair to hunt down his prey, which was often the beings who had tried to swindle him. Using modified training remotes, Parella would locate his quarry. Then, wearing a full-body suit of Hutt battle armor, Parella would confront his opponents and challenge them to combat. The Hutt battle armor was as much for protection as for diversion, since many beings failed to anticipate Parella's speed while wearing the heavy armor. Tiny microrepulsors in the armor made it lighter and more maneuverable, allowing Parella to attack with vigor and force. (TF)

Parella the Hunter

see Parella Jiramma Baco (TF)

Parena

this is the Huttese word for "arena." (IS1)

Paret, Jian

this Imperial commander was in charge of the Black-15 shipyards just after the Battle of Endor. He was ordered to evacuate the shipyards and destroy any non-functional starships, and was in the process of doing so when Nil Spaar and the Yevetha attacked, capturing the shipyards and killing the Imperials. Jian Paret was killed by Nil Spaar himself. (BTS)

Paretaine Sonics

this corporation produced a wide range of sonic protection devices during the height of the New Order. (GFT)

Parfadi Sector

this area of the galaxy contains the Black Nebula. (SOL)

Parfue Gnat

this parasite latches itself onto watumba bats, drinking the bodily fluids of the bat. The Glottalphibs keep large numbers of watumba bats in their caverns, providing a ready supply of parfue gnats to feed on. (TNR)

Pargen, Inea

this woman was the daughter of Nuun Pargen of Alderaan. She was injured when her father's ship, the Crescent, was fired on by the Trade Federation, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. Nuun had been trying to transport a group of passengers to Naboo, but stumbled upon the Federation's blockade of the Naboo System. Inea recovered after being treated on Naboo. (SON)

Pargen, Nuun

this independent spacer was a native of the planet Alderaan, and owned the freighter Crescent during the last decades of the Old Republic. His daughter, Inea, was injured when the Crescent was fired upon by Trade Federation starfighters, as Nuun tried to transport passengers to Naboo during the Federation's blockade of the system. While waiting for Inea to be healed, Nuun allowed a team of Gungengineers to work on the Crescent and repair it. He repaid their kindness by using the Crescent to transport the deactivated bodies of Federation battle droids from the Great Grass Plains. (SON)

P'arghat

the Imperial Lieutenant in charge of indoctrinating the new recruits from the Taroon System. (TIE)

Pargo

a native of Kuan, and one of Maarek Stele's childhood friends. When the Empire conscripted Maarek, they also enlisted Pargo. Pargo was chosen to become a stormtrooper. (TIE)

Pari' Notgoth

Notgoth was an infamous Gotal criemlord and one-time confederate of Marg Sonat. Sonat enlisted Notgoth's help during his attempt to overtake Sard Nightbringer's criminal empire, asking Notgoth to execute the Rodian Morgotou. Notgoth later posed as a representative of the New Republic, when Nightbringer tried to auction off a prototype set of Imperial body armor. Shortly after the death of Natja the Hutt, Notgoth was cornered by the smugglers who found Morgotou's body. Notgoth refused to be taken alive, but told the smugglers of Marg Sonat's role in Natja's death as he passed away. (GG12, POC)

Paricha

this drink was brewed from the paricha root, and was usually served spiced. It was described as having a soft flavor. (TLC)

Park of Peace

this open park was located in the city of Derilysa, on the planet Derilyn. (PG3)

Parking Conservation Fund

this was the not-for-profit group which worked to ensure that there was sufficient parking for the wide variety of speeders, swoops, transport, and cargo vehicles that were in operation on the planet Coruscant during the last years of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

Parkins, Dram

a sabacc player. (RPG)

Parkis System

this is a planetary system with at least one planet capable of sustaining human life. (SWJ8)

Parl

a member of COMPNOR's Investigations branch, Parl and his partner, Huorne, struggled in vain to gain information on Admiral Ackbar. (ISB)

Parl, Gentius

this man was one of the most infamous - and most superstitious - crimelords on the planet Talus, during the height of the New Order. Known for his ferocity and quick thinking, Parl grew up in Qaestar Town, where he became interested in astrology. He never acted without first consulting a detailed astrological forecast, hoping that the position of the planets and stars would provide him with a favorable outcome. (CCW)

Parla

this was a common Psadan name. (UANT)

Parlan

an Imperial Navy Captain serving Darth Vader, Parlan was patrolling the Outer Rim when he captured the spacer Quist. Parlan ordered Quist to be killed, but Quist bargained for his life with the secret whereabouts of Adar Tallon. Parlan was ordered to recover Adar Tallon from Tatooine before the Alliance could find him. Parlan issued a bounty for Tallon's capture, which was accepted by Jodo Kast and a host of others. In the end, Parlan was unable to beat the Alliance to him, and Vader had him executed. Parlan was Captain of the Star Destroyer Relentless during the mission. (RC, TM)

Parliament of Guilds

this is the third major source of leadership on Cloud City, along with the Baron Administrator and the Exex. The Parliament of Guilds was created to represent the workers and craftsmen of Cloud City, and strives to keep the outpost's economics evenly spread. The Parliament oversaw the operation of the casinos and provided valuable assistance to the legal system. Of course, their position as an impartial jury was maintained in order to keep the Exex from taking control of the courts. (GG2, ISU)

Parma

this man, a native of the planet Mandalore, was part of the underground movement to overthrow the slavers who took control of the planet during the New Order. He served under Fenn Shysa, who helped repair Parma's wounded leg after a skirmish. (LTA4, MC68)

Parmel Sector Stock Exchange

this Outer Rim commodities trading center controls the pulse of business in the Parmel Sector. (GG9)

Parmel System

the planetary system in which the Empire set up a TIE Defender manufacturing facility. Following his defection, Zaarin tried to steal technology from this plant for the Alliance. Parmel System is located in the Parmel Sector of the Outer Rim Territories. (TIE, GG9)

Parmic Sector Stock Market

another of the Outer Rim's commodities markets, this one is dominated by Gastess' Finance. (GG9)

Parmic System

the planetary system in which the Empire set up a facility that designed and built the tractor beam technology for the TIE Defender. This system is located in the Parmic Sector of the Outer Rim Territories. (TIE, GG9)

Parnath

this Carosite cyberneticist was exiled from Carosi XII for unethical practices. Those who have worked with him know that Doctor Parnath is focused more on credits than ethics, and will perform any upgrade or implant if the price was right. Parnath maintained a laboratory on Vergesso Base during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SPG)

Parnell, Sebastian

this tall, gaunt man was a former Imperial General who retired from active duty and became Governor of the Sil'Lume System. Noticeable by his silvery hair and ice-blue, piercing eyes, Parnell strove to bring the vast array of miners and prospectors in the Sil'Lume Asteroid Belt under Imperial control during the height of the New Order. To that end, he established a huge prison complex on Tol Ado, and tried to capture and execute Erling Tredway, who had been fomenting peaceful dissent among the miners. Although he succeeded in capturing Erling after destroying much of the facilities on 24 Tredway and killing Erling's mother, Parnell was unable to get any information from him before Luke Skywalker rescued Erling. They escaped only when Erling assumed the identity of Darth Vader - using a mock-up of Vader's armor found in Parnell's quarters - and ordered Parnell to provide him with a shuttle. (JH)

Parnelli Museum of Art

this low-domed museum was located in the city of Theed, on the planet Naboo. (IWE1)

Parnet

this Imperial General served aboard the Star Destroyer Interrogator. Like most of the other officers on the ship, Parnet believed High Inquisitor Tremayne was evil incarnate. Despite his normally-outspoken nature, Parnet never disobeyed Tremayne. (TFNR)

Parody Squad

this group of Alliance troopers was part of the security force protecting the outpost on the planet Taul, shortly before it was destroyed by the Victory-class Star Destroyer Dominator. (SWJ1)

Parq

an Imperial Colonel stationed on Tatooine during the Empire's brief occupation there. He intercepted Shada D'ukal and Karoly D'ulin, thinking them to be the real Tonnika Sisters. He placed them in the custody of Riiij Winward in Mos Eisley. (TME)

Parr, Harzoon

this researcher for the Galactic History Foundation spent part of his career on the planet Randorn 2, piecing together the history of the Mizx. He theorized, without factual basis, that the ibliton species was planted on Randorn 2 by a group of "lost" xenobiologists. (COG)

Parrot

one of Ranulf Trommer's wingmen assigned to the Ravagor, Parrot was killed in action over Aguarl 3. One of his wingmen's first names was Seth. (ROC)

Parry, Bril

the flight communications duty officer on the Naritus when the star Thanta Zilbra was detonated, Bril Parry was later named Chief Duty Officer under Captain Genkal during the evacuation of the Thanta Zilbra system. Following the resolution of the Human League crisis and the breakup of the Starbuster Plot, Parry was tapped to succeed Genkal as Captain of the Naritus. (AS, CTD)

Parshoone

this planet served as a Ubiquitorate contact station during the years after the Battle of Endor. (VOF)

Parskeer

this was a common name among the Dresselian people. (UANT)

Par'tah

this Ho'Din smuggling chief worked for Billey during the early years of the New Republic. She has a secret base hidden somewhere in the Borderlands region, and prefers to work on the New Republic side of the tracks, although the Empire does pay handsomely when she works for them. She collects technological items as a hobby. Her operation is small, compared to others. (HTTE, TLC, TTSB)

Par'tha

this female Twi'lek served as Lorcu Malshae's co-pilot aboard the Moonglow, until Lorcu decided to sell information about the location of Port Haven to Boba Fett. Par'tha, realizing that Lorcu had been trusted with the planet's coordinates, severed their relationship and returned to Port Haven to warn Hallomar of Lorcu's impending betrayal. (PSPG)

Parthovian Cluster

a group of stars located in Wild Space, several planets in the Parthovian Cluster were subjugated by Faarl the Conquerer. (WBC)

Participlay

a form of entertainment perfected on Besn. (ISB)

Particle Shield

a form of defensive shielding which destroys solid matter. It use an anti-protonic field to envelope its source. When solid matter comes in contact with the anti-protonic fields, the matter is annihilated. While these shields do not consume much energy, they are ineffective against lasers. (SW, SWSB)

Partold

a planet. (TJP)

Partus

this red-faced woman was the navigator of the starship Hawkbat, and a good friend of Rondle. (WS)

Parwan Nutricake

a healthful bread-like food that is often served spiced. (TJP)

Pas

this was the Snivvian word for "no." (HNN5)

Pasarian Memorial Atmospheric Reclamation Complex Project

located in the Bluenek Section of Coruscant, this atmospheric processing station was part of a planet-wide network of stations that maintained the air quality of the urban planet. Using sophisticated scrubbing systems, the Reclamation Project insured that chemicals were not allowed to build up in Coruscant's atmosphere, especially after the last area of arable land was covered with cityscape. When the Empire took control of Coruscant and began using the Bluenek Section for Imperial Intelligence operations, the organic staff of Pasarian was eliminated in favor of a droid staff. This allowed Emperor Palpatine to have complete control over Coruscant's atmopshere, giving him the ability to threaten the populace of the planet with a complete shutdown of the air quality systems. (EL2)

Pascwa

an alien race. (SWJ6)

Pash

this was one of the most common male names among the Corellian population. (GMR9)

Pasha

this title was used by certain royal families to denote a king or leader. (T15)

Pashi Noodles

a form of macaroni which was considered a delicacy, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (DH)

Pashie

this tree, native to the ocean world of Senali, produced a sweet fruit which was a staple in the diets of the Senali. (SP)

Pashira

this was one of the most common names used by the Farghul people. (UANT)

Pashkin Sausage

Haber Trell and Maranne Darmic were transporting weapons to the Alliance on Derra IV, concealed within crates of Pashkin sausage. (TFE)

Paskalian, Hola

this efficient and pro-active woman served as Raffin's second-in-command of the security forces on ESSION. She was the most porbable choice to replace Raffin, when he retired. (WS)

Paskla-class Vessel

this was a form of Chiss starship. It resembled a slightly flattened sphere in shape, and the interior of the ship was filled with small chambers for the transport of various goods. (SQ)

Pasmin

the natives of this planet were known for their weaving ability. They created wonderfully warm blankets and cloaks from material that was nearly weightless. (HP)

Pas-morri jurdi los tempas

this Snivvian phrase literally meant "The weather is not as deadly today." (HNN5)

Paspro-5

this was one of the many encryption sequences used by the smugglers of the New Republic. The first three letters in the decryption code were usk, herf, and enth. (SQ)

Paspro-9

this was one of the many encryption sequences used by the smugglers of the New Republic. (SQ)

Passar

this cranky, venom-drooling creature was often employed in the game of joom-ball, where a Passar would bubblingly foretell the future of the roller. (RP)

Passel Argente

this Old Republic Senator was one of the first to support Queen Amidala's vote of no-confidence in the abilities of Chancellor Valorum. A Koorivan male, Argente was a tall humanoid with scaly green skin that had yellow coloration. His appointment as a Senator stemmed from his position as the Magistrate of the Corporate Sector during the decades leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Despite his position, Argente hated the Republic, and was known for his corrupt nature. He was also quick to blame his peers for his own mistakes. He allied himself with Orn Free Taa and Toonbuck Toora in their opposition to Chancellor Valorum. In the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis, Passel Argente was in control of the Corporate Alliance, and threw in his droid armies with Count Dooku and the Separatists. Just prior to the First Battle of Coruscant and the end of the Clone Wars, Passel Argente and the other leaders of the Confederacy of Independent Systems were whisked away to Utapau by General Grievous, in order to ensure their safety. Passel Argente was portrayed by Stephen Boyle in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones. (YJC1, IG1, COD, SWDB, AOTC, VD2, LEV, SOJ)

Passenger Liner

any starship built to transport travelers throughout the galaxy. They cater to their clients' many needs, and often have bars, casinos, and viewports installed in them. (SWSB)

Pas'sic

this planet was the homeworld of the Vrassh race. (SOP)

Passik

this was one of the many Twi'leki clans which were native to the planet Ryloth. In the Twi'leki language, the clan's name meant "golden" or "of gold". (GCG)

Passion-bud Vine

a plant native to the planet Bakura. (TB)

Pastav Rone

this being was a starfighter pilot who served the New Republic during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Rone was assigned to the Twin Suns Squadron, at Borleias, in the wake of the Battle of Coruscant, but was injured during the initial skirmish to retake the planet. Rone later returned to active duty. (EL1)

Pastebread

this was a pre-made bread dough which was popular with home chefs during the last years of the Old Republic. (HNN4)

Pastoral Collective

this group of environmentalists dedicated their time to preserving the beauty of Naboo's Lake Country, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (IWE2)

Patar

this frigid ball of methane ice was the seventh and outermost planet in the Demar System. (FBS)

Patch

another name for an interfacing system bridge. (SWJ10)

Patch

this bounty hunter was one of the Lieutenants in the Oquan, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GMR5)

Patch-4

this planet was used as a junkyard during the height of the New Order. The gunrunner Orion Ferret maintained a hidden cache on the planet, where he stored illegal goods that needed to be hidden from Imperial patrols. The four TIE Fighters purchased by the Alliance for the assault on Spindrift were hidden on Patch-4. The surface of the planet was covered with a runny, jelly-like substance which was formed from the various chemicals and organic material that was dumped on the planet over the decades. Orion Ferret took control of the planet during the New Order, placing several Watcher beasts on its surface to protect his cache of weapons. However, Luke Skywalker and Lando Calrissian, on a mission to purchase the TIE Fighters, discovered how to use a sonic pacifier to quell the Watcher Beasts. Knowing that they had been tricked by Ferret, they turned over the sonic pacifier to Serja Kesselrook, allowing the vagabond and his friends to take control of Patch-4 for their own use. (LTA5, MC59)

Patches

a derogatory nickname used by the agents of the Corellian Security Force to describe Zekka Thyne. (TFE)

Patchwork

this was the nickname of the astromech droid R2-X0, given to the droid by its owner, the Krish known as Maniac. (CRO)

Path of the Hunt

this was one of the many religions that were worshipped by the Rodian people. (GMR5)

Pathfinder

this Vangaard scoutship was extremely well-armed for its size, affording a scout a great deal of protection in a compact starship. It was also one of the first ships of its kind to offer a hyperdrive and computer-assisted weapons, some 63 years prior to the Battle of Yavin. The needle-shaped fuselage measured 36 meters in length, with a long cockpit and a pair of front-swept wings at the rear. The Pathfinder required a single pilot to fly, and could transport two passengers along with 40 cubic meters - up to 100 metric tons - of cargo. It was hyperdrive-equipped and shielded, and was armed with a unique laser cannon set-up. The laser cannon could draw power from the shields, as the shields absorbed blaster energy from an attacking ship. This augmented the power of the laser cannon, but would overload the shield generator if it took too many hits. This overload could be rectified by bringing the generator offline and recalibrating it, a relatively easy task to accomplish for a gunner. (GG8, AIR)

Pathfinder III

this Old Republic exploration vessel was responsible for locating the planet Yashuvhu and the mysterious human population which thrived on the planet. (WOTC)

Pathfinders

this branch of the Alliance's Special Forces unit specialized in the scouting and reconnaissance of unknown terrain. They were considered the 2nd Regiment of the SpecForces of the Alliance. (ROE)

Pathline Tapcafe

this tavern was located in cityblock Kesk-319 on Brentaal, at the intersection of Route 6903 and Citypath 515. Shortly after the Far Orbit was captured by mutineers, the Pathline was nationalized by Imperial forces on the planet when it was learned the crew of the rogue Nebulon-B frigate were headed there. (FOP)

Pathogen-Based Loyalty Enhancement Program

this Imperial research program was originally funded by COMPNOR. Its mission involved discovering a pathogenic disease that could continually shift its antigen needs, thereby making it impossible to eliminate. The disease could then be unleashed on rebellious worlds, and the Imperials could then arrive with the "cure," an antiviral injection that actually released new forms of the disease into the system. The goal of the program was to instill loyalty to the Empire by forcing people to accept the Imperial cure, making them dependent upon it for their very survival. The work of Doctor Fesjo Negleem eventually created the FNV-23 virus, which was successfully tested on the planet Sedesia. However, a team of Alliance agents managed to thwart Doctor Negleem's plans, and obtained complete documentation on the program. (SWJ6)

Patijak Sonn

this being was the author of Kholemi Elaru. (HNN4)

Patka

this Sullustan creature is hunted for its meat. (XWPA)

Patogga

this Huttese word translated into Basic as "pie." (GMR5)

Patot Panak

this flatbread was produced on Vorzyd 4, and was often served with cold meat. (TTW)

Patriarch

this was the title given to the leader of the Supreme Council on the planet Skye. The position of Patriarch was alternately chosen from the Highland and Lowland Clans, with each clan holding the position for forty-two years before turning control over to the other clan. (GMR1)

Patriim System

this star system was the site of the development of the Imperial weapons station, the Tarkin. (EGC)

Patriim System

the Empire constructed the huge weapons platform known as the Tarkin in this system, in the years surrounding the Battle of Hoth. (LTA3, MC51)

Patriot Fist

this Recusant-class light destroyer was constructed for the Confederacy of Independent Systems by a group of Quarren exiles on the planet Minntooin, during the height of the Clone Wars. The Patriot Fist was one of the many Separatist warships deployed to support General Grievous' forces during the First Battle of Coruscant. (X3)

Patrol Frigate

this Imperial starship was a basic Nebulon-B frigate which was outfitted to act as a deep-space probe ship. The patrol frigate was equipped with a tethered sensor array that trailed behind the ship. The crew complement of the patrol frigate was a mere 456 crewers and just 56 gunners, as much of the basic Nebulon-B design was mothballed for this modification. The array it towed was capable of detecting and intercepting the presence of a large warship passing through hyperspace in its vicinity, and it could even tap into hyperspatial communications. The patrol frigate was not equipped with any form of decryption software, and so any signals it received would have to be passed on for decoding. The patrol frigate was armed with 9 turbolaser batteries, 7 laser cannons, and 3 ion cannons, as well as a pair of tractor beam projectors. It could transport up to 400 troops if needed. (CTD)

Patrol XLS

this Imperial pursuit ship was part of the defenses of the planet Byss, during the rebirth of Emperor Palpatine six years after the Battle of Endor. It pursued the Starlight Intruder when it arrived, carrying the Millennium Falcon on its back. (DE1)

Patrol ZG7

this Imperial starfleet was under Vader's control during the occupation of Harix. (CSWEA)

Patron, The

this ancient Sith Lord was the primary rival of Lord Garu. He used Dark Side mercenaries to disrupt Lord Garu's plans. (DSSB)

Pattern Nen-Penth

this was the confirmation code phrase, issued in the form of a question to any being who identified themselves with the phrase "Besh-Senth-lsk-12". The pattern 1, 3, 7, 7 had to be given as the reply, or the original phrase was considered bogus. (GMR10)

Patunkin, Gerwa

this was one of the humorous names Garik Loran used for Lara Notsil, after she was mistaken for Edallia Monotheer by an old man on Coruscant. (SOC)

Pau City

this sinkhole city was ostensibly the capital of the planet Utapau, during the final years of the Old Republic. Like all such sinkhole cities, Pau City's upper levels were continually buffeted by the hyperwinds that scoured the surface of Utapau. These levels were set aside for population by large windmills that generated huge amounts of free power. Shortly after the First Battle of Coruscant, when General Grievous fled the Core Worlds and hid on Utapau, he established a base of operations in Pau City. The city then became a battleground when Obi-Wan Kenobi arrived to destroy Grievous, as the battle droids of the Separatists fought against the clone troopers who accompanied Kenobi to Utapau. More than half the city was damaged to destroyed in the fighting. (OWS, E3N)

Pau, Saulis

this former Imperial Army soldier became a bounty hunter after serving his time with Empire. He was one of the few Imperial hunters who operated out of Feris City during the last years of the New Order. (GG10)

Pau'an

this race of tall, gray-skinned humanoids was native to the planet Utapau. For many generations, the Pau'ans lived on the surface of the planet, separate from the Utai. They were eventually driven underground by the increasingly arid environment of the planet's surface. Although the Pau'ans made up just thirty percent of Utapau's population, their size and longevity gave them the ability to dominate the rulership classes of the planet. The average Pau'an had a lifespan of more than 200 years, and preferred to eat raw meat. Double rows of sharp teeth filled the upper and lower jaws of the average Pau'an, allowing them to rip apart their food. Interestingly, Pau'ans preferred the darkness of the underground cities, despite their natural history as surface-dwellers. Because of their long lifespans, the Pau'ans were often referred to as Ancients. The head of the Pau'an displayed evolutionary adaptations to living on the planet's surface, including vestigial ear-disks that lacked lobes which might have been damaged by wind-blown sand. (OWS, VD3, E3N)

Pau'an

this was the name used to describe the various dialects spoken on the planet Utapau. Because there were many distinct dialects, the misinterpretation of Pau'an often resulted in conflicts between groups. (VD3)

Pauc'on

this barren, rocky world was the third planet in the Ralltiir System. It was orbited by two moons. (CCW)

Paulking XIV

a planet which is home to a species of fur-bearing fish, flying crabs, and talking algae. (LCM, GMR5)

Paulsen, Drake

this young smuggler, a native of the planet Socorro, began working with his father Kaine at the age of five. It was rumored that Drake made his first deal at the age of three, negotiating the exchange of goods between himself and Jabba the Hutt. Although the exchange was simply three blasters which Drake held for a basket of warm honeystix, Jabba was impressed with, and entertained by, Drake's actions. Jabba dubbed the young boy "the Little Prince of Socorro." Drake learned everything he could from his father, Kaine Paulsen, and Drake strove to ensure that his father's teachings and morals were never compromised. When Kaine was killed on Socorro, shortly after the Battle of Yavin, Drake took control of his father's businesses and expanded them rapidly. Drake also hunted down and killed his father's murderer, a Twi'lek member of the Black Bha'lir known as Izzat. This earned Drake a bounty on his head of over 100,000 credits. He was forced to lay low in Jabba the Hutt's court for a year before emerging as a free man. However, Drake never became a member of the Black Bha'lir, though he did get caught up working for Abdi-Badawzi. He later retired to Redcap with Toob Anchor. (SWJ2, SWJ12, BSS)

Paulsen, Kaine

known on Socorro as Chu'la, Kaine was a smuggler of some repute who often worked with Toob Anchor. Early in his career, Kaine was a gifted pilot who served the Black Bha'lir, and was referred to as the "Socorran Scourge" by many independent spacers. He married a young Socorran woman, and they would have lived together with a son if the wife hadn't died at childbirth. The infant, whom Kaine named Drake, was brought into the world by his father and a Coynite warrior named Tra'Parr'Sratt. It was Sratt who gave Drake the nickname Lom, which meant "freedom" in the Coynite language. Over the years, Kaine's smuggling activities attracted the notice of Abdi-Badawzi, who never failed to become angry with Kaine's independent streak. Eventually, the Twi'lek captured the thirty-five-year-old Kaine and held him captive, forcing Drake to take on a mission with Elias Halbert in order to free him. The mission went as planned, and Kaine was freed to return to his son. Kaine met his untimely death when he was killed by the Twi'lek Izzat on Thrugii, while trying to deliver smuggled supplies to the miners there. This left Drake to take over the smuggling business, having learned everything Kaine could teach him. (SWJ2, SWJ5, SWJ12, BSS)

Pav D'armon

a Mistryl guard and member of Manda D'ulin's team, she assisted Manda in trying to ascertain the necessary security for the Hammertong project. When the Imperials staged an ambush, Pav was killed, along with Manda, before Shada and Karoly could escape with the Hammertong. (TME)

Pavan, Jax

this young boy was the son of Lorn Pavan. After Lorn's wife, Siena, left them, Lorn took Jax to the Jedi Temple on Coruscant. Jax was sensitive to the Force, and Lorn hoped that he could enlighten his son's life through the Jedi training. Unfortunately for Lorn, the Jedi simply took Jax away and forbid him from seeing Lorn again until his training was complete. Before he was killed, Lorn programmed his protocol droid, I-5YQ, to return to Coruscant and look after Jax. I-5YQ lost portions of his memory in the confusion that followed Lorn's death, but eventually recovered enough to learn of his true mission. During the height of the Clone Wars, I-5YQ was able to return to Coruscant and locate Jax. (DMSH, MJH)

Pavan, Lorn

this Corellian man was a respected information broker until his life started falling apart. His wife, Siena, left him, and when he tried to help his son Jax gain entrance to the Jedi Order, the Jedi of Coruscant shepherded Jax away and forbid Lorn from seeing him. In despair, Lorn and his droid partner, I-5YQ, were left without any credits and forced to live in the bowels of the planet Coruscant, grubbing a life in any way they could. Lorn hated the Jedi with every fiber of his existence, and was loath to say anything good about them. He believed that his luck had changed when Hath Monchar agreed to sell him information about the impending Trade Federation blockade of Naboo, only to be thrust into the intrigues of Darth Maul and his master, Darth Sidious. Lorn managed to recover Monchar's crystal holocron with the information about the blockade, and was joined in his struggle by the failed Jedi padawan, Darsha Assant. Along with I-5YQ, they nearly survived to get off Coruscant. However, just as Lorn was starting to like Darsha, she was killed in battle with Darth Maul, providing Lorn and I-5YQ with a chance to escape. I-5YQ temporarily encased them in carbonite as Darsha set off a huge explosion, hoping to kill off Maul. Unfortunately, Maul survived. Lorn swore to hunt the Sith lord down, and nearly succeeded. Maul proved too much, however, and Lorn was forced to turn to the first person he recognized for help. To Lorn's dismay, this turned out to be Senator Palpatine from Naboo, who realized that Maul had not completely finished his quest for his alter ego, Darth Sidious. Palpatine turned Lorn over to Maul, who executed the human with a killing swipe of his lightsaber. (DMSH)

Pavan, Siena

this woman was married to Lorn Pavan, and fathered his only son, Jax. Siena walked out on their marriage shortly before Jax was taken in by the Jedi Knights. (DMSH)

Pavia System

this Tapani Sector star system was part of the holdings of House Cadriaan during the New Order. (LOE)

Pavilion

this planet's starports were notorious for the slave trade which passed through them. (SSR)

Pavillion

this was the largest of the underwater cities built by the Iskalonians on their homeworld of Iskalon. The city was destroyed when an Imperial missile was launched from the citadel on Gamandar, shortly before the Battle of Endor. The missile nearly hit the Millennium Falcon, which was carrying Lando Calrissian, Chewbacca, and Mone on a mission to infiltrate the Imperial citadel on Gamandar. The missile struck a remote section of Iskalon's ocean, and the Iskalon Effect took over swiftly, creating a huge tidal wave. The immense pressure of the tidal surge smashed much of the transparisteel that formed Pavillion's outer walls, flooding the city and forcing a complete evacuation of any non-Iskalonians. (MC74, MC75)

Pavo Prime

during the early years of the New Republic, this planet was known for its casinos. Han Solo once managed to break the bank at a Pavo Prime casino, and framed the set of thousand-credit chips he won as a souvenir. The planet orbited a huge blue sun, which provided plenty of light and warmth without much glare. (AFA, SWI67)

Pawa

this was the Huttese word for "power." (GMR5)

Pawalo District

the New Republic Intelligence agency maintained a backup computer system in this district of Coruscant's Imperial City, in the years after the Battle of Bilbringi. (CTD)

Pawei Juice

a tart drink. (BTS)

Pax Hustana

manufacturers of shipboard sensor arrays and subspace beacons. (SCRE)

Pax System

this star system is located between the Ropagi and Opiteihr Systems along the Enarc Run. (TSK)

Paxin

this human Alliance sympathizer worked with Palud on Vorzyd 5. The two were captured by Blackhole, along with Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa. They managed to escape from Imperial captivity, but Palud was killed during the escape. (CSWEA)

Paxxi Derida

this was the name of the Phindian pilot who was to transport Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi from Bandomeer to Gala, where they would mediate a general election. The Phindian was quite rude, and it was possible that he only gave the name "Pilot" to insult them. Instead of transporting them to gala, however, Pilot faked a fuel leak and brought them out of hyperspace near Phindar. After a false battle with a pair of starfighters, Pilot landed the ship in Laressa and hoped that assassin droids would kill off the Jedi. Pilot fled into the city. He found the Jedi again and led to a small cafe' where he introduced them to his brother, Guerra Derida. There, Paxxi revealed that they had to fake the fuel leak in order to get past the blockade set up by the Syndicat, from whom he and his brother were fugitives. The brothers were part of a small group of freedom fighters who were working to overthrow the Syndicat, but they needed the Jedi's help and were afraid to ask. After gaining Qui-Gon's confidence, they were able to break into the Syndicat's stronghold and expose the vast stores of food and supplies being held there. Paxxi was injured in the battle which ensued, but survived. When their plans came to fruition and they were able to bring down the Syndicat, Paxxi built a monument in the center of Laressa from the assassin droids of the Syndicat. He claimed that the Phindians had to face their evil in order to conquer it. Years later, Paxxi and Guerra became the heads of their respective families, both of which were known for their large size. (HP, LOJ)

Pazaak

this card game was developed more than 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. The basic goal of pazaak was to try to get your own cards to total more than the total of your opponent's cards, while not going over a total of 20. A round of pazaak was called a set, and a player needed to win three sets to win a match. What made the game interesting to many beings was the cards used to play pazaak. The basic set of cards was called the Main Deck, and was readily available. Each Main Deck contained forty cards, numbered from +1 to +10. During game play, however, the exact value of a given card was randomly generated by a computer, so marking of one's cards was not only illegal, but fruitless. In theory, a being could draw +1 nine times in a row. In addition to the Main Deck, a Side Deck was also used in play. This Side Deck started out with ten cards, two of each numbered from +1 to +5. More cards could be obtained with values from +1 to +6, -1 to -6, or mixed cards that could be +/-1 to +/- 6, making for a huge variation in the totals one could have in a given hand. There was no limit to the number of cards in the Side Deck. However, certain cards were only available on certain planets, so travel was required in order to obtain them. Match play began with each player selecting ten cards for their Side Deck, then shuffling their Main Deck. Each round within a set, cards were played onto the table for each player, and the card's value was added or subtracted from the player's score as necessary. A player could stop at any time during a round or a set, although their hand was automatically stopped if they reached a score of 20 or were dealt nine cards. A set ended when both players stopped, or when one player's total exceeded 20. At the end of the set, the player with the highest total won the set, although a tie was not counted to either player's total. To win a match, a player had to win three sets. Many players maintained the number of "net wins" against other opponents, as a way to monitor how many matches they had won. By this count, match play stopped whenever a player won a certain number of matches overall. (GMR10, KOTOR)

Pazda Desilijic Tiure

this ancient, gray-bearded Hutt, distinguished by the green stripe running down his back, was Jabba's uncle. Pazda was outraged with Borge the Hutt for forming an alliance with the Yuuzhan Vong, and warned the younger Hutt that no good would come from any alliance with the invaders. (JE)

pazhkie Yuuzhan'tar al'tirrna

this was the term used by the Yuuzhan Vong to describe the mature dhuryam which would be installed on the planet Coruscant, to Vongform the planet into a new version of the longlost planet Yuuzhan'tar. The name translated into Basic as the "World Brain of God's Creche". (T) a very old model Corellian Engineering Corporation patrol ship. They were first manufactured about 300 years before the Galactic Civil War, and were used by a great many systems to patrol and defend themselves. Production of the PB-950 was halted after the Clone Wars, when larger and more powerful corvettes were starting to be produced. The PB-950 measures 37 meters in length, and required a pilot, co-pilot, and two gunners to operate. The ship has a twin-hull design, with the central section divided into two decks. The upper deck contained the cockpit and weapons emplacements. The ship was capable of transporting up to 180 metric tons of cargo, and up to 8 passengers. The ship was armed with a single quad-laser cannon, a pair of ion cannons, and a concussion missile launcher. (SWJ9)

the designation of the modified freighter Belindi Kalenda used to penetrate the Corellian defense network and land on Corellia, disguised as a trader whose hyperdrive malfunctioned upon re-entry of normal space near Corellia. (AC)

PC2

this was the model number Greff-Timms Industrial's Intimidator pulse-wave cannon. (TOJC)

PCap

this probe droid was captured by the Azzameen family, shortly before the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

PCBU

used by planetary police forces during the last decades of the Old Republic, this was a droid-piloted police cruiser that provided backup to organic police officers. It was originally developed to assist the Coruscant law enforcement agency, especially in areas such as the Crimson Corridor. It was armed with a pair of turret-mounted laser cannons and contained a collection of sensors, scanners, and disruptors. (DMSH)

P'Chek

this moon, which orbited the gas giant Denbalen in the Gorothe System, was the only one of the planet's seven moons to have an atmosphere. This atmosphere was more than 98 percent oxygen, and ruins on the moon's surface indicated that it supported an ancient civilization similar to that of the Twi'lek people of Ryloth. Most of these ruins were estimated to be more than a billion years old, allowing the moon to live up to its Gorothe name of "Mystery." (GSE)

PCTA

developed by Golan Arms, the PCTA was a personal combat threat analyzer. It provided an individual with the ability to scan a location for any potential danger. The PCTA used a variety of sensors to pinpoint the types and locations of any weapons nearby, and was programmed to analyze all variable and provide a threat assessment. (GFT) this was a model of fusion cutter produced by Borallis Metalworking & Materials. (PSG)

PCW-880

this was a model of heavy-duty fusion cutter produced by Borallis Metalworking & Materials. (PP)

PD-0943

developed and produced by Zemphyr Defenders, Incorporated, this small canister was filled with a mixture of courent and ves gases. When sprayed in front of a being, this mixture effectively dampened or dispersed a blaster bolt, providing a measure of protection against being shot. The mixture cloud lasted for about a minute, in calm conditions, which was more than enough time to effect an escape. (GFT) this droid was owned by the evil Doctor Raygar, who badly mistreated it at every opportunity. It was PD-28 who helped Wicket, Teebo, Latara, and Kneesaa escape the evil plans of Doctor Raygar, and later helped them thwart Raygar's plans to steal the Sunstar. (ECAR)

PD-28

PDA-2

this Trade Federation battle droid was a sub-officer in command of a detachment during the Battle of Naboo. (SON)

PDA6

this droid served Master Zorneth as a medical/repair droid. PDA6 also contained programming that forced him to destroy Zorneth's hidden savorium grove if the Ithorian was ever apprehended. PDA6 performed its duties to the letter when Plort attacked Zorneth's starship. PDA6 initiated the destruct sequence, consuming the savorium, Smiley, and Zorneth in the explosion. (DRO)

P'Dar'Ib

this was the Gorothite term for the local government of a given o'beki. The only o'beki which did not have a dedicated P'Dar'Ib was Graith; the P'Dar'Ken served as the P'Dar'Ib of Graith. Officially, each P'Dar'Ib was subordinate to the P'Dar'Ken, but power struggles often occurred. (GSE)

P'Dar'Ib'AI

this Gorothite term referred to the individual members of the local councils, or P'Dar'Ib, of the planet Goroth Prime. (GSE)

P'Dar'Ken

this was the Gorothite term for the planetary council which governed Goroth Prime. It was made up of the Rel'Kan, who served a five-year term, and twelve P'Dar'Ken'AI, each of which served a four-year term. (GSE)

P'Dar'Ken'AI

this was the Gorothite term for those council members who sat on the P'Dar'Ken. Each P'Dar'Ken'AI served a four-year term, although only half of the P'Dar'Ken could be up to re-election at any given time. There was no limit to the number of terms an individual P'Dar'Ken'AI could serve. (GSE)

PDC3141-02

this planetoid was found to microbial forms of life, shortly before the Clone Wars. The University of Sanbra, after discovering the microbes, petitioned the Old Republic to ban all dumping on the planet. This injunction forced the Trade Federation scow Spotty Conveyor to abandon its mission until a resolution to the issue could be found. (HNN4)

PD-series Protocol Droid

this protocol droid was produced by Cybot Galactica as a way to gain marketshare in the Lurian markets. Designed to appear similar in stature to Lurians, the PD series had advanced servomechanics that allowed it to move about on Lur's rugged surface. The delicate hands of the 3PO unit were replaced with heavy gripping unts, and the PDs were given bright coloration to make them stand out in the snowy environment of Lur. However, the Empire's subjugation of Lur forced the Lurians to reject the PD series, and Cybot Galactica was forced to dump the series onto the open market at wholesale prices. (EGD)

PDV

the PDV was an Imperial Intelligence Tech 4 message pod used by Sector Plexus. PDV stands for Plexus Droid Vessel, for these pods were manned only by droids. The standard "crew" consisted of a captain I2-AM3 (a modified R2 astromech droid), an I2-CG droid for storage and transceiving, and an analysis/encoding computer equipped with a TranLang III communications module. These ships were designed to send and receive Sector Plexus messages in a system, then jump to the next system. They never had a jump longer than a day, due to their efficient routing algorithms. (ISB)

PDW-50

this small, handheld device was produced by Aeramaxis during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Known as an ionic tingler, the PDW-50 emitted a small cartridge when fired at a target. These cartridges released a collection of plasma particles upon striking the target, forming a localized blast effect that rendered the target unconscious by "tingling" their nervous system with an energy shock. (GFT)

Peace

a city on the lawless world of Korbin. Like all Korbinite cities, it was jokingly given a happy name by the lawless inhabitants of the planet. Peace, along with Happy and Joy, were known as the Small-Timers, because they were less intense than Pleasant City. (PG2)

Peace Brigade

this group of dissidents was formed during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, some twenty-five years after the Battle of Endor. Originally the brainchild of Nom Anor and several others, the Peace Brigade maintained that the Jedi Knights and the New Republic were doing more harm than good in fighting against the Yuuzhan Vong, and advocated the formation of a peace treaty with the Yuuzhan Vong to end the hostilities. The Peace Brigade openly denounced the Jedi Knights, claiming it was their lack of compassion which destroyed Ithor and Obroa-skai. The Peace Brigade was known to have been providing information on planetary defenses to the Yuuzhan Vong, which they had gained from a source that had somehow infiltrated the highest levels of New Republic security. The group decided to prove their loyalty and worth to the Yuuzhan Vong after Reck Desh learned of Elan's seeming defection to the New Republic. The Yuuzhan Vong recognized the usefulness of the group, and executed all the Hutts on the planet Ylesia in order to turn the planet and its glitterstim operations to the Peace Brigade. Working from their new headquarters on the planet Ylesia, they began using credits generated by the sale of glitterstim to fund their operations and the build-up of their military. They used a high-level contact within the Republic to learn of her transport to Coruscant, and prepared to waylay the Queen of Empire in order to capture her and return her to the Yuuzhan Vong. The Brigade was unaware that Elan was acting with the knowledge of the Yuuzhan Vong, and their entire plan to eliminate the Jedi Knights was dashed when the Peace Brigade ambushed the ship. However, the leaders of the Peace Brigade were undaunted in trying to gain power. They insinuated themselves into the plans surrounding the reclamation of Duro's natural environment, manipulating various shipping companies into buying votes within the Duros High House. With the loss of Duro, the Peace Brigade tried to broker a cease-fire with the Yuuzhan Vong by agreeing to turn over the Jedi Knights to the aliens, believing that the only way to save the galaxy was to sacrifice the Jedi. The Peace Brigade went out of their way to locate Jedi Knights, and even tried to capture some beings who were merely Force-sensitive, in an effort to appease the Yuuzhan Vong. When a team of Brigaders tried, but failed, to capture the students at the Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4, the Yuuzhan Vong executed them as sacrifices to their gods. As the war dragged on, the Peace Brigade established a form of government on Ylesia, and attempted to create a naval fleet to augment that of their Yuuzhan Vong superiors. The desire of individual factions within the Peace Brigade to please the alien invaders left little time to actually develop their military, so the Supreme Overlord Shimrra appointed Thrackan Sal-Solo the President of Ylesia and the Commander in Chief of the Peace Brigade. (HT, BP, EVC, EVR, Y, UF)

Peace City

this was the name given to Ylesia's Colony One settlement, after the Peace Brigade took control of the planet and moved their "capital" to the city. Much of Peace City was given over to slave camps, although much of the city was set aside for the Yuuzhan Vong and the Peace Brigade government. (Y)

Peace Vote

this was the term used by Senator Viki Shesh and her supporters to describe the Appeasement Vote. (REC)

Peacebringer, Aron

this man was the Warlord of the Calian Confederacy, on the planet Shiva IV, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. His marriage to Alisande produced a number of children, although their first-born daughter died of a mysterious disease which Aron himself managed to survive. He was also the blood-brother of Keral Longknife, and worked with his T'Syriel brethren to forge a lasting peace between their two peoples. However, both of them agreed that life on Shiva IV had been happier before the peace accord was signed, when small battles were easily won in comparison to the resistance of the Outcasts. Despite his given name and his work with Keral, Aron was known as a master swordsman who fought with an terrible ferocity that ensured none of his opponents survived a challenge. During a mission to investigate the fate of the city of K'avor, Aron and his companions located Leia Organa, who had crashlanded on the planet. Leia was in the sector to investigate the build-up of Imperial forces in the area, and her shuttle had been hit by a micromine. Aron found himself in love with Leia, despite his happiness with his marriage to Alisande. Alisande, for her part, acknowledged Aron's feelings, but never left his side. Shortly afterward, Aron and Leia were captured by General Sk'ar, who planned to destroy Illyriaqum in an effort to subjugate Shiva IV's population. They managed to escape, and with the help of Luke Skywalker and Chewbacca, they defeated Sk'ar and eliminated his threat. Aron finally was able to reconcile his love for Leia, and happily returned to Alisande's side. (MC53)

Peaceful Dawn Rally

this political gathering was staged regularly by the Neo-Fundamentalist Phlangites on Zaraksander, in an effort to sway the government away from the growing civil war and back to a simpler way of life. (GG10)

Peacekeeper

this was the title given to the primary law enforcement officers in each town found on the planet Beheboth. Despite their position, a Peacekeeper was delegated only certain rights by their speicif town charter, including - but not limited to - the ability to make arrests, organize posses, detain suspects, and perform other law enforcement activities as described in the town's bylaws. (PH)

Peacekeeper

this was a model of Imperial low-orbit patrol craft. (ML)

Peacekeeper

this Dreadnaught served as part of the command fleet used by Admiral Greelanx during the Battle of Nar Shaddaa. It was commanded by Captain Reldo Dowlis, who kept it in the battle with cunning and skill until the mounting damage became too great. Its starboard engines suddenly gave out, and it began tumbling toward Nar Shaddaa's shields. Dowlis's crew tried desparately to bring the engines back on-line, but only managed to propel it toward Nar Shaddaa. The Peacekeeper was utterly destroyed, and it took out a huge section of Nar Shaddaa's planetary shield with it. (THG)

Peacekeepers

this was the name given to those beings who were charged with maintaining peace and order among the survivors of the Outblund Flight Project. At the point when the Outbound Flight Project's remains were located by the Chiss, about eighteen years after the Battle of Endor, there were only eleven Peacekeepers - including Guardian of the People Jorad Pressor - active. Four were killed and two rendered unconscious when Bearsh and his Vagaari staged their insurrection aboard the Outbound Flight. However, the survivors managed to hold their own against the invaders after the various teams of outsiders - Luke Skywalker and his wife, Mara Jade Skywalker, Chak Fel and the stormtroopers of the Imperial 501st Legion, and Dean Jinzler and his Chiss companions - began to understand the Vagaari tactics and eliminate their threat. (SQ)

Peacemaker

this was a term used to describe a Jedi Knight who was dispatched to mediate a struggle between two parties. (TOJC)

Peacemaker

this New Republic Nebulon-B frigate was part of the force sent to liberate the planet Ciutric from the control of Prince-Admiral Krennel. It supported the flagship Emancipator, along with the Pride of Eiattu and the Thunderchild. It took heavy amounts of damage in the battle, and was left for dead. (IR)

Pear-fruit

the fruit of this plant had a teardrop shape: fat at the bottom and thinner at the top. (SL)

Pearl Island Casino

this casino was located on Pavo Prime, and was owned and operated by Ludlo Lebauer. The entire edifice was designed to give the impression of being inside a pearl, with majestic rooms and pearlescent wall colorings. The lobby was large and majestic, but retained a sense of intimacy. Within the Regal Suites, Lebauer kept ten rare, Alderaanian boas, until he was forced to return them to Leia Organa Solo. (SWI67)

Pech

this creature, noted for its glossy pelt, was native to the moon of Mina. The human population of the moon raised pechs for their hides, which were tanned and exported throughout the Moddell Sector of the galaxy. Wild pechs were a dangerous adversary, moving in packs of ten or more and hunting for warm-blooded prey. (GMR9)

Pече

this was one of the two largest agricultural centers found on the planet Krant. Like Thennes, Pече was protected by a token police force during the last decades of the Old Republic. (GBC)

Peck, Brion

this Alliance Commander was a noted commando whose origins were a closely guarded secret. Rumors surrounded him, claiming he was a terrorist on his home planet or a commando for some unknown military unit. Peck and his team were sent to Rafft shortly before the Battle of Yavin, to sabotage an Imperial garrison there. However, a homing beacon placed on their ship gave them away, and they had to be rescued by Dannen Lifehold. Commander Peck disliked Lifehold as if he were a common mercenary, mainly because woman he loved - Beka Lewis - had been killed by mercenaries several years earlier. (SWJ3)

Peckhum

this older, long-haired man was a freighter pilot who regularly ran supplies to Luke Skywalker's Jedi Academy on Yavin 4 during the early years of the New Republic. Peckhum was the owner of the battered old supply ship, the Lightning Rod. He befriended the boy Zekk, whom he discovered after a supply run to the devastated world of Ennth. He and took him in and cared for him, and eventually made Zekk his apprentice. When Peckhum discovered Zekk's affinity for the Force, he allowed the boy to join the Jedi Academy, and continued to make his supply runs. The New Republic realized that Peckhum's services to the Academy were invaluable, and so they gave him a newer supply ship to replace the aging Lightning Rod. He, in turn, bequeathed the old ship to Zekk, when the boy decided to strike out on his own. (HTF, LO, SHA, AQ)

Pecoppi Parrot

this brightly-colored bird was just barely sentient, and individuals could interact through a crude form of language. Because they were considered exotic pets by many wealthy beings, the pecoppi were often sold at animal shows, despite the prohibition on slavery during the Old Republic. (CCW)

PED-21

this personal distress beacon was developed for use by civilian travelers by Saladar Systems, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. It could transmit an SOS signal up to five light-years from a downed ship, and the signal was sent through normal communications frequencies. With some adjustment, the PED-21 could also transmit along Imperial or Alliance frequencies, provided the user knew what those frequencies were. (GFT)

Pedby Plumbing Supplies

this plumbing supply distributor was based on the planet Tarhassan, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SWI73)

Pedd

this was one of the more common surnames used by the Duros people. Like all such names, Pedd was used only for official business, to indicate one individual from another when in the presense of non-Duros. This ancient name literally meant "farmer". (GCG)

Pedducian Warlords

this was the adopted name used by the leaders of the pirate group which operated out of Pedducis Chorios, during the early years of the New Republic. (POT)

Pedducis Chorii

this was one of three stars which serve as the primaries for the Chorios Systems. (POT)

Pedducis Chorios

one of the many planets in the Chorios Systems, Pedducis Chorios was a neutral planet in the Galactic Civil War. It was also the site of a pirate base during the early years of the New Republic. The pirates struck at any traffic in the system, without partiality to Moff Getelles, Loronar Corporation, or the Republic. In order to make themselves a better unit, they had hired former Imperial Admiral Daala, who had retired to the planet. (POT)

Pedetson

an Imperial cadet working for Virar Needa on OSETS 2771. (WG)

Pedna Scotian

this Chev female was a native of the planet Vinsoth, and served the New Republic's Rogue Squadron as Rogue Three during search for Warlord Zsinj. An albinoid in coloration, she was unaware of who her family was, having been raised as a slave. She was rescued from a Chevin mercenary group by Alliance forces during the Galactic Civil War. One of the pilots who rescued her was Will Scotian, and so she adopted the surname of Scotian in his honor. (SOC)

Pedna Scotian

the Ultimate Alien Anthology indicates that Pedna Scotian was a Chevin individual of some renown. (UANT)

Pedric

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Pedrin, Niall

this Imperial Major was placed in command of the garrison on Hargeeva for two reasons: his loyalty and adherence to the New Order, and his knowledge of geology. He was a lifetime officer who hated individuality and variety. A short, stocky man, Pedrin was a fineness fanatic and was always meticulously groomed, further indications of his obsessive/compulsive personality. In his early career with the Imperial military, Pedrin served as the commander of an AT-AT platoon before he was chosen for the position on Hargeeva. He made sure that the Alliance didn't get a foothold in Arginall City, and was known to have kidnapped the relatives of suspected Alliance sympathizers and sent them to labor camps. However, he was unable to catch his greatest opponent, Stevan Makintay, nor could he break Ketrician Altroneel and make her reveal the location of Eyrie Base. He was scheduled to be demoted when Makintay captured him on Hargeeva, but the capture was part of Pedrin's master plan to redeem himself. He had placed a tracking device in his arm, which allowed his forces to track his location. His plan succeeded, but Pedrin himself was imprisoned on an Alliance penal colony. (SWJ8, SWJ10)

Pedrokk

this Hortek bodily organ is known as "the fighter's heart." (SOL)

Pedsten, Staive

this Corellian is famous on his homeworld as a Zoneball player. He held many of the sport's scoring records, and was even romantically linked to Leia Organa. (IJ)

Pedunky

this is a shortened form of the Hutt word peedunkel, and often has a gentler tone. (IS1)

Pee

this Huttese verb translated roughly into Basic as "is," or a present-tense form of "to be." (E1A14)

Peedunkel

a Huttese term of derision, this was the nickname used by Watto for young Anakin Skywalker, while the boy was owned as a slave by the Toydarian. It often described a being who had very little good luck, and translated into Basic as "punk." (TPM, E1A14, GMR5)

Peedunkey

see Peedunkel (GMR4)

Peel Rod

this was a specialized piece of sonic technology used to modulate the sound of a Dorenian Beshniquel, and musical instrument often used by jizz bands. (VD)

Peeper

this was Alliance starfighter pilot slang for a TIE/rc fighter. (SWJ10)

Peer Macrobinoculars

this was the brand name of a series of handheld macrobinoculars produced for civilian use by VidGraph. These devices were also referred to as snooper goggles, since they allowed enhanced vision in twilight and full-dark conditions. (ROE, AEG)

Peerce

this Skrilling was one of the six Jedi Knight who were hunted down and murdered by Aurra Sing. Like J'Mikel, with whom he was working at the time, Peerce was searching for Aurra Sing on Coruscant when he was attacked and killed. (HFAS)

Peerless

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was one of the many ships that survived the Battle of Bastion. It later provided escort to the Defiant, after the Defiant was equipped with a gravitic amplitude modulator to jam the communications of a Yuuzhan Vong yammosk. (FH1)

Peet

Melina Carniss' co-pilot aboard the Empress's Diadem. (BW)

Peet, Mirash

Imperial Governor was forced to struggle against an ever-increasing pirate presence among the Induparan Crown Worlds, of which he was governor. (PP)

Peeve

this was the name of Slythor's AT-PV, a modified Imperial AT-AT walker salvaged from a battlefield. The Peeve had no legs, moving about on four large repulsorlift engines instead. The neck was fused into position, and the interior was gutted and refitting for use as a floating command ship. A small casino was also installed. Slythor installed the captain's chair from a Victory-class Star Destroyer for his throne. (OE)

Peez Bonko

this male Gran was a prisoner at the Oovo IV prison facility during the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo. Bonko was also the leader of a Gran supremacy group that attempted to forcibly enhance the standing and position of various Gran in the prisons. This didn't sit well with the non-Gran prisoners at Oovo IV, and word of Bonko's violence and hatred of aliens eventually reached the outside galaxy. A group called Freedom for the Incarcerated eventually decided to place a bounty on Bonko's head, in the event that he was ever freed from prison. The group didn't have to wait that long, as Jango Fett captured Bonko and claimed the bounty during his "rescue" of Bendix Fust. (BH)

Peg Shar I

this industrial world was a member of the Old Republic. (IWE1)

Pegasus

this Alliance warship was part of the small fleet known as the Pegasus Strike Force. (SWJ2)

Pegasus Strike Force

this Alliance Navy fleet was formed to harass Imperial forces, under the command of Admiral Berthogg and the Behemoth, in the Mid Rim near Orellon II. (SWJ2)

Pegg

this city, located on the planet Antared III, was the site of one of its major starports. (GMH)

Peggann, Lanni

this Alliance agent worked undercover on the planet Questal, keeping an eye on Moff Bandor. She was the Alliance's counterpoint to Ref Mawber. (GCQ)

Peggat

this was a form of hard currency used in the city of Mos Espa, on Tatooine, during the last decades of the Old Republic. A single peggat was worth about 40 dataries, or 10 truguts. Note that peggats and wupiupi seem to be interchangeable, as the Official Star Wars Website (<http://www.starwars.com>) uses them both. Also note that Star Wars Insider magazine, issue 80, indicates that a peggat is worth just four truguts. (IG1, OWS, SOT, SWI80)

Peggelar

this small insect, native to the moon Yavin 4, formed a pupa case around itself when the weather turned cold. During this stage, the peggelar metamorphosed into the rosewing, emerging from its cocoon in the spring. (BP)

Peh

this H'Kig glyph was considered too sacred to write out, and was often simply known as "p'," as in the planetary name J't'p'tan. The rough translation of the glyph to Basic yields "the eternal," one of the mystical references of the H'kig religion. (SOL)

Pehzehvar

this temperate world was the fourth planet in the Doornik-628 System. Also known as Doornik-628D, it was orbited by a single moon. (WOTC)

Pei

this Daan man was Leidra's father. He was a native of the Quadri sector of the northern section of Zehava. (UP)

Peirs

this planet was located just off the Triton Trade Route from Gandle Ott, in Kathol Sector. It was one of several planets which supplied natural ores and metals to the industrial world of Gandle Ott. (DARK)

Pek

this Sedrian was the leader of the city of Fitsay, and the son of the high priest Cardo. A priest in his own right, Pek believed that the Golden Sun was a gift to all Sedrians, a belief that went against his father's own beliefs. When a group of Alliance agents came to Sedri to rescue Mors Odrion, Pek believed that they were on the planet to help the Sedrians, not interfere with them. Again, this went against Cardo's belief, and Cardo ordered Pek to stay away from them. Pek, however, chose to do what he thought was right for the people of Fitsay, and led the agents to the Imperial garrison. They also discovered the location of Karak's base, and discovered the Fala was working with her father. After revealing that Karak and Commander Aban were working to claim the Golden Sun for themselves, Fala decided to move against her father and joined forces with Pek and the Alliance agents. They were able to defeat Karak by helping the Golden Sun scatter itself across the surface of Sedri, breaking Karak's power and leaving him defenseless. Pek and Fala agreed to work toward repairing the rift which had formed in Sedrian society, and eventually were married. (BGS)

'pek

this suffix was added to a Bothan's family name to indicate the individual's affiliation to the Epek clan. (GCG, WOTC)

Pekkie Blu and the Starboys

a musical group popular just before Palpatine became Emperor. (COJ)

Peko-Peko

this flying creature is native to the swamps of the planet Naboo. It has a 2.5-meter-long body, supported by two rear legs, a long tail, and a pair of leathery wings. Its front legs were located at the first joint of the wing, but are quite small and nearly useless. Its head is dominated by a large, thick lower beak, which it uses to dig for its food. The skin of the peko-peko was fairly toxic, and caused stomach pains and vomiting in many creatures which tried to eat it. The peko-peko was admired by the Gungan people for its beauty and its blood, which contains a powerful anti-venom. Many Gungans have captured individual peko-peko for display in their parks, as they were beautifully colored with indigo-sapphire plumage bordered with yellow. The blood of the peko-peko was discovered to be a powerful anti-toxin to the poisons formed from refined green glie. The peko-peko is known to be an excellent mimic, using its well-developed vocal apparatus to lure its prey closer. The Gungan people have a saying that goes, "If you see two peko-peko together, it is a good omen." (SW1, SON, WSW, SWDB)

Pekt

this Trandoshan was noted for his vehement hatred of Wookiees, even given his species' deep-seated hatred of their neighbors. He was schooled by his clan in the ways of slavery and hunting, and was even consulted by Bossk in the hunting and capture of Wookiees. Pekt was later recruited by the Empire, which needed a skilled bounty hunter to bring free Wookiees under control. During a mission in which Pekt and his mercenary Trandoshans captured an entire Wookiee village, a young Wookiee took Pekt in his arms and ripped off his arms. The Wookiee was executed for this, while Pekt returned to Trandosha to heal and regenerate his arms. When the Empire fully subjugated Kashyyyk, Pekt was called in to lead the effort to enslave the Wookiees and ensure a steady stream of labor for the construction of the first Death Star. (GB)

Pekz

this was a large, green-winged insect, native to the planet Ansion. (APS)

Pel

this young, female Vorzydiak was one of the original members of the Freelines. (TTW)

Pel Karmek

this Skakoan individual was noted in the histories of the planet Skako. (UANT)

Pelagar

this was the capital city of the planet Pelagon, and was situated on the largest single floating city on the planet. (LOE)

Pelagia Freedom Force

known to the Alliance as the PFF, this small group of rebel guerrillas was run by Zanthé Nadia. Despite its name and Nadia's heritage, the PFF was based on Nista. (LOE)

Pelagia Purge

another name for the Mecetti Purge. (LOE)

Pelagia Star

this massive starship was the flagship of the House Pelagia navy, until the Empire took control of the Pella System. It had been built in ancient times, and survived until it came up against a trio of Imperial-class Star Destroyers. It was never actually destroyed by the Imperial ships, but was nonetheless punished. The Pelagia Star was broken into a collection of debris and wreckage, and left to litter the spacelanes above Pelagon. Over time, the natives of Pelagon built the space station Pelagia's Moon from the wreckage. (LOE)

Pelagia's Moon

this was the name of the space station built from the wreckage of the Pelagia Star, in orbit around the planet Pelagon. House Pelagon hoped one day to restore mobility to Pelagia's Moon, giving it a hyperdrive and creating a new flagship for their navy. (LOE)

Pelagon

this ocean-covered planet was the first world settled in Tapani Sector, more than 13,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. It was settled by the ships of the Pella Compact, which maintained government of the original colonies for a thousand years. Over the millennia, cities were built over the warm seas, and great continents were formed from manmade structures. Over time, the wastes of these cities began polluting the oceans, and by the advent of the New Order, the seas of Pelagon were unable to support life. As House Mecetti rose to power, power struggles led to the destruction of many of these cities, further littering the oceans with debris. There were rumors that the ruins of many floating cities were protected by the spirits of the ancient Jedi Knights. Note that the Players Guide to Tapani also refers to this planet as Pelagia. (LOE, PGT)

Pelagon Aquatic Components Corporation

based on the planet Pelagon, this manufacturer produced a variety of aquatic vehicles for use in the Tapani Sector of the galaxy. It was originally formed by a group of Sienar Fleet Systems engineers, lured to Tapani Sector by House Pelagia to begin creating all varieties of water craft. PACC managed to avoid the destruction of House Pelagia at the hands of House Mecetti, and allowed House Pelagia to remain viable. (LOE)

Pelagria

this New Republic troopship was carrying a hundred thousand troops to the Outer Rim when it was hit by one of the Galaxy Gun's missiles. Everyone on the troopship was killed. (EE, EGW)

Peldap

meaning "golden", this was one of the most common names among Rodian females. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Pelegria

Pelek Baw

this was the only permanent settlement established by the Korunnai of the planet Haruun Kal. It was located atop the Korunnal Highland, and served as the planet's capital city. During the Clone Wars, the Balawai leadership of Pelek Baw sided with the Separatists, a fact that rankled in the mind of Jedi Master Mace Windu. His anger was crystallized into action when it was discovered that the Separatists had placed their droid control unit deep beneath the city, in a secure bunker. From this location, the Separatists were able to defend their positions in the Al'Har System, until Master Windu and his ragtag Korunnai forces managed to breach the bunker and shut the system down. During the battle, much of the city was leveled by fire from both sides of the battle, and witnesses said it resembled the caldera of a volcano afterward. (SHPT)

Pelekotan

this was the Korunnai word for the Force. Roughly translated into Basic, it meant "world-power." To the Korunnai, it meant "jungle-mind." Many Jedi Knights found that individuals with strong connections to the pelekotan of Haruun Kal were virtually indistinguishable from the surrounding jungle, since their power was drawn from the life of the jungle itself. (SHPT)

Pelemax

this jungled planet was located in the Colonies Region, and was the homeworld of the Pelemaxian race. (COG)

Pelemaxian

this ancient race was native to the planet Pelemax. (COG)

Pelgrin

this Outer Rim planet was once the homeworld of the Pelgrin race, which died out millions of years before the Old Republic discovered the planet. By the time of the Battle of Yavin, Pelgrin was devoid of any form of life, its surface a barren wasteland. What was unusual about Pelgrin was the complete lack of fossil evidence, making investigation into the planet's history virtually impossible. (PJSB)

Pelgrin

this ancient race inhabited the planet Pelgrin, but died out millions of years before the planet was first discovered by the scouts of the Old Republic. From the archaeological record, Old Republic investigators learned that the Pelgrin were not a highly advanced race, but had the uncanny ability to duplicate advanced technology with limited means. In addition to steam engines and mechanical communication devices, the Pelgrin also created the clockwork computer known as the Oracle at Pelgrin. (PJSB)

Peli

this was a common name among Cerean females. Unlike their male counterparts, Cerean females use a single name unless they became a bond-wife. In this case, a female will take on their husband's grandfather's name for official matters. The name Peli indicated water, waves, or a flowing river. (GCG)

Pella Compact

this was the original council which governed the colony ships which settled the planet Pelagon, in Tapani Sector, more than 13,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. The Compact was the primary governing force of the original Tapani colonies for nearly 1,000 years, and initiated the first alliances with the Herglics. The Compact was dissolved when the Tapani Sector was fragmented during the Twelve Kingdoms Era. (PGT)

Pella System

this Tapani Sector star system was part of the holdings of House Mecetti during the New Order. (LOE)

Pellaeon, Gilad

the elderly Imperial Navy Captain in command of the Chimaera, Pellaeon took the remnants of the Imperial fleet and retreated from the Battle of Endor. Born on Corellia years before Anakin Skywalker, Pellaeon lied his way into the Judicial Forces when he was just fifteen. While serving aboard various starships with the Old Republic, he learned about the ebb and flow of political tides, and saw that the military was something of a constant. He developed a military sense that kept him in the background, making sure his troops were well-fed and respected, rather than bullying them into submission. After the death of Emperor Palpatine at Endor, Pellaeon had no desire to lead the Empire, but he felt it was his duty to keep the Imperial fleet together. Thus, when Grand Admiral Thrawn emerged from the Unknown Regions to take control of the Empire, Pellaeon was more than willing to turn the fleet over to Thrawn, despite Thrawn's obviously alien background. He served Thrawn well, respecting the alien's uncanny insights while providing tactical assistance when necessary. Following the death of Thrawn at the hands of his own bodyguard, Rukh, Pellaeon took Thrawn's remaining ships and fled to the Core Systems, where he came in contact with High Admiral Teradoc. The two marshalled a large fleet of Victory-class Star Destroyers, and rivaled Harsk for leadership of the Imperial forces for a number of years. When Daala showed up and tried to combine the strengths of the feuding warlords, Pellaeon sided with Daala, who only wanted to restore the Empire. The two of them arranged a summit of all the warlords on Tsoss Station, but were forced to poison them all when they failed to cooperate. Pellaeon became Daala's first officer, and was placed in command of the remaining seventeen Imperial-class Star Destroyers. He was to be the primary attack for that assaulted the Jedi Academy on Yavin 4. His attack was perfect, slipping into the system before the Jedi knew it. However, his Imperial conditioning failed to prepare him for the power of the Force. The Jedi, under the focus of Dorsk 81, used the Force to physically fling the entire Star Destroyer fleet out of the Yavin System, knocking out navigations and hyperdrives. Pellaeon was able to recover all his ships, as well as Admiral Daala's escape pod, before leaving to the system. After Daala's rescue, she resigned her command, and turned control of the Imperial fleet over to him. While he still had no desire to rule the Empire, Pellaeon felt that the situation was the Battle of Endor all over again. He took the fleet back to the Core Systems to regroup. Pellaeon assumed the position of Supreme Commander of the Imperial Navy, and worked against all odds to rebuild the fleet. He spent several years trying to overcome the problems with the cloaking device, and eventually tested the Computer Combat

Predictor. However, its inability to truly aid in a cloaked fight was the last straw in the back of the dwindling Imperial animal. He suggested to Moff Disra that the Imperial remnants should negotiate a surrender with the New Republic some ten years after Thrawn's death, hoping to obtain amnesty rather than execution. Although the majority of the Moffs were in agreement with the plan, Disra's own machinations kept him from wholeheartedly agreeing. Pellaeon began his attempts to contact the Republic by sending Colonel Vermel to meet with Garm Bel Iblis, but Disra captured Vermel before his message was fully delivered. Pellaeon, meanwhile, waited for Bel Iblis at Pesitti, where Disra sent Zothip and the Cavrilhu Pirates to ambush him. Pellaeon's forces dispatched the pirates, but continued to wait for Bel Iblis. However, Bel Iblis was on a mission to Yaga Minor, so it was Ghent who actually received the truncated message from Vermel. He brought the message to Leia Organa-Solo, who agreed to meet with Pellaeon. Their initial talks were tentative but promising, and both agreed to return to their sides and meet at a later date. Meantime, Pellaeon and Commander Dreyf discovered Disra's plans, and began to press the matter with the Moff. Pellaeon eventually won out over the renegade Moff Disra, and soon signed a peace treaty - later known as the Pellaeon-Gavrisom Treaty - with the New Republic. He assumed command of what became known as the Imperial Remnant, and maintained a distanced relationship with the Republic until the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy. Then, Pellaeon agreed to help the war effort during the Battle of Ithor, only to be recalled to Imperial space by the short-sightedness of the Moff Council. Pellaeon feared that the Moffs' decision to stay out of the fight - so long as the Yuuzhan Vong avoided the Empire - was the wrong thing to do, but his half-century of experience made him hold his tongue for several years. He worked hard to bolster the forces protecting Bastion, but the Imperials were no match for the surprise attack launched by the Yuuzhan Vong shortly after the Second Battle of Coruscant. Bastion and Muunilinst were lost almost immediately, and the destruction would have been worse if Luke Skywalker hadn't arrived on the scene. Pellaeon gladly accepted the help of the Jedi, who were searching for the planet Zonama Sekot, and was able to hold off the alien invaders long enough to evacuate the central Imperial systems. However, the Chimaera took heavy damage, and Pellaeon himself was nearly killed. Only the skilled work of the Jedi healer Tekli kept him alive. Once the Imperial Remnant regrouped at Yaga Minor, Pellaeon started his own recovery, and began training his forces with tactics developed by the newly-formed Galactic Alliance. Despite the fact that he was confined to a bacta tank, Pellaeon was also instrumental in helping Jacen Solo convince the Moff Council that it needed to adopt the Galactic Alliance's tactics in order to ensure the very survival of the Empire. When he was able to emerge from the bacta tank, Pellaeon once again took command of the Imperial Navy, and threatened to secede from the Empire if the Moffs didn't accept Jacen's offer to join the Galactic Alliance. Once the Moffs agreed, Pellaeon took the Imperial fleet and began to harass the retreating Yuuzhan Vong forces, hoping to defend the Imperial Remnant by joining the war effort to defeat the alien invaders throughout the galaxy. As the battle neared its conclusion, Pellaeon was appointed the commander of the Galactic Alliance's Fourth Fleet, and was instrumental in the final battle against the Yuuzhan Vong near Coruscant. In the wake of the Yuuzhan Vong surrender, Pellaeon prepared to return to the Imperial Remnant as its primary liaison to the Galactic Republic. Before he left, however, he found time to return the moss painting Killik Twilight to Leia Organa Solo. (HTTE, DFR, DFRSB, DS, SOP, VOF, DTR, FH1, UF)

Pellaeon-Gavrisom Treaty

this was the informal name given to the peace accord signed by Imperial Admiral Gilad Pellaeon and the New Republic Chief of State, Ponc Gavrisom, which effectively ended the struggle between the Empire's remnants and the Republic. (ECH)

Pellastrallas

Pembric II

one of the primary trade worlds of Kathol Sector, Pembric II was surrounded by an asteroid field. It was originally settled as a colony world, but had to be terraformed after a long history of meteorite bombardment. The colonization efforts were largely ineffective, although the planet developed into a perfect base of operations for a variety of criminals and gangsters, mainly because of its relative isolation behind within the asteroids. (DARK, KO, VOF)

Pembric Security Legion

this formerly honest police force was slowly corrupted by a variety of forces. By the era of the New Order, the Legionnaires of the force were nothing more than thugs in fancy uniforms. With the rise to power of the Bombaasa Cartel, the Security Legion was reformed to fight the growing rivalries criminal organization of the planet, but it allowed the Cartel free rein. For its freedom, the Cartel provided funding and support to the Legion, including the acquisition of several New Republic B-Wing assault fighters, which were modified to remove their shielding in favor of speed and maneuverability within the asteroid belt surrounding Pembric II. (DARK)

Pembric Security Legionnaires

Pend, Hexler

this man served the Naboo Royal Security Force as an officer during the Trade Federation's invasion of the planet Naboo. His unit, stationed at Keren, was forced to surrender to the Federation's battle droids when they blasted into his armory by ramming through its duracrete walls with an MTT transport. (NEGV)

Pendal

a planet. (AIR)

Pendari

this planet was the site of an Imperial shipyard during the Galactic Civil War. (GG11)

Pendarr III

a planet, and the base of operations for the Pendarran Warriors. (WBC)

Pendarran Warriors

this military group, led by Gendal Delan, worked side-by-side with the Jedi Knights and the forces of the Old Republic during the Clone Wars. When Emperor Palpatine rose to power, and ordered the extermination of the Jedi Knights, he included the Pendarran Warriors in his orders. Like the Jedi, the Pendarrans were slaughtered by Imperial troops. (WBC)

Pendarran's Revenge

this military organization was founded by Kolor Delan, after the death of his father Gendal at the hands of the Empire. They helped the Alliance several times during the Galactic Civil War, but suddenly turned against the New Republic shortly after the Battle of Endor. It was unknown who hired them to attack Republic forces. They were based in an abandoned Imperial garrison on the planet Shalm, in the Ganton Mountain. (WBC)

Pendath

this was one of the larger cities found on the planet Taanab. (TBSB)

Pendlestat

this shop, located on the Kuari Princess, rented out the services of expert in various fields. They did not, however, have anyone specializing in athletics or the use of the Force. The experts are a mixture of organics and droids, and are often infiltrated by Imperial Security Bureau agents searching the ship for Alliance supporters. (RM)

Pendor Gyrr

this Givin female was known as a misfit on her homeworld of Yag'Dhul. She used her innate abilities in mathematics to earn a less-than-reputable living in counterfeiting. She maintained a series of bases on prominent worlds like Ord Mantell and Bespin, ensuring that she had ready access to large flows of credits in which to insert her wares. (WBC)

Pendower, Maglenna

a native of Alderaan, this dark-skinned woman was once one of Leia Organa's lesser aides during the Galactic Civil War. She spent much of her time covering for Leia's activities with the Alliance, creating cover stories to feed to the Imperial Senate and the newsnets. With the destruction of Alderaan, Maglenna lost her father and two brothers. She held out a small hope that her younger brother was off-planet when the Death Star wiped it out, but she found it difficult to locate him. After enrolling in the Alliance's medical training program, she graduated near the top of her class, but was chastised by Leia, who thought Maglenna's skills as an undercover agent were more valuable than her field skills. Maglenna, however, wanted to be where the action was. Leia managed to get Maglenna a "safe" posting within the Alliance's Supply and Ordnance division, and Maglenna served under Colonel Stijhl at the Gelgelar Free Port drop point during the Galactic Civil War. She maintained her skills as a field medic, and proved her abilities in helping Ihvin Jayme revive Morgan Raventhorn after Morgan was electrocuted aboard The Maker. She later helped Jayme defeat the Doom Slayer droid which was discovered aboard The Maker. After T'Charek Haathi's team survived the attack of a Doom Slayer droid on Gelgelar, Maglenna agreed to join Haathi's team while Dren Nord left the team to work with Colonel Stijhl's team. Maglenna just hoped that Leia wouldn't discover her new role before Maglenna could become a full-fledged Special Operations agent. (SESB, SWJ14)

Penetrator

this small, easily concealed blaster was produced by Luxan Personal Armaments, and was known for the high-powered bolts it could generate despite its size. Most of the models produced didn't even have stun settings or safety switches. The beams it created were small, and often cauterized the wounds they created as they penetrated flesh. (TFNR)

Penetrator

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was built at the Kuat Drive Yards during the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ9)

Penga Rift

this Dobrutz starliner served as a Obroan Institute research vessel. It was dispatched under the command of Joto Eckels, who was in the midst of an exploration of the planet Hoth, when it was suddenly dispatched to Brath Qella. Kroddok Stopa had requested assistance from Eckels, since the Penga Rift was outfitted with many cold-environment exploration tools, where the IX-26 was not. However, Eckels and the Penga Rift were not able to arrive at Brath Qella before Stopa and his assistant, Josala Krenn, were killed in an avalanche on the planet. The Penga Rift was under the command of Captain Dolk Barjas, and measured 126 meters in length. The ship continued to serve the Institute until the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy. During the Vong assault which left Obroa-skai a devastated orb, the Penga Rift was holed and left for dead. (SOL, TT, HT)

Pengalan IV

this planet was the site of a battle, during the early stages of the Clone Wars. The Old Republic believed that the Confederacy of Independent Systems - also known as the Separatists - had created a munitions factory on the planet, and was producing diamond boron missiles at the site. Fearing that the advanced missiles would turn the tide of war to Count Dooku and the Separatists, a full platoon of clone troopers was sent out on the Sea Legacy to destroy the facility. However, the reports of the facility had been leaked by the Separatists in an effort to trap the Republic's forces, after the missile facility had been safely relocated. The plan nearly succeeded, but Republic forces were able to eliminate the missile factory before retreating. (SWI65, SWI73)

Penin, Rosh

this hot-headed young man was once a student at Luke Skywalker's Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4, who was trained by Kyle Katarn until he was captured by Tavion. Rosh and fellow student Jaden Korr had been searching for clues about the Disciples of Ragnos, and Rosh had been dispatched to Byss to investigate rumors coming from the planet. Tavion was able to intercept Rosh on Byss and corrupt him. Rosh was quickly seduced by the Dark Side of the Force and joined the Disciples of Ragnos. When he learned that his old friend Jaden was searching for him, Penin arranged to meet the Jedi Knight on Vjun. Accompanied by Dasariah and Vil Kothos, Penin confronted Korr on the remote world, but was unprepared for his abilities. Korr easily defeated the Kothos brothers, then took on Penin in a duel. Although Penin fought bravely, he was ultimately defeated by Korr. Tavion then entered the room, and used the Scepter of Ragnos to distract the Jedi and escape with Rosh. Shortly afterward, Penin sent a distress call to Kyle and Jaden from the planet Taspir III. Although Jaden thought it was a trap, Kyle quickly took them to Taspir III. There, Rosh appeared to have been coerced into following Tavion. It was Tavion's apprentice, Alora, who confronted Jaden with a choice: turn to the Dark Side by killing Penin for being a liar, or stand down and remain loyal to the Light Side. When Jaden chose to let Penin live, Alora became enraged enough to kill Penin before attacking Jaden. As Jaden fought and defeated Alora, Penin slumped into his Master's arms, but held on long enough to be transported back to Yavin 4 for treatment. Rosh eventually survived the attack, and returned to the Light Side of the Force. (JKA)

Penovia

this gas giant was the second planet in the Recopi System. It was orbited by fourteen moons. (CCW)

Pensin

this man was one of Drend Navett's associates in the Vengeance group. Pensin was present on Bothawui during the riot in Merchant's Square, shortly after the revelation of the Caamas Document. He assisted Navett in starting the riot, and careful shooting made it appear that Han Solo was the shooter. He later worked with Horvik to deflect attention from Navett's efforts to take out the Drev'starn shield generator. Horvik and Pensin posed as the night clean-up crew at a Ho-Din cafe near the generator site. He later assisted them in digging out a tunnel to gain access to the power generators of the shields. Once Navett was in place and ready to take out the shield generator, Pensin accompanied Klif and Horvik on a sabotage mission. Disguised as New Republic technicians, they managed to get aboard the Predominance and make their way to a turbolaser battery. They killed their escort and managed to get eight shots off at the city of Drev'starn before being discovered and neutralized. (SOP, VOF)

Pent, Zegmon

this man, a native of the planet Corellia, was the leader of the terrorist group known as The Flail, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. He had been formerly trained in the Jedi Temple on Coruscant to be a secret assassin, although it was unclear whether he was sensitive to the Force. Nonetheless, Pent spent a good deal of time cultivating his "Jedi assassin" image, and even stole an imitation lightsaber from an independent technician to use as his weapon. Pent believed that the Senate was a corrupt body which was funded by corporate sponsors to ignore the common good, that Chancellor Finis Valorum was the root of the problem, and set out to rectify the situation. When a team of freelance security officers stopped the activities of The Flail, Pent declared that he would personally kill Chancellor Valorum in order to put a halt to the Senate's actions. He tried to escape by outflying the security team in an airspeeder, hoping to reach the Senate Chamber and kill Valorum himself, or die trying. In a desperate struggle, Pent drew his lightsaber and tried to murder Valorum, but was stopped by the actions of the security officers and Vinsoo Pah. Pent was taken into custody and imprisoned. (SWRPG)

Pentase, Nela

this woman worked for Karflo Corporation as an accountant. The scientist Trem DeSelvaine had a crush on her. It was believed that Nela was killed with the Polydroxol individual known simply as Polly escaped from DeSelvaine's research lab and killed all personnel. (SWJ12)

Pentastar Alignment

this galactic conglomerate was created from the various leaders of the Velcar Free Commerce Zone and led by Imperial Moff Arduus Kaine. The Alignment controlled a section of the galaxy named for it, and controlled all access to and from the planets, in conjunction with the Velcar Free Commerce Zone commissioners. The basis for the Pentastar Alignment was the former Imperial government of Emperor Palpatine, although it was warped to conform to Kaine's own vision of the Empire. Built from the outcome of the Pentastar Talks, the Alignment had two major factions, the Chamber of Order and Enforcement. The Order faction controlled the Politorate, Insurrection, Judgement, and Protectorate divisions. Enforcement controlled the regulation and enforcement of laws and public allegiance, and was in command of the Alignment's police force, the Pentastar Patrol. While essentially effective, the Pentastar Alignment remained Moff Kaine's personal agenda, and failed to stand up to the pressure of maintaining galactic control. Kaine eventually allied the Pentastar Alignment with Admiral Pellaeon and the Imperial Remnant. (SWJ3, ECH)

Pentastar Alignment Treaty

this was the document which was ratified at the conclusion of the Pentastar Talks, solidifying Moff Arduus Kaine's vision of the Pentastar Alignment as the new Imperial government of the Velcar Free Commerce Zone. (SWJ3)

Pentastar Patrol

this was the primary military force established as part of the Pentastar Alignment's Enforcement branch, and represented the most visible reminder of the Alignment's power. The Pentastar Patrol also consumed the majority of the Alignment's resources and personnel, having taken over the garrisons and outposts of the former Empire. Unlike the Imperial military, the Pentastar Patrol allowed non-humans to serve in its ranks, a move which was meant to make the Alignment seem more "friendly" to other species. This practice did not sit well with various members of the Alignment's command structure, as many of them were former Imperial officers. (SWJ3)

Pentastar Patrol Academy

this was the primary educational facility established by the Pentastar Alignment to train those beings who joined the Pentastar Patrol. (SWJ3)

Pentastar Talks

this was the series of meetings established by Moff Ardus Kaine, in which he laid out his plans for re-establishing Imperial control under the guise of the Pentastar Alignment. Working with various Imperial supporters and business leaders from the Velcar Free Commerce Zone, Moff Kaine hammered out the Pentastar Alignment Treaty, and installed himself as the head of the Alingment. (SWJ3)

Pentastar Trust and Safety Assurance Bank

this was the primary financial institution established by the Pentastar Alignment, in the wake of the Battle of Endor. (SWJ3)

Penumbra

this modified shieldship was owned and operated by Neen Niuv. It served as the criminal's base of operations during the early years of the New Republic, hidden within Hutt Space. The main cargo sections of the ship were modified for use as hangars, and Neen Niuv maintained a wing of eight I-7 Howlrunners as defensive fighters. Niuv also equipped the Penumbra with a limited hyperdrive system, giving him the ability to take the ship away from direct confrontation. (WOTC)

Penumbra Omen

located in space near the Naboo System, this region was originally designated by Imperial forces as D-512. Shortly after the Battle of Yavin, the name was changed to the Penumbra Omen, and all non-military traffic was restricted from entering the region. (SWGAL)

Penzak Kraal

this Yuuzhan Vong pilot and his clanmate, Charat Kraal, were on patrol over Borleias during the alien's invasion of the planet Coruscant. Unfortunately, Penzal Kraal was killed when Wedge Antilles and his small fleet arrived on Borleias and retook the planet as their base of operations. (EL1)

People's Inquest, The

this grass-roots organization was founded on Coruscant, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. The People's Inquest was formed as a watchdog group to monitor the activities of the Jedi Knights, who were becoming increasingly insular and withdrawn from the public eye. They were eventually shut down by the Old Republic for a variety of reasons, including "inadequate licensing" and "signal purity violations". Supporters of the Inquest were arrested during protests outside the Senate Rotunda on the grounds of maintaining security, and many believed that the organization was doomed. However, founder Thrynka Padaunete managed to persevere, and eventually re-established a public infocache based on a remote Outer Rim world during the height of the Clone Wars. (HNN4, SWI71)

People's Liberation Battalion

this civilian military operation was created by Harran Estillo, who passed himself off as the returned Prince Harrandatha. The goal of the Battalion was to overthrow the yolk of Imperial control on Eiattu, as well as to unseat the Priamsta. (XWWP)

Pepah Blangko

this bounty hunter was active during the years following the Battle of Naboo. He was implicated in the distribution of illegal holograms with Gabo the Wicked, but never arrested. Despite his record, Pepah openly placed a bounty on the head of Boozoo "Bogey" Boga and his band of Galactic Radicals, after several of his own hunts were hijacked by Boga. (BH)

Peppel

it was on this planet, as far from Coruscant and Tatooine, that Boba Fett eventually caught Kardue'sai'Mallock, the Butcher of Montellian Serat. (TBH)

Pepper Fettle

the seeds of this plant were often ground up to make a pungent spice for flavoring food. (SWJ12)

Pepper Tea

a strong, stimulating variety of hot tea. (CS)

Pepper's Hope

this stock Ghtroc freighter was owned and operated by Margo "Pepper" Flarestream, after she removed herself from active duty with the Alliance's Starfighter Command. (CRO)

Pepper's Pax

this rought-and-tumble tavern was located on the planet Darlyn Boda during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Situated between a mortuary and a pawn shop, Pepper's Pax was considered the safest gathering place for criminals of all sorts. It was said that there were only two rules at Pepper's Pax: no fighting, and no sissies. To enforce this second rule, newcomers had to eat a mouthful of firespice vegetable pods. Pepper's Pax also served as a base of operations for some of the most reliable and accurate haruspexes on the planet. (WOA34)

Pera

this Verpine priest was considered the leader of the Sacred Way religion on the planet Aduba-3, during the years following the Battle of Yavin. He worked to ensure a good relationship with the various legitimate and illicit businesses operating on Aduba-3, but was not afraid to fight for his own rights. He belived that, for every sin, there was an equal and positive retribution. His seemingly endless mission was to convert the rabble that called Aduba-3 their home to the Sacred Way. The regulars were loyal to him because of his maintenance of the Spacer's Hill cemetery. (GMR4)

Pera

this term, from the High Galactic language, was used throughout the galaxy to indicate a male parent. (MC7)

Per'Agthra

this was the name used to describe the Queen Mother's castle, located on the planet Hapes. (CTD)

Peragus II

this unusual planet was located in a remote corner of the galaxy. Several years before the Great Sith War, it was first settled by the workers of the Peragus Mining Colony, who extracted all manner of gases and ores from the planet's crust and mantle. However, an explosion at the main facility caused incredible amounts of damage, and literally tore a hole in the planet's crust. This hole widened as the molten lava surrounding the core of Peragus II gushed into space. The lava eventually froze in the vacuum of space, creating a chain of asteroids that settled into a geosynchronous orbit around the planet. For many years, Peragus II bled lava into space, presenting a unique phenomenon to scientists. The miners of the Peragus Mining Colony eventually took up residence in the asteroids, since much of the material they were mining was now floating in space. (LAWS)

Peragus Mining Colony

this gas mining operation was established on the planet Peragus II many years before the Great Sith War. The independent miners of the colony supplied materiel to the Old Republic during the Sith War, until an explosion at the facility tore a huge hole in the planet's crust. Molten lava spewed out of the hole and into space, where it froze in the vacuum and created a large chain of asteroids. Once the Peragus Mining Colony recovered from the disaster, they moved their operations to the orbiting asteroids. (LAWS)

Peralli

this Mon Calamari worked as a pirate for the Feeorin Nym, during the height of the New Order. When Finn Darktrin recovered a map for Nym in exchange for passage to Corellia, Peralli was assigned to be their pilot, since Nym didn't trust Finn's abilities. However, upon reaching Corellia, their ship was apprehended by Imperial forces. In the brief firefight, Peralli's ship took damage while trying to reach the surface. He and Finn tried to keep the ship under control while Dusque Mistflieger strapped herself into the passenger area. An explosion rocked the cockpit, seeming to come from inside the ship, and Finn was forced to land the ship himself. Peralli, he told Finn, had caught the explosion in the chest and died from his wounds. Later, after Finn revealed that he was actually an Imperial agent, he told Dusque that it had been he who killed Peralli, to ensure that the Imperials thought their ship had been destroyed. (ROD)

this New Republic Senator from Walalla questioned the validity of Operation Hammerblow and the use of the Fifth Battle Group. He grew up during the early days of Imperial occupation of Walalla, and witnessed first-hand the atrocities committed by Imperial troops and leaders. This hardened his resolve to eradicate the Empire, and when the time came he became a governmental leader. His appointment to the New Republic Senate came a few months before Nil Spaar arrived on Coruscant. His experiences at the hands of the Empire led him to an alliance with the Yevethan against what Nil Spaar called "Leia Organa-Solo's personal ambitions." He was banished from the Senatorial chambers for his dealing with Spaar. Unlike other Senators who supported Spaar, Peramis remained on Coruscant to monitor the Republic's reactions to the Yevethan power plays. Using his contacts within the Senate to gather information. To this end, he got Senator Cundertol drunk and stole his Senatorial security cards. Using them, Peramis was able to enter the Senate building and access Cundertol's files. From there, Peramis obtained a wealth of information on the planned blockade of the Koornacht Cluster. Peramis quickly forwarded the information to Spaar. (BTS, SOL) derived from the title perator, this was an Adumari coin which was minted with the image of a nation's perator on the obverse. Each nation had its own mintage of perats, but all were considered of more or less equal value. (SOA)

Perat

Perator

this was the title used by the Adumari to describe the leader of an individual nation or city. Each perator had to prove himself in combat, both on the ground and in space, before he could be considered for election to the post. By his mere presence in a room or at a gathering, the perator demanded full attention. However, he could lower the visor on his crown to indicate a distancing of himself from the crowd, thereby freeing those assembled from the need for attention. In this way, the perator could enjoy the gathering without affecting the behavior of the others. (SOA)

Perave System Starport

this ancient space station orbited the planet Arkania some 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. (TOJC)

Percifel

this was a common name among the Chev race. (UANT)

Percussion Cannon

this ancient form of weaponry employs a dense burst of sound waves, emitted from a tubular stock and aimed at a target, to cause damage. The sound wave strikes its target and sends intense waves of vibrations through it. (KO)

Pereg, Hunti

this bounty hunter was part of a group of hunters hired by Granta Omega to capture Obi-Wan Kenobi, Anakin Skywalker, and Wren Honoran on Ragoon-6, some five years after the Battle of Naboo. He was known to have never missed a target, ever, in his career. During the attempt to capture the Jedi, Hunti was incapacitated and then impersonated by Granta Omega himself, in an effort to lure the Jedi into a trap. (JQ2)

Peregrine

this was the name given to one of Garm Bel Iblis' Dreadnaughts, during the years before he rejoined the New Republic. It was one of several ships from the Katana Fleet that Bel Iblis managed to obtain over the years. It eventually became part of the New Republic's fleet. The ship remained as Bel Iblis' flagship, and was placed under the command of Admiral Vriss. (DFR, SOP)

Peregrine

this modified Strike-class cruiser was part of the Alliance's fleet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Peregrine 240

this was a model of swoop produced by Aratech during the last years of the Old Republic. These swoops measured 3.25 meters in length, and could accommodate a pilot and a single passenger. The Peregrine 240 could attain speeds in excess of 350 kilometers per hour under ideal conditions. Note that this swoop is referred to as the Peregrine-340 in Star Wars Gamer, issue 4. (NEGV, GMR4)

Peregrine, The

ths Peregrine was supposedly the ghost of a Corellian spacer, used as a story to scare young children. According to the stories, the Peregrine was cursed to roam the galaxy forever. (DFR, DFRC)

Peregrine-340

see Peregrine 240 (GMR4)

Peregrine's Nest

this was the name given to the last in a long line of Garm Bel Iblis' hideouts, established about two years after the Battle of Endor. His team set the base up with an eye toward striking out at Mon Mothma and the New Republic, rather than the Empire, based on Bel Iblis' fear that Mon Mothma would turn the Republic into a dictatorship under her sole command. Han Solo and Lando Calrissian were brought to Peregrine's Nest by Sena Midanyl, about five years after the Battle of Endor, after they discovered the relationship between Bel Iblis and Borsk Fey'lya. (DFR)

Perek

this pale blue-skinned humanoid made his home in a remote corner of the galaxy during the height of the New Order, earning a meager sum of credits as an artist. He remained aloof from the rest of the galaxy, preferring to work in solitude. Much of his artwork was created from the cast-off technology of a given society, and the battles of the Galactic Civil War provided him with a wealth of raw material. It also provided him with a vision of himself that was fed by his isolation, a vision in which he singlehandedly brought control to the galaxy. Using specialized droid "bugs", Perek was able to create a form of virus that spread through machinery, transforming it into a violent form of "artwork" that was controlled by Perek. In this way, he planned to take over the galaxy by turning every machine into a tool. These machines would then convert all living creatures into fuel, utterly subjugating the entire galaxy. Perek himself was discovered to be little more than a cyborged head attached to a mechanized frame. It was rumored that Han Solo defeated Perek during the early years of the New Republic, by hitting the mad artist with a Corellian spark grenade that disabled Perek's source of power and rendered Perek inert. (T19)

Peremptory

an Imperial-I class Star Destroyer, the Peremptory defeated the forces of the New Republic during the Battle of Storinal. This ship was later destroyed while trying to recover the Katana Fleet, after it was dispatched to fill a gap left by the absence of the Chimaera, which had been detained at Wayland by Joruus C'baoth. Using the slave-rigging systems of the Katana, Han Solo and Lando Calrissian managed to ram a Dreadnaught into the Peremptory, utterly destroying both ships. (DFR, ECH)

Perfect

an Imperial Corvette operative during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Perfect Corellian Dinner Party, The

written by Lady Sera Tharen, this book described the requirements and necessities for hosting a high-class soiree. (EGA)

Pergallis, Tren

this Imperial Governor was placed in charge of the planet Stassia, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He abolished the fifteen Head Clans which had controlled the planet, hoping that a single voice would help the Stassians accept the Empire. (SWJ6)

Pergitor

this planet, located in a star system of the same name, is found in the Minos Cluster. It was once a lush, tropical garden of a world, and it held a rich cache of rare and exotic minerals. The original settlers were employees of Jesa Corporation who came to Pergitor to mine the minerals. The planet's ruling class descended from Jesa Corporation's leadership. The mining operations continued to take material out of the planet's crust, until intense deep-bore mining by the Jesa Corporation resulted in a volcanic eruption which filled the atmosphere with ash for several years. The eruptions occurred about 100 years before the Battle of Yavin, and tons of toxic elements were expelled by the volcanos. These chemicals are now a permanent part of the atmosphere, and life on Pergitor has been nearly wiped out. The remaining natives must use gasmasks when travelling outside, and all buildings are built air-tight to keep the chemicals out. The average day on Pergitor encompasses 34 standard hours, and its year lasts 291 local days. (GG6)

Pergola's Bridge

spanning the Solleu River in the city of Theed, on Naboo, this bridge was built to take some of the traffic away from the more fragile Bassa Bridge. (IWE1)

Perhi

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Perhi, Dal

this Black Sun agent was dispatched to clean up the remains of Yanth the Hutt, after Darth Maul executed the vigo while recovering Hath Monchar's crystal holocron. He assisted young Obi-Wan Kenobi, who was searching for Darsha Assant, by providing information on Yanth's death. Obi-Wan single-handedly disarmed a group of thugs when he entered the bar, and his skills both amazed and frightened Dal Perhi, especially after Perhi learned that Obi-Wan was just a padawan and not a full Jedi Knight. (DMSH)

Periander Feedback Circle

this was a form of computer security system meant to emit a shrill humming noise whenever a being tried to infiltrate a computer. As the illegal slicer got deeper into a system, the noise grew louder and louder. Many computer slicers actually found the Circle quite useful, as it gave them an idea of how well a slicing operation was going. (GMR10)

Peridon's Folly

this planet was a toxic, highly-industrialized weapons depot used by blackmarket dealers to sell state-of-the-art systems. The surface of the planet was covered with industrial urban centers and sprawling manufacturing facilities, with the only natural areas given over to weapons testing sites. It was on this planet that IG-88B collected its first bounty, removing a competitor from the path of the dictator Grlubb. (TBH)

Perigen

a non-narcotic painkiller which reduces concentration as a side-effect. (COJ)

Peril

this Imperial Lancer-class frigate was part of the fleet which protected the Damorian repair yards near Esseles. It supported the Sodrab, shortly before the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Perilious

this urban world was located in the Outer Rim Territories. During the time of the Clone Wars, Perilious was known as a hotbed of criminal activity, including a sizeable slave trade. (T17)

Perilix

Periphery, The

this disputed area of the galaxy separates the Outer Rim Territories from Hutt space. (GG12)

Perit

this was one of the more common names given to males of the Mon Calamari race. To the Mon Calamari, this name meant "spear". (GCG)

Perit

this Mon Calamari was one of Prince Xizor's vigos, or one of his closest lieutenants. A former slave of one of Sienar Fleet Systems' executives, Perit learned the ins and outs of business and management while observing his master. Over time, Perit was given certain duties in the Sienar facility on Byblos, until he was suddenly reassigned to a master on Coruscant. That master turned out to be none other than Xizor himself, who had discovered Perit through the Mon Cal's infiltration of Sienar's datafiles. Perit eventually earned his position as vigo, controlling a wealth of technology and computer-related criminal rings. To many observers, Perit was the closest thing Xizor had to a friend. This earned Perit a measure of jealous from his fellow vigos, but Perit intimate knowledge of their business dealings kept most of them from trying to eliminate him. (SE, SESB, RESB)

Perithal VI

this song, written and played by the band Red Shift Limit, was banned by the Imperial Board of Culture. It first appeared on the compilation Thoughts from the Core. It formed the second of duology of songs, preceded by Permission to Think. (GG9)

Permission to Think

this song, written and played by the band Red Shift Limit, was banned by the Imperial Board of Culture. It first appeared on the compilation Thoughts from the Core. It was the first of a duology of songs, followed by Permission Denied. (GG9)

Permlight

this was a form of emergency lighting system that maintained its own power source, providing lighting in those situations where a facility or starship lost normal electrocal power. (SQ)

Permondiri Explorer

a legendary lost starship, sometimes seen by spacers in the depths of space. It was crewed by 112 on a mission to explore and chart new star systems when it was lost following its maiden departure. (HSR, SWSB)

Pernam Minor

the planet on which Kassar Kosciusko saved the life of his friend, Meysen Kayson. (SWJ6)

Pernella

this planet, located in the Freeworlds Region of Tapani Sector, was part of a group known as the Three Ellas. Along with Dorella and Sorella, Pernella had a liberal government that was more receptive to smugglers and criminals than other worlds. (LOE)

Pernicar

this Jedi Knight was one of Lord Hoth's lieutenants, during the preparations for the Battle of Ruusan. Despite heavy losses, Pernicar was optimistic about the Jedi's chances of defeating the Brotherhood of Darkness. The son of a scribe, Pernicar wanted to follow in his father's footsteps as a youth, but his father sent him away to train with the Jedi at the first sign of his connection to the Force. Pernicar resented this until he was old enough to understand his father's decision, a decision which his father believed would be the very best for Pernicar. Unfortunately, his father died before Pernicar could apologize for his mistrust. Pernicar himself died on Ruusan, in the initial wave of Sith attacks, before Lord Farfalla could arrive with reinforcements. (JVS)

Pernon, Gror

this elderly gentleman was the Grand Duke of Eiattu, and was Antbbianplourr's brother. He petitioned the fledgling New Republic and Rogue Squadron to allow Plourr to return to her homeworld and claim her place as the rightful heir to the throne. (XWWP)

Pernon, Rial

this young native of Eiattu was Gror Pernon's son. Rial was a full Count in the Eiattuan royalty, and was Plourr's second cousin. Once Plourr was returned to Eiattu, Rial assumed that he would be her future husband, since they had been betrothed as children. During the restoration of the Eiattuan monarchy, Rial flew his modified Z-95 Headhunter in battle with Rogue Squadron. (XWWP)

Perootu

this feline was domesticated, and was kept as a pet by many beings throughout the galaxy. (AOTCN)

Perosa

this thick-boled tree was native to the Forest Moon of Endor, and was used by the Ewoks for a variety of purposes. The thick, soft bark could be peeled off and cooked like meat, or it could be dried and used as a form of body armor. The sap, drawn from the tree's secondary bark layer, could be boiled down and reduced to form an effective adhesive. However, it caused severe allergic reactions in Kel Dor and Gand individuals. (GMR9)

Perosei

this man was a member of the Royal Naboo Security Forces during the rule of Queen Amidala. Shortly before the Battle of Naboo, Officer Perosei was held by the battle droid forces of the Trade Federation. He managed to escape when Panaka's forces liberated the soldiers in preparation for the assault on Nute Gunray. Perosei was a weapons expert, and could disassemble and reassemble a blaster in less than sixty seconds. (CCG15)

Perrinn Sector

an area of the galaxy. (PP)

Perris

this man served the New Republic Navy as the flight coordinator for the Peregrine after Garm Bel Iblis joined the New Republic. At the time of the Caamas Incident, Perris had achieved the rank of Commander. He later commanded the starfighters during the raid on Yaga Minor's Ubiquitorate station. (SOP, VOF)

Perrsta, Jonnas

this man was the Captain of TransGalMeg Industries' corporate security force in the city of Grig, on the planet Narg. He was part of the Farool brothers' plan to use Crying Dawn Singer in an attempt to discredit the Alliance, and held the Shashay at the TGM facility in Grig, on the planet of Narg. A short man with long blond hair, Perrsta became increasingly worried about his role in the plan, fearing reprisal from TGM's security force or the Empire itself. When Moff Nile Owen ordered him to move Singer to Toggeus and delay any Alliance rescue attempt, Perrsta quickly moved to comply. However, he was unable to contain them. (TA)

Perry

this man was one of the Peacekeeperrs who protected the survivors of the Outbound Flight Project, during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (SQ)

Perseverance

this Carrack-class light cruiser was part of the Old Republic's Home Fleet Strike Group Five, which defended the planet Coruscant during the height of the Clone Wars. This ship saw heavy fighting during the First Battle of Coruscant, and was part of the main force that attacked the Invisible Hand. (E3N)

Persha

this female Fia was the primate of Al'solib'minet'ri City during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. She was assigned by Councilor Jobath to greet Leia Organa Solo and her husband, Han Solo, when they arrived at Galantos as part of a mission to being restoring communication to the galaxy. Persha was forced into the role because Jobath feared that the true reason behind the communications blackout - that the Fia had made a deal with the Yuuzhan Vong to eliminate the Yevetha - would be revealed. (FH1)

Pershon

this aging man was the loyal servant of the Hejaran family, acting as the butler and confidante to several generations of Barons. He held himself to blame when Lucian Hejaran passed away, having been unable to prevent the political intrigue which swept the Tapani Sector during the height of the New Order. When Lucian's heirs gathered to hear his will, Pershon was strangled to death by a pair of seeming invisible hands, since his neck bore no marks of strangulation. (TSIA)

Personal Data Assistant

any computer device which stored physical and personal information. Any of the information can be displayed quickly, usually in a holographic, head's-up fashion. PDAs, as they are called, are found most often in soldier and commando gear, as well as in starpilot gear. (DF)

Personal Profit

this modified YT-1330 freighter was owned by Chalmer Trillili. (OE)

Personal shield

a small shield generator that can surround an individual with a protective field. The generator is often hidden in a belt or other bodily device. These shields have two drawbacks. First, they are too small to allow sufficient power for long-lasting protection. Second, the shield tended to get hot very quickly, literally frying the user if they accidentally touched the energy barrier. (CPL)

PersonalAssistant-4x

this model of recorder rod was produced by TaggeCo for consumer use. It used removable storage crystals to hold up to 100 hours of information. (EGW)

Personalities in the News

this was one of the many newsfeed articles written by Pertaal Shenvehr. Like his other columns, it contained coded messages and phrases that allowed him to pass information to Alliance field agents. (CRO)

Personality Series Scanner

developed by zZip, this style of ChaumScanner was small enough to fit inside a brooch or pendant, allowing the wearer to detect the presence of poisons in food or water without obviously scanning the target. (CRO)

Perspik

this man was one of Imperial Lord Dixon's personal secretaries. (SWCP)

Persuader

this was a model of heavy stun gun produced by BlasTech. (WSV)

Persuader-class Droid Enforcer

this immense, treaded combat droid was produced by the Corporate Alliance during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. The main body of the droid was given over to handling the huge central tread, which ran from two small wheels at the front and rear to the massive drive wheel near the front of the droid. Two wheeled outriggers could be extended to provide stability when moving over rough terrain. Attached to the housing that protected the drive wheel were two eye-like visual sensors that provided the Persuader with information about its surroundings. Tracking, sensor, and communications systems were located atop the droid's main body, while a homing laser and an ion cannon were mounted to each side. The Persuader-class droid stood 6.2 meters in height, not including the comm relay, and could attain speeds of fifty kilometers per hour. The Corporate Alliance developed the Persuader to act as a short-range reconnaissance drone, moving into enemy territory to gather information about troops strengths and terrain. Although first put to widespread use during the Clone Wars, these droids were originally used on missions where the Corporate Alliance felt it had to protect its assets or forcibly recover what it was owed. While the Persuader was quite effective in its mission profile, it could only be used on stable, open terrain. It could not maneuver in forested areas, and often fell through the surface of snow- and ice-covered worlds. (NEGV)

this dark-skinned man was a Colonel in the Alliance, and was in command of Rendezvous Point 4 on Edan II. When the Empire subjugated the planet, Pertarn developed a bold plan to destroy the Star Destroyer Havoc. (IAG)

Pertenax

this MC40a was part of the Alliance's fleet, during the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Perth

this was one of the most common male names among the Corellian population. (GMR9)

Perzome SoftWEAR

this corporation manufactures knowledge cartridges for use by cyborgs. (CFG)

Peshk

this Bothan name was given to newborn males. Translated into Basic, it meant "handsome." (GCG, WOTC)

Peshk Vri'syk

this Bothan male, a native of Bothawui, was a member of Rogue Squadron. He was killed by a shot from an ion cannon while defending the planet Borleias. (XWN)

Pesitiin

this gaseous planet, known for its intense atmospheric storms, was once the site of a Bosken & Bosken mine. Admiral Pellaeon had hoped to meet Garm Bel Iblis near Pesitiin, some ten years after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn, in an effort to discuss a peace treaty between the New Republic and the remnants of the Empire. Pellaeon had sent Colonel Vermel to Morishim to deliver an invitation, but Vermel was intercepted by Moff Disra's forces before he could get off a garbled message to Rogue Squadron. The message was never completely understood, and so Bel Iblis never went to Pesitiin. Pellaeon did go, to wait for Bel Iblis, but was attacked by Cavrilhu Pirates. The pirate ships, operating under orders from Disra, were marked with Corellian Defense Forces insignia, hoping to fool Pellaeon into believing Bel Iblis was attacking. Pellaeon didn't buy the attack, recognizing several battle maneuvers that Bel Iblis would not have attempted. Unshaken, Pellaeon remained at Pesitiin, waiting for Bel Iblis while questioning the loyalty of Disra. (GG2, SOP)

Pesktada

this was the capital city of the planet Garqi, and the site of Garqi Ag University. (TFE, SWJ7)

Pesktada Xenobiological Garden

this was the foremost natural garden found on the planet Garqi, and it was located near Garqi Agricultural University. Corran Horn and Jacen Solo discovered that the pollen of the bafforr tree was deadly to the Yuuzhan Vong's vonduun crab armor here, after retreating to the gardens during an attack. The Ithorians had believed that the natives of Garqi held to the same basic beliefs of nature as they did, and allowed the bafforr to be transplanted on Garqi. Horn decided that this discovery needed to be kept from the Yuuzhan Vong, and had his teams burn down the sections of the garden containing bafforr trees.

Unfortunately, Shedao Shai eventually figured out why the gardens were burned. In retaliation, Deign Lian ordered the destruction of the planet Ithor. (DTR)

Pesmemben IV

a planet on which Lando Calrissian ran a lithium scam, covering the planet's sand dunes with lithium carbonate to con the Imperial governor into leasing the planet to Lando. (ROTJN)

Pessk Maseel

this was the name of a noted Clawdite individual in the history of the planet Zolan. (UANT)

Pestage

this re-christened Victory-class Star Destroyer was part of the fleet that invaded Kheedar and helped support the martial law instituted there. (GG9)

Pestage, Sate

Emperor Palpatine's Grand Vizier, Pestage had served Palpatine as a senatorial aide before becoming one of the Emperor's most trusted advisors. During the height of the Clone Wars, Pestage was the controller of the Galactic Senate's executive agenda. This allowed him to have regular contact with the Senators, and his powers of persuasion went a long way toward convincing uncertain Senators to support Palpatine's initiatives. He personally oversaw the preparation of Palpatine's food, tasting it for poisons. He scheduled all of Palpatine's meetings, held the Imperial Seal, and managed the Emperor's household. Many beings even rumored that Pestage was one of the first clones created from Palpatine's genetic material. While none of rumors ever proven false, Pestage's loyalty to the Emperor was without a doubt. For all his hard work, Pestage was presented with the stewardship of the Ciutric Hegemony by Palpatine himself. Historians of the Empire acknowledge the fact that Sate Pestage, for all intents and purposes, was running the Empire at the time of the Battle of Hoth. Pestage was also one of the few people who knew about the Eidolon project, and actually diverted funds from it to build a small retreat on Tatooine. He then hired Lirin Banolt to acquire artwork and antique weapons to furnish it. Banolt managed to steal the plans for - and location of - the Eidolon, and threatened to blackmail Pestage, but the wily Vizier had Banolt executed before any damage could be done. When the Emperor died at Endor, Pestage assumed control of the majority of the Empire's military, but his rule was constantly questioned by other Imperial leaders. When Pestage lost his holdings on Ciutric to Prince-Admiral Krennel, he fled to Axxila, hoping to evade Ysanne Isard. Pestage arranged to meet with Leia Organa, and the New Republic sent Winter to act as Leia on a diplomatic mission to Eiattu to cover the Axxila trip. He offered her the chance to take the planet Coruscant in return for his own safety. Leia agreed, and Pestage found a temporary safety. Pestage also helped Leonia Tavira flee from Axxila, ensuring that another ally would be available if he needed one in his struggle against Ysanne Isard. Isard was only marginally loyal to Pestage, and had suspicions of his meeting with Leia. Pestage also told Tavira about the Eidolon weapons cache, hoping she could recover anything which remained. However, he earned the enmity of Isard when he ordered Admiral Krennel to stand down in his assault on Axxila, after Soontir Fel issued an AT3 directive to break off the attack. Isard returned to the Imperial council and brought news of Pestage's treachery, and the council ordered him to be removed from power. He fled to Ciutric with the help of Leonia Tavira, and was held by Governor Brothic. However, a bribe kept Brothic from relaying word of his arrival to Isard, allowing the New Republic time to set up a rescue operation. Commando Team One, with the support of Rogue Squadron and Aggressor Wing, was able to liberate Pestage before Isard's forces could capture him. Pestage, however, had other ideas, and slipped away from the Republic agents and presented himself to Admiral Krennel. Krennel, however, desired more than the prestige of recovering Pestage. He killed Pestage by strangling him with his cybernetic hand. It was later revealed that Pestage had been cloned by Sarcev Quest. While the clone was killed by Krennel, the real Pestage retired to Byss to await the possible return of Palpatine's spirit. When this did occur, Pestage was there, ready to help the new-formed Palpatine regain his power and control. The true Pestage died, however, when Byss was destroyed by the Galaxy Gun. Pestoriv Conferences this series of meetings took place during the era of the New Order, and was one of the few such gatherings that were considered completely open and without prejudice. (SOP)

Pesttrak

this man was a member of the Naboo Royal Security Force, serving with then-Lieutenant Panaka under Captain Magneta. (GMR2)

Pet

this female name was common among the Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Pet Slime

this gelatinous lifeform was native to the planet Saclas, and was raised by farmers for sale as a kind of pet. During the early years of the New Order, pet slimes were popular among young Gamorreans. (AIR)

Petabys Station

this Rendili StarDrive FireStar defense station was purchased by the Rodian black marketeer Uopled. Uopled refurbished it, and turned it into the most successful of the illegal marketplaces of the New Order. It was located on the border of the Mid and Outer Rim Territories. Before Uopled obtained it, the station was owned by Golan Arms, and protected a mining outpost until the mines ran dry. (HAS)

Petahertz

this was a measurement of the frequency at which computer systems operated, during the last years of the Old Republic. As a reference, the AA-1 verbobrain operated at a frequency of seven petahertz. (MJH)

Petal Fever

this mild disease is common on newly-settled planets. It is not fatal if treated quickly. (POT)

Petchuk

this was the Old Corellian word for "animosity" or "bad blood." (SWJ2)

Petdur

codename of a group of Alliance Y-Wings assigned to attack Imperial outpost D-34, following the Battle of Hoth. (TIE)

Peterson's Guide to Droids of the Republic

this immense, multi-volumed guide was produced during the last centuries of the Old Republic, and contained a wealth of information on virtually every series and model of automaton ever produced. (YDR)

Peth

this is the sixteenth symbol in the Aurebesh script, and represents the Basic letter "p". (SWM)

Petition of the Two Thousand

this was the unofficial name used the Senators of the Old Republic to describe a petition started by Bail Organa and Mon Mothma to overturn some - if not all - of the emergency powers that had been granted to Chancellor Palpatine during the Clone Wars. The Senators who signed the petition - who included the original draftees Padme' Amidala, Fang Zar, Bam Breemu, Giddean Danu, and Chi Eekway - started the petition in an effort to restore democracy in the Republic without starting another war of separation. The goal of the petition was to make Palpatine realize that the need for emergency powers and extended control of the galaxy was no longer necessary. Initially, it was decided that the Jedi Order would not be consulted about the petition, because many signatory Senators were unsure of the true position of the Jedi. Although Palpatine agreed to hear the petition, he twisted its intentions when discussing it later with Anakin Skywalker. Palpatine told Anakin that the petition was not a call for a return to normalcy in the Republic, but the opening salvo in a Jedi-led plot to overthrow the Chancellor's office and place control of the galaxy in the hands of the Jedi Council. According to Palpatine, the Delegation of the Two Thousand that drafted and signed the petition was under the control of the Jedi Council's powers of persuasion. (IS3, E3N)

Petja

this man was one of Lord Hoth's primary aides, during the preparations for the Battle of Ruusan. An eager warrior, Petja was enamored of battle and enjoyed the grisly scenes which accompanied a Jedi victory over the Brotherhood of Darkness. Nevertheless, his resolve to serve Lord Hoth and the Light Side of the Force never wavered. As the battle turned to the Sith, Petja and many other Jedi took up bow and arrow to kill those bouncers who were being driven mad by the death toll. It was Petja who mistakenly killed Laa, an act which suddenly angered the young girl named Rain who had become friends with Laa. Reaching deep within herself to harness her anger, Rain was consumed by the Dark Side of the Force and used it to shatter every bone in Petja's body. (JVS)

Petor

a Nharwaak CR90 corvette destroyed during an Imperial raid on their hidden base. (TIE)

Petothel

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Petothel, Dalls

this man was Gara Petothel's father. An agent of the Empire's Intelligence agency, he married a fellow Intelligence agent, Edallia Monotheer. After Gara was born, both Dalls and Edallia were arrested and with funneling secret Imperial information to rebel forces on the planet Chandrila, and were executed. (SOC)

Petothel, Gara

this woman, a native of Coruscant and the daughter of two Imperial Intelligence agents, was lithely built and distinguished by a beauty mark on her right cheek. Her parents groomed her to become an Intelligence agent herself, but they were arrested for an unspecified crime when she was old enough to hate them and miss them at the same time. Since the Empire had been her life, she joined the Intelligence agency and rose quickly through the ranks. She spent a good deal of time in the guide of Chyan Mezzine, a New Republic Naval officer. Later, as one of the code slicers who worked on the Morrt droid deployment project, she was able to provide the Republic with the false information that led to the destruction of Talon Squadron. She also discovered the New Republic's base on Folor, but actually found the false beacons placed on the opposite side of the moon. This allowed the starfighters to scramble and get away before Trigit could attack. During the destruction of Trigit's command ship, the Implacable, Petothel used her slicing skills to gain entrance to Trigit's personal escape pods to flee the ship before it could take her with it. After escaping, she wondered at the reasons the Empire would condone the actions of a man like Trigit, who would willingly sacrifice his entire crew for a mission's outcome, especially if retreat would mean the chance to fight another day. After returning to Coruscant, she assumed the identity of Lara Notsil, which involved dyeing and cutting her hair as well as removing her birthmark. As Lara, she eventually gained a place in Wraith Squadron. The part of her that was still Gara wanted to use her new position to gain her a place with Warlord Zsinj, but after seeing the New Republic's actions from the other side, she decided to remain as Lara and break off all ties with the Empire. However, she re-used the Gara Petothel identity after she was exposed by Garik Loran's investigations and fled the Wraiths, in order to gain access to Zsinj and the Iron Fist. She claimed to be working for the Empire again, but instead managed to severely disable the Iron Fist before fleeing to Corellia and adopting the identity of Kirney Slane. (WS, IF, SOC)

Petrakis

this planet was the site of an Imperial base during the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Petranaki

this was the ritualistic form of arena-based martial arts that was developed by the Geonosian race. It centered on the use of specialized weaponry - known as the petranaki array - which changed very little over the course of Geonosian history. (GORW)

Petrana-ki

this was the term used by the Geonosians to describe the gladiator fights that were used to settle disputes. Based on ancient tradition, the petrana-ki allowed an individual of a lesser caste to win their way to fame or redemption. This tradition was broken by Hadiss the Vaulted, who used the petrana-ki as a way to dispose of his enemies and any being who opposed him. (SWI60)

Petranaki Array

this was the name given to the five traditional weapons used by Geonosian warriors who practiced the petranaki form of martial arts. The weapon in the array were the picador's spear, the confessor's whip, the petranaki scimitar, the caster's net, and the beastwarden's shield. (GORW)

Petranaki Scimitar

this was one of the five traditional Geonosian weapons that made up the petranaki array. The petranaki scimitar was a simple, curved blade, which was honed to razor-sharpness. It was generally considered the most useful and popular of the weapons in the petranaki array. Some warriors referred to this weapon as the butcher's scimitar. (GORW)

Petrax Historical Quarter

this was one of the oldest continually inhabited areas of the cityscape that covered the planet Coruscant, during the height of the New Order. Located north of the Imperial Palace, the Petrax Quarter was not immune to the continual, layered growth experienced on Coruscant, but excavations of its deepest layers has revealed a wealth of archaeological data. Most of the residents were human, and the inhabitants did little to promote its "historical significance." (CCW)

Petrivoor, Klendost

this was the alias used by Drenn, the Imperial spy known as the Wraith, during the time he spent on Sebiris researching new toxins and poisons. (DARK)

Petro

a hot-tempered Imperial officer on Cilpar, he detested Alliance pacifists. He had a special hatred of survivors of Alderaan. (XWRS)

Petro, Gyla

a biologist who studied the various plant forms on the planet Kashyyyk, Gyla Petro was one of the first xenobiologists to discover that the plantlife found in the lowest sections of Kashyyyk's jungle were able to communicate with each other, as well as with the Wookiees. Originally native to the planet Kalgo 13, Gyla was waylaid on Kashyyyk by an Imperial detachment that was trying to capture Wookiee slaves. She was rescued by Han Solo and Chewbacca, and helped them obtain orga roots for a Life Day ceremony. (EGC, LAT2)

Pets 'n' Pieces

located at 250 Pom Plaza, in the CoCo District of Coruscant's Galactic City, this was the largest pet dealership found in the planet during the last decades of the Old Republic. Their motto was "If you can't find it in our store, then it may find you!" Pets 'n' Pieces specialized in the sale, care, and maintenance of rare and dangerous creatures, and was even advertising the sale of sarlacc spores at one time. (HNN5)

Petson Lizzie

this small-time criminal made a meager living on the Outland Transit Station, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. (BH)

PetVac

this was a veterinary operation located in Lola Curich, on Lianna. (ML)

Pex, Tristan

this man, a native of the planet Chandrila, spent more than twelve years off-planet training for his career as the primary bodyguard to the planetary Governor. What Pex worked hard to hide was the fact that most of his career away from Chandrila was spent in the employment of the Benelex Guild, where he worked as a bounty hunter. During the early years of the New Republic, Pex was killed by Ratambo Gale, as part of a plot to rattle the confidence of Governor Jovive Centi. (CCW)

Pezzle

this man accused Lope of trying to welch out of a deal they had, during Lope's interview with Arwen Cohl. Pezzle and three of his goons tried to corner Lope, but Lope's swift gunslinging shot all four down before they could draw their own weapons. (COD) produced by Hadrassi Emergency Medial Systems Technologies, this plasma protein synthesizer was created to provide a short-term source of blood plasma serums. It used local organic materials to synthesize the serums, which could sustain the life of a being until proper medical attention could be obtained. (GFT) this man served as one of Imperial Lord Dixon's personal bodyguards. However, he was not stupid, and would surrender if he knew he was outgunned. (SWCP)

PFG-700

Pfistak

Pfith

this thistle-like plant was native to the Yuuzhan Vong homeworld fo Yuuzhan'tar. (SWI64)

PG-5

this was the designation of a series of gunnery droids which were prototyped by Industrial Automaton during the New Order. They were originally designed to augment the crews of Imperial warships with mechanical weapons, shield, and sensor operators. The PG-5 series was based on the P2 astromech design from IA, making it a large, bulky machine which was programmed to operate, repair, and maintain the ship's systems. However, these droids had to communicate via scomp link, limiting their usefulness in combat. Also, their programming was not voerly aggressive, so their ability to shoot down a target in battle was minimal at best. After the Empire rejected the prototypes it ordered from IA, the PG-5 series was discontinued. (FTD)

PG-7u

a short range primary threat analysis grid. (SCRE)

Pg'lax

this entrepreneurial Verpine established the Quick Pit docking bay service on the outskirts of Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine, during the early years of the New Order. Much of his day was spent moving from ship to ship with his crew, servicing his customers and gathering their docking fees. He was also vigilant about protecting his crews, and was not afraid to confront the private docking bay owners either verbally or with a blaster. Pg'lax himself was born in the Roche system, and was noted for his love of racing. He became one of the most successful crew leaders on the professional swoop racing circuit, and was on Tatooine when his success caught up with him. A group of rival crews waylaid Pg'lax and his team, sabotaging their starship and stranding them on Tatooine. A brief career as a mechanic at the Mos Espa Grand Arena was followed by another attempt to destroy his career, and Pg'lax fled to Mos Eisley. There, he discovered his niche as a starship servicer, and he eventually was able to earn enough credits to start the Quick Pit operation. (GMR7)

Pg'lax

this was acommon name among the Verpine race. (UANT)

PH-5s

a model of long-range phased tachyon array. (XW)

Phaa Anor

this Yuuzhan Vong, a member of the Intendent caste, was a creche'-mate of Nom Anor. During the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Phaa Anor served as a subordinate under his cousin, until Nom Anor began to fail in his missions. When the Executor fled Corsucant on a search for Zonama Sekot, he maintained a villip which communicated with Phaa Anor. Nom Anor hoped that Phaa Anor would relay the message that Zonama Sekot had been found, and would soon be destroyed. Phaa Anor reluctantly agreed to bring the message to Supreme Overlord Shimrra, despite the fact that it might cost him his life. (FP)

this rocky, backwater planet was Kir Kanos' destination, after he fled Zaddja in order to escape the plans of Carnor Jax. It was a fairly obscure world, which suited the smugglers and thieves which inhabited it just fine. An Imperial garrison was placed there to ensure the locals remained quiescent, and it remained in place well after the Battle of Endor. Kanos was forced to kill several Imperial officers and a squadron of stormtroopers in order to gain his freedom. Colonel Shev, who witnessed first-hand the skills of Kanos, sought to capture him in order to secure a promotion. The planet has two moons, a larger brown moon, and a smaller green moon. (CE)

Phaeda's Hope

this Gallofree Medium Transport was part of the small group of New Republic ships stationed on the planet Phaeda. It was flown by Massimo, who delivered the ship to Wedge Antilles aboard the Lusankya after they defeated Colonel Shev and Commander Vivant. (CE)

Phahg

this Yuuzhan Vong word was used to indicate an individual's disgust at a given situation. (EVR)

Phalaf

this priest was one of Vetter Piin's chief aides. During an attempt to assassinate Chrysalla, Phalaf was captured by the Satab's guards and imprisoned. During the Satab's banquet to honor Han Solo's saving of Tieress Chrysalla, the Satab killed Phalaf by raising his metabolism with the Shadeshine and aging him until he died. (LTA5, MCA2)

Phalanx

a Habeen CR90 Corvette, this ship was one of the original CR90s produced. The Habeen used the outdated ship to protect their hidden research base. (TIE)

Phalanx

this New Republic Majestic-class battle cruiser served under the Fifth Battle Group. It suffered major damage during the unsuccessful blockade of Doornik-319. It was attempting to recover a damaged E-Wing fighter with one of its tractor beams, when it took a direct hit to the bow. The first fourteen decks were damaged. (SOL)

Phalanx Decode

this was an Alliance encryption algorithm. (HAS)

Phaldri Nex

this Twi'lek once served as Ema Slake's manager, but retired from the entertainment business. He initially denounced O'lif Khaz, after it was alleged that the Kubaz stole some trophies from Slake's estate on Oseon 5631. Later, however, Nex provided information to the authorities that helped implicate Sosten Freet as the real thief. (GMR5)

Phalla

this man was known at the Q'Maere Research Facility as the "patient facilitator," a position which gave him plenty of leeway to torture his patients as he saw fit. To visitors and his fellow doctors, Phalla was a polite and cheerful fellow, with a cherub-like face and intense passion for his work. (KR)

Phanan

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Phanan, Ton

this native of Rudrig was a pilot with the New Republic, and he was one of the original members of Wraith Squadron. Ton was the only son of parents who had him late in life, and they both died before he finished his education. e served as a doctor aboard an Alliance medical frigate during the Battle of Endor, but his ship was hit by a barrage of Imperial laser fire. A structural beam fell on him, causing massive amounts of damage to his skull. As a result, he wore a prosthetic headgear that covered most of his face, but his remaining blue eye and flowing moustahces gave him the appearance of an Imperial warlord. The prosthetics were necessary because Ton was allergic to bacta. He served as Wraith Squadron's medical officer. During the battle which resulted in the destruction of the Implacable near Ession, Phanan's X-Wing took a hit and he was forced to eject. Shrapnel from the explosion perforated his spleen, and he spent some time on Borleias recovering. Once again, he was unable to receive bacta treatments, and his recovery was slow. He eventually rejoined the Wraiths, and was instrumental in the early stages of the hunt for Warlord Zsinj. However, during the Hawk-bat raid on the Imperial garrison in Hullis, on the planet Halmad, Ton was shot down in his TIE fighter by an Imperial pilot. His landing was too hard to pull out of, and he suffered massive internal injuries in the crash. He was rescued by Garik Loran, who managed to avoid Imperial patrols to get them closer to his own ship. However, before they could escape the planet, Ton died of his injuries. As he was requested, Face burned Phanan's body, leaving nothing but ashes for the Imperials to find. In his will, he left Face a large sum of money, payable only if Face had the large scar on his face surgically removed. If the scar wasn't removed, the money went to Loran's arch-nemesis, Tetran Cowall. (WS, IF) this was the based form of military unit which made up the Chiss armed forces. Each of the twenty-eight Chiss colony worlds was required to send a complete Phalanx to Csilla, where they were integrated into the Army and Navy controlled by the Nuruodo family. (GMR5)

Phantasm

this was the name of Xaverri's personal starship. (THG)

Phantele

a Ripoblus shuttle operative during the Sepan Civil War. It was used to transport Ripoblus diplomats to Sepan 8 for negotiations with the Dimok in which they agreed to fight together against the Empire. (TIE)

Phantom Laser

this Mrlssti technology was used by commandos and other warriors. Essentially, the phantom laser was a weapon which emitted a blast of light like a normal blaster, but the light was harmless to living tissue. (XWM)

Phantom Menace, The

this was the title of Episode I of Star Wars, as supposedly documented in the Journal of the Whills. (TPM)

Phantom Project

the codename of the Mrlssti project to develop a working cloaking device for the Empire. It was developed by Rorax Falken and the Mrlssti students working for him, and was essentially a smoke-screen designed to swindle the Empire out of every credit it would pay. Funds for the Phantom Project were diverted to other research under Falken's control, a fact that went unnoticed under Palpatine's reign. Following the death of Palpatine at Endor, the remnants of the Empire began demanding results from Falken, who had suffered a breakdown upon learning of the use of his work in the construction of the Death Star. Gyr Keela, who succeeded Falken as President of the Academy, was unaware that the Phantom Project was a faked, and attempted to deal with the Empire. He decided to gain every credit possible by putting the Project up for bids to the New Republic and the remnants of the Empire. Wedge Antilles became the Republic's representative in the negotiations for the Phantom's plans, opposite his old nemesis Loka Hask. The proposed design of the Phantom Project was unique in that it required very little energy to maintain the cloaking effect over an entire ship. It also had the ability to resist the effects of a gravity well projector. The falsehood of the Project was revealed when Rogue Squadron defeated Loka Hask and discovered - from Falken's students - that the project was not real. However, it did lead to the discovery of the gravitic polarization beam. (XWPA)

Phantom TIE

see V38 (ECH)

Pharine Delta

this wide delta formed the mouth of the Pharine River, where it emptied into the Tsilor Sea, just north of New Plympto's capital city of Phemiss. (CCW)

Pharine Sea

located on the planet New Plympto, this body of water formed one of the boundaries of the city of Phemiss. (CCW)

PharmCorp

this was the largest corporation based exclusively on the planet Nubia. PharmCorp produced a wide variety of agricultural and pharmaceutical products. Unknown to most Nubians, PharmCorp was actually owned by Prall the Hutt. (CCW)

Pharnas

one of the two moons of Kerest colonized by the Kerestians. (GG12)

Pharos

one of several medical frigates used by the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ10)

Pharple

this avian creature, native to the planet Lok, was often found in large flocks. (GQRG)

Pharynx Tube

Phase 3

this exo-shell deflector shield generator was adapted for ground vehicle use by Rothana Heavy Engineering, and was first used on the TX-130 Saber-class fighter tank during the Clone Wars. The Phase 3 could absorb incredible amounts of incoming fire, but had to be taken briefly offline to recharge. The modified Phase 3 units installed on TX-130 tanks were exceptionally quick to recharge, but required that the tanks employ augmented hull plating. (OWS, WOTC)

Phateem

this planet served as the site of the Jedi Order's Halls of Knowledge, during the height of the Old Republic. (PJSB)

Phazer

a Nharwaak CR90 corvette group that tried to interrupt the negotiations between Admiral Zaarin and the Habeen, in which the two sides were solidifying a deal to trade hyperdrive technology. (TIE)

Ph'dan

a M'haeli youth who hung around with N'ton. He and N'ton were among the few who realized that Ch'no could read the time-streams correctly, while the other elders scoffed and ridiculed him for taking in the human child, Mora. Ph'dan and N'ton were among the first H'drachi to join the Alliance. (ROC)

Ph'dan

a M'haeli elder, who was the father of the youth R'dan. He was captured by Governor Grigor and forced to reveal the location of Ch'no. He also betrayed Mora to Grigor, telling the Governor about her true identity. (ROC)

Phecnacine

this was a powerful animal tranquilizer that was developed during the height of the New Order. (GQRG)

Phedroi

this alien, easily distinguished by his mucous-lined nasopharynx, joined up with Vol Hamame after the human left Big Gizz's swoop gang. They went into the information business, primarily stealing what he couldn't obtain himself in the city of Mos Eisley. The last job they took came as a result of Dengar's trying to alert Kuat of Kuat that Boba Fett was still alive. Hamame and Phedroi figured that they could kill the armored bounty hunter and reap a nice profit for delivery of his body. However, Fett and Dengar managed to elude them long enough to get a signal to Slave I. Hamame and Phedroi pinned the bounty hunters down in a small desert cave, but Fett brought his ship from orbit to land on top of them. (MA)

this was one of the largest cities found on the planet Eriadu. (HNN4)

Phelar Port

this spaceport was located in the city of Phelar, on the planet Eriadu. Shortly before the Clone Wars, the Jedi Knights established a starfighter base at Phelar Port, in an effort to bolster security in the Seswenna Sector. (HNN5)

Phelarion

the Lady Tarkin maintained Imperial control of this world after the death of her husband, the Grand Moff Tarkin. She controlled a megonite moss mining operation there, providing a source of explosives for the Empire, in memory of her husband. (CSWEA)

Phelleem Sector

this area of the galaxy was known as the home of the ancient Kashi Mer dynasty. (TOJC)

Phelly

this Imperial Navy Lieutenant served as a helmsman aboard the Lusankya, under the command of Jaak Drysso during the Battle of Thyferra. (BW)

Phemis

this planet was believed to have been the only source of rubat crystals, which could be used by the ancient Jedi Knights in the construction of a lightsaber. (KOTOR)

Phemiss

this was the capital city of the planet New Plympto, nestled between the Tsilor Sea and the Pharine River. Much of the city's roadways were connected in an intricate, circular network that meandered around the living quarters of the native Nosaurians. Offworlders were advised to leave the driving to the natives when they visited Phemiss. (CCW)

Phemiss Bridge

this was one of many bridges leading into the city of Phemiss, on the planet New Plympto. This was the main bridge used by the Nosaurian race. (CCW)

Phemiss Low Port

this was the best of the three spaceports found in the capital city of Phemiss, on the planet New Plympto. A collection of shanties was established on the outskirts of the spaceport, built by clanless Nosaurians who turned to panhandling to earn a living. (CCW)

Phenaru Prime

a mythical world created to help Rogue Squadron plan its second attack on Borleias, the name was intended to throw off any Imperial interception of the plan's details. Phenaru Prime was given an asteroid belt and new land/ocean configurations to further mask it from Borleias. (XWN)

Phenets

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Phenets, Lee

this man was a Cloud City maintenance specialist whose job, under Lando Calrissian, was to keep the city running smoothly. He was one of the few humans on the station to be respected for his work by the Ugnaughts. (CCG5)

Phennir, Turr

this Imperial Navy officer commanded the 181st Imperial Fighter Group in the period after Soontir Fel defected from Imperial service. He had admired Fel, and had been Fel's wingman during much of their campaign against the Alliance and the New Republic. Phennir joined the Empire shortly after his older brother was shot down and killed by Wedge Antilles during the Battle of Yavin. Phennir was later chosen for the 181st by Fel himself, and was promoted to Commander after his personally killing four Alliance transports in the ambush at Derra IV. Phennir was given command of a squadron in the 181st, while Fel was promoted to Colonel and command of the entire group. Phennir held little loyalty to Sate Pestage, and hoped that Fel would leave Imperial service to form his own group of Imperials. Phennir planned to defect with Fel, but was left out of the Baron's plans entirely. This left Phennir with a deep hatred of Fel. He became the more decorated Imperial pilot in the wake of Fel's disappearance, and was nominated to represent the Empire when the planet Adumar chose to become part of the galactic community. He found himself working against Wedge Antilles and the pilots of Rogue Squadron while on Adumar, but had no qualms about shooting down every Adumari pilot who challenged him. In the civil war which broke out as a result of Cartann's claim to be the seat of Adumar's world government, Phennir and his pilots sided with the nation of Cartann. However, they were all shot down by Wedge and his pilots, who were flying for the Yedagonian Confederacy. Phennir managed to survive, and fled back to the Agonizer. When the Star Destroyer returned to Adumar to take the world from the Republic, it met with serious resistance from a massed Republic defense fleet. Phennir was shot down in battle, and was left to freeze in space until a rescue could be mounted. (SOC, SOA, CCG11)

Pheron, Tazur

this man was an official Knight who served House Mecetti in the Tapanu Sector of the galaxy. Sir Pheron was the grand-nephew of Lord Bode' Leobund XI himself, and was known as a courageous - if not reckless - soldier and protector. (TSIA)

Phibian Beer

this was a popular beer that was brewed during the Clone Wars. (MBS)

Phidna

this Geonosian parasite was cultivated by the Geonosians in hydroponic gardens, where the parasite thrived but could also be controlled. The exertions of the phidna were mixed with powdered stone to create a kind of concrete, which was used by the Geonosians in the construction of their hive spires. (VD2)

P'hiili

this was an aquatic creature that was once native to the planet Yuuzhan'tar. The p'hiili was distinguished by its shrill cry, and was often kept in ponds or moats outside a residence as a kind of organic alarm system. P'hiili would eat just about anything that came into their reach, a trait which made them useful as guards. (FP)

Phil-fiber

this material was used to make inexpensive clothing and other textiles. The organic nature of phil-fiber meant that, if not properly cared for, it could become rotten and unravel. (EVR)

Philinda

this attractive woman was part of a Cularin delegation to Uffel, some years after the Battle of Naboo, which traveled to the moon to see the droid production facilities there. Philinda drew the attention of Jedi Knight San Herrera, who followed her every move, much to the dismay of his partner, Nia Reston. (WOTC)

Phindar

this planet was the homeworld of the Phindian race. Very few off-worlders visited the planet, which suited the Phindians just fine. (HP)

Phindar

this was another name used to describe the members of the Phindian race. (HP)

Phindar Spaceport

this was the primary spaceport found on the planet Phindar, during the last decades of the Old Republic. The native Phindians proclaimed that the spaceport was the "Gateway to the Outer Rim." (YDR)

Phindian

this race of tall, mournful aliens has fair skin and long, rubbery arms. Phindians were distinguished by their eyes, which were yellow with red streaks. They are native to the planet Phindar, and are sometimes referred to as Phindar. They are a race of isolationists, preferring to remain on Phindar and keep other peoples off their planet. However, they realize that interstellar trade is good for their planet, and suffer through it. As a people, Phindians maintained strong family ties, and could be stubborn in virtually any aspect of their lives. (DR, HP, UANT, YDR)

Phindian

this was the spoken language of the Phindian race, consisting of soft sibilants and long vowel sounds. (UANT)

Phineas, Milo

this former Imperial Navy Captain retired from active duty and joined the Corporate Sector's own naval fleet. He served under Commander Baruche Sloane, counterpointing Sloane's own icy demeanor. A short, stocky man, Phineas always wore a disarming smile which belied his cold, calculating mind. He uses this trait to gain the confidence of those he's investigating, then he arrests them. (TSK)

Phin-Mar, Ermin

this Old Republic explorer and archaeologist was the first individual to discover the Oracle at Pelgrin, some 3,000 years before the Battle of Naboo. Phin-Mar's initial work on Pelgrin led to the assertion that the device was used as an astronomical computer that could help the extinct pelgrin race predict certain future events. Thus, the device became known as the Oracle. Phin-Mar assumed that the Oracle was operated by dozens of Pelgrins, but no amount of effort on the exploration team's part could make it work. Only the presence of several Jedi Knights, most notably Shannur Darkstar, brought to light the Oracle's true source of power. (PJSB)

Phiris

this temperate world was the sixth planet in the Empress Teta System, and was orbited by two moons. (PH)

Phizbin

this simple game was favored by starship pilots. (SWJ4)

Phizbin Marsh

this was an artificial marsh, created on the Ugnought Surface as a reminder of the marshes of the planet Gentes. It was located near the primary city of Ugnorgrad. (PH)

Phizz

this was a soft drink favored by the youth of the galaxy, during the height of the New Order. (T15)

Phlac-Arphocc Automata Industries

this manufacturer of combat droids produced the Tri-fighters, along with Colla Designs, used by the Confederacy of Independent Systems during the height of the Clone Wars. Phlac-Arphocc also produced the superdense, radioactive fuels used by HMP droid gunships and other Separatist vessel. (X3)

Phlegmin

Porcellus' kitchen boy while he worked in Jabba the Hutt's palace. Like Ak-Buz, Porcellus found Phlegmin dead in the kitchens of an unknown cause, although Porcellus feared that it had something to do with fierfek brought on by his hatred of Jabba. (TJP)

Phlik

this Shistavenan wolfman lurked in the Mos Eisley cantina some years after the Battle of Yavin. He was secretly recruiting Alliance agents when he met Garve. Garve's delivery of Imperial prisoners - liberated from the Jellyfish Cove penal facility - gave Phlik a large number of recruits to process. (SWG4, TMEC)

Phlog

this race of giant creatures inhabited the Simoon desert on Endor's forest moon. Normally peaceful, the phlogs became dangerous when disturbed. They once tried to chop down the father trees of the forests to build a new castle, but were driven away by Wicket, Kneesaa, and their friends. (ECAR)

Phloid

this shy, squat man served as the computer technician of the Q'Maere Research Facility, during the time Moff Sarne used the facility as a penal colony. (KR)

Phlors Regina

this gas giant, the twin of Phlors Rex, was the seventh planet of the Axum System, located in the Core Worlds. It was orbited by 15 moons. (CCW)

Phlors Rex

this gas giant, the twin of Phlors Regina, was the sixth planet of the Axum System, located in the Core Worlds. It was orbited by 18 moons. (CCW)

Phluche Maltrid

this stooped Herglic was distinguished by his eerie, wandering stare. He made a modest living renting hydrobikes in the resort community of Le Yer, on Abregado-Rae, during the New Order. (ND)

Phluche's Hydrobike Rentals

this small business was owned by Phluche Maltrid, and provided tourists with transportation between Phyrstal Island and Le Yer, on the planet Abregado-Rae. (ND)

Phlut Design Systems

this weapons development corporation was based on Muunilinst during the last decades of the Old Republic. Shortly after the Battle of Naboo, PDS tried to secure a huge loan from the InterGalactic Banking Clan for the development of a battle droid it hoped to sell to the Trade Federation. When PDS defaulted on a payment, the IBC foreclosed immediately, taking possession of all the corporation's assets. The new battle droid design, known as the IG Lancer droid, was eventually provided to the Trade Federation. (SWDB)

Phlynne, Hallyn

this Imperial Navy Captain commanded the Guardian-class customs ship Interceptor, patrolling the Elin Roe System during the height of the New Order. A businesslike officer whose demeanor was anything but rude, Phlynne had a single weakness: pretty women. (SWJ2)

Pho

this was the name of a family that was native to the planet Corphelion. In reality, the Pho family was a carefully constructed set of aliases developed for Jedi Masters Jai Maruk and Maks Leem, and their Padawans, Tallisibeth Enwandung-Esterhazy and Whie Malreaux, during their secret mission to Vjun at the height of the Clone Wars. According to their background history, the Pho family was traveling back to Corphelion for the wedding of a cousin. (YDR)

Pho Ph'eah

a planet, homeworld of the Pho Ph'eahians. It is a world of varying terrain and little warmth, for it orbits a long distance from its sun. It is warmed by active geothermal energy. (HSR, CSA)

Pho Ph'eahese

this was the native language of the Pho Ph'eahian race. In its spoken form, Pho Ph'eahese was a sophisticated language made up of squeaks, squeals, and barks. The written form consisted of intricate characters used to represent spoken syllables. (UANT)

Pho Ph'eahian

a blue-furred, four-armed race native to Pho Ph'eah, the Pho Ph'eahians evolved from mountain-dwelling hunters. The Pho Ph'eahians contacted the Old Republic several millennia ago, offering to share their technology. They had developed nuclear fusion and limited spaceflight capabilities on their own, and quickly availed themselves of the Republic's technology. The average Pho Ph'eahian was impeccably clean, as they believed that their bodies were sacred manifestations of their spirit. As a people, Pho Ph'eahians were outgoing and cheerful, and loved to be the center of attention. (HSR, CSA, EGA, UANT)

Phoah-Kingsmeyer

manufacturers of shipboard shield projectors and shield screen controls. (SCRE)

Phobium

a metallic alloy based on the ore chanlon, phobium was used to coat the power core of the Death Star. Much of the phobium mined during the construction of the second Death Star came from the planetoid Dor. Note that The Glove of Darth Vader claims that phobium was mined directly from the planet Gargon. (GDV, LOE, GMR9)

Phobos

this was a common name given to male Duros children. The name Probos came from the term meaning "inspiring". (GCG)

Phoebe

this Hiromi served as an Ensign aboard Hookyr the First's flagship Kuratcha, during Operation Glorious Destiny - the attempted subjugation of the planet Zeltros shortly after the Battle of Endor. After Hirog's efforts resulted in the capture of the royla kitchens on Zeltros, Ensign Phoebe took command of the operation but found no victory in sight for the Hiromi. Her communications back to the Kuratcha suggested that the Hiromi break off their invasion of Zeltros and find another - less populated - world to invade. (MC104, PH)

Phoebos

this being is generally considered the father of modern pod racing. A mechanic by trade, Phoebos was credited with being the first to attach repulsor-equipped cockpits to jet engines to create an incredibly fast racing machine. These machines eventually became known as Podracers. (X1, SWK)

Phoebos Memorial Run

this pod racing event, which took place in tandem with the Vinta Harvest Classic, was named in honor of the founder of modern pod racing, Phoebos. It was held on the planet Malastare, and was considered one of the most demanding races on the professional circuit because of the complete variety of terrains it covered. (ETM)

Phoebus

a planet. (T15)

Phoedris Bos

this Nalrithian was Cypher Bos' eggmate, although Phoedris Bos joined the Alliance. He often worked with the Chadra-Fan Baajik, since he was stationed on Ord Mantell. However, Baajik sold Phoedris out to his eggmate brother, who was trying to hunt down Han Solo. Cypher Bos killed Phoedris in combat, then assumed his identity in order to infiltrate an Alliance mission to Ord Mantell in order to get close to Solo. (RMOM, SWG5)

Phoenix

an Imperial modified CR90 Corvette assigned to defend the Habeen research base against any Nharwaak assault. (TIE)

Phoenix

an Imperial freighter captured by Keyan Farlander on a solo mission designed to help him come out of the shell he formed after losing a number of wingmen in battle. (XW)

Phoenix Hawk-class Light Pinnace

this small transport ship resembled the Firespray-class patrol craft, but actually pre-dated that craft. Designated the S40K, the Phoenix Hawk-class pinnace was one of the first ships designed and built by Kuat Systems Engineering, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. These craft were designed to carry a small group of individuals across large distances of space. The designs goals were admirable: create a transport craft that was affordable by all classes of society, bringing space travel to as many beings as possible. However, in order to accomplish this goal, KSE cut as many corners as possible to keep costs down. Accommodations within the Phoenix Hawk-class were cramped at best, and there were few amenities to be had for refitting the ship. Compounding these problems was the ungainly appearance of the Phoenix Hawk-class pinnace, which resembled an overweight version of the Firespray. It measured 19.2 meters in length, and could accommodate up to four passengers. It required a pilot and co-pilot to operate, and was armed with a pair of heavy blaster cannons and two light ion cannons for defense. (WOTC, SOG, JT)

Phoenix II

this plasma disruptor was produced by the Drever Corporation during the last decades of the Old Republic, as a tool that was marketed to customs agents and law enforcement agencies. The Phoenix II used a beam of plasma energy to alter the molecular structure of a material, essentially breaking its chemical bonds and "disintegrating" it. The Phoenix II was primarily designed to break through locked doors, allowing access to hidden compartments and rooms where contraband might have been hidden. Soldiers and mercenaries who discovered the Phoenix II began to use it for offensive purposes, prompting Drever to develop the DN Bolt Caster. (LAWS)

Phoenix Plasma Punch

this plasma cutter was one of Drever Corporation's most successful products. It employs a circular stream of plasma energy to cut holes in nearly any material. It is extremely effective and reliable as a tool, but has a limited range of operation. Thus, unlike other plasma cutters, its use as a weapon is minimal. The Phoenix Plasma Punch could have been even more popular, but Drever didn't widely market it. (GG9)

Pholikite

this ore was mined by a colony of Andalese and Morath settlers on the planet Elcorth, before the Yevethan Great Purge wiped out the settlement. (TT)

Phon

this was a Yuuzhan Vong measure of distance. Although its exact distance was not known, a phon was believed to be a measure of a kilometer or more. (EVR, UF)

Phonane Mimesis Studios

this company specialized in the creation of animatronic puppets and other forms of modeling. They were quite skilled in recreating the human form, and were called upon by Khoss of Knylenn to create the intricate life-support system which housed the long-dead Knylenn elder. (SLS)

Phond

this was one of the many crystals used by the ancient Sith Lords in the construction of a lightsaber. It was believed to have given the wielder the ability to cause more damage to an opponent with each blow from the lightsaber. Phond itself was the unusual amalgamation of rare impurities from the production of alloys, bonded together during a random series of events. (KOTOR)

Phontos

this Ithorian infochant worked from an apartment in the Grill section of Shulell, on Lan Barell. He maintained a tropical garden in his luxurious apartments, and always conducted his business within the apartment. Rumors abounded that he was a fugitive from Imperial justice, but Phontos remained mute on his origins. (PSG)

Phootie

this Pho Ph'eahian and his Kitonak partner were a comedy act which performed during the Clone Wars.

They arrived on the planet Haruun Kal on the Halleck, along with Mace Windu, who was traveling to his homeworld to locate Deppa Billaba. (SHPT)

Phorliss

a planet on which Mara Jade posed as a serving girl in a cantina. She had fled to the planet after escaping from Ysanne Isard, shortly after the death of Emperor Palpatine. (DFR)

Phoros

this temperate world was the seventh planet in the Empress Teta System, and was orbited by a single moon. (PH)

Phosflea

this small, glowing gnat was native to the planet Kashyyyk. The Wookiees captured quantities of these insects and kept them in mesh containers. If properly cared for, the phosfleas provided a free, non-polluting light source. The phosfleas were usually caught with a special pheromone-based lure. They gave off a pinkish light. The body of the phosflea was elongated, and protected by a hard, chitinous shell that made them exceptionally durable insects. (DK, GMR4)

Phosflea Lantern

this was the term used by the Wookiees to indicate a lighting instrument that used live phosfleas as the source of the light. (GMR4)

Phosovane Salts

this substance is used as a base for creating painkillers, and was created on Attahox. Much of the exportation of phosovane is controlled by the Exalted Torcaine. (CSWDW)

Phospha

this substance is used by detonation experts. It ignites on impact, and can be used to trigger larger explosives. (CFG)

Phosphor Bug

a small creature native to Belsavis, these nocturnal insects give off bio-luminescent light. (COJ)

Phosphura Belt Nebula

the mysterious space station Zirtran's Anchor suddenly reappeared near this nebula, after disappearing from the Besberra System, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. The nebula glowed with an eerie green, and was wracked with electromagnetic storms. (SWJ5)

Phosphura Belt Pirates

this group of highly-organized pirates patrolled the Phosphura Belt Nebula, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Based on the Zirtran's Anchor space station, the Pirates controlled the section formed from the hulk of the Rusted Cutlass II. The gang was originally formed by Arvo Norstrag, who set forth their Buccaneer Code for all future leaders to follow. (SWJ5)

this is a favored meal of the Ugor race. (SH)

Photon Darts

a bar game which uses light projectiles thrown at a target. (TSK)

Photon Drive

developed by Renatta Racing Systems, this propulsion system was used on their incredibly fast needle ships. Powered by the highly-efficient Tobal lens, Renatta's photon drives used packets of light to drive the ship. (TG)

Photon Spider

this immense arachnid evolved on the planet Varl, after the Hutts destroyed the ecosystem and left it for dead. Measuring up to four meters across, the photon spider was covered by translucent, chitinous armor that was virtually impenetrable. It used each of its twelve eyes to locate prey. The most distinguishing feature of the photon spider was the natural energy it could unleash through its spinneret, which earned it the name photon spider. The arachnid could fire a bolt of energy that could stun a bantha into submission, and it used its legs and its ability to contort its body to aim the spinneret at a target. (TF)

Photonic Beam Generator (PBG)

the device used by laser weapons to generate coherent packets of destructive energy. (SWSB)

Photoplate

a palm-key device used to lock prison cells. They can only be opened by a guard whose palmprint has been encoded into the plate. (SME)

Photoreceptor

the optical systems that make up a droid's eye(s). (SW)

Phototropic Shield

a shielding system that uses transparent materials such as transparisteel, and turns them into light filters. Phototropic shields absorb or disperse incoming light above a certain brightness, thus allowing the individual using the material to not be blinded by large amounts of incoming light. (SWN, MC2)

Phracas

this planet is located in the Core. (SOL)

Phraetiss

this planet was the sight of a botched smuggling operation where Lando Calrissian first encountered Niles Ferrier, about 5 years before the Battle of Endor. (DFR)

Phraig

this hardy grass was grown on a number of agricultural worlds. It provided a great deal of nutrition, and was often boiled to create an oatmeal-like mush. (BP)

Phreet, Dipligonai

this was one of the humorous names Garik Loran used for Lara Notsil, after she was mistaken for Edallia Monotheer by an old man on Coruscant. (SOC)

Phrenbi

this Corellian sport was popular among the Whiphids who lived and worked on the planet Neftali. Each phrenbi match involved four teams, each trying to get a large ball or rock - known as a b'rrsk - into an opponent's goal, known as a g'rile. Loosely translated, the term phrenbi meant "to decapitate." Each team starts with 15-20 players, but the physical nature of the sport meant that casualties were inevitable. Once unable to continue playing, a phrenbi player must leave the field of play and could not return or be replaced. Different formats have teams paired against each other, or players using banthas as mounts and moving the b'rrsk about with long sticks called urran. In the basic sport, a phrenbi match is divided into three 30-minutes periods. If more than fifteen injuries result in dismissed players, the match is called on account of attrition. (BSS)

Phrik

this metallic alloy was first created during the Clone Wars, when it was used to create the powerful force pikes used by General Grievous' IG-100 MagnaGuard droids. Phrik was produced when phrikite mineral was refined with tydirium. The alloy was resistant to the energy of a lightsaber, though not as strong as cortosis ore. Years later, use of the phrik alloy was essential in Rom Mohc's Darktrooper program, which mined the component resources from worlds in the Gromas system. Kyle Katarn was able to obtain a piece for analysis by the Alliance, discovering that phrik was extremely light and durable. (DF, LOE, LEV, SWMW)

Phrikite

this rare mineral was mined almost exclusively on Gromas 16, and was the primary component used to create the phrik alloy. (SWMW)

Phrusaani

this Chevin operated the Docking Bay bar on The Life level of Vergesso Base, during the height of the New Order. He usually played music by Figrin D'an and the Modal Nodes, since they were his favorite jazz band. (SPG)

Ph'ton

this Bith served as a Jedi Master during the height of the Clone Wars. Some two year after the Battle of Geonosis, Master Ph'ton was placed in charge of the mission to ensure Alderaan's freedom, after a small fleet of Separatist warships arrived in the Alderaan System. Master Ph'ton was somewhat dismayed when Flynn Kybo stole a Delta-7 interceptor and fled from Alderaan, fearing that the young Padawan had turned to the Dark Side of the Force. Master Ph'ton was unaware that Kybo had actually left the Jedi Order to hunt down General Grievous. (SWG)

Phu

this planet was located on the inner edge of the Colonies Region, and was the homeworld of the Phuii race. (IWE1)

Phuii

this was a race of tall, duck-billed humanoids which were native to the planet Phu. (IG1, IWE1)

Phulik

this Imperial Navy Captain defected from service to join Prince-Admiral Krennel in the Ciutric Hegemony. Phulik commanded the Interdictor-class cruiser Binder during the blockade of Liinade III, in an effort to bring New Republic ships out of hyperspace before they could deliver supplies to the planet. (IR)

Phuna, T. Lund

the constable and local law officer working on Oseon 2795 when Lando Calrissian stopped there. Phuna was employed by the Administrator Senior of Oseon to keep an eye on the mining operation. He was a chain-smoker, and slightly obese. When Lando started winning more than Phuna cared to lose, he tried to plant a cheater in Lando's clothing, but he was caught by Arun Feb. (LCM)

Phuur Arm

this section of the Yuuzhan Vong worldship Baanu Miir became unbearably cold shortly after the rikyam of the worldship began to die. While the Toohi Sector was filled with noxious fumes, as the rikyam began venting half-digested waste into the area, the Phuur Arm's life support systems failed from the outermost point inward. This displaced a number of Shamed Ones who had been working on the ship. (EVR)

Phwoar

this was a Mandalorian expletive. (RCHC)

Phyll

a leafy, plant-like alien Lando Calrissian cons into a sabacc match at Teguta Lusat. (LCM)

Phylon Freight

manufacturers of star freighters. (XW)

Phylon Transport

manufacturers of tractor beam equipment. (SCRE, EGW)

Phylus Mon

this Chevin criminal was hired by Rufus Trammel to serve as his boss on Genarius, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Many minor underworld criminals feared that Mon would move in and begin a new branch of his slave trade in the Cularin System. They were worried that this would cut into the profits of Nirama's own slaving organization, and set off a war between the largest criminal organizations in the Cularin System. (LFCW)

Phyrstal Island

this small piece of land was part of the Le Yer resort community, located on the planet Abregado-Rae. It was known as a haven for eccentric arists and entertainers. (ND)

Physical Calculus

this is the ancient Elomic art of logical problem solving. A balance table and a set of colored, hemispherical weights is used to determine which of two arguments is more valid. The balance table floats above a small repulsorlift pylon. The use of physical calculus can be modified by weighting the table in specific ways, depending on the individual circumstances of the situation. (TT)

Physical Force

this was the facet of The Force which allowed a Jedi to use the Force to manipulate objects around him. This facet complimented the Living Force, which connected a Jedi Knight to the living beings which surrounded him, and the Unifying Force, which focused on the future and its bearing on a Jedi's place in the present. It was this aspect of the Force which garnered the most attention during the training of most Jedi during the last decades of the Old Republic, a trend that mvoed the Jedi farther and farther away from understanding exactly what the Force was. (TPM, JQ3, PJSB, JQ7)

Phytosus Moss

this form of moss, which was native to the planet Gorothe Prime, was considered a delicacy by the Gorothe people. (GSE)

Pi T'Egal

this Old Republic Senator was known as a friend of the Jedi Knights. He was appointed to lead the committee which was formed to investigate the death of Bruck Chun at the Jedi Temple, on Coruscant, when Vox Chun demanded in inquest. (JAD)

Piani

this female Ryn served as the communications officer at the Settlement Thirty-two refugee camp on Duro, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. She and her family had been transported to Gyndine, shortly before the Vong attacked that world, and Piani's mate had been left behind. She did not know if he survived or not. (BP)

Pic

this Dark Jedi was Gorc's twin, but only in the genetic sense of the word. Where Gorc was a massive humanoid measuring more than two meters in height. Pic was a spindly creature barely over a meter tall. Where Gorc was strong but slow, Pic was quick and agile, prancing around and toying with an opponent until Gorc can step in and deliver a huge blow. When they're not in battle, Pic usually hangs from Gorc's shoulders. Gorc and Pic were defeated by Kyle Katarn during the search for the Valley of the Jedi. (DF2)

Pica Rim Pipeline

this underwater transportation system was located on the planet Albrae-Don. The Justice Action Network attacked the Pipeline, bombing out some 4,000 kilometers worth of track in protest of the execution of Earnst Kamiel. (SWJ10)

Pica Thundercloud

a green, alcoholic beverage which is sipped, rather than mixed or swilled. (TME)

Picador

this was the term used to describe the caste of wingless Geonosian drones who were employed as prison guards and animal controllers. Picadors were revered in that they maintained the collection of unusual beasts used in gladiator-style executions, such as acklays and nexu. The picador caste was unique in that a Geonosian from any other caste could become a picador if they could prove themselves in the battle arena. (AOTCN, VD2)

Picador's Spear

this was one of the five traditional Geonosian weapons that made up the petranaki array. The picador's spear was essentially a static pike with a piercing tip, and was usually thrust at an opponent rather than thrown. Often, the picador's spear was equipped with a small power source to create an electric charge, which was useful in stunning an opponent. (GORW)

Picavil

this city, located on Elshandruu Pica, was the site of the planet's primary starport. (BW)

Pich

this man was one of Coh Veshiv's personal aides. (FOP)

Pickaxe

this mining transport ship, captained by Calquad Domine', remained parked at the Kwilaan starport on Naboo, shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars, in protest of the closing of many Naboo starports to miners and their ships. The Pickaxe and her crew were members of the Naboo Moon Mining Union at the time, and were angry that the planetary government was favoring refugee ships over local mining concerns. (HNN5)

Pickers

this man was one of the many sargeet farmers who suffered through the economic hard times that befell the planet Dagro, during the height of the Clone Wars. His friend, Kirlan Swens, asked him to be part of a farm "chain" that Obi-Wan Kenobi could use to reach Vale City without being spotted, when the Jedi Knight was on Dagro to investigate the possibility of a Separatist base on the planet, some two years after the Battle of Geonosis. He agreed to be one of the farmers who helped Obi-Wan and his Padawan, Anakin Skywalker, located and destroy the last crawl-carrier before it could eliminate a village. (SWI76, SWI77)

Picodroid

this was a term used by the engineers at Cybot Galactica to describe their droid-brain technology. (MJH)

Picutorian, Vensell

a Senex lord for a number of years, he served on the Imperial Senate in Leia Organa's early years as Senator. When Roganda Ismaren began asking for support in recovering the Eye of Palpatine, Picutorian began suggesting that the Senex Houses enter a combined alliance with the Ismaren's Empire, rather than selling out entirely. (COJ)

Picutorion

this planet was the site of a protracted battle during the Galactic Civil War. During the battle, Bevven and Drost were persuaded to sacrifice Ganig and Stecker because of their suspected sympathy for the Alliance. Mar Barezz was the ISB agent who suggested that the Imperials be allowed to die. (ISB)

Pierce, Tagg

this Alliance Lieutenant was dishonorably discharged from active duty because of gross insubordination. Tagg himself claimed that he simply grew tired of fighting for the Alliance and struck out on his own. Eventually, he formed the Laramus Base Irregulars from a nucleus of anti-Imperial soldiers. He was known for his lack of regard for his line officers. (GG9)

Piercer II

the lowest-grade computer spike produced by MicroThrust, the Piercer II has an extremely limited duration of efficiency. (CFG)

Piercer IV

a low-grade computer spike manufactured by MicroThrust. (CFG)

Piercer V

a medium-grade computer spike manufactured by MicroThrust. (CRO)

Pierceskimmer

this large, fishlike predator was believed to have originated on Drexel II, although it can be found on many aquatic worlds across the galaxy. Pierceskimmers are solitary hunters which may gather in small packs to kill large prey. The average specimen measured some 18 meters in length, although individuals of 20 meters or more have been sighted. The most distinguishing feature of the pierceskimmer was the serrated spike that grew from its snout, which could measure over five meters in length and was used to pierce and cut through its prey. Two rows of dorsal fins rose from its back, and its tail was evolved into a paddle-like lobe instead of a crescent. Pierceskimmers were known to kill their prey and then consume only a few bites worth of flesh, leaving the rest of the carcass for aquatic scavengers. (ANT)

Pieteron, Cris

this young Imperial officer was the tractor beam controller aboard the Chimaera, during the reign of Grand Admiral Thrawn. Some five years after the Battle of Endor, he was at the controls when the Chimaera intercepted Luke Skywalker's X-Wing fighter. Pieteron was able to lock onto the small ship, but lost control of it when Luke managed to stop suddenly and fire a pair of proton torpedoes into the beam. His commanding officer, Ensign Colclazure, explained to Thrawn that Pieteron's training hadn't taken the maneuver into account. To show his displeasure with Colclazure's laxity in training, Thrawn had his bodyguard, Rukh, execute Pieteron on the spot. (HTTE)

Piett, Firmus

this Imperial Naval officer had a spotless, highly-commended career in the Empire. A native of Axxila, Firmus Piett gained experience with the Imperial Navy by being posted to his homeworld's anti-pirate fleet. He gained promotions and respect despite the fact that he was born in the Outer Rim, and not the Core Worlds. His leadership was evident even then, as Axxila's sector was quickly free of illegal activity. He was promoted to the rank of Captain, and was first assigned to work under Admiral Griff aboard the Accuser. When Griff was killed at Yavin and was replaced by Admiral Ozzel, Piett took over as Captain of the Executor. During the Battle of Hoth, Piett was promoted to Admiral aboard the Executor by Darth Vader after Ozzel failed to meet the mission objectives as defined by Vader. Piett was killed during the Battle of Endor when the Executor was disabled and crashed into the second Death Star. Piett was portrayed by Kenneth Colley in Star Wars: Episode V - The Empire Strikes Back and Star Wars: Episode VI - Return of the Jedi. Piett was also portrayed by David Rasche in The Empire Strikes Back Radio Drama on National Public Radio. (ESB, ESB, MTS, ROTJ, NEG, TCG7)

Pifgah

this Ansionian expletive was used whenever an individual was frustrated with a situation. (APS)

Pifgot

this Ansionian expletive was used whenever an individual was frustrated with a situation. (APS)

Pig Trough

this was the nickname given by New Republic starfighter pilots to the huge natural fissure found near the base on Folor. It was somewhat anomalous, given Folor's stable tectonics, to find a trench like the Pig Trough, because it runs for several thousand kilometers northeast of the base before turning to the northwest for an even greater distance. The New Republic used it for pilot training runs. (WS)

Piggies

this was the term used by the miners of the moon Tilnes to describe the Caarites they discovered living below the moon's surface. (WOTC)

Piggy

a nickname given to Jek Porkins, as well as Voort saBinring. (SW, WS)

Piggy and the Orbing Nasties

this was one of the loudest, most obnoxious musical groups ever to evolve on the planet Cularin. (WOTC)

Pii

this older, red giant star was the central body of the Pii System, located in the Arkanis Sector of the galaxy. It was surrounded by seven planets, with two asteroid belts littering the system with debris. The first belt was located between the second and third planets, which the second and larger belt was located between the fifth and sixth planets. (SWJ6)

Pii I

one of the two inner-most planets in the Pii System, Pii I was a scorched ball of rock. (SWJ6)

Pii II

one of the two inner-most planets in the Pii System, Pii II was a scorched ball of rock. (SWJ6)

Pii III

this world, like its neighbor Pii IV, was owned by the Greel Wood Logging Corporation and Meysen Kayson. Pii III produced the best grassland scarlet greel wood, which grew in the drier atmosphere on the planet. Pii 3 was once the site of the seventh Duro Relocation Colony, but it was eventually abandoned. The average day on Pii III lasts 18 standard hours. Its year lasts 352 local days. Pii III and Pii IV were known in the Arkanis Sector as Teeda's Eyes. (SWJ6)

Pii IV

this planet was located in the Pii System, which was part of the Arkanis Sector of the Mid Rim. It was owned by Meysen Kayson and the Greel Wood Logging Corporation, which produces much of the galaxy's supply of greel wood. It was a cool, moist world with mountainous terrain. Its day lasts an average of 21 standard hours, and its year lasts 361 local days. This planet produces the band scarlet greel wood. Along with its neighbor Pii III, these worlds are known as Teeda's Eyes. (SWJ6)

Piimi

this Strike-class cruiser was part of the Alliance's fleet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Pika

a fruit tree that grows in the oases on Tatooine. (COJ)

Pika Oasis

this freshwater oasis was located on the planet Tatooine, between the Jundland Wastes and the Mospic High Range. (IWST)

Pikach

this was a valuable gemstone found on the planet Ansion. (APS)

Pikatta Pie

this was a delicious desert served on the planet Teyr. (EGP)

Pike

a Ripoblus assault transport operative during the Sepan Civil War. It was used in the Sepan battles against the Empire. (TIE)

Pike, Dux

this Epicanthrix fighter was skilled in the martial art of teras kasi, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Unfortunately for his wife and twin daughters, Dux Pike was killed just before the Clone Wars in a tournament on Bunduki. He was defeated by Phow Ji, who used a shenbit stonecrusher blow to eliminate Pike. (HNN5)

Pike, Zan

twin sister of Zu Pike, Zan is distinguishable from her sister because she has two green eyes. Like her sister, she is completely amoral but has no criminal record. She is highly-skilled in the Bunduki art of teras kasi, and is available to the highest bidder. Prince Xizor secured her services in his hunt for Luke Skywalker. She was twenty-six standard years old at the time. Later, the sisters worked for Spinda Caveel, trying to recover the human replica droid Guri. However, as the stakes for recovering Guri grew, the sisters opted to get out while the getting was good. Later, the sisters worked for Spinda Caveel, trying this was the name given to one of the primary players on a chin-bret team. Pikers were responsible for vaulting across the playing field to return the opposing team's serves. (TCD)

Piker

Piket Longhorn

this immense herbivore was native to the planet Dantooine, where it spent most of its time grazing in the savannahs that covered much of the planet. Piket longhorns were distinguished by several unusual features. First, the average specimen stood more than five meters in height, although much of that height came from the piket longhorn's tremendous neck. Its body was oddly quite short and stout, and was supported by four thick legs. Their fur was colored to provide them excellent camouflage when lying in the grass. The head of the piket longhorn bore the creature its name. The skull was elongated and covered with horns. Although not normally aggressive, a rogue piket longhorn would always defend his right graze. (ROD)

Pikil, Atresh

this young, black-skinned girl was a student at the Jedi Temple on Coruscant during the last years of the Old Republic. At the height of the Clone Wars, she was just twelve years old. (YDR)

Pikkel Sisters

this was an alias used by the Pike sisters, during the time that they operated for Spinda Caveel. They were responsible for the theft of the droid Doc from Massad Thrumble, but were unable to defend Caveel against Guri's attempt to rescue Doc. (SEE)

Piknab

this name, which meant "clever", was common among Gungan males. (GCG)

Piknab Carsels

this male Gungan left Otoh Gunga and the planet Naboo to seek his own fame and fortune. He never returned to his homeworld, eventually learning how to fly a wide variety of starfighters and starships. For his twenty-sixth birthday, Piknab obtained a loan from Riboga the Hutt and purchased his own starship. He defaulted on a couple of payments, and Riboga's thugs cut off his haitu in order to motivate him to pay off his loan. Piknab then found himself indentured to Riboga, and forced to pilot ships in the Cularin System. Even after Riboga retired to Nal Hutta, Piknab remained on Generius and worked for the gas mining operations there. (LFC)

Pikobi

this web-footed, bird-like lizard was native to the swamps of the planet Naboo, where it hunted for smaller prey. Resembling an ostrich, it used its sharp beak to spear its prey. The wide, webbed feet of the pikobi were used for running, and were sometimes employed when hunting, to shade the water during the search for food. Unlike most reptilians, the pikobi had external ears. The tail of the pikobi could be shed if the creature was attacked, and it would grow back later. (GF, WSW)

Pil Diller

this planet is the homeworld of mournful singing fig trees. (DA)

Pilba

this was a common name among the Em'liy race. (GMR1)

Pilba Dalohog

this Em'liy was one of the only known members of his race to leave his homeworld of Shalyvane and travel across the galaxy. His own ingrained xenophobia was met head-on by prejudice during his travels, and he nearly returned home because of loneliness. However, he chose to keep traveling, hoping to bring the rest of the galaxy more of the truth behind the Em'liy's existence. (GMR1)

Pile

this was the Imperial Navy slang term for an Alliance Y-Wing starfighter. (SWJ10)

Pilgrim

one of the former names of the Koqus Starliner Star Morning. (SOL)

Pi-Lippa

this being was one of Shmi Skywalker's owners. Pi-Lippa taught Shmi various technical skills, including how to clean and store computer components for eventual re-use. Pi-Lippa had promised to free Shmi, but she died before enacting the paperwork which would make her a free woman. Thus, Shmi's rights were passed down to one of Pi-Lippa's relatives, and Shmi remained a slave. (IG1)

Pill, Jeff

this youth was one of Geordi Hans' friends in Mos Eisley, and was also a member of the Farns. Pill was an unmotivated youth. (GG7)

Pillage

this pirate ship was the lead craft in Larken's small fleet. (SWJ5)

Pillaging Villagers One by One

a brutish ballad often sung by stormtroopers. (COJ)

Pillar of Fire

this was one of two rune-covered obelisks that were presented to apprentices of the Sith academy on Korriban, during the decades leading up to the Great Sith War, as part of their final test. After defeating several terentatek beasts, the apprentices found themselves in a chamber with the The Pillar of Fire, which stood opposite the Pillar of Ice. Sith apprentices had to choose one to help them cross a pool of acid in order to reach their last challenge. (KOTOR)

Pillbug

an oblong, flexible, segmented insect. (ROM)

Pillel-dice

this was a simple game played in many taverns across the galaxy during the last years of the Old Republic. (BF6)

Pillik

an Omwati youth who did not "survive" Tarkin's forced education. Tarkin used Pillik as an example to drive the other youths: he had his Victory-class Star Destroyer fire on Pillik's village, destroying it. He warned the others that their failure would result in similar results. (JS)

Pillman

manufacturers of small-scale propulsion units, such as the single-shot engines used in emergency life pods. (SCRE)

Pilot

this green-skinned being, distinguished by the cranial horn that grew from his head, was a noted bounty hunter who plied the blood trade during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Pilot was part of an unlikely group that was put together by Magus to hunt down Talesan Fry, after the young boy discovered their plans to assassinate twenty galactic leaders at a conference on Rondai-2. While on Rondai-2, the bounty hunters found themselves pursued by the Jedi team of Qui-Gon Jinn, Adi Gallia, Obi-Wan Kenobi, and Siri Tachi. Pilot and Magus managed to secure Talesan and fled to the roof of the Ulta Center, hoping to reach an airspeeder and escape. However, Magus had plans of his own, and they involved survival at any cost. Just as the Jedi reached the speeder and tried to take Taly from Pilot, Magus gunned the engine of the speeder and took off. Both Pilot and Taly fell from the roof, although Taly was rescued by Siri Tachi. Pilot, unfortunately, fell to his death. (SOJ)

Pilot

this was the name used by the Yuuzhan Vong to describe the organism which controlled the operation of one of their coralcraft. Each pilotbrain was linked telepathically to a specific pilot from its "birth", so that the Yuuzhan Vong's mental imprint was a form of key that would restrict access to the coralcraft's controls. The pilotbrain was linked to its pilot via a cognition hood, which relaying information almost simultaneously between pilotbrain and pilot. (T)

Pilot's Guild

this association of starpilots was established to create and uphold a set of laws that governed the use of outerspace as a travel medium. They oversaw most aspects of space travel, including education of new pilots, for which they produced a book from which new pilots learn the basics of space flight. After the institution of the New Order, the Pilot's Guild was disbanded by order of the Emperor himself. Those members who chose to defy Imperial mandate and continue the work of the Guild retreated to a deep-space navigation station on the outskirts of the Endor System. (HSL, SWGAL)

Pilotta Thranta

once native to the planet Alderaan, the pilotta thranta was made extinct with the destruction of its homeworld. It was the second-largest of the four major subspecies of thranta, rivalled only by the great thranta. Its skin was black on the dorsal side of its body, and white on the underside. The nose of the pilotta was short and pointed, and the rudder-like tail had three lobes instead of the four found on the common and balana thrantas. The tail had two horizontal lobes, with the third lobe rising above them. Trained pilotta thrantas carried passenger transports hung from their bodies. (WSW)

Pilum

a Ripoblus assault transport operative during the Sepan Civil War. It was used in the Sepan battles against the Empire. (TIE)

Pilus

this man was a regular patron of Didi Oddo's café, some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. He had made a fortune smuggling spice in the Quintus System. (DH)

Piluvian Salamander

this unusual amphibian was known for the way it swarmed in congregations that were as chaotic as they were intense. (MJH)

Piluvian Salamander-storm

this was the term used to describe a congregation of Piluvian salamanders. (MJH)

Pimbrellan League

this cluster of star systems is located at the end of the Sebiris Run. The League consists of three primary worlds - Dolstan, Bresan, and Swedlan - and the many systems which lie between them. These three worlds are the only habitable worlds in the League's domain. The Pimbrellan League was formed by the followers of Pinacism. (KO)

Pin Money

a bounty hunters' term used to identify a small-time criminal who has engaged in illicit activities for many years, but only commands a small bounty. (GG9)

Pinacism

this belief was brought to the galactic forefront by the founders of the Pimbrellan League. Pinacists claim that those beings who sit back and watch the events of the galaxy unfold around them will eventually emerge to pick up the pieces and take control of the galaxy. The Pinacists were one of the few groups in the Kathol Outback who took an interest in what was happening outside the Marcol Void and the Kathol Rift, and arranged with a group on Gandle Ott to have a courier droid dispatched once a week with the latest news. The Pinacists believe that a great Event will take place, that will signal them to return to the galaxy and begin their work. Many believed that the Galactic Civil War was this Event, but most leaders believed it was just a minor blip. (KO)

Pinani

this Melida woman was the wife of Quintama, and a warrior in her own right. She was the daughter of Bicha and Tiraca, and was killed in a battle to retake the city of Bin shortly after the Twenty-First Battle of Zehava. (DOD)

Pincer

this was one of the Nebulon-B frigates which were used by the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Pincer Loader

see IW-37 (VD3)

Pincer Maneuver

an evasive maneuver in which two ships, being pursued by a third, split up and fly in opposite directions around a larger cover object, often a support ship. The pursuing third ship, momentarily without a target, is then forced to pick between the two targets. The target that is not followed then swings around and destroys the pursuer. (HTTE)

Pinch Beetle

this insect, native to the planet Haruun Kal, was discovered to have a wealth of culinary possibilities by the Kubaz, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SHPT)

Pinchers

this Cavrilhu Pirate was stationed on Wistril, and made a regular supply delivery run to the Kauron System base. Luke Skywalker incapacitated him in order to assume the identity of Mensio and infiltrate the Kauron asteroid base. Pinchers used a highly-modified Y60 cargo hauler to make the run. Luke used a Jedi healing trance to knock Pinchers out, then pulled details on the cavrilhu base from his mind in order to make his entrance much simpler. (SOP)

Pinett

this moon, located in the Elrood Sector of the galaxy, was located near several prominent spice routes which connected the Mid and Outer Rim Territories. Two spaceports services all sorts of traffic to Pinett during the height of the Galactic Civil War. When two factions - the Jon-Tow Economic Development Group and the Corsignis Property Alliance - blockaded the moon in an effort to force each other out of business, the general population of Pinett were forced to exist with minimal food and medical resources. The efforts of the Pinett Freedom Force proved only slightly effective. (WOA25)

Pinett Freedom Force

this protest group, formed by Daetan Taakses, tried to force both the Corsignis Property Alliance and the Jon-Tow Economic Development Group to call off their blockades of the moon Pinett before they caused serious economic damage. Founded when Taakses staged a hunger strike and went to the media with it, the Pinett Freedom Force began marching on the landing fields of both Oscum and Beliarr, hoping to block the ships of either faction from landing. The work of the Pinett Freedom Force was instrumental in getting the two sides to sit down together and work out a plan to solve their problems, allowing the blockade to be dismantled and shipping to return to the moon's surface. (WOA25)

Pingil

an obscure language. (AIR)

Pingpear

this oblong fruit grew on the planet Zonama Sekot, and was edible to most humanoid races. It grew on a low tree, and was crowned with serrated leaves. (FP)

Pink Conch

this was one of the many submersible transport businesses operating on Pavo Prime during the early years of the New Republic. It offered a limited number of private compartments aboard each transport, as well as a large amount of common space. (SWI67)

Pink Lizard Thunderbolt

this alcoholic concoction is similar to an Elshandruu Pica Thundercloud, and is named for the indeterminate species of small reptiles that created it. (GG9)

Pink Sky Casino

a luxurious hotel and gaming establishment located on Ord Mantell, the Pink Sky Casino was named for the wondrous cloudcover coloration found on the planet. (SL, SWDB)

Pinkish Salamander

see Mucous Salamander. (WSW)

Pinks

a name given to a pinkish algae that lives in the atmosphere of the planet Bespin. This form of floating algae is so prevalent in the gas giant's atmosphere that it gives the planet a pinkish color when seen from space. (GG2, ISU)

Pinnacle

any small fighter craft used to quickly intercept a target. (HSR)

Pinnacle Base

this was the site of a former Alliance base, used while the Empire re-emerged (following Thrawn's rise to power) and possessed Coruscant. It was located on the fifth moon of Da Soocha. (DE1)

Pinnacle Moon

another name for the Da Soocha 5. (DE1)

Pinnix, Blizz

this retired speederbike racer owned and operated The Pits, a bar and restaurant complex which catered to the swoop racers and gangs on the planet Stend VI. A veteran of over forty years of racing, Pinnix was an enigma because he always wore a full-face helmet, and no one had ever seen his face. He cast an imposing figure when he made his way through the bar, always dressed in impressive racing armor. In his wake follows speculation on his age, sex, and species, although most agree that Blizz was a male human. Whenever he raced the private swoop course on the grounds of The Pits, he rode his ebony swoop, the Black Raptor. (WSV, BSS)

Pinnoc

this species of tree was found in the subarctic forests of the planet Troos. (COG)

Pinook Fighter

this was a model of small, versatile starfighter. (XWA)

Pinot, Ledd

this man was one of the prison guards known as the Helmet Squad, working at the Oovo IV prison facility during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Pinot was part of a large internal smuggling operation that ensured the inmates had all manner of articles that were otherwise prohibited at many prison facilities. Compounding this fact, Pinot was skimming profits from the smuggling operations, fueling his own illicit desires. This was discovered by several prisoners who were eventually released from Oovo IV, and related to several prominent Hutt crimelords. This led to a bounty being placed on Pinot's head, which Jango Fett claimed during his "rescue" of Bendix Fust. (BH)

Pip

this battled P2-series droid worked with Baffle to overthrow the Salliche Ag Corporation's ban on droids. Pip later helped Han Solo locate Droma, after the Ryn was arrested for conspiracy in the forging of documents used by Tall and Short. (JE)

PIP/2

this was the designation of a series of systems control droids produced by Genetech Corporation during the early years of the New Republic. The PIP/2 was developed to replace organic workers at control boards and computer monitoring stations. It was a spindly droid with telescoping legs, allowing it to be adapted to fit in an number of configurations. Its small head contained a collection of visual sensors and interface jacks, and its eight articulated arms were given a wide range of motion. Unfortunately for Genetech, the PIP/2 was a commercial failure. Promoted as virtually glitch-proof, the PIP/2 was discovered to be excellent at single-threaded tasks, but quickly ran out of processing power when faced with excessive inputs. Genetech responded by upgrading as many PIP/2s as it could, and the upgrades were solid in their execution. However, public perception had soured to the PIP/2, and the line was discontinued. (EGD)

Pipefighter

this was the term used by the New Republic to describe the unusual fighters developed under Operation Starlancer. Each pipefighter was roughly triangular in shape, made up from tubular sections cobbled together on Borleias. Each pipefighter was loaded with sensors, and was designed to attain a specific, mathematical point in orbit around Borleias in order to gather intelligence. At each end of the tubes on the pipefighter was a laser emitter, which resembled a weapon in form. However, instead of sending out short, coherent bursts of energy, these emitters sent out a meter-thick beam of continuous red light. In total, four pipefighters were built, and worked in unison to create an incredible light show. The beams eventually converged to a single beam emitted by Starlancer Prime, which Starlancer scientists calculated to reach Coruscant. It was sufficiently weak to not cause much damage, but it was enough to convince the Yuuzhan Vong that the pipefighter was a superweapon. In reality, the beam which reached Coruscant was fired from a Star Destroyer hidden at the edge of the Coruscant System. Later, Danni Quee allowed Tam Elgrin to steal information about Starlancer, which showed the lambent crystals were being grown in immense sizes to serve as focusing crystals for the pipefighters. This forced the Warmaster Tsavong Lah to dedicate a large fleet to destroying the Republic's base on Borleias, while allowing the remnants of the New Republic's Advisory Council a chance to regroup elsewhere. (EL1, EL2)

Pippa Rosheed

this famous doctor taught at the Sperinad University on Esseles. (SWJ8)

Pir Cuvin

this Umbaran served as one of Ghez Hoka's Lieutenants, on the planet Qiilura, during the last years of the Old Republic. When Cuvin suddenly came up missing, Hoka assumed that he had deserted the police force and had run to the Republic's forces on Qiilura. Hoka ordered his troops to capture Cuvin on sight, and bring him in for interrogation. After his capture, Cuvin was summarily executed for his betrayal. (RCHC)

Piracy Scouring

this was the term used to describe the military action which was sponsored by Delephran, to eliminate the pirates who were plaguing the Vexta Asteroid Belt during the last years of the Old Republic. The effort attracted the attention of the newly-formed Imperial war machine, which eventually usurped control of the Delephran militia. (SWJ3)

Piranha Beetles

a species of blue, predatory insects native to Yavin 4, piranha beetles lived in a hive which was governed by a queen. Food was captured and returned to the hive at the direction of the queen, and was later distributed to the entire population of the hive. Piranha beetles were extremely efficient hunters, and could carve up their prey into manageable pieces with their sharp mandibles. Swarms of piranha beetles patrolled the jungles of Yavin 4, constantly searching for unsuspecting prey. Note that The Wildlife of Star Wars indicates that piranha beetles were a purple-red color. (COTF, EGA, WSW)

Pirate

one of SoroSuub's racing swoops, Fargus Deel used to ride one. (DFRSB)

Pirate Droid

this was the generic term used to describe any automaton which was used to board a starship and steal its wealth. These droids were often equipped with cutting lasers for breaching another ship's hull, as well as blaster weapons to subdue any opposition. (KB)

Pirate Gull

this species of ocean-going bird was native to the planet Vjun, and was named for the fact that it was usually found in flocks trailing the pirate ships that patrolled the Bay of Tears. (YDR)

Pirate Queen of Ando

see Pyash Yopayomba (PH)

Pirate's Shadow

this asteroid field was located in the Corellian Sector, and was named for the fact that it provided a number of hiding places for various smugglers, pirates, and other criminals. (SWGAL)

Pirdia

this ringed gas giant, the third planet in the Tyrisu System, was blue-green in coloration and was orbited by eleven moons. (SPG)

Piret Mubikai

this was a Skrilling individual, distinguished in the history of Agriworld-2079. (UANT)

Pirgi

one of the New Republic security officers killed in the stormtrooper raid on Talasea. (XWN)

Pirik

this planet, the primary world in the Pirik System, was a hotbed of rebellious activity during the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ10)

Pirin

this planet, located in Locris Sector, was the site of Kontag's corporate headquarters. (GG10, LOJ)

Piringiisi

a hot spring of caustic, green mud found on the planet Sullust. The Sullustans hold the springs in reverence, and often extend a visit to the springs as a gift. A small settlement grew up around the springs. (XW, EGP)

Pirisi Stone

this carving was made by the people of Tirahnn as a sepulcher stone, which adorned the gravesites and crypts of their dead. (WOA32)

Pirkha

this was a Noghri measurement of an area of land. (DFR)

Pirki nuts

legumes that are usually served charred. (TB)

Piroket

this planet is the site of a Bothan shipping company during the Galactic Civil War. It is located near Tatooine. (TME, SWJ3)

Pirol-5

this planet was the site of an Imperial factory farm in the Koornacht Cluster until it was razed by the Yevetha during the Great Purge. (BTS)

pirr

this Shyriiwook word was used as the suffix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "builder", "forger", or "trader". It could be attached to a prefix by itself, or combined with other suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Pirralor

a planet. (WBC)

Piscator

this huge, fish-like creature was native to the planet Alluuvia, where it lived in deep caves and tunnels. The piscator was attuned to the Force, and could read an attacker's mind and discover its darkest fears. The piscator, which was almost three meters in length and propelled itself with eight short tentacles, fed on the attacker's fear and grew stronger from it. (OE)

Pisces Base

a floating city on Calamari. (GDV)

Pison

this Herglic term was originally used to indicate a bully or thief. After the rise of Emperor Palpatine, it found prominent use as a term to describe any Imperial official. (PGT)

Pison-pakk

this Herglic phrase was coined during the New Order, and could be used to indicate either the planet Coruscant or any Imperial sector capital world. (PGT)

Pit Droid

this is the generic term used to describe any small droid which works in a multitude of capacities in vehicle repair shops. Created on the planet Cyrillia, most pit droids are very small in stature (similar to the E-series of household droids), with flat, bowl-shaped heads and a single optical unit mounted on the nose. When not in use, pit droids were designed to collapse into a compact form when hit on the nose. Another jab at the nose would reactivate the small droid. Note that issue 6 of the Star Wars Kids magazine claims pit droids were manufactured by Serv-O-Droid. (SW1, OWS. SWK)

Pit of Wind

this section of the Game Chambers of Questal is a vast, deep cylinder, across which span a multitude of thin platforms at varying heights. The objective of the chamber is to make it across one of the platforms. At the bottom of the cylinder are several metal spikes, pointing straight up. To make matters worse, an intense wind whistles through the cylinder, buffeting anyone attempting to walk across. (GCQ)

Pit Worm

see Garbage Worm (RHD)

Pit, The

this area of scattered asteroids is located at the end of the Kessel Run. Although the Kessel Run is more dangerous, more ships are lost in the Pit because many pilots breathe a sigh of relief that they've passed beyond the Maw. They let their reflexes down just when they enter the asteroids. The asteroid field was strewn through the green, wispy arm of a nebula, much like Smuggler's Run. (THG, RD)

Pit, The

this bar and restaurant, located in the main concourse of Elrood Starport, was an anomaly among spacer establishments in that it had a relaxed, professional atmosphere. (PG3)

Pit, The

this was the name of an abandoned, offshoot tunnel located within the Spice Mines of Kessel. It was here that particularly recalcitrant prisoners were taken for solitary confinement. (PH)

Pit, The

this large junkyard was located on the outskirts of Coronet's Blue Sector, on the planet Corellia. It was here that many crimelords eliminated any troublesome individuals, since bodies were rarely ever found beneath the junk. It was said that there were more "organic drop-offs" at The Pit than there were actually deliveries of garbage. (CCW)

Pitann

this harsh, desert world is one of the member worlds of the Kathol Republic. Much of the planet's economy is based on the mining operations which cover the landscape, and the settlers of Pitann are often suspicious of outsiders. Pitann has a short day, which lasts only 12 standard hours. However, its year consumes 841 local days. (KO)

Pitareeze Cruiser

a sleek, light cruiser designed by the Baron Pitareeze. The ship was never built, though, for the Baron's partner, Olag Greck, stole the plans for it. He then tried to sell a shoddy version of it as his own. When the ship failed, he blamed the failure on the Baron. This cruiser was going to be the first to use the MT-5 hyperdrive unit. (DRO)

Pitareeze, Baron

Nak's grandfather, the Baron Pitareeze was a native of Kalarba. He designed the Pitareeze Cruiser, but his association with Olag Greck meant that the Cruiser would never be built. Greck stole the plans and tried to sell the ship as his own, and when it failed, he blamed it on the Baron. Since then, the Baron has tried to recover his pride and the rights to the cruiser. (DRO)

Pitareeze, Jarth

Nak's father, and partner with his wife, Meg, in a growing travel guide business on Kalarba. When C-3PO and R2-D2 were jettisoned by IG-88 and land in a pond near their picnic, Jarth and Meg decide to hire the droids as helpers. (DRO)

Pitareeze, Meg

Nak's mother, and partner with her husband, Jarth, in a growing travel guide business on Kalarba. When C-3PO and R2-D2 were jettisoned by IG-88 and land in a pond near their picnic, Jarth and Meg decide to hire the droids as helpers. Meg is the daughter of the Baron Pitareeze. (DRO)

Pitareeze, Nak

a young boy on Kalarba, Nak is the grandson of his town's baron. He is fairly adept at robotics, and when his grandfather becomes the owner of C-3PO and R2-D2, he has many adventures with them. He helped put Vuldo in jail for building illegal blasters by reviving a huge maintenance droid and destroying Vuldo's secret workshop. (DRO)

Pit-boar

a savage, pig-like creature with sharp tusks. (ROTJN)

Pitch-and-Toss

a casino game of skill and chance. (SL)

Piton

this planet was the homeworld of the Piton race. (CT)

Piton

this race of humanoids was native to a planet of the same name. They were as thin as reeds, hairless, and had pale, translucent skin and white eyes. They spent their entire lives underground, which caused much of their natural pigment to be genetically bred out. (CT)

Piton, Booton

this heavy-set woman lived with her friend, Nardi Shodu, in the undercity of Coruscant during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. (OWS, SWI75)

Pits of Plooma

Han Solo was near this deep space formation when he witnessed an Lthorian herd meet while on a smuggling run. (COJ)

Pits, The

this cantina was located on the planet Stend VI. There were two entrances to The Pits: via The Hive, and walking in through the door. Over time, as swoop gangs took hold of Stend VI's culture, those who walked into The Pits were considered "ants," something to be stepped on and swiped away. The main building was low to the ground, and housed the entertainment areas. The Hive, a honeycombed column, rose above the bar itself, providing places to park swoops and other vehicles. The lowest sections housed the bar and restaurants themselves, as well as repair facilities. Owned and operated by Blizz Pinnix, there was a section of The Pits dedicated to the trophies and awards he had won over his forty-year career. Adjacent to The Pits were two facilities: Kuda's Compound, which provided sales and service for repulsorlift vehicles; and the Raptor Run, which was a swoop racing course designed by Pinnix himself. (HAS, WSV)

Pits, The

this swoop racing course was developed by Blizz Pinnix, and was submitted to the governing body as a site for qualifying races during the height of the New Order. (BSS)

Pitta, Danetta

one of the Imperial Grand Admirals still in power after the death of Emperor Palpatine, Pitta was born to a family which had a number of non-human ancestors. He knew of a Borneck and an Etti in his bloodline, but he kept this fact a secret as he rose to power. He committed himself to the protection of the ideals of Human High Culture, and constantly scrutinized the pedigrees of the officers who served him. Pitta's main contribution to the Imperial war effort was the acquisition of slave labor, and he was believed to have depopulated entire planets of alien beings in order to satisfy the Empire's need for cheap labor. In the wake of the Battle of Endor, Pitta went rogue and bribed the Corellian diktat into allowing him to serve as the protector of the Corellian Sector. He commandeered a torpedo sphere as his flagship, but was later killed by Grand Admiral Grunger during the Battle of Tralus. (ECH, SWI66)

Pittin

this was a species of small, domesticated creatures used as pets. The original homeworld of these creatures has been lost in the millennia since they were first tamed. They were used primarily as pest-catching predators, especially on those planets where droid pest-removal units were impractical. (COJ, SWJ14)

Pivar Spinner

this component of a holoprojector consists of an optical lense which is rotated at high speeds to keep the focused image from becoming distorted. (CFG)

Pix

this young girl was the Padawan learner of Jedi master Tyr, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Before she could be tested for elevation to the rank of Jedi Knight, Pix found herself on Thustra with Master Tyr, trying to peacefully force the Sephi to lay down their weapons. The Sephi wanted no part of the Old Republic, and launched wave after wave of suicide attacks on the Jedi and their clone troopers reinforcements. After a suicide bomber killed Master Tyr and Master Tyffix, Pix and her fellow Padawan Cal were stranded on Thustra. She was able to make a call for help to Coruscant, which was answered by Jedi Master Yoda. Yoda feared that the additional troops that accompanied him would ensure the Sephi would side with the Separatists, so he took Cal with him to discuss the situation with King Alaric. Pix was left in command of the clone troopers under Commander Clutch, with orders not to do anything until Yoda returned. She remained true to these orders until she was approached by Navi, the Senator of Thustra. Navi, working for his own goals, told Pix that Alaric had executed both Yoda and Cal, and then provided her with the coordinates of Alaric's palace. She acted as she believed any Jedi would have in the face of Yoda's death, launching an all-out assault on Alaric's palace. Although the attack was successful, it simply was part of Navi's plot to discredit the Jedi and the Republic. She survived, however, and accompanied Yoda back to Coruscant to expose Navi as a traitor to his people. (J5)

Pixelito

this city was located on the eastern continent of the planet Malastare, and was the home of a contingent of Dugs. Like many cities on Malastare, the Dug population was forced out by the growing Gran population. (TPM, IG1, NEG)

Pixelito Art Guild

this was the largest and most prosperous of the artists' guilds that were formed on the planet Malastare during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. As such, the Pixelito Art Guild was the most vehement opponent of the Anti-Artist Federation, and the Guild often placed bounties on the heads of the Federation's leaders to try and put an end to their attacks. (BH)

Pixelito Grand Council

this was the primary governing body of the city of Pixelito, on the planet Malastare, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (BH)

Pixelito Puppeteers Union

this was one of the many artistic guilds that were formed on the planet Malastare during the last decades of the Old Republic. The guild catered to the continued development and promotion of puppeteers and their acts. (BH)

Pixolga

this Dug was a member of the Anti-Artist Federation on the planet Malastare, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. A bounty was placed on his head by the Pixelito Art Guild in connection with the "malicious and unfounded" accusation that the painted pawprints of domesticated nexu were not art. This series of accusations ended up costing several artists and the Guild a large sum of credits, which they hoped to take out of his hide. Jango Fett claimed the bounty during a mission to Malastare to meet with Sebolto, during his search for the Bando Gora cult. (BH)

Piyanzi

this province of the planet Ansion was known as the meeting place for many Alwari merchants. An annual trade fair was in Piyanzi, where everything from foodstuffs to weaponry could be bought and sold. (APS)

Pizztov

this man was something of a loan shark and a fence in the city of Bidamount. Pizztov once managed to acquire several holograms of early events from Boba Fett's life, including a holo which supposedly portrayed Fett with Sintas and their child, and threatened to auction them off to the highest bidder at the Eport facility if Fett didn't meet his demands. He left a series of clues as to his whereabouts, and was eventually confronted at Bidamount by both Boba Fett and Sintas. Using any bystanders he could to shield himself, Pizztov tried to escape but was eventually shot down and killed by Fett. (T7)

PK-4

this Trade Federation droid worked aboard Nute Gunray's command ship during the blockade of the planet Naboo. It resembled a small humanoid, and despised protocol droids. (IS1)

PK-8f

a model of short-range primary threat grid. (XW)

Pkihantri

this planet was the site of an Alliance base, until the Empire managed to infiltrate it using an SB-20 espionage droid. The base was destroyed shortly afterward. (GFT)

Pkneb

this dessert delicacy was often served caramelized. (TME)

PK-series Droid

this series of small, humanoid droids was produced by Cybot Galactica to perform much of the manual labor required by the Neimoidians. (IG1, OWS)

PL/1G

BlasTech's grenade-launching adapter for use on projectile weapons. (ISB)

PL-1

this designation was created for a specialized X-Wing part, shortly after the Battle of Endor. When Rogue Squadron resigned its commission to battle Ysanne Isard at Thyferra, the New Republic was unable to directly supply them with X-Wings. However, they managed to sell off a number of X-Wings as broken surplus because they lacked PL-1s. This was a bookkeeping ruse, though, because PL-1 actually referred to the pilot of the craft. (BW) this Trade Federation protocol droid was assigned to Lord Toat on the planet Maramere, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. PL-37 was destroyed by Sol Sixxa and his pirates, and the droid's dismembered body sank to the bottom of the ocean. The head was recovered some months later by the Feeorin mercenary Nym, and it was made to talk by the Bith Jenkins. PL-37 revealed only the barest hint of the experimental cloaking device being developed on Maramere before burning out completely. (CRBN)

PL-37

PL-8 Piercer

this was the name of the medium concussion missile manufactured by the Corellian Engineering Corporation during the height of the New Order. (LOE)

Plaan

this Weequay served as the chief of security at the Esau's Ridge base on Tholatin, during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. His group of smugglers found that they could make a living by charging refugees of Yuuzhan Vong attacks for transport to other worlds, only to show up shortly after the Yuuzhan Vong attacked again. Plaan later found work as the mate aboard the Sweet Surprise, and he used his position to store a cargo of four voxyn in the ship's holds. The plan was to deliver the beasts to Coruscant, but the ship was destroyed before it could land. (JE, SBS, NJOSB)

Place of Beginning

this is one of the Qella names for their homeworld, Brath Qella. (TT)

Place of Bones

located near the former Western Sea, this area of the planet Coruscant was terraformed by the Yuuzhan Vong to served as a burial ground for the great beasts of their bio-engineered military forces. (UF)

Place of Hierarchy

see Square of Hierarchy (UF)

Place of Kastays

this ancient temple, located in the jungles of the planet Aaris III, was built to hold the information gathered by Kastays to document the history of the ancient Aaris civilization. It was here that Kastays tried to withhold the power of the Plaque of Victory, but Kastays and his team were unable to prevent the civil war which tore apart the ancient Aaris. The temple eventually decayed, but was later discovered by Doctor Lancer Brunou and Imperial research team MS-133. They also found the Plaque of Victory, but were unable to decipher the various pictographs which adorned the walls of the temple. (DARK)

Place of Sacrifice

see Square of Sacrifice (UF)

Place of Sickness

this was the term used to describe the chamber set aside in every Ewok village for use by the tribe's healers. These healers used herbs and other natural medicines to cure the illnesses of their tribe. (IWST)

Place of the Dead

this location was found on Coruscant - after it was remade into a simulacrum of Yuuzhan'tar by the Yuuzhan Vong - near the Temple of the Modelers. (UF)

Placid-class Freighter

this was a small, personal-use freighter that was manufactured during the early years of the New Republic. (GMR9)

Plaekite

this material was used in the construction of high-strength containers and vessels, including the casings of comlinks. (DMSH)

Plaeryin Bol

this organic innovation was created by the Yuuzhan Vong. The bol itself was a small, sphere-shaped creature that strongly resembled the normal Yuuzhan Vong eyeball. In place of a pupil, it had a mouth which could spit a venomous glob. Whenever a Yuuzhan Vong removed an eye as a show of devotion, it was often replaced with a plaeryin bol. The mouth could be agitated to spit its venom with a twitch of an eyelid. (VP)

Plagen

this unusual planet is part of the Pax System. The world has high plateaus which are covered with grasslands and lakes, while the lower plains are parched and dry. It is the native planet of the Chikarri race. (TSK)

Plague

this Marauder-class corvette was owned a mercenary group which tried to bring down Twin Suns Transport Services and the Azzameen family. The corvette was destroyed by the Alliance in an attack on the mercenary base. (XWA)

Plague Bomb

this was the generic term used to describe any explosive device which, when activated, released a virus, plague, or other biological contaminant into the atmosphere. (LTA2)

Plague Group

this was the local name given to the workers at the Scohar Xenohealth Institute. (WS)

Plague Wasp

this deadly insect was native to the planet Delphon. (MCI1)

Plah

this is a lifeless moon orbiting Tibrin. (GG4)

Plains Bol

this species of bol, native to the planet Dantooine, was often found in large herds. These bols could be tamed and kept as livestock, and were considered a source of milk to most settlers. (GQRG)

Plains Panther

this feline predator was native to the planet Froswythe. It was hated by the many ranchers and farmers of the planet, since it regularly attacked their herds of banthas and nerfs, taking young animals that served as the basis for future generations. (WOA20)

Plaitfruit

this sweet-fleshed fruit was distinguished by its golden skin. (SQ)

Plakhmirakh

this Noghri worked for Talon Karrde as a bodyguard some ten years after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. Plakhmirakh served as a protector to Moranda Savich. (SOP)

Plako

this Chikarri was a mechanic on this homeworld of Plagen, and talked with a pronounced lisp. He was also an inventor, and discovered a way to modify an ore locating sensor to search for gemstones. He placed this ore locator on his ship, the Tasty Acorn, and set out to find the legendary Fool's Gold. He found the ship, but the Tasty Acorn suffered a malfunction and had to be docked for repairs. Plako then hired a group of adventures to locate the ship for him. The Chikarri split the profits from the sale of the Fool's Gold's precious cargo equally with the adventurers, after they all managed to escape from Bruce Mercy and his pirates. (TSK)

Plan

this common Zabrak surname meant "scout". (GCG)

Plancke, Parq Yewgeen

this man, a manager of the Imperial Bank of Coruscant during the early years of the New Order, was summoned when Han Solo tried to withdraw a large sum of credits from the account of Jenos Idanian. A chubby man with pink skin and a balding head, Plancke was forced to detain Han after receiving word that Hal Horn had placed a hold on Idanian's accounts. Han became desperate, and took Plancke hostage while trying to escape. A detachment of stormtroopers apprehended him, but succeeded only in shooting Plancke while Han escaped in a turbolift. Plancke did not survive the shooting. (TPS)

Plandl Horn

this was a large, flat horn used as a musical instrument. (VD)

Planeeto

this Hutttese word translated into Basic as "planet." (GMR5)

Planet 4

a planet in the Bakura system, this gas giant was used by the Ssi-ruuk as a launch site. Note that The Truce at Bakura Sourcebook claims that the unnamed planets were numbered 5 through 8, and names the fourth planet Arden. (TB, TBSB)

Planet 5

this rock-and-ice covered world was the fifth planet in the Bakura System. (TBSB)

Planet 6

an ice world in the Bakura system, originally attacked by the Ssi-ruuk but left alone when no human life was found on it. (TB)

Planet 7

this rock-and-ice covered world was the seventh planet in the Bakura System. (TBSB)

Planet 8

this rock-and-ice covered world was the eighth planet in the Bakura System. (TBSB)

Planet Dreams, Incorporated

this small business worked from a headquarters on Bespin's Cloud City, providing terraforming services to corporations and exploratory groups. The corporation eventually branched out into the entertainment business, turning unsettled by habitable planets in the Greater Javin to resorts. (CCG5, WOA34)

Planet of Crystal

this is another name for the planet Tasariq. (SWJ15)

Planet of the Amazons: The Tale of the Pirate Ship Mourning Glory

this series of memoirs, written by Grov Bricker, documented the treatment of the Corellian pirate and his crew after they were captured by a group of Hapan women, shortly before the Battle of Yavin. It was generally considered that these memoirs were written to appeal to popular notion that the Hapan women were "amazons", rather than an actual recounting of the pirate's experiences. It became one of those books that was wildly popular and remained on the best-seller lists for many months, although no being would admit to actually owning a copy. The portrayal of the Hapan female soldiers as cruel, militaristic beings was eventually refuted, after Leia Organa set out to Hapes to discuss an alliance with the Queen Mother during the early years of the New Republic. (PH)

Planetary Communications Commission

this governmental body monitored all communications systems on the planet Draenell's Point. (GMK)

Planetary Cultures

this was one of the many exhibit wings found in the Galactic Museum on Coruscant. (CCW)

Planetary Fighter

this was a starfighter design which was developed and manufactured by SoroSuub Corporation during the height of the New Order. In its stock form, the Planetary Fighter was armed with a pair of laser cannons and two concussion missile launchers. (XWA)

Planetary Pioneers (*)

the name given to Luke Skywalker's class of students at the New Academy for Space Pilots. (MM)

Planetary Poker (*)

a card game played by R2-D2 and Chewbacca. (MRR)

Planetary Repulsor

the huge, underground repulsors used to move the various planets into the Corellian System eons ago. The primary minds behind the Starbaster plot learned that they could use the repulsors as weapons, and destroyed the Bakuran destroyer Watchkeeper by activating the repulsor and smashing the ship with it. (AS)

Planetary Safaris

this Imperially-chartered corporation specialized in hunting expeditions to exotic worlds. Some 20 years before the Galactic Civil War, Planetary Safaris discovered the planet Barab I, and organized hunting trips to hunt the Barabel race despite the fact that the Barabels were obviously intelligent. The Barabels fought back, and were eventually recognized by Captain Alater as a sentient species. (GG4, WOTC)

Planetary Security Forces

near the end of the Old Republic, it was recommended that each member world form its own Planetary Security Force, in order to ensure that the planets were protected while ensuring that the Republic's forces were not stretched too thinly. Many planets, such as Corellia, took this matter seriously. This led to the creation of CorSec - the Corellian Security Force. (HNN4)

Planetary Trade Directorate

this as the first global government established by the Cherishites who settled the planet Rhamalai. It was first developed to facilitate a fair trade and barter economy. (SWJ13)

Planet-borer

this was a huge vehicle developed by Imperial engineers for excavating through a planet's crust. The immense cutting head of the planet-borer could chew through rock and stone, allowing Imperial ground forces to create tunnels and passageways with relative ease. (SWELM)

Planet-hopper

a term used to describe any small starship used to make runs between planets in the same system. (POT)

Plank Gas

a chemical weapon that was highly corrosive, plank gas was used in many chemical-loaded grenades during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (ISB, AEG)

Planka

this MC40a was part of the Alliance's fleet, during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Plansa

meaning "thinking", this name was common among Gungan females. (GCG)

Plaque of Victory

this odd, triangular ingot of metal was discovered by Imperial research team MS-133 four years after the Battle of Endor. It had been hidden within the confines of the Place of Kastays, on the planet Aaris III, for many centuries, after it was recovered by an ancient Aaris military force. It had been turned over the Kastays, whose team tried in vain to prevent it from tearing apart their civilization. The Plaque itself was not native to Aaris III, but had been transported to the planet millennia before the rise of the Aaris civilization. It fed off the life energies of organic beings, and tried to kill any living thing it encountered. It did not actually try to kill them itself, but amplified the suspicious nature of the beings which touched it, in an attempt to have them destroy themselves. While the Plaque's effect was strongest when in physical contact with a being, proximity to the artifact also strengthened a being's fear of its companions. After the Plaque had been discovered by Lancer Brunou and team MS-133, the crew of the FarStar was forced to jettison the Plaque into space in order to defeat its evil influence. (DARK)

Plaristes

this philosopher wrote a wealth of treatises on sentience and intelligence during the decades prior to the formation of the Old Republic, more than 25,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. Among his most enduring treatises was Of Minds, Men, and Machines, in which he argued convincingly that automatons would never achieve true sentience, despite the regular and impressive technological advances in artificial intelligence. However, over the ensuing millennia, many of his postulations were proven wrong. (OWS)

Plarx

this Frezhlix led an assault force against the Sif'krie race shortly after the revelation of the Caamas Document. (SOP)

Plasarmor

this material was used to create the armor worn by Imperial stormtroopers. (SL)

Plasboard

this is a building material made from a combination of wood, paper, and plastic. (TBH)

Plasburst Cannon

this form of starship weapon shot bursts of plasma energy at its targets. (SWJ12)

Plascloth

this material was woven from specially-formulated plastic fibers, and resembled thick cloth. It was used to form the wings of paragliders and other similar vehicles. (SESB)

Plasfoam

this incredibly strong, yet lightweight material was often formed into bricks and used in buildings. It had excellent insulation properties, and resisted moisture and the elements. (SL)

Plasform

a lightweight material used in food packaging. (HSL)

Plash

manufacturers of self-molding contour chairs. (SOP)

Plashi

meaning "laughter" or "humorous", this was a common female name among the Mon Calamari race. (GCG)

Plasma Ball

this Yuuzhan Vong weapon was similar in many respects to a magma missile. A sphere of pure plasma energy, the plasma ball was one of the primary weapons of the coralskipper which were developed after the initial stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. One of the things that made plasma balls an effective weapon was that they continued to erode the surfaces they hit against, even after the initial blast had passed. Thus, any hit from a plasma ball was potentially deadly. These weapons were fired from Yuuzhan Vong vessels by specialized volcanic cannons. (SBS, EL1, GMR8)

Plasma Bomb

this form of explosive was used by the Bartokks. (E1A4)

Plasma Cannon

a crude weapon which expels a packet of ionized plasma gas at its target, most of the known versions of plasma cannons came from sources outside the known galaxy. The first recorded sighting of a plasma cannon occurred when the Charons first made an attempt to enter the galaxy from Otherspace. Decades later, a new form of plasma cannon emerged, this time in the arsenal of the Yuuzhan Vong. The Yuuzhan Vong yaret-kor plasma balls that caused initial damage upon detonation, but which also continued to eat away at any surface which the energy came in contact with. (OS, EL1, NEGW)

Plasma Cut

manufactured by BlasTech, this portable plasma torch was used to open a hole in a starship's hull during a boarding action. (PP)

Plasma Eel

this Yuuzhan Vong grenade was a bioengineered creature whose body was mostly active plasma. The plasma eel resembled an amphistaff in shape, and could be wrapped around a warrior's arm for transport. Then thrown, however, the plasma eel became as rigid as a spear. The plasma inside the eel's body quickly built up energy, and the entire creature exploded upon impact, causing large amounts of damage. After the hostilities between the Yuuzhan Vong and the Galactic Alliance were resolved, and the Yuuzhan Vong were allowed to live on the planet Zonama Sekot, they found that plasma eels and many other bioengineered weapons simply reverted to their animal forms and fled into the forests. This was one way in which Sekot forced the Yuuzhan Vong to give up their lust for war and embrace a more enlightened existence. (NJOSB, UF)

Plasma Forge

this huge device was used on starships and in refineries to create replacement components from raw materials. (BI)

Plasma Fuser

a tool which uses plasma gas to cut through materials or fuse them together. (ISU)

Plasma Grenade

an explosive device which used ionized plasma gas to create a localized detonation. (MTS)

Plasma Mine

this incendiary explosive was used during the era of the Great Sith War, and employed a mixture of chemicals to generate a burst of intense energy and heat over a wide radius. (KOTOR)

Plasma Saw

a loud, noisy tool that uses ionized plasma gas to cut through materials. (JS)

Plasma Scourge

this Old Republic weapon was an experimental bombing system that deployed a series of plasma warheads across a wide space. The plasma scourge carpeted its target with plasma energy, indiscriminately destroying huge areas in its blast. (STF)

Plasma Torpedo

a projectile weapon that uses ionized plasma gas to create an explosion. (COJ)

Plasmaberry

this fruit is a favorite delicacy on Dreffon IV. (GMH, POC)

Plasma-burn Tape

similar to detonite tape, this explosive tape is used to explode doors and panels. (SESB)

Plasma-hardening

this manufacturing process is used to create stronger blast armor and plating. It allows normal blast armor to withstand the effects of a thermal detonator at close range. (GMH)

Plasmar

this amoebic race, native to the planet Y'nybeth, is transparent. (POT)

Plasmating

this was a process developed by the Trade Federation, during the last decades of the Old Republic, in which materials were created in such a way that they were reduced to their constituent atoms when damaged. In this way, special diplomatic packages and delivery vessels could be formed to open only with the proper identification - keycodes, biometrics, etc. - and if the package was ruptured or forced open, the contents would plasmate, rendering them useless. (YDR)

Plasmold

this special plastic was used as a spray-on form of insulation, which it conformed to the shape and texture of any surface before expanding. (IWST)

Plasspecs

this form of glasses used molded plastic lenses to help adjust a being's sight. (SWJ12)

Plast

a lightweight, multi-purpose material. (COJ)

Plasteel

a building material. (CPL)

Plastene

a sturdy material used to make anything from drink cups to work clothes. (COJ)

Plastex

a durable, clear material. (EGD)

Plasticel

a durable, lightweight polymer produced by the Gungans to make a variety of items. The Gungans placed strands of plant material inside the plasticel to form words, and then used the plasticel for tickets and vouchers. (E1A12)

Plasticene Thermite

this grey-white gel was moldable into a variety of shapes, allowing it to be placed in a variety of locations and applications. It burned quickly when lit, destroying whatever material it adhered to. It was also durable when formed and dried, and could be used to form trapdoors in a pinch. (ROE)

Plasticine

this durable material was once used as a form of paper, but was reserved for those documents that were preserved in libraries and record halls because of its longevity and price. (GMR7)

Plasticoat

this material was used to cover and protect electronic devices. (JAF)

Plasti-coat

this strong, plastic-based material was often used to form body armor. (JH)

Plasticrate

any form of plastic-based carrying container. (JH)

Plasticrete

a building material which uses crushed stone and plastic polymers to create strong yet flexible structures. (SE)

Plastidroid

this was a specialized form of espionage and combat droids produced by Cestus Cybernetics during the height of the Clone Wars, based on the JK-series of biodroids. In their inert form, plastidroids were amorphous bundles of technology. Hidden within their shells was a collection of magnetically encoded components which, when activated, moved into position to form limbs, weapons, and other implements. These components were made of metal and plastine, and were designed to connect in a myriad of ways. The filmy skin of the plastidroid conformed to whatever new shape the droid assumed, keeping the internal components protected and lubricated. When fully assembled, a plastidroid stood more than five meters in height, and moved about on specialized treads. (TCD)

Plastifibe

this tough, plastic fiber was used in the manufacture of scrub brushes and exploratory agitators. It was effective in removing debris, but the fibers themselves did little damage to the underlying surface material. (SBS)

Plastiform

a packing material that is blown into a package. It surrounds the contents of the package, keeping it safe from jolts and jars while in transit. The Gamorreans are fond of eating it as a snack. It was also used to create the clear, bubble-shaped visors for environment suits. (TJP, GOF9)

Plastihead

this was smuggler slang for any thick-headed individual. (TG)

Plastiment

this was a form of adhesive used during the last decades of the Old Republic. (TG)

Plastine

a substance used to create vacuum-seal storage pouches, plastine was originally created as a shapeless covering for the plastidroids produced by Cestus Cybernetics. These droids were developed during the height of the Clone Wars, and the plastine sacs that held their components ensured that the plastidroids could assume any shape required to fulfill their missions. (IJ, TCD)

Plasti-pak

a recyclable material used to carry food on trips. (RASB)

Plastisheet

this was a form of flimsy that was produced during the last years of the Old Republic. (MJH)

Plasti-shroud

this protective covering is used to store anything from containers and boxes to swoops and starfighters. It provides a defense against rain and other elements. (GCQ)

Plastiskin

this synthetic flesh is used by actors to modify their appearance. (GMS)

Plastisteel

a dense, nearly indestructible material. (GG4)

Plastiwrap

this strong, lightweight material was inexpensive to mass-produce, and was used to create trash bags and other storage devices. (MBS)

Plasto

an inexpensive material used in packaging. (SE)

Plasto-cast

a form of quick-drying material developed by SyntheCure, plasto-cast was stored in spray canisters for use in the field. When sprayed onto a broken limb, plasto-cast could be molded into a cast and used to immobilize a broken limb. (FOP, GFT)

Plastoid

a thermoformed material often used in battle armor. It also has more mundane uses, such as in tabletops. (SW, GOF8)

Plastone

this material was formed from a mixture of dense plastic and stone, and was used in the formation of buildings. (SWJ14)

Plastopress

this injection-molded, plastic-like material is used in a number of industrial and construction formations. (POT)

Plastron

the material that was used to built the center section of the droid Bollux. (HSE.)

Plat Dromma

manufacturers of large-scale targeting computers. (SCRE)

Plat Hovath

Plat Mallar's father, he was a droid mechanic on Polneye. (BTS)

Plat Mallar

a Grannan from Polneye who fought against the Yevethan invaders during the Great Purge. He was training a group of youths in the TIE Interceptors when the attack came, and he quickly took control of one of the old fighters. He was able to destroy a Yevethan TIE Fighter before he was intercepted by an Imperial-class Star Destroyer. He turned tail and fled into the stars, where he tried to reach someone who could help his people. The Interceptor was later picked up by a New Republic prowler ship and brought to Coruscant. Mallar was sent to the New Republic Fleet Infirmary, where he came under the attention of Admiral Ackbar. Ackbar recognized the potential in the youth, despite the severe exposure to deep-space cold and lack of nutrition. Mallar recovered, and became one of the key witnesses against the Yevetha. He wanted nothing more than to join the Republic's Navy and fly a starfighter against the Yevetha, and Ackbar spearheaded Mallar's acceptance into Naval training. Ackbar also personally oversaw Mallar's early training, placing him in simulations against Yevethan starfighters in order to temper Mallar's hatred while honing his skills. When the orders came that the Republic was blockading the Koornacht Cluster, Mallar was placed on active duty. He was tapped, along with several other pilots to fly recon duty to survey Yevethan forces in the Cluster. Mallar never got a chance to fly, though, as others with more experience were sent out first. Instead, Mallar drew escort duty for the shuttle Tampion, which was supposed to transport Han Solo to the Fifth Battle Group. The shuttle was interceptor by the Yevetha and, despite the best efforts of the escorts, Solo was taken prisoner. He came under intense scrutiny, but was not accused of negligence. He was then attached to the Fifth fleet, as a shuttle pilot on the Mandjur during the Battle of N'zoth. His chance to prove himself came when the Mandjur was hit with Yevethan missiles and rendered powerless. He took Captain Teggett's X-Wing out and rescued several stranded pilots before the Republic was able to defeat the Yevethan fleet. (BTS, SOL, TT)

Plateau of Dreams

located in the middle of the Elto continent of Gacerian, this mesa is the location of the musical rocks known as the oueee-ha. (PG2)

Platform

any stationary, deep-space launch and supply site. There are six basic designs of platforms. Each is built around a central spire or hub, which houses the storage facilities, living quarters, and operations centers. Extending from the central structure are three landing pads which serve as runways, launch and landing sites, and repair and storage facilities. Most platforms measure 250 meters across, and are armed with multiple turbolaser batteries and warhead launchers. They are also well-shielded, with 200-SBD shields protecting 100-RU hulls. The basic types of platforms are: Class 1 Platforms (PLT-1), designed primarily as a landing platform, with minimal living space; Class 2 Platforms (PLT-2), designed primarily as a landing platform, but with more living space than a PLT-1 platform; Class 3 Platforms (PLT-3), an expanded platform with more living space than a PLT-2 platform; Class 4 Platforms (PLT-4), an outpost platform, with minimal living space and small landing pads; Class 5 Platforms (PLT-5), a large platform with a huge living space and large landing pads; and Class 6 Platforms (PLT-6), a large platform that is not armed with a warhead launcher. (TIE)

Platform 327

one of the landing platforms on Cloud City to which the Millennium Falcon is directed. (ESB)

Platform 5

one of the landing platforms on Nomad City to which the Millennium Falcon and Luke's X-wing are directed. (HTTE)

Platform 6

one of the landing platforms on Nomad City to which the Millennium Falcon and Luke Skywalker's X-wing are directed, shortly after Grand Admiral Thrawn returned from the Unknown Regions. (HTTE)

Platinite

this gleaming, silver precious metal is often used to make necklaces and bracelets. (SLS)

Platinum Mist

this space yacht was owned and operated by the Kessel Spice Corporation. It was attacked and destroyed by Pari' Notgoth and his forces during the early years of the New Republic, in an effort to execute Morgotou. (POC)

Platinum Valor Cross

this was one of the most distinguished medals awarded to Alliance officers. (SWJ4)

Platoril

this barren, rocky ball second planet of the Coruscant System. (PH)

Platt

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Plattahr

this crimelord operated his business on the planet Phorliss, and was part of the Black Nebula organization. The Houk cantina owner Gorb Drig was indebted to Plattahr for the funds used to maintain his cantina. Plattahr and his goons were members of an alien race with huge, muscular bodies and heads that resembles the tips of stalks on their necks. No eyes or nose were visible on their heads, and a small opening revealed their mouths. (MJEH)

Platt's Dream

this was the name of Platt Okeefe's first starship. (SWJ2)

Platykona-Zemlo-Mobris

this syhtetic drug was created by Imperial scientists for use in re-education facilities. Commonly known as "pleaz-mo", this drug was a highly-addictive chemical that lowered an individual's inhibitions and made them more susceptible to suggestion. It was found to be too addictive after it was put into widespread use at the Aucellis Park facility, on Keriba VI, and the developers feared that it might lead to increased demand. This, in turn, would force authorities to investigate its source, revealing one of the Empire's secrets. (WOA27)

Plavin 6

this planet was covered with dense, humid jungles. (AIR)

Plavonian Starfish

this aquatic creature was considered a delicacy among the nobility of Tapani Sector, and was often served stuffed. (LOE)

Plawal

the first volcanic rift jungle that was domed on Belsavis, Plawal was where the Jedi Plett established his fortress on the planet. The dome was built by the Brathflen Corportion early in Palpatine's reign as Emperor. In those days, the valley was known as Plett's Well. This was later shortened to Pletwell, then simply Plawal. (COJ, EGP)

Pleader

the equivalent of a lawyer on the planet Concord Dawn, a Pleader is assigned to every criminal. The Pleader's job is to report the criminal's personal idea of their guilt or innocence. (TBH)

Pleasant City

this is the capital city of the lawless world of Korbin. It is the planet's largest city, and is also the home of its largest spaceport. Like the planet itself, there is no government in Pleasant City, nor are there any customs regulations. It is a disease-ridden city, and is steeped in the Dark Side of the Force. (PG2)

Pleasant Meadow

this was the Ugnaught name for the surface of Bespin's core. Note that Marvel Comics' Star Wars series, issue 57, depicts the surface of Bespin as a swampy marsh filled with liquified gases. (MC57)

Pleasure Domes

this set of exhilarating, domed environments was developed by the Zeltrons who worked on Hologram Fun World. (GMR1)

Pleasure Planet in the Purple Systems

this phrase was used to describe a euphoric place in which everything is happy and fun. (SWJ14)

Pleaz-Mo

this was the popular name for the addictive drug known as platykona-zemlo-mobris. The nickname of "pleaz-mo" was coined from the drug's abbreviation - pl-z-mo, although many criminals believed that the nickname came from the addict's request for "please, more" when they needed a fix. The Imperial scientists who designed the drug found that it was too addictive, and feared that widespread use outside of the Aucellis Park facility would lead to an investigation. Thus, about five years before the Battle of Yavin, production was cut back to support only the requirements of Aucellis Park. (WOA27)

Pleck

this New Republic Intelligence technical agent worked with Taisden on the Glorious during the search for the Teljkon vagabond near Gmir Askilon. (SOL)

Plee

this Ho'Din was a noted plant-development specialist, and was part of the New Republic team dispatched to Duro in an effort to reclaim the planet's natural environment during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (BP)

Pleekwood

this was hardwood used in the creation of fine furniture and musical instruments. (DMSH, MBS)

Pleezer

this pleasure-inducing drug is often found in medical kits. (CFG)

Pleness

this was once of the many names given to Duros females. Among the Duros, it meant "pure water". (GCG)

Pleni

this woman, a native of the planet New Apsolon, was minor Legislator some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. After the deaths of Governor Roan and the Jedi Master Tahl, Pleni suddenly announced her bid to assume the role of planetary governor. She managed to sway several key Legislators to give their support to her campaign, and Mace Windu believed that she had purchased the list of Absolute supporters from Oleg in order to blackmail them into supporting her. When Obi-Wan Kenobi and Bant Eerin were dispatched to discuss the situation with her, they found Pleni dead, shot and killed by a probe droid that was later traced to Qui-Gon Jinn. (CTV)

Plenty's

this was one of the largest grocery store chains found on the planet Commenor, during the last years of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

Plescinea Entertainments

this company produced a variety of holographic imaging devices for personal and commercial entertainment facilities. (EGW)

Plesstil

a temperate planet. (DFRSB)

Plessus Ghon

this Jedi Knight, along with Ixian Rovieda, Nygreena Clo and Padawan Renxis Dielle, was killed on Kabal during a series of riots broke out when the Trade Federation overtaxed the planet for shipping. The taxation occurred just before the onset of the Clone Wars, and led to massive food shortages among the Kamarian people. The Jedi had been called in to quell the riots, when a fleet of supply ships loyal to Count Dooku and the Separatists began to drop food supplies to the populace. A scramble to obtain food ensued, and the Jedi were killed while trying to maintain the peace. (HNN5)

Plethyl Nitrate

this medicinal compound was used to treat pneumonia in Devaronians. Physicians had to be careful, however, because a similar dosage of the drug could cause a precipitous drop in the blood pressure of a human being, or even kill a Bothan. (MJH)

Plett

a Ho'Din Jedi Master from the planet Moltok, he was also a scientist and a botanist. He took up residence on Belsavis about 70 years before Han Solo and Princess went to Belsavis to search for Plett's Well. The Mluki natives said that his ruins indicate that he had been there at least 30 years before that. Plett was rumored to be able to communicate with the animals, and legends say he controlled the weather on Belsavis. His mission to Belsavis had been an important one, to hide a group of Jedi children in the Plawal rift valley to save them from the Jedi purge. (COJ, NEGC)

Plett's Well

another name for the Plawal rift valley on Belsavis. The Mluki called the rift valleys "wells," and so the one that the Jedi Master Plett lived in became known as Plett's Well. (COJ)

Pletwell

another name for the Plawal rift valley on Belsavis. (COJ)

Plex

nickname of MerrSonn's PLX2 missile launcher. (ISB)

PLEX-1

see PLX-1 (SWDB)

Plexalloy

this material was developed during the early years of the New Republic, and was used as a stronger replacement for transparisteel in starship viewports. (SBS)

Plexcorp

the designs of this corporation's repulsorlift engines were stolen by House Mecetti, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (LOE)

Plexgrove Combine

this finance and banking interest provided low- and mid-level banking services to the galaxy. It oversaw those services in the Corporate Sector that were not controlled by the Bank of the Core. Plexgrove was one of the original Contributing Sponsors of the Corporate Sector Authority. (CSA)

Plexi

a transparent material used in windows. (COJ)

Plexi-cast

this appliance is used to splint broken or damaged limbs. It is incredibly strong and light-weight, and allows the injured person to use the damaged limb immediately. (SWJ9)

Plexiform

a material used in building huge edifices, plexiform maintained its strength in a variety of formations. (GOF3)

Plexis

a planet. (GG10)

Plexisteel

a material used to form the outer shell of older droids. (LCM)

Plexite

this ore, mined almost exclusively in the Velcar Free Commerce Zone, was used in the formation of starship hull plating. (SWJ3, SWJ4)

Plexo-33

this musical ensemble was popular during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Plextech Plastic Corporation

this Bothan-owned company was the largest corporate entity based on the planet Kothlis, at the height of the New Order. PPC produced a variety of raw plastics for use exclusively in the manufacturing industry of the city of Tal'cara. However, PPC is best known as a producer of noxious by-products, which it dumped into the Sesseranda Ocean. (SPG)

Plexus Courier Droid

this capsule-shaped droids were used by Imperial Sector Plexus to transport data across the galaxy. These droids were also modified for use as transport vessels for Imperial Death-Hunter cyborgs. (SWJ9)

Plexus Droid Vessel

this was the name of the starship used by the Imperial Intelligence division to carry information from one system to another. It was essentially a modified, droid-controlled starfighter. (SPG)

Pliada di am Imperium

this open plaza, located at the eastern end of the Glitannai Esplanade near the Imperial Palace on Coruscant, was the site of the traditional Imperial Fair each year, under the reign of Emperor Palpatine. (SWJ5, UF)

Plibene Rock

this small plateau, located near Mos Espa on Tatooine, was believed to contain deposits of the mineral bene. Analysis showed that the rock was simply limestone. (IWE1)

Plicto

a creature whose meat is eaten. (SE)

Plif

this Hoojib was one of the leaders of the group which assisted the Alliance, during its use of the planet Arbra as a base. It was Plif who first trusted Leia Organa and the Alliance, after the soliders of the Alliance landed on the planet. Plif was caught by Chewbacca as the Hoojibs rifled through their base, consuming anything with a power source. Plif explained why the Hoojibs had consumed their power sources, and eventually earned Leia's friendship. After the Alliance team defeated the slivilith which had taken up residence in the Hoojibs' cave, Plif suggested that the Alliance team share the cave with the Hoojibs, working together to build a base and protect themselves from the Empire. In the ensuing months, Plif remained on Arbra to help the Hoojibs and the Alliance personnel integrate their activities to the mutual benefit of both groups. He then accompanied Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa to Kabray station, posing as the delegate from Arbra, with Luke and Leia as his aides, so that they could investigate the whereabouts of Tay Vanis. (LTA5, MC55, MC77)

Pliith

a plant-like species native to the planet Evas VI. (SWJ1)

Plikk

this lithe woman was one of the many females who scratched their way into a position of command within the Imperial armed forces. She attained the rank of Captain shortly before the Battle of Hoth, although being stationed in one of the galaxy's backwater systems meant that her efforts often went unnoticed. She and her first officer, Lieutenant Nizzon, witnessed the Millennium Falcon suddenly jumping into another dimension of space, when their hyperdrive malfunctioned some time after the Battle of Hoth. They both hoped that the discovery of inter-dimensional travel would earn them great favor with the Emperor. When Captain Plikk and her Imperial forces discovered the inter-dimensional location of Sunn-Childe's floating city, she tried to destroy it using the combined firepower of her ships. Sunn-Childe's anger at being attacked flared up, manifesting itself as powerful demons that crippled the Imperial ships. Appalled at his own violence, Sunn-Childe and his majordome Beelyard decided that there could be no peace without sacrifice. Knowing that the Imperial ships were badly damaged, Sunn-Childe called off the demon attack, allowing Plikk to restart her own assault. Plikk used energy from her ships' hyperdrives to destroy Sunn-Childe's floating city, but in doing so she stranded her fleet in the interdimensional nothingness. (MC46)

Plintep Cybernetics Corporation

this Mephout corporation produced a variety of automata, including the RST translator droid. (SWJ11)

Plitex Nine

this incendiary material was used by the Alliance to make bombs and other detonation devices. (SFE)

Plithvine

this was a common vine, distinguished by the way in which it created a vast network of shoots when it grew. (MBS)

Plo

this female name was common among the Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Plo

this was a common name given to male Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Plo Koon

this Jedi Master was one of the last members of the Jedi Council. As a Padawan, Plo Koon was trained by the Wookiee Tyvokka, until his death during the Stark Hyperspace Wars. A Kel Dor descended from a long line of Jedi Knights, Plo Koon was a close friend of Qui-Gon Jinn. He hoped that the human Jedi Master would someday sit on the Council, but recognized that his friend was much too headstrong to adjust to the Council's rigors. Being a Kel Dor, with enlarged external sensory organs, Plo Koon's grasp and control of the Force was incredible, and he was known among the Council for his warrior skills. Plo Koon was noted for his efforts in rallying the forces of the Old Republic after Master Tyvokka was killed during the Fifth Battle of Qotile. Years later, he was present when Anakin Skywalker was first presented to the Council, and was one of the Jedi Masters who were dispatched to Geonosis to combat the Separatists during the opening stages of the Clone Wars. Master Koon participated in many battles, and was nearly killed near the end of the Clone Wars when he was taken hostage aboard the Mersel Kebir, during Rendili's attempt to secede from the Republic. Master Koon had traveled to Rendili with Saesee Tiin, Captain Jan Dodonna, and Anakin Skywalker, in order to ensure that the planet's fleet of Dreadnaughts was not turned over to the Separatists. If an agreement could not be reached, Master Koon was ordered to destroy the fleet. A bold move by Anakin Skywalker saved the Jedi from having to eliminate the ships, and ensured that Rendili would remain free to join the Republic. In the wake of the First Battle of Coruscant, Master Koon was dispatched to Cato Neimoidia, where he assumed control of the planet's forces after Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker were recalled to Coruscant. However, when Darth Sidious revealed his true nature and killed Mace Windu, he sent out communications to the various clone commanders to execute Order 66. Upon hearing the order, the troops that had been supporting Master Koon turned to open fire on him, shooting his starfighter from the sky and utterly destroying the Jedi Master. Plo Koon was portrayed by Alan Ruscoe in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace, by Matt Sloan in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones, and by Philip Wade in Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (SW1, IG1, OWS, SHW, WOTC, RDR, IS3)

Plo, Lomi

this dark-skinned woman was once a student at the Shadow Academy. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Lomi Plo and Welk were captured by the alien invaders and held aboard the Baanu Rass, as part of the group of Force-sensitive individuals used in the creation and breeding of the voxyn. Both Welk and Lomi Plo agreed to help the Jedi infiltrate the worldship and destroy the voxyn, despite the misgivings of Zekk and several other Jedi about their loyalties. However, as the strike force neared the voxyn queen, the Dark Jedi abandoned the Jedi in order to save their own skins. They fled in the ship Tachyon Flier, abandoning Lowbacca but unaware that Raynar Thul was still on board. The young Jedi Knight and his captives didn't escape, and were shot down by Yuuzhan Vong warships. (SBS, NJOSB)

Plodgett

this being was the chief advisor to the Satab of Ventooine, during the early years of the New Order. Plodgett was a short being with feather-like appendages sprouting from each side of his head. (LTA5, MCA2)

P'loh

this Yuuzhan Vong individual was a creche'-mate of Nen Yim. When the Shaper traveled to Zonama Sekot with Tahiri Veila, they found that they both shared memories of P'loh and another creche'-mate, Zhul. They discovered that Nen Yim's own memories had been stolen from her, through the use of the protocol of Qah, by Mezhan Kwaad for the creation of the Riina Kwaad personality that was implanted inside Tahiri's mind. After the Yuuzhan Vong began their invasion of the galaxy, P'loh was assigned to the base on Belkadan. She later died on the planet. (FP)

Plono

this was a common name given to male Duros children. The name Plono came from the term meaning "agreeable". (GCG)

Ploo II

this planet was located in the Ploo Sector of the Expansion Region of the galaxy, and was the homeworld of the Glymphid race. (IWE1)

Ploo IV

this planet was located in the Ploo Sector of the Expansion Region of the galaxy, and was the homeworld of the Fluggrian race. (IWE1)

Ploo Sector

this area of the galaxy is home to the Glymphid and Blubreen species. (IG1, E1A1)

Plook Hartar

this crimelord was a rival of Servid Norn, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Hartar and Norn both believed that they had the best pilots in the galaxy, and set out to prove it. Each nominated a pilot to participate in a race across the galaxy. The winner would be determined by which of the pilots reached the destination first. The race began on Tynna, then required the pilot to obtain a docking permit from each of the following planets: Bothawui, Nal Hutta, Calamari, Almania, Ord Mantell, Fondor, and Bespin. Once all these permits were acquired, the pilot had to make run to Mos Eisley and deliver the permits to the spaceport controllers there. Unknown to Plook Hartar, Servid Norn put a bounty on the head of Hartar's pilot, Scranton Toon, in an effort to ensure victory for his pirates. (GMR6)

Ploong Sounder

this was a large, round speaker that produced the sound from a bandfill, a musical instrument which was often found in jazz bands. (VD)

Plooriod 940

this swoop race, staged annual on the planet Corsin, was part of the Swo-O'Riml Circuit during the last years of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

Plooriod Bodkin

this Old Republic cruiser was dispatched to recapture the Scarlet Thranta, shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars. Led by Jedi Master Nejaa Halcyon, the Plooriod Bodkin was escorted by eight Jedi starfighters, and carried twelve Jedi Knights and thirty members of the Old Republic's judiciary branch. After Master Halcyon managed to locate the Scarlet Thranta and her rogue Captain, Zozridor Slayke, he set down on Bpfassh to capture them. Slayke, however, knew that the Jedi would not purposely attack his camp, and left his chief lieutenant, Grudo, to challenge Halcyon. As the two fought, Slayke slipped behind the lines and stole the Plooriod Bodkin and escaped. The event became an embarrassment to Halcyon, as he returned to Coruscant without Slayke and without his ship. Later, after the battle for Praesitlyn was over, Slayke offered to return the Plooriod Bodkin to Halcyon, but the Jedi Master politely refused. (HNN5, JT)

Plooriod III

Darth Vader killed the brutal Lord Ghorin here, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (XW)

Plooriod IV

the Alliance captured some of Ghorin's Y-Wing fighters near this planet, and used them to discredit the Overlord to Darth Vader. The Alliance later destroyed the frigate Red Wind near the planet. Plooriod IV, located in the Ploo Sector of the galaxy, is covered with marshlands. (XW, SWK)

Ploov

this was the symbol of a Neimoidian diplomat, worn atop their tall headwear. Lott Dod wore a ploov atop his senatorial mitre. (SWDB)

Ploovo 2-for-1

a loan shark, robber, and thief who operated in the Cron Drift during the New Order. He was a human known for his bad temper, a nervous facial tic, and an oily, black topknot. Ploovo was living proof that good breeding and fine education don't always guarantee one will turn out good. He left those things behind and started working for Jigoba as a minor loan shark. When he felt he was ready, Ploovo struck out on his own, gradually expanding his empire until it stretched beyond the borders of the Corporate Sector. History has shown, however, that Ploovo was too subtle or too timid to survive as a crimelord outside the bounds of the Corporate Sector. Thus, he became successful there, but was not well-known to the Empire. He wears a wide assortment of faux gem pinky ring, and had no taste in clothing. After Han Solo repaid Ploovo's duplicity by giving him a dinko as payment, Ploovo became mentally unstable when it came to unusual creatures. He spent much of his fortune collecting taxidermied carcasses and head of creatures, in an effort to show his command over them. (HSE, CSA, HT)

Plooz

this young, green-skinned, alien prince ran away from his father, King Gokus, sometime before the Battle of Yavin. A native of the planet Alzar, he stowed away on a freighter, and wound up on the planet Sooma. The decision to run away from Alzar was not entirely Prince Plooz's, as he was convinced to run away by General Sludd. C-3PO and R2-D2, during a stopover on Sooma which would bring them to Alzar, agreed to accompany Prince Plooz back home. Their ship was attacked by Sludd's forces, and shot down over the Forest Moon of Endor. (MDCAR)

P'Lor

this diminutive, bald-headed man was a cyborg who worked on the Bazarre space station as a lookout for Orion Ferret. (LTA5, MC59)

Plork

this Gungan material was used to stop up bottles. (E1A12)

Plorkscrew

this Gungan tool was used to remove a plork stopper from a bottle. (E1A12)

Plorkscrewen

this was a term used by Gungan bongo racers to describe any daring maneuver that involved a large amount of risk. (GMR4)

Plort

this Targonnian served under Dictator-Forever Craw, and led the attack on Master Zorneth's herdship. He was unable to recover the Ithorian's savorium, for it was destroyed by Zorneth's forces before he could recover it. (DRO)

Plortor, Ger

this man was a scout for the Shad Furies shockball team. He was responsible for recruiting Ytavarg Aleema to play for his team. (CRO)

Ploss Niklos

this was the name of a noted individual from the Nautolan race. (UANT)

Plot

one of the family names used by the Bothan people, it referred to a hero from Bothan mythology. (GCG, WOTC)

Plot

this figure from Bothan mythology was a hero of many battles. (GCG, WOTC)

Ploth

a creature whose meat is prepared as food. When properly prepared, it is a very succulent meal. (TJP)

Plothis

this smuggler acquaintance of Han Solo and Chewbacca ran a small business in Esau's Ridge. Plothis' primary commodity was specialized smuggling equipment, although he was equalling adept at selling information. He was shot in a squabble with a customer about four years before the Black Fleet Crisis. Bracha e'Naso took over the day-to-day operation of his business. (TT)

Ploven

this aquatic race is native to the planet Gra Ploven. The Empire attempted to subjugate the race, but the Ploven refused to pay what the Imperials called a "defense assessment." In retaliation, the Empire ordered the Imperial-class Star Destroyer Forger to concentrate its firepower on the planet's bodies of water. The resulting super-hot steam boiled 200,000 Ploven alive in three coastal cities. They have a number of fins situated along their back, earning them the derogatory nickname "Finbacks." (SOL)

Plu Makor

this near-human man was a native of the planet Demar. Distinguished by his red eyes and the short barbs which surrounded his eyes and temples, Plu operated Ship Shop G-S7 during the height of the New Order. His career started as a technician aboard one of Lant Mining Corporation's transports, and he soon found that he had a knack for starship repair. He quit LMC and went to work on G-S7 as a mechanic, eventually buying out the owner of a small repair facility and renaming it Ship Shop G-S7. A demanding boss, Plu was a shrewd but fair businessman who required a cash payment at the completion of any repairs. He was also an rebel operative who worked for Trep Reskan, and Plu was known to have funneled parts, ship, and information to the Alliance during the era of the Battle of Yavin. When called for, Plu traveled within the Brak Sector aboard his modified freighter, the Helping Hand. (FBS)

Pludris

a fermented spirit. (RM)

Pluf-G Mammoth

see Plug-F Mammoth (SOT)

Plug

this was the nickname of the astromech droid R2-Z13, which was assigned to Koril Bekam as a member of the New Republic's Blackmoon Squadron. (EL2)

Plug-2 Behemoth

a series of podracers developed by Collor Pondrat. Mars Guo employed a Plug-2 Behemoth podracer. The cockpit of this racer measured 4.11 meters in length, and its engines were 7.24 meters long. The Behemoth could race at speeds of 790 kilometers per hour or more. (IG1)

Plug-8G

this was a series of podracing engines developed by Vokoff-Strood. Most often used on the Vokoff-Strood Plug-G 927, these 4.5-meter-long engines resembled a cluster of tubes surrounding the central turbine. Three larger tubes sat outboard and below the main engine, and were used as ramair intakes. Four smaller tubes were set equally around the central turbine, and served as directional modifiers. (IG1)

"Plug-Eye" Maygo

this heavily-muscled Marauder left his homeworld of Sanyassa as a youth, but found himself creditless in the streets of Annaj shortly afterward. He found work as a bodyguard and prizefighter, until a slugthrower he was using backfired in his face, lodging the projectile in his left eye. This earned him the nickname "Plug-Eye" as well as reputation as a tough guy. During the early years of the New Republic, he was hired by the Kintan Gunrunners as a strong arm, although he was unaware that they had no plans to share their treasures with him. (GMR9)

Plug-F Mammoth

this huge racing engine was designed by Collor Pondrat. The podracer Sebulba mated a pair of Plug-F Mammoths to Split-X intakes to power his pod. They measure 7.47 meters in length, and race at speeds approaching 829 kilometers per hour. Note that this racing engine was described as the Plug-G Mammoth in Secrets of Tatooine. (X1, IG1, SOT)

Plug-G 927

this is a series of podracer manufactured by Vokoff-Strood. It was a relatively small racer, with a cockpit that was just 1.83 meters long and a pair of Plug-8G engines that were 4.5 meters long. (IG1)

Plug-series Thrust Coil

these coils come in a variety of sizes, depending on the amount a racers needs to multiply their engine's capacity. Plug-1 coils simply transfer energy without multiplying it. The largest coil, a Plug-8, raises an engine's output eight-fold. (RAC)

Plumba

this obese human was a collector of ancient weapons, and ran the small shop known as Antiques by Dumas until he was executed by an agent of Ysanne Isard. The agent had gained Plumba's confidence by presenting him with a Sith lanvarok, which the agent promptly used to kill Plumba. (XWMR)

Plumbum

an important element mined in the galaxy. (CS)

Plumed Rasp

this species of rasp was native to the planet Corellia, and was noted for its unusual plumage. (GQRG)

Plund

this was one of the more common Kel Dor surnames. Its meaning translated into Basic as "philosopher". (GCG)

Plutha System

this star system was known for its wide asteroid belt. (GMR5)

Pluthan Asteroid Field

Krova the Hutt was captured by Langro Dis in this asteroid belt, which was part of the Plutha System, shortly after the Battle of Endor. (GMR5)

Plutrefin

this is one of several small, industrial towns strewn across the northern coast of Anai, on the planet Lianna. (ML)

this was the first version of the Merr-Sonn Munitions portable missile launcher, first introduced during the Clone Wars for use by the clone troopers of the Army of the Republic. Like its descendants, the PLX-1 could fire "dumb" missiles that had to be aimed by the trooper, or "smart" missiles that could locate their target based on heat signature or gravity-activated moed (GAM) missiles. The PLX-1 could hold two projectiles, one in the barrel and a second in reserve. (SWDB) nicknamed "Plex," this was MerrSonn's portable, disposable missile launcher. It could fire rockets or concussion missiles, and was fast and powerful. It was fired from the shoulder, and could fire dumb missiles at sighted targets or GAM missiles. (ISB)

PLX-2

PLX-2M

this was the second generation of Merr-Sonn's portable missile launcher. They were capable of shooting what became known as chips, or large shrapnel-like projectiles. (IR)

PLX-4

the third generation of Merr-Sonn's "PLEX" missile launcher, the PLX-4 can fire both missiles and standard rockets. It can be used on the shoulder, like the PLX-2M, but can also be mounted on a tripod for greater accuracy. It can use smart GAM missiles, dumb rockets for establishing line-of-sight, or the newer Savant missiles. (TTSB)

PLY 3000

SoroSuub's personal luxury yacht, the PLY 3000 was a 50-meter starship that had three main levels: the main deck, which features a full galley, six deluxe cabins, a dining area, and the bridge; an engineering level below the main deck; and an observation area above the main deck, in the rear. The ship was armed with a single laser cannon, but had minimal shielding and limited hyperdrive capability. (DFRSB)

Plyridian Fever

this disease, which was often fatal if not properly diagnosed, had an incubation period of about four weeks. Any being discovered to have the initial symptoms of the disease had to be quarantined for up to four weeks, to determine whether or not plyridian fever was the cause. (SWI68)

PM-3B

this Minas-Lergo passenger car was a droid-operated vehicle used to carry up to fourteen passengers through the tubes that connected sealed environment chambers on hostile planets. The PM-3B measured nine meters in length, and could achieve speeds of fifty kilometers per hour. (GSE)

PM-7C

this Minas-Lergo cargo car was a droid-operated vehicle used to carry two passengers and up to five metric tons of cargo through the tubes that connected sealed environment chambers on hostile planets. The PM-7C measured nine meters in length, and could achieve speeds of fifty kilometers per hour. (GSE)

Po Ban

this name, which meant "green eyes", was common among Gungan males. This name was unusual, since it was unusual for Gungans to have green eyes. (GCG)

Po Nudo

this Aqualish was an Old Republic Senator. He was one of the many supporters gathered by Senator

Palpatine of Naboo, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Representing the planet Ando, Po Nudo worked to ensure that commerce was maintained across the galaxy. Senator Po Nudo was also one of the first Senators to convince his homeworld to secede from the Republic, joining the Confederacy of Independent Systems some ten years after the Battle of Naboo. (COD, SWDB)

Po Nulnik

this was a noted Nuknog individual in the history of the planet Sump. (UANT)

Po Ruddle Lingsnot

this humanoid inhabitant of Cloud City at Bespin was at one time a used cloud car salesman. He worked hard to get himself elected to the outpost's Council on Tourism and Extraplanetary Investment. He went on from there to become an established member of the Exex. He continuously promotes Cloud City's virtues, as well as those of the planet Bespin. (ISU)

Poas Trell

an executive aide assigned to Nanaod Engh, she witnessed Leia Organa-Solo's granting of immediate membership to those planets in Farlax Sector which requested it. The planets were reacting to the threat of the Yevethan Purge, and requesting the assistance of the New Republic. She knew that Engh should be the individual witnessing the memberships, and questioned Leia's right to grant them on such short notice. (SOL)

Poborandurannum

this sacred temple is found on the planet Natinati. Jabba the Hutt visited the site some years before the Battle of Yavin. (JTH)

Pocarno, Tiv

known to his friends as "Poke", this man was a cantakerous smuggler who plied the spacelanes for more than thirty years in the transport ship he called the Broken 'Spanner. He spent much of his wealth maintaining the old starship, and found himself indebted to Torel Vorne after upgrading a number of systems. When "Poke" tried to make one last smuggling run to pay of Vorne, he failed miserably. Unable to pay off his debts, "Poke" found himself an unwilling participant in Vorne's "organ donor program." The Broken 'Spanner was impounded and used by Vorne's organization. (SS)

Pochi

this planet, the third in the Faarlsun System, is the homeworld of the tulvarees. It is a dry, but habitable world covered with endless plains and a few low mountain ranges. The average day on Pochi lasts about 25 standard hours, and its year encompasses 350 local days. Pochi has three moons. (WBC)

Pocia

this gas giant was the fourth planet of the Essesia System. It was orbited by nineteen moons. (CCW)

Pocka

this Quarren worked for Skydove Freight as a pilot, and was often at the controls of the Golden Opportunity during the early years of the New order. Although Pocka knew that he was working for the Anjiliac clan of Hutts, he preferred to remain oblivious to the details of his work, claiming that "If I don't know anything, they can't beat it out of me." (TF)

Pocker

this was a modified version of the Gungan atlatl, using an ion burst to propel a dart or spear at a target. (AOTCN)

Pocket Computer

this generic term refers to any small, portable computer terminal which allows the user to gain access to the data in a mainframe. Pocket computers do not allow the user to control the mainframe. (CFG)

Pocket Cruiser

an obsolete class of capital ship which saw action near the end of the Clone Wars. (HSL)

Pocket Patrol Boat

a small fighter used by the Corellian defense network, these ships (called PPBs) sacrificed armament for speed. (AC)

Pocket Secretary

developed by MicroData Technologies, this small edvice was a combination of a datapad and audio recorder, with specialized software bundled inside. An expansion slot allowed special datacards to be entered into the Pocket Secretary, adding specific information to the device's memory. When used by administrative aides and assistants, it provided instant access to all manner of information and calculations, as well as a scheduling system and access to corporate databases. (AEG)

Pod Beast

this unusual creature was bio-engineered by the Yuuzhan Vong to act as a kind of chair or couch. It was developed by the Shapers as an alternative to yorik coral or other rigid forms of furniture. The pod beast could accept large amounts of weight, adjusting its form to cradle the weight in comfort. (T)

Pod Trooper

this was the term used by the Yuuzhan Vong to describe those warriors who were inserted onto a planet via small, yorik coral pods. These pods had minimal life support and drive systems, basically just enough to get the warrior safely to the ground. (T)

Podadun

this Teyrian city is located at the point where the River District Flyway breaks off from the Rift Skyrail. (SOL)

Pod-bread

this was a form of bread that was baked on the planet Tatooine during the last years of the Old Republic. (BF5)

Poderis

the primary planet in the Poderis system, in the Orus Sector, Poderis was a "marginal" world of tough, stubborn colonists. The surface of the planet was dominated by lowland slough, leaving the only arable pieces of land situated atop island-like mesas scattered across the land. One of the possible sources of Imperial clones, leaked by Thrawn in an effort to throw the Republic off its search. It had a ten-hour rotational cycle and a severe axial tilt, a combination which created intense windstorms. The planet's inhabitants learned to build huge shield-barriers around their cities to dampen and deflect the winds. (TLC)

Podlong Foahl

this Givin worked for Chief Purser Waverton aboard the Aurorient Express, and was responsible for loading and unloading the cargoes of the wealthier passengers. When the ship was attacked by Fastlatch-class droids which were hidden in the cargo bays, Waverton's records indicated that it was Foahl who had supposedly loaded Saul Moegantz's cargo. Moegantz's cargo lot had been swapped out in favor of the droids, leading Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi to investigate Foahl's actions in loading the lot. Foahl fled as soon as the Jedi asked him about the cargo lot, not even mentioning the droids. They took Foahl flight as a sign of guilt, and tried to bring him back for questioning. He revealed that he had brought the droids on board for show, as part of a plan to evacuate the ship and steal its more valuable cargoes. However, Foahl was unaware of the true danger that the ship was in. He tried to ensure his survival by threatening to set off a core bomb, but Waverton shot him dead before he could activate the explosive. Waverton later revealed that Podlong had been a pressure pirate, part of the gang who had contracted Waverton to help them steal the cargo from the Aurorient Express. (TAE)

Podon

a type of tree native to the rift valleys of Belsavis. It bears a tasty fruit often used in cider. The fruit is farily sturdy, and can be packed by droids instead of humanoids. (COJ)

Podono

this man witnessed a Twi'leki soldier evade three opponents and disarm them, while protected by a suit of Staad Armor. (GUN)

Po'dorj

this was a plant whose fruit which was eaten by the Ebruchi. (SWJ11)

Podpopper

this vegetable was grown in the hydroponic gardens of Tatooine, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (TG)

Podrace Balloon

this is a generic term used to describe the various flotation devices used to hold cameras or bold spectators over a pod racing arena. Often filled with tibanna gas, these ungainly balloons hover above the course and allow an unobstructed view of the nearby course. Spectators who ride in podrace balloons often do so at their own risk, because the racers (or their cronies) often shoot them down, hoping to eliminate a potential camera position and allow more underhanded racing to take place. (IG1)

Podrace Cam Droid

similar in design to the Senate Cam Droid, these small automatons employ a tiny repulsor engine to float above a pod racing course and supply real-time footage of the race. There are a number of cam droids in operation at one time: usually, one concentrates on each race, while several remain stationary over certain checkpoints or exciting parts of the course. They are designed to operate in a multitude of environments, and the images they collect are sent back to the arena for immediate consumption by pod racing fans. (IG1)

Podracer

this is a generic term used to describe any of the small, one-man repulsorcraft used to race across a predefined pod racing course. Each pod contains the driver, and is connected by Steelton control cables to the turbine engines that propel the craft forward. The pod contains a repulsorlift engine, that keeps the craft at a specific, low-level altitude. The turbine engines - from two to four per pod - are incredibly powerful, and are connected by an energy binder that keeps them from flying apart. Pod racing was popularized in the Outer Rim during the last decades of the Old Republic. Because of the reflexes needed to react to the pod and the course, as well as the dexterity needed to control the pod racer, nearly all pod racers were non-humans. Sometimes, at least four hands were needed to maintain control of the ship, while sharp reflexes and quick thinking were needed to anticipate the course as the small craft are propelled forward at speeds reaching 900 kilometers per hour and more. (SW1, TPM, X1)

Podracing

this sport developed in the Outer Rim in the last decades of the Old Republic, and remained popular even with the advent of the New Order. Podracing involved the maneuvering of repulsor-equipped pod racers around a predefined course. Each race usually required each of up to fifteen opponents to maneuver the course three times. It was considered more dangerous than swoop racing, because the turbines were not directly connected to the pod. This, coupled with the winding, obstacle-filled courses that made up the circuit of races, often meant that pod racers were continually at risk. Because of the reflexes needed to react to the pod and the course, as well as the dexterity needed to control the pod racer, nearly all pod racers were non-humans. At least four hands were needed to maintain control of the ship, while sharp reflexes and quick thinking were needed to anticipate the course. After the wild finish of the Boonta Eve Classic, shortly before the Battle of Naboo, Podracing's popularity reached an all-time high. However, as the political situation in the Old Republic deteriorated, so did the appeal of podracing. Many of the sports generally-accepted criminal activities were exposed to public view, and some of the most popular podracers were arrested for a variety of crimes. The sport was soon outlawed in the Core Worlds. Shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars, it was reported that attendance had dropped more than fifty percent from the era of the Battle of Naboo, although betting transactions remained at an all-time high. Eventually, podracing gave way to swoop racing and other forms of extreme sports. (SW1, TPM, HNN4, JQ3)

Podracing Quarterly

this holo-zine was dedicated to covering the sport of podracing. (YJC1)

Poe

this silver protocol droid belonged to Gror Pernon, and was given to Rogue Squadron after Plourr returned to Eiattu. The Rogues used their connection to Kina Margath to get Poe infiltrated as an assistant to Sair Yonka, and obtained valuable information on the Captain's affair with Aellyn Jandi. (XWWP, BW)

Poesy

this Mon Calamari light cruiser, commanded by Commodore Mabettye, served as Admiral Darez Wuht's flagship while it was stationed near protect the planet Duro during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. It was armed with fourteen turbolasers, eighteen ion cannons, a six heavy tractor beam projectors. (BP, NEGV)

Pog

this being served as a the front-man for the ThunderForce mercenary unit, recruiting new members via the newsnets. Although his base of operations was on Tralus, Pog met his recruits at Fathoms on Calamari. (HAS)

Poggle the Lesser

this Geonosian grew up in the lowest of castes within the Stalgasin Hive, and was forced to work his way up the societal ladder through cunning and strength. Poggle hated Hadiss the Vaulted, and swore at an early age that he would overthrow Hadiss' rule. After causing several small uprisings, Poggle and his followers were arrested and forced to fight in the petrana-ki gladiator arenas, for the pleasure of Hadiss and his cronies. Only Poggle managed to survive, even defeating the acklay Hadiss kept as a surprise, and he assumed the role of Archduke of Geonosis. Shortly afterward, Poggle was contacted by Darth Sidious, who agreed to fund the rebellion against Hadiss in return for battle droid production facilities. Poggle agreed, and his own forces grew quickly with Sidious' assistance. On the Eve of Meckgin, shortly before the Battle of Naboo, Poggle defeated Hadiss and had the other Geonosian devoured by an acklay. He then set to work creating battle droid production facilities for the Trade Federation. It was during this time that Poggle grew to hate Nute Gunray, mainly for the Neimoidian's ineptitude. The failure of the Trade Federation to win the Battle of Naboo only deepened Poggle's hatred. Rather than waiting for new instructions, Poggle developed a superior version of the standard battle droid, shortly before the Clone Wars. In the wake of the Republic's victory at the Battle of Geonosis, Poggle and his lieutenants fled with the Separatists to several remote worlds, always trying to remain one step ahead of their Jedi pursuers. After hiding on Utapau under the protection of General Grievous, the Separatists were taken to Mustafar. It was there, after Darth Sidious finally lured Anakin Skywalker to the Darth Side of the Force, that the Separatist leaders met their deaths. Skywalker was dispatched to Mustafar by Sidious himself, with orders to eliminate them. Skywalker quickly beheaded Poggle, before setting off after the rest of the Separatist leaders. Poggle was portrayed by Marton Csokas in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones. (OWS, AOTCN, SWI66, IS3)

Pohl

a form of adhesive used in securing optical components, such as focusing lenses and beam gems. (CFG)

Pohtarza

this t'landa Til was appointed the Head Sacredot of Colony Five, on Ylesia. He was assassinated by an Aar'aa who had infiltrated the colony at Jabba the Hutt's request, shortly before the Battle of Ylesia. (RD)

Poina Tuc-shol

this Vashan swordsbeing set out to locate the Tessent during the early years of the New Republic, saying that it was a religious artifact that non-Vashans were unworthy to possess. He was one of the last members of his species to practice the arts of wielding a sword. He also believed that the Tessent was actually a sin-bullet expelled by the Vashan god of creativity, and wanted to return to Vasha as a religious artifact. (GMR9)

Poinard, Ark

this man served the Imperial Remnant as a Vice Admiral, and he commanded the Erinnic during the support of the New Republic against the Yuuzhan Vong. His brother was once in command of an AT-AT division for the Empire. Poinard and the Erinnic were at Ord Mantell to help defend against a Yuuzhan Vong attack, based on intelligence they had received from the New Republic. (HT)

Point Down

this was one of the primary Separatist bases on the planet Jabim, during the early stages of the Clone Wars. It was captured by the Army of the Republic, but at the loss of the Republic's own Shelter Base. (SWI69)

Point Five

a game of chance and skill often found in casinos. (HSR)

Point Modie

this immense city was located on the planet Maramere, and served as the planetary capital during the Trade Federation's occupation of the planet. Point Modie was built at the base of an inverted cone of stone, and was wondrous to behold. Several large ports extended outward from the city, allowing all manner of ocean-going trade to occur. (CRBN)

Point, The

this was the name given to the southern cape of the largest island on the planet Spira. Just off The Point, the planet's two strongest currents meet, creating a surging area of strong eddies, minor whirlpools, and large waves. The Spira Regatta Open passed through the waters of The Point, forcing racers to navigate with dexterity and skill to overcome the ever-changing conditions. (SWJ1)

Pointer

starfighter pilot slang for an X-Wing. (IJ)

Pointer Fish

the flesh of this fish, which was native to the oceans of Calamari, was often served raw, rolled in pieces of lampfish tongue. (FH1)

Poison Grenade

developed more than 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War, this form of explosive device released a chemical poison into the air when it exploded. This poison could be of many forms, from deadly vapors to toxic liquid, although it was usually a fast-acting poison that killed any being that was sprayed in the explosion. (KOTOR)

Poista, Elea

this woman was a top exex at Bespin Motors, but she also ran a lucrative black-market sales operation under the alias Kel. She started her career in a shipping company on Ralltiir before joining Bespin Motors. It was rumored that she was the key figure in bringing Molly's Merchants in to help slice Incom Industries' computers and funnel funds into Bespin Motors' own accounts. (GG2)

Pok

this Yuzzem was indentured to a merchant on the planet Tatooine, during the early years of the New Order. The merchant had received the Yuzzem as a gift, but vehemently despised slavery. Pok was set free, and the merchant paid him to work. (EGA)

Pok Nar-Tan

this Nimbanel served as the primary representative of the Klatooinan Trade Guild on the planet Boztrok, during the early years of the New Order. His offices were housed in an massive tower near Boztrok's main spaceport, and the tower served as its own port for the ships of the Guild. Nar-Tan was something of a crimelord, and he once hired Platt Okeefe as a pilot, shortly after she ended her tenure with Captain Kassler aboard the Ravelev. Nar-Tan later placed a small bounty on Platt's head for an unspecified offense. (IDC, PSG, SWG10)

Pokkta

a leafy plant found on the planet Bakura. (TB)

Pok's Demise

Platt Okeefe operated this ship during several missions to Tatooine, during the Galactic Civil War. It was named in "honor" of Pok Nar-Tan. She was forced to crashland it in the Dune Sea during an aborted mission, and the Pok's Demise was abandoned to the desert. (SWG10)

Pol

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name meant "stalactite". (GCG)

Pol

this was the term used to describe those agents of the Pentastar Alignment's Politerate branch, who were charged with upholding the tenets of the New Order in every branch of the Alignment's service. (SWJ3)

Pol

this was a common name used by the Qwohog race. (UANT)

Pol dwag

this was the traditional greeting used by a Yuuzhan Vong when meeting with a peer of equal rank or caste. (NJOSB)

Pol Pollen

this form of pollen was actually a mild stimulant. Many beings snorted the yellowish dust, believing that it heightened a being's ability to think and reason. (SFE)

Pol Secura

this blue-skinned Twi'lek male was Aayla Secura's uncle, and was a member of the Head Clan which controlled Ryloth during the years following the Battle of Naboo. After both Aayla and her teacher, Quinlan Vos, traveled to Ryloth to investigate the development of glitteryll, he was forced by a mysterious patron to eliminate their opposition. This patron, later revealed to be the Twi'lek Kh'aris, forced Pol Secura to accede to his demands, on the threat of death if the production of glitteryll was not protected. Pol Secura had used the financial rewards of glitteryll to ensure his position of power, but he also realized that the death of any member of the Head Clan would mean his own death. Pol arranged for both Jedi to have their memories' erased, then dumped on separate planets, in order to curtail their investigation. Unfortunately, Quinlan managed to survive his exile to Nar Shaddaa and returned to Ryloth to continue the investigation. When Asante' Vos nearly killed Quinlan in the ryll caves, she revealed that it had been herself and Pol Secura who fed Quinlan and Aayla an overdose of glitteryll to erase their memories. Their plan had been to do away with the Jedi without killing them, thereby clearing the way to continue production of glitteryll. After Asante's death, Quinlan sought out Pol to confront him about Aayla's whereabouts. Pol admitted that Aayla was a member of his own harem, where he could keep an eye on her. He also admitted that his patron was Chom Frey Kaa. When Quinlan tried to kill Pol for his treachery, Aayla tried to intervene. Her limited command of the Force caused Pol to fall from a ledge to his death. (SWT, DRKN, ROP)

Pol SulliVaun

this Givin ambassador agreed to meet with Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa Solo, in the wake of the Battle of Endor, to discuss a renewed relationship between the Givin and the New Republic. (EGA)

Pol, Tamaron

a native of the planet Lanthrym, this man swore he'd never live in poverty again after leaving the planet. To this end, he became one of the more infamous conmen of Elrood Sector during the height of the New Order. He hung around in Coynite starports, appearing to be a gullible though likable young man. He then lured people to him and bilked them out of their savings. He often presented himself as a guide, hoping to gain the confidence of others in order to get close to them. (PG3)

Polain

this independent spacer worked regularly in the Outer Rim, and learned that the Alliance was equipping S9 power droids with radiation shielding to harass Imperial raddtroopers during combat. (FTD)

Polana

Pol-droid

any droid programmed for law enforcement. (CSWEA)

Poldt

a race of thin, sour-faced aliens. (TPM)

Pole, Jered

this Alliance Lieutenant was a dark-skinned mercenary who worked for the salary of one credit per year. He openly supported the Alliance, but couldn't very well work as a mercenary for free. He volunteered to head up the Alliance's Operation Starbird, and assumed the guise of Jerth Merin in order to insinuate himself into the Imperial social order. (GSE)

Polearm Squadron

this New Republic group of A-Wings was assigned to the support structure for the Mon Remonda's fleet during the hunt for Warlord Zsinj and the Iron Fist. (IF)

Polestar Reception Room

located just off the Grand Hall of the Old Republic's Senate Rotunda, the Polestar Reception Room was the place where beings from across the galaxy awaited their audiences with Senators and other dignitaries. (JQ5)

Polg

this Imperial Lieutenant was stationed on the planet Garos IV, during the early years of the New Republic. (SWJ2)

Polhraz

this was an alien race which was sometimes considered to be stupid-looking. (SWT)

Police Cruiser Backup Unit

see PCBU (WOA21)

Polikex, Shae

this elderly woman was a doctor of some renown who joined the Alliance shortly before the Battle of Yavin. She was dispatched to the Massassi Base on Yavin 4, to help the medical teams there understand the unusual ailments that the personnel on Yavin 4 were being exposed to. It was her work, along with the help of Biggs Darklighter and Nera Dantels, that helped save the life of Derek "Hobbie" Klivian. (SWED)

Polipe

this multi-tentacled creature was Booster Terrik's co-pilot some years before the Battle of Yavin. He assisted Booster in keeping Wedge Antilles safe when the Bonestar Pirates destroyed the Antilles' fuel depot on Gus Treta. (XWPA)

Polis Massa

this remote, Outer Rim world suffered an unknown cataclysm many millennia before the Clone Wars. As a result, the planet was torn apart, leaving several large planetoids and an asteroid field as a reminder of the planet's existence. An ancient civilization once flourished on the planet, but was destroyed in the event. During the final decades of the Old Republic, a group of beings from the Subterrel Sector of the galaxy established an archaeological preserve in the asteroid field, hoping to learn more about the planet and its inhabitants. These beings eventually established a permanent settlement on the largest fragment of the planet, and came to call themselves Polis Massans. (OWS, VD3)

Polis Massan

although not native to the former planet of Polis Massa, this race of diminutive, humanoid beings spent so much time doing archaeological work in the surrounding asteroid belt that they came to calling themselves Polis Massans. The average Polis Massan had a short, thin body that gave them the appearance of being children. The most unique feature of a Polis Massan was its face, which lacked a nose and mouth. Only a pair of tiny, deep-focus eyes broke the monotony of the pale, osmotic membrane that served as a face. Although Polis Massans were capable of a form of speech, they often used a limited form of telepathy to communicate with each other. Each of the Polis Massan's two hands had three fingers and an opposable thumb. The genetic stock of the Polis Massan people could be traced to a planet in the Subterrel Sector of the galaxy. In an effort to assist with learning more about the former inhabitants of Polis Massa, the modern Polis Massans traveled to Kamino to learn about cloning techniques. (OWS, VD3)

Poliss

this Ithorian shopkeeper on board the herdship Bazaar specialized in droid sales and repair. Poliss was a sympathizer of the Alliance, and often recruited new members with the help of the craftsman, Jerru. (GA)

Politerate

this branch of the Pentastar Alignment's Chamber of Order was established to ensure that the principles and tenets of the New Order were being followed and maintained by Alignment personnel. Every office and outpost of the Pentastar Alignment was assigned an officer of the Politerate, known as a Pol, who was in charge of making sure the New Order was being upheld. (SWJ3)

Polith Belt

this asteroid belt was located between Loxizhra and Thyferra, the second and third worlds of the Polith system. (PH)

Politrix

this red-haired woman was a Jedi Knight during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. She was a good friend of Jang Li-Li during this time. When the Clone Wars broke out across the galaxy, Politrix was one of the many Jedi who became military commanders. Unfortunately, she was killed in an ambush just two months after the Battle of Geonosis, when she was caught in the blast of a plasma grenade. (YDR)

Polix, Aphas

this alias was used by Niklas Cories, during the time he spent in the musical group known as Distraction. (WOA28)

Polixi

this barren ball of rock was the innermost planet of the Polith System, located in the Inner Rim. (PH)

Polke

Poll

this is the name used to describe the bitterly-cold winter season on Draenell's Point. (GMK)

Pollar, Reme

this female pilot joined Rogue Squadron shortly after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. (IJ)

Pollard

this Alliance Lieutenant participated in the assassination attempt on Grand Moff Tarkin, and assisted in the rescue of Ackbar. He admired Ackbar's strength, and worked with the Mon Calamari at every turn possible. Pollard worked in what he deemed "important secondary roles," even though he was a natural-born leader. He worked with Ackbar on the Shantipole Project, and strongly distrusted Salin Glek. His face was heavily scarred from an unknown accident. (SFS)

Pollard Seario

this being was the President of Czerka Corporation during the height of the Great Sith War. Many wondered about the location of Czerka's headquarters on the planet, and rumors of his ties to the ancient Sith Empire traveled throughout the galaxy. (KOTOR)

Pollillus

this planet, located between the Koornacht Cluster and the Unknown Regions, was the homeworld of the Troig race. (SWDB, SOT)

Pollinator

this species of swarming insect was native to the planet Vaynai. These flying insects were named for the fact that they pollenate most of the flowering plants on the planet's surface. However, the pollinators were also very territorial, and were known to defend their home flowerbeds with vigor. (GMR8)

Pollo Tipn

this young Devaronian was a student of galactic history, and one of Voren Na'al's best students. He dreamed of one day meeting the heroes of the Battle of Yavin, just as Na'al had done. Several years after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn, Na'al chose Tipn to revisit the events surrounding Thrawn's rise and defeat. Na'al also asked Tipn to accompany him on a fact-finding mission to Exocron. (TTSB)

Pollux

this man was the captain of the starship Nebula Chaser. Although not overly loyal to the Jedi Knights, Pollux agreed to help Alema and Numa Rar evacuate the natives of New Plympto when the Yuuzhan Vong destroyed the planet's ecosystem. He paid for his actions when the Nebula Chaser was ambushed by the Yuuzhan Vong. In an effort to save the two Jedi, Pollux refused to admit they were aboard the ship. In return for his insolence, the Yuuzhan Vong cut off his ear and killed the crew before taking control of the refugees. Captain Pollux was later killed when the Nebula Chaser was destroyed. (SBS)

Pollux 816

this was the override authorization code which was keyed only to Captain Pollux, during his tenure in command of the Nebula Chaser. (SBS)

Polly

this was the nickname used by Trem DeSelvaine to describe the Polydroxol individual he studied, during his initial work with the Polydroxol species. (SWJ12)

Polmanar

this primary planet in the Polmanar System of the Anoat Sector, this world was one of many colony worlds that were settled by the Nothoiins. It eventually became a textile manufacturing site for much of the Anoat Sector. Polmanar blockaded by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War, when the narcotic effects of reedug were discovered. The Imperial occupation of the planet was met with fierce opposition from the natives, who succeeded in keeping the Empire at bay using guerilla tactics. The guerillas were supported by the Alliance from the base on Isis, and the gunship Handree was en route to Polmanar when it was hijacked by Imperial forces. In the wake of the Battle of Yavin, the Empire abandoned their base on Polmanar. (IC, WOA33)

this name is given to the Grannan inhabitants of the planet Polneye. (SOL)

Polneye

this was the second planet in the Koornacht Cluster overtaken by the Yevetha during the Great Purge. It was known for its wonderful garden cities until the Yevetha laid waste to the planet. During the Galactic Civil War, Polneye was the site of an Imperial transshipment port, for its high-altitude cloud cover was extremely thick. This hid the ground operations, which included a flight of TIE Interceptors. When the Empire crumbled, the troops there abandoned the planet, leaving it to the civilian population. The humans tightened their belts and eked out a surprisingly prosperous existence until the Yevetha arrived. The Polneyi were the only group to fight back against the Yevetha, but their resistance was quickly routed. The cities on Polneye were arranged around the central spaceport, and numbered sequentially around the four points of the compass (9 South, 14 East, etc.). (BTS)

Polneyi

the human inhabitants of Polneye. (BTS)

Polo Se'Lab

this Bothan was once a Junior Senator in the Old Republic Senate, and often found himself on the same side of arguments with Sayer Mon Neela. The pair formed a lasting friendship, which continued after Senator Palaptine was elected Supreme Chancellor. Polo Se'Lab joined the Alliance after an Imperial raid on a Bothan spynet outpost killed his wife. He was happy to learn that his posting as the Commander of the Alliance base on Carosi XII would allow him to be reunited with Madame Neela, who had been posted there as a military strategist. (SWJ10)

Polonium

an important element mined in the galaxy. (CS)

Polordian Smootdust

this was one of the many illegal drugs that surfaced on the planet Coruscant, during the last years of the Old Republic. (BF6)

Polos

this toxic world was the third planet of the Beshqek System, located in the Deep Core of the galaxy. It was orbited by a single moon. (PH)

Polosich

this alien race has yellow, velvet-like skin. (RM)

Polrowl

this was a common name among the Whiphid race. (UANT)

Pols Anaxes

this was the name of the largest city found on the planet Anaxes, which was also the site of the planet's primary civilian spaceport. The city, like the surrounding Sirpar Hills, was a graceful place where most motorized vehicles were forbidden. A network of underground access tubes allowed speeders and groundcars to reach their destinations, while aboveground traffic moved about in quiet repulsor-equipped limos or keffi-drawn carriages. (CCW)

Polst

this man was a lowlife loanshark who controlled a small portion of the criminal underground of the city of Hedrett, on the planet Cularin, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. (EOS)

Polta Bean

this hardy legume could grow in the harshest conditions, and was often one of the first plants introduced to newly terraformed areas. The beans of the plant could be boiled and mashed to create a nourishing gruel. (IWE1)

Polters, Trace

this man owned and operated the Ma'Haffee Shipyards, located in the Cularin System, during the height of the Clone Wars. Polters was an ally of the Jedi Knights who served at the Almas Academy, and was often able to help them acquire a starship for new missions. During the height of the Clone Wars, Polters found that many of the ships which were once available throughout Cularin had been requisitioned by the military - either the Thaereians or the Cularin navy - and was unable to assist the Jedi futher. (LFCW)

Poltroon

an Alliance shuttle group destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Poltroop

this leaves of this tough Gamorrean plant were used to weave baskets. The seeds of the poltroop could be pressed, and an oil was extracted which was burned for light and heat. (SWJ14)

Poltur Virus

this virus was first contracted by the Wookiees of the Myyydril tribe, after they began living in the caverns beneath the Mysess Glade to avoid persecution. (SWGAL)

Polus Net

this was the netting used by Ansionian hunters to capture large prey. (APS)

Polwocz

native to the Spinward Sector, this creature buries its immature offspring underground. There, the spawn lie dormant for many years until they hatch. When they do hatch, the young polwocz immediately go into a feeding frenzy. These frenzied creatures have been known to destroy entire cities in their search for food. (ISB)

Poly Diamond

Poly-alloy

this strong, nearly organic material was used to create the "bones" of a human-replica droid. (FH2)

Polybiotic

this antibiotic drug was developed during the last decades of the Old Republic, and was useful in treating a number of races and conditions. (MBS)

Polydex-9

this substance was the only known compound that can fully repair the magnetic bottle on a starship's drive. It acted as a kind of shield, protecting fusion generators from magnetic fields and helping to secure them from leakage. (SWJ4)

Polydroxol

this race of shape-shifting creatures resembles a 200 kilogram mass of mercury, in its liquid state. They are capable of changing into almost any shape, but do not have the ability to mimic colors. They were native to the toxic world of Sevetta, where they lived in volcanic pools of molten metal. They had a complex circulatory system which passed electroglobins throughout their bodies, and lived without oxygen. On their homeworld, Polydroxol always travel in pairs. (TSK, SWJ12)

Polyfab

this inexpensive, thermal material was developed during the last years of the Old Republic for use in tarps and windbreakers that could trap body heat. (MJH)

Polyfibe

an inexpensive fabric used to make cheap clothing. (COJ)

Polyfoam

this material is used in a number of applications, including insulation and packaging. (MA)

Polyglot

this slang term refers to any higher-order computer language. (SOL)

Polyp

this small, slug-like being worked for Skinker on the planet Junction, during the years surrounding the Battle of Yavin. Polyp and Skinker were killed when Valance the Hunter tried to capture Luke Skywalker, who was on Junction to obtain replacement parts for the Alliance's droids. When Valance tried to shoot his way through a magentically-sealed door, both Skinker and Polyp were caught in the blast and killed. (MC27)

Polyplast

this thin, flexible material was developed during the Clone Wars by Old Republic scientists and engineers. Because it was liquid when stored under pressure, polyplast could be transported with relative ease aboard military vessels. When sprayed out, however, polyplast formed durable ropes that could be used by clone troopers to repel onto battlefields. The polyplast cords could then be discarded when the landing craft lifted off again, eliminating the possibility of enemy forces entering the landing craft by a trailing line. (E3N)

Polyquaternium-7

this was an alcoholic concoction that was used in a variety of unusual drinks during the last decades of the Old Republic. It could be carbonated in various levels, creating a wide spectrum of bubbly drinks. (VD2)

Polysteel

this metal was used to fabricate plaques and wall plates. (SWG3)

Polyweave

a strong material used to make protective straps and belts for starfighter cockpits. (ISB)

Pom

this is a species of large-leafed, green plant that grows in the swamps of the planet Naboo. They resemble lily pads, and can fill a small swamp in just a few seasons. The seeds of the pom plant are eaten as a snack by the Gungans, and the roots of the pom are dried and ground up for use in making flour. (GF)

Pom Plaza

this thoroughfare was located in Coruscant's CoCo District, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

Pomagra

this ball of searing rock was the innermost planet of the Utos System. (CCW)

Pomar, Gorg

this man claimed to own the facilities which were the base of operations for Interplanetary Acquisitions, during the height of the New Order. In reality, the deeds he held were clever forgeries. (WOA17)

Po'me'nuk

this was a noted member of the Nikto race. (UANT)

Pom-hopper

this species of small, dog-like creature was native to the swamps of Naboo, where it was more at home on the water than on land. It used its large, webbed feet to travel across the broad surfaces pom leaves, searching for blossoms and other plantlife to eat. The pom hopper also laid its eggs in the water, just under the leaves of the pom plant, to protect them until the young emerge and swim to the surface. When threatened, pom-hoppers dove under the surface of the water and hung just below the surface, with only their nostrils breaking the surface. (GF, WSW)

Pommwomm

this plant is a hot-world shrub that grows only on the innermost planet of the Sif'kric System. The Sif'krie have discovered that they can create eight or more exotic medicines and some twenty food flavorings from the pommwomm plant. However, it must be processed within thirty hours of picking or it's useless. The Frezhlix were somewhat jealous of the wealth the Sif'krie obtained from the sale of pommwomm extracts, and often tried to blockade its shipment in order to spoil it. (SOP)

Pomojema

a deity on Circarpous V, he is often seen as a winged humanoid with huge claws on its hands and feet. It had slanting eyes, but no nose or mouth below them, just a mass of tentacles. Like many other Circarpousian deities, he is thought to have granted his priests the ability to perform miracles. Halla has described him as a third-rate deity. (SME)

Pompom

this Huttese word translated into Basic as "right now" or "immediately." (E1A14)

Pomt, Victor

this man was Viqui Shesh's staff chief, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. During much of his tenure, Pomt tried to gain support for the Appeasement Vote, hoping to promote Senator's Shesh's position and eliminate the Jedi Knights. When Senator Shesh's actions were revealed to Senator E'noro and the panel of Senators investigation corruption in the Senate, Pomt argued vehemently in her defense. However, evidence provided by Leia Organa Solo that placed Pomt at the scene of Shesh's crimes sealed his fate and that of his master. Both Shesh and Pomt were relieved of their senatorial duties by E'noro. Pomt was later assassinated by one of Senator's Shesh's other agents. (REC, WOTC)

Pon

this female name was common among the Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Ponc Gavisom

this Calibop was elected to the position of President of the New Republic shortly after the Almanian incident involving the former Jedi Dolph. The Republic, in a effort to decentralize the power it wielded, began pushing more and more responsibility onto the various sector leaders, and appointed a number of Councilors to keep watch over them. Gavisom found himself in the middle of the Caamas Incident and its repercussions, and was faced with popular opinion that the Republic, in pushing down responsibility, was ignoring the Caamas Incident and the peoples of the Republic. (SOP)

Ponda Baba

the Aqualish who assaulted Luke Skywalker in the Mos Eisley cantina. He was a member of the lower Quara of Aqualish, having fingered hands instead of webbed ones. He was known as an average-skilled smuggler, never really gaining any notoriety. He worked for a while with the Grueshite arms dealer Jothel Merritt, until he met up with a bounty hunter named Jodo Kast on Truuzdann. There, he met Doctor Evazan, and the two of escaped the bounty hunter's notice. Once free of pursuit, Ponda Baba and Evazan continued smuggling, eventually gaining the rights to Han Solo's old smuggling routes from Jabba the Hutt. This led them to be in the cantina when Obi-Wan Kenobi and Luke Skywalker entered. Evazan decided that Luke was easy prey, not realizing that Obi-Wan was a Jedi Knight. When Evazan got in over his head, Ponda Baba moved in to help, and had his arm severed by Kenobi's lightsaber. He and Evazan fled the cantina and Tatooine, eventually setting up residence in a rocky castle on Ando. There, Ponda Baba made a deal with Evazan: Baba would keep the Andoan authorities off their backs if Evazan promised to move Baba's mind into a non-disfigured Ando body. As Evazan neared success in his quest to transfer a mind from one body to another, he lured an Andoan senator to the castle and trapped him in the machine. He strapped Ponda Baba in and turned it on. Unfortunately for Ponda Baba, the machine worked in reverse. Instead of Ponda Baba's mind going into the senator's body, the senator's mind was placed into his. The mind of Ponda Baba ceased to exist; his body was destroyed when the senator exploded a thermal detonator in the castle. Evazan escaped, however. (SW, SWR, SCRE, TME) a young Ewok warrior who accompanies Warok in the search for the Ewok children stolen by Vulgarr and the Duloks. (AT)

Pondo

Pondut

the deep-space research platform used by Galactic Electronics, it was the development site for the mag pulse weapon. It was attacked and destroyed by the Empire shortly after the Battle of Hoth. (TIE)

Poonten Grass

this coarse-bladed plant eked out its survival on many desert worlds. Settlers and desert dwellers often collected the grass to make bedding. (IWE1)

Poot, Drogue

this man was Una Poot's first husband. An adventurous man, he was a gas miner by trade. He survived their mission to Ord Segra, where they were trying to deliver a cargo of culslon gas but refused to pay the mandatory bribe, but later died while prospecting in the Dragonflower Nebula. It was believed that Drogue had some sensitivity to the Force, but he was never trained to use it. His death occurred some thirty years before the Battle of Hoth. (SWJ6)

Poot, Una

this Alliance resistance leader once delivered a cargo of culslon gas to Ord Segra. When she and her husband Drogue chose not to pay the 7% "bribe" for clearance, the planetary officials opened fire on them. They escaped by making a blind jump into hyperspace, and ended up at Silver Station. They lived there ever since, delivering weapons to Alliance forces. Her husband Drogue had some sensitivity with the Force, but died before he could realize anything from it. Una continued to supply the Alliance with information and goods, marrying twice more and surviving both husbands. After Toalar Yalom Yalom fled Druckenwell and delivered Daye Azur-Jamin to her, Una trained the young man as an Alliance operative. It was Una Poot who ordered the Ranats on Silver Station eradicated, setting off a small war within the station. (SWJ6, SWJ10)

Pop 'n' Drop

this specialized obstacle was used on swoopchasing courses. Similar to the Grand Moff Bank, the Pop 'n' Drop was a tall bank measuring 100 meters or more in height. It was topped with a solid permacrete wall over which the riders must fly. Beyond the wall, the bank dropped off sharply, often plunging 20 meters before forming the "other side" of the bank. Between the two sides of the bank is a ditch up to 30 meters across, adding to the dangerous interchange of gravitational forces acting on a swoop. Outlawed racecourses often employ a variation on the Pop 'n' Drop known as the Suicide Peak. (BSS)

Popara Anjiliac Diresto

this Hutt was known for his keen mind and business acumen, as well as for the gentler rod he used to keep his minions under control. Popara was recognized by his large body, which was mottled with patches of gray skin, and his wide eyes, which seemed to take in everything around him. Popara preferred to use other beings to do his dirty work, taking whatever action was necessary to protect himself against injury. The base for Popara's operations was located in Anjiliac Towers, on the moon of Nar Shaddaa. The primary enterprise of Popara's organization was smuggling, and he made it a point never to deal in slaves - although he owned several himself. During the early years of the New Order, Popara was well into his ninth century of life when he learned that his youngest child, Mika, had been stranded on Endregaad when a plague broke out on the planet. Fearing for Mika's life, Popara called in a debt from a group of freelance agents, hiring them to rescue Mika. Unknown to Popara, Mika was the creator and source of the tempest spice. All Popara knew was that the tempest was taking away huge profits from the sales of other forms of spice, and wanted to find out where it came from. Popara was also unaware that his elder offspring, Zonnos, was angry about Popara's concern for Mika, and wanted his sibling eliminated. He called in the freelance agents again, requesting their help in eliminating tempest and finding the being who was behind the attempt on Mika's life. Shortly after hiring the agents, Popara died from food poisoning in a messy event, as his body swelled to twice its normal size before exploding into hundreds of pieces. The poison was actually a deadly concoction created by Mika himself. (TF, WOTC)

Poplian

this strange little creature is often kept as a pet. Bothans are known to be allergic to them. (VOF)

Pop-mouth

this was a species of fish that was named for the noise it made when it breathed. Its wide mouth took in gulps of water so fast that a popping sound could be heard. (YDR)

Popper

this was the slang term used to describe any riot suppression weapon which used a sonic blast to halt an attacker. (SWJ6)

Pops

an aging Rebel Y-Wing pilot killed during the Battle of Yavin, Pops' real name was Davish Krail. Pops was portrayed by Graham Ashley in Star Wars: Episode IV - A New Hope. See Talos Merkin. (SW, CCG, JPL)

Poptree

this tree, native to the planet Drongar, was noted for its sweet sap, which was boiled down to make a tasty syrup. (MBS)

Poptree Forest

this was one of the few wooded areas found on the planet Drongar. The Poptree Forest was named because it was one of only a few places where the poptree grew wild, and was the site of a vicious battle during the height of the Clone Wars. (MBS)

Poqua

a New Republic Navy Commodore, Poqua was in command of Task Force Gemstone. She was one of the many Naval officers who questioned the expansion to five fleets, given the retirement of many key officers and the lack of experienced recruits. (TT)

Poquot, Untos

this man was a veteran Alliance field agent, but turned bitter and taciturn after his wife was killed when the Empire destroyed Alderaan. He was assigned as the team leader of the group of Alliance agents missioned to capture the Black Ice. (BI)

Por Forian

manufacturers of starship power cells. (RM)

Por Ral, Nij

this portly man worked as a professor of ancient linguistics during the height of the New Order. His knowledge of ancient civilizations led him to be retained by the SoroSuub Corporation to assist with the excavation of a three-mile-long wall on the planet Dorlo, a mission which was condoned only because SoroSuub hoped to later strip the planet of its natural resources. SoroSuub hoped that the runes carved into the wall would provide clues to the locations of valuable resources. The rescue team of Jedi Knight Qu Rahn managed to convince Pro Ral to join their effort in repelling the Imperial forces which arrived on Dorlo to assist in the planet's subjugation, and Por Ral agreed to help as long as it helped keep the relics he discovered from being destroyed. When the team was captured by the Dark Jedi Jerec, it was Por Ral who pleaded for his own life by telling Jerec that it was Rahn who had information on the location of the Valley of the Jedi. Disgusted by his begging, Yun killed Por Ral with a swift lightsaber blow to the head. (RAG) this Imperial Lieutenant was Captain Hawra's second in command at the Imperial outpost on Lotide. This was a cover role for Pora, however, as he was actually a Captain with the Imperial Security Bureau, sent to investigate charges of corruption leveled against Hawra. (BI)

Pora

Poranji Orbital Jumper

this small, sublight starship was used to ferry cargo and passengers from the ground to an orbital starship or station. This version was the only one licensed for use on Coruscant following the Galactic Civil War. The Poranji measured just three meters in length, and required a single pilot. It could transport up to three additional passengers and 500 kilograms of cargo. (BTS, CTD)

Porasca Prize

this was one of the galaxy's most prestigious journalism awards, presented annually during the last decades of the Old Republic. The winner, in addition to the recognition, received a large sum of credits for their work. (MJH)

Poraskor

this group of individuals was known for their ability to weave neural-web reflex threads by hand. They are native to the planet Betal. (CFG)

Porax-38

this fighter, known simply as the P-38, was developed by Buuper Torsckil Abbey Devices on the planet

Utapau, during the final years of the Old Republic. Measuring 12.7 meters in length, the catamaran-like P-38 had two cylindrical drive unit connected by a platform-like wing. In the center of this wing was the cockpit, which housed the pilot and little else. Armed with a pair of high-powered laser cannons set just off each drive unit, the P-38 was the primary defense craft used by the Utapau Skyforce to protect their homeworld. These ships were designed to be piloted by an Utai, and were given a Class 2 hyperdrive that allowed to travel within the local sector. The navigational computer was hard-coded with this local data, eliminating the need for an astromech. (X3)

Porcellus

a chef who worked for Jabba the Hutt in the Court of the Fountain restaurant. He was probably most famous for his fried beignets, although Porcellus took great pride in other parts of his ever-changing menu. It also kept him alive, for Jabba was always wanting to try new dishes. When Jabba retreated to his palace in the Tatooine desert, he took Porcellus with him. Porcellus lived in constant fear, though, that one of his dished would upset the Hutt's normally strong stomach. At that point, Porcellus felt he would be fed to the rancor. After a number of deaths in Jabba's palace were discovered, Porcellus was told by Jabba that his desires to poison Jabba had hexed the food. The individuals found dead ate food that was destined for Jabba. Porcellus hid in the cabinets, fearing a reprisal from Jabba. When he was later released by Malakili, Porcellus learned that Jabba was dead. The two friends fled to Mos Eisley, where they established the Crystal Moon restaurant. (TME, TJP)

Porchello

this wintry planet was the site of an Imperial targetted for destruction by the Alliance. Poor planning resulted in the Alliance strike team being surrounded by Imperial snowtroopers, and they had to fight their way out to the recovery ship. (HAS)

Pordimer

see Pordy (PH)

Pordy

this Ugnaught worked as a cameraman for Action Tidings, the Ugnaught newsfeed which operated on Cloud City during the height of the New Order. Pordy, whose full name was Pordimer, was working with Ars Fivvle to record the destruction of Cloud City, just after the Battle of Hoth. Pordy's relationship with Fivvle went back many years, and continued well after the Battle of Endor. (MC57, PH)

Porew, Tawn

this woman was an Alliance agent who joined the rebellion after a group of Imperial stormtroopers killed her parents for not surrendering their farm and property to the local Imperial governor. She tried to exact revenge on the governor for her parents' deaths, but was captured and imprisoned. The local Alliance cell helped her escape, and she pledged herself to helping the Alliance. She was assigned to Commander Peck's unit as a demolitions expert shortly before the Battle of Yavin, and served as one of the primary agents on the planet Rafft. (SWJ3)

Porg

this Trandoshan bounty hunter tried to capture Kyle Katarn on Nar Shaddaa, in an effort to prevent the Alliance agent from recovering any information which had been stolen from his father's farm on Sulon. The Dark Jedi Jerec had placed the bounty on Katarn's head, in an effort to ensure nobody prevented him from reaching the Valley of the Jedi. Porg, however, was not the only hunter searching for Katarn. In a three-way firefight, Porg was shot and killed by an Aqualish bounty hunter, who was later dispatched by Katarn. (RAG)

Porgo Goo

this Chortose, along with his brothers, ran a small repair shop in the Minos Cluster. Although not mechanically-inclined as youths, the Goo brothers discovered one day that they had a latent talent for starship engineering and repair. They all display a strange intuitive knowledge of the technologies, but lacked any real education on the theories behind them. They preferred to work on starships and systems that were new to them, and often worked for standard wages just to tinker a little more with new systems.

Porgo himself often frequented disreputable cantinas, hoping to meet up with starship captains who needed repairs. (GG6)

this was a species of loud, noisy creature which was native to the planet Ansion. (APS)

porin

this Shyriiwook word was used as the suffix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "sage" or "teacher". It could be attached to a prefix by itself, or combined with other suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Porkins' Formation

an attack formation used by Wedge during his tenure as Rogue Leader, Porkins' Formation was named in honor of Jek Porkins. (TLC)

Porkins, Jek

an Alliance pilot killed during the Battle of Yavin, Jek Porkins was a native of the planet Bestine IV until the Empire evicted the entire population in order to establish a base there. He hunted sink-crabs there, honing his piloting skills much like Luke Skywalker did on Tatooine. Later, he became a free trader, and was so employed when the Empire invaded. He became so angry with the Empire that he immediately turned his sights on the Alliance. He was assigned to the Yellow Aces squadron at Tierfon before volunteering for duty during the Battle of Yavin. He was initially denied a pilot's job in the battle, until Wes Janson came down with the Hesken Fever. Porkins was moved up to fill Janson's spot, and was assigned to Red Squadron. Unfortunately, Porkins was the first pilot killed in the Battle. For his heroic volunteerism and dedication to the Alliance, Porkins was posthumously awarded the Kenobi Medallion. He was the first recipient of the award. Porkins was portrayed by William Hootkins in Star Wars: A New Hope. Note that Porkins' first name is given as Tono in the Marvel Comics adaptation of Star Wars: A New Hope. (SW, MTS, JS, CCG, MC)

Porkins, Tono

this was the name used in the Marvel Comics adaptation of Star Wars: A New Hope for Jek Porkins. (MC6)

Porlceetin

this was a species of large, venomous creature native to the planet Geonosian. These six-legged creatures were distinguished by their green and orange coloration. (X2)

Porm

this Sedrian warrior was a follower of Karka, and was part of the group which captured Mors Odrion and Rekara, when the Alliance agents tried to gather information on the Imperial garrison which was built on Sedri. (BGS)

Pormfil

this Kerestian served as the Wild Karrde's chief engineer some ten years after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. (SOP)

Poro Poppy

this wildflower, native to the moon Sulon, gave off a yeasty odor when in bloom. (RAG)

Porolo Miatamia

this Diamalan Senator to the New Republic requested Lando Calrissian's help in getting off Cilpar before a group of rioters intercepted him and his aide. Miatamia demanded that Lando take something as payment for services rendered, and they agreed to look into a way to help Lando protect his Varn ore mining operation. As they fled Cilpar, they were intercepted by the Relentless and what appeared to be Grand Admiral Thrawn returned from the dead. In fact, it was the con artist Flim that portrayed Thrawn, in an effort to bring news of Thrawn's "return" to the New Republic. Miatamia's testimony, as well as that of Calrissian, was suspect to some Senators because of their business proposal. Miatamia was stoic individual who believed that nothing ever happened that could not be anticipated. Miatamia wanted the Caamas Incident resolved, but only if the New Republic had every piece of information it could obtain. Unlike Ghic Dx'ono, Miatamia wanted to ensure that any punishment was correct, even if it took forever. (SOP, VOF)

Porpu, Zan

this Alliance Y-Wing pilot was lost in the Esstran Cordon, a region of space that was not supposed to be dangerous, during the year following the Battle of Hoth. The Alliance turned to their new-found allies, the Bothans, in hopes that the Bothan SpyNet had any information on his disappearance. It was believed that Porpu inadvertently dropped out of hyperspace into a secret Imperial testing ground, and his Y-Wing was shot to pieces. Porpu was believed to have ejected before the fighter exploded, but his whereabouts were never discovered. Many feared that he had been captured and interrogated by Imperial forces. (RESB)

Porrh Wash

this was an anti-bacterial solution developed by the Yuuzhan Vong to cleanse and disinfect a fresh wound. (FH1)

Pors Tonith

this Muun served the military forces of the Confederacy of Independent Systems as an Admiral during the height of the Clone Wars. Despite his background with the Intergalactic Banking Clan - he was the latest leader of one of the IBC's most ruthless clans, and many considered him to be a dead emotionally as he appeared to be physically - Tonith was also a noted military tactician. He often applied military doctrine to his business dealings, in an effort truly defeat his rivals. A decisive being with more regard for his own safety than that of his troops, Tonith was known to remain safely behind a battle line in a luxurious stateroom aboard his flagship, the Corpulentus, calmly sipping dianogan tea. Tonith was once quoted as saying, "In an army, no one ever sleeps... except me... the brain needs its rest." He believed himself to be above reproach, and considered himself more than adequate when Count Dooku assigned him to lead the assault on the Intergalactic Communications Center on Praesitlyn. Tonith chafed whenever Asajj Ventress demanded a progress report, instead worrying about reinforcements. Although he firmly believed he had the situation under control, Tonith was unaware that Count Dooku was actually controlling the allocation of resources and troops. The reinforcements he requested were delayed in leaving Sluis Van, allowing an Old Republic task force - led by Nejaa Halcyon and Anakin Skywalker - to infiltrate Praesitlyn airspace and land on the planet's surface. Tonith was unaware of the arrival of his reinforcements, and was unprepared for the daring rescue mission of Anakin Skywalker, who flew through the ground defenses to land at the communications center and break in. With a team of commandos, Anakin was able to free the hostages, which rendered the Separatists' position untenable. Tonith knew this, and was forced to surrender when Anakin apprehended him. He ordered his troops on the ground and his ships in space to stand down, and turned over the communications center to the Republic. He then learned of the arrival of the reinforcements, and was dismayed to know that he could have won the battle if he had just held out a little longer. (JT)

Port

this large, Vorzydiak male served as the Chairman of Vorzyd 4, some eleven years before the Battle of Naboo. He petitioned the Jedi Council to act as mediators in a dispute between his homeworld and Vorzyd 5, some eleven years before the Battle of Naboo. Like his fellow Vorzydiaks, Chairman Port believed that the natives of Vorzyd 5 were sabotaging the manufacturing facilities of Vorzyd 4, in an effort to undermine the leadership of the Vorzydiaks in the Vorzyd Cluster. He was unaware of the fact that the sabotage was the work of the Freelies, who were being led by his own son, Grath. In the wake of the bombing of the Multycorp headquarters and the death of Flip, Chairman Port agreed to work with the Freelies and the governments of Vorzyd 4 and Vorzyd 5 to amend the rules pertaining to the workweek and try to allow for more free time. (TTW)

Port Bianco

this was the name of the shadowport which was originally founded by Lamuu Bianco as a storage and repair facility for the starships in his pirate fleet. When the Old Republic was replaced by the Empire, and smuggling became more and more profitable, the shadowport was opened to all spacers, provided that they had an invitation. The invitation provided the coordinates of a hyperspace bouy in the Tamber

System, as well as a password to access the memory of the bouy. The bouy contained the final jump coordinates to Lammax, provided that the correct password was entered. Uninvited guests who didn't know the password to the shadowport were given fake coordinates that led them through the heart of the Tamber System's primary star. The bouy itself was protected from tampering by a sensor system that detects if it is captured by a tractor beam or gravity well. If captured, the bouy was designed to self-destruct. (LOE)

Port Duggan

this was the primary entry point for the orbital city of Duggan Station, located above the planet Duro. (BP)

Port Evokk

a planet. (WBC)

Port Fyrin

this city, located on the planet Qalydon, was the site of the headquarters for the Fellowship of Kooroo. (SWJ13)

Port Haven

this planet, the third of seven planets located in the remote Whendyll System, was known as a place where spacers and smugglers could go "get away" and not be hassled. Its location was a carefully-guarded secret, and to obtain them from a fellow smuggler was a sign of your trustworthiness and the respect you had earned. It was a temperate world covered with lush jungles and tall mountains, with sandy beaches along the coastline. The smugglers' base was maintained by Hallomar, with help from Mister Mxil. The planet was originally settled some 250 years before the Galactic Civil War, by a group of Salliche Ag idealists who wanted to get away from the bureaucracy of the galaxy. The original colony was abandoned when many of the settlers were killed by the creatures which inhabited the jungles. The smuggling colony was based on hospitality and good-will, with spacers taking only what they needed and replacing it with whatever they could spare. (SESB, PSPG)

Port Jerrell

this planet was known to be a smuggler's haven, during the height of the New Order. (FTD)

Port Kalla

this was one of the largest cities found on the planet Yabosta, and the site of the planet's largest spaceport. (GMR10)

Port Landien

this was a small town, located on the outskirts of the city of Theed, on the planet Naboo. (GMR2)

Port Landien Perfumery

this perfumery was located on the outskirts of the city of Theed, on the planet Naboo, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (GMR2)

Port of Call

this publication is aimed at giving travellers and tourists timely information on how to get the best deals at various locations throughout the galaxy. (TT)

Port Pixelito

this was the primary spaceport found on the planet Malastare, located in the city of Pixelito. (HNN5)

Port Tarkin

this city was the location of Phelarion's primary spaceport. The Lady Tarkin used this spaceport as her primary distribution center for Imperial megonite. (CSWEA)

Port Town

one of the more dangerous places to live on Cloud City. Lando leased some space there to Han Solo to build his repulsorlift house. Much of the illegal gambling and trafficking that is frowned upon on Cloud City takes place here. Port Town takes up levels 121 through 160, and is a low-rent district filled with industrial loading bays. The various cantinas and gambling halls are sprinkled among these bays, making a concerted effort to eradicate them difficult. (GG2, LCJ, ISU)

Portaak

the leaves of this bush provided a form of spice. It was believed that portaak grew only in the jungles of Haruun Kal. It was often dried over smoking chips of lamma wood, to enhance its natural flavors. The sap of the portaak hardened into a form of amber when exposed to the air. This amber was a natural fungicide that was rubbed onto weapons to prevent them from being corroded by Haruun Kal's environments. This amber was also quick sticky, and helped a warrior maintain their grip on a weapon. (SHPT)

Portable Computer

this generic term refers to any small, self-contained computer systems. Unlike pocket computers, which only allow the user to access data on a large mainframe, portables allow the user to gain control of the mainframe. They are expensive, and are redundant if you own a droid, but they don't get tempermental and don't require regular memory wipes. Portable computers have two primary components: the power supply and onboard memory. A flip-up display provides access to the keyboard. (CFG)

Portage Moon

this was the name used by the Aqualish to describe the lunar cycle under which many of the ocean-going vessels return to their home port. (PH)

Portage Moon Festival

this month-long celebration, held annually on the planet Ando, gave thanks to the efforts of the ocean-going crews. The Festival started on the first day of the Portage Moon and lasted for thirty local days, and all ships were called to the Quantill City harbor so that their crews could rest and revel. (PH)

Porta-hoist

this mobile hydraulic jack was commonly found in starship repair yards. (CSWEA)

Portal Delta

this starship navigational computer was designed and manufactured by Suwantek Systems, for use in their TL-series of transports. The system was poorly designed and full of bugs, and had to be regularly updated in order to remain functional. Suwantek eventually abandoned the Portal Delta and used Fabritech systems. (SS)

Portal Desolate

this strange device was left behind by the Order of the Terrible Glare on Garn. The holographic image of Rur was maintained here, as a guardian and vindicator of the Order's work, should the Jedi Knights return to Garn. It was destroyed when Luke Skywalker told Rur's image that the Jedi had been wiped out by Emperor Palpatine. The central computer couldn't reconcile this fact with its programming, and exploded. (CSWDW)

Portalink

this was the Kadrillian version of a comlink. (LAT3)

Portent

this undercover Imperial diplomatic agent had expedited the Imperial take-over of Cloud City, shortly after the Battle of Hoth. (SESB)

Port-Esta Queen

Boba Fett tracked Abal Karda to this ship, but was unable to capture Karda before he escaped to Star Station 12. Fett followed the ship and caught up with her crew on Vestar, but was only able to gather the fact that Karda was traveling as a Vetsaari Nomad. (EOE)

Portha

this Trandoshan was living in the Invisible Sector, working for Palar, when the Rogue Squadron infiltrated the planet. He agreed to help the Rogues in their attempt to sabotage the Empire's computer cores. The goal was to plant codes into the cores that would allow Winter to tap into the Imperial network. However, Portha mistakenly dropped the sabotaged data core, and it was returned to the pile. Wedge Antilles quickly worked to resolve the situation by substituting another sabotaged core, but the plan had already been leaked by Zekka Thyne. Imperial forces stepped in and raided the Palar plant. (WG)

Portharton

this city is located near Lianna, on the planet Lianna. (ML)

Portin

this man was one of Zothip's pirates. He was taken out by Karoly D'ulin on Bastion, while they were guarding Moff Disra's offices. (VOF)

Portmaster's Pavilion

once the center of the city of Redhaven, on the planet Rhommamool, the Pavilion was bombed out during the early days of Rhommamoolian secession from Osarian rule. In its place, which became the center of the Square of Hopeful Redemption, was a pit into which droids and other automata were thrown by the Red Knights of Life. Once a collection of droids had been formed, the natives of Redhaven dropped rocks and stones on the droids, destroying them for their "defiance" of natural life. (VP)

Portmoak Sector

an area of the galaxy located in the Outer Rim Territories. (GG9)

Portrait Holo

a small cube which projects a single holographic image. It is basically a three-dimensional photograph. (COTF)

Portside

located in the middle section of Cloud City, Portside was the primary debarkation point for many visitors to Bespin. (BF2)

Porus Vida

a planet known for its beautiful cultural museums and wonderfully manicured gardens, the planet was devastated in an attack by Colonel Cronus. (DS)

Poshtish

this was a term used to describe something which was nonsensical. (GFT)

Positive Ecology

this Chandrilan regulation was established to help farmers and the producers of foodstuffs to package and sell foods that were organically produced, or were produced in an environmentally-friendly manner. Grains, dairy products, meats, fruits, and other products were given a seal of approval that marked them as part of the Positive Ecology system, and these foodstuffs were of much higher quality than other, non-regulated goods. (WOTC)

Posondum, Nil

this small, balding man was once the head accountant for Trans-Galactic Gaming Enterprises Corporation. Prior to joining Trans-Galactic, Posondum worked for the Hutt-controlled Trans-Zone Development and Exploitation Consortium, managing the earnings of a series of skefta dens in the Outer Rim Territories. On the side, he also arranged under-the-table business deals with anyone who could pay the credits. Among his clients was Kodir of Kuhlvelt, who contracted Posondum to hire someone to kidnap her sister Kateel and erase any memories she might have, then lose her. Posondum placed the fees for this job in the escrow accounts of Kud'ar Mub'at, and it was Mub'at who eventually hired Ree Dupton to do the job. In the meantime, in a daring move, Posondum had much of the Hutt syndicate's access codes, credit-laundering schemes, and odds-rigging systems stored in a cortical data splint shortly before he left the Hutts to work for Trans-Galactic. His new employer paid a huge sum for the data. He also took with him a huge sum of embezzled credits, stored in remote banks and financial outlets. However, the Hutts weren't very happy with his departure, and established a 12,500-credit bounty on his head. This bounty was claimed by Boba Fett, who had to evade being caught by Bossk and Zuckuss in order to deliver the accountant to Kud'ar Mub'at for exchange. (MA, HM) native to the planet Illarreen, this species of humanoids was distinguished by its three eyes and shovel-like jaws. They were discovered about 100 years before the Battle of Yavin by a spice trader who decided to investigate Illarreen. Their civilization had developed to the point that their nations had started warring against each other when the planet was discovered by spice traders. The Poss'Nomin ceased their fighting to communicate with the off-worlders, and soon discovered that there was much more to worry about than their petty squabbles. The Poss'Nomin put down their weapons and began to integrate themselves into the galactic culture. The warring nations collapsed their boundaries and joined to form a single, planetary government. (AE)

Poss'Nomin

Post, Avan

this Jedi Master from Chandrila served with distinction during the Clone Wars. Corran Horn discovered Post's image in the bowels of the Galactic Museum, during his escape from the Lusankya facility. (KT)

Post, Ilir

this young man was a contemporary of Soontir Fel, and was the spoiled son of Fel's employers. When Fel rescued Pamr from one of Post's attacks, Post's father saw to it that Fel was shipped off to the Imperial Academy on Carida. Hal Horn pressed the investigation after Fel was shipped off, and had Post arrested. Post was eventually convicted and sent to the spice mines of Kessel, despite the efforts of AGR's leaders. Post's hatred of the Fels grew quite strong during his imprisonment. Several years later, after Soontir Fel defected to the New Republic, Corran Horn revealed that Ilir Post was the leader of the kidnappers who took young Fyric Fel. Post believed that he had found a way to get back at the Fels, by exposing Soontir and his wife, Wynssa Starflare. When Wes Janson, Hobbie Klivian, and Plourr Ilo tried to intercept the kidnappers, Post thought he had a chance to collect on two accounts: Fyric's and Plourr's, whom Post believed was wanted back on Eiattu. Later, hidden in his estate, Post tried to bluff his way out of an arrest by holding Fyric over a balcony. Togr Fel then shot Post in the forehead, and Plourr used her athletic skills to save Fyric from his two-story fall. (MBF, HXW, XWFT)

Pote Snitkin

a Skrilling who fled the Corporate Sector after being implicated in industrial espionage, Pote Snitkin was hired by Bib Fortuna as a skiff pilot. Pote Snitkin later became one of Jabba the Hutt's primary weapons suppliers, but he was relegated to skiff pilot when Hermi Odle showed up. (ROTJ, GG12, CCG7, SWDB)

Potentium

this controversial view of the Force was observed by many beings in the farthest reaches of the galaxy, especially during the last years of the Old Republic. The theory behind the Potentium was that all living things held the potential to create newer and better living things. Each birth represented a new form, and each death returned living beings to the Potentium for renewal. Believers in the Potentium theory held that the Force, and the galaxy in general, were given a master plan which was inherently good, and that there was no evil side to the Force. There was simply the Living Force. A being's position within the Potentium - which was at once the beginning and the end of all things - could not be obscured by training and discipline. Those who followed the Potentium belief claimed that the Jedi Masters of the Old Republic rejected its existence because accepting it would mean accepting that they weren't needed to combat evil. About a hundred years before the Battle of Naboo, the followers of the Potentium were forced out of the Jedi Order. The Jedi Council explained that the banished Jedi failed to understand that the Jedi Order was not about exploring the limits of the Force, but using what was known to protect peace and justice. The discovery of the living planet Zonama Sekot led many followers of the Potentium theory to believe that Sekot itself was the embodiment of the Living Force, created to safeguard its purity. (RP, PJSB, UF)

Poth

this name was given to female Zabrak, and referred to a familial carnivore that was native to Frithia. (GCG)

Poth

this carnivore, native to the planet Frithia, was known to commit suicide during periods of famine, so that its young could survive. (GCG)

Pothman, Triv

a native of the planet Chandrila and a former Imperial stormtrooper, Pothman was part of the Eye of Palpatine mission. He was a member of the 45-stormtrooper group sent to Pzob. He was the company's armorer, and could service weapons. Unfortunately, the Gamorreans didn't like having the Empire on Pzob, and began attacking the stormtroopers. They captured Pothman early in the fighting, and kept him alive because of his knowledge of weapons. They killed off all the other stormtroopers. When the power cells of their blasts drained, they stopped watching Pothman, who promptly escaped. He has lived by himself on Pzob ever since, keeping the Gamorreans at bay while collecting all of his company's unused armor. He discovers Luke Skywalker and Cray Mingla when they are forced to crashland on Pzob, after discovering the existence of an armed base in the asteroids near the Moonflower Nebula. (COJ)

Pothor System

the Alliance fleet was assembled here during Project Shantipole. (SFS)

Potin

this Imperial Naval Lieutenant, serving on the Interdictor-class ship Black Asp, was piloting the ship's shuttle when it tried to intercept the star yacht Pulsar Skate in the Chorax System. When the Rogue Squadron of X-Wings found them there, Potin fled in his shuttle before the battle reached him. Thus, he failed to obtain any real data on where the X-Wings came from, and he received a severe reprimand upon returnig to his ship. (XWN)

Potolli

the fur of this creature was often used in the creation of wondrous, full-length coats and the uniforms of royalty. (COD)

Potwa Beer

an alcoholic brew created by the Gamorreans. (COJ)

Pouchfish

native to the shallow seas of Sedri, this fish keeps its eggs in a large brood pouch until they hatch. The Sedrians discovered that the pouchfish would open the brood pouch if the insides of its gills were rubbed, and they maintained schools of them for use as living containers. (SSR)

Pouf Couch

this was a piece of form-fitting furniture manufactured during the New Republic. (SBS)

Pouffra Circuit

this was a relatively tame and fully-sanctioned series of podracing events, characterized by their fairly safe courses and low number of fatalities. It was also a proving ground for many of the racers who grew to prominence during the last decades of the Old Republic. However, many racers, including Ben Quadinaros, left the circuit too soon and floundered in the more dangerous and often cutthroat professional leagues. (IG1, PRT)

Pounders Squadron

this team of mercenaries was based on the planet Taul, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ2)

Poundie

this unique subculture of the Minos Cluster consists of the operators of several huge smelting ships that traverse the Mestra System asteroid belt. The ships reduce the asteroid ores to shippable ingots, after miners and prospectors discover viable asteroids. During the New Order, the poundies took advantage of the lax Imperial presence to cheat miners out of their claims. The crimes of the poundies ranged from falsifying reports of the ore contents of an asteroid to simply crushing an entire asteroid - claim marker and all - without any warning to the miners. (GG6)

Pourstone

a building material used whenever speed was required in erecting a structure. It could be poured into virtually any shape, and maintained structural strength in many forms. It was often used in desert or cold environments, since it had excellent insulating properties. (SWN, E1A5)

Poussan, 'Ndrath

one of the Agamarians recruited to the Alliance along with Keyan Farlander. He joined the ranks of the starfighter pilots along with Farlander. 'Ndrath was killed in the Alliance attack on Operation Strike Fear near Briggia, when his X-wing collided with a TIE fighter. (XW)

Povanarian

this alien race was a member of the New Republic. (SOP)

Poviduze

Power 5

this was Merr-Sonn's compact, heavy blaster pistol. It was a smaller weapon than the Flash 5 pistol, allowing for easier concealment. However, its lightweight construction also made the Power 5 slightly more fragile than the Flash 4. (EGW, AEG)

Power Cane

this staff, produced by Palandrix Personal Protection Gear, was manufactured from high-density plastoids covered with exceptionally strong hardwoods, giving it the appearance of a simple walking cane. Hidden inside a spring-loaded compartment was a 30-centimeter stiletto blade which was attached to a power source, creating a lethal vibroblade. (GFT)

Power Chair

Power Convertor

the ignition system for a starship, the power convertor is responsible for routing power from the main power core to the propulsion units. (ESB)

Power Coupling

this starship component is responsible for directing power from the power core to the hyperdrive motivator. (ESB)

Power Crystal

this rare form of Tasar Crystal was rumored to have specific powers, either magical or healing. There were eighteen known kinds of power crystals, ranging in color from amethyst to peridot, and with patterns like tiger's eye and malachite. (SWJ15)

Power Dispersion Unit

this device regulates the power output from a repulsorlift engine. Many such engines have surges throughout their operation, which causes abrupt increases in speed. This is not a desired event, especially on swoops and speeder bikes. The power dispersion unit creates an even power pattern, which in turn keeps the vehicle at a constant rate of acceleration. (CFG)

Power Droid

box-shaped droid on two legs used as a mobile power source. (SWR)

Power Drum

this immense drum was played in the normal way, albeit with a large mallet. When struck, the skins of the drum reverberated with a deep, bass rumble, which was magnified by internally-powered amplifiers. (IWST)

Power Flux Surger

this device, when added to a power-consuming system, and boost the system beyond its normal specifications without overall system degradation. These devices are often used to augment starship weapons or shielding systems. (SWJ9)

Power Gem

these powerful stones emit an aura which disrupts starship energy shields, but their power faded after they were mined. They were determined to be pieces of rare meteorites which broke off from a single meteor. The pirates of Iridium used these power gems to disrupt the shields of the starships they attacked, making it easy for them to loot the defenseless ships. The pirates were eliminated by the Jedi Knights, and it was believed that the power gems were all destroyed in the battle. However, the last usable power gem was held by Raskar until someone could best him in battle and take it. What he didn't tell anyone is that the gem contained only enough power for one last use. Han Solo and Chewbacca were able to defeat Raskar and take possession of the gem, which was turned over to General Dodonna some years after the Battle of Yavin. The gem was used in a valiant attempt to disrupt the shields of the Executor by Vrad Dodonna, but the gem's failing strength only opened a small hole in its immense shields. (CSW)

Power Generator

any device which can create power from a basic set of materials. They can be small, portable generators used to supply power to a camp, or huge devices that can keep an entire city operational. (ESB)

Power Harpoon

this unusual weapon was designed by Beryl Chiffonage, for use against Imperial AT-AT walkers. Chiffonage realized that the tall war machines could be tripped up if a strong enough cable was used to entwine their legs. The power harpoon consisted of a flexi-steel cable which was fired from a turret-mounted gun. The projectile end of the flexi-steel cord was connected to a fusion disk, which attached itself to almost any surface. The stationary end of the cord was temporarily connected at the ship, and could be released when the cord was securely wrapped around the walker's legs. (CCG3)

Power Mace

similar in appearance to a standard mace, the power mace had a small energy source contained in its thick head. This energy source was used to power a small gyroscope, which added momentum to the mace whenever it was swung. Additionally, the energy source produced an electric charge which was expended whenever the spikes on the head touched flesh, adding a shock attack to any physical damage done by the weapon. (MC20)

POWER Party

originated by Andra some thirteen years before the Battle of Naboo, this political faction was formed to "Preserve Our Wild Endangered Resources" on the planet Telos. POWER opposed the government's plans to give UniFy corporation control over the management and preservation of Telos' parks and wilderness areas. The party was outlawed by the government, based on the desires of Xanatos. Andra later revealed to Qui-Gon Jinn that she was the only member of the party. (DOR)

Power Pistol

an out-dated, small, handheld energy weapon. (HSL)

Power Piton

this mountain-climbing device consisted of a pair of strap-on boots and a pair of disc-shaped hand units. Using either magnetic attraction or the use of hundreds of tiny, vibrosharp projections, the user could scale sheer surfaces with minimal equipment. The magnetic setting was bst for climbing buildings and other metallic structures. The virbo setting was best for wood, duracrete, or other soft building materials. (LOE)

Power Pivot

a starfighter maneuver often associated with the X-Wing, the power pivot involves the use of a ship's lateral thrusters to affect a reversal in positioning. The X-Wing was maneuverable enough to swing around 180 degrees, surprising an opponent who thought they were unnoticed. (CCG9)

Power Plug

this small device supplied the basic power needed to fire a pod racer's engine. Depending on the size and configuration of the racing engines used, a small or larger plug was required. There were three basic forms of plugs. The first used one or more power sources in series, with each source being drained before the next could be used, and providing average amounts of power. The second is the rotary design, which taps each power source for a short period before moving to the next, in a rotary fashion. This increased the efficiency of the basic series design, but maintained a comparable level of power output. The third design is the cluster plug, which ganged together the power from multiple sources at once. While it generated the greatest amount of power, it was also expensive and tended to need replacement sooner. (RAC)

Power Products, Limited

this small manufacturer produced a line of power recharging systems, during the height of the New Order. (GFT)

Power Prybar

a power tool which augments the amount of leverage that can be applied. (HSL)

Power Shield

this was a modern version of the ancient melee shield, which was worn on the arm. The power shield, a round metal disk with straps to hold it to the user's forearm, was electrically charged by a self-contained energy cell. When activated, this energy cell produced a powerful shock whenever it touched exposed flesh. Thus, the power shield could be used to fend off a charging opponent, allowing the user to strike with their own weapon. (MC20)

Power Ski

this was a form of skiing equipment developed for use on frozen and snow-covered worlds, where mountains were quite low. Power skis were originally developed for use on Akuria Two, and were equipped with small repulsor engines that provided the force which propelled the user across snow and ice. A single "ski" formed the base of the power ski, with a pair of footpads providing stability for the rider. A control stick rose from the base, and provided the means to steer, brake, and accelerate the power ski. (PZZ2, MCI4)

Power Slider

this unique transportation system involves the use of a repulsor-board that is worn on the feet. The board hovers above the ground and is propelled by a small jet pack. Power sliders come in various shapes and sizes, with some models resembling a pair of skis while others resemble surfboards. The farther forward over the board you lean, the faster it goes. (CSWEA)

Power Station

Fixer's business in Anchorhead, on Tatooine. (SWR)

Power Sucker

a nickname used to describe mynocks. (CCG4)

Power Terminal

an energy distribution center, where vehicles, starships, and droids can be brought for recharging. (SW)

Power, The

this was an ancient term for the Force. (TOJC)

Power5 Pistol

see Power 5 \(GQRG\)

Power-lash

a whip-like device which emits a powerful electric charge when its tip strikes an opponent. (JS)

PowerLock 2500

produced by Arakyd, this device locks out all power to a starship's main cockpit controls when activated. The PowerLock 2500 bolted directly into the ship's control panel, underneath the unit and out of sight. This allowed a starship owner to ensure that a thief couldn't fly off with their starship. When the owner keyed in the correct electronic combination, the PowerLock2500 shut itself down and allowed access to the ship's controls. (PSG)

PowerOn Conglomeration

one of the major corporations which helped form the Pentastar Alignment, PowerOn was one of the first to threatened secession from the Alignment and join the New Republic. The conglomerate was headquartered on Cantras Gola, so the Alignment hired the Karazak Slavers Guild to kidnap the children of Cantras Gola's chief ambassador. The kidnapping put pressure on PowerOn to remain with the Alignment, as it forced the rulers of Cantras Gola to accede to the Alignment's wishes. The Alignment's hold on PowerOn and Cantras Gola was broken when the Red Moons rescued the children from the slavers, in one of the many assaults that worked for both the Red Moons and the New Republic. (TFE)

PowerPost

this minor office supply corporation grew during the early years of the New Republic. (EGD)

Power-Spread

this is the brand name of Aratech's low-end power dispersion units, used on small repulsorcraft such as the Sky Swooper. (CFG)

PowerSuit

Corellian Engineering Corporation's model of personal armor. (RPG)

PowerTrain

this is Queblex's stationary power source for powering small buildings. (GG7)

Poxall

this Sith magician served as one of the beings whose essence was contained in the Sith Holocron owned by Krova the Hutt. Poxall was known for his ability to create deadly poisons, and was a bitter rival of Mondrak's during his life. (GMR5)

Poy

this was a common name given to Twi'lek females, and meant "wing" or "wings" in the Twi'leki language. (GCG)

Poyiu, Ozik

this man was the leader of the Kwuennox Smugglers and, later, the Alliance's Gale Team freighter unit, before being killed in action. (SWJ11)

Poytta

a planet. (RD)

Pozzi System

this Tapani Sector star system was part of the holdings of House Mecetti during the New Order. (LOE)

Pqweeduk

meaning "verbose", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Pqweeduk

a Rodian, and Greedo's younger brother by about three years. The two grew up on an unspecified jungle world, having escaped the oppression of Navik the Red on Rodia. When Navik found the planet, they fled to Nar Shaddaa. (TME)

PR6-3

this astromech droid was built from scratch by the spacer Dug, based on the R2-series of droids. (FTD)

Praadost II

this planet was "pacified" by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War, a long campaign which wiped out a large number of civilians. (HR)

Prabb, Varpo

this was the alias adopted by Joram Kithe, when he infiltrated the Nehass prison facility in order to rescue Edbit Teeks. Prabb was described as an agent for the Old Republic's Intelligence agency, and was Teeks' primary contact among the native Tarhassans. As Prabb, Joram pretended to be a prison from the penal facility in Dandahass, who was being transported to Nehass by a prison guard portrayed by Tinian Hanther. (SWI73)

Prabkro

this small, spherical seed has a spiky covering. Hutts favor the texture and taste of prabkros, especially when they are marinated in brandy. (POT)

Prace, Marcham

this young man served the New Republic Intelligence agency as a Lieutenant in the Special Threats division. He and his team were responsible for identifying and capturing slicers and other information criminals. (CTD)

Prackla Sector

this area of the galaxy was remote enough from the Core Worlds that it remained neutral during the Clone Wars for more than a year. It was not until the Separatists launched an attack on Cartao, in an effort to destroy Spaarti Creations, that the leadership on Cartao decided to ally themselves with the Old Republic. (SWI68)

Prackla Trade Council

this association of merchants and corporations, based on the planet Cartao, furthered the interests of business within the Prackla Sector of the galaxy, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Despite the defined mission of the Council, many independent merchants and businessbeings felt that the Council worked for its own good, and not that of the membership. (SWI68)

Pradeux, Alec

this man was one of Emperor Palpatine's most key advisors during the height of the New Order. It was Pradeux who announced that the outbreak of Candorian Plague on Dentaal was engineered by the Alliance, claiming that it had been resurrected from the destroyed biowarfare laboratories formerly on Alderaan. (SWJ6, SWJ8)

Pradeux, Arica

this was an alias used by Mara Jade during the early years of the New Republic. Arica was ostensibly the daughter of Alec Pradeux, although no official connection every existed. (GMR10)

Prael

this star was the central body in the Japrael System, which contains the planet Onderon. (TOJC)

Praesitlyn

this planet, located in the Sluis Sector of the galaxy, was the site of the Old Republic's Intergalactic Communications Center during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Praesitlyn was one of the thousands of worlds that allied themselves with Count Dooku and the Separatists during the years just prior to the Clone Wars, although the communications facility remained a Republic-held asset for many years. The communications center served as a communications hub for all transmissions to and from the Core Worlds, a situation that many thought would be troublesome for the Republic once the Clone Wars broke out. Their fears nearly came true when Separatists attacked the facility, but the combined forces of Zozridor Slayke, Nejaa Halcyon, and Anakin Skywalker managed to defeat the Separatists. The communications facility remained a vital link between the Core Worlds and the rest of the galaxy for many decades including the early years of the New Republic. (HTTE, HNN5)

Praetor-class Star Battlecruiser

this outdated warship was produced during the Old Republic, although a few specimens survived during the era of the Galactic Civil War. (IWST)

Praetorite Vong

this was the primary political body which governed the Yuuzhan Vong during the last stages of their intergalactic migration and the earliest part of their invasion of the galaxy. The Praetorite Vong was led primarily by domains that were loyal to the Intendant caste, which tried to assert its power over the other castes. Leadership of the Praetorite Vong was formed of highly-skilled High Prefects, supported by High Priests and high-ranking warriors. Despite that fact that they were not a military body, the Praetorite Vong was in command of the first assault force sent to begin the conquest of the galaxy. The war force was not overly large, and its leadership - Prefect Da'Gara and Executor Nom Anor - refused to underestimate their enemy. Their forces were controlled by the immense yammosk war coordinator based on Helska, which they had obtained without permission and was imperfectly developed. The plans of Nom Anor and the Praetorite Vong were thwarted when the New Republic forced the planet to quickly thaw and re-freeze, setting up a Mezicanley Wave and destroying Helska. The yammosk was killed, and the Yuuzhan Vong forces routed. Unfortunately for the Republic, the Praetorite Vong was only the tip of the iceberg which represented the Yuuzhan Vong invasion force. After the debacle at Helska, the Praetorite Vong was restricted in its actions by Tsavong Lah and the Yuuzhan Vong commanders. Note that the New Jedi Order Sourcebook indicates that the Praetorite Vong was a subgroup of the military. (VP, DTR, JE, UF, NJOSB)

Praff Run

a smuggling corridor often traveled by Hatirma Havighasu. (BTS)

Prag

this was one of the more common Kel Dor surnames. Its meaning translated into Basic as "wagon-maker". (GCG)

Praidaw

it was on this planet that Akanah's parents - Isela Talsava Norand and Joreb Goss - first met. (SOL)

Praji

this Imperial Naval officer was trained at Carida, and received high honors at his graduation. He was placed as Darth Vader's aide on the Devastator, where he was in charge of recovering the plans to the first Death Star from the Tantive IV. He notified Vader of the lifeless escape pod used by R2-D2 and C-3PO, and sent a detachment of stormtroopers to Tatooine to recover it. (CCG, ICS)

Prak

this star was the central body of the Prakith System, located in the Deep Core. (PH)

Prak

this is the native language used by the inhabitants of the Prakith System. (TT)

Prak City

this was the capital of the planet Prakith. The buildings of Prak City were skyscrapers that, from a distance, looked like the pointed teeth of some dangerous creature. Imperial Warlord Foga Brill established his seat of power in Prak City, and many other corporate headquarters were found in its business district. The city was built on the largest plateau on all of Prakith, in order to accommodate a huge, Imperial-class spaceport. (PH)

Prakess

this frozen ball of rock was the fifth and outermost planet of the Prakith System, located in the Deep Core region of the galaxy. It was orbited by a pair of moons. (PH)

Prakith

this was the third, and primary, planet in the Prakith System, located some 106 light-years past the borders of the New Republic, in the Deep Core. It was under the control of the Warlord Foga Brill during the tenure of Leia Organa-Solo as Chief of State of the Republic. Prakith was orbited by a pair of moons. The planet was one of the most fortified worlds of the Empire, because of its landscape and the amount of military assets based on or in orbit around the planet. The terrain of Prakith was dominated by rugged, mountain-covered landmasses and unpredictably deep oceans. Much of the landscape on Prakith was caused by seismic and tectonic activity that occurred early in its lifecycle, which resulted in very few open fields. Many of the populated areas on Prakith were located on plateaus, most of which were surrounded by deep canyons and caverns. As a result, cloud cars and airspeeders were required to move from city to city. Prakith was one of the first Deep Core worlds on which the Empire established a military presence, and it was on Prakith that the Inquisitors were based during the height of the New Order. After many years of fighting, Foga Brill eventually was forced to cede control of Prakith to the New Republic. (SOL, PH)

Prakk

this was the shortened name of a noted Chiss individual. (UANT)

Prall

this riverbed mining operation on the planet Prakith was controlled by Foga Brill following the Battle of Endor. (SOL)

Prall

this Hutt was secretly the head of PharmCorp, on the planet Nubia. Prall was also the owner of the Nubian Palace resort, a fact that was also unknown to most Nubians. As Hutts go, Prall was relatively young during the height of the New Order, and distinguished by his thin physique and tan-gray skin. His left eye was yellow in color, while his right eye was blue, and both twitched at random. Prall maintained his position of power through a series of well-placed bribes and favors. (CCW)

Pran

one of the New Republic Agave-class picket ships dispatched under the command of Pakkpekatt to intercept the Teljkon vagabond. The Pran was ordered back to drydock after the mission failed to capture the vagabond at Gmir Askilon. (SOL)

Prana Lexander

an ancient scientific starship which was used by a respected philosopher. The ship was lost some 500 years before the Galactic Civil War, although legend has it that the philosopher is still out there, suspended in cryofreeze. (RPG)

Prann, Erli

this man was the nominal leader of the group of pirates who took control of one of the Golan II defense platforms which protected the Imperial shipyards at Bilbringi, during the years following the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. The group discovered the cloaking devices Thrawn had used to prototype the masking of asteroids, and used it to protect the station from prying eyes. This became important when the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy and took control of the Bilbringi shipyards. The group remained on the station, hidden from the alien invaders. When The Galactic Alliance launched Operation Trinity in an effort to retake Bilbringi, the crew of the Mon Mothma discovered the existence of the station and sent Jaina Solo's squadron to see if they could bring it into the battle. Prann pretended to be a Lieutenant in the New Republic, and the leader of a team sent to reactivate the station. Once Jaina was aboard, he revealed that he and his group were simply opportunistic salvagers, taking advantage of the war against the Yuuzhan Vong to reap a profit. Prann hoped to salvage the hyperdrive motivators from Jaina's X-Wings to help power the station out of the system. What Prann didn't count on was Jaina's connection to the Force. She couldn't save her hyperdrives, but Jaina used the Force to alter Prann's inputting of hyperspace coordinates. The resulting jump tried to take the station through a Yuuzhan Vong interdicator, and the navigation computer returned the station to realspace almost immediately. While Prann and his people weren't clear of the Yuuzhan Vong, their proximity to the interdicator allowed them to pound the ship and clear an escape route for the Galactic Alliance forces. Prann then tried to fight his way clear, but his fellow pirates demanded that he surrender the Golan station to the Galactic Alliance. He refused, but was eventually subdued. Once he was removed from control, the rest of the pirates agreed to turn the station over. (FP) this tall Chiss male served as the Commander of the Brask Oto Command Station, during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. He met with Luke and Mara Jade Skywalker when they emerged from the Redoubt in pursuit of Estosh and the D-Four Dreadnaught, then grudgingly acknowledged their part in eliminating the Vagaari threat. He was forced to further acknowledge their abilities when Luke and Mara presented him with the coordinates of the waiting Vagaari fleet, which had been poised to attack Chiss-held space on Estosh's command. (SQ)

Prard'ras'kleoni

this tall, male Chiss served as a General in the Chiss Expansionary Defense Fleet during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. He went by the core name of Drask when dealing with the New Republic. (SQ)

Prash, Treytis

this man was one of the Alliance's leading gun-runners during the Galactic Civil War. A bounty hunter spent a good deal of time trying to catch him, and convinced Celia Durasha that Prash was himself a bounty hunter, working for Bwahl the Hutt in order to capture Kaj Nedmak. Prash himself was a well-dressed, handsome man with jet-black hair and a muscular build. He often traveled with a pair of bodyguards, Beidlo and Skurvis. Thune's plan worked to perfection, as she and Celia first cornered Prash at the CardSafe. Celia then shot the two bodyguards, allowing Thune the chance to stun Prash and take him captive. Thune then revealed to Celia that she had, in fact, captured Kaj herself, and that she was going to turn all three captives in for their collective bounties. Prash agreed to help Celia and Kaj, and managed to make a brief escape before Thune killed Kaj and threatened the others. In the end, the droid U-THR helped them all capture Thune. After turning Thune over to the authorities, Prash returned to running guns for the Alliance. (SWJ14)

Pratari Cinn

this Twi'leki male was easily distinguished by the blaster scar on his left cheek. He was known as Parmel Sector's most infamous and prominent black marketeers during the early years of the New Republic. (GG11)

Pratuhr, Artuo

this man was a frequent patron of the Coruscant underworld during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. He was often seen in the company of his friends, Zey Nep, Dixon Just, and Civ Sila. Artuo Pratuhr was portrayed by Don Bies in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones. (SWI75)

Pravaat

a huge consortium of manufacturers located in the Celanon System, they create uniforms for anyone willing to pay for them. (COJ)

Prax Arms

this weapons manufacturer produced a number of heavy-duty energy weapons during the Galactic Civil War. (ROE)

Praxen Emergency Medical Supplies, Limited

this small corporation produced a number of portable survival pods. (FOP)

Praxeum

an ancient term meaning "school", praxeum was the name chosen by Luke Skywalker to describe his new Jedi Academy on Yavin 4, during the early years of the New Republic. The word praxeum was first used in this way by an ancient Jedi named Karna, who used it to infer the 'distillation of learning combined with action.' Luke chose to develop his school as a place of education and discussion, and was always tolerant of individual errors, which Luke believed only helped an individual to grow. This philosophy didn't provide the New Republic's government with a good sense of security, especially after Kyp Durrón destroyed the Carida System. The government chose to ignore these problems, pushing the blame squarely onto Luke's shoulders. (DA, NJOSB)

Praxis System

a Rim Territory planetary system that was defended by the Black Sword Command during the Galactic Civil War. (BTS)

Praxon

manufacturers of emergency survival pods. (SOP)

Prayer Flags

this was the term used to describe the long, flowing banners that hung from the ceiling of the main rotunda of Jabba's Palace, on the planet Tatooine. The flags were originally placed in the rotunda by the B'omarr Monks, who wandered the rotunda in contemplation of the universe. The prayer flags, in addition to helping with air circulation, provided visual references for the monks to fixate on, allowing them to reach a deeper state of meditation and prayer. (IWST)

Prayer of Redemption

this was the prayer which gained favor among those Shamed Ones who believed in the Jedi Heresy. It was created on Coruscant, after the cityworld was transformed to resemble Yuuzhan'tar, and gained popularity when it was embraced by the prophet, Yu'shaa. (FP)

Praz

this was a common, though archaic, name given to Zabrak males. Like many Zabrak names, it related to survival characteristics, and meant "strong-willed" - or, more literally, "eager to live", referring to children who survived birth complications. (GCG)

Preaky

this is a species of predatory, blue-spotted bird. (VP)

Prebda Thok

this Hutt art collector owned one of the most valuable properties on the planet Boztrik, during the height of the New Order. On one of his island estates was a Shrine of Kooroo, which he allowed Andor Javin to investigate. (SWJ13)

Preceptor, The

this was the title of the leader of the Church of Infinite Perception. (GG6)

Precht

this man was a recent recruit to the Alliance and the Alderaanian Guard, and served aboard the Tantive IV. He hoped to impress Captain Antilles with his dedication and loyalty. (JKG)

Precog

this was the slang term used to describe any Gotal who could use their sensitive head cones to anticipate an opponent's next move. (EGP)

Precursors, The

this was another name for the ancient Kathol race, used during the early period of the Old Republic. (E)

Predator

this was the nickname of Exotac Arms' EXP-7 hunting rifle. (WSV)

Predator

this Imperial-I class Star Destroyer was transporting Alliance prisoners-of-war from Kessel when it was attacked by Alliance starfighters. The POWs were successfully rescued. (XW)

Predator

this was the name of Khlor's modified scout ship. (CCW)

Predator Birds

reptilian winged carnivores native to Yavin 4. (DA)

Predator I Jump Pod

manufactured by Arakyd, the Predator I jump pod is used to launch the Viper probe droid into space. The jump pod can be programmed to land at a specific location, and it has limited hyperdrive capability. (DFRSB)

Predator Lizard

a vicious reptile found in the rainforests of Kirtania. These lizards were ambush predators, dropping from the trees to attack their prey. They could grow to sizes reaching three meters in length. (SWJ1)

Predator-class Gunship

this gunship was popular with pirate gangs during the early years of the New Republic. (GMR9)

Predne

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Predominance

this Ishori war cruiser, commanded by Captain Av'muru, was one of the multitude of ships that came to surround the planet Bothawui shortly after the revelation of the Bothan involvement in the destruction of Caamas. It was the ship that began running down several Sif'krie skiffs in an attempt to draw the Diamalan warships into a battle. In order to avoid the confrontation, Leia Organa-Solo deliberately destroyed the Millennium Falcon's maneuvering engines upon entry into the Bothawui orbital space. She sent out a distress call to the Predominance, which her Captain reluctantly answered. The Predominance managed to capture the floundering ship with a tractor beam and transport it to President Gavrisom's vessel, effectively diffusing the situation. Shortly thereafter, Klif, Pensin, and Horvic managed to infiltrate the ship, disguised as New Republic technicians. They killed their escort and commandeered a turbolaser battery. As soon as Navet dropped the Drev'starn shield, they began firing the Predominance's weapons. They managed eight shots before they were discovered and neutralized. However, this action was coupled with a number of Imperial messages that signalled the various races to begin firing, and the warships above Bothawui began to attack each other. The Predominance took a good deal of fire from the Diamalan ships, especially the Industrious Thoughts, before the true nature of the attack could be disseminated. (VOF)

Preducor

a huge, four-legged predator native to the forest moon of Endor, it has a mane of razor-like hair and spiked tail. There are folds of skin near its shoulders that are vestigial wings. These creatures are nocturnal by nature, and hunted by waiting in the trees for their prey to wander by. The preducor then leaped from the tree, sinking its long claws into its prey and tearing it to pieces. (DFRSB, RESB)

Preedu III

this man was at one time the Emperor of Tamban, at the time when Aitro Koornacht first saw the Koornacht Cluster. (BTS)

Preena

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Preena's Academy

while exactly an accredited education institution, Preena's Academy nevertheless produced a number of hard-working starship maintenance and repair technicians during the height of the New Order. An unofficial subdivision of Preena's Repair Bay, located on the planet Vaynai and owned by Preena Jallop, the Academy was named by the children who were able to rise above their poor social status and earn a living as starship technicians. These children, taken in by Preena over the years, were orphans or impoverished children who grew up working side-by-side with the technicians who worked for Preena. These children gained valuable experience, and many eventually established their own businesses. (GMR8)

Preena's Repair Bay

this was the name of the vehicle repair and service business owned and operated by Preena Jallop during the height of the New Order, which was located on Streysel Island on the planet Vaynai. It was carved into the cliff face near the Fil'vye Transport tower, with a large portion of the facility open to the surface of the island so that starships could land even with minimal maneuverability. Preena also maintained a skilled crew of technicians who could travel to various towers and landing sites to perform on-site repairs. What made the Repair Bay unusual was the fact that a good portion of the labor was performed by children of all ages. Preena's motherly instinct made her take in orphans and impoverished children, allowing them the opportunity to earn valuable skills and be sheltered from the criminal elements of Vaynai in return for their loyalty and dedication to the business. Known to those children who "graduated" as Preena's Academy, this aspect of Preena's business provided children with a way to escape Vaynai's underworld. (GMR8)

Prefect, Yurin

this man was known as a jack of all trades, capable of repairing virtually any piece of technology available during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SWRPG)

Prefsbelt IV

this planet was the home to an Imperial Navy Academy school, at least according to the holodramas produced during the height of the New Order. It was here that Soontir Fel trained the likes of Biggs Darklighter, Tycho Celchu, and Derek Klivian. (ISB, SWSB, MBF, CCW)

Prem Nistt

this male Sullustan worked as a pilot for Core to Rim Shipping, during the height of the New Order. Nistt was loyal to the Empire and the beliefs of the New Order, and served as Captain of the Space Drifter. (FBS)

Premier Provisions

a small ranch operating in the clouds of Tyed Kant, Premier Provisions was a specialty foods producer. Nestled in among its corporate headquarters was an Alliance listening post, complete with all kinds of technological equipment. (SN)

Premiere

this is the title of the highest-ranking Jenet politician. The Premiere oversees the duties of the Council of 127. It is not known how the Premiere is selected, although the individual is not elected by popular vote. The Jenets can tell the Premiere and the Council members by their names. (GG4)

Premion Mark II

this was a design of power generators created for small, land-based craft by Kuat Drive Yards. These incredibly powerful generators supplied the power needed to operate the Baktoid Armor Workshop's MTT transport ships. (X1)

Premium Citizenship

this was the term used to describe those elite members of Aargau's society, whose liquid assets were incredibly wealthy. (SWI65)

Prender

this bounty hunter was based on the planet Lianna, during the early years of the New Republic. (GUN)

Prengahl Kreen

this Twi'leki male was a well-known weapons expeditor during the Galactic Civil War. He was a third-generation arms dealer, following in his father's footsteps in the family business in the Emparthecca System. He worked from a huge, hidden base known only as Breshkall, which was located beyond the end of the Enarc Run, although its exact location was never discovered. Prengahl was stubbornly opposed to selling arms to the Alliance, although rumors abounded of rebels obtaining weapons from him. (HR)

Prenlarr Breilm

this was the name of a noted member of Nimbanese society. (UANT)

Prentioch

this Imperial Moff was placed in charge of the Sombure Sector during the Galactic Civil War. Following the Battle of Endor, he and Moff Eyrgen fought against one another in a personal power struggle to gain more territory. Prentioch established a niche for himself in the Mid Rim, commanding a small fleet led by his personal Star Destroyer, the Prentioch. (SWJ2, SWJ7)

Prentioch

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was under the command of Imperial Moff Prentioch, during the early years of the New Republic. (SWJ7)

Prentiss

this man was a member of an Old Republic diplomatic team which was lost in a remote section of the galaxy. The captain of their ship was forced to crash-land their ship on an uncharted world, where the native flora and fauna quickly began preying on the survivors. Prentiss and his group tried to scout out their location, but were killed and eaten shortly after leaving the ship. The ship was later discovered by Han Solo and Chewbacca, shortly after the Battle of Yavin, while escaping an Imperial ambush on the Kalla's Stanchion near Etti IV. Their blind jump took them to a location where they intercepted the decades-old distress call from the downed ship. (SWEAT)

Prepredenko

this Jazbinan Lord served as the planetary governor of Jazbina during the last years of the New Order. He welcomed Luke Skywalker to Jazbina shortly after the Battle of Yavin, in an effort to capture him and gain favor with Darth Vader. He tricked Luke into believing that his daughter, Syayna, had been kidnapped, and that rescuing her would help convince the people of Jazbina to join the Alliance. In reality, he hoped that Luke would lead him to a cell of rebels which was led by Syayna, thereby doubling the reward he would garner. Prepredenko had the journalist-droid 3DVO equipped with a remote-control dart launcher, and tranquilizer Luke after he found Syayna's rebel cell. He also had Syayna placed under house arrest. 3DVO, angry that Prepredenko had tampered with his systems, tried to get revenge on Prepredenko by changing the message Vader sent to Jazbina. 3DVO reported that Vader wanted Luke dead, rather than alive, hoping Prepredenko would be executed for disobeying Vader's orders. Prepredenko then released Syayna, who claimed to have had a change of heart. She asked him to let her kill Luke, and Prepredenko agreed. She merely stunned him, but Prepredenko was too busy preparing for Vader's arrival to notice. When Vader learned that Prepredenko had arranged for Luke to be killed, he tortured Prepredenko. Prepredenko managed to convince 3DVO to transmit a message to Syayna, telling her that he truly loved her. The transmission was detected by the Imperials, and a squad of stormtroopers was sent to end it. They shot Prepredenko dead, then destroyed 3DVO, but not before the droid had their executions shown on public viewscreens. (VQ)

Prescott

this Imperial Corporal volunteered for prison duty aboard the first Death Star. A member of the Death Star's trooper force, he took sadistic pleasure in enforcing the Empire's will. (CCG9)

Presentian

this small corporation produced a variety of personal conveyance devices during the era of the New Order. (GFT)

Preservers

see lith'lon (UANT)

Presidential Palace

this was the ancient name of the building which later became known as the Imperial Palace, located on the planet Coruscant. (CCW)

President's Guests Floor

this was one level of the Imperial Palace on Coruscant, set aside to accommodate the personal guests of the leader of the galaxy. It was originally created during the golden age of the Old Republic, and remained relatively untouched by Emperor Palpatine during the era of the New Order. (TLC)

Presider

this was the title given to the leader of the planet Vannix, during the early decades of the New Republic. (EL2)

Press Plate

this part of a blaster takes the signal from the trigger cable and transfers it to the apas connector. (CFG)

Pressin

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Pressin

this man served as a Major in the Imperial armed forces, and was a personal assistant to Admiral Pellaeon during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (DTR)

Pressor

a small repulsor beam projectors with help a starship pilot manage a ship's pitch. (SW)

Pressor Field

this specialized, field-generating device was developed for use during surgery, to provide localized pressure on blood vessels. This allowed a surgery nurse to clamp off a leaking artery without actually touching the vessel, greatly reducing the chance of infection. These devices were in short supply during the height of the Clone Wars, and many field doctors were forced to utilize mechanical clamps. (MBS)

Pressor, Jorad

this man was part of the civilian complement that participated in the Outbound Flight Project, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars, although he was just four at the time of the attack. When the Project was attacked in the Unknown Regions and left to die, Pressor was among the few beings who survived the attack. Pressor watched his own father struggle to keep the survivors and the ships alive and active, which eventually led to the formation of the Outbound Flight Colony. It was during this time that he developed an angry resentment toward the Jedi Knights, since they were unable to stop the attack or prevent the deaths of thousands of civilians. He later assumed the role of the Guardian of the People, helping the survivors and their children to stay alive until someone could rescue them. However, knowing where they had crashed, Pressor and his predecessors set up elaborate traps and surveillance systems to keep watch over their downed starships. Thus, when a Chiss-led mission to locate the remains of Outbound Flight actually found the ships, Pressor and his niece, Evlyn, trapped the mission's members in turbolifts until he could figure out what to do with them. He chose Dean Jinzler to act as the group's representative, having recognized the man's last name as that of Lorana Jinzler, one of the Jedi who were part of Outbound Flight. It was during their conversation that Pressor revealed that many of Outbound Flight's civilian members joined the mission to escape the decaying bureaucracy of the Old Republic. Pressor expressed confusion and amazement over the eventual formation of the Empire and the Galactic Civil War, but feared the New Republic was no different than the Old. His angry demeanor didn't improve when it was learned that Bearsh and his comrades were actually Vagaari pirates, as Pressor found himself faced with multiple groups of outsiders moving freely through the Outbound Flight. His own Peacekeepers were decimated in the attacks, and he resented the request to use the Outbound Flight Colony's medical facilities to help Aristocra Formbi and the other aliens. When Mara Jade Skywalker devised a plan to get them safely back to the main ship, and agreed to protect Evlyn, Pressor found himself grudgingly admiring the Jedi. He managed to see through his anger and recognize that she was acting for the safety of everyone aboard the Outbound Flight, not just her companions. After the Vagaari threat was eliminated, Pressor agreed to accompany the Outbound Flight Colony to Nirauan, staying as far away from the New Republic as they could. (SQ)

Pressure Bomb

a detonation device which uses air pressure to knock out its targets. While not obviously destructive, a pressure bomb severely disables the hearing of its victims, and causes great pain to the victim's sinuses and cranial cavities. This often results in hearing loss, disorientation, and intense pain. (CS)

Pressure Pirates

this was the term used to describe any gang of pirates who preyed upon starships and orbital stations which worked in the atmosphere of gas giant planets. They disabled their targets, causing the craft to sink into the atmosphere. As soon as the ships were evacuated and left to fall into the planet's core, the pressure pirates moved in. Using specially-designed equipment that could withstand intense pressure, the pirates then tracked the ship as it sank and looted it for any profit they could find. (TAE)

Presteen

a planet. (RESB)

Prestor

Prestor was an Imperial aide assigned to Lord Tion on Ralltiir. Following this mission, he was assigned to the Star Destroyer Devastator, where he served under Darth Vader in the capture of the Tantive IV. He was then assigned the task of tracking down the whereabouts of R2-D2 and C-3PO, after they jettisoned from the starship with the Death Star plans. Prestor was portrayed by Stephen Elliot for the Star Wars Radio Drama on National Public Radio. (SWR)

Prestor

this young man was allowed to borrow his father's Hyperfoil 1000 for errands, and gladly did his father's bidding in order to ride the vehicle. (GFT)

Preter Jacket

this style of jacket or overcoat is cut in such a way that it has deep pockets hidden inside the jacket, one beneath each sleeve's armhole. (TFNR)

Pretormin Environmental

this minor corporation manufactured a wide range of survival and exploration gear, including several models of moisture vaporators. (EGW, IWS)

Prevaro

meaning "regal" or "noble", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG) this Rodian tried to eliminate the antiques dealer Azool, thinking he was Prince Xizor in disguise. In fact, Prevaro discovered that Azool was actually Xizor's niece, Savan. Prevaro threw in his lot with Savan, and arranged a horde of thugs to help her capture the human replica droid Guri from Doctor Thrumble's laboratory on Hurd's Moon. (SEE)

Prevaro

Preventers

this group of Carosites was formed during the early stages of the Galactic Civil War but a vocal faction which opposed the Empire. The Preventers spoke of taking "aggressive action" against the Empire, thereby preventing the further loss of life. (AE)

Previl, Saml

this ancient man was a native of Archais, and held the rank of Prime Abseiler of Alsakan during the earliest periods of Alsakan's history. He supposedly rode the Tessent of Alsakan into battle against the dukes of the Ten Valleys. After the victory, Previl and his descendants united the various tribes of Alsakan. (GMR9)

Prex

this member of the Corporate Sector Authority's Direx Board was elected by their peers to serve a three-year term as the Direx Board's representative to counterbalance the power of the ExO. The Prex was also responsible for presenting a secret annual report to Emperor Palpatine. (CSA)

Prexton

manufacturers of doublefield generators. (ISB)

Preybird-class Starfighter

a rare form of SoroSuub combat starship, the Preybird-class fighter was produced in extremely limited quantities. SoroSuub shut the project down after producing only a few production models. The smuggler Mazzic owned two of these ships. The design was eventually picked up by the remnants of the Empire under Moff Disra, who turned the plans over to Zothip and the Cavrillhu pirates. The Cavrillhu then began mass-producing the ships for Disra, who bypassed normal Imperial channels to fund the ships. Over time, the Preybird eventually replaced the TIE fighter, because it was cheaper to obtain them from pirates than from official Imperial channels. The twenty-meter-long Preybird had a long, central hull with a forward-situated cockpit. The wings were attached to the rear of the hull, rising up slightly before levelling off. A single laser cannon was mounted at the end of each wing, and the primary engines were located at the bend in the wings. (LCSB, SOP, GMR4)

Preying Makthier

native to the crystal caves of Makthierse, this flying carnivore had a wingspan of up to two meters and a body length of 1.5 meters. These vicious predators were capable of consuming twice their body weight in food each day, and their voracious appetite made them almost fearless hunters. Mainly nocturnal, makthiers hunt in groups of ten, using a form of sonar to locate their prey. They use the stinger, located at the end of their tail, to immobilize their prey with an injection of poison, then carry it off to their nests. There have even been documented reports of swarms of makthiers attacking and carrying off large farm animals. (COG)

Preza

the Yevethan name for Doornik-319. It was exterminated during the Yevethan Purge by Tal Fraan. (SOL)

Pria

this planet, the homeworld of the Priapulid race, was an aquatic world that was orbited by a single moon. One tidal hour on the planet equalled ten standard hours on Coruscant, and the planet experienced roughly two tidal cycles each day. During the height of the New Order, the average day on Pria lasted 20 standard hours, plus about three seconds. Pria, located in the Core Worlds, was a tectonically active planet, and the landmasses were moved and shaped much faster than normal. It was estimated that, due to sudden shifts in global temperature brought about by the creation or destruction of volcanoes and rifts, Pria experienced a new ice age every 10,000 years or so. (EGA, GMR8)

Priam

an Imperial Nebulon-B frigate stationed near Kalla VII during the Galactic Civil War. In a battle with Alliance starfighters, the frigate was disabled and captured for the Alliance. (XW)

Priamsta

this was the name adopted by the nobles of the planet Eiattu who rose up against Uthorrferral Cartha. The Priamsta worked with the Empire to maintain some level of control over their planet's allegiances, and balked when Harran Estillo proclaimed himself Harrandatha, the crown Prince of Eiattu. When Plourr returned to Eiattu, she worked to remove all forms of Imperial control, and brought the opposing forces of the Priamsta and the People's Liberation Battalion under a single leader. This only occurred after Harran Estillo and Leonia Tavira were exposed. (XWWP)

Pri-Andylian Propulsion Systems

this corporation maintained an orbital shipyard near the planet Duro during the height of the New Order. Based in the Corellian System, Pri-Andylian had the backing of the Empire and operated the shipyards with military efficiency. In the wake of the Battle of Endor, most of Pri-Andylian's contracts dried up, and its facilities were overtaken by the Corporate Sector Authority. (GMR2)

Priap

this was the native language of the Priapulin race. (GMR8)

Priapaulin

see Priapulin (GMR8)

Priapulin

this unusual alien species of gastropods was native to the planet Pria, and resembled a long, flat fish. The average Priapulin had five notochords along his length, making them seem wormlike when fully straightened. However, they preferred to form themselves into S-shaped curves, a position which allowed them to use their flat tails to brace themselves upright. They had three pairs of eyes which studded the front end of their bodies, and their underbellies were covered with thick bristles. These bristles would be used like hundreds of legs, moving the Priapulin about with a broom-like hissing sound. Other bristles could be used like hands or fingers. They were the top being in an incredible symbiotic relationship which involved food-kin and other creatures who served the Priapulin and, in turn, were served by the Priapulin. As a race, the Priapulins were dedicated to peace, and worked whenever possible to avoid conflicts. They were also known for their incredible sense of humor and deep sense of loyalty. (RP, EGA, GMR8)

Pricene

this man was the Captain of Lant Mining Corporation's LMC-55c convoy, when it was ambushed by the Alliance. (FBS)

Pricina, Dom

this wealthy woman was the owner of the Ankarres Sapphire until she took a trip on the Kuari Princess. The courier droid 4-LOM realized that someone would steal the jewel, since Pricina was a careless woman, and so the droid removed it from her possession. To help track down potential thieves, 4-LOM left a false stone in its place. When she failed to recognize that she was being careless, 4-LOM kept the stone, rather than return it. He later sold it to a fence on Darlyn Boda. (TBH)

Prickle-pig

this was a dim-witted creature that was native to the planet Sevarcos. (YDR)

Pride of Eiattu

this New Republic Nebulon-B frigate was part of the force sent to liberate the planet Ciutric from the control of Prince-Admiral Krennel. It supported the flagship Emancipator, along with the Peacemaker and the Thunderchild. (IR)

Pride of Honor

this New Republic warship was one of many that were commandeered by Senators who were trying to flee the Yuuzhan Vong conquest of Coruscant. Despite the inevitability of Coruscant's fall, many New Republic military officers decried the Senate's appropriation of military ships to escape Coruscant, especially knowing that thousands - if not millions - of civilians were stranded on the planet. The Pride of Honor was badly damaged during its "escape," and her Phindian Captain loudly criticized the loss of the ship in exchange for the lives of a few Senators. (DW)

Pride of Selonja

this New Republic CR90 Corvette was the lead ship in a supply convoy travelling to Liinade III, when it was brought out of hyperspace by the Interdictor cruiser Binder near system M2934738. The attacking ships, under the direction of Prince-Admiral Krennel, pounded the Pride of Selonja the instant it dropped into realspace, preventing any sort of counterattack. The Pride of Selonja was destroyed in the attack, as was the frigate Interpid, before Krennel took possession of the twelve freighters they were accompanying. (IR)

Pride of Selonja

this New Republic Lancer-class frigate was commissioned during the early stages of the war against the Yuuzhan Vong. In the wake of the Battle of Coruscant, the ship was placed under the command of Captain Todra Mayn. (FH1)

Pride of the Rim

this starship was owned by the Corellian resistance, and was rescued by the crew of the Retribution. (RD)

Pride of the Senate

this Dreadnaught served as part of the command fleet used by Admiral Greelanx during the Battle of Nar Shaddaa. It was commanded by Soontir Fel, who held the rank of Captain at the time. (THG, ECH)

Pride of Thela

this rescue and recovery ship was operated by Dacholder and Uldir Lochett during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. When Dacholder tried to turn Uldir over to the Yuuzhan Vong, after learning that Uldir had attended the Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4, Uldir forced Dacholder out an airlock and escaped aboard the ship. (EVC)

Pride of Yevetha

this recommissioned Super-class Star Destroyer - originally known in the Imperial Navy as the Intimidator - was captured from the Empire by the Yevetha just after the Battle of Endor. It later became the command ship for Dar Bille, and the flagship of Nil Spaar's navy. Spaar used it to transport the various prisoners the Yevetha had captured during the Purge of the Koornacht Cluster. In the wake of the Yevethan defeat at the hands of the New Republic, the Pride of Yevetha disappeared, but was found adrift and severely damaged near the Unknown Regions four years later. (BTS, TT, ECH)

Pridossk

this was one of the more common names used by Trandoshan hunters. Like most Trandoshan names, it was reserved for males, but could be adopted by those rare females who became hunters. In the Trandoshan language, the name meant "dismembers his prey". (GCG)

Priests

this was one of the main castes of Yuuzhan Vong society. The Priests were those individuals who were chosen to speak for their gods, although they only served the lesser gods of the Yuuzhan Vong pantheon. Only the Supreme Overlord could speak for Yun-Yuuzhan. There were four distinct levels within the Priest caste: High Priest (or High Priestess), Priest (or Priestess), Seer, and Novice. Although the Priest caste commanded the respect of the entire Yuuzhan Vong population, they were not ranked against the other castes in terms of power or position. The Priests were a separate class of individuals spanning all of Yuuzhan Vong society. In this way, the Priest class also did not have a patron, but worked as conduits for all. (NJOSB, UFCD)

Priests of Ninn

the group of green-vested religious fanatics who have set up their own religious tenets and practice them in planet-wide retreats. (HSR)

Priests of the Sun

this was the name of the religious order that developed among the Sedrian people, and revolved around the worship of the Golden Sun organism. Each priest wore an ornate pin that indicated their position within the order. (BGS)

Priestship

this was the term used to describe any Yuuzhan Vong starship set aside for the exclusive use of the priest caste. Unlike the lumpy, crenellated, yorik coral ships of the military, a priestship was faceted and gleaming, reflecting any available light like a gemstone. (DJ)

Priggit

this scout tried to upgrade the personality matrix of his Wanderer acout droid, but found the task difficult at best without wiping out the entire programming of the droid and starting over from scratch. (FTD)

Prikler

this was the name of a noted Spinner individual. (UANT)

Prilarca, Drev

this man served the New Republic as a Commander in the armed forces, and led the Arms Interdiction task force to hunt down and eliminate illegal export and sale of arms. (GUN)

Prildaz

this barren, dusty world is the third planet in the ILC-905 system. The name was given to the planet by the Yevetha. (TT)

Prima

this ball of molten rock and metal is the first planet in the Kalinda System. (TSK)

Primacale

this crop was grown on the planet Chrona. (SWJ12)

Primarin Starshipwrights Union

this collection of starship manufacturers went bankrupt during the last years of the Old Republic. (AIR)

Prime Abseiler

this was the name given to the ancient ruler of the planet Alsakan. (GMR9)

Prime Base

this was the codename given to the primary Separatist base, during the height of the Clone Wars. (MBS)

Prime Campus

this was the name of the primary campus of the Shafr Center. (GMR9)

Prime Clone

this was the name given to the first clone created from the genetic material of Jango Fett. Created by the Kaminoans shortly after the Battle of Naboo, the prime clone was the source of all subsequent clone troopers. However, when the Separatists launched an attack on Kamino, the prime clone was killed during the early stages of the battle. (RDK)

Prime Coromon

this was the main island in the Coromon Island chain, located on the planet Fresia. It was on Prime Coromon, which was sometimes referred to as Coromon Island, that Incom Industries built its main research and development facilities. The administration headquarters were located on Northwest Coromon. (CCW)

Prime Mover

this was the term used by the Ugors to describe the actual gravity well projector that was contained within the Holiest of Holies, the scrap of the original Death Star that formed the center of the Paradise System. (SWDB)

Prime Senate Spire

this tall skyscraper served as one of the main living areas used by Senators of the Old Republic. Its lower levels housed bureaucratic offices and other support areas for the main Senate chamber, while its upper levels boasted some of the most luxurious apartments in Imperial City. The Spire was nearly two kilometers taller than any other building around it, providing those who lived there with an unprecedented view of the cityscape. (RP)

Primo, Kora

this Imperial Intelligence officer was in command of the agency scouting the Kalinda System, some years after the Battle of Endor. She was an innocent-looking woman who had the ability to use makeup to transform her appearance from one extreme to the other. She was the latest in a long line of Imperial Intelligence officers, and felt that her family included not only blood relatives but Imperial Intelligence as well. Thus, she was extremely loyal and uncompromising (some would say fanatical). Note that she is often referred to as Kora Primos in Twin Stars of Kira. (TSK)

Primor

this was one of the largest moons that orbited the planet Kidron. Like its sister, Segual, Primor's make-up was loaded with valuable ores and minerals. The Orfites of Kidron kept this fact a well-guarded secret. (PG3)

Primor

this Iskalonian male was considered The First to Swim, or the ruler of the planet Iskalon, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Primor was voted into his position of leadership because he was a fair bing who allowed the people to guide the actions of the government. He was also known for his patience, although his patience was tried when a delegation of Iskalonians traveled to Gamandar to negotiate a peace treaty with the Empire, sometime after the Battle of Yavin. The ambassadors were killed when their water tanks were purposely smashed, and the message of their assassinations was delivered with a warning that their fate was the only peace the Empire was willing to tolerate. Primor urged caution, but pleaded with Leia Organa, Luke Skywalker, and Lando Calrissian to help free the Iskalon System from Imperial control. Unfortunately, Primor was killed in the tidal wave that destroyed Pavillion, before any lasting treaty with the Alliance could be formed. (MC74, MC75, GMR1)

Primus Goluud

this unstable red giant was the central star of the system containing Goluud Minor. A mining colony existed on the planet some 5,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. The Daragon siblings once charted a hyperspace route - known as the Glouud Corridor - which passed dangerously close to the star. A Cha'a drone ship was the first to use the route, and was destroyed when it strayed slightly off-course and exploded. The Goluud Corridor was abandoned, but the star was etched in history when Naga Sadow retreated to Primus Goluud as he launched his attack on the Old Republic. He drew on the intense energies during his meditations, allowing him to create incredibly far-reaching illusions of battle forces which augmented his own Massassi forces. Gav Daragon successfully broke Sadow's concentration and drew the Republic's fleet to Primus Goluud. Sadow, not wishing to be captured, used the Dark Side of the Force to rend the star apart, hoping to destroy all the ships gathered there. Gav Dargaon managed to provide the Republic ships with an escape vector before the star exploded. (GAS, FOSE)

Prinawe Racer

a small, fast starship. (BTS)

Prince

a Mugaari transport destroyed during an Imperial raid on their hidden outpost. (TIE)

Princess of Blood

this was the nickname of the Millennium Falcon, used by Han Solo and his wife, Leia Organa Solo, during their privateer missions in support of Luke Skywalker's Great River. The Princess of Blood staged a series of ambushes, capturing cargoes from starships which had been supplying the Peace Brigade in their militant war against the Jedi Knights. Because of this, the ship earned the attention of the Yuuzhan Vong Warmaster, Tsavong Lah, whose personal grudge against the Jedi began with Jacen Solo and ran exceptionally deep. (EVR, NJOSB)

Princess of Ditterbug

this was one of the Gorph females chosen by Queen Slugga as a possible wife for her son, Prince Vork. (ECAR)

Princess of Maduk

this was one of the Gorph females chosen by Queen Slugga as a possible wife for her son, Prince Vork. (ECAR)

Principles of Power

this tome, written by Emperor Palpatine, was required reading for all Imperial Moffs during the New Order. (SOL)

Prindaar System

planetary system which contains Antar and its six moons. (GG4)

Pring, Dandamont

this Imperial Consul-General controlled the planet Bothawui at the height of the Galactic Civil War. He tended to rely on his staff to do all the work, especially Lieutenant Commander Janna Tammok. Dandamont had planned to marry off his daughter, Praleena, to the Captain of the Star Destroyer Dismay, but Praleena was extricated from Bothawui by Alliance agents who were there to pick up her lover, one of Pring's personal aides. (SPG)

Pring, Praleena

this young woman was Dandamont Pring's daughter. Her lover was an minor bureaucrat assigned to Consul-General Pring himself, although he planned to defect to the Alliance. However, he would only turn himself over if the Alliance helped him bring Praleena with him. The plan to extricate the defector was a success, much to the dismay of Consul-General Pring, who lost his only daughter. (SPG)

Prinlaeco

this man was a weapons dealer who worked on the planet Tatooine during the early years of the New Republic. (GUN)

Prinzan

this was a common name among the Snivvian race. (UANT)

Priole Danna Festival

this planet-wide festival, staged all throughout Gryle City, engulfed the population of Lamuir IV each year. The festival involved huge parties, parades, and dramas. The festival had been a tradition for millennia at the height of the New Order. Note that the HoloNetNews.com website indicates that the Priole Danna Festival had been held 2,344 times at the onset of the Clone Wars, when it was canceled for the first time. (LOE, SWJ4, HNN4, HNN5)

Priority Bounty

not often invoked because of the high price involved, this form of bounty is offered on an individual basis. If accepted, the bounty hunter agrees to drop all current hunts and focus solely on the priority bounty. No other bounties can be accepted until the priority bounty hunt has been completed. (RD)

Priority Command D-113

the self-destruction order used on the Subjugator. (SF)

Priority Yellow

this was the Imperial code phrase which indicated a change in the modulation of communications equipment, especially after equipment was stolen or captured. Priority Yellow indicated a mandatory communications silence, to prevent the enemy from using stormtrooper helmets to intercept transmissions. (TG)

Prishardia

a backwater agricultural world. (TFNR)

Prishella

this woman was a noted slicer, who worked from a base on Coruscant and broke into numerous New Republic Intelligence datafiles. (GUN)

Prishella III

this planet was under Imperial control during the Galactic Civil War. (ROE)

Prishti Bulb

this was an unusual, globe-shaped musical instrument. (SWI67)

Prisk

this was one of the many names given to female Bothans. In the Bothan language, it meant "bitter" or "unhappy." (GCG, WOTC)

Prism

this was an Alliance Carrack-class cruiser, destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Prisma Storm

a term used by Corran Horn - alias Kieran Halycon - to describe the phenomenon of the changing from night to day on Yavin 4. As Corran discovered, the atmosphere on Yavin4 got very cold as it passed through the shadow of Yavin. Water crystals in the atmosphere would freeze into small crystals. When the mass of Yavin rose and began a new day, the orange light from the planet would be refracted in the billions of water crystals, looking like multicolored lightning in the air. (IJ)

Prit Kessek

this Clawdite assassin worked for a Herglic crime syndicate during the early years of the New Order. She was hired for her ability to alter her shape, which allowed her to serve as a "different" individual each time she was dispatched. Her superiors worked with the Zygerian slavers, and Kessek served as the courier who picked up the funds which were being transferred from Brevis Taug to the Thanda clan. After Taug was apprehended by Imperial Intelligence and explained his relationship to the Zygerians, the Imperials sent a team to the Bazarre space station to capture the courier and any other being associated with the transfer of credits. The Imperials managed to get the drop of Kessek, but she acted quickly and managed to fight them off. With the firefight at a stalemate, she agreed to help transport the Imperials to Zygeria in exchange for a reduced sentence. (WOA26)

Prit Kesso

this was the name of a noted Clawdite individual in the history of the planet Zolan. (UANT)

Prit, Aveton

this man owned and operated Prit's Free Pit, near the city of Rigton, on Naalol, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Aveton was also an informant for the Empire, working for Nir Rinit in exchange for certain rights and credits. He used much of the pay he received from Rinit to install high-tech security features in the Pit, including several miniature recording devices planted on his servant droids. (GMR5, WOTC)

Prithann, Clis

this woman was a lifetime friend of the Captisan and Belden families of Bakura, and served as the primary medical aide taking care of Eppie Belden during the height of the New Order. She was trained at the Imperial medical facility on Bakura, but preferred to use natural remedies instead of the manufactured drugs of her teachers. Despite her soft-spoken demeanor, Clis was an active supporter of the Bakura resistance, and ever helped in the capture of Wilek Nereus during the Battle of Bakura. (TB, TBSB)

Prit's Free Pit

this restaurant, located in tunnel 329 beneath the city of Rigton, on the planet Naalol, was actually carved from the rock of the mountain in which it was located. The tavern was owned and operated by Aveton Prit during the height of the Galactic Civil War. During this period, Prit was paid handsomely by Nir Rinit, who used the Pit as a place to gather intelligence on Alliance activities in the area. The entrance to the Free Pit was protected by sophisticated weapons scanners, as Prit guaranteed that his establishment was free of dangerous weapons. (GMR5, WOTC, WOA36)

Pritsi

this was a common name among the Kushiban race. (UANT)

Prittick

this Imperial fleet Admiral was placed in charge of regrouping the Imperial Fleet fleet following the Battle of Endor. (TB)

Private Luxsub

this was one of the many submersible transport businesses operating on Pavo Prime during the early years of the New Republic. It offered a limited number of private compartments aboard each transport, as well as a large amount of common space. (SWI67)

Privitt

this Imperial officer was one of a handful who were stationed at the relay outpost on the planet Vaal, during the period leading up to the Battle of Yavin. He had joined the team on Vaal shortly before the destruction of the first Death Star, and hadn't been away from the Imperial Academy long enough to understand the lackadaisical attitude of the other officers stationed on the remote planet, especially Reybn. Just as he was starting to embrace their laxity, Privitt discovered that Darth Vader had landed on the planet. As Vader took the only shuttle found at the outpost to return to Coruscant, a pack of mammalian predators entered the compound and killed the officers, including Privitt. (SWESH)

Prm-3

this weapons system was designed by BlasTech for use on small civilian craft, and consisted of an autoblaster or pulse laser cannon which lacked an internal targeting system. Thus, the Prm-3 had to obtain targetting information directly from the ship's sensor package. (SS, SWJ5)

Probe

any of the various automated spacecraft designed to maneuver into a position from which they can monitor a star system's activity. There are two basic types of probes used in the galaxy, both about 5 meters in length and unshielded (5-RU hulls): Type A, a spy probe that resembles an E-class container; and Type B, a spider-like spy probe with more maneuverability. (TIE)

Probe Droid

any of the various droids used to search out remote data. They are often dispensed from large starships in small propulsion capsules. The droid emerges from the capsule on planetfall, and begins following its programmed mission. The droids are equipped with motion detectors, video and audio recording devices, and holographic transmitters. The first probe droids were used to search out metals and fuel sources on remote planets. Later, exploratory probe droids were sent out to look for inhabited planets. After Palpatine assumed control of the galaxy, most exploratory probe droids were reprogrammed to hunt down the bases used by the Alliance, pursue fleeing targets, act as picket line sensors, and to perform spy missions. For these reasons, they were outfitted with protective armaments and self-destruct mechanisms. (ESB, ISB)

Probe-Mate

this was the name of Arakyd's specialized hyperspace pod delivery system, developed to carry Viper probe droids to their targets. (RESB)

Probiotic Shower

developed on the planet Haruun Kal, this chemical shower was used at spaceports to replace the beneficial skin bacteria which were killed upon passing through the surgical umbrella field. Every being arriving on the planet had to pass through customs, and to reach customs they moved through the probiotic shower. (SHPT)

Probiotic Tablet

similar in most respects to a probiotic shower, these medicinal tablets were given to newly-arrived individuals on the planet Haruun Kal to replace intestinal bacteria which may have been killed during passage through a surgical umbrella field. (SHPT)

Probos

a female Duro, and tract mate to Bringe, Probos was actually an alias used by Cachi DeMaal. Together, Bringe and Probos were starcharters working for the Empire. They were charting the space beyond the Outer Rim, when they happened to be in the Mos Eisley cantina when Obi-Wan and Luke approached Han Solo for passage to Alderaan. They debated whether to tell the Imperial about it. A graduate of the Duro Academy of Deep Space Exploration, she can boast no less than 3 unguided trips through hyperspace. She and Bringe know of a huge deposit of Helixell somewhere in the Outer Rim or beyond, but they have not told anyone where it is. (SW, SCRE, GMR2)

Probot

Procession

this was the name given to the wide thoroughfare which dominated the Kala'uun Starport. (PSPG)

Proclamation Boards

these variable message boards were displayed along the Grand Concourse in the Senate Rotunda, on the planet Coruscant, during the height of the Clone Wars. The Proclamation Boards continually displayed information on the laws and amendments being considered by the Galactic Senate, as well as the status of the ongoing struggle against the Confederacy of Independent Systems. (E3N)

Procopia

this planet, located in Tapani Sector, was the political capital of the sector. It was also the social capital of the sector during the Capital Season. The nobility and upper class of the sector travel to Procopia to maintain their social standing and reputation, while spying on their peers and looking for intrigue. Those who do not make the trip during Capital Season are often snubbed or blacklisted, which affects social standing as well as political and economic position. The planet itself was covered several chains of islands scattered throughout warm seas, making it quite beautiful to behold. The only true landmass, the continent of Davla, was located at the southern pole and was covered with seething volcanoes. (LOE, PGT)

Procopian Season

Procopian Shipping Lane

this minor hyperspace route connected the Shapani Bypass to the Mecetti provinces of Tapani Sector. (TSIA)

Proctors

the intermediate level of Hethrir's Empire Youth school, these blue-robed individuals are the teacher and leaders of the helpers and students. They are allowed to begin practicing with lightsabers. (CS)

Procurator of Justice

a position created by Darth Vader for Hethrir, it allowed Hethrir to dispense "justice" to enemies of the Empire. (CS)

Procurator-class Star Battlecruiser

the Procurator-class battleship was developed and manufactured by Kuat Drive Yards, specifically for the purpose of defending the Kuat Sector from invasion. (X2)

Prodigal

this YT-1300 freighter was used by Fable Astin and her Harrier infiltration team on many insertion missions. (SWJ8)

Prodigal-One

this was the codename of Kala Kevv, the Alliance starfighter pilot shot down over NCW-781. (IA)

Prodigal-Two

this was the codename of the datacard created by Alliance agent Prodigal-One. It contained information on a pair of Imperial double-agents working for the Alliance. (IA)

Prodmash

this was a common male name among the Gamorrean people. Like most Gamorrean names, it was essentially gibberish that indicated what a Gamorrean would do if you made him angry. (GCG)

Productivity Day

this Tapani Sector holiday fell between the months of Nelona and Helona. (PGT)

Professiona Artists Guild

this guild of noted artists from the Elrood Sector was based on Akana. The name "Professiona" was chosen for its exotic sound. (PG3)

Professional Greenputt Tour

this was one of the primary series of greenputt matches held during the last decades of the Old Republic. Only the best male greenputt players were allowed to compete. (HNN4)

Profex

this was the title given to certain professors who taught at the University of Sanbra. (GMR10)

Proficient-class Cruiser

this Corellian-made warship was developed in the early decades of the New Republic, and saw duty as part of the Republic's newer fleets. It measured 850 meters in length, and was equipped with a Damorian power plant. Despite its size, it was lightly armed with just ten heavy turbolasers and twenty ion cannons. The original designs were meant to be modular, but later refits removed the compartmentalized holds in favor of docking bays. (HT)

Profit

this small freighter was part of the pirate fleet controlled by Larken and the Pillage. It was captained by Druug, but was destroyed by the Interceptor-class freighter Kizbon's Box. (SWJ5)

Profitable

this Trade Federation freighter was one of many such ships that were refitted for military use, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. It was dispatched to Corellia, under the command of Nute Gunray, to capture a renegade scientist sometime after the Battle of Naboo. It was believed that Gunray was ordered to take on the mission by Darth Sidious, after a bounty hunter claimed that he had been hired by Gunray to capture the scientist. (GCG)

Profiteer

this was the Basic name of the Trade Federation freighter Saak'ak. (COD)

Profiteroles Ukio

this sweet dessert was created on the planet Ukio. It was made from puff pastries that were filled with a caramel ganache sauce. (YDR)

ProfitSmasher

this starship was owned by a crew which was deeply in debt to Brebu, a Hutt crimelord. When they defaulted on their loan payments, the Hutt sent his thugs out to make the crew pay for their mistake. The thugs shot down the ProfitSmasher on an unspecified backwater planet, and all aboard were either killed or enslaved by the Hutt. In the years since the crash, the dead hull of the ship has been gutted and stripped of all salvageable components. Many a pirate or criminal has tried to turn the hulk of the ProfitSmasher into their personal base, but every such venture seemed to end in disaster. Most modern spacers leave the crash site alone, fearing their own misfortunes. Shortly after the Battle of Yavin, Brebu began devising a plan to turn the hulk of the ProfitSmasher into his own base. (HAS)

Profogg

this species of large rodent was native to the deserts of the planet Tatooine. They lived in "towns" which were formed by a complex series of tunnels and chambers dug out of the sand and could accommodate up to 100 individuals. Incredibly social, the profoggs had distinct uses for each chamber. Profoggs were known for their fast rate of reproduction, giving birth to up to eight young as often as eight times a year. The profogg was distinguished by its unusual head, which was ratlike and filled with sharp incisors. Atop its nose was a prominent horn, used for digging and foraging. The backside of the profogg was covered with thick, scale-like plates that helped protect them from the sun. (WSW)

Progenitor

according to the members of the Order of Shasa, the Progenitor was the first Selkath to ever move about on the planet Manaan. It was from the Progenitor that the Selkath race developed. (PH)

Progenitor's Call

this unique ability to call upon the power of the Force was isolated to those Selkath who became members of the Order of Shasa. The power of the Force was believed to have come directly from the Progenitor, the being who was believed to have formed the Selkath race many millennia before the Galactic Civil War. (PH)

Program Trap

a form of computer virus that is programmed into a droid's memory which causes a power overload in the droid's circuits. The result is an explosive detonation device similar to a medium-sized bomb. (SW)

Program, The

this was the term used by Melen Toobo to describe his plans to lobotomize Coruscanti Ogres, in an effort to create a cheap pool of "organic droids" to serve as his docile workforce. The first ogres put through The Program were utter failures, emerging from surgery even more savage than before. The success of the individual known as Friendly emboldened Toobo to begin full-scale conversion, although Friendly turned out to be a fluke. Subsequent conversions resulted in ogres that were uncontrollable, and had to be turned off in order to prevent widespread damage. When the Empire discovered The Program, it tried to use the lobotomized ogres as a form of soldier, dispatched to rebellious worlds to wreak havoc on the population. Then, a squadron of stormtroopers would arrive and eliminate the ogres, winning the support of the frightened population. (WOTC)

Progression

a time measurement used by the Brigians. (HSL)

Project Ambition

this was the codename of Ysanne Isard's plan to eliminate the Cabal which opposed the Imperial Ruling

Council and dispose of Sate Pestage, thereby given her complete control of the Empire's remnants, in the wake of the Battle of Endor. (XWES)

Project Aralia

an amusement park built on the planet Aralia. The Ranats tried to stall the construction of the park, and its builders complained to the Empire. This led to the decree that Ranats could be killed in self-defense, and could not carry weapons. (GG4)

Project Asteroid

an infamous Imperial operation which used many of the battle tactics devised by Jan Dodonna. (MTS)

Project Chubar

named for the animated bilar of children's stories, Project Chubar was Warlord Zsinj's pet project. Its goal was to produce highly intelligent soldiers from the more primitive, non-human species in the galaxy. The project focused primarily on Gamorreans, Ewoks, and Talz, but also included Ortolans, Ranats, and Bilars. Using chemical treatments and educational imprinting similar to that used on clones, scientists from Binning Biomedical's Epsilon Wing discovered that their subjects could obtain near-human intelligence. This allowed them to learn complex tasks, such as flying a starship. A secondary goal was to stimulate the aggression centers of the subjects' brains, thereby creating a group of brutal soldiers which could act on Zsinj's orders. The project was nearly scuttled by one of its lead scientists, Tuzin Gast, who staged an explosion in the labs on Saffalore in hopes of letting the test subjects escape. Gast himself died in the blast, but only a single creature escaped. Known as subject Gamma-9104, this Gamorrean fled Saffalore and joined the New Republic, taking the name Voort saBinning. (SOC)

Project Dead Eye

this Imperial operation was exposed shortly after the Battle of Yavin. The lead scientist for the project, Dr. Vacca, was a native of the planet Alderaan, a fact that led many Alderaanian survivors to question his true loyalties. The project was designed to increase the ability of Imperial stormtroopers to accurately target their weapons. By using native Alderaanian plants, Dr. Vacca created a stimulant drug that increased the visual acuity of a stormtrooper. This stim also increased their combat abilities, a beneficial side effect that served to increase Dead Eye's worth to the Empire. However, the destruction of Alderaan meant that there were very few remaining stores of Alderaanina flora, forcing Dr. Vacca to rethink his work. When he decided to defect from Imperial service and join the Alliance, all materials from Project Dead Eye were turned over to Alliance scientists for further investigation. (SWGAL)

Project Death Star

this was the term used to describe the original plans to develop the Death Star space station, as indicated by the plans which were stolen by the Alliance just prior to the Battle of Yavin. (RESB)

Project Decoy

a project assigned to Fandar and Fugo by DRAPAC, its goal was to produce Human Replica Droids for use by Alliance personnel in dangerous situations. The first such droid was built to resemble Princess Leia, who was being pursued by Zorba the Hutt and Trioculus. The technology developed during this project eventually reached the open market, though it was prohibitively expensive in most cases, Prince Xizor, for instance, paid 9,000,000 credits to build his assistant, Guri. (MMY, QE, SSE)

Project Funeral

this was one of Warlord Zsinj's most ambitious actions against the New Republic. It involved the insertion of agents into all levels of the New Republic government, and was a spin-off of Projects Chubar and Minefield. A few of the agents were simply messengers, who would deliver the code phrases needed to activate the programming installed as part of Project Minefield. The majority of the agents were non-humans who held positions in which they were trusted and respected. Zsinj began stirring up the racial tensions by compelling the non-humans to take violent actions against human personnel. However, Zsinj's actions were discovered by Wraith Squadron, and so many of the agents that were part of Project Funeral were captured or neutralized before they could do any damage. (SOC)

Project Minefield

this was a project established by Warlord Zsinj, during his struggles against the New Republic. It was a spin-off from Project Chubar, and involved the use of certain chemical treatments to brainwash the more intelligent, non-human species of the galaxy. While Project Chubar could produce subjects capable of successive missions, the subjects of Project Minefield were considered expendable. This was because the brainwashing, once activated, would compel them to actions which would lead to their demise once their mission was carried out. The subjects were implanted with the need to complete a specific task, most often the assassination of another being. The subject was activated upon hearing a code phrase which contained a reference to their target. The brainwashing was not complete, as many early test subjects were able to see that the compelling act was wrong, but they often carried it out anyway. Zsinj used the subjects of this project to begin sowing seeds of division between the human and non-human races of the New Republic. However, it was discovered by New Republic Intelligence after the capture of Doctor Edda Gast. (SOC)

Project Moort

developed by Warlord Zsinj, this project attempted to use Moorrt-class droids to reveal the locations of enemy warships. (NEGC)

Project Nightsaber

this project was the brainchild of Imperial General Vit, who was based on the planet Dathomir some twelve years after the Battle of Yavin. Vit spent a great deal of credits on excavations of the Chu'unthor, hoping to obtain Jedi lightsabers and other artifacts. His plan called for luring a disgruntled Jedi Knight to Dathomir, and convincing them to join him in a crusade against the New Republic. This turncoat Jedi would then train legions of Force-sensitive Imperial agents, the culmination of the project. General Vit thought he had the perfect candidate when Dal Konur was stranded on Dathomir, but the Jedi team sent to apprehend Konur managed to capture the rogue Jedi and defeat Vit in combat. Thus, Project Nightsaber never came to fruition. (WOA30)

Project Orrad

this secret Imperial project was run in an underground lab on Venaari. Plans for the project were stolen by Shandria L'hnnar and Sienn Sconn before the project could be initiated. (SWJ5)

Project Phlutdroid

this was the codename of the IG-88 development project. (ESB, EGD)

Project Second Chance

this New Republic operation involved the hiring of a group of smugglers to assist the Kalinda System in repelling the Imperial and Corporate Sector forces which tried to control it. The Republic knew that the Kalindan military had been developing a technology that would negate the effects of a cloaking device, and wanted to make sure it didn't fall into the wrong hands. Implemented by Clivis Damand, the project was never given the consent of the Ruling Council, and was conducted without their knowledge. The goal of the project was for the smugglers to transport a modular command circuit to the Kalindans, which would be used to activate their deep-space defense network. The project was successful, and the Kalindans were able to repel both of the forces arrayed against them, seemingly without intervention from the New Republic. (TSK)

Project Starscream

this secret project was developed by Mammon Hoole and Borborygmus Gog, and directly funded by Emperor Palpatine. Its ultimate goal was the creation of a living army that was impervious to most forms of attack. The Project's primary laboratories were located on the planet Kiva, until an early experimental failure in the control of life and death wiped out all life on the planet. Gog assured that Hoole would be blamed for the accident, then secured continued funding from Palpatine. The Emperor placed Darth Vader in control of the project, which continued at a rapid pace. The first step in Gog's plan was to create life from nothing, and the result was the planet D'vouran. Despite this success, D'vouran outgrew its creators and escaped after consuming many of the Project's scientists. Gog continued, employing Doctor Evazan in an effort to bring the death back to life on the planet Necropolis. Evazan managed to discover a formula, but its effects were limited and required diligent planning. The next step involved discovering a way to propagate the army without continual expenditure, and involved the development of ancient viruses on Gobindi. Further experiments yielded the Nightmare Machine, which proved that Gog's scientists could extract a person's deepest fears from their mind and use them as a weapon, and a way to control the Force itself. This last step was never achieved, although a test subject was created by Gog. Known only as Eppon and called the first of Gog's Army of Terror, Eppon was a biological construct that could consume its opponents and grow stronger, could read their darkest fears and turn them against them, and could return from death rapidly. However, Hoole returned from hiding in an effort to thwart Gog's plans. In the end, Gog and Hoole battled on the planet Kiva, where the wraiths of the dead Kivans consumed Gog shortly after he destroyed Eppon. (GOF1, GOF2, GOF3, GOF4, GOF5, GOF6)

Project Wayfarer

this Old Republic exploration endeavor, led by the Republic Scout Service, was charged with probing the fringes of the known galaxy by dispatching a variety of deep-space probes. (PG3)

Projectile Cannon

this outdated form of weapon used a mild explosive to launch a solid projectile at its target. (KO)

Prok, Falad

this youth worked as a thief, spy, and errand boy for Jorga Sune, working in the streets of the city of Iritsa on Chazwa. He was later killed by a poison dart, during a skirmish between Sune's men and a group of thugs working for Hahz Fallone. (ND)

Proko

this ancient Quarren surname was believed to mean "seeker of lights". Like many Quarren surnames, it could be traced back to the time of the Battle of Ruusan. (GCG)

Pr'ollerg

this Zygerian clan formed the leadership council for the Zygerian Slaver Syndicate during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GG10)

Promenade Hotel

this ramshackle hotel was located on the town of Corestrike, on the planet Chrona. (SWJ12)

Promhassic Triaxli

this is a harmless, legal substance imported to many industrial worlds. (TFE)

Prominence

this Old Republic Dreadnaught was one of the many ships that were destroyed at Duro, during the height of the Clone Wars, when the Separatist forces in the system launched Operation Durge's Lance. (SW174)

Prominence

this Corellian Engineering Corporation Republic Cruiser was one of the Old Republic ships dispatched to Asmeru to root out the Nebula Front, about a year before the Battle of Naboo. This ship transported Qui-Gon Jinn, Obi-Wan Kenobi, and a team of Jedi to Asmeru, at the behest of Chancellor Valorum. In order to escape a trap laid by the Nebula Front, the pilot and co-pilot were forced to jettison the salon pod in its nose to distract the fighters harassing it. In the resulting explosion, the Prominence was able to break the tractor-beam lock but was shot by a planetside ion cannon. It skimmed the surface of a lake and was forced to land when two of its three engines were damaged. (COD)

Promise

this Rabaanite ceremony involves the betrothal of two members of a social caste. (SWJ9)

Promised Land

according to legends that circulated through the Lower City of Taris during the centuries leading up to the Great Sith War, the Promised Land was a place where the Outcasts - those disenfranchised beings who lived in the Lower City - could exist without persecution and poverty. Unfortunately, the story of the Promised Land told that any being who entered it could never return to their former home. Some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin, it was believed that the entrance to the Promised Land was somewhere in the sewers of the Lower City, but no such entrance was ever found. (KOTOR)

Promised One

according to Kathol legend, the Promised One was the being who would awaken the Sleeper. The identity of the Promised One was revealed to be Jessa Dajus, four years after the Battle of Endor, when the crew of the FarStar discovered DarkStryder's lair on the planet Kathol. (E)

Promk

one of the Black Sun criminals working with Grobber during the reign of Zekka Thyne over Black Sun's Corellian interests. (TFE)

Proom

this small, feline mammal was known as a scavenger that dragged its food into its lair to ensure no other creature could steal it. (HTTE)

Proop

this creature, native to the oceans of Chad, was semi-domesticated and was harvested for its tender flesh. They were a tentacled species of slug which could measure 15 meters in length, and were thought to be part of the same group as the bildogs. They herded in groups of up to 300 individuals. Prophetess

this was the codename used by the Dark Jedi Sariss, during her tenure with the Church of the Dark Side. (WOTC)

Prophetess, The

according to Chiss records, this woman oversaw the development of the Yashuvhi colony, instilling in them an obscure knowledge of the Force. Further investigation by Luke Skywalker into the books of the Expeditionary Library revealed that the Prophetess was actually Valara Saar. (FH2)

Prophets of the Dark Side

this was the name of a secretly-operating group of Imperial Intelligence agents who are continually spying on the galaxy's activities. The Prophets were all trained in the use of the Dark Side of the Force, and used its power to delve into the possible future outcomes of any event. They are led by Kadann, the Supreme Prophet. The prophets are all black-bearded individuals who wear gleaming black robes, and who have obtained a great deal of power within the remnants of the Empire, and who have made some bold predictions. Among them, the Prophets supposedly predicted the exact time and place for the destruction of both Death Stars by the Alliance. They are continually working to make sure their prophecies come true, at any cost, in order to retain their power. (LCJ, DSSB)

Prosperine Entertainment & Distillers

this company, headquartered on Algara II, owned and operated Club Prosperine. (PG2)

Prosperity

once known as Garrotine, Prosperity served as the unofficial capital of the planet Beheboth during the early years of the New Republic. (PH)

Prosperity Row

this is the name given to the only legitimate business section of Off-worlders' Quarter, found on the planet Ropagi II. Although it tries to remain apart from the black markets of the Black Hole, the various booths on Prosperity Row have no qualms about overcharging unsuspecting newcomers. (TSK)

Prosperity-class Light Cruiser

this starship was developed by Elrood StarYards, Limited, and was designed to be a customs patrol craft. They were not built for combat, and found acceptance mainly in Elrood Sector. The Prosperity-class measured 300 meters in length, and was a wedge-shaped craft with two wide wings. It required a crew of 100 officers and 24 gunners, and could transport up to 400 passengers and 2,500 metric tons of cargo. It was armed with six heavy turbolasers and a pair of tractor beam projectors. (PG3)

Prosperous Secret

this was the name of Borgo the Hutt's personal space yacht. (WOTC)

Prosslee

this race, a member of the New Republic, maintained a feud with the Forshuliri race. (SOP)

Prost

this Imperial Captain served as part of the fleet command that attempted to control the Kalinda System, some years after the Battle of Endor. His fleet was constantly harassed by Commander Sloane's Corporate Sector fleet. (TSK)

Prosthetics

the science of using mechanical systems to replace organic ones. Luke Skywalker and Darth Vader both benefitted from prosthetic systems, although Vader's were much more extensive than Luke's right hand. (ESB, TB)

Protanut

this plant produced a nut which was encased in a smooth, round shell. (RP)

Protas

this native of Anobis was Elis' younger brother. He was nineteen years old at the time Han Solo came to Anobis to discuss a cease-fire to the civil war there. During the war, he had become proficient at laying traps that eliminated the farmers of the plains. He also had developed a close relationship with Anja Gallandro, based on the proximity of their families. When she returned to Anobis with Solo, she tricked him into attacking the Ynos' village during the early stages of the cease-fire. Protas was hot-headed enough to go along, and worked hard to lay traps for the returning farmers. He was going to make one last trap for Ynos, and returned to his house shortly after Anja set a burrowing detonator in the doorway. When Protas stepped across the threshold, he activated the explosive and was killed in the blast. (ROM)

Protato

this pasty orange food product was developed to add additional proteins to a smashed potato-like sidedish. (T)

Protazk

this planet was one of many Kwymar Sector worlds that were subjugated by the Empire during the Kwymar Suppressions. (SWMW)

Protazk

this city, located on the planet Spuma, was a hold-out location for the supporters of the Alliance on the planet. The Empire sent in its best Hell's Hammers, under the command of Colonel Johans himself, to wipe out any rebellion. (ISB)

Protean

this race of unusual beings was native to the planet Nathas I, in the Questal Sector. In their natural state, Proteans resemble man-sized blobs of protoplasmic clay. They live in small groups of five to ten individuals. They consume their food by surrounding it with their bodies and absorbing it through their skin. Individual Proteans have the ability to mold themselves into different shapes and can alter their coloration, and use their ability to change shape to capture their prey. The average intelligence of a Protean is quite low, although they have the ability to learn simple concepts and commands. Their homeworld is airless, forcing the Proteans to develop methods of absorbing oxygen through their skin. They can also survive in hard vacuum for short periods of time, and have just four senses: sight, touch, hearing, and chemical. They reproduce when two individuals combine their structures into a single, stone-like ball, and remain in this configuration for a standard year. When the ball cracks open, the original pair emerges with a new child. (SWJ12, AE)

ProTech

this ancient manufactured produced a wide range of personal protection armor and systems more than 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. (TOJC)

Protector

this Trade Federation starship participated in the Battle of Naboo. (OWS, SFT)

Protector

a Victory-class Star Destroyer under the command of Admiral Harkov. It was dispatched to halt the Sepan Civil War, and served in a number of battles until Harkov decided to defect to the Alliance. He took the Protector and its accompanying fleet and tried to hand it over to the Alliance. Admiral Zaarin and Darth Vader were able to capture Harkov and his fleet. (TIE)

Protector

this Victory-class Star Destroyer was part of the New Republic fleet during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion. It escorted Leia Organa Solo and Danni Quee to Bastion, during their mission to make contact with Gilead Pellaeon and the Imperial Remnant. (DTR)

Protector

this was the brand name of Prax Arms' PRP-500 series of hold-out dart pistols. (FOP, EGW)

Protector

this Imperial Victory-II class Star Destroyer was part of a fleet dispatched to harass the Alliance as it began massing ships near Sullust, just prior to the Battle of Endor. The ship survived the death of Emperor Palpatine at Endor, and became one of the backbone ships in the Imperial fleet under the command of Grand Admiral Gilad Pellaeon. (XWA, FH1)

Protector

this was the brand name of the slugthrowing rifle produced by Barimoq Industries during the height of the New Order. (SWJ15)

Protector

this was a small, turret-mounted laser produced by BlasTech during the height of the New Order. (SWJ4)

Protector

this New Republic shuttle was used to transport criminals to the penal colony on Dles IV, until it was hijacked by the Trandoshan criminal Nakaron. (SWJ4)

Protector II

this was one of three Nebulon-B escort frigates assigned by the Empire to protect the replenishment fleet which contained the Black Ice. (BI)

Protector Series Droid

developed by Baktoid Combat Automata during the early years of the Galactic Civil War, this form of combat droid was armed with a pair of heavy repeating blasters, and was protected by heavy armor and a shield generator. (GMR5, WOTC)

Protector Squadron

this stormtrooper squadron was part of the forces dispatched to Tatooine to protect Prefect Talmont, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (MEAS)

Protector StarSpeeder

this starfighter found use in the small fleet which protected the moon Echnos. The Protector StarSpeeder was armed with a pair of laser cannons, and could achieve speeds of up to 560 kilometers an hour in Echnos' minimal atmosphere. (SWJ4)

Protectorate

this was the name given by Imperial Governor Wilek Nereus to his personal stormtrooper guard. These soldiers were specially trained at the Skine Bounty Hunter College, and were charged with deflecting any threat to Nereus' life. In the aftermath of the Bakura Incident and the death of Governor Nereus, the New Republic captured all but two members of the Protectorate, who remained unaccounted for. (TBSB)

Protectorate

this branch of the Pentastar Alignment's Chamber of Order took the place of the Empire's Imperial Security Bureau as well as the Imperial Guard Corps, and was charged with protecting the personnel and assets of the Alignment at any cost. They were known to have developed an elaborate scheme of colors to identify varying levels of threats. (SWJ3)

Protectors

this was the name of the group of Saurton warriors who supported the rulership of the High Priests. Each Protector acted as a judge and policeman as well. (PG1)

Protectors, The

this was a term used by certain members of the Jedi Order to describe their membership, during the last decades of the Old Republic. It was a term that sprang from the basic Jedi beliefs that all life must be protected and nurtured. As the Old Republic became more stagnant and the Jedi Order more insular, the Protectors was a term used with something more along the lines of conceit and pride, further evidence of how far the Jedi had fallen from their ancient ideals. (YDR)

Protein Pellets

this was a highly-nutritional but completely tasteless form of protein supplement that was used in many survival kits during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. (SOJ)

Prothium

this gas, used in the manufacture of blasters, is mined on Bespin as well as in the Killaniri System. All of the prothium from that system is shipped from the Mutandan moon, Justa. (PGF, GG2)

Protial, Fulkrehm

this man was one of the Alliance's most promising pilots, until he was shot down over Kostra. He was rescued by the natives, but their medical knowledge was insufficient to completely heal him. His legs were severely damaged, and he was unable to fly again. However, he served as an information gatherer, posing as a drunkard with little redeeming value to get close to beings with information. The disguise was easy for Protial to put on, because he found that alcohol was his only solace after losing the ability to fly. He convinced Captain Rondell that he was still useful, despite his near-constant state of inebriation.

Protial then spent his time in the bars of Berrol's Donn, posing as "that drunk in the corner" at Sangorn's Net and using the codename Trosilon. (CRO)

Protie

this slang term originated in the Elrood Sector, and was a short way to describe a protocol droid. (PG3)

Proto One

this ancient droid was once a security droid. Over the years, Proto One was forced to repair himself with spare parts, and he was shuffled from owner to owner until he ended up on Boonta. During the early years of the New Order, Proto One worked as a guard and mechanic at a scrapyard. There, he encountered R2-D2 and C-3PO, who were on the planet because their masters - Jord Dusat and Thall Joben - were racing in the Boonta Speeder Race. Although C-3PO did not trust Proto One, R2-D2 was confident in his abilities. When Boba Fett's droid BL-17 tried to destroy the White Witch, it was Proto One who opposed the droid and held it off long enough for R2-D2 to arrive and help drive it off. C-3PO later apologized to Proto One for his rude behavior. (DCAR)

Protocapillary Transmitter

this was a form of communications array which was developed in the Outer Rim Territory during the decades leading up to the Battle of Naboo. It was especially susceptible to atmospheric obstructions like clouds, which tended to reflect the signals it produced. (TAE)

Protocol Droid

a humanoid robot programmed in diplomacy, interpretation, and other skills necessary for interplanetary interactions. They are humanoid in shape so that they will fit in better among the races that are trying to interact. (SW, ESB)

Protocol of Gifts

this was the phrase used to describe the custom of the Twi'lek society in which a visitor always brought a gift for their host, as a sign of friendship and in exchange for their hospitality. The custom originated early in Twi'lek history, when different clans first met. Over the centuries, the Protocol of Gifts has been extended from personal meetings to business gatherings and the arrival of a starship to a port such as Kala'uun. Those spacers who failed to provide a gift to Koh'shak or his family were rebuffed. (PSPG)

Protocol of Hon Akua

this was the Yuuzhan Vong Shaper's law, governing the creation of grutchins. (EVR)

Protocol of Qah

this law of the Yuuzhan Vong Shapers involved the methods required to alter the memories of another Yuuzhan Vong, or even a lesser creature. The Shapers used a Qah cell to enter the subject's brain and implant a new memory, wiping out an old one in the process. Using this protocol, the Yuuzhan Vong could alter the "mission profile" of their starships, grutchins and other creatures. After the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy, it was discovered that the Protocol of Qah was ineffective on the brain of a human. The human brain tended to reroute neural pathways on its own, making the Protocol of Qah moderately ineffective. Like all the Shaper protocols, it was contained in the Qang qhasa. (EVC, EVR, FP)

Protocol of Tsong

this was one of the laws which governed the work of a Yuuzhan Vong Shaper. It described the ways in which a provoker spinneray could be used to agitate the nervous system of another being. Like all the Shaper protocols, it was contained in the Qang qhasa. (EVC, EVR)

Protocol of Vul Ag

this was one of the many laws which governed the work of a Yuuzhan Vong Shaper. It described the ways in which an engineered organism could be made to transpire more efficiently, but was reserved for use on more advanced organisms. Like all the Shaper protocols, it was contained in the Qang qhasa. (EVC, EVR)

Protocol Team

this was the name used by Ploovo Two-for-One to describe the group of thugs and killers he required to perform acts of violence in order to maintain his wishes. (AIR)

Protocols

this was the name given to the laws and regulations that governed the actions of the Yuuzhan Vong Shapers. The Protocols were rooted in a purely egocentric view of the universe, and were based on the Yuuzhan Vong's own physiology and the biology of their homeworld. Any belief that other forms of life could exist, let alone be superior in some way, was considered a heresy that was punishable by immediate death. Among these laws were the Protocols of Tsong and Vul Ag. (EVC)

Protocols, The

this set of laws which govern the challenges and duels which dominated Adumari society, the Protocols stipulate - among other things - that any duel must benefit both combatants. A young pilot who challenges an older, more experienced pilot, will be refused under the Protocols, since the older pilot has nothing more to gain from the duel. Another Protocol used in fighter craft duels involved the setting of match numbers, which specified the size of the opposing teams. Once a challenge was made, the recipient could accept or decline. If they accepted, they had the right to set the match number. (SOA)

Proton 12

this is the designation of a Rendili StarDrive sublight engine. It is small, and is often used in a group to back-up a larger engine system, such as the Proton 2. (X1)

Proton 2

this is the designation of a massive Rendili StarDrive sublight engine. (X1)

Proton Blaster

this out-dated weapon fired bolts of cohesive protonic material that explodes on contact. Seinar produced them at one time. (POT)

Proton Carbine

this heavy rifle was developed to fire cohesive bolts of protons. (SWGAL)

Proton Charge

see Proton Grenade (MC17)

Proton Fuel

a highly-volatile type of fuel. (DOD)

Proton Grenade

a small concussion bomb which is thrown at a target and scatters energy when detonated. (SWSB, CSW)

Proton Overload

this band sometimes played at Bantha Traxx, on the planet Lianna. (WSV)

Proton Rifle

this heavy rifle was the larger cousin of the proton carbine, and was developed to fire cohesive bolts of protons. (SWGAL)

Proton Tank

these large siege machines resembled large assault craft, and were armed with proton grenade launchers. They were also troop transports, and could safely deposit soldiers into a war zone. They were used during the last decades of the Old Republic, and were armed with ion cannons. (MOC)

Proton Torpedo

these weapons use a proton-scattering pod. The pod consisted of a fuel cell and a nucleonic igniter. When the torpedo strikes its target, the igniter smashes the atoms in the fuel cell, creating an enormous energy surge which destroys the target. While being very powerful, the proton torpedo can only travel at slow, sublight speeds. (SW, SWSB)

Proton-shock

this term was often used by smugglers to indicate an individual who was staring dazedly into space, describing the individual as "proton-shocked." (3D3)

Protosteel

a material used to build the hulls of large starships. (HSE)

Protorean

this alien race resembles a crude clay statue of a humanoid lifeform. They are round beings, with no visible fingers or toes, and their bodies seem to flow and change. Protoreans can alter their body color and texture to match their surroundings, which allows them to blend into almost any environment. These creatures then lie in wait for their prey to wander too close. Protoreans capture their prey by striking quickly, draping themselves around the victim's head to prevent any outcry and suffocating them at the same time. (GCQ)

Prouk

this Korunnai was a member of Kar Vastor's Akk Guards, during the early stages of the Clone Wars. He was a known gambler, but he always made sure to pay his debts. When Jedi Master Mace Windu tried to attack and capture the city of Pelek Baw, on the planet Haruun Kal, Prouk was one of many who sided with Vastor in keeping Depa Billaba free to make her own choices in terms of her loyalty. Prouk was one of several Akk Guards sent to apprehend the Jedi when he tried to infiltrate the droid control center in Pelek Baw. After dispatching several clone troopers of the Army of the Republic, Prouk leaped to attack Nick Rostu. Rostu managed to grab a fallen trooper's DC-15 blaster and shoot Prouk in the chest. Prouk died quickly of his injuries. (SHPT)

Providence-class Destroyer

this 1,088-meter-long vessel was developed by the Free Dac Volunteers Engineering Corps during the last decades of the Old Republic, and found prominent use among the naval fleets of the Confederacy of Independent Systems during the height of the Clone Wars. These ships were propelled through space by four Crevel-4 radial ion drive units, and had a Class 1.5 hyperdrive system that could move the ship across some 40,000 light-years. Like many other Separatist vessels, the Providence-class destroyer was designed to be operated by a droid crew of some 600 droid officers. In its holds, the Providence-class destroyer could carry up to 1.5 million deactivated battle droids, as well as 120 Tri-fighters, 120 vulture droids, 160 MTT transports, and nearly 300 other armored vehicles. In order to defend itself in combat, the Providence-class destroyer was armed with fourteen turret-mounted quad turbolasers, thirty-four dual laser cannons, a pair of ion cannons, twelve point-defense ion cannons, and 102 proton torpedo tubes. (X3)

Provider of the Sun, The Provisional Committee

this was the term used to describe the group of politicians and leaders who were selected by the Old Republic to travel to planets which needed assistance in restoring order to their governments. Most often, Provisional Committees were sent in after civil wars or other disputes, to help the various factions work together to rebuild their government. (JQ6)

Provisional Council

after the leaders of the New Republic re-established their governmental seat on Coruscant, some four years after the Battle of Endor, the Provisional Council was established to restore the principles and laws of the Old Republic. It also provided leadership and direction for the New Republic. It was considered a more formal political arena than the Inner Council, which was generally thought of as guiding the Provisional Council. As its name implied, the Provisional Council was set up to assist in repairing the damage caused by Emperor Palpatine's New Order, but was by no means permanent. It was dissolved a short time before the Yevethan Purge, and replaced with a full government designed by the various Senatorial leaders. (HTTE, SOL)

Provocateur

this Imperial frigate was commanded by Captain Joshi, and was part of Zsinj's fleet shortly after the Battle of Endor. It was assigned to provide support for the Night Caller during a raid on Talasea, but was destroyed in the battle. (WS)

Provoker Spinneray

this Yuuzhan Vong creature was bio-engineered for use in stimulating the nervous system of another alien creature. These creatures were developed specially for the species on which they would be used, and could be manipulated to cause pain to selective nerve arrays. With the use of a provoker spinneray, a Yuuzhan Vong Shaper could map out a being's nervous system and what each set of nerves was designed to do. The use of a provoker spinneray was controlled by the Protocol of Tsong, and required that the Shaper use an ol-villip to monitor its actions. (EVC)

Provotin Cystate

this medical drug was developed during the last decades of the Old Republic, and found widespread use during the Clone Wars. (MBS)

Prowler

an Alliance escort carrier group destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Prowler

an Alliance Corvette group destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Prowler 1000

this repulsor-equipped droid was developed by Arakyd Industries for use by the Confederacy of Independent Systems in the exploration and reconnaissance of unknown locations, during the height of the Clone Wars. Known as seeker droids, each of these droids had three photoreceptors, each of which could record information in various wavelengths. Four thin arms were used for a variety of tasks. A large-aperture photoreceptor dominated the "face" of the Prowler, and was surrounded by a sensor and detection array. The Prowler 1000 eventually became the design basis for the Mark VII Inquisitor and the Viper probe droid. (OWS, SWI81, VD3)

Prowler-class Reconnaissance Vessel

one of the new class of starships developed by Republic Engineering Corporation, the Prowler was designed to act as a long-term spy craft. The basic design is that of the REC Ferret, but with less equipment and stealth systems, and its mission profile dictated it be in place for long periods of time, gathering information about an enemy's location and assets. The Prowler does its work from a distance, rather than getting in close, but still retained the baffled drive and chemical-thrust systems of the Ferret. Each prowler-class ship required a complement of 6 crewmen to fly, unlike the droid-commanded Ferret, and was armed with more missiles and a decoy package. (CTD)

Proxima Dibal

a star with a single planet, which was simply known as Proxima Dibal I. (HSE)

Proxima Dibal I

this planet, the only world orbiting the star Proxima Dibal, was home to the song serpents and the dinko. (HSE, EGA)

Proy'skyn

this Bothan was an investigator with the Drev'starn Department of Criminal Discouragement. He accompanied Morv'vyal to the Exocticalia Pet Emporium, on a tip that the store had been burglarized. When a fire broke out in the shop, the Bothans realized that it was related to the wiring. This led them to discover the hidden cache of weapons kept by Navett and Klif, which forced the humans to kill the Bothan investigators in order to carry out their plans. (VOF)

PRP-100

this model of personal-use rocket pack was produced by Presentian, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GFT)

PRP-500

this was the model number of Prax Arm's Protector dart pistol. (FOP)

PRP-502

this was the second-generation of the Protector dart pistol, developed by Prax Arms' during the height of the New Order. It was roughly the size of a hold-out blaster, and just as easily concealed. It could also be broken down into four parts, for easier storage. (EGW, AEG)

Prrit Qabaq

this ancient Nazzar Emperor-King was one of Qrrl Toq's ancestors. It was Qabaq who was known to have destroyed the Nazzar monarchy many millennia before the Great Sith War. Histories maintained in the Hall of Edification enlightened Qrrl Toq to the fact that Qabaq had discovered a collection of teachings and ancient rites which drew upon dark, evil powers that promised the wielder with unimaginable power. Qabaq was easily tempted to attain more power, and began practicing the dark rites. His own daughter, Ikree, spoke out against the corruption into which Qabaq had fallen, and a planetwide civil war erupted. In order to stop the war, she forced Qabaq to accept the Ulizra and the Great Structure, something he vehemently opposed. The lesser government officials understood Ikree's plan, and accepted it. One of the king's henchmen then murdered Ikree, in order to regain his power. However, the charges against Qabaq were upheld, and future leaders of the Nazzar were quick to take the Ulizra at its face value. (TOJC)

Pru

this was a common name given to male Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Prudence

this was one of many sleek-hulled destroyers produced at the Contruum shipyards, during the early years of the New Republic. (UF)

Prunchti Noodles

this form of long noodle was known for the way that it twisted into a mass of tangles when cooked. It was nearly impossible to separate individual strands without cutting them with a knife. (SQ)

Prune Face

this was an Imperial slang term used to describe a member of the Dresselian race. (CHRN)

Prush

this was a common name among Quarren females. It was generally assumed to mean "brisk", but literally meant "insensitive". (GCG)

Pruss

this Sedrian youth was one of the many who believed the Golden Sun had been killed after the Alliance destroyed the Imperial garrison on Sedri. After Limna Yith landed on the planet, Pruss stole a datacard she hid in a cave. The card contained the complete Barani List and a great deal of documentation on the Yen-2 mining outpost and its connections to the crimelord Sprax. (SSR)

Prybar 2800

this power prybar was manufactured by SoroSuub. (PSG)

Prydde

this independent spacer made a small, legal fortune carrying musical instruments to the University of Rudrig, during the early years of the New Republic. (GUN)

Prye Folas

this spaceport city, found on the planet Teyr, was one stop east of Turos Noth on the Rift Skyrail. It was located quite a distance from the Teyr Rift. (SOL)

Pryl, Tanda

this strong-willed woman served the Imperial Navy as the Captain of the Star Destroyer Thunderflare, patrolling Elrood Sector in search of pirates and rebels. She was constantly at odds with Captain Akal Zed, whom she considered a bullish brute. She was the daughter of wealthy parents, and many Imperial officers of the time believed that she gained her position because of money. In reality, she did not lack in ability, and earned her command through hard work and determination. She had investigated the events surrounding the Battle of Yavin and the emergence of Luke Skywalker, and theorized that there were a wealth of Force-sensitives hiding out in the Outer Rim Territories. Although unfounded, her theory led to seek out positions in the Outer Rim in order to capture those beings with Force sensitivity in order to twist them into Imperial servants. Her subordinates considered her a devious and cunning leader. (OE, PG3)

Pryn

this name was common among the Feeorin race. (UANT)

Pryodase

this synthetic drug is used as a mood enhancer, and was extremely effective for lowering the guard of an individual. For a time, it was used extensively at Coruscant dinner parties among the nobility, as a way to counteract the increase in duels. It was non-addictive. (POT)

Pryodene

this is a synthetic, mood-enhancing drug. (POT)

Prytis

this was the primary continent of the planet Bakura, and the capital of Salis D'aar was located on its southwestern coast. (TBSB)

PS-29-2

this was the identification number of the pilot of the Imperial TIE Fighter designated Shadow Two, during the Battle of Yavin. This man was known to his wingmates by the nickname "Mynock." (JKG)

PS-29-3

this was the identification number of the pilot of the Imperial TIE Fighter designated Shadow Three, during the Battle of Yavin. This man was known to have had one of the highest scores ever recorded on the Imperial TIE Fighter simulators. (JKG)

P-s4

Seinar Fleet System's Twin Ion Engine system, used on the TIE Fighter and the TIE Bomber. It is rated at 150 KTU for the TIE Fighter, and 125 KTU for the TIE Bomber. (SCRE, XW)

P-s5.6

Seinar Fleet System's Twin Ion Engine system, used on the TIE Interceptor. It is rated at 175 KTU. (SCRE, XW)

PS-9

this was a model of burst-tracker used by the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ11)

Psadan

a stocky, humanoid race native to the planet Wayland, the Psadans' skin was covered with lumpy plates that make them look like walking rocks. They despised the Empire for assuming control of their world, which was about the only thing they agreed with the Myneyrshi on. The Psadans, like the Myneyrshi, were a primitive people who looked upon all technology as a form of abomination. The Psadans especially considered high technology to be a thing of shame, since it did not derive from natural forms of life. Years after the Battle of Endor, the planet Wayland was invaded by the Yuuzhan Vong. The Psadan people split into two factions: those who willingly allied with the Yuuzhan Vong and their bio-organic technology, and the Free People who chose to fight against their virtual enslavement. (HTTE, TLC, GMR10)

Psadan

this was the name of guttural, throaty language of the Psadan race. Made up from grunts, groans, and deep vocalizations, Psadan lacked a written form, and much of the race's lore was passed down through oral histories. (UANT)

PSAS-5128

this public subadult school was located in the Jade District of Coruscant, during the last years of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

P-Series Destroyer Droid

this was the second generation of the Trade Federation's Destroyer Droid, which were known as Droidekas. (TCG1)

Pseudo-chudde

this food was detested by many young children. (CSA)

Pseudogranite

a re-constituted form of stone used in buildings. (WG)

Pseudosonic Beamer

this ancient weapon employs high-intensity sound waves projected at a target to cause harmonic vibrations that literally shake the target apart. (SH)

PSG-8487

developed and manufactured by zZip Product Concepts, this view masker generated a one-meter-diameter distortion field around the user, making it difficult to determine what is happening inside the field. (GFT)

Psibara

an edible vegetable. (TME)

Psicom

this Old Republic corporation developed and manufactured a variety of droid interface modules, allowing a wide range of methods for beings to communicate with their droids. (RHD)

PSP-278

this was a model of portable survival pod produced by Praxen Emergency Medical Supplies, Limited. It was a two-meter-long cylinder, and was developed to sustain the life of an injured being until proper medical attention could be obtained. (FOP, GFT)

P-sx7.4

Seinar Fleet System's Twin Ion Engine system, used on the TIE Advanced. It is rated at 320 KTU. (XW)

PS-xqt9s

this VargeCorp scrambling device allowed a user to encrypt any communication at its source. The only way to decrypt the transmission was to have another PS-xqt9s scrambler at the other end of the communication, tuned to the same encryption sequence. The PS-xqt9s could choose from over five million encryption codes. (GFT)

Psychometry

this ability to use the Force seemed to be unique to the Kiffar race, and allowed an individual to discern past events by coming in contact with inanimate objects. A Jedi using psychometry would be able to view events from the viewpoint of the object's holder, as well as to feel the holder's emotions. While the Jedi

Council did not prohibit the use of psychometry, it expressed forbade the use of psychometry on a dead body. (PJSB)

Psycho-probe

this was the term used to describe a method of Imperial interrogation, in which a subject was drugged and held captive under the ministrations of an IT-series droid. Using mind-altering drugs, the subject was virtually powerless to keep their secrets hidden. (MCA1)

P-sz9.7

Sienar Fleet Systems Twin Ion Engine used on the TIE Defender. (EGV)

PT-16

a new spaceship design, it was discussed aboard the first Death Star by two stormtroopers - believed to have been Tag Greenley and Bink Otuana - standing guard near the tractor beam Obi-Wan Kenobi disables. (SW, TBAD)

PT-97

this was a model of flitter used by public transportation systems. It measured 7.5 meters in length, and had a flight ceiling of up to a kilometer. The PT-97 could transport up to two passengers, and required a pilot to operate. (SESB)

Pta

this is a fruit favored by the Hutt race. (RF)

Ptak-Sok

this Arachnoid served aboard the Black Widow as Bruce Mercy's chief mechanic. Ptak-Sok (pronounced Patahk-Sook) was a strong-willed, ruthless individual. (TSK)

P'tan

a Kalkal academic at Beshka University, and a contemporary of Melvosh Bloor, P'tan was a gruff old geezer who believed that every professor had to work his way up from the dregs in order to achieve tenure. When Ra Yasht and Skarten, two other young Kalkal academics like Bloor, were given instant tenure for an investigative report on Porcellus, P'tan flew into a rage. To make matters worse, Bloor planned to interview Jabba the Hutt himself. P'tan interrupted Bloor's petition for University funding, saying that Bloor was too young, and he would make mistakes in his data. P'tan used his seniority to go in Bloor's place. In his infinite wisdom, P'tan hired Salacious Crumb to be his guide to Jabba. However, P'tan never returned from his trip to Tatooine, since Jabba quickly tired of him and threw the Kalkal into the Pit of Carkoon, to be digested by the Sarlacc. (TJP)

PTB-625

this planetary bomber was developed for the Old Republic by Incom and Subpro during the height of the Clone Wars. It was similar in design to the ARC-170 starfighter, but was designed to participate in planetary subjugation missions by delivering its payload of heavy bombs. (X3)

P'Tel

this Gorothe j'ber was known for its skills in the production of food. (GSE)

Ptera System

the planetary system which contains the planet Flax. (GG4)

Pterosaur

another name for the soarers of Ammuud. (HSR)

Pthillip

a native of Forard, on the planet Cularin, Pthillip and his wife Arin discovered Lora Nadad and brought her to the attention of the Almas Academy during the last decades of the Old Republic. (WOTC)

P'ton, Spitar

this Imperial Admiral was in command of the exploration and contact expedition that located the planet Kubindi. He was a highly cultured gourmet, and found the culinary masterpieces of Kubaz chefs to be exquisite. He hired a staff of Kubaz to travel with him, and he introduced much of the galaxy to Kubaz delicacies. (SWJ10)

Ptorc, Illor

the Imperial governor assigned to manage the Demophon System, he ruled with an iron fist until the system was consumed in the exploding supernova that destroyed the star Demophon. (SN)

PTP Link

this ancient form of communication was a multi-channel device which established a dedicated point-to-point connection to another PTP link. Their range was quite short, although it could be extended with the use of relays and boosters. However, these add-ons were often plagued by problems. (TOJC)

PTR-3 Vedette

developed and manufactured by Core Galaxy Systems, this snub fighter measured just 10.5 meters in length. It could accommodate a single pilot and a few personal belongings, and was armed with a front-mounted laser cannon. (GMR10)

Pubam

this was the name used to describe a tribe of Dulok warriors and spiritmasters that began attacking outposts on the Forest Moon of Endor during the Galactic Civil War. (QQRG)

Public Data Display

this was a kiosk developed during the early years of the New Republic, to provide information on a being's location in a large city. Used primarily on Coruscant, PDDs could tell a being exactly where they were in the huge megalopolis of the planet-wide city. Many PDDs also provided up-to-date news and information services, giving beings quick alerts and data on the go. (T)

Public Security Service

created from the remnants of the Corellian Security Force by the Diktat, the PSS is one of the public security forces operating on Corellia just before Thrackan Sal-Solo secedes the Sector from the New Republic. (AC, IJ)

Publictechnic

this small corporation, based on the planet Sennatt, produced a variety of machinery and automata for public works departments. (SWJ14, FTD)

Puchek

this Rodian spacer was one of the pirates dispatched to capture Limna Yith on Sriluur, on orders from Nim Abek himself. His team brought her back to Abek's Station for containment. When a team is sent to the station by Mal Biron to rescue Yith, Puchek led them on a wild goose chase at Nim Abek's orders. (SSR)

Puck

military slang for a repulsortank. (SWJ9)

Puddle, The

this was the name given to the ramshackle town which sprang up around an oasis on a backwater, Outer Rim desert world. Named for the oasis itself, The Puddle was owned and operated by the Gotal Tilossa during the height of the New Order. Tilossa turned The Puddle into a small marketplace for smugglers, where they could unload stolen cargoes in exchange for other, illegally-obtained goods. (HAS) an Imperial subofficer working under Grammel's command on Circarpous V. (SME)

Puddra

Pudhoy

this lichen-like plant has a reddish color. (POT)

Pudlow

this species of fish was native to Naboo. (GCG)

Pudlow

this was one of the most common Gungan surnames, taking from the father's side of the family. These surnames were not dropped, even after marriage. The name referred to a species of fish that was native to Naboo. (GCG)

Pudo

this Talid was one of the many which gathered along the course of the Ungasan Cross Country podrace, taking potshots at the passing racers with a primitive slugthrower. (GMR2)

Puerco

a grain grown on Cilpar. (XWRS)

puesso

this computer operator was one of the multitudes that spoke out about the Clone Wars on the Cularin HoloNet, during the last years of the Old Republic. It was puesso who took the transmission that was intercepted by mstrslcr and ran it through a sophisticated text analyzer, to see if it was truly from the Jedi Temple on Coruscant. His analysis indicated that the Jedi Order was not the source. In fact, he believed that it had come from the Metatheran Cartel. However, despite the analysis, many of the words used in the transmission were unusual for the Cartel to use. (LFCW)

Puff Cake

a small dessert pastry. (RF)

Puff-cot

a self-inflating, portable bed. (WS)

Puffdove

this Human Lady was one of the political cronies installed by Vosdia Nooma, in the Rodian drama The Trickery of Vosdia Nooma. Lady Puffdove was meant to represent one side of the debate on the Military Creation Act, and was couterpointed by Lord Scufflebug. Although critics generally hailed The Trickery of Vosdia Nooma as entertaining, they political allegory and heavy-handed mimicry of the Galactic Senate - represented by Scufflebug and Puffdove - was panned and often described as being in poor taste. (HNN5)

Puffer

a small creature favored as a snack by the Hutts. (RF)

Puffer Bird

a tall, stiff-looking bird with spike-like feathers on its head. (DS)

Puffer Turtle

this violet creature is native to the swamps of Clak'Dor VII. It has the ability to expand bladders inside its shell to augment its bouyancy or to scare off attackers. When the air inside the bladders is released, the puffer turtle makes a low, rumbling, woodwind sound. (TCC)

Puffers

Han Solo used this derogatory term to describe President Gavisom. Han claimed that all Gavisom ever did was talk, puffing up issues with words rather than dealing with them head-on. (SOP)

Puffo-Shield

this is the brand-name of one kind of starship crash foam. (POT)

Puff-pie

this decadent dessert was considered one of the most fattening treats in the galaxy, during the last years of the Old Republic. The puff-pie was filled with a deliciously-flavored cream. (MJH)

Pugali

this was an obscure language that was considered vulgar to most "civilized" races. (MBS)

Puggles Trodd

a small, rodent-like Lasat bounty hunter, he had an obsession with causing and viewing explosions. He worked often with Zardra and Jodo Kast, although his pessimistic outlook on life caused him to be very suspicious of their activities. He joined them in the hunt for Adar Tallon, but was secretly afraid of them. He joined to collect his share of the money. (TM, SWJ11)

Pugil

this was a gladiator-like sport played on the planet Lannik, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

Pugoriss

this was a species of carnivorous mammal that was native to the moon of Rori. Most pugoriss were short-statured creatures, although a larger species was bio-engineered to serve as a guard beast. (GQRG)

Pugs

this was a race of bandits who lived on the Forest Moon of Endor. (ECAR)

Pugwis

this vicious Dug was the grandson of Sebulba. Although he was every bit as ruthless as Sebulba, Pugwis lacked his grandsire's skills in piloting a podracer. Nonetheless, Pugwis set out to make a name for himself on the modern pod racing circuit. He found himself being black-listed from virtually every major racing circuit, having attacked many other podracers in the midst of races. Unable to participate in sanctioned events, Pugwis traveled to Tatooine and found acceptance in Jabba the Hutt's demolition derbies. He flew in the contests with his custom-built podracer. (SWD)

Pui-Ui

an alien race which continually sheds its skin. They are native to the planet Kyrill's World, and appear like two spheres joined by a short neck. They move about on millions of cilia covering their undersides. They have a shrill-sounding language. (HSL, CSA)

Pujin

this inquisitive old man was a passenger on the Kuari Princess when it was hijacked by the Riders of the Maelstrom. (RM)

Puk

a foodstuff grown in many Tatooine hydroponics gardens. (TJP)

Pul

this man, a native of Alderaan, was one of Conn Doruggan's early schoolmates, and a member of his wegsphere team. (TBSB)

Pule

this Neimoidian worked as a customs officer on the planet Haruun Kal, during the early stages of the Clone Wars. (SHPT)

Pulga Horse

a creature native to the Forest Moon of Endor. (EGC)

Pulley Bow

this Sakiyan bow used a set of pulleys to augment a user's natural strength. In the hands of a Sakiyan, the pulley bow was a powerful weapon. Most other races could barely pull a quarrel into the ready position. (MBS)

Pull-war

this game was one of many in which beings worked together in teams to defeat their opponent. Derived from a childrens' game, pull-war involved each team holding onto the end of a sturdy cable and pulling as hard as they could. The objective was to pull farther than your opponent, which was either indicated by a flag passing a ceratin point, or when the other team was pulled into a shallow pit of mud. (SWI69)

Puln

this near-human served the Black Sun vigo Green as a low-level thug, but in reality he was one of Sprax's best spies. Noticeable by the thick, bony plates on his lower jaw, Puln was valued by Sprax for his ability to spy on Green's activities. In a third role, Puln provided information onSprax's activities to Prince Xizor himself. (SSR)

Puloorn

this planet was discovered to have an affinity with the Dark Side of the Force. (SWRPG)

Pulra

an alien race which is native to the volcanic world of Kuras III, the Pulras were amorphous beings which a highly flexible body structure. They have innate abilities of camouflage, able to change their skin coloration to exactly match their surroundings. This allowed a Pulra to hide from its prey, springing a trap at the last moment to capture it. Pulras have no sensory organs, and use a natural form of sonar to detect information about their surroundings. They were a social race, able to work together and cooperate in order to get things. Done. They reproduced by fission, but don't consciously decide to produce offspring. Instead, natural biochemical and environmental changes simply indicate when it is time to reproduce. They have an advanced brain, and can easily grasp the concepts of space travel and interstellar mechanics. (PG3, AE)

Pulsar

this Lancer-class frigate was part of the fleet Moff Sarne took with him when he fled Kal'Shebbol. It was supported by a trioof Skipray GAT-12g blastboats. (KO)

Pulsar

an Imperial-class Star Destroyer, the Pulsar was under the command of Captain Reder until he surrendered her after the Battle of Endor. (WBC, SWJ8)

Pulsar

this Corellian Engineering Corporation gunship was part of the New Republic naval fleet, during the latter stages of the war against the Yuuzhan Vong. Captained by Kartha, the Pulsar was badly damaged near Obroa-held when the Republic destroyed the Yuuzhan Vong fleet commanded by Komm Karsh, which had been guarding Obroa-skai. The Pulsar was unrecoverable, and was later scuttled for weapons and spare parts. (DW)

Pulsar Skate

a Baudo-class star yacht owned by Mirax Terrik, named for a deep-sea creature on Corellia which it resembled. The starship once belonged to her father, and was modified by Wedge Antilles who, at the age of fifteen, replaced its fusion chamber on the starboard engine. When Wedge took the new Rogue Squadron to the Chorax System, it found the Pulsar Skate being detained by the Imperial Interdictor-class ship Black Asp. The Rogues managed to scare off the Black Asp, and the Pulsar Skate assisted in the rescue of Corran Horn's X-Wing. Mirax's father used the shhip to smuggle spice, which attracted the attention on Hal Horn, who hunted down the elder Terrik and captured him. Horn sent Terrik to the correctional facility on Kessel. Mirax held no small amount of contempt for Corran Horn, despite Wedge's allegiance to Rogue Squadron, but she held her tongue. Mirax agreed to assist the New Republic during the Krytos crisis, ostensibly acting as the lead ship in the convoy that was to bring bacta from Thyferra to Coruscant, via the Alderaan System. The convoy was attacked by the Warlord Zsinj, after he was tipped off as to the convoy's flight plan, before Rogue Squadron could arrive to escort it to Coruscant. It was believed that Mirax, her pilot Liat Tsayv, and the Pulsar Skate were destroyed in the ambush, but they had left the convoy and gone to Borleias with a sample of the bacta. (XWN)

Pulsar Skate

a deep-sea creature native to Corellia. (KT)

Pulsar Station

this was the name used by the New Republic to describe the Death Star-like construction discovered in a secret lab on the planet Liinade III. The Republic believed that Prince-Admiral Krennel was preparing to build the station, based on all the evidence it found in Valleyport. However, the lab had actually been set up in secret by Ysanne Isard, who hoped to undermine the efforts of Krennel and Isard's clone to disrupt the New Republic. Unlike the first two Death Stars, Pulsar Station was built around an array of smaller super-lasers, each of which could take out a Super-class Star Destroyer with a single blast. This allowed it to be more accurate than the second Death Star, while better utilizing the destructive capabilities of the super-lasers. In reality, there were no actual plans to build Pulsar Station. However, the Republic believed that Krennel was planning to build it into the shell of a large planetoid. When Mon Mothman announced that the Republic had discovered the lab and tried to undermine Krennel's efforts, he was sincerely able to rebuff her statements because he didn't know anything about it. (IR)

Pulsar Supertanker

this conglomerate was, at one time, a member of the Trade Federation. However, after Nute Gunray testified that Pulsar had acted with "malicious disregard for profit," and had given "charitable donations lacking discernible reward," Pulsar was voted off the Federation's Directorate. It was generally believed that Gunray's orations during the proceedings were what attracted the interest of Darth Sidious in choosing the Trade Federation for his own machinations. (COD)

Pulse Bomb

this form of explosive weapon was developed by the Gungans, and saw widespread use during the Clone Wars. (MBS)

Pulse Kneader

this was a form of water-based massage system, used in the bathrooms of well-to-do beings. (TG)

Pulse Laser

a starship weapon. (SWJ9)

Pulse Rocket

a Nuffin weapon. (JTH)

Pulse Siphon

this device used a cam to draw fluids into a tube to transport to another container. The cam can be powered magnetically or with a small battery. (GG2)

Pulse, Lowal

this immense man worked as one of the paid gladiators, representing the Nonsu corporation in the fights staged in the city of Ektra, on Metellos. Pulse was considered a ringer by most beings, since he was bankrolled by Nonsu itself. To distinguish himself, Pulse cut a notch in an earlobe for each of his victories. He was also something of a spy, working in the Moridebo District and providing information on the status of CarsinShare. (CCW)

Pulse-Blast Rifle

produced by Core World Arms during the golden age of the Old Republic, the pulse-wave rifle was considered by many weapons experts to be the grandfather of the modern blaster. It was an incredibly heavy weapon, but it could produce incredible amounts of damage. (AEG)

Pulse-gravity Interdiction Mine

developed by the Hapan peoples during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, and provided to the Galactic Alliance shortly after the Battle of Ebaq, these mines resembled simple asteroids floating in the void of space. However, they generated an artificial gravity shadow into hyperspace. The gravity shadows of a cluster of these mines caused starship hyperdrives and navigational computers to suddenly revert back to realspace, where they were trapped behind the interdiction fields. Any starship which tried to escape the field often ran into the mines, which exploded with deadly force and severely damaged most ships. (UF)

Pulsejet

this thruster technology was employed by the Yevetha to move their Aramadia-class thrustships during taxiing in starports. (TT)

Pulsemass Generator

developed by the Hapans from Imperial gravity-well projector technology, these devices can be deployed in hyperspace to create false images of realspace masses, effectively keeping other ships in realspace near the generators, or bringing them out of hyperspace near them. These small devices are launched from tubes on a starship, such as the Hapan Battle Dragon, and the results are similar to those of the huge gravity wave generators on Interdictor-class ships. (CPL, COTF, CTD)

Pulse-sticker

developed during the early stages of the Clone Wars, this specialized medical patch was used to denote a patient's condition. The pulse-sticker could monitor the heartrate of the patient it was attached to, and could be set to indicate a patient's disposition. These devices found widespread use in the triage centers of battlefield hospitals and RMSUs, where clone troopers and other organic combatants were assessed for damage. The pulse-sticker was set to provide easy indication of a trooper's condition, so that individuals with the most need could be routed into the operating room first. Usually, patients were rated on a scale of 1 through 6. A 6 meant that the patient might survive, but only with intensive individual treatment. A 5 meant that a patient was more likely to survive, with less-intensive treatment. An X meant that the patient had mortal injuries or was highly unlikely to survive, no matter what the treatment. (MBS)

Pulse-wave Blaster

an ancient weapon, used before energy weapons were commonplace, pulse-wave blaster created a spatial distortion when fired. This caused severe damage to solid matter, as the wave altered atomic make-up. The wave dissipated as it moved away from the weapon. (E)

Pulse-wave Induction Spine

this ancient weapon resembled a modern bow, but produced a wave of energy when pulled and released. The ancient Krath used these weapons on their war droids, during the attack on the Jedi convocation on Deneba. (EGD)

Pulse-wave Rifle

an ancient weapon, used before energy weapons were commonplace, pulse-wave rifle created a spatial distortion when fired. This caused severe damage to solid matter, as the wave altered atomic make-up. The wave dissipated as it moved away from the weapon. (TOJC)

Pulta

this hydroponically-grown legume was used in many Aargauun dishes. (PH)

Pulverizer

this AP-300 prospector ship was owned by Lant Mining Corporation. (FBS)

Pumav

this Selonian was a noted athlete who competed in the "Mobquet Presents: Fastest Land Beings" racing event just prior to the onset of the Clone Wars. Pumav won the competition for quadrupeds, and finished seventh in the biped class that year. (HNN5)

Pummelstave

this blunt weapon was used by the Red Knights of Life. Made of tubal iron, the pummelstave is a crude but effective weapon. (VP)

Punch Gun

an older weapon that is used to blast holes in metal surfaces. (TJP)

Punch-and-Pop Bomb

this was the nickname of a type of explosive, like the Adumari Broadcap bomb, which penetrates the ground for several meters before exploding. (SOA)

Punch-dagger

a small, handheld knife with a specialized blade. The blade is forcefully extended when it is plunged into an opponent, causing a great deal more internal damage after the initial thrust. (HSL)

Punda

this is the Huttese word for "neck." (IS1)

Punisher

this was one of the multitude of Imperial-class Star Destroyers which made up the Imperial Navy fleet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. For many years, the Punisher was under the command of Captain Hugo Treece, before he was assigned to the Imperial garrison on Cloud City. (TIE, PH)

Punishing One

this ship was owned by the bounty hunter Dengar. A modified Corellian Engineering JumpMaster-5000 transport, the Punishing One was propelled by an outdated Class 3 hyperdrive, but its sublight engines were top-of-the-line. Dengar preferred the crescent-shaped ship to many newer designs, simply because it was easy to maintain. It was originally armed with a single quad-blaster and a mini ion cannon, and Dengar add a proton torpedo launcher later on. It had minimal crew space, with just enough for Dengar and a captive. (CCG4, GMR7)

Punt

this Gupin lived on the Forest Moon of Endor, during the years prior to the construction of the second Death Star. The cousin of Rin-Rin and Oobel, Punt was considered a selfish and greedy individual. He took control of the Gupin's fortress, hoping to earn power and wealth. However, the Grasstrekks attacked the fortress, and Punt took the cowardly way out: he gave the Grasstrekks the key to the Guniepal Chest to prevent his own death. (ECAR)

Punworcca 116-class Sloop

this was a 15.2-meter-long starship produced by the Huppla Pasa Tisc Shipwrights Collective on the planet Geonosis, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Similar in shape to the Nantex-class fighter, the Punworcca 116-class sloop had twin hulls sitting above and below the main fuselage. However, the Punworcca 116 provided standing room for ten beings in its hold, along with cockpit space for a droid pilot. The cockpit was a clear sphere located at the front of the fuselage, but could be replaced with a weapon emplacement if cockpit functions were rerouted to the hold. While not fully armed, the sloop was equipped with 84 narros tractor/repulsor beams mounted along the twin prows, which could be used to deflect a projectile attack. Like the Nantex-class fighter, the Punworcca 116-class sloop was designed for atmospheric and in-system use. It could attain speeds near 1,600 kilometers per hour in atmosphere. (X2, NEGV)

Punyoo

this was the Huttese word for "weapon." (GMR5)

Pupton

a serving of vegetables. (TME)

Pure Sabacc

this term is used in the game of sabacc, and refers to a hand which has a value of exactly 23, either positive or negative. Some gambling establishments maintained a rule that a positive 23 won out over a negative 23, in order to make the game safer for the house. (CCC, RD, HT)

Pure Sabacc

this ramshackel Y164 merchant ship was stationed at Durren when Seti Ashgad and Dzym unleashed the Death Seed plague on the Meridian Sector. Owned and operated by Captain Bortrek, it was the Pure Sabacc which intercepted C-3PO and R2-D2 after the droids escaped from the Borealis. (POT)

Pure Sabacc

this Marauder-class corvette was modified for use as a transport vessel by its Captain, Vortia Kwis, during the early years of the New Republic. When the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy began, Kwis and his crew agreed to help ferry refugees from Dubrillion to Dantooine, shortly after Dubrillion was attacked. Upon arriving at Dantooine, the Pure Sabacc's crew was forced to fight its way to freedom after arriving in the middle of a Yuuzhan Vong sneak attack. This forced Captain Kwis to reconsider his position of support for the New Republic, which seemed to be losing the war despite all efforts. Kwis and his crew agreed to join the Peace Brigade, supplying the Pure Sabacc as a floating recruiting center. (NJOSB)

Pure, The

this monicker is used by the Yevethan rulers to describe their race. They believed themselves the purest form of life in the galaxy. (SOL)

Puree un cratta-u hemmin?

this Snivvian phrase, used in the world of art and antiquities, translated into Basic as "Did you mean to create a travesty?" (HNN5)

Purella

this arachnoid predator was found on the moon Yavin 8. It was distinguished by its scarlet-colored bristles and glowing orange eyes. Like most arachnids, the purella had eight legs and four barbed pincers near its mouth. Their pincers exuded a neurotoxic that immobilized the muscles and nerves of its prey, allowing the purella to drag it back to its nest. The purella was carnivorous, and preferred the meat of young Melodies to that of reels or raiths. They spun thick, black webs in their cavernous homes near the Melodie ceremonial pools. (LW, P)

Purenta

this was the Snivvian word for "twin." (HNN5)

Purgato, Klaggus

this man was one of the Holowan Mechanicals scientists who worked on the IG-88 project. Several rumors persisted that Purgato survived the assault on the Holowan lab, when the IG-88s were first activated, but none of these rumors was ever substantiated. (FTD)

Purge Virus

this specialized computer virus was developed by alien cultures who didn't want their technology shared with others. They planted the virus inside the programming of their equipment, and if another race's technology ever tried to interface with it, the equipment would dump the virus into the intruder's system. The virus then systematically ate away at the intruder's datacore. The damage could be contained by paying the virus' authors a fee for a translation database, which restored the intruder's datacore to its previous state. (SSR)

Purging Days

this was a Corellian Ensterite ritual that was celebrated on a regular basis, when individuals returned to their roots and honored their ancient families. (MJH)

Purity

this converted battle cruiser was part of the Black Sword Command fleet that was captured by the Yevetha following the Battle of Endor. It was repaired and later used as Vol Noorr's command ship, from which he was able to capture the survey ship Astrolabe. (BTS)

Purnix

this was a common vegetable grown by the Sullustan race on their homeworld of Sullust. (MBS)

Puroth

this was one of the many Jedi Masters who were killed by General Grievous during the Clone Wars. Puroth died on Tovarski, along with Jedi Master Nystammall. Both of their lightsabers were confiscated by Grievous, who later used them in combat against Obi-Wan Kenobi. (VD3, E3N)

Purple Stingwort

this venomous plant was native to the shores of the planet Drongar. It used its color to attract its prey, which it rendered immobile by exuding a potent toxin. When this poison entered the system of most mammalian species, it caused excruciating pain and almost instant death in most lower species. Any humanoid being coming in contact with the stingwort venom was plunged into anaphylactic shock, which could result in death if not treated immediately. (MBS)

Purple-3

C-3PO's alias when he accompanied Han Solo and Luke Skywalker to Crseih station. Threepio had been painted purple to disguise him in case they encountered any Imperial agents at the station. (CS)

Purpsh

this was one of the four Vagaari who accompanied Bearsh on the mission to locate the remains of the Outbound Flight Project, some three years before the Yuuzhan Vong began their invasion of the galaxy. It was Purpsh who surreptitiously installed a navigational recording device aboard the Chaf Envoy, so that the Vagaari would have a way to escape the Redoubt after they eliminated the Chiss. (SQ)

Purr

this Tinnell originally left her homeworld when a freighter, known as the Bottom Line, landed to investigate the planet. She was curious about the ship, and sneaked aboard to explore. She was still in the ship when it lifted off, and wasn't discovered until the ship was deep in hyperspace. The crew of the ship didn't know her name, and gave her the nickname Purr. She was valuable to the crew of the Bottom Line, helping to repair the ship and make it run better. However, the crimelord who owned the ship wasn't too happy with the stowaway, and put Purr to work at a variety of menial jobs. After the crimelord and his gang were killed in a gangwar, Purr called upon The Force to help her survive. She fled on the first ship that would take her, and ended up on Dohu VII. It was there that she met the smuggler Dannen Lifehold, where Purr discovered that Dannen's ship, the Lifeline, was in need of repair. She was a natural mechanic, and agreed to help him fix the ship. Despite her experiences, she remained quite naïve and innocent about a great many things. (SWJ1)

Purse-world

this was the Basic translation of the Neimoidian word for "colony", describing any planet which had been colonized by the Neimoidian race. (SWI71)

Pursian

this alien race was native to the planet Pursin. (MC77)

Pursin

the leaders of this planet pursued their local Imperial Governor for support in their attempt to subjugate the neighboring planet of Yugami, during the months leading up to the Battle of Endor. The Pursian people had been at odds with the natives of Yugami for generations, and hoped that the support of the Empire would allow them to rule Yugami in any way they pleased. (MC77)

Pursuer-class Enforcement Ship

an older model of MandalMotors' police ship, this 30.1-meter craft was used by the Mandalorians as a system patrol vehicle. During the height of the Clone Wars, MandalMotors was forced to refit the ship for use as a picket ship by the Separatists. The Pursuer-class ship required a single pilot, and had room for 2 guards and 5 prisoners. It had enough shielding to handle most pirates, and was armed with a twin blaster cannon, an ion cannon, and a proton torpedo launcher. The ship was basically a long, thin rectangle stabilized in flight by a port-side wing and maneuvering cluster. After the Clone Wars, the Pursuer-class enforcement ship was made available throughout the galaxy, but often only to those planets that were loyal to the Empire. Note that Star Wars Gamer, issue 7, indicates that the Pursuer-class ship measured fifty meters in length. (DESB, EGV, FOP, SWI80, GMR7)

Purtempas

this was the Snivvian word for "slavery." (HNN5)

Pushee wumpa!

this Huttese command literally meant "Get out of my way!" (GMR5)

Push-feather

this was one of the many games developed by the Jedi Knights of the Old Republic for developing the Force sensitivities of young students. The idea was for a student to use the Force to move a feather around. The game was meant to attune a student to the slightest changes in balance and pressure, and to train students to use an opponent's energy against them rather than blocking the opponent's energy with greater energy. (YDR)

Pustina

this was a Drach'nam swear word. (TFNR)

Putney

the Bakuran Army Commander in charge of the assault troops sent to take control of the planetary repulsor activated on Drall. (SC)

Putten Beatus

this near-human female had grey skin, large eyes, and gruff, demanding demeanor. She was an outcast who found work as a customs inspector at the Mos Eisley Spaceport. (GG7)

Puttie

a slow-moving sport. (COJ)

Puul

this was a Yuuzhan Vong expletive. (EVC)

Puullo

this Hutt worked for Shettora during the Galactic Civil War, controlling a criminal enterprise on the planet Brentaal. Puullo was known as a soft-spoken and relatively fair Hutt, and was considered to be even-handed during negotiations. This made Puullo something of an anomaly in the Hutt culture, but helped enlarge his empire. Despite his seemingly tender attitude, Puullo was nonetheless ruthless when he had to be, and ensured his operation ran smoothly with subtle hints and assassinations. (FOP)

Puurrgerr

this Wookiee clan was a longtime rival of the Grrobahrr clan. (C)

Puzzle Box

this gift was given by Hapans, on those occasions when they wanted to perplex or aggravate the recipient. The box itself contains a small surprise, which could be valuable or dangerous, depending on the nature of the gift-giving. However, the box was an intricately-created puzzle which took a variety of skills to solve and open. There is no limit to the complexity and steps required to open a puzzle box. These boxes originated as children's gifts, but evolved throughout Hapan history to their present form. (WOTC)

Puzzle Room

one of Moff Bendor's Game Chambers of Questal, the Puzzle Room is a natural cave. The floor of the chamber appears to be a single sheet of metal. The center of the room is marked by a large, black, laser-studded sphere suspended above a control panel. When one of Bendor's prisoners enters the chamber, the sphere begins to spin and descend, firing its lasers around the chamber. The object of the chamber is to determine how to use the control panel to turn off the sphere before it descends and shoots you to pieces. (GCQ)

Puzzleflower

this plant, native to the planet Nimban, has interlocking petals that surround the central stem. The Nimbanese people developed a crude form of analytical reasoning as they tried to open the flower's petals to reach the edible stem. (GG12)

Puzzle-wood

this was another name for the corsit-puzzle tree, but it more often referred to the wood that was harvested from the trees. The Thonnermen who lived on the planet cut down the trees with lasercutters, then cleared off the thick spikes from a section of the wood, to create a wicked staff or club. (GMR9)

PVC-800

this personal vehicle coordination device, produced by Vewas Data Controllers, was used to provide the pilot of a small speeder or hovercraft with a heads-up display of a variety of data. This allowed the pilot to have ready access to all sorts of information. The PVC-800 could also be programmed to take over from the organic pilot, in the event of an imminent collision or crash. (GFT)

Pveiz

the wood of this tree was known to be extremely brittle, even when healthy. (BP)

Pveric'ell

this was the Socorran term for "penance," and was used by the Society of the Black Bha'lir to indicate the punishment a member must take before rejoining the brotherhood. (BSS)

P-w401

Sienar Fleet Systems ion maneuvering jets used on TIE Fighters. They were referred to as P-W4-01 engines in The Making of Baron Fel. (EGV, MBF)

P-w702

this was a series of upgrading maneuvering jets produced by Sienar Fleet Systems for use on Imperial TIE Fighters. (CCG11)

Pwalloom

this was one of the most common male names used by members of the Lthorian race. Although most Lthorian names were not used for a specific meaning, historians found that this name meant "thunder". (GCG)

P'w'eck

this alien race resembled smaller versions of the Ssi-ruuk, and were also native to Lwhekk. The Ssi-ruuk used the P'w'ecks as slaves on their starships. The average P'w'eck has been bred by the Ssi-ruuk to be a drone, lacking any form of creativity or initiative. At fifteen years of age, all P'w'ecks were enteched by the Ssi-ruuk. At this age, the P'w'eck was old enough to reproduce but not yet matured into a full adult. The Ssi-ruuk discovered that P'w'ecks who were allowed to mature became unstable and violent, and were useless as slaves. About a year after the Yuuzhan Vong took control of the planet Coruscant and transformed it into a new version of Yuuzhan'tar, the P'w'eck arrived at Bakura claiming that they had defeated the Ssi-ruuk and freed themselves from slavery. The P'w'eck Emancipation Movement presented the Bakurans with an offer of alliance, to strengthen both groups against future invasions. This movement proved to be an elaborate ruse concocted by the Yuuzhan Vong themselves, in an effort to capture both Lwhekk and Bakura, in the hopes of cutting off the Unknown Regions of the galaxy. As part of the alliance, the P'w'eck leaders required that Bakura be consecrated, so that any P'w'eck who died on Bakura would not lose their soul. In reality, the Keeramak was acting on behalf of the Ssi-ruuk, who were actually being controlled by disguised Yuuzhan Vong warriors. The Yuuzhan Vong hoped to take Bakura as well as Lwhekk, in an effort to gain a foothold along the border of the Unknown Regions. (TB, AE, FH2)

P'w'eck Emancipation Movement

this was group which outwardly championed the liberation of the P'w'eck race from their Ssi-ruuk masters. The movement won their freedom during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, and decided to strengthen their position by allying with their former enemies, the Bakurans. The hope was to unite the Bakurans and P'w'eck into an independent alliance that could stand alone, apart from the New Republic. The leader of the movement was a mutated Ssi-ruu known as the Keeramak, a rainbow-colored individual who opposed his race's self-centered view of the galaxy. Born several years before the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy, the Keeramak rallied the P'w'eck into a cohesive unit, and led them in a year-long battle to overthrow the Ssi-ruuvi Imperium. Five years later, Lwothin brought the movement's message of peace to the Bakurans. As part of the unification, the P'w'eck required that Bakura be consecrated, and a lavish ceremony was planned. It was later discovered that the movement was, in fact, a hoax conceived by the Yuuzhan Vong. Cleverly disguised with full-body ooglith masquers, Yuuzhan Vong posed as both P'w'eck and Ssi-ruu to fool the Bakuran people. Having conquered the Ssi-ruuvi Imperium, the Yuuzhan Vong hoped to also take control of Bakura and gain a foothold along the borders of the Unknown Regions. However, the spirit of the P'w'eck race was underestimated by the Ssi-ruuk and the Yuuzhan vong. Lwothin managed to kill the Keeramak, and P'w'eck crewmen managed to overpower their Ssi-ruuk superiors and halt the invasion of Bakura. A formal alliance between Bakura and the true P'w'eck Emancipation Movement - under the non-coerced control of Lwothin - spelled the end of the scheme to subjugate Bakura. (FH2)

Pwigiri

this was a common name among the Toydarian race. (WOTC, UANT)

Pwihei

this Ithorian surname was believed to mean "jeweler", according to historian who studied the Ithorian race. (GCG)

P'w'itthki

this deity was the father of the P'w'eck species. According to the Ssi-ruuk's sacred tome, the G'nnoch, there were four eggs formed at the creation of the universe. From the first hatched Ssi and P'w'itthki. Ssi's children hatched from the second egg, while P'w'itthki's children hatched from the third egg. The fourth egg was reserved for those descendants who earned a place in the afterlife. P'w'itthki taught his hatchlings to hate those of Ssi, showing them how to make war on their brethern. Eventually, Ssi was forced to defeat P'w'itthki in combat, but allowed P'w'itthki's hatchlings to live on, serving the children of Ssi for all eternity. This myth describes the beginning of the relationship between the Ssi-ruuk (hatchlings of Ssi) and the P'w'eck (hatchlings of P'w'itthki). (TBSB)

Pwoe

this name was commonly given to Quarren males, and meant "gifted". (GCG)

Pwoe

this Quarren Senator to the New Republic served on the Advisory Council during in the initial stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion. He was the first Quarren to serve on the Council, and was something of a surprise choice in the wake of the general apathy the Quarren showed the Alliance. It was whispered that Borsk Fey'lya had pushed hard for Pwoe's nomination. Pwoe was opposed to the formation of a new Jedi Council, and was one of the first Senators to question the validity of Leia Organa Solo's assessment of the Yuuzhan Vong's abilities. He also accused Leia of exaggerating the threat in an effort to gather power for herself in order to unseat Fey'lya. In addition, it was Pwoe who first accused Jagged Fel of harboring intense anti-alien biases, despite the fact that Fel had been brought up among the Chiss and was considered one of their own. Pwoe was one of few members of the Advisory Council to reach Borleias, in the wake of the Second Battle of Coruscant, and tried to take command of the Republic in the wake of Fey'lya's death. He met with stern opposition from General Wedge Antilles, who believed that Pwoe was not going to work in the best interests of the Republic. Nevertheless, Antilles bowed to Pwoe's demands that Borleias be sacrificed so that the Advisory Council could reconvene and determine a strategy for saving the galaxy. For his own part, Pwoe named himself Chief of State of the New Republic, despite the fact that the Republic was virtually destroyed. He later began moving the command structure of the Republic to Kuat, disregarding the calls from Cal Omas on Calamari to reconvene there. Pwoe, now ostracized from the New Republic, had decided to meet his own agenda, and even agreed to meet with the Peace Brigade - and the Yuuzhan Vong's Supreme Overlord, Shimrra - on Ylesia to discuss treaty of friendship with the Ylesian Republic. Unfortunately, Pwoe's supporters were not interested in allying themselves with the enemy, and many deserted him. Pwoe and the few supporters that traveled with him to Ylesia were captured by General Tigran Jamiro's forces. (VP, DTO, DTR, EL1, EL2, Y)

PX-10

Nen-Carvon's CAVw PX-10 compact assault vehicle. (ISB)

PX-4

Nen-Carvon's mobile command base, this tread-driven armorer hulk provides field commanders with transport, protection, and a mobile headquarters that moves with his troops. These heavily-armored tanks are also sometimes used by Imperial governors on hostile worlds. For all their impressive protective measures, the PX-4 is only armed with a single heavy laser cannon. (ISB)

PX-7

this treaded personnel vehicle was produced by Nen-Carvon during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Measuring just over 13 meters in length, the PX-7 required a pilot and gunner to operate, and could carry up to six troops and 100 metric tons of cargo. It was armed with a twin light blaster cannon. (GMR5)

PX-7

this hand-held heat sensor was produced by ChandrilTech. (GFT) this was Arakyd's ground-to-orbit proton torpedo launcher. It was effective at pummeling an orbiting ship with torpedoes, but was hard to move and difficult to conceal. (HAS)

PY-6

Pyash Yopayomba

this female Quara Aqualish was known as the Pirate Queen of Ando during the height of the New Order, a title she earned by raiding all manner of ocean-going vessels during her career. Dressed from head to toe in black clothing and armor, Pyash was a formidable figure even before she entered a fight. When the battle started to turn against her pirates, Pyash joined the fighting with her long vibroblade, cutting down her victims with great skill and little remorse. Her pirate vessel was also painted black, and was a modernized version of a traditional sailing vessel. In place of actual sails, the ship had specialized repulsor fins, giving the pirate vessel incredible speed and maneuverability in the water. Among the vessels she captured and refitted for her own use was the Nanda's Luck, which she took after beheading its former Captain, Bipopa Bogzider. She then removed the mineral-fish shells from her hold and filled the vessel with explosives. Her plan was to have Sissalik sail the Nanda's Luck into the Quantill City harbor and detonate it, hoping to pin the explosion and the resulting death and destruction on a group of Aquala radicals. She had been led to believe that the Imperial governor of Ando would pay her handsomely for starting a civil war between the Aquala and the Quara, a war which the Empire could use to fully subjugate the Aqualish. Her plans failed, though, when Sissalik reprogrammed the autopilot on the Nanda's Luck, ramming the ship into Pyash's own flagship, the Majestic. All hands on board, including Pyash herself, were killed in the explosion. (PH)

Pydyr

this moon, the innermost of three which orbited the planet Almanian, was a hot, dry world formed from sandstone and other soft rocks. Its constantly changing landscape forced its inhabitants to become highly adaptable. Meager oceans provided only enough moisture to allow plants and animals to survive, but they were home to the microscopic seafah, whose shells were valued as gemstones. The natives of Pydyr built grand cities of sandstone studded with seafah shells, which were constantly being rebuilt due to the harsh environment's continual erosion of the soft material. The Pydyrians became wealthy harvesting seafah shells and developing medical unguents and salves, and were the creators of the healing stick. As a result this wealth, the Almanians became intensely jealous of the Pydyrians. A centuries-old grudge evolved, but was finally laid to rest by the evil machinations of Dolph. Dolph sent his specially-armed droids to Pydyrian sources, and detonated them all. He killed 1,651,305 Pydyrians, leaving a thousand prisoners for him to torture when he came to survey the destruction himself. (TNR, EGP)

Pydyrian

this race of tall, thin humanoids was native to the moon of Pydyr. These beings had two-toed feet and three-fingered hands, and their bone structure was very thin. Because of their skeletal structure, many xenoarchaeologists believed that the Pydyrians evolved from flightless birds. Their oblate skulls were bald at the top, but ringed with a fringe of hair at the base of the skull. All but 1,000 Pydyrians were slaughtered by Dolph when he rose to power, with the survivors being tortured for Dolph's own pleasure. (EGP, TNR, EGA)

Pydyrian

this was the native language of the Pydyrian people. (EGP)

Pyesmev

this Rendili StarDrive Light Corvette was actually a knockoff built in a backwater shadowport and purchased by Venslas Beeli. The ship was off poor quality compared to the original corvette, and was under constant modification. It was armed with six double turbolaser cannons. (FOP)

Pygmy Hummer

this was a species of tiny, avian creature that was popular throughout the galaxy. (RCHC)

Pyjam

this man, a native of Corellia, was a noted expert in protective clothing and armor. (GUN)

Pyjridi

Lando Calrissian once knew a pickpocket from this world. (BTS)

Pylat Bird

native to the mountain regions of the planet Neimoidia, this beautiful bird was prized for its white plumage and its soothing song. The wings of the pylat doubled as arms, and the first joint was tipped with a four-fingered "hand." The pylat was often maintained as a pet by the wealthier beings of the galaxy. (WSW)

Pylokam

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Pylokam

an aged human who ran Pylokam's Health Food in Mos Eisley during the last years Luke Skywalker lived on Tatooine. Pylokam did a poor business, as none of the smugglers or bounty hunters cared for his healthy foods. The health food business was so poor that even Jabba the Hutt didn't demand a percentage of Pylokam's intake. (TME)

Pylum

this sour-faced man was the Master of Cerements for the living dead on the planet Necropolis, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. It was his job to ensure that the Curse of Sycorax was not invoked whenever the Necropolitans ignored their dead. When Doctor Evazan successfully reanimated the dead bodied in Necropolis' cemetery, Pylum revealed that he had been working with Evazan all along. Evazan had realized the benefit of having the Master of Cerements under his control, thereby being able to use the ancient superstitions about the dead to cover his experiments with bringing dead bodies back to life. Pylum had been disgruntled with the taunts and jeers he received for his belief in the ancient traditions, and had broken into the Crypt of the Ancients to see if they were true. He found that Sycorax's coffin wasn't filled with a witch's body, ready to exact revenge, but a simple old skeleton wrapped in rags. His own beliefs were shattered, and he decided to join Evazan and earn a portion of the credits the zombie experiments would bring. However, when Boba Fett returned to capture Evazan, Pylum fled the scene and tried to escape. He was killed as he tried to exit the Crypt of the Ancients when one of the crypt's heavy doors fell on him and crushed him. (GOF2)

Pym

this yellow star was the central body in the New Plympto System. (GMR9)

Pym, Dirv

this precocious young boy was one of Senator Drexlar Pym's sons. Dirv and his brother, Kyle, were kidnapped by Imperial fanatics who were opposed to the Senator's work as the chief prosecutor for Imperial war crimes. They were later rescued by New Republic agents assisting their father. (SWJ7)

Pym, Drexlar

this native of the planet Exarga was an outspoken Senator to the New Republic. Pym was also the leader of a panel that prosecuted former Imperial officials for their war crimes, a position he cherished because of the fame and power it brought him. He was the target of a series of terrorist attacks from a former Imperial commando, but a team of New Republic agents discovered that Pym was receiving incredible dividends from stock purchases he had made during the New Order. Many of the companies had Imperial ties to active warlords of the early New Republic, or to criminal organizations which acted against the Republic. After the agents were able to rescue Senator Pym's family, the Senator himself was stripped of all governmental privileges until a full investigation of his dealings could be performed. (SWJ7)

Pym, Kyle

this precocious young boy was one of Senator Drexlar Pym's sons. Kyle and his brother, Dirv, were kidnapped by Imperial fanatics who were opposed to the Senator's work as the chief prosecutor for Imperial war crimes. They were later rescued by New Republic agents assisting their father. (SWJ7)

Pyn, Trondor

this man worked as a shipwright at the Kuta Drive Yards during the height of the New Order. He was hired by House Andrim to spy on the operations of House Purkis, and was promised that he would be well compensated. However, Pyn was caught by the agents of House Purkis, who agreed to let him go if he promised to spy for them instead. He agreed to the deal, primarily so that he wouldn't be arrested and sent to prison, but the stress of being a double agent eventually drove him mad. He tried to lash out at both houses by planning to bomb their orbital facilities, but was overheard in a bar discussing his plans. He was quickly arrested and thrown into prison. (CCW)

Pyollian Cake

a sweet dessert food. (OE)

Pypin

one of the Corporate Sector's Trianii colony worlds. (CSA)

Pyr

this ball of molten rock was the innermost planet of the Pyrshak System. (PH)

Pyre Folas

this was one of the many cities located along the path of the Rift Skyrail, on the planet Teyr. (EGP)

Pyrepenol

this drug is often used by addicts and other abusers. It often helps make the user feel invincible, ready to take on the very Fates that control his or her life. (POT)

Pyria

this was the name of the solar body at the center of the Pyria System, which included the planet Borleias. (EL1)

Pyria 6

this was the sixth planet in the Pyria System. Following the Battle of Coruscant, Wedge Antilles tried to lure the Yuuzhan Vong into a trap by leaving Pyria 6 undefended in favor of Borleias. The plan was to make the alien invaders believe there was more going on at Borleias than there actually was, in hopes of luring a larger fleet to the Pyria System. (EL1)

Pyro Flower

native to the moon of Sulon, this flowering plant produced brilliant red blossoms. (RAG)

Pyros

this planet was raided by Alliance operatives shortly after the Battle of Yavin. The raid was met with intense resistance, contrary to initial reconnaissance. (GCQ)

Pyrospray

this was one of the unusual Ta-Ree powers, which manifested itself as a spray of colorful lights and sparks. This display of lights was accompanied by a staccato burst of sound. (E)

Pyrowall

this was a form of computer defense system developed during the last decades of the Old Republic. Computer systems used pyrowalls to prevent unwanted access or intrusion from outside forces. (MBS)

Pyrron Nox

this Dresselian trader was the one who brought Morst Tayl'skar to Dressel. He was captured by Orrimaarko while on Dressel, but was released when Tayl'skar vouched for him. Years later, he tried to renew Wrune Tsallin's BoSS license, only to learn that Wrune had been executed for trying to steal funds from Jatayus Outbound. He owned and operated the starship Beginner's Luck, and once transported the Shi'ido known as Vandolae to the planet Centares. Vandolae later used Pyrron's appearance to avoid capture, but was killed by Gideon and Keeta. (GG12, SSR, SWJ12, UANT)

Pyrshak

this star was the central body in the Pyrshak System, located in the Mid Rim. (PH)

Python

this CR90 corvette was part of an Alliance convoy dispatched to inspect and Imperial communications relay, shortly before the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Pyub

this was a common female name given to Sullustan females. It referred to a flower that grew in Sullustan caves. (GCG)

Pyub

this wildflower grew in the caves of the planet Sullust. (GCG)

Pyussh

the berries of this plant, when crushed and fermented, proved to be an attractive lure for certain small, nocturnal creatures. (SWJ7)

P'zil

a Talz word for "home." (TME)

Pzob

third planet located in the K-749 System, near the Moonflower Nebula. It was originally settled by Gamorreans, and has a temperate environment. The Emperor sent a special team of stormtroopers there as part of the Eye of Palpatine mission. All but Triv Pothman were killed by the Gamorreans. The New Republic hasn't made any contact there; their databanks were updated last during the Old Republic. (COJ)

 Q ***

Q2

a model of hold-out blaster produced by Merr-Sonn Munitions, the Q2 was considered the prototypical holdout weapon. It was lightweight, elegant, and functional, and it became incredibly popular among royals and nobles of the Empire. (RPG, GMS, FOP, AEG)

Q-2

this holdout blaster was produced by SoroSuub during the height of the New Order. It was a direct knock-off of the Merr-Sonn Q2 holdout blasters, with SoroSuub licensing the weapon's plans and manufacturing from Merr-Sonn. (GFT, AEG)

Q-3PO

this protocol droid was given to Doctor Deena Kinnet, after she accepted a position as an Imperial spy. Q-3PO was coated with a white enamel covering, to give it a "medical" look. The droid was actually one of Deena's information collection and transmission sources. (HR)

Q-4

Quarren Industrial's borer droid, the Q-4 is equipped with a repulsor engine, a heavy-duty drilling laser, and various sensor systems. They are small droids, and are programmed with a limited but cheerful personality. (DU)

Q4 Quickfire

see Quickfire-4 (AEG)

Q5A7

this bacta production facility was located on the planet Qretu 5. It was the target of a Rogue Squadron attack in the days leading up to the Battle of Thyferra. (BW)

Q-6100

this distinctive ground vehicle was produced by Jadai during the height of the New Order. It measured 8.5 meters in length, and was a heavy craft designed to carry passengers in style. It was last produced some thirty years before the Battle of Yavin, but remained popular on backwater worlds. By the era of the Galactic Civil War, only a few of these vehicles remained in service. (AIR)

Q7

this Phylon tractor beam projector system was used aboard the Imperial-class Star Destroyer. It was designed to pull in a target ship with primary tractor beams, then use magnetic field projectors and a docking suspension field to hold the ship in place. Boarding tubes could then be extended from the Q7 system to allow access to the captured ship. The Q7 could accommodate a starship up to 150 meters in length. (SCRE, EGW)

Q-7N

this spherical, repulsor-equipped droid served the Alliance as a translator. Q-7N was assigned to the Massassi Base on Yavin 4, during the evacuation of the base following the destruction of the first Death Star. (IS)

Q7-series Droid

this spherical astromech droid was designed to fit into the small droid port on the Alpha-3 Nimbus V-Wing starfighter. The upper hemisphere of the Q7-series astromech looked almost exactly like the dome of an R2-series astromech, while the lower hemisphere contained the droids' repulsorlift engines. (X3)

Q-8 Starfighter

a defensive starship designed and manufactured by Tocsan during the Galactic Civil War, the Q-8 starfighter was developed for use in small defense forces. (SSR)

Q9-series Droid

based on the popular R7 series of astromech droids, the Q9 series was an experimental series that never got off the ground. Some felt that the Q9s were a failure because they were too complex, while others demanded more testing. In size and shape, the Q9s resembled the R2 series. (AC, AS, EGD)

Q9-X2

Ebrihim's constant companion, Q9-X2 was a graphic display of the quirks of the Q9-series droids. In most ways, Q9-X2 was a standard astromech droid, equipped with manipulator arms and tools which helped it perform a variety of repairs. Beyond that, Q9-X2 was anything but normal. Q9-X2's intelligence was based on the advanced computing systems of the original Q9-series, and allowed him to continually improve himself, to that point that he installed all sorts of new technology on himself. He installed his own repulsorlifts for better mobility. He gave himself an upgraded brain and vocabulator unit, and learned how to talk. He equipped himself with various tools and sensors, replacing outdated equipment when newer models appeared. He has a tendency to talk too much, but has proven his value a number of times. (AC, AS)

Qaestar Port Control

this was the primary customs and law enforcement agency found in Qaestar Town, on the planet Talus. (CCW)

Qaestar Ridge

located on the planet Talus, this two-kilometer-tall plateau was located just outside of Qaestar Town. It was atop this plateau that the city's primary spaceport was located. Visitors walked into Qaestar Town by following the Qaestar Steps. (CCW)

Qaestar Steps

this series of seven wide promenades connected the city of Qaestar Town with its spaceport, located atop Qaestar Ridge, on the planet Talus. (CCW)

Qaestar Town

located on the planet Talus, this city was the largest on either of the Double Worlds. Located near the Qaestar Ridge, which served as the location for the city's spaceport, Qaestar Town served as the primary debarkation point for visitors to Talus. (CCW)

Qah

this form of bio-engineered cell was created by the Yuuzhan Vong Shapers for implantation into another's brain. When properly placed, the Qah cell removed an old memory and replaced it with a new one. The Qah cell could carry almost any form of memory, so the Shaper could create an entirely new history for an individual and then implant it in their brain. (EVC)

Qahsa

this was the name of the creature created by the Yuuzhan Vong to serve as a form of computer memory bank. Qahsa could come in a variety of sizes, from personal devices to the memory banks of a worldship. Most often, the data contained in the qahsa was accessed via a congition hood. This data was maintained in increasingly dense cortexes, and each successive cortex could only be accessed by a more experienced individual. Shapers maintained a qahsa which had seven specific cortexes surrounding the ultimate, eighth cortex. Only Master Shapers could access information beyond the fifth cortex. All information contained within the qahsa was believed to have been bestowed upon the Yuuzhan Vong by their gods. Any Yuuzhan Vong who searched for new information, beyond that which was contained in the qahsa, was considered heretical. (EVC, EVR)

Qalita Prime

this planet petitioned for membership in the New Republic after the world's Right Earl grew tired of piracy against their cargo ships. Their petition was delayed during the Yevethan Great Purge. (BTS)

Qalydon

this planet served as the base of operations for the Fellowship of Kooroo. (SWJ13)

Qana

this was a legume that grew in a pliable shell. The individual beans had to be removed from the shell before cooking or eating. (RCHC)

Qang Qahsa

this Yuuzhan Vong qahsa was designed to hold all information and protocols known to the Shapers of their people. The Qang qahsa had five primary cortexes, which were accessible to all shapers, with two additional inner cortexes which could only be accessed by Master Shapers. At the very core of the Qang qahsa, an eighth cortex supposedly revealed the most sacred of protocols bestowed upon the Yuuzhan Vong by their gods. The information in the Qang qahsa was maintained through the use of a massive rikyam brain. Unknown to virtually every Yuuzhan Vong individual, the Qang qahsa had not come from the gods. Instead, it contained all the information on the creation of biotechnology that had been given to the Ur-Yuuzhan Vong millennia ago, during their struggle to defeat a stronger alien race. All knowledge of the origins of the Qang qahsa's knowledge had long since been removed from their history, to ensure that subsequent generations continued to revere their gods above all else. In the intervening generations, all information was eventually taken from the Qang qahsa and bestowed upon the Shapers, so that they could create the things needed for the Yuuzhan Vong to survive and prosper. The eighth cortex was then said to hold the information needed to defeat the Jedi Knights, although it was, in fact, completely empty. (EVR, NJOSB)

Qanna

these insectile creatures, native to the homeworld of the Yuuzhan Vong, were bred for their ability to memorize and play back music, using their intricately-formed mandibles. The carapace of a qanna gleamed with all colors of the rainbow, making them pleasing to look at as well. (EVR)

Qaqququ

this man was an Imperial Lord, still holding onto dreams of the rebirth of the Empire during the early years of the New Republic. He was working under Hethrir to try and establish the Empire Reborn, supporting Hethrir by purchasing slaves from the Firrerreo. Like many of his kind, Qaqququ had managed to stockpile a large amount of credits following the downfall of the Empire, and still maintained a decent income despite the New Republic's plans to cut him off. (CS)

Qar Jalunn

this being was a youthful entrepreneur who arrived on the planet Genarius and began throwing credits at any operation which seemed to be even marginally profitable. Roughly half of his investments failed in the short-run, but his exuberance was nonetheless undeterred. (LFC)

Qarl

this Mon Calamari was a Captain in the Alliance Navy, and was the commander of the Mantan Wanderer. (ROE)

Qarohan Steppes

this flatland was located on the planet Drongar, some fifty kilometers to the south of the Jasserak Lowlands. (MJH)

Qasqi

this gas giant was the fourth planet of the Centares System, located in the Mid Rim. It was orbited by eleven moons. (WOA32)

Qat Chrystac

this Sumitra Sector planet was the site of Lando Calrissian's shieldship depot, serving the ships traveling to and from the Nomad City outpost on the planet Nkllon, during the early years of the New Republic. Much of the planet is covered with radioactive volcanoes that spew toxic lava across its surface at a prodigious rate. (TLC, REB, TTSB)

Qatak Qantaras

this Tarro was an Alliance operative who worked in the Masgen System during the Galactic Civil War. (GG12)

Qatya

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Qau Lah

this Yuuzhan Vong warrior took the place of Shok Choka, after Anakin Solo defeated Shok Choka in combat aboard the space station orbiting Yag'Dhul, shortly after the Battle of Duro. Unfortunately for Qau Lah and his soldiers, they had all witnessed the fact that Nom Anor had refused to challenge of Anakin Solo, something which would have disgraced the Executor in the eyes of Warmaster Tsavong Lah. To prevent any word of his cowardice reaching the ears of his superiors, Nom Anor shot Qau Lah in the back of the head, and killed the other soldiers in a similarly cowardly fashion. (EVR)

Qayayir

this was a common name among the Yinchorri race. (UANT)

Q-E

the small, red E-series droid C-3PO and R2-D2 meet on Kalarba. He, along with his droid companions U-E and 2-E, used to run the local nursery for as long as anyone in town can remember. About the time that C-3PO and R2-D2 were acquired by the town's baron, the three little droids were ordered by Mister Vuldo to build illegal blasters. After U-E was destroyed by Vuldo, Q-E and 2-E got C-3PO, R2-D2, and Nak to help them expose Vuldo's scheme. (DRO)

Qeimat System

a planetary system. (ISB)

Qeimet Fleet

this was the designation of a fleet of Imperial starships stationed near the Hook Nebula. The fleet was led by the flagship Victorious, and was home to the White Death Scimitar Assault wing carried aboard the Star Destroyer Retribution. The fleet's primary objective was to quell the rebellious worlds found near the Nebula and bring them under Imperial control. (ISB)

Qek

this is the seventeenth symbol in the Aurebesh script, and represents the Basic letter "q". (SWM)

Qektoth Attack Cruiser

this dagger-shaped warship was developed by the Qektoth Confederacy for their fleets. It measured 105 meters in length, and had a pointed bow which curved downward slightly, giving it the appearance of a sharp beak. It required a crew of 38, along with 10 gunners, and could transport up to fifty troops. The Attack Cruiser was armed with four turret-mounted plasma cannons and a forward-facing bio-energy array. They were capable of hyperspace travel, but Qektoth technology limited it to a Class-3 rating. (KR)

Qektoth Confederation

this band of criminals roamed the border of the Kathol Outback near the Kathol Rift from a base on Qu'mock Station. They preyed primarily on the Uukaalbian society, but hoped to locate Yvara and develop a human hive-mind based on the Yvarema physiology. The confederation was formed about 25 years before the Battle of Endor, by a group of scientists who wanted to find new uses for unusual bio-technology. They believed that modern technology was responsible for sapping the strength and spirit of any being it touched, and hoped to replace most items with biological equivalents. Over the next two decades, the Qektoth Confederation turned into a militant group that hoped to gain control by preying on those beings weakened by technology. Led by Trann Shoame, the confederation unleashed a biochemical agent mated with a strange, biotechnology found near the Kathol Rift, on the crew of the FarStar to test its effectiveness. The confederation also traded some of its technology to Moff Sarne, in return for starships and crews. Drigor Tarrens also discovered that the leadership of the Qektoth

Confederation had taken skin samples from all its employees, and was using the cells to create enhanced clones without their knowledge or consent. He threatened to expose them, but was apprehended and sentenced to death. Tarrens fled to Uukaablis, but later exposed the Confederation's plans with the help of the FarStar's crew. The Qektoth later discovered the Lifeline Project, and monitored the progress of the FarStar through Kathol Sector. When they learned of the Battle of Kathol, the Qektoth decided to try and take the DarkStryder technology from Sarne by helping the New Republic forces. However, the three warships the Confederacy sent to Kathol were poorly armed, and they were quickly knocked out of the battle. (KO, KR, E)

Qelah Kwaad

this young Yuuzhan Vong Shaper served under Nen Yim during the years following the Yuuzhan Vong conquest of the planet Coruscant. She was a member of Domain Kwaad, and was forced to continually make up for the shortcomings of Mezhan Kwaad. She suddenly found herself elevated to Master Shaper, however, when Nen Yim was captured and taken away from the planet Coruscant. She was elevated by Supreme Overlord Shimrra himself, who was unaware that Nen Yim had fled Coruscant of her own volition, hoping to locate the living planet Zonama Sekot. Her work on the magubat kan had brought her to the Overlord's attention, and her plans to develop biological weapons for use against the Jedi Knights gave her more power. She questioned Shimrra's decision to assign Ahsi Yim to serve as her assistant, in light of Nen Yim's disappearance, hoping to learn more about the Sekotan starship hidden in the Yim damutek. Her time for questioning these decisions was cut short when the Galactic Alliance launched its final assault on Coruscant, hoping to retake the planet and ultimately defeat the Yuuzhan Vong. When the ground forces of the Alliance reached the Citadel and began moving on the Well of the World Brain, Shimrra dispatched Qelah Kwaad - along with High Prefect Drathul and High Priest Jakan - to the Citadel. From there, they traveled to the Well to anoint the Jedi who had been captured there. Among those captured were Harrar, Han Solo and his wife, Leia Organa Solo. Drathul's plans to sacrifice them were cut short when Nom Anor, leading Mara Jade Skywalker and a band of Shamed Ones, flooded the chamber and confronted the warriors arrayed before them. Drathul demanded that the captives be executed, but his commander instead turned his forces against Drathul's guards. In a flash, Qelah Kwaad ran from the chamber, but was caught by Han Solo and forced to lead them to the dhuryam. After the deaths of Shimrra and Onimi - who proved to be the true Supreme Overlord - Qelah Kwaad and the rest of the Yuuzhan Vong agreed to surrender to the Galactic Alliance. In accordance with the advice of Jedi master Luke Skywalker, the Galactic Alliance allowed the Yuuzhan Vong to travel to Zonama Sekot to re-establish their civilization. The planetary consciousness Sekot welcomed them with open arms, then fled into the Unknown Regions to allow its new inhabitants to evolve in peace. (FP, UF)

Qel-Bertuk, Lanius

this Jedi Master succeeded Nerra Ziveri as the watchman of the Cularin System, some twenty-four years before the Battle of Naboo. Qel-Bertuk warned the Jedi Council of the system's dense concentration of the Force, especially the Dark Side energies discovered on the planet Almas. However, he received little in the way of assistance from the Council, which was already being stretched thin due to the increasing unrest in the Old Republic. Thus, Master Qel-Bertuk developed a form of autonomy from the main Council, but worked to ensure that the Almas Academy continued to teach its students with the highest of ideals. After the Battle of Naboo and the rise to power of the Thaereian Military in the Cularin System, Master Qel-Bertuk found himself more and more troubled by the advance of the Dark Side of the Force. This period also saw the emergence of the Believers, a group that deeply troubled the Jedi Knights. Thus, when he was approached by Broof Yurdel and Osten Dal'Nay about a possible military action against the Thaereians, Master Qel-Bertuk found himself reluctantly agreeing to support their plans. He solidified his position when Thaereian agents cut off all transmissions from Almas to Coruscant, forcing him to act with complete independence from the Jedi Council in supporting Operation False Horizon. Once the Cularin Militia managed to gain control of Thaereian-held bases, he pledged that the Jedi Knights on Almas would provide peace-keeping assistance throughout Cularin. However, like the Jedi Council on Coruscant, Master Lanius failed to see the dark cloud that erupted into the Clone Wars. He fought inner turmoil and political reservations to keep the Almas Academy free, until he was ordered by the Jedi Council to transfer all available Jedi to Coruscant to augment the Republic Armed Forces in the fight against the Separatists. He chose to send a handful of individuals, but remained committed to keeping the Almas Academy an active training center. He reasoned that there were many ways to follow the Jedi

Code, despite the unilateral call-to-arms that occurred as the Clone Wars broke out. His methods, he believed, would result in more Padawans completing their training, rather than leaving the Jedi Order to become disgruntled opponents or outright adherents of the Dark Side of the Force. Qel-Droma, Cay

Ulic Qel-Droma's brother, and a Jedi Knight who learned about The Force from Master Arca on Arkania. Cay and Ulic were born to noble parents on Alderaan, and their mother was a Jedi Knight. He was good friends with Tott Doneeta, another of Master Arca's apprentices. When he, Ulic, and Tott were dispatched to Onderon to mediate the planet's growing unrest, Cay lost his arm in the battle between the Beastmasters and the Onderonians. He replaced it with a prosthetic arm from a droid which was destroyed in the battle. Like his brother, Cay was born on Alderaan. Unlike his brother, Cay was level-headed when it came to his abilities with the Force. Cay was greatly dismayed when Ulic attempted to infiltrate the Krath by turning to the Dark Side, and was caught up in the Sith War because of it. Cay tried many times to reach his brother and return him to the Light Side, but always to no avail. When Ulic was brought to trial on Coruscant, Cay tried to speak on his behalf. This plea was interrupted by the appearance of Exar Kun, who defeated the Jedi and reclaimed Ulic. Cay continued to fight against the Sith, and again met his brother in battle. This time, it was on Ossus, where the Jedi were trying to rescue their libraries from the destruction of the Cron System. There, Cay and Ulic were engaged in a starship battle that ended when Ulic shot Cay down. Only Cay's piloting skills kept him alive. When they met on the planet's surface, Cay pleaded with Ulic to return to the Light. Ulic refused, and initiated a lightsaber duel. Cay fought well, but could not bring himself to kill his brother. This left an opening for Ulic, who struck Cay down with a vicious swing of his lightsaber. Cay died in Ulic's arms as the remnants of the Light Side in Ulic were able to regain some control over his mind. However, Nomi Sunrider cut Ulic completely off from the Force, leaving him adrift. Some years later, Ulic remembered his slain brother by naming his starship Cay's Dream. (TOJ, DLS, TSW, TOJC)

Qel-Droma, Duron

this ancient Jedi Knight was the cousin of Cay and Ulic Qel-Droma. Duron participated briefly in the Great Sith War, but disappeared shortly after the Great Hunt and was never seen again. It was believed that he was dispatched to Korriban with Shaela Nuur and Guun Han Sareh, although they were never located. A datapad found later by another group of Jedi Knights - on Korriban to search for clues to the whereabouts of Dath Malak - revealed that the trip had been sent to Korriban to eliminate any rogue terentateks they encountered. Guun Han, however, was jealous of the romance that was blossoming between Duron and Shaela, and left for Korriban on his own. All three were eventually killed - and presumably eaten - by the terentateks. (KOTOR)

Qel-Droma, Ulic

an ancient Jedi Knight, Ulic was very powerful in the use of The Force. He was born on Alderaan, and raised in a family of great warriors. His mother was a Jedi Knight. Along with his brother, Cay, they were apprenticed to the Jedi Master Arca on Arkadia. When they had completed their training, Arca sent them - along with fellow student Tott Doneeta - to Onderon to help put an end to the fighting between the city dwellers and the beastmasters. When they tried to defend the city dwellers in Iziz, they discovered the Dark Side energies flowing there. They also discovered that the dwellers of Iziz were the real enemy, and strove to defeat Queen Amanoa. They eventually overcame the Dark Side threat, and later found the tomb of Freedon Nadd. They tried to rid the planet of Nadd's influence, but Arca was captured by the hidden King Ommin. Ulic sent for more Jedi and help from the Old Republic, and their combined forces were able to defeat Ommin and recover Arca. The Jedi then helped Iziz rebuild itself, during which time Ulic fell in love with Nomi Sunrider. When they were cleaning up the Dark Side artifacts, the spirit of Freedon Nadd reappeared and told Ulic he would become one of the greatest Sith Lords. Ulic and Nomi were assigned to assist in the retaking of the Empress Teta System from the Krath, who had declared war on the Jedi. Ulic proposed that he should join the Krath and attempt to defeat it from the inside. He made himself heard at the Great Council on Deneba. However, the Jedi Masters feared that Ulic would be drawn into the Dark Side, but during their discussions the Krath attacked. He fought bravely, only to see Master Arca killed while he was distracted. This hardened his resolve to eradicate the Krath, and he set out to discover the Dark Side of the Force first-hand. He hoped that by becoming a Dark Side follower, he could find its weaknesses and use it against the Krath. He was seduced by Aleema, and his despair at Arca's death only made him an easier target for the Dark Side and the Sith magic. His brother, Cay, and Nomi Sunrider went to Cinnagar to return Ulic to the Light Side, but their combined love for Ulic could not sway him from the Dark Side. At this time, Exar Kun intervened and severely injured Aleema while trying to overcome Ulic and recover a Sith amulet. Their combined fury released an ancient Sith spirit, who claimed both of them for the Dark Side. Exar Kun was named Dark Lord of the Sith while Ulic was named his apprentice. He became caught up in Exar Kun's plans and became a Dark Jedi himself. He joined forces with the ancient Mandalorian warriors after defeating their leader, and conquered star system after star system with the power of the Dark Side. He was captured by the Jedi and brought to trial on Coruscant, but was freed by the intervention of Exar Kun and the Mandalorians. They then travelled to Ossus, in an attempt to take possession of the Jedi and Sith knowledge stored there. Ulic was again captured by the Jedi, this time by his brother, Cay, who challenged him to a duel. In his Dark Side fury, Ulic cut down his brother in a bloody battle. Some part of the Light Side still remained, and Ulic was brought to his knees by the import of what he had done. Nomi Sunrider, enraged by Ulic's actions, used the Force in anger and cut Ulic off from the Force. Thus weakened, Ulic felt no more need to support Exar Kun and the Sith. In the end, Ulic led the Jedi to Yavin 4, where they were able to defeat Kun and quell the Sith uprising. Ten years later, Ulic fled to Rhen Var in an effort to isolate himself from the galaxy and to find peace. He thought to let himself die in a storm, but the spirit of Master Arca urged him to survive. He was unprepared for the arrival of Vima Sunrider, who wanted him to teach her the ways of the Jedi. Despite his misgivings, Ulic realized that this was why Master Arca had urged him to live. He took Vima under his tutelage, and trained her to the best of his abilities. He even tried to be civil when Nomi arrived on Rhen Var to recover her daughter. However, shortly after Nomi's arrival, Sylvar came to the planet and challenged him to a duel. Sylvar had the advantage of contact with the Force, but Ulic fought bravely in an effort to return Sylvar to the Light Side of the Force. Sylvar came to her senses, but was too focused on herself to notice that Hoggon had followed her. Hoggon shot Ulic in the back with his blaster, believing that he had killed the greatest traitor of the Jedi order. Despite the fact that Ulic no longer had contact with the Force, his lifeless body nonetheless disappeared and became part of the Force. (TOJ, FNU, DA, DE1, DLS, TSW, EGC, TOJC, TOJR)

Qella

this alien race has a rare, eighteen-pair genetic structure built from six unique building blocks and contained in 62 chromosomes, and communicated via a series of pitch-based transmissions. Their civilization had descended from the earlier Ahra Naffi, but had no children of their own when it was discovered that the two moons which orbited their homeworld of Brath Qella were on a collision course with the planet. The vast majority of the Qella agreed with the evaluation that the moons' impact would cause ecological ruin on their homeworld, while a few were adamant that the threat was being overblown. Those who understood and believed the threat created the starship which would later become known as the Teljkon vagabond, and created a device which could house vast amounts of data on what the Qella held as important and necessary information. It also carried the blueprints of how to genetically rebuild the Qella race, should that become necessary. These Qella dug deep tombs in which to hibernate during the foretold ice age. The ship departed Brath Qella about 120 years before the Galactic Civil War, just after the Old Republic had first discovered their world. The smaller of the two moons of Brath Qella impacted the larger, and the resulting storm of huge pieces of rock virtually destroyed the planet. The Qella who remained on the surface of the planet were killed in the ensuing - and almost instantaneous - ice age. By the time a survey ship could return to the planet, it was deserted. The Teljkon vagabond eventually returned to Brath Qella, shortly after the Battle of N'zoth, and began the laborious process of re-warming Brath Qella and making it habitable again for the Qella. (BTS, TT)

Qes Dollis

this Quarren worked for Jabba the Hutt as the manager of the Sandstorm Shipping Concern, during the height of the New Order. Dollis was one of the many underlings who worked for Jabba, yet took a chance on seizing control of the Hutt's empire when Jabba was killed just prior to the Battle of Endor. Dollis' main competition came from Kisa Shaki, and the two spent most of their resources pummeling each other's forces, and neither was able to take advantage of Jabba's death. (RESB)

Qesya Vth'naar

this Sludir was a member of the FarStar's crew. Before joining the Alliance, Qesya, her brother Quayik, and her mate Rokarn were forced to fight in gladiator battles for Imperial Moff Kentor Sarne on Kal'Shebbol. In a series of battles, Sarne forced Quyk to kill Rokarn before facing Qesya herself. Rokarn had sacrificed himself in order to give Quyk a chance to live, since he knew that Qesya was pregnant with their child. In the end, though, Sarne forced Qesya to kill her brother in order to survive. Qesya joined the crew of the FarStar after being liberated from Sarne's prison on Kal'Shebbol, and served as a combat instructor. During the search for Moff Sarne, she befriended Gunthar, and became increasingly worried about his demeanor as the FarStar probed deeper into the Kathol Rift. Shortly after the FarStar landed on Yvara, Qesya discovered that it was time to give birth to her offspring. She was brought to the ship's medical facility, where the ship's doctors and Yvarema physicians helped her give birth. Following the birth of her baby, Qesya elected to resign her commission with the FarStar and remain on Yvara to raise the child. Qesya later returned to assist the FarStar during the Battle of Kathol, as the Yvarema joined the fight against the Imperials. (DARK, KO, KR, E)

Q'et

this creature was bred by the Yuuzhan Vong as a kind of living sac. It was useful for transporting other living entities, such as a villip, which needed to be preserved for later use. (FP)

Qetix IV

this barren moon was located in the Dresscol System of Trax Sector. During the Galactic Civil War, the Alliance established a starfighter repair base on the moon, to support the shipyards in the nearby Ventil System. (GMK)

Qe'u

this Yuuzhan Vong was one of the Shamed Ones who was sent to Yavin 4 to serve the Shapers who were trying to determine the source of The Force. When Vua Rapuung was believed dead, Qe'u was given his duties. However, Vua Rapuung had faked his death, and later killed Qe'u to gain access to the Yuuzhan Vong complex for himself and Anakin Solo. (EVC)

Qeuo City

this city, located on the planet Stend VI, was besieged by the Khuiumin Survivors until shortly after the Battle of Yavin, when they simply stopped attacking the city. (SWJ10)

Qexis

this planet, located in the Outer Rim Territories, was almost completely given over to research and experimentation. Qexis was noted for the high level of security that protected the various research facilities established on its surface. (SOJ)

Qexi's

this cantina was located in the frontier settlement of Great Rock, on the planet Ord Mantell, during the height of the New Order. (GMR1, WOA15)

QFC

see Quality of Family Certificate (FC)

Qhal

this predator was once native to the Yuuzhan Vong homeworld of Yuuzhan'tar. (FP)

Qiaxx

this planet was the site of Dequc's base of operation. Note that it is often misspelled Quiaax or Quiaac. (MJEH)

Qid

this name was commonly given to Quarren males, and meant "quick-witted". (GCG)

Qid Proko

this Quarren was working as a speeder repairman on the planet Poderis, during the years surrounding the Battle of Hoth. Unknown to most other beings, Proko was once a Jedi Knight. He fled the Core Worlds

when the first word of the Jedi Purge reached his ears, and he chose Poderis for its remote location. (RESB)

Qieg

this small, insectoid race is native to the planet Lan Barell. Each Qieg had three body segments, including the head and two abdomens, supported by four legs. The rear set of legs was made for jumping, which the front set were for walking. A pair of arms on the upper torso allowed the Qieg to manipulate objects. A hive society, the Qieg cared little for the individual. Even child were simply individuals, and all offspring were raised regardless of their familial relationships. They live inside the hollowed-out carcasses of cactus-like succulents, and live in groups of 20 or more. They have been mining the planet's three moons for profit, but have reduced one of the moons to rubble. In fact, many of the off-world mining interests modeled their operations after the Qieg system, forming cooperatives rather than trying to be successful as individual corporations. (SWJ1, AE)

Qiernal

a radical sect of Qiegs from the planet Lan Barell that dislike all humanity and live within the cactus forests. (SWJ1)

Qiemmo Adrangar

this was one of the smaller Ansionian overclans, made up from the Alwari who lived west of the city of Cuipernam, on the planet Ansion. (APS)

Qiilura

this ostensibly neutral planet saw a great deal of combat during the early stages of the Clone Wars. It was a remote world that was best-known for its production of barq and kushayan. The export of these and other luxury foodstuffs accounted for some fifty percent of the entire galactic market, although very little of the profit ever made it back to the farmers. Shortly after the Battle of Naboo, the Trade Federation took control of the exports, and used their profits to help fund the Confederacy of Independent Systems. When the Old Republic discovered that Ovolot Qail Uthan, a Separatist-funded scientist, was developing a deadly nanovirus at a facility on the planet, they were forced to launch a mission to Qiilura. The nanovirus was targeted specifically at the clone troopers, and would have given the Separatists a huge advantage. A team of clone commandos, ostensibly led by Jedi Padawan Etain Tur-Mukan, was able to infiltrate the facility and capture Uthan before destroying the nanovirus. The mission was greatly assisted by the help of the native Gurlanin, who refused to fully join the Republic. Qiilura was located in the Tingel Arm of the galaxy, some forty light-years from Ord Mantell, and was orbited by a single moon. (RCHC)

QL-2a

this speeder truck was developed and manufactured by Ubrikkian Industries, during the height of the New Order. It could carry a pilot and two passengers, and could accommodate up to 50 metric tons of cargo. It measured twelve meters in length. (GMR5)

Qlaeren

this was one of the many Vratix hives which lived on the planet Thyferra. (UANT)

Qlaeren Rhirr

this was the name of a distinguished member of the Vratix hive Qlaeren. (UANT)

Qlaern Hirf

this Vratix member of the Ashern Circle tipped off the New Republic that the Warlord Zsinj was in possession of bacta, during the Krytos crisis. He approached Wedge Antilles and made the Rogue Squadron commander an offer: a gift of highly-potent bacta in exchange for sponsorship for admittance to the New Republic for the Vratix. He also presented his services as a verachen, in hopes that he could examine the Krytos virus and develop bacta that would defeat it. Wedge agreed, and Qlaern Hirf's team was able to discover the ability of kor ryll to enhance bacta. They provided the New Republic with the ability to produce its own rylca, but Wedge was unable to immediately petition for the Vratix's application. Ysanne Isard had taken control of Thyferra, and the question of planet-wide acceptance needed to be answered first. (KT)

Qlothos

this cloudy, defenseless world was inadvertently attacked by a squadron of TIE Bombers dispatched from the Interrogator by a subordinate of Captain Vharing. Vharing himself had been asleep, but the misplaced raid resulted in the death of sixty people, including a high-ranking Kuat Drive Yards engineer and his family, who had been on vacation at the time. Vharing was executed for the error. (TFNR)

Q'Maere

this planet was located just inside the Kathol Rift, a short distance from Danoor. Of course, actually reaching Q'Maere took a skilled crew more than a week's time. The planet was the site of a scientific outpost established by the University of Sanbra. The crew of the FarStar made a run for Q'Maere, shortly after entering the Rift, when they discovered that the food stores they had obtained at Danoor were contaminated. The planet itself was an inhospitable world covered with ammonia seas, which were sparsely dotted with volcanic islands. The atmosphere was poisonous, and there was no known life on the planet. The average day on Q'Maere lasted 36 hours, and its year encompassed 344 local days. (KR)

Q'Maere Research Facility

this University of Sanbra planetology research outpost was established on the planet Q'Maere, where it could investigate the workings of a planet covered with ammonia seas. The station was covertly turned into a penal facility by Moff Sarne, shortly after a group of its scientists left to join the Qektoth Confederacy. When it was discovered by the crew of the FarStar during a stopover to obtain supplies, the facility was operating as a cross between a prison and a mental institution. (KR)

Q'mai

the Kamarian word for "offering," it is used in reference to any form of payment given to obtain fulfillment of fantasies or dreams. Han Solo thought it meant "admission," since the Kamarians used it in reference to the trinkets and gems they gave him in return for showing the holofeature Varn, World of Water. He discovered the word's true meaning when he tried to show Love is Waiting and the Kamarians started to tear down his holoprojector. (HSR)

Q'mara

this planet and its surrounding star system was known as a haven for pirates during the New Order. (GUN)

Q'nithian Aeropteryx

this is a species of sentient avians from the Q'nithian System. They are quite ugly in appearance, being covered with dingy gray feathers and equally gray skin. Their wings are useless, rendering the aeropteryx flightless, and its small legs are incapable of supporting their bodies. Thus, the aeropteryx must drag itself forward with the tips of its wings. The tips end with a small hand that it tipped with a pair of talons. Their two beady, black eyes provide minimal ability to actually see what's around them. Thus, many aeropteryx who travel the galaxy have specialized lenses to augment their natural sight. (MA)

Qol, Viran

this man was a Major in the Alliance's Special Forces unit, and was an expert on Imperial fortification engineering. A native of Niran, he graduated from college just day before the Empire subjugated the planet. Viran joined the Niran Resistance, which was eventually absorbed into the Alliance. Viran regularly lectured on the construction and defense of Imperial garrisons to new recruits. (SWJ12)

Qom Jha

this is one of two major factions of the winged creatures native to the caves of Nirauan. Like their brethren the Qom Qae, they resemble meter-tall avians with smooth skin and small heads. They have dark eyes that allow them to see in the dark, and hard talons that allow them to grip the stone of their lairs. The Qom Jha had lighter skin than the Qom Qae, and were slightly larger in size. They have a minor control of the Force, and can use it to telepathically communicate among themselves and with other Force-sensitives. The Qom Jha, however, live in the caves, while the Qom Qae live in the open air. They referred to Luke Skywalker as "Walker of Sky." (VOF, EGA)

They have a minor control of the Force, and can use it to telepathically communicate among themselves and with other Force-sensitives. However, the Qom Qae live in the open air of the planet, while the Qom Jha inhabit the caves. The adults were quite territorial, but they allowed the young to freely mix with other nestings. This was probably a way for them to gather information about other nestings without violating territorial boundaries. They referred to Luke Skywalker as "Jedi Sky Walker." (VOF, EGA)

Qonto

an alien race. (RM)

Qordis

this ancient Sith Lord existed only as a spirit avatar when the Brotherhood of Darkness was destroyed on Ruusan. Lord Qordis had been part of the command structure put in place by Lord Kaan, and had died in the explosion of the thought bomb that killed everyone on Ruusan - except his student, Darth Bane. Qordis appeared to Darth Bane shortly afterward, aboard the Valcyn, belittling Bane and calling him a coward for having survived the detonation of Lord Kaan's thought bomb. Darth Bane refused to be baited by Qordis' spirit, however, so Qordis extended one last time beyond the grave and severely damaged the Valcyn, shortly before it arrived on Dxun. Qordis hoped to make Darth Bane's life a living hell, for having survived Ruusan. (GMR3)

Qorih

this lowly creature was once native to the Yuuzhan Vong homeworld of Yuuzhan'tar. It was considered a low form of life, lacking any sort of predatory instincts or usefulness. (FP)

Qork

this Nebulon-B2 frigate was part of the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Qorl

an Imperial TIE Fighter pilot who fought in the Battle of Yavin, Qorl was caught in X-Wing defensive fire and forced to crash-land on Yavin 4. Badly injured, he managed to survive there for over twenty years, until he was discovered by Jacen Solo. Qorl held the Solo twins hostage until they repaired his ship, which he took. Employing the hyperdrive installed by Jaina Solo, Qorl left the Yavin System. Qorl then joined the Second Imperium and served as a pilot and trainer aboard the Shadow Academy. His damaged body was repaired with cybernetic implants, including his entire left arm. He successfully captured the Adamant and obtained valuable hyperdrive cores, turbolasers, and shield codes for the Imperium's fleet. In the climactic battle between the Shadow Academy and the Jedi on Yavin 4, Qorl was again shot down by the New Republic fleet. He was presumed dead, but decided that he'd had enough of galactic conflicts and remained a hermit in the jungles of Yavin 4. Qorl reappeared two years later, when the Peace Brigade tried to capture the students at the Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4. Aging but still fiesty, Qorl had finally given up the fight to preserve the Empire, and helped Anakin Solo and Tahiri Veila escape the moon by keeping an eye on Remis Vehn and remaining near the moon until the last possible moment. (HTF, SA, L, JUS, EVC) alternately known as the most docile and the most fearsome forest animal on the planet Yeshocq, the qormot was merely reacting to seasonal changes in its environment. During the warm months of spring and summer, they are peaceful herbivores which fought only to defend themselves from other predators. However, as the weather turned colder and mating season approached, they became territorial about their prospective mates. Competition for the best mates almost always resulted in fierce battles, and beings were warned to stay away from qormot territory during this time. Qormots resembled large, ovine beasts, with stout bodies and a series of spiked frills surrounding their heads. Each qormot had a single eye, located atop a long, bony snout. (COG)

Qormot

Qorn

this was a common name used by the Geonosian race. (UANT)

Qornah

this Jedi Master was known to have trained Kibh Jeen. Together, they were part of the team dispatched to investigate dark-side energy which permeated the planet Almas. Qornah was unprepared for the Dark Side's assault on Kibh Jeen's mind. Thus, upon landing on Almas, Qornah was cut down from behind by his own apprentice and killed before any investigation could take place. (LFC)

Qotile

this planet was ravaged by war during the Stark Hyperspace Conflict. When a military deserter fled to Qotile and established himself as King, during the height of the Galactic Civil War, the bounty hunter Bossk was employed to eliminate him. For his efforts, Bossk was given the honorary title "Monarch of the Qotile System." (NEGC, MC67)

Qretu 5

this planet, ringed by a dense asteroid belt, was the site of bacta production facility Q5A7. (BW)

Qrikki

a sweet, bread-like substance produced by the Ssi-ruuk. (TBSB)

Qrrl Toq

Qrrl Toq was a Nazzar prince and Jedi Knight who fought in the Battle of Koros Minor and who was present at the Jedi Assembly on Deneba. He was trained in the ways of the Ulizra by Vrrk Jikat, but needed to take time off to perform his boqeri. During this time, he traveled to Ulda Frav and encountered a Jedi Knight for the first time. He had never heard of the Jedi - the Nazzar were very isolationist in their relationship with the galaxy - but the Jedi knew that Qrrl was strong with the force. Qrrl agreed to accompany the Jedi to Ossus, and there he discovered the Jedi way. Toq was an apprentice of the Jedi Master Vodo Siosk-Baas, and created many of the armor types worn by the Jedi of the time. He was nearly killed on Onderon by Dark Side treachery when the Naddists there drained the Light Side energy that was protecting the Jedi Knights. (FNU, DLS, TOJC)

Qrrulla

this was a common name among the Togorian race. (UANT)

QS100

an automated welding arm. This automaton was named for the robotic device that Dark Forces lead programmer Ray Gresko programmed in a previous assignment. (DF)

QS-2D

this heavily-modified administrative droid was owned by a pair of Twi'leks who tried to scout the moon of Uffel. When the Twi'leks were killed, QS-2D and his R4-series astromech companions R4-S2 and R4-J9 persevered, surveying the planet and starting up a small mining operation with the automata the Twi'leks had brought. Over time, QS-2D established a relationship with Riboga the Hutt, and the mining operation expanded quickly. All during this time, QS-2D continued to work under its former master's name, so as not to draw attention to itself. When QS-2D had built a small fortune, it bought out Riboga and took ownership of Uffel outright. QS-2D grew the Uffel mining operation into a droid manufacturing center, and produced some of the Old Republic's highest-quality specialty droids. (LFC)

Q-series Destroyer Droid

this was the official designation of the droideka, or destroyer droid, produced by the Colicoid Creation Nest for the Trade Federation. (TCG10)

Q-Signal

this was the brand name of Incom's automated messenger droid, developed for use by the fledgeling New Republic. Measuring 6.2 meters in length, these drones were equipped with hyperdrives in order to get messages from one location to another as quickly as possible. The Q-Signal could carry up to 800 kilograms of cargo, which could include datacards and computer cores. (DARK)

QT-3PO

a protocol droid who was captured by Jawas when his master's ship put down at Mos Eisley spaceport for repairs. He was stuck inside a Jawa sandcrawler for an extended period of time before being rescued. (SWSB)

QT-7

this droid appears to be nothing more than a large, high-tech suitcase. A cheerful droid which loved to play sabacc, QT-7 was instrumental in helping the Alliance recover the Black Ice. QT-7 was able to tap into the Imperial computer system on Lotide and recover coded files that detailed the actions of replenishment fleet DV-209. This information allowed the Alliance to intercept the Black Ice and steal its cargo of fuel cells. (BI)

Qu, Anistia

this woman, a native of the planet Cularin, was one of several hundred natives who disappeared from public view during the years following the onset of the Clone Wars. Many people secretly attributed these disappearances to the Thaereian Military, which spent the nighttime hours removing an vocal opponents to its control of the Cularin System. (LFCW)

Quaal Stavi Giniras

this legendary Bitthaevrian warrior was a Major in the Guiteica Militia, and was best-known for his decades-long feud with Major Zoul Lavor Xariv Lar. The pair fought each other more than 400 times, each time inflicting heavy damage to the other. However, both warriors were back challenging each other as soon as they healed. Over fifty years' time, Lar had defeated Giniras 212 times to Giniras' 211 victories. Only the fact that Giniras died of old age stopped the rivalry. In the end, Lar took one of his own elbow quill and imbedded it in Giniras' dematoil, which he buried with Giniras in the hills of s'Korth'an. (AIR)

Quaal Tavier Catharius

this Bitthaevrian was the thirt-first leader of the m'Yalfor'ac Order, at the height of the New Order. He was one of the most famous heroes of the Bitthaevrian people, mainly for his prowess in battle but also for his anti-Republic rhetoric. With the advent of the New Order, Tavier recognized that the Empire was corrupt and wicked, but it was also the lesser of two evils, and was better than the Old Republic. (AIR) this game of strategy and skill was popular during the early days of the Imperial Academy, but lost some of its appeal during the height of the New Order. After the Battle of Endor, it once again became popular with Imperial officers. (IF)

Quadrant

Quadrant Seven

this planet was located beyond the borders of the Old Republic, during the decades leading up to the Battle of Naboo. It was a temperate world that supported a race of humanoid beings, also known as Quadrant Sevens. Much of the planet was pristine, natural land, and the Quadrant Sevens worked hard to maintain the ecosystem. (SOJ)

Quadrant Seven

this race of humanoid beings was native to the planet Quadrant Seven. They were shorter than the average human, with pointed ears and a collection of fine antennae on their heads that looked like hair. The antennae were used to "read" the wind and other disturbances in the air. As a people, the Quadrant Seven race refrained from adopting high-technology, and even went so far as to use a BlocNet to eliminate comlink communications during the final decades of the Old Republic. Their rationale was simply that comlinks made distances smaller and problems bigger. They prided themselves on the fact that the last war on Quadrant Seven occurred more than 570 years before the onset of the Clone Wars, and that the environment of Quadrant Seven wasn't polluted with toxic wastes and industrial refuse. (SOJ)

Quadra-Pod

this was a type of podracer, distinguishable by its four turbine engines. This configuration places a high level of emphasis on the energy binders that keep the engines in place, as most stock binders are designed to support just two engines. Under the heavy strain of a podrace, the energy binders of the Quadra-Pod configuration sometimes give way, releasing the engines to fly off in different directions. (TPM)

Quadrenium

this precious ore was mined on the planet Averill during the New Order, and was refined for use in the construction of starships. (SWJ13)

Quadrex

see Quadex (SCRE)

Quadri

this was one of the sectors of the northern half of the city of Zehava, and was inhabited by the Daan some twenty years before the Battle of Naboo. (UP)

Quadrijet 4Barrel 904E

see Quadrijet 4Barrel 940E (NEGC)

Quadrijet 4Barrel 940E

this was a model of podracer manufactured by Bin Gassi Racing Engines. It was famous for its massi, spherical engines and its elongated cockpit. The cockpit itself measured 6.86 meters in length, and the engines measured 7.39 meters across. It was capable of achieving speeds in excess of 790 kilometers per hour. (IG1)

Quadrijet Air Brake

this was the most powerful air brake available to pod racers, employing four reverse-thrust jets to increasing stopping power. (RAC)

Quadrillium

this mineral is found in abundance in many asteroids, including the Tava Yagen field. (CTD)

Quadro

this boxy musical instrument produced a wide range of deep, thrumming notes. (MBS)

Quadronomic Fluxer

this starship drive component was rumored to have the ability to provide an incredible boost of power to virtually any standard drive system. While the quadronomic fluxer had no effect on a starship's hyperdrive, it was believed to have the capability to improve a sublight drive's speed by twenty percent or more. Shortly after the onset of the Galactic Civil War, the plans for the Fluxer were put up for auction by the Nessesmites, who hoped to sell them at a great profit. Before the auction could take place, however, the plans for the fluxer were stolen by the Transdoshan mercenary Ssorku. His theft was surmised by a team of Alliance operatives, who cornered him in the Starbirth Lounge and recovered the plans. However, the device was never built by the Alliance. (WOA12)

QuadStar

this was the name of Solomahal's modified YV-888 freighter. (WOA34)

Quaensan Prime

this planet was wiped out by the Lortans during the Reslian Purge. (GG12)

Quaestor

this Old Republic Star Battlecruiser was one of the many ships that participated in the early stages of the Clone Wars. However, during a mission to the Quarren-held planet of Pammant, the Captain of the Quaestor brought the ship out of hyperspace too late. Instead of arriving in open space, the ship reverted to realspace within the crust of the planet. The resulting explosion of the Quaestor's reactor core set off an intense, nuclear detonation, fracturing the planet to its core and bathing it in radioactivity. (X3)

Quaffug

this long-limbed Hutt once lost a fortune to Lando Calrissian, including the rights to the Ceramo-Werx facility, during a sabacc match at the Rafa Chabalrussa, during the early years of the New Order. Quaffug maintained a grudge against Calrissian for many years, retiring to the Blimph System in order to restore his criminal empire from scratch. When the Alliance chose Lando to negotiate a treaty with Quaffug, the Hutt had Lando imprisoned and subjected to the Duff-Jikab. Quaffug hired Bossk, Dengar, 4-LOM, and Guchluk to hunt down Lando, but they were unprepared when the gambler befriended the native Jokhalli warriors. The four bounty hunters were quickly captured and returned to Quaffug, who was forced to return control of Blimph 3 to the Jokhalli, in return for Lando's not turning him over to the natives. Lando also demanded membership in the Hutt Guardsman's Guild, and Quaffug was again forced to accede. Lando later used this membership to infiltrate Jabba the Hutt's fortress on Tatooine, under the guise of Tamtel Skreej. (BHSW)

Quagga

this Wookiee was 210 years old at the time of the Battle of Endor. He was known for his skills in restoring vintage starships and vehicles, and tried to establish his own business on the outskirts of Mos Eisley. However, his remote location, his exorbitant prices, and pesky Jawas kept him from making a decent living. In order to pay his bills and try to get ahead, Quagga was forced to enter Jabba the Hutt's series of demolition derbies, flying his beautifully-restored Trade Federation AAT repulsortank into battle against a variety of contestants. (SWD)

Quagga's Garage

this starship restoration and repair operation was owned by the Wookiee Quagga, and was located on the planet Tatooine during the early years of the New Republic. (NEGW)

Quaghen

this creature is native to the planet Tzarib. They travel in slow-moving swarms, and are easy to capture. (CSWEA)

Quagmire, The

this was the nickname of the Alliance's DVL-181 outpost. (HAS)

Quald Runium

this valuable ore was often found in meteors. (HFAS)

Quality Electronics of Torina

this small corporation, based on the planet Torina, was known for its cheap imitations of modern galactic technology. (PG3)

Quality of Family Certificate

this Imperial document provided information about a potential officer's family history, including any Imperial military service. For most officers, the QFC was a validation of their abilities. For those potential officers who failed to score highly on the Standard Officer's Intelligence Test, it allowed them to receive a second chance at becoming an officer. (FC)

Quallung Tula

this male Aqualish was a pirate of some renown during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. He worked briefly with Meeko Ghintee before the Muttani was arrested, and later worked with Sabo Leeda, Grillo Zaman, Bado Karpa, and Tuba Acho to steal fuel cells from the Outland Transit Station during Ghintee's escape from Oovo IV. However, a bounty was placed on all their heads by Rozatta, and Quallung Tula was captured by Jango Fett shortly afterward. (BH)

Qualo

this native of Arda-2 was one of the governmental leaders of the city Tun Wala. (CSWEA)

Qual'om Soach

this Twi'lek was a native of Ralme IV, where he parents worked as miners for the Lant Mining Corporation

after escaping from slavery. Soach himself worked as a miner before getting involved in several less-than-legal activities. Soach found that he had a knack for crime, and he eventually took control of most of Ralme's black market operations. He desired more power than what he had on Ralme IV, hoping one day to take control of all of Brak Sector. He made a deal with Jabba the Hutt, gaining the Hutt's support in return for a percentage of Soach's profits. With the partnership, Soach was able to take control of almost a third of the criminal activity in Brak Sector, and began bumping heads with Ral Nalmar. Soach quickly lost patience with the normal squabbles between the two organizations, and launched an all-out attack on the Nalmar estate in the city of Mennia, on Genesia. Soach believed that his troubles were over when Ral Nalmar was killed, but he was dismayed to learn that Eelien Kirat had assumed control of the Nalmar organization. (FBS)

Qualtrough

this planet was locked in an intense civil war when it was first discovered by the Jedi Knights traveling aboard the Chu'unthor, many centuries before the Battle of Yavin. The Jedi were able to negotiate a truce, allowing the natives of Qualtrough to join the Old Republic. This was one of many events which served to promote the mission of the Chu'unthor. (PJSB)

Quamar Messenger

a starship which, on its maiden run, was single-handedly hijacked by Gallandro. It was crewed by 45 people serving up to 600 passengers, and was equipped with a hyperdrive. (HSL, CSA)

Quambah

this physical game was played by the children of the planet Vernet. (SWJ15)

Quamilla

this Orfite word is used to describe two or more quamin. (POT, SWG8, TOD)

Quamin

native to the jungles of Kidron, these flying predators are silent and aggressive. In the Orfite language, the plural form is quamilla. Swarms of quamin attack in packs, making a series of small attacks on larger creatures which open small wounds on their prey's skin. These creatures then latch onto their prey and suck out the blood and other vital fluids, eventually killing the larger prey. The favored prey of the quamilla is the sodbeast. The average quamin is nearly two meters in length, and has hollow bones supporting its body. Its leathery wings are edged with razor-sharp hooks, and their spiked tail is often used as a weapon. Their faces are actually a collection of sponge-like organs which are used to suck the bodily fluids from their prey. (POT, TOD, COG)

Quammo

this Sludir worked as Guttu the Hutt's majordomo during the height of the New Order. (SWJ15)

Quandary

this tramp freighter transported Tinian I'att and her companions from Ksiczzic III, after they had fled from Imperial forces on Druckenwell. (SWJ6)

Quannith

this Imperial Governor was in charge of the planet Siluria III until he was attacked and killed by the resistance led by Kaiya Adrimetrum. (GG9)

Quannot's Disease

an inexplicable, degenerative disease which attacks the nervous system and causes body-wide deterioration. (COJ)

Quant

this was a common name among the Toydarian race. (WOTC, UANT)

Quanta Sector

this area of the galaxy was controlled by Imperial Moff Jerjerrod, before his posting at Endor during the construction of the second Death Star. (SWDB)

Quantana

this bounty hunter started out life as a street rat from Lopor Station. He had a strong sense of family, and was known to be cool under pressure. (GG10)

Quanta-technology

this ancient, but not understood, technology was developed by the Gree race at the height of their civilization. (SWJ8)

Quantill City

this was the largest city of the planet Ando, and was one of the few situated on solid land. The environs of the city were clearly divided into Aquala areas and Quara areas. (SWJ11)

Quanto

a large alien with a squarish body and thin legs, he appears to have a hard, ivory-colored exoskeleton. He worked with Gudb and Rek for the Stenness system's local Hutt crimelord, but was killed by Nomi Sunrider following their attack on her husband, Andur. (TOJ)

Quanton

Airen Cracken was subjected to Imperial interrogation under the influence of Bavo Six, after being captured on this planet during the Galactic Civil War. (CFG)

Quantrax Creek

a fertile farm area located on the planet Makthierse. (COG)

Quantum Crystal

a frozen form of crystal which emits strong energy in the form of X-radiation. Often these are small crystals with specific applications. The smaller of the two stars that formed the Crseih system was condensed into a huge quantum crystal. Its energy emissions were so strong that they eventually warped the very fabric of the Force. This, when combined with the suffering induced by Hethrir in the prisons on Crseih Station, caused the being Waru to be pulled into the galaxy. (CS)

Quantum Fiber

developed some twenty years after the Battle of Endor, this material was used to create blast-proof vests and armor. It was later combined with molytex to create laminanium armor. (SBS)

Quantum RAM

developed by the Empire, this form of random-access memory was used in the most sophisticated droids. It employed near-molecular storage systems, allowing for nearly immediate access to information and cycles. (AFA)

Quantum Storm

this Gallofree Yards medium transport ship was the first Alliance cargo ship to successfully escape the Battle of Hoth. Its flight proved the worth of the v-150 ion cannon, as a single blast from the cannon incapacitated an Imperial-class Star Destroyer and allowed other transports to leave with minimal escort. (EBSR, SWTJ)

Quantum-crystalline armor

the type of armor used to shield the Sun Crusher, it is made from layering just a few densely-stacked atoms on top of another layer that is phase-shifted. It is nearly indestructible. (JS)

Quantum-resolution Generation Device

an extremely expensive food generation system, it can create any food matter from a basic bulk matter. (SS)

Quanya

this was a potent liquor which was popular among smugglers during the early years of the New Order. (T16)

Quar Rat

this vicious creature was considered a pest in the sewers of Barancar Port. (SWJ8)

Quara

one of two factions of Aqualish living on the planet Ando, the Quara have adapted to living on the planet's small islands. The Quara are also known as the fingered Aqualish, since they have fingers instead of the paddle-like fins of the Aquala. While they make up just ten percent of the Aqualish population, the Quara considered themselves higher socially and genetically, and eventually moved out of the water and lived on the smaller islands and in the swamps of Ando. The Aquala claimed that the Quara were responsible for the gradual decline in the fish population of Ando's oceans, and started a civil war that lasted several generations. The war was ended when an exploration vessel of unknown origins landed on Ando, and the two sides stopped fighting each other and destroyed their visitors. The two groups then reverse-engineered the ship and discovered how to fly it and then build their own ships, although the process was painstakingly slow for the non-technical Aqualish. The uneasy truce was soon broken, and the two groups took their battle to Ando's sister planet, utterly destroying it. (GG4)

Quarantine

this was the name used by the Outbound Flight Colony to describe the makeshift prison they established in the remains of Outbound Flight's D-Six Dreadnaught. Chak Fel and the Aurek-Seven unit of the Imperial 501st Legion discovered that the Quarantine wasn't set aside for criminals, but actually for those children and descendants of the Survivors who manifested any sort of connection to the Force. These individuals were first held in Quarantine until the Outbound Flight Colony was convinced of the strength of their connection. If true powers were demonstrated by an individual, they were incarcerated in the D-Three Dreadnaught, which was all but impossible to reach. (SQ)

Quarg

this fat governor of the planet Drexel One commanded a huge ship that operated in the oceans of the planet, making war against the sea-dragons and their Dragon Lord masters. Quarg was eventually unseated by Luke Skywalker and Han Solo. His father was the former Governor of the Kortein Asteroid Belt, who hated the Old Republic for snooping into his business. Quarg's father fled to the Drexel System when the Old Republic interrupted his "mining activities", which were actually piratical ambushes of cargo ships. His father had been using sonic jammers to wreck ships near the belt and salvage their cargo. Quarg continued in his father's footsteps, using the jammers to cause pain to the sea-dragons, which felt intense pain in the ultrasonic ranges they were used to communicating with. Quarg's machinesmiths managed to drag Luke Skywalker's ship out of orbit, during his mission to scout the system, and Quarg forced Luke to help him repair many of his hydra-craft in preparation for destroying the Dragon Lords. When Crimson Jack arrived in the system hoping to locate lost treasure, Quarg ordered his forces to drag the massive pirate ship out of orbit. Crimson Jack's arrival coincided with a massive attack by the Dragon Lords, and Quarg tried to fight both battles at once. Unfortunately, the power needed to drag the pirate ship from orbit drew power from his own propulsion systems, leaving him adrift in the ocean. When Luke attempted to rescue Leia Organa, he managed to knock Quarg off the central mast of his ship. Quarg fell to his death, drowning in the churning seas. (MC12, MC13, MC14)

Quarkmeter

this was a type of sensor that was part of a starship's standard equipment. (SWJ3)

Quarle, Daven

a native of the planet Verkuyl, this man was an aide to Imperial Governor Parco Ein, and was placed in charge of the selection of a corporation to build a bacta refinery on Verkuyl. Unknown to agent Selby Jarrad, Quarle was also a member of the resistance on Verkuyl, and was working with the New Republic to remove the yoke of Imperial control. Unknown to the Republic, Quarle was actually a double-agent, working primarily for Governor Ein. He used his connection with Selby to determine that the Republic was planning to send in a fleet and liberate Verkuyl. He then alerted Ein to the fleet's arrival, and doublecrossed Selby. Ein later revealed that Daven hated his grandfather, Corlin Quarle Deld, and helped the Empire take control of Verkuyl. Selby learned of his duplicity, and shot him at point-blank range. (TFNR)

Quarlitech Aergronics, Incorporated

this corporation produced a wide range of exercise equipment during the height of the New Order. (GFT)

Quarlo

this independent spacer witnessed the subjugation of Hyrol Preen Beta by the Empire. (FTD)

Quarmall

this former Jedi Knight was lost to the Old Republic during the Clone Wars. He was known to have accompanied Tassida Judrelle to Cona, during the break-up of Lojrak Shrag's slat smuggling ring, just before the Battle of Geonosis. He was captured and twisted into an agent of the Dark Side of the Force by Emperor Palpatine. Palpatine trained Quarmall to hide out until something happened to the Empire, which turned out to be the Battle of Endor. After Palpatine's death, Quarmall emerged and began using his skills with the Dark Side to spread a message of intergalactic peace and harmony. The goal was to weaken the New Republic's military by having its leaders "convert" to Quarmall's prophetic message. Quarmall's deception was exposed by a group of fledgling Jedi during one of his rallies. They challenged Quarmall by talking about his true motives, and Quarmall became angry. His true nature was released, and the young Jedi were forced to defeat him. Rumors spread out from Quarmall's supporters that the young Jedi had killed legitimate Jedi Knight working for peace, even after a large crowd witnessed Quarmall's actions. (GMS, HNN5)

Quarra

these domesticated hunting animals were bred by the Devaronian race. The Devaronians used quarra to dispense the death penalty to murderers and assassins, letting loose a pack of the beasts to rip the criminal apart. It was rumored that this practice was the reason the New Republic wouldn't accept Devaron's application for membership. Quarra have inbred instincts that make them attack the soft underbelly of their victims, ripping out the guts while the prey dies. Then, the quarra can consume their prey at leisure. (TBH)

Quarrel

the projectile fired from a bowcaster. They can be set to explode on contact, or a short distance in front of their target. (SW, HSR)

Quarrelgrass

a plant native to Coruscant, it has a distinctive odor. (BTS)

Quarren

a humanoid race native to Calamari's deep oceans, the Quarren were distinguished by their helmet-shaped heads and the mass of tentacles located below their close-set eyes. The Quarren were more accustomed to deep-sea living, and chose to live below the water. Although it has never been scientifically proven that the Quarren evolved from squid-like creatures, their appearance and the fact that they could squirt ink into the water when startled pointed to a similarity between them. Their conservative and solitary nature led them to be unwilling to trust new ideas or lofty concepts. When they first came in contact with the shore-dwelling Mon Calamari who shared their homeworld, the Quarren were hesitant. They eventually began to cooperate with the Mon Cal, and together they developed a symbiotic relationship in which the Quarren provide the raw materials, and the Mon Cal provide the knowledge and expertise; this led to the construction of the huge floating cities that dominate Calamari's oceans. Because of their pragmatic nature, the Quarren did not want to travel and explore the stars, as the Mon Cal did, and this began to create friction between the two races. When the Mon Cal's dream of contact with other stars became the deadly war with the Empire, the Quarren chose to ignore it, leaving the battle to the Mon Calamari who brought it upon themselves. However, the Quarren could not escape the Empire, and it is rumored that a Quarren helped the Empire evade the Calamarian defenses and overtake the planet. Unfortunately, the Quarren were enslaved along with the Mon Cal. When the Mon Cal resisted Imperial rule, the Empire began destroying the floating cities. This served to unite the two races temporarily, and together they were able to solidify their defenses and drive off the Empire with nothing more than crude weapons. After that, there were a number of Quarren who left the planet, seeking a life among the stars as their neighbors the Mon Cal did. (ROTJ, DE1, DA, SWSB, YDR)

Quarren

this was the native language of the Quarren people. (GMR10)

Quarren Crystal

this beautiful glassware rarely makes it off Calamari. (BW)

Quarren Industrial

this Calamarian corporation manufactures the various mining implements used by the Quarren to obtain the valuable ores from the bottom of the Calamari seas. They built the Q-4 borer droid. (DU)

Quarren Isolation League

this band of Quarren was formed just prior to the Clone Wars, in opposition to the reformation of the Mon Calamari Knights. As the galaxy was swept up in the Clone Wars, the Quarren Isolation League sided with Count Dooku and the Separatists, accepting weaponry and technology in an effort to defeat the Mon Calamari and turn the planet over to the Confederacy of Independent Systems. The Quarren had historically felt that they were considered second-class citizens to the Mon Calamari, but their inherently solitary nature seemed to keep them in this position. Senator Tikkes, the Quarren whose corruption was exposed by the Galactic Senate, returned to Calamari and brought the Quarren Isolation League to the forefront. The League demanded that Calamari sever all ties to the Old Republic, and sought to eliminate any opposition - from the Mon Calamari or fellow Quarren. The League was supported by many of the most influential mining operations on the planet, which were led by Quarren and funded by the Commerce Guild, and it accepted advanced underwater warships from the Techno Union. However, as the Clone Wars dragged on, the Quarren Isolation League was eventually defeated by the Mon Calamari Knights, who were supported by Jedi Master Kit Fisto and a squadron of clone troopers. (SWDB, CWC1)

Quarren Sector

this was one section of Crevasse City, located on the planet Kalkovak. It was named for the fact that it was originally settled by a group of Quarren. (UYV)

Quarren Tower

this was one of the largest buildings located on Coral City, on the planet Mon Calamari, during the height of the New Republic. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Quarren Tower served as a residence for many of the dishomed Senators and leaders of the fledgling Galactic Alliance. (UF)

Quarrenese

this was the name given to the native language of the Quarren. (ANT)

Quarr-tellerra

this Wookiee name was given to Bria Tharen, during her work with the Kashyyyk underground resistance. The name means "sun-haired warrior." (RD)

Quarry, The

located in an underwater cavern near the core of the planet Naboo, this was where the Gungans sent their criminals to be punished. During their time there, Gungans were forced to break large stones into small grains of sand, then form them back into stones again. Until Jar Jar Binks was ordered to spend time in the Quarry for letting the specimens of the Otoh Gunga Zoological Research Facility loose, no Gungan had been sent to the Quarry for three generations. Many Gungans had considered the Quarry to be horrendous a punishment, but Boss Nass decided that it would be perfect to try and straighten out Jar Jar. Most of the passages into or out of the Quarry were blocked by grates or bars. (E1A9)

Quarter Moon Street

this avenue was located in the third quadrant of Coruscant's Senate District, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (DH)

Quartermain III

this was one of three Imperial maintenance carriers assigned to the replenishment fleet which contained the Black Ice. (BI)

Quas Killam

this planet, located on the farthest edge of the Mid Rim, was the homeworld of the Killam race. The planet was site of a civil war several years before the Battle of Naboo. The two government factions fought over who would control the planet's trinium resources, and the Jedi Knights were called in to negotiate a settlement. Siri Tachi and her Padawan, Ferus Olin, managed to get one cartel to agree to a large number of concessions, ending the conflict but never truly solving the problem. Ultimately, the cartel allied itself with the Trade Federation, and used the clout of the Federation to crush the other faction and take total control of the planet. (SOJ)

Quasar

this man was the Captain of a luxury liner during the years following the Clone Wars. During a trip which took his ship across the Merson Asteroid Belt, Captain Quasar was forced to enlist the aid of Obi-Wan Kenobi in calming the passengers and defending the ship. Obi-Wan was able to discover the location of a homing signal generator and disabling it, allowing the passenger ship to continue unharmed. (MC24)

Quasar Fire-class Bulk Cruiser

this SoroSuub cruiser-carrier was 340 meters in length, and had a flat, triangular shape. The point of the triangle held the bridge and command section. A long hull brace fanned out behind the bridge, widening into the rear section of the ship. This section, which formed the base of the triangle, was designed to house four squadrons of starfighters (forty-eight in all). The rear section was deep enough to allow incoming ships to land, and was open to space. Only a magnetic field separated the flight deck from space when the ship wasn't at battle stations. The Quasar Fire normally had a crew of 250, more than half of which were starfighter mechanics. It was armed with only a pair of heavy turbolasers, as its mission profile was to deliver its payload of starfighters into the battle then retreat from any engagements. (EGV)

QuasarFire

Taim & Bak ground-based turbolaser turrets which have their own power generators. (CSA)

QuasarKing327

this was the HoloNet codename used by Groz Niclari, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

Quash

this swamp surrounds the communal pool on the planet Ergeshui. (PG2)

Quasiwood

a material which is made from wood and other additives and used to build furniture. (LCM)

Qua'Tahc

this was one of the many mining towns located on the planet Af'El. Qua'Tahc was known for its rich meleenium deposits. (SWJ10)

Quatra

this woman was one of the many Jedi Masters who worked from the base on Dantooine during the years leading up to the Great Sith War, some 4.000 years before the Battle of Yavin. Among her most noted Padawans was the Cathar known as Juhani, who struggled to contain her instincts and the Jedi Code. During a training exercise, Juhani became angry with Quatra's continuous banter, and lashed out at her Master. Quatra was accidentally killed by Juhani's attack, and her death drove the Cathar into the wilderness. (SWDB)

Quatrain Pudundruh

this unsavory Twi'leki entrepreneur worked on the planet Ord Mantell during the height of the New Order.

One of his most lucrative businesses was entertainment, and for a while he managed the sister act of Amaiza and Jodelle Foztrain. However, after a particularly rough season, Quatrain was forced to sell off many of his assets, including the Foxtrain sisters. (GMR4)

Quatreen River

this river wound through Foulahn City, on the planet Cartao, separating the city from the Triv Spaceport. (SWI69)

Quaxcon

this small corporation produced a variety of diagnostic kits during the early years of the New Republic. (TG)

Quay

this round, hard-plastic sphere measured about twenty centimeters in diameter, and used by the Weequay as a sort of communications device. The Weequay believed that they could use the sphere to talk to the moon-god Quay. In reality, the plastic sphere was a simple random response generator. When prompted for a response, the ball would generate a random phrase, such as "It is decidedly so" or "Ask again later." To the Weequay, the quay resembled one of their homeworld's moons, thus giving it even greater significance and a way to communicate with Quay, the god of the moon. (TJP)

Quay

this was the Weequay god of the moon. In their native tongue, "weequay" meant "follower of Quay." Many Weequay continually sought Quay's advice through a device, also called a quay, which seemingly answered their questions. (TJP, GG12)

Quayce

this woman never knew what planet she was born on, but she knew that Shesharile 5 was her home. She joined the swoop gang known as the Rabid Mynocks, and was chosen their leader after the previous leader was killed in a raid. Under Quayce, the Mynocks enjoyed a brief prosperity until the Spiders and the Raging Banthas joined forces against them. Quayce and her core team barely escaped, and vowed to eliminate the rival gangs. To show her defiance of their attempt to kill her, Quayce shaved one side of her head as a reminder. (SWJ6)

Quay'kizac

this village, located well beyond the borders of Meirm City in Sriluur, was a religious retreat for the native Weequay population. (SSR)

Quebe-Luxfause Systems

headquartered on Tatooine during the height of the New Order, this small corporations produced the Queblux line of power generators. (IWSST)

Queblux

this was the common name used to describe Quebe-Luxfause Systems. (IWSST)

Queblux

this was a version of low-grade power sources, used to support small buildings, that was produced by Quebe-Luxfause Systems during the early years of the New Order. (GG7, TME, IWSST)

Quecks

this Phindian was a Major in the Sentient Property Crime Bureau, during the height of the Clone Wars. Quecks was the first Phindian to respond to the presence of Solis and Fidelis on Phindar, when the droids accompanied Whie Malreaux - who was traveling with Jedi Master Yoda to Vjun - after they departed from the Reasonable Doubt. Quecks was unprepared for the actions of Solis during a Separatist attack on the Jedi accompanying Whie. Solis saw an opportunity to abandon the Jedi, and grabbed the neural-net eraser from Quecks' hands, breaking his fingers in the process. Seeing their leader disarmed so easily, the troops supporting Quecks ran for their lives, and Quecks wasn't far behind. (YDR)

Quedlifu

this New Republic Senator served as the chairbeing of the Economics Committee under President Gavrisom. (SOP)

Quednak

this six-legged, reptilian herbivore was domesticated by the Yuuzhan Vong for use as a mount and transport. Because of the variety diets of plants and roots, quednaks were known to be excessively flatulent. Quednaks were also minimally intelligent, able to comprehend the basic commands of their riders. (Y)

Quee

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Quee, Danni

this young woman was one of the original members of the ExGal-4 outpost team sent to the planet Belkadan. The daughter of a bureaucratic father, she was just eighteen at the time, a native of Commenor who hated the oppressive atmosphere of the densely-populated Core planets. Her mother was an astrophysicist who tried to stay out of politics as best she could. Her father was a bureaucrat, and her parents split up when she was still young. Danni claimed that her mother's influence caused her to join the ExGal Society at fifteen, hoping to escape the press of too many people and the demands of government. She thought that she would have her moment of glory when the ExGal-4 station detected an asteroid from beyond the galaxy's rim near Helska, only to find that the asteroid was a Yuuzhan Vong worldship and the advance ship in their invasion of the galaxy. She took the outpost's Spacecaster shuttle to Helska to see what had happened, but was captured by the Yuuzhan Vong and held captive. Although she failed to understand the honor she was given by the Yuuzhan Vong, she realized that she was alive and sought any way to escape. She was held on Helska, and was later joined by Miko Reglia. The Yuuzhan Vong tried to break his will by bombarding him with images of his own failure, but Danni struggled to keep him sane enough to escape. They managed to steal two ooglith cloakers, and tried to get off the planet. Miko sacrificed himself so that Danni and Jacen Solo could escape, and they were rescued by Jaina Solo during the defeat of the Yuuzhan Vong over Helska. Danni returned to Commenor to rest before rejoining the New Republic's efforts to defeat the Yuuzhan Vong. She later accompanied Leia Organa Solo on a mission to Bastion, where they attempted to enlist the aid of Gilead Pellaeon and the Imperial Remnant in battling the Yuuzhan Vong. She found herself more and more attracted to Jacen Solo, despite the difference in their age, and she slowly cultivated a relationship with him. Danni later accompanied Jacen and his uncle, Luke Skywalker, on a mission into the Unknown Regions, where they hoped to find the rogue planet Zonama Sekot. Upon landing on the planet, Danni was amazed at the life force which infused the world. However, the native Ferroans were not convinced of the Jedi's motives, nor was Sekot, the sentient part of the planet. A group of Ferroans attacked their camp and took Danni hostage, and she suffered a concussion in the attack. Sekot had orchestrated the attack to test the Jedi, and both Luke and Jacen were able to convince the planet of their peaceful intentions. Danni was freed, and Zonama Sekot agreed to follow them back to the galaxy. Danni, however, found no solace in the return to the known galaxy, for she had come to the realization that she would never truly be a Jedi Knight. Despite the words of Luke Skywalker and the examples of her latent ability, Danni despaired of ever truly communing with the Force. Her mood didn't improve even when Sekot specifically requested her presence on the surface when the living planet returned to realspace near Coruscant. It was only after Sekot revealed what it had discovered about its own past that Danni discovered what she wanted to do with her life. After battling the Yuuzhan Vong for so long, Danni elected to remain on Zonama Sekot when it returned to the Unknown Regions, in hopes of learning more about the extra-galactic aliens and their bio-technology. Queedle Malto

this being was one of the best swoop racers on the planet Manaan, during the era of the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Queen Aelnari

this is a moderately-priced cruise ship that plies the hyperspace tourist lanes of the Outer Rim. (GG9)

Queen Jesrella

this was the name of the main character in a popular series of holovids, produced during the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo. The series was cut short when its star, Levi Shoen, was murdered on the set. (WOTC)

Queen of Air and Darkness

this sabacc card had a value of plus or minus two. (HT)

Queen of Empire

This Corellian Engineering Corporation luxury liner was owned by the Haj Shipping Lines, and made regular stops at Cloud City during the middle years of the New Order. Measuring 150 meters in length, the Queen of Empire was operated by a crew of 122, which included the pilot, co-pilot, and 120 servants and wait staff. It could accommodate up to 600 passengers and 2,000 metric tons of supplies. Since it was a civilian vessel, the Queen of Empire was only lightly armed, with a pair of double turbolasers being its only weaponry. Bria Tharen boarded the Queen of Empire as Bria Lavval, and was nearly captured by Boba Fett but for the timely intervention of Lando Calrissian. However, Calrissian was unable to rescue her without the timelier intervention of Drea Renthall and her pirates. They had used an asteroid's mass shadow to drag the luxury liner out of hyperspace, and began looting the ship as Fett tried to escape with his prey. Drea stopped the bounty hunter before he could escape, and offered to pay Bria's bounty in return for their safety. Fett had no choice but to agree. The ship was well maintained, and continued to operate throughout the Galactic Civil War and the early part of the New Republic. It was attacked by pirates hired by the Peace Brigade during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, after it was learned that Major Showolter was transporting Elan and Vergere to Coruscant on the ship. (RD, HT, NJOSB)

Queen of Ranroon

a legendary lost starship, sometimes seen by spacers in the depths of space. Legends say that it was filled with the treasure of Xim the Despot, and was on its way to deliver the treasure to Xim's vaults on Dellalt when it was lost. Lanni finds the ship's log-recorder while working in the mines of Dellalt, but she is killed by J'uoch. Hasti and Badure try to recover it and the Queen of Ranroon with the help of Han Solo and Chewbacca, only to discover that the treasure she held was cheap, abundant materials and weapons that Xim hoped to stockpile and use in his galactic conquest. (HSR)

Queen of the Valkyries

this is the name of the starship promised to Belezaboth Ourn by Nil Spaar. The ship was to be payment for the damage done to the Mother's Valkyrie. Spaar kept the starship in the Yevethan fleet protecting N'zoth, claiming it was needed to defend the Yevetha from the New Republic's Fifth Battle Group. This also served to keep Ourn on Coruscant, providing Spaar with a ready source of information on the Republic. (SOL)

Queen Yram's Needle

this tall, thin monument was erected in the city of Theed, on the planet Naboo. (IWE1)

Queen's Monument

erected by the Gungans after the Battle of Naboo, this unique monument was built in honor of Queen Amidala. It symbolized the peace which had been forged between the Naboo and the Gungans, which allowed them to break the Trade Federation's hold on their world. The center of the monument was a stone spire, atop which was set a single light representing the unified planet of Naboo. Five small globes encircled the spire, representing Amidala's virtues of leadership, compassion, beauty, wisdom, and strength. (IG1)

Queen's Own Armored Cavalry Troop

this ground-based unit was a branch of the Atrisian Assault Corps. (ROE)

Queesh

the smaller of Ergeshui's two land masses. (PG2)

Quegh

this man served the Old Republic naval forces as a Captain, and was in command of the Ranger during the mission to liberate the Intergalactic Communications Center from the Separatists, some two and a half years after the Battle of Geonosis. (JT)

Quekka Fish

this flavorful fish was considered a delicacy on many planets. A civil war on the fish's native planet resulted in a toxic waste spill that killed off a huge part of the quekka fish population. (HAS)

Quekka Trench

this twelve-kilometer-deep trench was the site of a Rendeel Industries processing plant, which was made profitable by the canning of the local quekka fish. It was also the site of a battle between local governmental factions, which resulted in a toxic waste spill that killed off the quekka fish population. (HAS)

Quekka Trench Station

this one of the Rendeel Industries' type 07034 processing plants, located deep within the Quekka Trench. This plant processed tons of quekka fish each year, providing the delicate fish to chefs across the galaxy. However, when the local government splintered into warring factions, the Trench became the site of an intense battle. During the struggle, toxic wastes were dumped into the Trench, killing off a huge portion of the quekka fish population. The station survived the battle undamaged, unlike Shelf Station 432. Rendeel abandoned the plant, which was no longer profitable, along with Shelf Station 321. (HAS)

Quelben

this was a common name given to male Duros children. The name Quelben literally meant "bearer to the skies", a reference to the original Duros diaspora. (GCG)

Queldor

this was the name of a turret-mounted pulse laser cannon produced by Taim & Bak. It was first used on the Corellian HT-2200 medium freighter. (SWJ5)

Quelii System

a section of the galaxy ruled by the Warlord Zsinj following the death of Emperor Palpatine at Endor, it includes Dathomir. (CPL)

Quella

Ah Kwan's female companion at Jabba the Hutt's palace. (TJP)

Quella Stone

this beautiful blue gemstone is most famous as the trademark of the master thief known as Tombat. Tombat always left a small blue quella stone at the scene of his crimes. Quella stones were known to be found only in the Alderaan System. (SWJ4, SWJ6, SWJ8)

Quelleg Industrial

this corporation produced a wide range of riot-suppression weapons, including stun rays, during the decades leading up to the Great Sith War. Most of their products were designed for use on droids and other automata, and were designed to be non-lethal. This allowed Quellegh to sell their products on the public market, although much of their marketing was directed toward power-hungry despots and other beings who desired power. (KOTOR)

Quellor

this planet was one of many worlds on which peaceful, anti-Imperial rallies were held in the aftermath of the Battle of Yavin. At one such rally in Terrina Square, Moff Toggan called in a legion of stormtroopers to keep the peace, and he specifically ordered them to hold their fire unless he gave the order. Unfortunately, when the protesters burned an effigy of Emperor Palpatine, the stormtroopers opened fire. All the protesters were incinerated. (RESB)

Que-Mars Redath-Gom

this was the name of a noted Weequay individual. (UANT)

Quenak

this twelve-legged beast was bio-engineered by the Yuuzhan Vong to serve as a mount for their Chazrach troops. (UF)

Quence Sector

this area of the galaxy is found within the Outer Rim Territories. (GG9)

Quench Weed

this plant, found on the planet Naboo, was boiled by the Gungans and reduced to form a powerful adhesive. When placed into water, the boiled quench weed expanded while retaining its adhesive properties, creating a sticky glob which could plug up holes or pipes. (GF, GMR4)

Quenfis

a New Republic escort frigate, the Quenfis was sent to locate the Katana under the command of Captain Sarin Virgilio. Borsk Fey'lya and Leia Organa Solo were also on board. When the Imperial Star Destroyer Judicator intercepted the Quenfis at the Katana's location, Fey'lya ordered Virgilio to leave, an action that would strand the members of the New Republic which had already entered some of the Dreadnaughts. When Leia tricked Fey'lya into expressing his views over the frigate's loudspeakers, Virgilio opted to throw Fey'lya in the brig and remain with the Katana Fleet. (DFR)

Quenin

this city, located on the northern continent of the planet Daltarra, was also the site of the largest spaceport serving the planet. (RESB)

Quenker

this small, subterranean mammal was native to the planet Dantooine. Similar in many respects to most canids, the quenker moved about by hopping on its hind legs. When hungry, the quenker exuded a toxin bile from its mouth, which it used to break down and partially digest its prey before consuming it. This bile was especially dangerous to human flesh, which all but disintegrated when it came into contact with the bile. (ROD)

Quenno

this was one of the two factions of the Saurton race. The Quenno opposed the "progress" of the Des'mar faction, wishing to return Essowyn to the complete control of the Saurton. The Quenno felt that the major mining corporations which moved in to mine the system's asteroid belts were taking control of Essowyn and leaving nothing for the Saurton. Despite their obvious majority, the Quenno couldn't make much progress because it lacked the wealth and power of the Des'mar. (PG1)

Quent Assassins

this was one of the many teams which participated in the Royal Imperial Shockball League, during the height of the New Order. (CRO)

Quentel

this Aqualish engineer worked for Chalmer Trillili and the Scourge, and was a member of the Quara race. He had a knack for fixing things, and was responsible for installing the gravity well projector in the Impasse. (OE) this Imperial Commander was dispatched by Grand Admiral Thrawn to the planet Tatooine, in order to investigate the auction of the moss-painting known as Killik Twilight, some four and a half years after the Battle of Endor. Assigned to the Chimaera, Commander Quenton was given a wealth of credits with which to secure the artwork, and no price was considered too high. However, when he noticed that a Devaronian and a Twi'lek - actually Han Solo and Leia Organa Solo, in disguise - were trying to destroy the artwork, Quenton and his men opened fire in Mawbo's Performance Hall, in an effort to secure it.

Quenton

They were unable to foresee that Kitster Nabai would steal the painting and flee into the desert, but Quenton reacted quickly and sent a detachment out to recover both Banai and Killik Twilight. (TG)

Quentor

this was the name of a small, yellow-tailed summerbird which was kept as a pet by one of the Old Republic's Senators, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Fligh used Quentor's name as his "source" for information on the fixing of certain events at the Galactic Games on Euceron. He maintained this story until he was caught by Obi-Wan Kenobi, who discovered Quentor's true identity. (JQ3)

Quenus

this gas giant was the fourth planet in the Chandrila System. It was orbited by three moons. (CCW)

Quermia

this Outer Rim planet is home to a race of intelligent invertebrates known as Quermians. (IG1, IWE1)

Quermian

a race of intelligent invertebrates native to the planet Quermia, these creatures had a vaguely humanoid physique, but their small heads were supported by long, thin necks. Their large torso is supported with four thin arms and two legs. They had two brains, and their olfactory organs were located in their hands. It was believed that the Quermians were related to the Xexto of the planet Troiken, and research into their origins proved this to be true. Almost 17,000 years before the Battle of Endor, the Quermian people were actually created by the geneticists of a rogue group of Arkanian scientists, who brought Xextos with them to Quermia and began a series of genetic experiments on them. The Arkanians grew bored of waiting for something to happen, and left Quermia. In their stead, the Quermian people evolved. The Quermians developed space travel on their own, but chose to populate only those worlds in their immediate star system. Quermians weree strongly telepathic, and could converse by locking eyes with one another. However, when traveling away from Quermia, they did their best to hide this trait from the rest of the galaxy. As a species, Quermians valued advanced and complicated philosophical contemplation, and many of the Old Republic's greatest diplomats and thinkers were of Quermian descent. (IG1, OWS, ANT, PJSB)

Quermian

this was the name given to the native language of the Quermian race. It consisted of a number of melodious sounds, and the Quermian alphabet contained as many vowels as consonants. (ANT, UANT)

Quersey, Bren

this young man dreamed of attending the Raithal Academy, before joining the Alliance. He trained on the X-Wing under Wedge Antilles, and served as Red Eight during the Battle of Yavin. Quersey was killed in the battle. (CCG9)

Ques

this planet is located in a system between Sriluur and the Si'Klaata Cluster, along the Ac'fren Spur of the Sisar Run. It was the connecting point for ships travelling from Varl toward the Sisar Run. (SSR)

Quest

a fantasy, role-playing type of game. (COJ)

Quest for Quasar

this was a holofilm produced by Myris Pictures during the last decades of the Old Republic, and was based on the popular roleplaying game of the same name. Fans of the game protested the choice of Harlan Ottekvar for the leading role of Lord Baltharog, claiming that Ottekvar stood just 1.86 meters in height while Baltharog was clearly described as being 1.89 meters tall. (HNN5)

Quest for Quasar

this was one of the most popular roleplaying games of the last decades of the Old Republic. It was eventually made into a holofilm by Myris Pictures, shortly before the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Quest, Sarcev

this man served in the Agricultural Corps of the Old Republic, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. Bored with this lifestyle, Sarcev believed he had been rescued when Chancellor Palpatine took him as an apprentice and aide. His handsome looks allowed Sarcev to mingle with the nobles and dignitaries of the Imperial court, gathering intelligence without appearing to pry. At night Sarcev worked as an infiltrator, spying on Palpatine's enemies and gathering hard evidence of their plans. After the Battle of Endor, Sarcev used a clone of Sate Pestage to try and maintain control of the Imperial Ruling Council, but the clone was eventually killed and Ysanne Isard took control of the Empire. Sarcev himself allied with Carnor Jax, and even manipulated events so that Jax would supplant the Emperor's clones to lead the Empire. When Jax was killed, Sarcev was ostracized by the Ruling Council, and went into hiding. It was later revealed that Sarcev Quest was the father of Irek Ismaren, although many believed that Irek was the son of Emperor Palpatine himself. Quest was eventually captured, after a bounty was placed on his head by Jeng Droga. Although Droga believed that it was Boba Fett who brought in Quest, it was actually Ailyn Vel working in disguise. (GMR5, EL2, SWI80)

Questal

this remote planet was an evolving world settled by people who simply wanted a quiet existence away from the hustle and bustle of the galaxy. Their peace shattered by the chance discovery of ardanium, which led to an increase in crime and an increase in notice from the Empire. Moff Bandor was installed as the planetary ruler, and he ruled with an iron fist. He kept the populace in line by using the hurlothumbic generator, and drained the planet of every last cran of the mineral. After Bandor was defeated by the Alliance, Questal became a planet of little political value. Its inhabitants established their own government, overthrowing the crime bosses and pledging loyalty to the Empire. In secret, though, they established negotiations with the Alliance. (GCQ)

Questal Sector

this area of the galaxy is home to the Protean species. (SWJ12)

Que'still, Zurric

this man was known to be grim and uncaring. Distinguished by his pure-white hair and his unblinking eyes, he was a former industrial engineer whose deep-space installation was nationalized by the Empire. His wife was killed when she tried to escape, and he never saw any of his friends again. He managed to escape the installation, and later joined the Alliance. (ND)

Question Number One

this was Admiral Traest Kre'fey's name for his primary mission, at least in his own mind. Question Number One, painted on the bulkhead leading to the command deck of the Ralroost, read "How can I hurt the Vong today?" (Y)

Question Number Two

this was Admiral Traest Kre'fey's name for his secondary mission, at least in his own mind. Question Number Two, painted on the bulkhead leading to the command deck of the Ralroost, read "How can I help my own side grow stronger?" (Y)

Question of Master Jrul

this was one of the many lessons taught to Jedi Padwans in their training, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Master Jrul was noted for asking two simple questions: What is the good, if not the teacher of the bad? What is the bad, if not the task of the good? (E3N)

Questionable Activity Report

this report was required by the Old Republic from all passenger liners operating during the Clone Wars, in the event that a passenger - whether living or droid - acted in a way that was contrary to what was considered normal. In general, the QAR was created by a remote security system that was connected to a mainframe computer, rather than by a living security officer. This made that usefulness of the QAR somewhat dependent on the programming of the security system. (YDR)

Quetarra

this Zabrak musical instrument employed a set of strings that could be plucked or strummed to produce sounds. The music produced by a quetarra could be tuned to a variety of musical styles, but was exceptional at the plangent tones of Zabrak music. A quetarra had eight strings, which were usually made of bucky-fiber, that had to be tuned correctly in order to make the instrument sound its best. The hollow, ornate body of a quetarra was shaped like a figure eight, with several holes to produce optimal tones, and a fretboard that sometimes required a performer to use their chin in order to obtain the correct notes. A carved headpiece sat at the end of the fretboard, with turnkeys to assist the musician in tuning the strings. (MBS)

Quetemoor the Elder

this woman was the oldest child of Quetemoor the Venerable, and the heir to his criminal empire on the planet Coruscant, during the early years of the New Order. (CCW)

Quetemoor the Sub-Elder

this pale-skinned man was one of Coruscant's wealthiest nightclub owners, during the last years of the Old Republic and into the New Order. Like Volven Roxe and Beuga Odell, Quetemoor made his fortune without the intervention of the Hutts. Quetemoor was the latest in a long line of Mugaari criminals, and was the first to arrange for a sort of truce with Black Sun's Prince Xizor. He was outwardly known for his boisterous laughter and robust sense of humor, but he could also be brutally sadistic when necessary. (CCW)

Quetemoor the Venerable

this Mugaari crimelord was one of the major underworld forces on the planet Coruscant, during the decades leading up to the Clone Wars. Upon retiring, he turned his operations over to his children, Quetemoor the Elder and Quetemoor the Sub-Elder. (CCW)

Quetemoor the Younger

this man was the nephew of Mugaari crimelord Quetemoor the Sub-Elder. (CCW)

Quetzal Sisters

this was the alias used by Zeela Nall, Nuri Pravada, and Sheyne Tyndos, when they went undercover with Leia Organa to locate a holocube stolen by Nescan Tal'yo. Dressed as the seductive Quetzal Sisters, the women kept Imperial Commander Shad and his detachment occupied while Leia tried to retrieve the holocube. (T15)

Quexius Bird

native to the forest moon of Endor, this aggressive bird has bright green and red plumage. The bird's head and beak appear to be too large for its scrawny neck. When it flies, the quexius bird resembles a hummingbird, as its wings beat at incredibly fast speeds. The quexius bird is also quite stupid, and will antagonize creatures many times larger than itself. (TSK)

Queyta

this planet was the site of a Separatist outpost, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. The biological weapon known as swamp gas, which killed a number of Gungans on Ohma-D'un, was developed on Queyta eight months earlier. Obi-Wan Kenobi was the only surviving member of a team of five Jedi Masters dispatched to Queyta to recover the antidote for swamp gas. It was on Queyta that he encountered Asajj Ventress, one of the masterminds behind the swamp gas project. Ventress was unable to stop Kenobi's raid, but vowed to capture him eventually. (SWI66, RBR, TCD)

Quey'tek

see Quy'Tek (LEV)

Quharek

this Force-sensitive Mon Calmari male was one of the leaders of the Village of Aurilia, on the planet Dathomir, serving on the council that was led by Rohak. Quharek, like the other settlers, had been exiled to Dathomir because he was perceived as a threat to Emperor Palpatine. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, Quharek was one of the growing number of individuals who wanted to expand the Village by taking in offworlders who wanted to learn more about the Force. Rohak eventually agreed with Marite that the Village of Aurilia should open its arms to Force-sensitive offworlders. In this way, the lore and knowledge of the settlers could be passed on, while the offworlders helped defend the settlement from attacks by the Nightsisters. (SWGAL)

Quialeg

this creature is hunted on the planet Endoraan, and is cooked for a sumptuous feast. (SWJ8)

Quian

this planet was allied with the Empire during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ4)

Quiberon V

this planet was mined by Gamorrean Interstellar during the Galactic Civil War. (GG10)

Quick 6

one of Merr-Sonn's sporting blasters, the Quick 6 was a lightweight weapon that was useful for bringing down live game. While not as durable as weapons designed for competition, it's light weight made it popular among amateur hunters. (RASB, AEG)

Quick Pit

based on the outskirts of Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine, Quick Pit was the name of a starship docking system managed by Pg'lax and his Verpine cohorts during the height of the New Order. Because most of Mos Eisley's docking bays were privately owned and operated, their owners often charged exorbitant fees from spacers. Rather than paying these fees and cutting into their own profits, spacers could land on the outskirts of Mos Eisley and have their ships serviced wherever they landed by the Quick Pit team. Four A-A5 speeder trucks moved from ship to ship, providing all manner of resupply and refueling services. Because Pg'lax and his team serviced a large number of ships each day, they could charge their clients a much lower fee than the private docking bay owners. (GMR7)

Quick Ship

this 17-meter-long transport shuttle was designed and manufactured by Heckson Industries during the New Order. It was developed for planetary police forces, and was armed with a pair of triple blasters. It required a pilot and a gunner, and could transport up to six passengers and 100 kilograms of cargo. (GMK)

Quickclay

a thick, greenish clay that acts like quicksand and covers much of the planet Circarpous V. (SME)

Quicker

this flying predator was native to the planet Kuras III. The average specimen measured two meters in length, with a wingspan approaching five meters across. (PG3)

Quickfire-4

this was a model of hold-out blaster produced by Merr-Sonn during the early years of the New Republic. It was outlawed in many systems because it was extremely powerful for such a small, easily-concealed weapon. (GUN)

Quick-jelly

this was another name for blorash jelly. (UF)

QuickMed

this small medical kit was produced by Jassim Design some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. (TOJC)

Quick-Seal Splint

this device was found in most med-kits, and could be used to set a broken bone in an emergency. (IG1)

QuickShot

this was the name of Drolan Plasteel's wrist-mounted projectile launching system. It was essentially a crossbow mounted to the user's arm on a heavy sleeve, which could be worn under robes or a cloak. Despite the ease of use of the QuickShot, the weapon was eventually replaced by hold-out blasters and dart pistols. (TOJC, AEG)

Quicksilver

this Corellian courier vessel was used by a young Han Solo on his diplomatic mission to Coruscant, on behalf of Jabba and Jiliac. (THG)

Quicksilver

a nickname given to the droid M-TD by Jaina Solo. (SHA)

QuickSnack

this was the name of Bisquit Baron's largest fast-food meal, available for purchase at any location during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN4)

QuickSnackLite

this was the name of Bisquit Baron's smaller fast-food meal, available for purchase at any location during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN4)

QuickSnap 36T

SoroSuub's blaster carbine weapon. (RPG)

QuickSnap 36T/I

this was the second-generation model of the SoroSuub QuickSnap 36T blaster carbine. (GFT)

Quickwit

this Old Republic courier ship was attacked near Ando, shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars. Her captain, Kendra Tissido, had brought the ship out of hyperspace to recalibrate the ship's navigational computer. Tissido claimed that a frigate-sized ship disgorged five droid starfighters that immediately attacked the Quickwit. Tissido's crew managed to jump into hyperspace and escape. Many historians point to this event as one of the early conflicts of the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Quien, Corman

this human was a member of the Alliance, and was trained as a scout. After being stationed on Hoth, Corman became one of Echo Base's tauntaun handlers. He was responsible for capturing, breaking, and trainging the beasts for use as mounts. Unfortunately for the Alliance, Corporal Quien was killed during the evacuation of Echo Base, when a group of tauntauns was startled and broke free, trampling Quien and four others. (CCG, SWI74)

Quiet

this was Tam Azur-Jamin's callsign, used when he was a member of Saber Squadron during the defense and evacuation of the Jedi Knights' base on Eclipse, some two years after the Yuuzhan Vong first invaded the galaxy. (SBS)

QuietLift

manufacturers of repulsorlift propulsion systems. (SS)

Quig

one of Cabrool Nuum's bodyguards. (JTH)

Quiglee

this was one of the most common Gungan surnames, taking from the father's side of the family. These surnames were not dropped, even after marriage. The name referred to a species of fish that was native to Naboo. (GCG)

Quiglee

this species of fish was native to Naboo. (GCG)

Quilan Hive

the governmental seat of the planet Lan Barell, found within the boundaries of Shulell. (SWJ1)

Quilan Pyradex

this inscribed crystal pyramid was designed to assist the user in solving huge mathematical problems. It was attuned to beings who lived as part of a hive mind, but could be used by other races with practice. (GMR7)

Quill Knife

this was a traditional Bitthaevrian weapon. (AIR)

Quillan

this Imperial Moff was one of the few who survived deep into the tenure of the New Republic. Quillan was one of the Moffs present when Admiral Pellaeon delivered his proposal for surrender to the Republic, and it was Quillan who immediately questioned Pellaeon's ability to lead the Imperial Navy. His protests were cut short by Moff Disra, who saw a way to insinuate Pellaeon's peace treaty into his own plans. (SOP)

Quillarat

native to Kashyyyk, these small mammals stand about a half-meter tall. They have a mottled green-brown fur, which they use as camouflage to hide in the dense jungle foliage. When attacked, they can literally shoot their needle-sharp quills at their attacker. Wookiees hunt them bare-handed as a demonstration of their skill. Only males are allowed to hunt them, and a captured quillarat is often presented to a female Wookiee as an engagement present. If the female eats the tender flesh of the quillarat's belly, she accepts the male's betrothal. (RD)

Quiller, Abel

this alias was maintained by Talon Karrde during the early years of the New Republic, although he often had Dankin act as Quiller in order to avoid being recognized. According to the backstory developed for Quiller, he was the Captain of the Hab Camber, and was known as an impatient and "bombastic" individual. Captain Quiller was based on the Valrar. (TLC)

Quill-head

an alien race. (TME)

Quillin Arkell

this Velabri Lancer served the Alliance under the command of Airen Cracken. He was chosen to assist Cryle Cavv in extricating Rivoche Tarkin from Imperial control shortly before the Battle of Hoth. Arkell chafed at the assignment, believing Cavv to be nothing more than a thief. Arkell was the son of Quillin Durand, who was rescued from Imperial attack by Airen Cracken. Durand swore a Velabri Bloodvow to repay Cracken's bravery, but died soon after the rescue. Arkell took up the mantle of fulfilling the Bloodvow, and served the Alliance with Cracken. (SWJ12)

Quillin Durand

this Velarbi was rescued from Imperial attack by Airen Cracken, shortly after the Empire subjugated the world of Velabri. Cracken saved their transport ship from Imperial fire, and allowed Durand and his family to live another day. Durand swore a Velabri Bloodvow to Cracken, hoping to repay the debt of their rescue. Unfortunately, Durand died shortly afterward. Durand's dying wish was the his son, Quillin Arkell, fulfill the Bloodvow to Cracken. (SWJ12)

Quillion

one of six Kathol Republic Marauder-class corvettes sent to rescue the Bravado III from attack, shortly after the FarStar offered assistance. The 195-meter vessel was armed with eight double turbolaser cannons and three tractor beam projectors. (KO)

Quin, Sixtus

this huge, dark-skinned human was a member of the Imperial Special Forces unit under the command of Marl Semtin. During the search for the Eidolon, Sixtus and his team were sent to Ryloth to intercept Rogue Squadron before they could recover Firth Olan. Sixtus and fellow agent Septaas were pitted against Wedge Antilles and Winter by Cazne'Olan in a virtual-reality battle to determine who would obtain Firth. Sixtus and Septaas defeated the Rogues, but all four were swept away in a firestorm. When he learned that Semtin had taken Firth off Ryloth himself, Sixtus became suspicious of Semtin's loyalties. When he discovered Semtin at Eidolon Base trying to build his own empire, Sixtus executed Semtin and - along with his entire unit - defected to the New Republic. He joined a team of infiltrators, led by former Rogue Elscor Loro, and specialized in the liberation of worlds from the ground. One of the most notable worlds Sixtus and his team liberated was Thyferra. Working with Rogue Squadron - which had resigned its New Republic commission - they managed to obtain help from the native Vratix and took control of the bacta production. (XWBT, BW)

Quinberry

the fruit of this plant was often used to create succulent pies and tarts. (JQ7)

Quincey's Girl

this immense slave ship was owned and operated by the Sludir known as Big Quince. (SWJ2)

Quink

this Twi'lek and his cousin, Padda, re-established Chabak's, the casino owned by their uncle on Zirtran's Anchor. Quink was the older of the two cousins, and was a grim-faced individual who made a small fortune through hard work and determination. He was good friends with Kara Reenogga, and the pair were known to insult each other at virtually every meeting. (SWJ5)

Quinlan

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Quinn, Dorak

this man was considered one of the most honorable big-game hunters on the planet Tatooine, during the era of the Great Sith War. He was among the first hunters to vocally object to the tactics of Tanis Venn, who used reprogrammed battle droids in hunting the wild creatures of Tatooine. (KOTOR)

Quint

this race of tall, thin beings was native to the planet Quint. Their bodies were covered with delicate fur, and their small heads were dominated by triangular eyes. Quints were known to be quick and agile. (EVE)

Quint

this planet was the homeworld of an alien race known as the Quint. (EVE)

Quintama

this Melida was the Captain of the Melida Liberation Force some sixty-two years before the Battle of Naboo. He was killed during the Twenty-First Battle of Zehava, leaving behind his wife Pinani, and several children. (DOD)

Quintar Nebula

a planetary nebula in an uncharted sector of the galaxy. Tron Nixx once navigated the multi-colored clouds by tapping the Force. (SWJ5)

Quintarus Returyl

this Twi'leki businessbeing worked for the Spice Mines of Kessel during the Galactic Civil War, serving as a procurement agent for slave laborers. He was the being who purchased the Alliance agent Kentara as a slave on Deysum III. (GMK)

Quintas, Xerxes

this spice lord, native to the planet Sevarcos, controlled the planet's Southern Deserts. At the height of the New Order, Quintas was one of the most powerful of the Spice Lords of Sevarcos. He was despised by the locals, however, because he had developed an alliance with the Imperial forces on the planet to strip-mine the deserts for carsunum and andris. (SWJ2, SWJ12)

Quintberry

this fruit-bearing shrub was native to the planet Romin. The small berries were pressed to produce an overly-sweet juice that was popular among the Romins. (JQ8)

Quintell, Pallas

this former Imperial naval gunner left the service after his hitch was up, preferring the more raucous lifestyle of a pirate. He served under Jondrell Inx for several years, developing a friendship based more on Pallas' efforts than Jondrell's. A brush with the Alliance helped turn Pallas from mere pirate to Alliance supporter, and he left Jondrell's band to become the nominal leader of the rebel cell on Kallistas. Many years later, Jondrell came to Kallistas to ask for Pallas' help in a scheme to sell off Cressis Linrec. Pallas reluctantly agreed to help. However, Pallas was captured by Chandrex Grenn and Sirenas Firil before he could be of much assistance. (GG10)

Quintik Kahr

this was the given name of the Sludir known as Big Quince. (SWJ2, PSPG)

Quinto

this was the primary crop grown on the planet Kegan. The grain of the quinto was mashed into tasteless patties and fed to the children who were educated in the Learning Circle. (FFT)

Quintus System

this star system was known for the amount of spice smuggling traffic which passed through it, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (DH)

Quinze

this man was one of the Peacekeeperrs who protected the survivors of the Outbound Flight Project, during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (SQ)

Quirt

this Imperial Colonel once pursued Han Solo and Chewbacca into the Maw during a Kessel Run just before the Battle of Yavin. Quirt patrolled the sector surrounding Kessel looking for illegal activity, with the goal of using captured smugglers as slave labor on Kessel. Han and Chewie dumped their spice and marked its location before Quirt intercepted them, but he found nothing in the Millennium Falcon's holds to arrest them with. Han and Chewie later returned to the Maw and retrieved the spice. They tried this tactic shortly after the Battle of Ylesia, but were unable to find the spice. This left Han deeply in debt to Jabba the Hutt, and forced him to go to ground on Tatooine. (RD, MCI1)

Quist

this childhood friend of Adar Tallon was not as focused or outgoing as Tallon was. Quist was always looking out for himself, and wanted to pursue the life of a spacer. Through it all, he remained close to Tallon. When Tallon decided that he had had enough of the New Order, Quist agreed to help Tallon stage his death. It was Quist who was in command of the pirate ship that attacked and destroyed the Battalion in the Dalchon System, and Quist kept Tallon's secret for a number years. When he was suddenly apprehended by the Relentless and Captain Parlan, Quist bargained for his life with the information on Tallon. Parlan let Quist go free, provided that Quist return to Tallon and act as a safety valve if Jodo Kast failed to capture Tallon. Thus, Quist infiltrated Tallon's compound on Tatooine and nearly betrayed his former friend. (TM)

Quist

this man served the Empire as an Admiral in the Imperial Navy during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. Admiral Quist was in command of the Star Destroyer Conqueror, that served as Darth Vader's flagship shortly after the Battle of Yavin, after Vader returned to the Empire and began searching for Luke Skywalker. When the Millennium Falcon re-appeared at Yavin 4, to begin assisting the Alliance with locating a suitable planet for its new base, Vader ordered Admiral Quist to capture the freighter. Han Solo, however, avoided capture by flying into a nearby asteroid field. Quist ordered that the Imperial pursuit be cut off when most of his TIE Fighters were destroyed by asteroids. Unfortunately, Vader was not pleased with Quist's inability to capture the ship, and used the Force to choke Quist to death. (3D2, 3D3) this creature, native to the moon Antar 4, was the chief prey of the Gotal race. Individual quivry were distinguished by their antlers, which were prized as trophies for hunters of all races. (GG4, GMR1)

Quivry

Quiyyen

this Anx served as an Ambassador to the Old Republic, during the last years of the Old Republic. He was captured by General Grievous, about two years after the Battle of Geonosis, and held captive on the planet Vandos. His capture was part of a trap that Grievous laid to lure a contingent of Jedi Knights to the planet, where he planned to simply murder them. Although Quiyyen was ultimately rescued, only Flynn Kibo managed to survive the rescue. (SWG6)

Quizzer

this curious creature inhabits the upper levels of the forests which blanket the temperate regions of Gamorr. These mischievous little climbers are generally harmless, but have a penchant for stealing shiny objects. The average quizzer stands less than a meter tall, and is roughly humanoid in stature. A row of spade-shaped spines runs along their spine, and they use their clawed hands and prehensile tail to climb in the trees. They are poorly adapted for walking on the ground, however, and remain in the trees for much of their lives. Despite their reptilian appearance, quizzers are mammals, and produce live offspring. They communicate in a simple language of squeaks and barks, and feed mainly on fruits and leaves. (SWJ10, COG)

Qulo Ecls

this Sullustan was the brother of Loro Ecls, and operated the Gelgelar Outfitters general store during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Qulo kept a finger on the economic pulse of the Gelgelar Free Port, trying to keep his prices competitive while not bankrupting the settlement. (PSPG)

Qulok's Fist

this small bounty hunters' guild was active during the last years of the Galactic Civil War and into the New Republic. Based on the modified freighter Steel Fist, the gang started out working in the Minos Cluster of the galaxy and eventually expanded into Kathol Sector. (DARK)

Qulun

this clan of Ansionians was unusual among the Alwari in that they were willing to go into the cities of the offworlders. While most Alwari stayed well away from the urban areas, the Qulun moved through them quite readily. The Qulun were known among the Alwari as traders and information brokers, a clan which was not well-liked by served an important purpose on the open plains. The Qulun caravan was filled with all manner of goods and wares, from the basic fruits and dried meats consumed by the Ansionians to rare, handcrafted items and offworld bric-a-brac. The Qulun operated on a barter system, and often traded information for trinkets. Most of the other Alwari clans stayed away from the Qulun, and many Ansionians considered the Qulun to be separate from the Alwari. (APS)

Qu'Mock Station

this space station is the primary settlement of the Qektoth Confederation, and is located in the Kathol Outback near Uukaablis. It was originally commissioned as a scientific outpost aimed at exploring the region of space near Gandle Ott, but the station disappeared just months after beginning its work. Records discovered later explain that the station was hijacked by a group of escaped criminals led by a team of crimelords, and the station was towed back to their hidden base for refitting. When the pirates' homeworld was besieged with earthquakes and rendered unlivable, the station was abandoned until it was found by Drigir Tarrens. Tarrens told the Qektoth Confederation of its existence, and it was restored for their own uses. The Qektoth placed the station in an empty region of space near Uukaablis, so that they could perform their research in peace. Qu'mock Station is a long, needle-shaped station guided by four huge solar fins deployed at the stern. (KO)

Quockra-4

this planet, located in the Minos Cluster, is covered with flat, featureless deserts. The planet's environment is essentially that of a huge desert, with scorching days and frigid nights. The most obvious inhabitants of the planet are a strange society of droids. Most of the droids are Imperial designs, but some have unknown origins. The droids have developed a sort of hierarchical society of their own, and remain more or less uninvolved with Quockra-4's native sentient lifeform, the Quockrans. The planet has an average rotation of 31 standard hours, and its year lasts 402 local days. (GG6)

Quockran

this is the only sentient race native to the planet Quockra-4. The average Quockran is an enormous, black-skinned slug which lived below the surface of the planet during the day, emerging at night as the desert cools. It was the Quockrans who built the strange droids which populate the surface of their planet, creating them to interact with offworlders. The Quockrans despise non-Quockrans, although they are in no way violent about it. They just dislike alien creatures. (GG6)

Quoia

this was once of the many names given to Duros females. Among the Duros, it meant "evening star". (GCG)

Quold Runium

this fuel additive is used to pressurize power fluids prior to activation. (X1)

Quoorian Marshsucker

this was an immense, predatory species of insects. (KOTOR)

Quoreal

this Yuuzhan Vong served as the Supreme Overlord of his species during the years before Shimrra rose to the position. It was the priests who served under Quoreal who realized that the discovery of Zonama Sekot would have grave consequences for the Yuuzhan Vong, and many suggested that the Yuuzhan Vong avoid the galaxy altogether. Their research had found prophecies that claimed the discovery of a living planet would undo the Yuuzhan Vong completely. Although Shimrra claimed that he defeated Quoreal in combat in order to make his ascension, many Yuuzhan Vong secretly wondered if this was true. There were stories that Quoreal's stance against invading the galaxy had angered Shimrra and the other leaders who demanded a new galaxy for the Yuuzhan Vong to conquer. Rumors spread that Shimrra killed Quoreal in order to gain the power required to begin the invasion. After Shimrra ascended to the throne and the invasion of the New Republic began in earnest, the Yuuzhan Vong won many victories and much of this heretical discussion faded into the background. However, as the Jedi Heresy gained strength among the Shamed Ones, and as the Yuuzhan Vong forces began to suffer defeat after defeat, the questions about Shimrra's gods-given right to rule resurfaced even stronger than before. Those who believed Quoreal had been dishonorably murdered, known as the Quorealists, began to gain a louder voice, especially after the realization that the Eighth Cortex was empty, and the living planet of Zonama Sekot actually existed. Others began to wonder if Quoreal had wanted to find a peace with the New Republic and learn more about Zonama Sekot, since the planet seemed to provide a linkage between the Yuuzhan Vong and the peoples of the Republic. (FP, UF)

Quorealists

this was the name given to those Yuuzhan Vong who did not believe Supreme Overlord Shimrra's claims that he defeated former Overlord Quoreal in combat in order to make his ascension. After the invasion of the New Republic began in earnest, and many victories were won, much of this heretical discussion faded into the background. However, as the Jedi Heresy gained strength among the Shamed Ones, and as the Yuuzhan Vong forces began to suffer defeat after defeat, the questions about Shimrra's gods-given right to rule resurfaced even stronger than before. Those Quorealists who believed Quoreal had been dishonorably murdered began to gain a louder voice, especially after the realization that the Eighth Cortex was empty, and the living planet of Zonama Sekot actually existed. Others began to wonder if Quoreal had wanted to find a peace with the New Republic and learn more about Zonama Sekot, since the planet seemed to provide a linkage between the Yuuzhan Vong and the peoples of the Republic. When the living planet suddenly appeared near Coruscant and wrought major seismic and ecological upheaval, the Quorealists grew more vocal, and began releasing more information on Shimrra's treachery to the general populace. (FP, UF)

Quori City

this sprawling metropolis is the capital city of Corlass. It has a dense, endless system of alleyways and dead-ends, much like those of Imperial City on Coruscant. (SWJ5)

Quor'sav

a warm-blooded, avian/monotreme species whose average height is about 3.5 meters, Quor'savs were native to the planet Uaua. When a group of colonists arrived on Uaua, the Quor'sav initially welcomed them. However, when a virus that had been carried by the colonists to the planet began infecting the Quor'sav, the avians were forced to stop all immigration until a cure could be found. Since this time, the Quor'sav have been reluctant to trust other species, especially mammalian races. A Quor'sav can be seen walking by the screen as Luke Skywalker sells his landspeeder in Star Wars. (SW, CCG, GMR5)

Qurang Lah

this Yuuzhan Vong was the creche'-brother of Warmaster Tsavong Lah. Qurang was charged with carrying out the plans of Nom Anor, in the wake of the Battle of Duro and the disaster on Yavin 4. Qurang Lah hated the fact that he was forced to work with Nom Anor, especially when the Executor's plans began to unravel near Yag'Dhul. Qurang Lah thought that he could be rid of Nom Anor once and for all upon his return to the Warmaster, having witnessed the Executor refuse a challenge from Anakin Solo. However, before they arrived, Nom Anot killed all the warriors who had been with him on Yag'Dhul, including Qurang Lah. (EVR, NJOSB)

Qurgg

this was a common name among the Elom race. (UANT)

Q'urh Kick

this was a form of kicking attack used by Yuuzhan Vong warriors in melee combat. (FP)

Qusak Laal

this was the name of a distinguished Togruta individual. (UANT)

Quul

this was the second of seven seasons experienced on the planet Guiteica. (AE)

Quulaar

these huge, woven sacks are used by Wookiees to raise and lower visitors to their villages. The Wookiees usually carry the quulaars, but they can also be attached to ropes. The term quulaar literally translates to 'baby sack,' and refers to the fact that the sacks were originally created to transport infant Wookiees. (RD)

Quvil Valley

during the height of the Galactic Civil War, this valley was controlled by the Empire, which desired that output of the many mines which lined the valley. Alliance forces tried many times to take Quvil Valley, but were never successful. (WOTC)

Quyik Vth'naar

this Sludir was the brother of Qesya Vth'naar. Like his sister and her mate, Rokarn, Quyik was forced to fight in gladiator battles for the Empire. In one fateful battle, Quyik was pitted against Rokarn. Rokarn allowed Quyik to win the battle, knowing that Qesya was pregnant. Unfortunately for Quyik, this meant that he had to kill Rokarn in order to survive. Quyik carried the guilt of this act only for a short time, for the Empire then forced him to fight against Qesya herself. In the battle, Qesya defeated Quayik and killed him in order to survive. (KR)

Quyste

Talon Karrde maintained a training facility on this planet, shortly after the Battle of Endor. (TFNR)

Quy'Tek

this was a meditative technique developed by the Jedi Knights of the Old Republic. It was used primarily to mask an individual's connection to the Force, allowing a Jedi to pass unnoticed, even to other Force-sensitive beings. (TCD)

Q-Varx

this Mon Calamari New Republic Senator was one of the primary leaders of the Rationalist Party. It was also believed that she was part of the plans of Seti Ashgad, since Ashgad received information about the Republic from a source in the Rationalist Party. It was later revealed that Q-Varx had taken a huge bribe from Ashgad and Dymurra to coordinate the poisoning of Carlist Rieekan with the disappearance of Leia Organa-Solo. Although it was believed that Q-Varx was ignorant of Dzym's part in the overall plan, Q-Varx was nonetheless arrested for treason and imprisoned. There is some inconsistency in Planet of Twilight, in that Q-Varx is referred to as both 'he' and 'she.' (POT)

Qwi Xux

an Omwati working at the Maw Installation. When Grand Moff Tarkin needed the best minds working at the Maw Installation, he went to Omwat and "recruited" several youths to train in his orbiting school. The school turned out to be a brutal weeding-out process by which Tarkin would eventually end up with one viable candidate for employment at the Maw. Qwi was the survivor of Tarkin's plan, but she only saw it as a triumph of her mental capacity. She was more than glad to go to the Maw and begin solving the intricate problems Tarkin and her mentor, Bevel Lemelisk, provided to her. Her Omwati background could never prepare her for Tarkin's real objective: the subjugation of races beneath the Empire's boots. She believed in the simplistic goals for the Death Star and the World Devastators, even given their ominous names. She hoped they would be used to terraform worlds to make them habitable for many different races. It was not until Han Solo was intercepted and tortured at the Maw that she realized the scope of the projects being developed at the Installation. The thought of her work being the cause of billions of deaths overcame her, and she helped Han, Chewie, and Kyp escape with the Sun Crusher. She then gave the ship's technical data over to the New Republic. When she met Wedge Antilles the first time, she wasn't sure whether or not to trust him. A trust did eventually grow, and the two shared many beautiful moments, until Kyp stole Qwi's mind from her. Wedge nursed her back to health, but she was never the same again. She and Wedge maintained their relationship, but he was increasingly called upon in military matters, and Qwi became more and more absorbed in her work. Both agreed that the relationship was evolving to be a convenience, rather than a true romance, and they went their separate ways. Qwi eventually decided to travel to Vortex and help the Vors repair the Cathedral of Winds. While there, she hoped to find her own inner peace and eliminate the memories of all the beings her superweapons had killed. (JS, DA, COTF, SOA, DTR)

an alien race, also known as the Wavedancers, native to the planet Hirsi. They are an aquatic species, living in the freshwater rivers and lakes of Hirsi and feeding on fish and plant material. They are a seemingly small, delicate race of humanoids, but they are very strong and agile. They are covered with dark skin punctuated by raised scales on their heads, wrists, ankles, and wastes. They have long, pointed ears which can pick up the modulated sound waves they send through the water as a form of communication. These sound waves don't carry well in air, so Qwohogs use a crude sign language when out of the water. They can survive out of the water for short periods, but must keep their skin moist or risk rapid and debilitating dehydration. They also cannot exist in saltwater, for it burns their gills and damages their lungs. They are known as Wavedancers because of the fluid, ballet-like way they move across the surface of the water. Their lives are directed at survival and leisure, and they have barely risen above primitive tool technology. They were unaware of the presence of rudic crystals in their environment, which brought them into contact with the Alliance. The Alliance offered friendship and nothing more in return for the ability to mine the crystals, but the Empire had other ideas. Imperial forces slew the Alliance team and raped Hirsi of its resources. The Qwohog were powerless to stop it. When the supply of rudic crystals dried up, however, the Empire simply left. An Alliance rescue team arrived, and the Qwohogs helped explain what happened. They pledged whatever support they could muster to the Alliance, and helped establish a secure base of operations there. Some Qwohogs have left Hirsi, working for the Alliance and later the New Republic. (GG12) this was the name given to the unusual form of verbal communication used by the Qwohog race. It employed the use of sound waves generated in a variety of patterns to communicate words. While this form of communication worked well under water, it could not be spoken across long distances in the air. There was no written form of the Qwohog language, although Qwohog Sign Language was used to communicate across distances whenever the Qwohogs were out of the water. (UANT)

Qwohog

Qwohog Sign Language

this form of communication was developed by the Qwohog race, and was used whenever they needed to communicate while out of the water. When the Qwohog joined the galactic community, this sign language was eventually replaced by the Basic alphabet, although knowledge of the sign language remained part of the Qwohog heritage. (UANT)

Qwot

this man worked as a personal aide to Linkaas. (SWJ1)

 R ***

R

this was the alias used by one of the most powerful gangsters in the Cularin System, during the height of the Clone Wars. Jedi Master Darrus Jeht spent several months trying to locate R, with little success. (LFCW)

R-0

this astromech droid was owned by Milinae, during the height of the Clone Wars. (LCFW)

R0/5T.N1

see 5T-series Droid (EGD)

R02-E

this SE-4 servant droid was owned by Drayk. (GG7)

R0-4

Koth Melan's security/protocol droid. (SE)

R-1

this was the first of the reconnaissance droids produced by Arakyd. Developed to assist the cloen troopers of the Grand Army of the Republic, the R-1 droid could infiltrate an enemy position and then relay coordinates and other information to a remote location. This allowed the forces of the Old Republic to target Separatist locations from a great distance, with accuracy that could not be achieved with normal targetting systems. (LAWS)

R-10

a series of droids designed by Lovolan, the R-10 was designed to work in households as party waiters, bartenders and drink mixers. They stood about a meter tall, and were box-shaped. Their top was made of a slab of marble surrounded by a brass railing. The marble top was specially charged so that drink glasses placed on it do not move around during transport. Four small casters allowed the R-10 to move in any direction smoothly, while a number of retractable manipulator arms allowed the R-10 to effortlessly mix any number of drinks. Also, the R-10 was programmed with routines that made it impossible to spill a drink or drop a glass. (COJ, EGD)

R-19

this Nen-Carvon paraglider was designed with military use in mind. The frame was structurally more rigid without sacrificing weight, and was equipped with a number of stealth and sensor-baffling accessories. The R-19 also had brackets for equipment storage and weapons mounts. A low-level transponder was optional, and could help pinpoint a downed glider's position. A pull-down display visor helped the pilot see in the dark. (ROE)

R1-G4

this outdated astromech droid was refitted by its owner with a Mark II reactor drone's armored shell. Thus, R1-G4 was almost two meters tall. When its owner was captured, R1-G4 was abandoned. It was later recovered by the Jawas who captured R2-D2 and C-3PO, and was offered to Owen Lars. (CCG, ICS)

R1-series Droid

this was the first true series of mass-produced astromech droids developed by Industrial Automaton. Following closely on the heels of the failed P2-series droid, the R1-series saved on development costs by reusing the shell of the Mark II reactor drone. The R1 series was equipped with a standard Intellex III computer. The primary drawback to the R1 series was its size, which relegated the droid to use aboard capital ships. (TNR, IG1, EGD, SWJ7)

R1-T4

this astromech droid was part of a cargo shipped by Simms Jonndril to Janelle Seras on Seikosha, shortly after the Battle of Endor. R1-T4 contained coded information which contained instructions on how to find the Emperor's hidden weapons stores. (POC)

R2(S5)

this prototype R2 Series 5 astromech was first used by Prince Isolder of Hapes. It was a gift from Leia Organa during her attempts to gain Hapan assistance following the Battle of Endor. Isolder used the R2(S5) droid in his Miy'til starfighter, Storm. (EGV)

R200

Koensayr ion fission engines used on BTL A4 Longprobe starfighters. It is rated at 250 KTU. (SCORE, XW)

R-200 Raptor

this Ikas-Adno speeder bike was designed to be a combination swoop and speeder bike. The development of the Raptor evolved into little more than a speeder engine strapped to a frame, with control vanes attached to provide maneuverability. The Raptor also placed the driver at the rear of the bike, with a simple safety bar to keep the driver in place. This allowed Ikas-Adno to give the Raptor a larger engine, and also gave the driver more maneuverability by allowing them to use their body weight to steer the bike. While these designs provided incredible speed, the prototypes of the Raptor were considered too dangerous for production. Despite early setbacks, however, the Raptor was eventually produced shortly after the Battle of Endor, and became increasingly popular. (AEG)

R-22 Spearhead

this arrow-shaped fighter served as the design basis for the A-Wing starfighter. (NEGC)

R-23

this was Nen-Carvon's recreational paraglider outfit. Like other paragliders, the R-23 was equipped with a light repulsor motor and frame-mounted hand controls. Its wingspan was four meters across. The R-23 found use among paramilitary units, since it was very quiet and was small and sleek enough to evade sensor sweeps. (ROE)

R2-4B

this astromech droid was owned by Lorn Moonrunner, and was used to assist in flying the starship Refugee. R2-4B wore what appeared to be a standard restraining bolt, but Lorn had modified a detonation device to resemble the bolt. This was all a precaution taken in case the Empire should ever discover that Lorn - the former Imperial Major Corvus Langlier - was on Rhamalai. When this finally happened, shortly after the Battle of Yavin, R2-4B was confiscated and placed in the Imperial droid pool. When R2-4B had been placed in the garrison in Argona, it activated the programming which activated the detonator. The resulting explosion destroyed much of the Imperial garrison. (SWJ13)

R2-5

this is the name given to the droid Owen Lars first purchased from the Jawas, before he bought R2-D2. (JLS)

R2-A5

this white and green astromech was programmed by the Empire for combat communications. It was used to acquire targeting data and relay it to starfighters and gunnery systems. It was assigned to Tatooine during the search for R2-D2 and C-3PO. (CCG9)

R2-A6

this green astromech droid was assigned to Ric Oile's N-1 starfighter during the Battle of Naboo. (IG1)

R2-AG Series Droid

developed by Industrial Automaton during the last decades of the Old Republic, this series of astromech droids was based on the popular R2-series of astromech droids. (HNN4)

R2-AG4

this flat-headed version of the R2-series astromech droid was developed for agromech use. Note that the Star Wars Technical Journal gives a picture of R5-D4 to describe the R2-AG4 unit. (SWTJ)

R2-B1

this blue and gold R2 unit was part of the astromech pool that was used aboard the Naboo Royal Starship, during the reign of Queen Amidala. Like G8-R3, it was dispatched to fix the ship's shield generators during the Queen's attempt to escape the Trade Federation blockade of Naboo. Also like G8-R3, it was destroyed by Federation turbolasers. (IG1)

R2-B3

this was the name of the astromech droid assigned to Jaina Solo's X-Wing, when she took command of the Twin Suns Squadron, some months after the Battle of Coruscant. She later nicknamed the droid Cappie. (EL1)

R2-B4

this astromech droid was dispatched by the Lady Amber Comark, acting as the Alliance agent Tigress, to assist an Alliance Special Operations team during their mission to expose the Death-Hunter project. A battered droid, R2-B4 was nonetheless feisty and loyal. It carried Comark's messages and orders to the Alliance team, and was instrumental in the mission. (SWJ9)

R2-C3

this astromech droid was owned by the Alliance, and was infiltrated into the Imperial Sector Plexus station near Keltos IV. Its duties as an Imperial droid were to monitor the Plexus' computer networks for illegal intrusion. As an Alliance operative, Seecubed (as he was known to the Alliance) recorded information from the Plexus' computers and transmits important data to the Alliance. (CRO)

R2-C9

this modified astromech droid was owned by Marka Durn. (IA)

R2-D0 (Artoo-Deo)

Tiree's R2-model astromech utility droid, R2-D0 was known as "Deo." Deo managed to escape from the various scrapes Tiree was caught in, and assisted several groups of Alliance agents in rescuing Tiree. (RPG, GCQ)

R2-D2 (Artoo-Detoo)

an astromech utility droid, R2-D2 was used extensively during the time of the Old Republic as a starship maintenance droid within the Naboo droid pool. He was part of the contingent of astromechs which was aboard Queen Amidala's personal starship when she fled Naboo for Coruscant, shortly after the Trade Federation invaded the planet. When the ship was damaged while trying to run the Federation's blockade, R2-D2 and its companions were dispatched to repair the shield generators. Of the four astromechs dispatched, only R2-D2 managed to complete the work and return to the ship. He was rewarded by the Queen with a thorough cleaning, and accompanied her to Tatooine and Coruscant. On Tatooine, R2-D2 made the acquaintance of the incomplete protocol droid C-3PO, which was being constructed by Anakin Skywalker. Although their encounter was brief, it set the tone for future meetings. After the Battle of Naboo, in which R2-D2 helped young Anakin destroy the Federation's droid control ship, R2-D2 was thrust upon the intergalactic scene. R2-D2 accompanied Padme' almost everywhere she went, and his knowledge of starship programming made him an invaluable resource to the flight crews of the Republic. R2-D2 was reunited with C-3PO when Padme' and Anakin traveled to Tatooine to see Anakin's mother, Shmi. After Shmi died, C-3PO was reclaimed by Anakin, and accompanied Anakin and R2-D2 to Geonosis, in an effort to rescue Obi-Wan Kenobi. After Anakin and Padme' were married, Padme's gave R2-D2 to Anakin as a gift. Anakin spent his free time upgrading Artoo's subsystems, adding all manner of interfaces and devices to the little droid's already impressive arsenal. Anakin also made sure that the little droid never received a memory wipe, so that it could remember certain tactics and maneuvers. In the aftermath of the Clone Wars, R2-D2 managed to avoid the mandatory memory wipe that was given to C-3PO by Bail Organa. It was later discovered that some of Anakin's modifications allowed Artoo to never reveal more than it knew, thus allowing it to keep secrets and remember much of its history. Years later, when the Alliance decide that it was time to break away from the Empire and launch an all-out attack, they used Artoo as a decoy. They figured that most people - even the Imperials - wouldn't suspect that a lowly astromech droid was carrying the top-secret plans to the first Death Star. When the consular ship Tantive IV was intercepted while trying to reach Obi-Wan Kenobi on Tatooine and deliver the plans to him, Artoo's mission was modified. Instead of just holding the Death Star plans, he was also programmed by Princess Leia to seek out Obi-Wan and enlist his aid without human assistance. Artoo jettisoned from the ship along with his good friend, the protocol droid C-3PO, and they landed on Tatooine. After being sold at a Jawa auction to Luke Skywalker, Artoo couldn't trust Luke, and sought Obi-Wan himself. This led to Artoo's almost being destroyed by the Sand People, but Obi-Wan rescued them, and the rest is history. Following the Battle of Yavin, Artoo had to be refitted a number times from damage sustained as Luke's X-wing astromech droid. Artoo has nevertheless remained a loyal droid, lending his assistance whenever necessary. He accompanied Luke on virtually every mission the young man was given, and also accompanied Luke to Dagobah to locate Yoda. While on Dagobah, Artoo was nearly swallowed by a swamp creature, but proved too hard to consume. Later, on Cloud City, Artoo was separated from Luke during the search for Han Solo, and helped Leia, Chewbacca, and Lando Calrissian escape the city after Darth Vader had it garrisoned. During the Battle of Endor, Artoo was part of Han Solo's strike team, dispatched to the Forest Moon to assist in disabling the shield generator that was protecting the second Death Star. Decades later, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Artoo and Threepio both had reason to wonder about the true meaning of life and existence, as the alien invaders hated all forms of technology, especially droids, which the Yuuzhan Vong deemed blasphemous simulacrum of life. When the Yuuzhan Vong finally surrendered at Coruscant, the droids found that there was another trait they needed to confront: obsolescence. The two droids agreed that they would meet this and any other challenge just as they always had, with each other. Artoo-Detoo was portrayed by Kenny Baker in all five Star Wars films. (SW, SW1, AOTCN, UF, VD3, E3N)

R2-D6

this astromech droid was part of the droid pool assigned to the Alliance's Edan Base, during the early days of the Galactic Civil War. The efforts of R2-D6 were instrumental in the destruction of the Imperial Star Destroyer Havoc. (IAG)

R2-D609

see Thirteen. (WS)

R2-D9

this astromech droid was owned by Verzon Tennd. (WOA6)

R2-Delta

this was the name of an upgrade which was developed for use on R2-series astromech droids twenty years after the Battle of Endor. It involved new algorithms and programming to speed up the calculation of navigational data, shortening the time it took to develop a hyperspace jump. This allowed many owners of R2 units - especially large military concerns like the New Republic - to get many more years of service out of their large pool of R2 droids. (DTO)

R2-K7

this R2-series astromech droid was owned by the Mytaranor Slaving Council, and was packed with a variety of weapons, altered circuitry, and insidious programming. R2-K7 was the primary astromech aboard the Vanquisher, working with Rian Rann's three Verpines to keep the ship in top operating condition. (AIR)

R2-L1

this astromech droid was assigned to Essara Till's N-1 starfighter, during the period leading up to - and including - the Battle of Naboo. She nicknamed the droid Ell-One, primarily because the droid had become something of a friend to her. R2-L1 also had a wry sense of humor, which evidenced itself during combat. (SFT)

R2-M3

an astromech droid used to compensate for the One Liner's lack of a navigational computer. (SN)

R2-PU

this R2-series astromech was part of a family-run repair business that operated on the galactic rim for many generations before the Battle of Endor. (GCG)

R2-Q2

this black and white R2 unit served on many Imperial reconnaissance missions in the Expansion Region before being assigned to the Devastator's mission to capture the Tantive IV. (CCG2)

R2-Q5

this clumsy waiting droid was employed at the Lucky Despot. It was said that not a day passed that R2-Q5 didn't stumble down the hotel's stairs at least once. (GG7)

R2-Q5

this shiny, black-bodied R2 astromech droid, distinguished by its red access panels, was stationed aboard the first Death Star. (TCG4)

R2-Q8

this astromech was the companion of Alliance agent Shaparo. Shaparo used the Intellex IV droid brain inside R2-Q8 and modified it to access the prison records of the Dnlavec garrison on Sriluur. (SWJ10)

R2-QU

this astromech was owned by Alore Breesa. (IA)

R2-R

this recon/astromech droid was used in X-Wings and Y-Wings that were assigned reconnaissance duty. In addition to normal astromech programming, the R2-R series could accumulate and download recon data. (SOL)

R2-R9

this red astromech droid was part of the droid pool which services Queen Amidala's Royal Starship. During her escape from the Trade Federation blockade shortly before the Battle of Naboo, R2-R9 was dispatched to repair the shield generators. Unfortunately, R2-R9 was hit by a blast from a Trade Federation Battleship and destroyed. (IG1)

R2-RC

this astromech droid served Cryle Cavv aboard the G Cat. (SWJ12)

R2-RD

this Alliance astromech droid was paired with C-D20 during their assignment to Commander Dauntarist aboard a newly-manufactured HT-2200 freighter. (SWJ5)

R2-S4

this astromech droid served the Alliance as the co-pilot of a Y-Wing for many years, until the Y-Wing was flown by Pike Angeles. When Angeles became a field operative, R2-S4 went with him. Like most R2 units, R2-S4 was quite independent, and tended to wander off when bored. Angeles enhanced the droid's programming, giving it the ability to break into and control starship computers, especially Imperial freighters and transports. (CRO)

R2-series Droid

the second model in Industrial Automaton's R series of astromech droids, the R2 was considered the most popular series ever produced, since it interfaced with most of the starships in production and was small enough to fit on a starfighter. IA promoted the R2-series with the slogan, "No job is over this little guy's head." It was first introduced about five years before the start of the Galactic Civil War, and remained in active production well beyond several other, later R-series models. Note that The New Rebellion indicates that the R2 series is sixteen models outdated within 25 years. (SW, BTS, TNR, FTD, EGD)

R2-V0

this astromech droid is owned by Ixsthmus, and served the Ithorian aboard the Long Shot. R2-V0 was disassembled over 50 times by the ship's so-pilot, Siene Symm, to repair the continuous stream of nonsense that issues from R2-V0's sound actuator. Symm is convinced that the actuator system is faulty, but has been unable to repair it. This is because the sounds are not the result of a defect. R2-V0 is simply a poet, and he creates the sounds because they sound nice together. (SWCP)

R2-V6

a standard astromech droid owned by Gryseium Incorporated, Sabel Corazon used this droid to hold the computer virus she was going to introduce to Premier Provisions' central computer. The droid was intercepted by Alliance agents, who used him to infiltrate Gryseium and foil the plans of Corazon. (SN)

R2-X0

this astromech droid was owned by the Krish mechanic known as Maniac. Maniac nicknamed the droid Patchwork, as he spent much of his free time modifying the droid for a myriad of uses. The droid had a great deal of additional armor plating, and Maniac installed a variety of additional tools around the droid's carcass. R2-X0 often emitted a high-pitched giggle after Maniac spoke, a modification many felt that Maniac implemented himself. (CRO)

R2-X2

this black and white astromech droid was Red Ten's companion during the Battle of Yavin. (CCG)

R2-X9

this astromech droid was part of the droid pool which worked at the Mon Calamari shipyards, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. It was R2-X9 which discovered Ral Shawgrim's escape from the facility, when an unauthorized shuttle blasted away from the shipyards. Thanks to R2-X9, the plans for the T-65 starfighter which were carried by Shawgrim were recovered. (SWJ4)

R2-Z1

this was the designation of Tereb Ab'Lon's astromech droid, affectionately known as Fweep. (SWJ3)

R2-Z13

this was the designation of Koril Bekam's astromech droid, which he nicknamed Plug. (EL2)

R2-Z4

this astromech droid was owned by Kara Saffch, and was put to work on the Night Havoc. (PG2)

R2Z-DL

known as Toozy, this droid was the only astromech ever to earn the Alliance's Rohal Cross for valor. At one time, Toozy was owned by a deep-cover Alliance operative, but the agent was assassinated by the minions of crimelord Qa'till. Qa'till took control of the droid, and eventually placed it in his labor pool on Hypotria, where Qa'till controlled all the starship maintenance operations. Toozy remained loyal to the Alliance, however, stealing information from starships which land on Hypotria and relaying important data to the Alliance. It was Toozy who tipped off Koedi Raef to the Empire's movements near Vilosoria, during the Alliance's liberation of the planet. Raef was awarded the Rohal Cross for the successful liberation of the planet, but Raef refused the award and deferring it to Toozy. (CRO)

R3-A2

this R3-series astromech was upgraded to provide coordination of piloting angles and approach vectors during combat. (CCG9)

R3-D Series Droid

this astromech droid was developed during the last decades of the Old Republic, to assist on starfighters with target acquisition and management. The use of an R3-D droid allowed the pilot to concentrate on flying the craft. The original design of the Aethersprite-class interceptor called for an R3-D astromech. (AOTCN)

R3-K8

this R3-series astromech droid was assigned to the droid pool aboard the New Republic corvette FarStar, during the search for Imperial Moff Kentor Sarne. R3-K8 was unusual in that it had been fitted with an astromech voice box, to better communicate with its living counterparts. (DARK)

R-3PO

this copper-colored protocol droid served the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. R-3PO was once owned by the smuggler Chaz, who left the droid behind during a mission and never returned to retrieve it. Major Palo Torshan had R-3PO programmed to search out and identify espionage droids which the Empire had infiltrated into Alliance bases. R-3PO was stationed at Echo Base, on Hoth, where its garish paintjob caused many undercover Imperial agents to disregard its presence. R-3PO had the words "Thank the Maker" tattooed on its left posterior plating. (CCG3, SWI74)

R3-series Droid

the R3 series of astromech droids from Industrial Automaton had more memory and advanced circuitry than their predecessors, the R1 and R2 series, making them more efficient at calculating hyperspace jumps. The R3 was given a clear plastex dome as a marketing move, allowing owners to literally "see" the droid working on solutions. The specialization of the R3-series limited its applicability to military starships, but its high pricetag made the series highly profitable. Note that Star Wars Insider, issue 76, indicates that the R3 was considered a scout droid. (CCG, EGD, SWJ7, SWI76)

R3-series Droid

this was a series of simple droids. (GG7)

R3-T2

this astrmoech escaped from a crew of pirates that was based in Mos Eisley, on Tatooine, and roamed the spaceport town in an effort to avoid them. R3-T2 had increased memory capacity over most standard R3 units, and was programmed to both enhance and sabotage hyperdrive systems. Note that this R3 unit does not have a clear dome. (CCG9)

R3-T6

this Imperial astromech droid had red and white markings, and served aboard the first Death Star. (CCG2)

R3-T7

this yellow-trimmed astromech droid was often seen rolling through the Coco District of Coruscant, during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. (SWI69)

R-4

this reconnaissance droid was produced by Arakyd during the early years of the New Order. The primary mission of the R-4 droid, like that of other series before it, was to infiltrate a remote location and send tactical coordinates back to a weapons emplacement, allowing for pinpoint targetting across great distances, without sacrificing an organic team to make the journey. (LAWS)

R-408

this was a series of mainframe computers that were used on many backwater worlds during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SWI77)

R-41 Starchaser

an outdated form of starship, often found in pirate fleets. These insectile ships are sleek, 15-meter-long fighters armed with 2 laser cannons and 2 ion cannons, with minimal 30-SBD shields protecting a 15-RU hull. (TIE)

R-444

this is the designation of Nen-Carvon's sky swooper. The R-444 is essentially a repulsor-equipped hang glider, and they are armed with a single blaster. The pilot rests in a sling, and controls the flight of the glider with hand and foot controls. The vigilance needed to concentrate on all aspects of controlling flight makes firing the blaster difficult. The R-444 were primarily used by Imperial troops on stealth raids, or on planets with difficult terrains. The overall unit measures 4 meters in length. (CFG)

R4-B11

this agromech droid was controlled by Slythor the Squib shortly after the Battle of Yavin, although Slythor soon tired of R4-B11's inability to handle even the simplest of tasks. R4-B11 was known to be cranky and destructive, and Slythor had it disassembled and rebuilt to his own specifications as an assassin droid. The familiar appearance of the agromechs allowed R4-B11 to get close to its targets, and Slythor often added R4-B11 as part of a trade whenever Slythor wanted to recover what he gave away. Once "sold," R4-B11 would kill its new owners and return to Slythor, at which time the Squib would recover the other objects. (OE)

R4-D1

this was one of the two astromech droids used by Darrus Jeht aboard his Delta-6 fighter, during the height of the Clone Wars. The Delta-6 was one of several prototypes that remained in active use after the production of the Delta-7, and Jeht chose to leave the two-astromech set-up intact. However, R4-D1 and its companion, R4-D2, often provided more input data than the ship's flight computer could handle, causing certain instabilities to occur at the worst of times. The droids also tended to argue with each other over their input, causing another set of problems. Jeht, however, liked the unpredictability of the craft, and kept it at the Almas Academy along with the Night Gyre. (LFCW)

R4-E1

this Industrial Automaton creation was the companion of BoShek, and was a fiercely independent droid. R4-E1 was similar in size and construction to R5-D4. (CCG)

R4-G9

this bronze-colored astromech droid was assigned to the new Jedi starfighter used by Obi-Wan Kenobi, during the last months of the Clone Wars. R4-G9 replaced the trusty astromech R4-P17, which had been destroyed during the First Battle of Coruscant. On Utapau, Obi-Wan had R4-G9 fly off in control of the Jedi's starfighter, in an effort to fool General Grievous into believing that Obi-Wan himself was leaving the planet. (SWI73, OWS, VD3)

R4-I9

this black-colored R4-series maintenance and repair droid was one of the multitude of droids deployed by the Empire aboard the first Death Star. (VD)

R4-J1

this astromech droid was purchased by an Outer Rim scavenger many decades prior to the Battle of Yavin. Over time, R4-J1 developed an unusual trait that caused it to jury-rig the devices and equipment it was supposed to properly repair. R4-J1 also developed a scavenging routine of its own, often scouring junkyards for parts it "might need later." Despite its quirks, R4-J1 was nevertheless an excellent mechanic. (RESB)

R4-J9

this astromech droid was part of the droid pool which was assigned to the Twi'leki scouts who set out to explore the moon of Uffel. When their ship crashed, R4-J9 was one of three droids which managed to survive the crash and repair themselves. R4-J9 went to work for QS-2D, surveying the mineral deposits of the moon and helping to set up mining operations to obtain raw materials from which to manufacture droids. (LFC)

R4-M17

this stubborn but hardworking Industrial Automation agromech droid was owned by a Mos Eisley moisture farmer. (GG7)

R4-M9

this multi-purpose droid was designed to control and repair computers and vehicles. This black-and-white striped droid was used by Darth Vader's team to search the computer core of the Tantive IV for information on the stolen plans to the first Death Star. (CCG)

R4-P Series Droid

this series of astromech droids was developed during the last decades of the Old Republic. These astromechs were used in place of R3-D series astromechs whenever a pilot was skilled enough to handle the weaponry of their starfighter, even during a dogfight or evasive maneuvers. (AOTCN)

R4-P17

this R4-P series astromech droid was owned by Obi-Wan Kenobi, and was used on his Jedi starfighter Delta-7, some ten years after the Battle of Naboo. It started out as a standard R4-unit, including the truncated conical head, operating on the planet Gyndine. R4-P17 had a female personality, and was nearly destroyed when she fell into a trash compactor and later scrapped. Anakin Skywalker discovered the unit and rebuilt it for use as an astromech droid. Because of the extensive damage caused by the compactor accident, R4-P17 was rebuilt with a smaller main body. It eventually became the prototype of the astromech used for the Aethersprite-class interceptor, being further reduced in size and serving as a dedicated astromech to the ship. After the Battle of Geonosis, R4-P17 and Obi-Wan's starfighter were recovered from Geonosis, and R4-P17 was restored to its former configuration, complete with a body and legs. R4-P17's replacement was destroyed, along with Obi-Wan's starfighter, some six months before the First Battle of Coruscant, when Obi-Wan rescued Quinlan Vos from the Titavian IV. R4-P17 was then restored to "active duty" when it was placed in the astromech socket of Obi-Wan's Eta-2 Actis Interceptor during the First Battle of Coruscant. Unfortunately, a buzz droid managed to latch onto Obi-Wan's fighter and ripped the "head" off R4-P17, rendering the droid useless. (SWI57, SWDB, AOTCN, SWI80, RDR, IS3, E3N)

R4-S2

this astromech droid was part of the droid pool which was assigned to the Twi'leki scouts who set out to explore the moon of Uffel. When their ship crashed, R4-S2 was one of three droids which managed to survive the crash and repair themselves. R4-S2 went to work for QS-2D, surveying the mineral deposits of the moon and helping to set up mining operations to obtain raw materials from which to manufacture droids. (LFC)

R4-series Droid

produced by Industrial Automaton, the R4-series of astromech droids was developed for ground-based use by civilians who needed repair and maintenance of landspeeders and other repulsorlift vehicles. In an unusual move, Industrial Automaton targetted the R4-series specifically for the Outer Rim market. Based on the R2 series but with fewer astrogation capabilities, the R4 was successful because it was cheap and reliable, meeting the needs and requirements of its target audience. It utilized the existing Intellex IV droid brain, which was populated with repulsorcraft designs instead of starship information. Note that the

this pol-droid intercepted R2-D2 and C-3PO on Vorzyd 5, after Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa were captured by Imperial forces. R2-D2 managed to slip out of R-55's grasp, while keeping C-3PO quiet long enough to get free. (CSWEA)

R5-A2

this orange maintenance droid was often seen roaming the streets of Mos Eisley, during the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. (CCG2)

R5-D2

Wedge Antilles' astromech droid, he often referred to it as "Mynock." When the droid required a memory wipe, shortly before the Battle of Thyferra, Zraii wiped it and gave it some new programming. This resulted in the droid's designation changing to R5-G8. (XWN, BW) often simply referred to as Red, this Industrial Automaton droid was one of the last R5 units ever built. Red was purchased by Owen Lars from the Jawas, just before he purchased C-3PO. R5-D4's motivator (or servomotor-central) blew just after purchase, so Owen ended up buying R2-D2 instead. The Star Wars Radio Drama explains that R2-D2 modified R5-D4 so that its would motivator would fail, drawing attention to himself. R5-D4 then spent a number of days riding along inside the Jawa's sandcrawler, until the sandcrawler was attacked by Imperial forces looking for R2-D2 and C-3PO. R5-D4 was in no condition to move, and bided his time until another group of Jawas came by to claim the left-over machinery. R5-D4 made it back to Mos Eisley, where he was purchased by Voren Na'al and reprogrammed. With the help of Momaw Nadon, Na'al sold R5-D4 to the local Imperial prefect's assistant administrator. There, R5-D4 recorded everything is heard and saw, holding the data until it could be recovered by Nadon. After the Battle of Yavin, it was rumored that R5-D4 had some sensitivity to The Force, although this was never proven. There was a story of a Jedi droid named Skippy that matched R5-D4's description. (SWN, SWR, MTS, T1)

R5-D4

R5-G8

this was the new designation given to Wedge Antilles' astromech droid Mynock, after Zraii gave it a memory wipe. Zraii also added new programming, and the droid was redesignated R5-G8. Wedge shorted this to just "Gate." (BW)

R5-L4

this astromech was owned by Kyp Durrion, and used to assist in piloting Kyp's T-65XJ starfighter, during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. It was R5-L4 - known as Elfour - who located the record of the ExGal-4 Spacecaster shuttle as it passed through the Veragi Sector on its way to Helska. When the Dozen-and-Two Avengers were intercepted by the Yuuzhan Vong at Helska, Kyp was the only member to escape the ambush. However, in a desperate flight into hyperspace, R5-L4 was unable to prevent the X-Wing's internal systems from shutting down, then was destroyed itself in a flash of electric fire. (VP)

R5-M1

this noisy, slow-moving astromech droid is employed by Fiz Cor'gril as a starship mechanic. The Verpine Garginoolaara has worked with R5-M1 to keep its personality from getting sour, but was unable to repair some of the droid's quirks. R5-M1 has the annoying habit of beeping and chirping to itself, and a malfunctioning acoustic signaller sometimes raises the sound level to unbearable levels. (SWJ9)

R5-M2

this R5 droid was owned by Shawn Valdez. It was primarily on Alliance combat starships, plotting tactical sublight courses. R5-M2 was instrumental in planning the evacuation routes for the Alliance ships stationed at Hoth's Echo Base, prior to the Battle of Hoth. (CCG3)

R5-R5

this was the astromech droid which was owned by the Gungan trader Toba, to help him fly the Sea Killer. (WOTC)

R5-series Droid

the fifth in the R series of astromech droids built by Industrial Automaton, the R5 was cheapest and - understandably - the lowest-quality of the entire series. The R5 series was commissioned by Industrial Automaton's President, Julynn Kentas, with minimal market testing to determine whether or not the public needed (or wanted) another astromech droid. The R5s were somewhat quirky, and developed sour, bitter personalities as they aged unless they received regular memory wipes. Because of its problems and the lack of public acceptance, the R5-series of astromechs was the last Industrial Automaton astromech produced during the New Order. Note that the HoloNetNews.com website indicates that the R5-series was discontinued just before the Clone Wars. (SWSB, SWJ7, SWJ9, FTD, HNN4)

R5-series Droid

R5-X2

this astromech droid was employed by Jabba the Hutt. Its programming had been severely modified, and R5-X2 was primarily used to calculate the current odds of any gambling event and its participants. R5-X2 was extremely adept at the odds-making on pod races. R5-X2 was also responsible for maintaining a running count of the Hutt's winnings on these events. Shortly before the fateful Boonta Eve Classic race won by young Anakin Skywalker, R5-X2 predicted the order of finish to be Sebulba, Gasgano, and Mawhonic. R5-X2 had indicated that Anakin had an outside chance of winning. (IG1, PRT)

R6-A1

this was the designation of Eelo Begraas' astromech unit, which helped him fly the modified starfighter Dicer. Begraas nicknamed the droid Shootfirst, in reference to the droid's upgraded armament and rapid-fire programming. Note that this droid's designation was also referred to as R6-S1 on the Wizards of the Coast website. (WOTC)

R6-series Droid

this series of astromech droids was produced by Industrial Automaton shortly after the Battle of Endor, in an effort to recover from financial and commercial failure of the R5 series. The R6 was produced for civilian use during the development of the R7 series. The R6 was based on the R2 series, with expanded hyperspace coordinate storage, and was heavily shielded against electrical discharges. The R6-series was preceded by an intense marketing campaign, designed to refurbish Industrial Automaton's image and reinvoke the demand for astromechs. (SOL, EGD, SWJ7)

R77

this Super Battle Droid was stationed aboard the Invisible Hand during the First Battle of Coruscant. R77 was among the first droids to realize that Anakin Skywalker had sabotaged one of the main fuel cells, during his escape from another group of battle droids. Before R77 and its companions could escape, the fuel was ignited by a sparking power generator and exploded, destroyed all the droids in the immediate area. (IS3)

R7-series Droid

part of the prestigious series of Industrial Automaton astromech droids, the R7 was designed shortly after the Battle of Endor to work with the new FreiTek E-wing fighters. The development of the R7 series was a corporate secret, and occurred during the media blitz that surrounded its predecessor, the R6 series. The R7 bore a slight resemblance to the R2 unit, having two permanent and one retractable legs. They have a different body shape, though, which inhibits the use of R2 units in the E-Wing, as well as the use of R7s in an X-Wing or Y-Wing. The R7 can hold up to 15 hyperspace jump coordinates in its memory. They were heavily shielded against electrical discharges. (DE1, DESB, SOL, EGD, SWJ7)

the R7-series astromech droid employed by Luke Skywalker on the E-Wing he borrowed from the New Republic. (BTS)

this was the model number of one of Arakyd's jump boots. These lightweight, full-leg boots offered cable-attached hand controls for greater freedom of movement and ease of use over standard jet packs or rocket packs. (ROE)

R-88

known as the Suppressor, this was the Merr-Sonn riot control weapon produced for the police forces which protected the planet Coruscant during the height of the New Order. Using compressed Brix-C fluid, the R-88 fired a continuous, aerosol stream of stunning chemicals at its target. With two cylindrical tanks, the R-88 could be fired ten times before needing to be recharged. The stormtroopers who used the R-88 liked it for its accuracy, which was comparable to most modern blasters. (WOTC)

R8-series Droid

this series of Industrial Automaton astromech droids was produced shortly after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. During its development, it was rumored that the R8-series would have been the first from Industrial Automaton to speak Basic, but this never happened. (VOF, SWJ7)

R-97

this grumpy Bossikan/Rendili droid served as the quartermaster on the New Republic corvette FarStar, monitoring the ship's supplies along with SE-4-LQ3. (DARK, KR)

R-97

this was a series of quartermaster droids produced by Bossikan/Rendili. (DARK)

R-9X

Gyrhil laser cannons used on the B-Wing. (XW)

Ra

this was a common, though archaic, name given to Zabrak males. Its original meaning was lost over time. (GCG)

Ra

this Huttese pronoun was used to describe one's self. It translated roughly into Basic as "me." (E1A14)

'ra

this suffix was added to a Bothan's family name to indicate the individual's affiliation to the Ara or Ira clans. (GCG, WOTC)

Ra Yasht

a Kalkal academic who, along with Skarten, wrote the paper Torture Observed: An Interview With Jabba's Cook. This work brought both of them instant tenure at Beshka University, much to the chagrin of P'tan. (TJP)

Ra, Vonnda

a Nightsister who was trained in the use of the Dark Side of the Force away from Dathomir, she returned to recruit Light Side witches to join her at the Shadow Academy for training. She had set up camp in the Great Canyon when Luke Skywalker and Tenel Ka returned to Dathomir. She failed to bring Tenel Ka into the Academy's ranks, and returned to the station after recruiting many other Singing Mountain Clan sisters. Later, during the attack on Kashyyyk, she assisted Zekk in stealing large amounts of starship components before attacking Jacen Solo, Tenel Ka, Lowbacca, and Sirrakuk. In a struggle with Sirra, the two fell into a syren plant. The other three youths managed to rescue Sirra, but Vonnda Ra was caught and eaten by the syren. (SA, DK)

RA44390/C-3PO

this was the datafile that contained C-3PO's debriefing after the Darker was discovered on the planet Arbra, shortly after the Battle of Hoth. (PH)

RA-7

this was a model of fifth-degree primary programming, low-intelligence labor droid produced by Arakyd for the Empire. They became known as "Death Star Droids" because huge numbers of RA-7 units were ordered as part of the droid pool for the first Death Star. Humanoid in shape, with insectile plating, they are commonly used by nobles and high-ranking officials. Despite the lack of capability, as exploited by Arakyd's competitors, the RA-7 nonetheless met every specification of the Empire, and was produced in huge numbers for the Empire. The reason for this was simple: many RA-7s were order by the Imperial Security Bureau, and reprogrammed to act as spies to keep records on the activities of Imperial bureaucrats and dignitaries. The droid's normally-sealed internal components led many to believe that they couldn't be tampered with, until hidden cameras and surveillance comlinks were discovered to be hidden within their shells. (CCG2, EGD, SWDB, AEG)

Raabakyysh

this young, female Wookiee was a friend of Sirrakuk. Known to her friends as Raaba, she was enamored of Lowbacca, Sirra's brother. When Lowie chose to pursue his own rite of passage, he gave Raaba several ideas on how to prove herself. When Lowie later joined the Jedi Academy on Yavin 4, Raaba believed that the only way she was going to get off Kashyyyk and into the spacers' school she wanted to attend was to perform her own rite of passage. Both Raaba and Sirra dreamed of making a name for themselves as pilots, although Raaba wanted to be an explorer rather than a pilot, charting new hyperspace routes. She and Sirra agreed to leave secretly and return home as adults, but Raaba took off into the lower jungles by herself. She hoped this show of bravery would win Lowie's heart. Raaba was not seen again, and only her bloody backpack was ever found. Lowie carried a secret burden over her disappearance, feeling somewhat responsible. It was later learned that she was captured by forces of the Second Imperium and the Diversity Alliance, and she used her talents as a pilot for Nolaa Tarkona. When she discovered that Tarkona was infected with one of Evir Derricote's viruses, Raaba took the Twi'lek on a blind hyperspace jump and disappeared. Raaba then landed on a remote world and quarantined them, in hopes that the virus never spread to the rest of the galaxy. (DK, TEP)

Raad Hak

this Mon Calamari held the rank of Major within the Alliance, and served as Oracle Base's chief deck officer. Raad was extremely efficient, and demanded that every incoming and outgoing ship and pilot meet with him in order to confirm their presence. Despite the Alliance's employment of smugglers and other fringe elements, Raad disliked them and treated them with the minimum of decorum. (FBS)

Raal

this was one of the more common Kel Dor surnames. Its meaning translated into Basic as "fire warden". (GCG)

Raamen

it was believed that Granta Omega fled to this planet, after his defeat on Mawan. (WOTC)

Raas, Cha

this nefarious agent of the Imperial Security Bureau was an apprentice of Babel Torsh, and was known to hate everyone and everything, including his own mentor. Raas was also a master of disguise, using a variety of identities insinuate himself into a situation without any being aware of his true being. He spent much of his career working with Torsh on Adarlon, trying to locate and eliminate the source of illegal holo-videos being produced by and for the Alliance. (WSV)

Raava

this was the traditional Socorran liquor, brewed from the zsajhira berries which grew near caches of water in the Doaba Badlands. The berries were fermented in a mixture made from purified water from the planet Neftali. The recipe for raava was originally developed by shamen of the Ibhaan'I tribe and was eventually entrusted to the Ethra Brewery, and was a heavily guarded secret. When presented to another Socorran, along with the gold hoop Socorran men wear in their ear, it demands that the receiver provide any assistance they can to the bearer. (SWJ8, BSS)

Raazor S'ovah

this Herglic was noted in the history of the planet Giju. (UANT)

Rab Po

this name, which meant "round belly", was common among Gungan males. (GCG)

Rabaan

this ancient Corellian explorer supposedly rejected the typical Corellian life of a spacer and chose to remain on a planet. Of course, this history is questionable, since it is known that one of Rabaan's planetary expeditions settled the planet Rabaan (named for him) in the Ishanna System. (SWJ9)

Rabaan

this planet is the fourth world in the Ishanna System. It has a single moon known as the Combat Moon, on which the humans of Rabaan and the S'krri have settled their differences in armed combat. A temperate world, Rabaan was settled by a group of Corellian explorers some 7,300 years before the Galactic Civil War. It was named for the expedition's leader. They thought the system was devoid of life, until they discovered the S'krri living on the third planet in the system. The average day on Rabaan lasts 27 standard hours, and its year encompasses 375 local days. (SWJ9)

Rabaanite

this is the name given to the human inhabitants of the planet Rabaan. They have a fairly rigid caste system which glorifies warriors. The warrior caste is highly regarded, due mainly to the fact that the strongest Rabaanite warrior is sent to the Combat Moon to battle the strongest S'krri whenever a dispute between the two races arises. This combat was initiated about 1,000 years after the planet Rabaan was colonized, and continued through the reign of Emperor Palpatine. The Rabaanites frown on public displays of affection, especially among couples who have not been Promised to each other. Upper-eschelon Rabaanite warriors are awarded a red bandoleer. The best of these warriors is awarded a sunburst sigil which is attached to the bandoleer. The best of the combat artists is chosen to represent Rabaan in Combat. (SWJ9)

Rabac

this was a species of tiny, burrowing creature. (SBS)

Raban

one of the security officers who worked aboard the Kuari Princess during the Galactic Civil War. (TFE)

Rabb

this Sullustan served as an Admiral in the New Republic Navy, having trained under Sien Sovv. (SBS)

Rabbit's Foot

this was the N-class freighter, a modified WUD-5000, owned by Jaxxon. The ship was refitted with a pair of quadlaser cannons and two ion cannons for weaponry, along with improved hull plating and shields. Jaxxon first purchased the ship on Nar Shaddaa, but even after refitting it was a troublesome ship to operate. Mechanical problems forced Jaxxon to land on the planet Aduba-3, where he was stranded until he could scrounge up replacement parts. It was on Aduba-3 that Jaxxon met Han Solo and Amaiza, and helped them defeat Serji-X Arrogantus. He and Amaiza then teamed up to make several smuggling runs with the Rabbit's Foot before being jumped by Valance's goons. They raced Valance to Aduba-3, shortly after the Battle of Yavin, but the Rabbit's Foot was shot down in a brief firefight over the planet. (MC16, SWDB, GMR4)

Rabe

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Rabe'

this young Naboo woman served as one of Queen Amidala's loyal handmaidens. Like the other handmaidens, Rabe' was chosen by Captain Panaka for her strength, loyalty, and resemblance to Amidala. Rabe's main skills were in weapons and persuasion, and she was also very good with makeup. It was Rabe' who was often responsible for the elaborate hairstyles worn by the Queen. When young Anakin Skywalker came to say goodbye to Padme' on Coruscant, it was Rabe' who allowed him in to see Queen Amidala. Rabe' as portrayed by Christina da Silva in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace. (SW1, JQA, IS1, VD1, SON)

Rabelaisian

this alien race is known for its gluttonous banquets and dinners. (POT)

Rabid Mynocks

a swoop gang that patrolled the city of Gallisport, on Shesharile 5, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. They were probably the most powerful of the swoop gangs in Gallisport, and they were the only gang established to protect the city rather than destroy it. The Mynocks were constantly at odds with the Spiders and the Raging Banthas. At one point, both rival gangs joined forces to eliminate the Mynocks, but the attempt was unsuccessful. (SWJ6)

Rabin

this was a common name for Ewok males. Like other Ewok names, it referred to a spirit or character in the Ewoks' mythology. (GCG)

Rabin

according to Ewok legend, this nature spirit could take on the forms of different animals, complete with their characteristics. (GCG)

Rabin

this brown, tan, and white-striped Ewok was a member of Chief Chirpa's tribe, although Rabin was something of a loner. Known for his skills in taming the wild animals of Endor, Rabin was also a proficient hunter and thief. (CCG10)

Rabutz

this green-skinned humanoid, a native of the planet Solem, worked as a shoemaker in the city of G'ai Solem during the early stages of the Galactic Civil War. Boba Fett tracked him down, during his search for Yolan Bren. Rabutz panicked, and inadvertently led the bounty hunter to the rebels' hideout. (SWES)

Race Bond

this was a form of script that was developed by Motta the Hutt, many millennia before the Battle of Yavin. These digital certifications, despite their origins, were redeemable throughout the galaxy for their purchase value, usually without any form of identification. (KOTOR)

Race Wing

this was the name used to describe the lightweight gliders created on the planet Coruscant to race around the garbage pits used to eliminate the cityworld's waste. In garbage pit racing, the racer used their race wings to glide down into the garbage pits, using small maneuvering jets to change direction. These small jets provided the only source of onboard propulsion, however. The idea behind garbage pit racing was to use the repulsor and tractor fields, used to expel trash modules into orbit, to provide lift. (CCW, RP)

Racer's Edge

this cantina was located near the Mos Espa Arena, and catered to the thousands of beings who travelled to Tatooine to watch the pod races during the last years of the Old Republic. (E1A6)

Raceship

any fast starship used in racing events. (CS)

Raceway Line

this spur of the Umgul City monorail commutubes links the Katsu Line with the blob arenas. (JASB)

Race-Wings

this special apparatus was used by thrill-seekers on Coruscant during garbage pit races. The race wings were formed from a special, lightweight frame to which a racer was strapped. Small jet engines were mounted on the tips of the wings, and a thin membrane covered the frames to provide resistance. Once strapped in, the racer would out into the air and actually fly. With tiny servomotors, the wings could be drawn in or spread out to enhance maneuverability, and the engines provided lift whenever a breeze was unavailable. An optical cup was available, providing realtime status data to the racer. (RP)

Rachalt Hyst

this female Snivvian was known to have betrayed her loved ones, only to have her treachery discovered. Her surviving relatives stranded her on the desert world of Tatooine and left her to die. Distraught over her own failures, Rachal Hyst spent most of her life in a stupor at the Mos Eisley cantina. (CCG12)

Rachott

this female Ugnaught worked as a medical technician for the Grand Army of the Republic, during the height of the Clone Wars. She was stationed on the planet Drongar, at the Rimsoo Twelve medical hospital, when she discovered that historical data on the development of the bota plant revealed that it was losing its potency as a medical wonder-drug. Mutation was inevitable on Drongar, but the hope had been that bota was more resistant. (MJH)

Rach'talik

this Twi'lek worked for Shala the Hutt on Courkrus as a demolitions expert. Like most Twi'leks, Rach'talik had been secretly plotting to get rid of his master and take control of his enterprises. When Shala demanded that Rach'talik set up a trap for the "avenging Jedi" that was terrorizing Vlarnya, Rach'talik saw a chance to remove two obstacles from his path. Unfortunately for Rach'talik, the "avenging Jedi" was Corran Horn, who recognized the trap for its potential and managed to escape. (IJ)

Rachtorwood

this tree, native to the planet Orellon II, was known for its strong, tightly-grained wood. The Kentra used rachtorwood branches to create clubs and staves. (SWJ2)

Rachuk

primary planet in the Rachuk System. (XWN)

Rachuk Roseola

a skin inflammation caused by a virus found in the Rachuk System, this form of roseola infects nearly every visitor to Vladet, unless they are properly vaccinated prior to arrival. (XWN)

Rackus

this was one of the many Twi'leki clans which were native to the planet Ryloth. In the Twi'leki language, the clan's name meant "happy". (GCG)

Racor

this was one of the many Twi'leki clans which were native to the planet Ryloth. In the Twi'leki language, the clan's name meant "laughing". (GCG)

Racto, Lannik

this small-time criminal worked on the planet Coruscant during the early years of the New Republic. He made a good - though illegal - living selling illegal assassin droids, which were built in a hidden facility on Nar Shaddaa. His operations were infiltrated by Jaden Korr some ten years after the Battle of Endor, and Racto was brought in for questioning. His factory on Nar Shaddaa was destroyed by New Republic forces shortly afterward. (JKA)

Radank

this was a species of vicious, clawed creature native to the homeworld of the Yuuzhan Vong. (SBS)

Radassa

meaning "twirling", this name was common among Gungan females. (GCG)

Radd Hardwikk

this male Clantaani was a known associate of Longo Two-Guns during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. The Mos Eisley security force issued a bounty for his capture in connection with a riot that occurred after patrons of a local podrace purchased exploding chubas. He was also implicated in the distribution of illegal communication tools. The bounty was eventually claimed by Jango Fett, who was on Tatooine trying to arrange a meeting with Jabba. (BH)

Raddadugh Fluttercraft

this was a form of glider that was developed and produced by the Wookiees of Kashyyyk. (X3)

Raddan

this large, reptilian creature was hunted for its thick hide, which was used to create protective vests and jackets. (VD2)

Rade

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Radek

this Duros smuggler was a friend of Fenig Nabon. Both Fenig and Radek were involved in a barroom brawl at the Black Dust Tavern, on Socorro, shortly after the Battle of Endor. They exchanged blows, more to keep the spirit of the event than anything else. (GMR2)

Radell Central

this city, located north of Elrooden on Elrood's largest continent, was the headquarters of Radell Mining Corporation. (PG3)

Radell Mining Corporation

a mining operation that worked almost exclusively in the Elrood Sector. Their headquarters was located on Elrood, and they owned many planets in the sector, including Halbara. During the Galactic Civil War, Radell was the primary economic force in the sector, and spent most of its time fending off the advances of Imperial Mining Limited. To this end, Radell began employing scouts and explorers to seek out more worlds to mine. (PG3, OE)

Radeon

this is the second-largest moon of the planet Algara II. It supports a small mining community. (PG2)

Raders, Ram

this man served the Old Republic navy as a Corporal aboard the Ranger, during the height of the Clone Wars. When the Ranger was boarded by Separatist battle droids, during the fight for control of the planet Praesitlyn, Corporal Raders was among the guards who accompanied Jedi Master Nejaa Halcyon to engage them before they could take control of the ship. Both Raders and his partner, Private Vick, were later chosen to serve as Halcyon's personal guards, after the Republic's forces were able to land on Praesitlyn. Upon landing on Praesitlyn, both Raders and Vick signed up for scout duty, preferring the action to sitting around waiting for the battle to start. After returning to base with Odie Subu and Erk

H'Arman in tow, Raders and Vick were then allowed to sit in the command center with Halcyon and his leaders, Anakin Skywalker and Zozridor Slayke, to devise a new plan to defeat the Separatists. They were surprised and eager when Skywalker chose them as the point men for his daring mission to rescue the hostages at the Intergalactic Communications Center. (JT)

Radi, Kennis

this Chandrilan youth served as the junior Chancellor in the Legislative Youth Program's roleplaying of the vote on the Military Creation Act, during the months leading up to the actual vote in the Galactic Senate. (HNN5)

Radiance

this passenger liner made a regular trip between Corellia and Coruscant, during the early years of the New Order. Han Solo and Bria Tharen used it to flee Corellia after Han's past was discovered by Bria's mother and brother. (TPS)

Radiant Splendor

this aging Barzo freighter was in a poor state of disrepair when it was acquired in a game of dice by Kelna Toodo, shortly after the Battle of Naboo. When Toodo investigated its holds, he found a worthless mixture of cloth and holocubes before uncovering a caged Corellian sand panther. His plans to sell the ship for scrap were dashed, and Toodo had to figure out a way to get rid of the sand panther without getting into trouble. After he was ordered by Beeda the Hutt to eliminate a group of meddlers, Kelna figured he could strand them inside the Radiant Splendor and have the sand panther kill them. He could then kill the sand panther on the grounds of self-defense and be done with it. With the help of Lyt Re, Toodo managed to "lose" the Radiant Splendor to the meddlers in a sabacc match. Kelna's plan also worked to perfection. However, the meddlers managed to get the sand panther back in its cage, and jettisoned Kelna in an escape pod. They took the Radiant Splendor to the nearest system and turned it over to the authorities. (WOA35)

Radiant VII

this consular ship served the Old Republic for 34 years before transporting Qiu-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi to Naboo, for their negotiations with the Trade Federation Viceroy Nute Gunray. The ship delivered the Jedi on time, but was ordered destroyed by Darth Sidious. The ship, along with her crew of 8, were reduced to smoldering cinders by the Federation's automated defense systems. A beautiful Corellian Engineering Corporation Republic Cruiser, the Radiant VII measured 115 meters in length. Its forward section resembled that of the later Corellian Gunship, while its aft section was dominated by three Dyne 577 radial atomizing sublight engines. Being a purely diplomatic vessel, as noted by its red coloration, the ship had no weaponry, but did have 9 escape pods to handle its maximum of sixteen passengers. (SW1, X1)

Radigan

this tattooed man was the leader of a swoop gang that terrorized the city of Tel Bollin, on the planet Endregaad, during the early years of the New Order. Radigan and his gang were known as tempest addicts, and the drug was at the center of their vicious raids on non-humans and those afflicted with the Endregaad Plague. (TF)

Radion Modulator

this spherical device was used as a musical instrument. (VD)

Radionics

an outmoded form of communication which uses modulated, low-frequency electromagnetic radiation waves to send data. It was constrained by the speed of light, and could not transcend the hyperspace boundary. Although obsolete, it is still used for low-cost planetary transmissions. (AC)

Radix

this planet, located within the garbage-filled Abraxas System, was itself covered with layers of discarded mining equipment and other industrial scrap. (T5)

Radlin

this Imperial officer was one of the troops guarding the Empire's garrison on Zelos II, shortly after the Battle of Endor. A Sergeant, he was killed when Platt Okeefe and Tru'eb Cholakkk stormed the garrison in an effort to rescue Dirk Harkness. (TFNR)

Radni

this root of this vegetable was often ground up and used as a chewable for of tobacco. (BF2)

Radnor

this planet was the homeworld of the Radnoran people. (JQ1)

Radnoran

this alien race was native to the planet Radnor. The average Radnoran was humanoid is stature, with a short, stocky body. Most Radnorans hated open spaces, preferring to live in cities instead. (JQ1)

Radon-Ulzer

manufacturers of racing and sublight engines. (TPM)

Radtrooper

the shortened term used to describe stormtroopers who were specially trained and equipped for operations in radiation zones. The armor of the radtrooper was based on the armor used by standard stormtroopers, but was impregnated with a lead-polymer substrate that allowed the radtrooper to operate for extended periods in lethal radiation zones. Radtroopers were most often used when the Empire needed to subjugate a planet quickly. Using atomic weapons or neutron bombing runs, any armed resistance on the planet was quickly eliminated. The radtroopers were dispatched almost immediately into the warzones, to mop up any surviving resistance on the ground. (GG9, SWDB)

Rae Vixe

this Gran was the patriarch of the Vixe family, and the father of Cera and Boe Vixe. (IA)

Raech

this being served under General Wedge Antilles, as Commander of the Mon Mothma, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (FP)

Raef, Koedi

this member of the Alliance was a starfighter pilot. She was part of the squadron assigned to facilitate the liberation of Vilosoria from Imperial control. Raef was the recipient of data provided by the droid R2Z-DL, which detailed the flight plans of the Fireclaw in the sector. Raef used the data, and the link back into Imperial databases, to keep the Fireclaw delayed in its patrol, and shifted the Imperial garrison's work schedules to pin the stormtroopers down while Alliance forces swept into the system and liberated the planet. For her bravery and valor in the battle, Raef was given the Rohal Cross. She refused to accept the award, and deferred the commendation to R2Z-DL. (CRO)

Raek

this Bothan name was given to newborn males. Translated into Basic, it meant "graceful." (GCG, WOTC)

Raek, Ute

this Dathomiri witch was a member of the Singing Mountain clan during the early years of the New Republic. (NEGW)

Raelli Ball

this annual event was held by House Melantha during the Capital Season. Note that it is also referred to as the Raeili Ball. (LOE)

Raen Sovra

known as the electrocution worm, this segmented creature is a member of the classification of creatures known as technivores. Its exoskeleton is composed of metallic elements, and the creature subsists by consuming electricity and metals. They were considered a threat to starships and vehicles because of their ability to sense the electricity and metallic content of space-going vehicles, which they attached themselves to and consumed over time, eventually weakening and destroying hulls and computer systems. In general, raen sovra were weak and dumb, but were able to defend themselves by shocking their attacker with a jolt of pure electricity. These creatures were originally discovered - and named for - Doctor Safford Raen, who encountered them in the Mis-Tenek System. Doctor Raen discovered that these worms lived in the root systems of vinna trees, consuming the electricity that is directed into the ground whenever the vinna trees were struck by lightning. (COG)

Raen, Karvinna

this plain-looking young woman was education in xenobiology, and worked for the Alliance Diplomatic Corps during the height of the Galactic Civil War. She served as the primary assistant to Doctor Elth Nardah, working as a researcher and scribe during negotiations with other races. She was shocked when Doctor Nardah was killed by the Karrans, after accepting Darryn Edalm's surrender, and tried to deny his death in her own mind. After overcoming her disbelief, Karvinna and her Alliance escorts discovered the remains of an alien starship. The ship's computer contained video and audio recordings of the alien's first encounters with the Karrans. The aliens themselves were also in the video images, and resembled motile trees. The video showed the Karrans attacking the aliens by themselves and with the help of swarms of insects. After witnessing the Karrans' ability to control the insects first-hand, Raen reported on their abilities to the Alliance. In the wake of Nardah's death, she was promoted and transferred to the investigative branch of the Diplomatic Corps. (SWJ1)

Raen, Safford

this Doctor was credited with the discovery of the raen sovra, during an ill-fated mission to the Mis-Tenek System to study the vinna trees. Several members of his team died from electrocution after coming in contact with the worms which lived near the trees. (COG)

Raf Othrem

this male Twi'lek served as part of Twin Suns Squadron, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (FP)

Rafa Chabalurossa

this casino was located on Rafa V. (BHSW)

Rafa III

the planet on which an extensive deep-bore mining operation is located. (LCM)

Rafa IV

the planet on which Lando Calrissian first visits the Rafa System while hunting for its treasure. It is also the location where Lando was to pick up the Class 2 droid he won from Osuno Whett. It has no natural satellites. It is home to an ideal life-crystal orchard, due to the planet's temperate climate. It is also home to Duttes Mer's prison facility. (LCM)

Rafa System

an eleven-planet system that was extensively settled by the ancient Sharu race, which disappeared eons ago without a trace. They left behind huge buildings and monuments that indicated a growing technology. It is famous for the life-crystals which are grown there (and only on a few planets which accurately imitate Rafa's climate), the life-orchards in which they grow, and Sharu ruins. It was also home to a penal colony where a life sentence meant certain death. It held many of the galaxy's worst criminals and politicians. The system is located near to the Oseon System. (LCM)

Rafa V

the planet on which the Sharu hid the Mindharp, Rafa V is a cold world which barely supports a small life-orchard. The planet has two moons and a thin, breathable atmosphere. It is believed to be the first homeworld of the Sharu. Lando Calrissian and Mohs locate the great pyramid on the planet, and use the Key to enter it and recover the Mindharp. (LCM)

Rafa XI

the smallest, furthest planet on the Rafa System, it supports a minimal population. Lando sends Jandler and his team there after escaping from them on Rafa V. The planet is covered with icy slush. (LCM)

Rafan

the humans inhabitants of the Rafa System, these people have been subjected to life in close proximity to the life-crystals, which has actually altered their physiology. The Rafans are short, squat humans that are often compared to weathered tree-stumps. The Rafans arrived in the Rafa System around the time that the Toka did, and both of them have been affected by the life-crystals. The humans, however, have not suffered from the loss of the Sharu as have the Toka. (LCM)

Raff

this Yuuzhan Vong served as the battle tactician, under the command of Tla, during the assault on Obroa-skai and the planned mission to infiltrate Elan into the Jedi Knights. Raff was outspoken for a mere tactician, but his insight and analytical abilities were often valuable to his commanders. He was considered quite small for a Yuuzhan Vong, and was extremely thin-bodied. His ritual scarring and tattoos were no less horrific than those of a warrior, however, for Raff was a devoted follower of Yun-Yammka. The skin of his enlarged cranium was tattooed with swirls and patterns denoting the incredible brain within. Raff opposed the initial plans to have Elan play the part of a defector, citing the incredible loss of a yorik coral warship and its crew just to make it appear her defection was legitimate. (HT)

Raffaan, Keval

this ancient Jedi Knight was a native of the planet Chandrila, and was a student at the Diplomatic Institute on Coruscant before joining Jedi Master Ma'tien and taking up the study of the Force. He was dispatched to resolve the disputes which arose between the human colonists of Muzara and its native sentient race, the Muza, about 1,000 years after the fall of the Sith Empire. (TOJC)

Raffin, Vanter

this man, a native of the planet Ession, was the chief of security for the planet's government. He was also an Imperial supporter, and worked with warlord Zsinj to make sure Ession was properly aligned. However, Raffin was getting on in age, and Zsinj hoped that he would be replaced by his second-in-command, Paskalian. (WS)

Rafft

a forested planet that was the site of an Imperial garrison that was eliminated during the Galactic Civil War. The Alliance later placed a base there. (SWJ3)

Raffkind Industrials

this corporation produced a number of radiation detection and removal devices, from personal devices hidden in jewelry to larger systems which protected buildings and starships. (ROE, GFT)

Raftican, Tura

a former reporter for the HoloNews Network, Tura joined the Alliance as an Intelligence agent shortly before the Battle of Hoth. She was part of the team assembled by Arhul Hextrophon and Voren Na'al, investigating the history of the Alliance and its struggles against the Empire. (AIR)

Raftin, Velpar

the Imperial Planetary Commandant in charge of Sevarcos during the Galactic Civil War, Raftin was an arrogant man who believed the New Order was the ultimate in political structures. Formerly a member of the Imperial Sector Plexus, Raftin worked hard to ensure that Imperial rule governed Sevarcos, much to the chagrin and consternation of the local spice lords. Raftin went so far as to rig several local elections so that his own cronies were elected to public positions. (SWJ2, SWJ12)

Rafttown

this was a term used to describe the floating shanty towns established by the Selkath, during the Imperial occupation of the planet Manaan. (PH)

Ragab

a silver-colored Mon Calamari who served the Alliance and the New Republic. As a Naval Admiral, Ragab used the captured Star Destroyer Emancipator as his flagship. (XWN)

Ragan Ten

this bounty hunter was based on the planet Taul, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ2)

Ragath

this Barabel individual was famous in the history of Barab I. (UANT)

Rage

this Lancer-class frigate was assigned by the Empire to patrol Darpa Sector and provide support for space station 1B6/Green during the Galactic Civil War. (FOP)

Rage

this was one of the multitude of Imperial-class Star Destroyers which made up the Imperial Navy fleet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Raggold

this man led the rebellion against the pro-Imperial government on the planet Solay, just weeks after the Battle of Endor. Raggold himself had been fighting against the oppressive government for more than fifty years before Luke Skywalker arrived on Solay and provided aid to the rebels. Unfortunately for Raggold, he was shot and killed by a traitorous member of his own rebellion, just before he entered the governmental palace to put an end to the governor. Members of the rebellion claimed that Raggold had been assassinated by a traitor, and Luke set out to find him. However, what Luke learned was that Raggold himself was the traitor, having sold out both the rebels and King Blackart to the Empire. Raggold couldn't reconcile his actions in his own mind, however, and took his own life in the final moments of the rebellion. (MC89)

Raging Banthas

a swoop gang that patrolled Gallisport, on Shesharile 5, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. The Raging Banthas tried to join forces with the Spiders in order to take over parts of the city which were held by the Rabid Mynocks. (SWJ6)

Raglath Nur

this Yuuzhan Vong warrior was assigned to a squad which hunted down any remaining Jedi on the planet Coruscant, shortly after the alien invaders captured the planet from the New Republic. After Viqi Shesh was captured trying to leave Coruscant, she was assigned to Raglath Nur's detachment, when a variety of reports of Force-wielding beings began to trickle into Yuuzhan Vong command posts. Raglaht Nur and his party were killed when they encountered Irek Ismaren, now known as Lord Nyax, deep underneath Coruscant's surface. (EL2)

Ragna III

this forested planet was the homeworld of the Yuzzem race. (EGA)

Ragnar Bounty Hunter Syndicate

based on Ragnar VIII in the Ragnar System, Ragnar was one of the largest professional bounty hunting syndicates of the Outer Rim Territories. Its prowess and reputation has since spread throughout the galaxy. The Syndicate allowed its members to perform freelance hunts, but required that an experienced hunter always take a rookie with them in order to continually teach new hunters the tricks of the trade. Most hunters who of this guild were considered little more than mercenaries, and other hunters were often disdainful of Ragnar's membership. During the height of the New Order, the Ragnar Syndicate was led by Reshton Severindas. (GG9, GG10)

Ragnar VIII

this remote, defensible planet was the primary world in the Ragnar system, located in Merel Sector. (GG9, GG10, SWJ15)

Ragnook Mountains

this mountain chain was located on the main continent of the planet Kothlis. (SPG)

Ragnook Spring Water

this refreshing water was captured from springs hidden in the Ragnook Mountains of the planet Kothlis. (SPG)

RAGOC Missile

developed by Oryn Engineering during the New Order, this was a Repulsor-Assisted Ground-to-Orbit Concussion missile. (HAS)

Ragoon

this was the name of the alien race which was native to the planet Ragoon-6. The Ragoons refused to allow any off-worlders to colonize their planet, and in their isolation a sickness began to decimate their population. Some five years after the Battle of Naboo, only a handful of Ragoons survived. (JQ2)

Ragoon VI

see Ragoon-6 (RDR)

Ragoon-6

this planet was part of a cluster or remote worlds which were famous for their rugged beauty. Ragoon-6 was noted for its high mountains and sheer cliffs. There were no cities on Ragoon-6, nor was there any form of industry. Thus, the environment of the planet was extremely pure and clean, and everything seemed brighter and clearer than on most other worlds. This was mainly due to the stubborn reluctance of the native Ragoons to allow any kind of colonization of their planet. However, certain groups - like the Jedi Knights - were given special dispensation to land on the planet. The Jedi used the planet as a kind of training ground, allowing Master-Padawan teams to go to Ragoon-6 to train together. Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi traveled to Ragoon-6, shortly after Obi-Wan's sixteenth birthday, in an effort to re-focus their thoughts and get back in touch with the living Force. Unfortunately for Qui-Gon, he received a disturbing vision of Tahl's death while on the planet, which clouded his mind until her death on New Apsolon. Years later, Obi-Wan and his apprentice, Anakin Skywalker, survived an assault by bounty hunters who had been sent to Ragoon-6 to capture the Jedi. (TTB, DOH, JQ2)

Rags, Mat

this bald man lived in the city of Mos Espa, on the planet Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. (GQRG)

Ragsall

this New Republic Navy Lieutenant was a member of the Venture's Bravo Flight of ferry pilots. He served under Lieutenant Bos during the war against the Yevetha. (TT)

Ragtag Gang

this gang of orphans and misfits was active on the planet Corellia during the Galactic Civil War. (GQRG)

Rahama Club

this is one of the Outer Rim's most popular clubs. (GG9)

Rahm

this is the name given to a unit of ion density, used to indicate the strength of an ion pulse. (TT)

Rahn, Qu

once a native of the planet Socorro, this former Jedi Knight spent the twilight of his career searching for the lost Valley of the Jedi. Rahn had been a member of the Jedi Temple's Katarn Clan, and trained under the guidance of Jedi Master Yoda. Rahn had survived the Jedi Purge, but only after escaping from the treachery of Halagad Ventor. After tracking down Yoda on Dagobah, Rahn learned of the Valley of the Jedi on Ruusan. Yoda then promoted Rahn to the rank of Jedi Master and sent him away with information on the location of the Valley of Souls. Rahn seemed to be one step ahead of the Dark Jedi, Jerec, who was also searching for the Valley. He feared the Valley was only a myth until Morgan Katarn discovered its whereabouts. Rahn immediately sensed the connection to the name Katarn, since it had been the name of his clan at the Jedi Temple. Looking inward with the Force, Rahn discovered that Morgan was quite sensitive to the Force, and saw that his son, Kyle Katarn, would someday figure in the locating of the Valley. Rahn also foresaw his own capture. He entrusted his lightsaber to Morgan, to pass on to Kyle, then tried to defeat Jerec himself. However, Jerec captured him on Dorlo and executed him aboard the Vengeance, but not before learning of Morgan Katarn's knowledge of the Valley. (DF2, RAG, WOTC)

Rahuhl

this was a common name among the Zeltron people. (GMR1)

Rahuhl

this young Zeltron was part of the detachment sent to the Forest Moon of Endor to meet with the leaders of the Alliance, most especially Leia Organa, in the wake of the Battle of Endor. Admiral Ackbar then placed the four Zeltrons in charge of protecting Leia, in order to simplify a delicate situation. Like most Zeltrons, Jahn had a strong hatred of the Nagai. He was among the first members of the Alliance forces on Endor to be attacked by the Maccabreee warriors dispatched by Knife to eliminate Mon Mothma and Admiral Ackbar, when the Nagai launched their bold attack on the Alliance. Rahuhl and his companions were personally escorted back to Zeltros by Leia Organa shortly afterward. (LTA6, MC95, MC100, MC103)

Rahz

this Gektl served the Empire on Harix, where he was a Major in charge of rounding up the planet's teachers. They were suspected of sowing the seeds of rebellion on the planet. Rahz was defeated by Luke Skywalker and Han Solo. (CSWEA)

Rai Unlu

this Sorrusian posed as a medic at the largest medical center on Sorrus, in an effort to assist Ona Nobis in capturing Obi-Wan Kenobi and Astri Oddo, some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. (TDR)

Raibat

this thick-necked Imperial Army Colonel was a member of House Reana of Tapani Sector, but was loyal to the New Order above all other obligations. (TSIA)

Raich

this unusual creature, found on the Forest Moon of Endor, resembled a normal tree with hollow branches sprouting from its trunk. Using these branches, the raich could create sounds that lured other creatures to its location. It could then lash out and capture the creatures, which it then devoured. The being known as Gonster believed that the raich was an evil monster, and placed a magical cap over its branches to prevent it from calling any other creatures to their deaths. Shortly before the Battle of Endor, Wicket W. Warrick mistakenly removed the cap and allowed the raich to send out its call. He later led a mission to restore the cap and silence the raich. (ECAR)

Raider Armor

developed by the Ubese, this was a form of protective body armor which employed high-tech sensors and a fearsome appearance to give the wearer an individualized form of protection. (GUN)

Raider Squadron

this was Crimson Jack's personal starfighter squadron, used to protect his amassed fleet. (MC15)

Raider, Samuel

a Captain in the Alliance, he was captured by the Empire and sent to Stars' End for detainment on the freighter Genua. He was friends with Cardacs, who petitioned the Alliance to rescue the prisoners. Raider was rescued by Keyan Farlander's assault team, but Cardacs was killed in the battle. He held a grudge against Farlander for some time during the Galactic Civil War, and spoke openly about Farlander's apparent lack of humanity. He later realized that this was Farlander's way of dealing with the loss of his fellow pilots, and reconciled his differences. (XW)

Raid-war

this was the term used to describe the small-scale battles between two Adnerem steri for power or to resolve a disagreement. The goal was not to annihilate the enemy, but to adjust the dynamic balance between steri. (AE)

Raije

this huge, muscular ZeHethbra was a bounty hunter during the height of the New Order. He was once hired by a rival of both Malkoi and A'jindre Skrigatov to find and kill Brinaloy N'Vaari. In addition to his immense size, Raije was distinguished by the Wookiee bowcaster he used as his primary weapon. He was known as a crazed, maniacal hunter who was relentless in his pursuit of a bounty, and was considered a rogue by his own species. (ND)

Rai-Kalei

this Sullustan trader was known for his ability to quickly transport illegal cargo and passengers across the galaxy, during the height of the New Order. A former employee of SoroSuub Corporation, Rai-Kalei was fired after a run-in with Imperial forces and fled Sullust. He became a wanted being, and took up smuggling to make a living. He later joined the Alliance, helping out as a smuggler and informant, and using his personal ship - the Mayjeln to travel the galaxy. (SWJ4)

Raiko

this was a common name among adult Codru-Ji. (UANT)

Rail Detonator

this weapon resembles a missile launcher, and is about the size of a riot shotgun. Instead of firing a single warhead like the missile launcher, the rail detonator fires a series of small, explosive devices at a target. (DF2)

Rail Vorkan and the Space Pirates

this was a holovid series which was popular during the early years of the New Republic. (GG11)

Raimi

this CR90 corvette was owned by the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. (XWA)

Raimier

this Imperial Moff was in charge of the planet Bacrana. (SWJ8)

Rain

this young girl was Tomcat's younger sister, born with the name Zannah, although she displayed none of his Force sensitivity during her early years on Somov Rit. Shortly before the Battle of Ruusan, when the Jedi were trying gather as many Force-users as possible to fight against the Brotherhood of Darkness, Tomcat was chosen to train with Torr Snapit. Rain wanted to leave Somov Rit with her brother, and Tomcat used his own Force skills to allow Rain to accompany them. Upon arriving at Ruusan, Rain was lost when Torr's ship was shot down. She was believed to be dead, but the bouncers of the planet managed to save her life. Rain was happy until her rescuer, known as Laa, dreamed she would fall victim to the Dark Side of the Force. Rain believed she had no skills with the Force, but Laa managed to bring them out and help the girl. Rain tried to kill herself by jumping off a cliff, rather than turning to the Dark Side, but she vowed not to let a dream rule her life. She halted herself in mid-fall, and dedicated herself to helping the bouncers and the Jedi. Her resolve, however, was shattered when Laa was mistakenly killed by Petja. Rain swiftly grew angry and killed Petja, allowing herself to be consumed by the Dark Side. After she was rescued by Darth Bane, Rain abandoned the nickname and took up her given name, Zannah. She became Lord Bane's first apprentice. (JVS)

Rain

this was the only word used to describe one of the four humanoid, child-like droids discovered by Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa on an uncharted world, while they were on a diplomatic mission to the Akuria System, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. Rain was named for the fact that she could summon the rains at will. All four children were distinguished from humans by their glowing, yellow eyes. They were created by the Keeper to break the monotony of its millennia-long work of rebuilding the planet, and their special powers helped the Keeper in its reformation efforts. (PZZ1)

Rain Pillars

architectural supports used in many Bakuran mansions and office buildings. Special troughs bring the abundant rain water into the pillars, which are then illuminated from below to create beautiful displays of light. (TB)

Rainbow Berries

a fruit found on the Forest Moon of Endor, the Ewoks harvested rainbow berries for their Harvest Moon Feast. (EGC)

Rainbow Comets

this was the name given to a collection of comets which passed through the Cloak of the Sith and orbited Roon's sun. The first mariners to arrive at the Cloak of the Sith discovered that the Rainbow Comets traced the only safe path into and out of the gaseous cloud. (EGP, WOTC)

Rainbow Fleet

this was the nickname of the fleet of Alliance starships sent to support the ground troops during the Battle of Ylesia. (RD)

Rainbow Gems

found on Gallinore, these gems are actually silicon-based creatures which glow with an inner light while they are maturing. They mature after many thousands of years, and so the "gems" are long-lasting. They are extremely valuable; it is rumored that a single gem can buy a Calamarian Star Cruiser. It was also rumored that rainbow gems were bio-engineered by the ancient natives of the planet Gallinore. (CPL, GMR8)

Rainbow Labyrinth

this was perhaps the most famous Tasar Crystal, which was sold at auction for fifty million credits. (SWJ15)

Rainbow Storm

this demonstration of the Light Side of the Force is not a martial art, like the Force storm. It is merely a display of the ability of The Force. The rainbow storm is created by taking available light and bending it into its component colors, creating a wild barrage of color. It takes a good deal of power to be able to manipulate the physics of light to produce the storm. (CPL)

Rainbow Storm

this natural phenomenon occurs on the fourth moon of Yavin, when it comes out of the shadow of the planet Yavin following a long, dark night. When the light of the system's sun passes through the limb of Yavin's atmosphere, it is broken up and refracted by the ice crystals being swirled among the gases of the planet. The resulting display is a chaotic, scintillating, rainbow display of light. (COTF, ISU)

Rainbow Wood

this beautiful, variably-colored wood was once harvested on Alderaan. (CSA)

Rainbow-Eyed Enemy

this was the stylized name used by Nom Anor, acting as the prophet Yu'shaa, to describe the leadership of Supreme Overlord Shimrra and the Yuuzhan Vong. The Rainbow-eyed Enemy was also known as the Shadow, since it was believed to appear as a huge black shadow with rainbows shining from its eyes. Its hands were covered with the bloodstains of the Shamed Ones the Yuuzhan Vong had destroyed. According to The Message described by Yu'shaa, the true gods called upon the Jedi Knights to defeat the Rainbow-eyed Enemy and free the Shamed Ones. (FH2)

Raines

this Imperial Army Major was one of the best AT-AT instructors to survive the Battle of Endor and the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. He served under Admiral Pellaeon, stationed on the Chimaera, and was even the Admiral's simulator instructor. (VOF)

Raines

this man was an Imperial Counselor, working for Governor Egron on the planet Chibias during the early years of the New Republic. Counselor Raines was working with Security Officer Jayx to implicate Ghent in a weapons scheme, in order to expose a piece of documentation Raines had hidden in the youth's pocket. Mara Jade later discovered that there was no such person as Raines working for the Governor, and that Raines was actually the unofficial attache' known as Markko. He had tried to place the data into Ghent's pocket in order to blackmail him into working for free, in order to complete a task Markko himself was unable to complete. (GMR10)

Raioballo Sector

this remote sector of the galaxy was located in the Outer Rim Territories, and contained the worlds of Gravlex Med and Shusugaunt. (GMR7)

Raisa

this searing-hot planet was the innermost world of the Alderaan System. (CCW)

Raiss

this man was the Imperial Moff of Parmel Sector shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (GG10)

Rait

this nervous Chadra-Fan worked as a lookout for Voushon, wandering the streets of Mos Eisley. (MEAS)

Raith

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Raith

a large, black, rodent-like predator native to the moon Yavin 8. They have bristly fur and thick, green, hairless tails. (LW)

Raithal

this planet was the site of an important Imperial Academy location. (SWJ1, DA)

Raithal Academy

this was the proper name of the Imperial Academy campus located on the planet Raithal. (SWJ5)

Raithal, Hyndis

a General, she had a knack for rallying troops against any odds. (COJ)

Raito

this Tusken Raider, who lived on Tatooine during the era of the Great Sith War, was noted among his race for his ability to hunt and kill Jedi Knights. Unfortunately, the oral histories of his exploits were lost when his tribe was killed in a raid. (KOTOR)

Raivor

this reptilian creature, native to the planet Tatooine, resembled a krayt dragon to the inexperienced adventurer. It had a scaly hide, a razor-tipped tail, and a wide mouth filled with razor-sharp teeth, and was a highly territorial creature that viciously protected its hunting grounds. Beyond that, the resemblance to a krayt dragon is minimal. The average raivor measured about four meters in length as an adult, and was very quick and agile in the desert sands. The yellowish coloration of the raivor's scales allowed it to blend into the shifting sands, although a subspecies which lived in the mountains had a darker coloration that didn't blend into the rocky surroundings as well. Raivor hide was valued by the Jawas and the Sand People as a tough material for clothes and tools. (WOTC)

Rajah

this was the title given to the leader of the Virujansi people. The Rajah's true identity was a closely-guarded secret, and the individual holding the position was always anonymous beyond the title. For more than 6,000 years, the Rajah ruled from the Palace of Splendid Harmony. (SWI72, RC)

Rajan

this Jedi Knight was one of Lord Kiel Charny's chief lieutenants, during the Battle of Ruusan. Rajan's back was broken when a huge tree trunk fell on him during the Sith's attack on the main Jedi camp, although he managed to survive the blow. Unfortunately, Rajan was killed when a second wave of Sith attackers arrived on swoops, killing any Jedi they could find who survived. (JVS)

Rajana

this muscular woman, a native of the planet Typha-Dor, was a member of Shalini's resistance group during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. When Mezdec claimed to have discovered Samdew transmitting the location of their base on TY44 to the Vanqors, Rajana admitted that she had heard the struggle and shot Samdew in the chest, killing him instantly. It was only later that the team discovered, with the help of Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker, that Mezdec was actually the traitor. (JQ7)

Rajana, Balderik

this New Republic military officer is in command of the Republic's base on Carosi XII. (PG2)

Rajat

this was an unusual vehicle, used by the Yuuzhan Vong. It could travel forward or reverse with equal ease. (SBS)

Rakaa IV

this beautiful world is the primary planet in the Rakaa System, located at the edge of the Core. The lush jungles are seldom visited, though, since the native Rakaans have been known to eat intruders. (AE)

Rakaan

an insectile race native to the planet Rakaa IV, the Rakaans are a vicious race that has been known to eat humans and other offworlders. The average, ten-limbed Rakaan had a segmented body with an enlarged abdomen and mottled green-and-brown coloration. The lower eight legs were used for locomotion, while the upper pair was equipped with prehensile hands and opposable digits. They could eject a web-like substance to capture their prey, and secretions from their mouths were used to dissolve the webbing once their prey had died. This mouth was located underneath the abdomen, and was surrounded by stout mandibles. In Rakaan physiology, there were five sexes: child, neuter, female, male, and andro. Each sex corresponded to a phase in the Rakaan lifecycle, and could last up to eighty years. Each change from one sex to another was known as a Transition. (AE)

Rakamat

this was the Yuuzhan Vong name given to the massive transport vehicles referred to as ranges. (EL1)

Rakata

this ancient race of dome-headed humanoids was believed to have died out some 30,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. Despite this fact, which predates the discovery of the hyperdrive, evidence of the Rakata has been found on planets scattered throughout the galaxy. The existence of the Rakata was pieced together during the time of the Great Sith War, when disparate archaeological expeditions discovered amazingly similar finds. No records of Rakata civilization existed, although the physical appearance of the Rakata was unique enough to help scientists recognize that these many finds were related to the same civilization. How and why the Rakata civilization died out remains a mystery, and even their homeworld was simply referred to as the Unknown World. In stature, the Rakata were humanoid, standing on two muscular legs which were protected by a heavy talon at the back of the calf. The head of the Rakata was shaped like an upright bullet, with the mouth and eyes located at its base. The eyes were set out from the head on thick stalks, giving the Rakata a wide range of vision. The lack of any form of record of the Rakata's passing through the galaxy has led xenoarchaeologists to assume that they were a conquering species who wanted their existence to remain a secret. This theory was borne out with the discovery of the Star Forge, a huge space station that had been built as a manufacturing facility for starships and weaponry that could be used by the Rakatan Empire. (KOTOR, SWDB)

Rakatan

this was the term used to describe a single member of the Rakata race. (SWDB)

Rakatan Battle Wand

this weapon, essentially a stun baton, was developed by the Rakatan people, many millennia before the Galactic Civil War. Because it was weighted for the Rakatan hand, it was difficult for other races to wield. (KOTOR)

Rakatan Empire

this was the name given to the vast empire that was created by the Rakata race, many millennia before the Great Sith War. Using a seemingly endless supply of starships and weaponry, the Rakata conquered entire star systems with swift precision, creating the Rakatan Empire during the 5,000 years that led up to the formation of the Old Republic. For unknown reasons, the Rakatan Empire died out before it was ever discovered by the Old Republic, although many scientists and xenoarchaeologists found many references to the Rakatan Empire on a number of disparate worlds. (SWDB)

Rakazzak

this was a three-meter-tall species of spider-like creatures native to Endor's forest moon. The Yuzzum warriors who served Morag rode them as mounts. (ECAR)

Rake

this barren ball of rock was the innermost planet of the Prakith System, located in the Deep Core region of the galaxy. (PH)

Rakghoul

these mutated, flesh-eating creatures lived in the Undercity, beneath the surface of the cityscape of the planet Taris, many millennia before the Battle of Yavin. It was believed that rakghouls were actually humans who had been infected with an unusual disease, a disease which they transmitted when they attacked other humans. Because the mutation from human to rakghoul was incredibly swift, many pathohistorians believed that the original infection had been bio-engineered by an ancient race, though this was never proven. No effort was made to eradicate the disease which created the rakghouls, as city officials claimed it eliminated the criminals and outcasts they were "too humane to exterminate." It was believed that the ancient Sith had an antidote to the rakghoul infection, but no record existed of its formula. Many rakghouls were simply mindless killing machines, but a few individuals - which came to be known as rakghoul fiends - were known to exhibit leadership abilities and could use weapons. (KOTOR, WOTC)

Rakghoul Fiend

this was the term used by the natives of the planet Taris to describe those members of the rakghoul population which exhibited intelligence or a leadership influence over others of their species. They were capable of using tools and weapons, and of laying traps for new victims. (WOTC)

Rakikta

this Wookiee, whose name literally translated to "strongarm," was the security manager of the city of Cjaalysce'I during the height of the New Order. (BSS)

Rako's Rift

this deep-sea trench, located on the planet Mon Calamari, was believed to be the natural home of the krakana. (WSV)

Rakra

this Ewok was the shaman of the Panshee tribe. (SWJ1)

Rakrir

this planet was the homeworld of the Rakririan race. (HSE)

Rakririan

an alien race native to the planet Rakrir, they were an insectoid creature with a short, segmented body, 5 pairs of limbs, 2 eyestalks, and a cantilevered vocal organ in their midsection. The eyestalks are constantly in motion, giving the impression of nervousness. Very few Rakririans leave their homeworld, believing that other worlds are not refined to their standards. Note that Alien Encounters claims that the Rakririan homeworld was Ballikite. (HSE, CSA, AE)

Rakririan Burnout Sauce

this was an especially hot food sauce. It was highly recommended that it be used in trace quantities, to prevent severe burns of the mouth and throat. (T7)

Ral

this was a common component used to create the names given to Cerean males. In general, male Cereans given an individual name, which is added to the names of their father and grandfather. Complete male names are arranged based on harmony and cadence, but the literal meanings are arranged to ensure proper descriptions. The name Ral referred to laughter, humor, or comedy. (GCG)

Ral

also known as a stone ray, the ral was a reptilian predator native to the planet Bothawui. These reptiles were named after aquatic rays, because of their similar shape and because they flew through the air. Their coloration resembled that of pure glitterstone, and rals could exist on rocky outcroppings without being detected. The average ral grew to have a wingspan of more than half a meter, and their wings were formed from leathery membranes stretched between the bones of their spindly arms. Rals were cold-blooded, and had to sun themselves before flying after their prey. Their thick heads were tipped with a small beak, and their long tails served to balance them. (SPG)

Ral

this man was the Hutt Counselor for the remains of the Desilijic clan during the early years of the New Republic. He was ordered to bring in Ghitsa Dogder and interrogate her about Durga's involvement in the Orko SkyMine operation. However, Ghitsa was rescued by her partner, Fenig Nabon, with the help of Kyp Durrón. In order to escape, they had to cut a hole in the hull of the Rook, the ship Ral flew on with Culan Brasli. Ral refused to believe Ghitsa's call to bring the ship down before it reached the upper atmosphere. When the Rook got too high, it exploded, killing Ral and the crew. (TFNR)

Ral

one of the family names used by the Bothan people, its original meaning was lost over time. It literally meant "family friend". (GCG, WOTC)

Ra-Lee

this was a common name for Ewok females. Like other Ewok names, it referred to a spirit or character in the Ewoks' mythology. (GCG)

Ra-Lee

according to Ewok legend, this nature spirit watched over lost children. (GCG)

Ra-Lee

the Ewok wife of chief Chirpa, Ra-lee died defending her daughters, Asha and Kneesaa. (ECAR)

Ralera

this member of the Wookiee underground on Kashyyyk worked with Katarra. This might be a typographical error, and really refers to Ralra. (RD)

Ralion B-14

this airspeeder was popular on Coruscant, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (JQ9)

Ralk

this was one of the many names given to female Bothans. In the Bothan language, it meant "charming." (GCG, WOTC)

R'all

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

R'all

J'uoch's brother, and a partner in the mining operations on Dellalt. Like his sister, he has thick, black hair and black eyes, a sharp widow's peak, and pale skin. He is killed when Han Solo blasts his spaceboat out of the sky near the mining camps, as R'all attempts to kill Han. (HSL)

R'alla

a planet known for its mineral water springs. (HSR)

R'alla Water

the sweet, clear water found in the mineral springs of R'alla. It is very expensive, due to its purity and taste, and was often smuggled off-planet for sale at cutthroat prices. After the rise of the New Republic, the water was made more plentiful by an increase in trade with R'alla. (HSR, SOP)

Rallan

this Tratlin male served the Alliance as a solo operative in Meirm City for many years before joining Sandwind Team. While with Sandwind, he served as Jodar Frein's second-in-command. (SSR)

Rallcema Bylissura

this Jedi Knight was one of many who perished in the fighting at Shelter Base, on Jabiim, during the hieght of the Clone Wars. (SWI69)

Ralle, Cambira

this native of the planet Esseles was the President of the Esselian Hall during the New Order. Ralle was best known for leading the planet through the dark times of the Clone Wars. A member of the Forad Party, Ralle sought to widen the scope of Esselian influence in the system, trying to wrestle control from Imperial Governor Takel. He also was decidedly against any action that would harm or denounce non-human races, which brought him continually at odds with the Esselian New Order Party leader Jamson Freller. The economic situation on Esseles, coupled with Ralle's own advancing age, meant that his time as leader of the planet were dwindling. Ralle's squabbles with Takel came to a head when the Faceless attacked Grande Hyet and Tralee. Takel quickly responded by bringing the Indomitable to Esseles to enforce Imperial law. (SWJ7, SWJ8, SWJ9, FOP)

Ralle, Cambira

this man was a former president of the planet Esseles. A hero of the Clone Wars, he met with extreme opposition after the Battle of Yavin. Ralle was the leader of the Forad Party at the time, and remained opposed to the New Order and its ideals, while the other political factions all advocated joining the New Order. (SWJ5)

Ralls

this New Republic Intelligence officer first interrogated Davith Sconn, after Sconn was imprisoned at the Jagg Island Detention facility. (SOL)

Rallt

this star was the central body of the Ralltiir System. (CCW)

Ralltiir

a planet sympathetic to the Alliance, it came under Imperial scrutiny just before the Battle of Yavin. Lord Tion was called in to suppress the rebellious uprisings there, just as Princess Leia Organa arrived on the planet to deliver medical and combat supplies to the Alliance supporters there. She was intercepted by Lord Tion, who fawned over her while executing the planet's rulers and killing anyone suspected of having ties to the Alliance. It was here that Alliance supporters broken through the Imperial troops and delivered to Princess Leia the first word of the Empire's new weapon, the Death Star. The planet fell into widespread warfare, as rebel forces sought to throw off the Imperial yoke. Much of the landscape was leveled in battle, and there was very little law or order. Because of it's history and its part in the delivery of the plans to the first Death Star, Ralltiir was also one of the first planets to receive assistance from the New Republic after the Battle of Endor, and had the distinction of being the first planet liberated from Imperial control. Ralltiir was the second world in the Ralltiir System, and was orbited by twenty-eight moons. However, the gravitational pull of these moons largely counteracted each other, sparing the planet from devastating tides. The average day on Ralltiir lasted 19 standard hours, and its year lasted 255 local days. Ralltiir was located in the Core Worlds, on the border with the Colonies Region. (SWR, HR, CCW)

Ralltiir Consolidated Marble

this was one of Ralltiir's largest companies, involved with the expotr of native Ralltiiri marble. RCM, which was subsidized by the Empire during the height of the New Order, was unaware that their main rival - XwiziMarble - was secretly supporting the Alliance. (CCW)

Ralltiir Diagnosis Center

this prestigious facility was the foremost center for medicine on the planet Ralltiir. It was also one of the most expensive places to receive care. (SWJ10)

Ralltiir Exchange

this was the primary financial market of the planet Ralltiir. It suffered a huge blow when the Empire subjugated the planet shortly before the Battle of Yavin, and virtually collapsed when the Empire nationalized Bansche Tech and SGI Systems. (SWJ6)

Ralltiir Securities

this small corporation, based on the planet Ralltiir, produced a wide range of heavy-duty speeders for corporate and military use. (CCW)

Ralltiir Tiger

a ferocious, feline creature native to the planet Ralltiir, these tigers were cute and cuddly when they were young. However, they grew wicked claws and developed a killing temperment as they matured. This savage demeanor could appear as soon as a few weeks of age, and they developed no sense of loyalty to creatures other than themselves. This meant that animal handlers who worked with Ralltiir tigers in their menageries had to be continually aware of the tiger's actions. Compounding the tiger's unpredictable behavior was the blood madness which was brought on by fear or attack. This sudden desire to kill everything around it emerged during adolescence, and could only be quenched by the taste of blood. The blood madness was most often directed at the weakest individual the tiger could locate, making the kill that much easier. (BTS, WOTC)

Ralltiiri Secretariat

this was the government which formed on the planet Ralltiir after the New Republic liberated the planet from the Empire. (JE)

Ralltiiriel

this long-bodied, snake-like fish was native to the oceans of Ralltiir. (BF4)

Ralltir

another spelling for Ralltiir. (JPL)

Rally's Daily Investor

this business news reporting agency detailed the various financial markets of the galaxy and reporting on the emerging trends in investing and business. (SWJ10)

Ralmathen Corridor

this crystalline boulevard graces the city of Neskroff, on Isis. (IC)

Ralme IV

this planet was the primary world in the Ralme System, located in Brak Sector. (FBS)

Ralr

this Shyriiwook word was used as the prefix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "lake", "ocean", or "river", and could be combined with one or more suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Ral-Rai Muvnc

this Sullustan was namked by Mon Mothma to serve as the Supreme Commander of the New Republic's Ordnance and Supply division. Note that this character is otherwise known as Ral'Rai Muvunc, a Twi'lek, in many other sources. (SWJ7)

Ral'Rai Muvunc

this Twi'lek was a member of the Alliance, and served as the Minister and Commander of Supply and Ordnance shortly after the Battle of Yavin. It was Muvunc who proposed that privateers be contracted to help augment the Alliance's forces. Among his rationale were the facts that privateers could ambush Imperial and corporate convoys, obtaining supplies for the Alliance without expending Alliance resources. Privateering would also help alienate corporations from the Empire, as lost convoys meant lost profits. Admiral Ackbar was strongly opposed to the plan to use pirates in this manner, despite the continued success rate of the missions Muvunc authorized. Ral'Rai's proposal led to the Far Orbit Project. Note that the Star Wars Adventure Journal, Issue 7 claims this character was a Sullustan named Ral-Rai Muvnc. (SWJ2, FOP, PP, SWJ7)

Ralroost

this Bothan Assault Cruiser was Rogue Squadron's base of operations during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion. It was commanded by Traest Kre'fey during this time, and served as one of the most mobile platforms the New Republic's fleet contained. Shortly after the Second Battle of Coruscant, the Ralroost was dispatched to Kashyyyk, where it amassed a large fleet of warships and was the flagship of several raids into Yuuzhan Vong-controlled space. (DTO, Y)

Ralrracheen

this Wookiee was enslaved by the Empire, but returned to Kashyyyk after the fall of the Emperor at the Battle of Endor. He greeted Leia Organa Solo and Chewbacca when they arrived on Kashyyyk, in an effort to avoid the attention of Grand Admiral Thrawn. He shortened his name to Ralra for Leia's benefit. After Chewbacca's death at Serpidal, Ralra presided over his funeral service on Kashyyyk. (HTTE, HT)

Ral's Bane

this potent poison caused damage to internal organs when injected into a being's body. (GCG)

Ralter, Dack

born on the Imperial labor colony of Kalist VI, Dack was seventeen when an Alliance pilot was shot down near the colony. The pilot survived, and helped a group of prisoners escape. Dack then joined the Alliance. He was Luke's gunner during the Battle of Hoth. Dack was killed in the battle by a stray laser bolt. Dack was portrayed by John Morton in Star Wars: The Empire Strikes Back. He was also portrayed by Peter Friedman for the The Empire Strikes Back Radio Drama on National Public Radio. (ESB, ESBR)

Raltez

this continent of cooled, hardened duranium, formed on the planet Kriekaal shortly before the Battle of Endor. (SWJ13)

Ralthar Syndicate

this small, criminal organization was eliminated by the Security Officer Corps of Naboo, in the wake of the assassination of King Veruna. Ralthar tried to take control of Theed in the chaos which surrounded Veruna's death, but the Security forces quickly eliminated any threat. (SON)

Ralto, Quat

this stern but loyal man was a member of the space fleet mustered by House Calipsa during the height of the New Order. He served on the Bright Seeker under the command of Captain Nils Wender, and was known as a strict but fair first officer and chief of security. He was shot and killed by Janos Marsh shortly after the Bright Seeker discovered the holed hulk of the Regal Destiny. (TSIA)

Ramesh

this Hutt kajidic once assassinated one of the leaders of the Society of the Black Bha'lir smuggler's guild on the planet Omman. The smugglers, looking to exact revenge on the Ramesh, exterminated all but one member of the clan. They sent a young black bha'lir cub to the Ramesh Hutts, who believed the gift to be a proposition of service to the Hutts. The Ramesh leadership made ready to embark on a new monopoly by using the Black Bha'lir as their hired guns. Unfortunately, the Society had implanted a bladder of Trauger Gas inside the lungs of the bha'lir cub. As the cub breathed, Trauger Gas was expelled throughout the Ramesh compound. All the Hutts of the Ramesh clan in residence were killed within minutes. Only Kalna the Hutt survived, having been away from Nal Hutta on business. (SSR, BSS)

Rami

this was a common component used to create the names given to Cerean males. In general, male Cereans given an individual name, which is added to the names of their father and grandfather. Complete male names are arranged based on harmony and cadence, but the literal meanings are arranged to ensure proper descriptions. The name Rami referred to a clever hero from Cerean mythology. (GCG)

Rami

this clever hero was a common figure in Cerean mythology. (GCG)

Ramic, Sutt

this Imperial High General was in command of one of the three Golan III defense platforms that guarded the planet Muunilinst some ten years after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. He the senior officer among the Imperial leaders on Muunilinst, and questioned the truth behind Pellaeon's proposal to negotiate a peace treaty with the New Republic. Although he didn't like it, Ramic's years of service and loyalty to the Empire made him agree with Pellaeon's plans. He also chafed at the ways in which Moff Disra was using Imperial funds, personnel, and equipment to pay for Preybird-class starfighters produced by the Cavrilhu pirates. He worked with Pellaeon to make sure nothing else unethical happened. (SOP)

Ramier, Lesan

a native of Lolnar, this man served the Empire as the Moff of Brak Sector, at the height of the New Order. Ramier was promoted to Brak Sector after successfully bringing seven star systems into line with the Empire. His takeover of the sector was met with opposition, but most of his critics disappeared over a short period of time. His greatest achievement was the construction of the Imperial shipyards at Bacrana, but he was unable to subjugate the Aramandi. While trying to take control of the sector, Ramier was forced to consider the option of jointly controlling it with Lant Mining Corporation, due to strained relations between LMC and the Empire. (FBS, SWJ7)

Ramis

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Ramis, Octa

this stocky, well-muscled woman was from Chandrila, and trained on an unspecified world of heavier-than-standard gravity to build up her strength. She showed a sensitivity to the Force, and eventually joined Luke Skywalker's Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4, training under the watchful eye of Kam Solusar. She was one of a growing faction of Jedi who couldn't understand the New Republic's political aversion to dealing directly with the Yuuzhan Vong invasion. Luke later discovered that Octa had been romantically involved with Mika Reglia. Octa was overcome with grief after the death of Daeshara'cor, and was one of the Jedi who turned away from Luke's philosophy to join Kyp Durron. She flew with Kyp's Dozen during the middle stages of the struggle against the Yuuzhan Vong, and was one of the few survivors of the Second Battle of Coruscant. The anguish over losing so many to the Yuuzhan Vong, despite the efforts of Kyp Durron and other groups, finally broke over her, and she briefly deserted the Dozen in order to help isolate one of the yammosks over Coruscant. Later, during the final stages of the battle with the Yuuzhan Vong, Octa briefly took command of the Dozen when Kyp accompanied Han and Leia Organa Solo on a mission to destroy the yammosk which had been installed on Caluula. During the final stages of the battle against the Yuuzhan Vong, after the living planet Zonama Sekot agreed to help bring about an end to the conflict, Octa was one of several Jedi Knights were bonded to seed-partners and provided with Sekotan starships. Octa was ultimately one of the handful of Jedi Knights to survive the conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong. (DTR, EVC, SWI57, DJ, NEGC, UF)

Ramison, Fendel

this man was arrested for violating the laws protecting the thresher population on Tinallis. He had been trying to obtain a thresher egg for a scientist on Deminol, and was nearly killed by the thresher parents. The female thresher picked him up and dropped him into the ocean, breaking his legs. He was rescued by a shore patrol and place in jail. (COG)

Ramiz

this native of Aduba-3 approached Han Solo and Chewbacca and asked them to help the locals break the grip of Serji-X Arogantus. A poor farmer, Ramiz saw Han and Chewie subdue Watto and his cronies in a bar, and realized that they might be able to help. (MC8)

Ramjet Drive

a simple yet powerful drive system that creates thrust and expels it by burning fuel. These engines, popular on private, interplanetary craft, build up an intense amount of heat, and must be efficiently cooled. They are non-radioactive. (SWSB)

Ramjet Scoop-miners

fast ships that employ ramjet drives and traverse nebulae, scooping up the gases for exportation. (JS)

Ramordian Silk

this wondrously smooth fabric is used to make expensive bedsheets. (VOF)

Ramorean Capanata

a dish served with Ediorung icefish. (TJP)

Rampa I

this was the first planet in a star system which was beset with rebellious activity during the early years of the New Order. The natives of the planet rose up against the Empire after the rebellion on Rampa II, and were summarily subjugated. (THG, RD)

Rampa II

a water-poor planet located in the Corporate Sector. Han Solo sustained a fair amount of damage to the Millennium Falcon while trying to smuggle water there. The planet has been industrialized to the point that its ecosystem has been destroyed, requiring that the population be contained in a small area. The population is sustained with synthetic nutrients. An Imperial outpost was located here, during the early years of the New Order, which was attacked by rebellious agents. The attack forced Moff Sarn Shild to disregard his agreements with the Hutts and issue orders to bring down any smuggling activity in the Hutt sectors of space. Rampa II and its sister planet, Rampa I, were quickly subjugated by the Empire for their insurrections. (HSR, CSA, THG, RD)

Rampa Rancors

this shockball team was based on the planet Rampa II, and played during the height of the New Order. (SSR)

Rampa Rapids

a term given to the smuggling routes used to smuggle water onto the planet Rampa. They are regularly patrolled by the Rampa Skywatch, who are ordered to track and fire on smugglers. (HSR)

Rampa Skywatch

the elite security force that monitors all space traffic coming to and leaving from the planet Rampa II. (HSR)

Rampage

one of three Imperial-class Star Destroyers under the command of Lumiya, following the Battle of Endor. (SWG3)

Rampaging Ranat

this modified YT-2400 freighter was owned and operated by Az-Iban, until he was ambushed by Morturr Heth and the surviving Disac pirates. Heth assumed Az-Iban's identity, and the Disac lurked along the Sisar Run, hoping to exact some measure of revenge against Black Sun and Ket Maliss. The ship was armed with a pair of double laser cannons. (SSR)

Rampant

this Imperial Victory-class Star Destroyer was sabotaged by various guild agents while in drydock at the Wroonian Stardock. The agents, led by Kabalard Vinne, destroyed the port-most ion drive, causing damage to the warship as well as the docking facility. The attack was staged as a demonstration against Imperial Governor Norrin. (SWJ9)

Rampart

an Alliance modified Corvette group captured during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Rampart

an Imperial Interdictor cruiser sent to the planet Chazwa by Grand Admiral Thrawn to reduce smuggling. (LCSB)

Rampart Blast Armor

developed by Imperial Munitions, this set of personal body armor provided protection against a variety of heavy energy weapons. (E)

Rampart II

this portable shield generator was produced by Imperial Munitions during the height of the New Order. (KR)

Rampart-class Anticonsussion Generator

developed by the Corporate Sector Authority, this defensive shield generator provided a measure of protection against explosions, collisions, and other impacts. The first usage of the Rampart-class field generator was aboard the Stars' End prison facility on Mytus VII. It was there that the CSA discovered the huge power requirements of the system, which rendered it extremely cost-prohibitive to operate. (EGW)

Ramsees Hed

a docking port located on the planet Cal-Seti. (DF)

Ramshackle

this was the term used by the inhabitants of the planet Iego to describe the cobbled-together repulsorchairs they used as transports. These ramshackles resembled reclining chairs made from structural tubing, with handmade repulsor engines attached at the base to provide locomotion. (WOTC)

Ramship

this was the name given to a variety of starships put together by outlaw techs, and designed for ramming an opponent's starship. These vessels were equipped with massive engines and structurally-enhanced fuselages, allowing them to gain maximum speed and survive the ramming operation. The "nose" of a ramship was most often a bulbous cone formed from solid durasteel, and formed to buckle a target's hull plating and bend its superstructure. Virtually all the ramships encountered over the years have been manned by droids, as no sane organic would want to participate in a ramming mission. However, this meant that the crews of ramships were unable to make their own decisions. (EGD)

RamTek

this was BlasTech's portable, blaster power pack recharging kit. (GFT)

Ramunee, Veni

this Alderaanian youth was the fifth of eight children in his family, and the younger brother of the Jedi Vici Ramunee. When Master Tannis traveled to Alderaan to locate candidates for Jedi training, she chose Veni as well as his older sister, Vici. However, at age of seven, he was too young to begin training and had to wait two more years before joining Vici. Veni snuck out of his dwelling to bring Vici her lightsaber, shortly before she entered the Cave of Truth to test her training. However, he was halted from helping her further by the presence of Master Willm Lywin. (SWJ9, SWJ11)

Ramunee, Vici

this ancient Jedi was a native of Alderaan, and was the third of eight children who grew up on the shores of Lir Lake. She was well-known to many children because of the Vici of Alderaan stories. At the age of 16, she rescued her younger brother, Veni, from a 20-legged dragon, although the Jedi histories revealed that the dragon was none other than the Master Willm Lywin. Vici was trained by Master Tannis, who tried to control Vici's eagerness while allowing it to bolster her spirits and keep her on the path to the Light Side. She made her trip to the Cave of Truth with her brother, and was supported by the presence of Master Lywin. Within the Cave, Vici faced several unusual tests which challenged her impatience, her greed, the physical limits of the world, and lastly fear before discovering that she had actually faced her worst enemy: herself. (SWJ9, SWJ11)

Ran

this was one of the most common male names among the Corellian population. (GMR9)

Ran, Lanish

this Alliance undercover agent once posed as a repair technician at the Imperial repair facility on Dosha. He eventually traveled to Holast VII, where he managed to infiltrate the criminal organization of Glorga the Hutt. During his tenure with Glorga, Agent Ran was exposed to the conceited demeanor of the assassin Nakaron. When the Trandoshan tried to expose Ran as an Imperial agent, based on data he had gathered during the Second Hollastin Insurrection, Nakaron was exiled from Glorga's court. Nakaron went crazy, killing Glorga and Ran in an intense firefight. (SWJ4)

Rana

this was once of the many names given to Duros females. Among the Duros, it meant "dark cloud". (GCG)

Rana

Great Queen of ancient Duro, she ruled during the planet's Golden Age. This era produced many beautiful artifacts, many of which were stolen later by Kadann for display on Scardia. (MMY)

Rana

this Jedi Knight was known for her piloting skills. It was Rana who transported Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi to Ragoon-6, when the pair decided that a physical test on the remote world would help them regain their focus. (TTB)

Rana Halion

this female humanoid was a charismatic political figure on her homeworld of Ieria, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. She was easily distinguished by her tall, lanky frame and her white hair, which was cut short and worn in twisted spikes. Her eyes were a pale blue color that was nearly colorless. She fought vocally for Ieria to be given better trade routes and more recognition, since she believed her homeworld was relegated to lesser status by the government on Andara. She also argued that Ieria deserved its own seat on the Galactic Senate, and pushed Senator Berm Tarturi to recognize her position. Behind the scenes, Halion employed a band of mercenary students - unknown to her, it was led by Senator Tarturi's own son, Gillam - to cause disruptions which helped rally her people to her cause. When small actions failed to bring the desired results, Halion employed the young mercenaries to strafe an Andaran military landing platform, to force Tarturi to negotiate. Unknown to Halion, however, Gillam

Tarturi planned to use live fire in the mission, as way to have himself "killed." He planned to ensure that Anakin Skywalker was killed in the mission, damaging the body enough so that it could pass as Gillam. (JQ5)

Rana Mas Trehalt

this ancient Duros Queen was one of the first planetary monarchs in Duro's history. (GMR2)

Ranadaast

known as the City of Ashes, this ancient city was located on the planet Duro. It was named from Queen Rana Mas Trehalt, and served as the royal capital for many centuries. Few of the buildings in the city survived the ecological holocaust that swept Duro. (GMR2)

Ranadium Ulstance

abbreviated RU, this is a measure of a hull's ability to deflect space debris or weapons fire. (XW)

Ranat

a small, rat-like race which was originally native to the planet Rydar II, Ranats appear at first to be a harmless race of rodents. They are, in fact, an intelligent race of ruthless killers. The name Ranat was given to the race by the humanoid Rydans, but they prefer to call themselves the Con Queecon, which means "the Conquerors." Several hundred years before the Galactic Civil War, Ranats were found to be stealing and eating Rydan infants. They were all but wiped out on Rydar, but three Ranats managed to stow away on a smuggling ship. The starship crashed on the planet Aralia after the three Ranats devoured the crew, and the Ranats were left there. They eventually consumed much of Aralia's native lifeforms, including the porcine roba. Ranats don't understand the concept of surrender, and will fight an opponent to the death. Any Ranat defeated in battle and left alive will return to its home and organize a vengeance party, attacking its attackers in order to restore its honor. They often sabotaged the construction of the Project Aralia amusement park, digging tunnels beneath support pylons and destroying buildings and attractions. The Empire attempted to eradicate them by hiring "pest controllers," but environmentalists protested that this violated Imperial laws against harming sentient races. The Empire decided to add the Ranat's to a list of semi-intelligent species, which meant that they had no rights to property and could be killed in self-defense, and made it illegal to arm a Ranat. However, the Ranats were never destroyed, and several Ranats found their way to Tatooine, where they took over Jabba's palace following the Hutt's demise. At one time during the New Order, Palpatine drugged Ranats with hallucinogens, then made the visions permanent with the Dark Side of the Force, and used the paranoid creatures as vicious guards. This freed up stormtroopers for more secret operations. More scientific experiments were also conducted by the Imperial Military to determine a way to use the Ranats against the Alliance. (DA, COJ, GG4, SWJ6)

Ranat

this was the native language of the Ranat race. (UANT)

Rance

this man operated the shadowport on the moon of Syvris, until it was destroyed by the Empire. Rance died in the attack. (SWJ13)

Ranch-ark

any of the huge, floating ships that roam the seas of the planet Chad, herding bildogs or proop. These boats are operated by families who live on the ocean, and are often found in small fleets for protection. (SWJ10)

Rancor

part crustacean, part arachnid, the rancor stands about 8-10 meters tall, and has wickedly-clawed hands and rows of sharp teeth in its pudgy face. A creature that was warm-blooded and gave birth to live young, the rancor did not suckle its young. In this way, the rancor was considered a reptomammal. It was covered in knobby, natural armor and bony headplates. These beasts are native to over a dozen planets in the galaxy, although a subspecies native to the planet Dathomir have been trained by the Force-sensitive women there and used as mounts. The rancor have been indebted to the witches since Allya came to Dathomir and rescued a sick rancor female. They are easily trained to do a number of tasks, including climbing and carrying riders. Jabba the Hutt had a rancor caged in his palace on Tatooine, which he kept starved. He then dropped anyone who displeased him into the rancor's pit, and the denizens of the palace looked on as the rancor tore the hapless victim to pieces. Despite their fearsome, crab-like appearance, most varieties of rancors generally dislike water. (ROTJ, CPL, CCG7, GOF4, CTD, WSW)

Rancor Base

this was the codename of Imperial Warlord Zsinj's base of operations on the planet Dathomir. (WS, CPL)

Rancor Hunter

a game of strategy and skill found in many up-scale casinos. (WSV)

Rancor Pit

this was the name of a specialized obstacle used in swoopchasing. The Rancor Pit consisted of three solid barriers in sequence. The first and third walls were standard barriers which rose from the ground. The second wall, in between the other two, was inverted and held above the ground. Thus, a swoop racer had to fly over the first wall, under the second, then over the third in order to escape the obstacle. (BSS)

Rancor Ribs

this fast-food meal was popularized by the restaurant known as the Rib Hutt, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. (T9)

Rancor Rising

this movement of the teras kasi martial artform brought a warrior from a squatting position up into a standing position in a single, fluid motion. (DMSH)

Rancor Squadron

this Alliance squad was stationed at the base established on the planet Taul. They fought bravely on the ground, but were unable to stop the Imperial orbital assault from the Dominator. (SWJ2)

Rancor's Den

this tavern was located on Andasala. (GG11)

Rancor's Nibblepit

the underground news agency, the Galactic Weekly NewsStack, once reported that Jabba the Hutt was going to start a fast-food chain by this name. (GG9)

Rancor's Tooth

this CR90 corvette was owned by Orax Tazaene during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Tazaene loaned the ship to the Alliance during the establishment of Echo Base on Hoth. (JKG)

Rand Ecliptic

the ship Biggs Darklighter signed on with after getting his commission from the Imperial Academy, the Rand Ecliptic was a Class II frigate which was commissioned by the Empire just before the Battle of Yavin. Biggs was assigned as the ship's first mate, while Derek "Hobbie" Klivian was named its second mate. Unknown to both men, each was planning to mutiny and defect to the Alliance, as was a third party. Biggs and his team got out first, but Hobbie's team was generally credited with defeating the Imperial forces onboard and taking control of the ship. After Biggs and his men returned to the ship for supplies, their combined forces brought the Rand Ecliptic to the Alliance's base on Yavin 4 for refitting. Note that Star Wars: Empire #12 portrays the Rand Ecliptic as a craft similar in appearance to the Acclamator-class troopship. (SWN, SWED)

Rand, Atton

this man was imprisoned on Peragus II during the years leading up to the Great Sith War. Little was known about his history, but Rand was easily one of the luckiest men alive at the time. He seemed to be able to cheat death at every turn, and had survived more than his fair share of desperate situations.

When not working to save his own life, Rand was a frequent patron of any cantina that offered pazaak matches to its patrons. (LAWS)

Rand, Kella

this woman worked as a reporter for the Galactic News Network during the early years of the New Republic. The daughter of parents who owned a refueling station, Kella discovered independence and self-reliance at an early age. She attended college on Corellia, majoring in diplomatic relations in the hope of learning more about other planets. However, she lacked the patience to deal with the nuances of diplomacy, and became an apprentice to a Corellian reporter in order to pay for her education. Upon graduation, she was hired by GNN, and once interviewed a childhood friend of Han Solo. After being given a column of her own, Kella was sent to Elom to cover a mining revolt, and was noted for her coverage of the investigation into the assassination of Shek Barayel on Indu San. She could cover any news event, from the fluff of the society pages to in-depth political analysis. (SWJ6)

Randa

this planet is covered in dense forests. (CSWEA)

Randa Besadii Diori

this young Hutt was the offspring of Borga the Hutt, and supported Borga's attempts to form an alliance with the Yuuzhan Vong. It was believed that the Yuuzhan Vong wanted Randa to offer assistance to the New Republic in helping transport refugees, thereby providing the aliens with a steady supply of prisoners. However, Randa was eventually convinced to use the alliance with the Yuuzhan Vong to his own advantage, and soon provided the New Republic with any information he received from the aliens. Unfortunately for the Republic, Randa unwittingly supplied false information, which led to the debacle at the Battle of Fondor. However, Randa was rescued from the Yuuzhan Vong by Kyp Durrón, who had been asked by Wurth Skidder to rescue the Hutt. Randa pledged his support to the New Republic, as a way of honoring the sacrifice made by Skidder. Like many other refugees, Randa was stranded on Duro, where he tried to bargain with the Yuuzhan Vong for the safety of Nal Hutta by trying to hand over a Jedi to the aliens. He tried to convince both Jaina and Jacen Solo that he was starting his own vigilante force, but neither wanted anything to do with the Hutt, despite his pledge to avenge Skidder's death. Randa told Jacen that he wanted to become a pirate chieftain, modeling his operations after Kyp Durrón and the vigilantes known as Kyp's Dozen. The younger Solos proved intractable to the Hutt, but Randa later discovered that Leia Organa-Solo might prove easier to capture. Randa later revised his plans, hoping to turn Leia over to the Yuuzhan Vong's leadership, thereby gathering them on Duro so that the New Republic could capture them. When Tsavong Lah landed on Duro and discovered Randa's duplicity, he had the Hutt imprisoned for later sacrifice. Randa found himself in the company of Leia Organa-Solo, who refused to believe his support for the New Republic. Despite her rebuff, Randa ultimately gave his life to save Leia, Jaina, when they were presented to Tsavong Lah as sacrifices. Randa tried to kill the warmaster and his priestess, Vaecta, by smashing them with his tail. His diversion was meant to allow Leia chance to escape. Vaecta quickly sent a tkun to attack Randa, and the crimson-furred creature quickly suffocated the Hutt. Leia, however, could not escape, and was recaptured by Nom Anor. (JE, BP)

Randal's Rentals

this was one of the many speeder rental facilities located on Tatooine, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (T10)

Randle Clanse

this near-human Brosin was known to be the leader of the Brosin Underground, during the height of the New Order. A native of Shoengen, she and her lieutenant, Vuraj Marn, did their best to harass the efforts of the Corporate Sector Authority. (AIR)

Random Sabacc

a combination of all 5 major forms, with the rules changing at different intervals according to the moderator. (DA)

Random, Sarl

one of Lando Calrissian's assistants on Cloud City, Sarl was the person responsible for revealing the treachery being wrought by EV-9D9 aboard the mining colony. Lando had promoted her to security chief on the spot, relieving EV-9D9 of those duties. (TJP)

Randomizer

one of the key components of a sabacc table, the randomizer sent out electronic pulses that changed the value of cards not already in the interference field. (RD)

Randon

a planet which holds its females in high regard, Randon was known for its unusual carousels and amusement-park rides. (SA, KB)

Randon, Teck

this man was a soldier in the Old Republic military, and was the leader of the task force dispatched by Colonel Jir Tramsig to recover the head of the protocol droid L80-RC. Teck tried to negotiate for the head with Ginder the Bimm, but was interrupted by Jubieck and his Trandoshan thugs, Orix and Dimogog. A fight broke out, and the head was eventually obtained by a group of freelance mercenaries. (WOA4)

Randoni

this was the race which was native to the planet Randon. Known as traders and merchants, the Randoni history was filled with stories of incredible treasures. It was rumored that the very first Randoni merchants hid their treasure in a vast chamber, and many a Randoni was lost while searching for its location. (VF)

Randoni Yellow Plague

a strong brew created on Randon and copied at cantinas throughout the galaxy. It is best served chilled. (SA)

Randorn 2

this swamp world was the home of the Mizx race and the ibliton. (COG)

Randy

this young Ewok was a friend of Wicket and Teebo, during the years leading up to the Battle of Endor. (ECAR)

Ranes

this Imperial Admiral was executed on the job for making a tactical error. (TFNR)

Range

this was the name used by the New Republic military to describe the large, ground assault vehicles of the Yuuzhan Vong. The name came from the fact that the vehicles resembled mountain ranges. Like the smaller vehicles used by the Yuuzhan Vong, ranges moved about on cilia-like appendages on the bottom of the vehicle. They were protected by spiked, bony plates of armor, and used several of the Yuuzhan Vong's bio-organic weapons: dovin basals, plasma guns, and projectile launchers. Weapons were mounted on bony spikes that studded the spine and flanks of the range, making it look like a huge slug. It was later discovered that the Yuuzhan Vong referred to these vehicles as rakamats. (DTO, EL1)

Range Dog

a creature native to Vinsoth. (TJP)

Range Squadron

this ground assault team was led by Kapp Dendo during the Battle of Ithor. It assisted the Jedi Knights in fighting against the Yuuzhan Vong ground assault force. (DTR)

Ranger

this was the Centax-class heavy frigate that was assigned as Jedi Master Nejaa Halcyon's flagship during the Old Republic's mission to liberate Praesitlyn from the Separatists, during the final stages of the Clone Wars. The Ranger was equipped with the latest in weapons and auxiliary systems technology, and was one of the fastest frigates in the fleet. Its primary armament was a pair of MG1-A proton torpedo tubes, which were supplemented by a full complement of laser cannon batteries. However, the Ranger and her crew were unprepared for the tactics of the Separatists, who used skirmisher vessels to breach the hull of the Ranger and several other ships. These skirmishers then disgorged battle droids into the boarded vessels. Only the timely actions of Jedi Master Halcyon saved the crew, defeating the battle droids and allowing the Ranger to limp away to a safe location to begin repairs. (JT) this was the pseudonym of a smuggler who had an extensive knowledge of droids and their use to smugglers. Ranger was based on the planet Chandrila. (SWJ13)

Ranger

this was the name of a subspace transceiver developed by Sienar Fleet Systems for use aboard Imperial Star Destroyers. It was capable of sending and receiving communications signals across a distance of 100 light-years. (EGW)

Ranger

an Imperial CR90 corvette escorting the Invincible's supply convoy near Dellalt. (XW)

Ranger

an Imperial system patrol craft group protecting the NL-1 outpost in the Pakuuni System. (TIE)

Ranger

this is a model of starship built by the Kuat Drive Yards. (TT)

Ranger X-1

this was a model of defense droid, produced during the last century of the Old Republic. The development of the X-1 series was predicated on the need for a galaxy-wide law enforcement agency, but it was scrapped in favor of the Intergalactic Law Agency. Roughly humanoid in shape, the Ranger X-1 stood almost two meters in height. (MDCAR)

Ranger-5

this heavy-duty swoop was developed during the last decades of the Old Republic for use by scouts and explorers. The Ranger-5 measured just 3.3 meters in length, could attain speeds of 200 kilometers per hour, and had a flight ceiling of about ten meters. (GMR7)

Ranger-class Gunship

this New Republic warship was developed for use by the military shortly before the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (VP)

Range-squab

a small gamebird whose meat is considered a delicacy. (HSL)

Rangorah

this was the last planet on the "Kessel Run", at least according to Squishmael. According to the story he heard from Marshak, smugglers had to race to Rangorah and meet with Fonker Dahk, at the Event Horizon cantina, to verify their performance in the race. (T16)

Rani Quanic

this Sullustan female was the leader of the gang which stole a shipment of meleenium from the Qua'Tahc mines, on Af'El, during the early years of the New Republic. The group's actions earned them the ire of Mihalik, who vowed to bring the thieves to justice by himself. Rani and her partner, Ostan Atur, worked from a base hidden in the Minos Cluster. Rani was, at one time, a pilot who flew the Ison Corridor for a legitimate shipping outfit, but she soon discovered that running spice was a more profitable endeavor. She worked with Chordak for many years before setting out on her own, and was captured and imprisoned on Sullust for her criminal activities. She was pardoned by Sin Suub himself, but only on the condition that she work for SoroSuub as an undercover agent, disrupting Alliance supply convoys without attracting Imperial attention. After the Battle of Endor, she fled to the Minos Cluster and met up with

Ostan Atur through a mutual friend, the Reigat Talak. Rani and Ostan traveled in Rani's modified freighter, the Lathien Leth. (SWJ10)

Ranis Quarter

this urban area was found on the planet Andasala. (GG11)

Ranjyin

this male Ansionian, who lived in the city of Cuipernam on the planet Ansion, was the leader of the Unity of Community some ten years after the Battle of Naboo. Ranjyin was distinguished by the alternating black-and-white pattern of his mane. He was among the nine members of the Unity to vote in favor of Ansion remaining with the Old Republic, shortly before the Clone Wars. (APS)

Rank Cylinder

this small rod was issued to each and every Imperial officer. It contained coded information on the security authorizations and clearances of its holder. They were labelled by area of authority, level of security, and zone of clearance. (DSTC)

Rank Rule

this unwritten law seemed to govern most military organizations. In its pure form, the Rank Rule states, "those who have the rank make the rules." (ROE)

Rank, The

this was a dead area found in the vast oceans of the planet Lamaredd. It was rumored that any ships that ventured too close to The Rank mysteriously disappeared, and it was said that a Menahuun hunting party regularly patrolled the area, destroying any non-Menahuun vessel they encountered. It was later discovered that Guther Bartyn dumped the lees from his mining operations into the ocean near The Rank, after piping it through thousands of kilometers of underground pipelines. Because of the continual outflow of waste, The Rank continued to grow in size. The environmental damage caused by The Rank caused the Menahuun to launch sneak attacks against the Outer Rim Oreworks, in an effort to force Bartyn to stop the dumping. (GMR7)

Rankin, Pek

this Balawai man led a search party to locate several lost children, including Terrel and Keela Nakay, just after their mission to destroy a ULF base was cut short by a counterattack. The adults had become separated from their children, and Terrel had decided to strike out on his own to return to their camp. The children were rescued by Jedi Master Mace Windu, who was forced to use the children as hostages in order to ascertain Rankin's motives. Rankin, despite his obvious disbelief that the situation was harmless to his Balawai companions, nevertheless had to admit that Master Windu was acting in the best interest of the children. Their mutual trust was short-lived, when Kar Vastor and his Korunnai warriors burst into the compound and started killing everything in sight. Master Windu managed to save many people, but Rankin was killed in the fighting. (SHPT)

Rankweed

this plant was infamous for its noxious odor and frightful taste. (DMSH)

Rankwin Fopow

this being served as the leader of the Cadinth Oligarchy, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. As Prime Oligarch, Fopow maintained his support of the Old Republic only as long as the Jedi watchman, Bodis-Ker Vitan, maintained the peace in the surrounding space. After Vitan's death, Oligarch Fopow indicated that he was "firmly undecided" as to where his loyalties lay. (HNN5)

Rann

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Rann

this was one of the most common surnames found among the human population of Corellia. (GMR9)

Rann

this city was one of the larger urban areas found on the planet Brosi. It was located on the northeastern tip of the Shoengen Coast. (AIR)

Ranna

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Rannagourd

this fleshy fruit of this plant is often scraped of seeds and baked as a meal. (SWJ12)

Rannon

this world is the third, and primary, planet in the Rannon System. A temperate world of forest-covered mountains and lush valleys, it was settled years ago by human colonists. They ruled the planet with a democratic system, with each settlement providing a representative to the overall governing body. Rannon has two moons. Its day lasts 20 standard hours, and its year encompasses 380 local days. (WBC)

Rannon

this yellow-white star is the primary body in the Rannon System. (WBC)

Ranon Djelkh

this vicious Devaronian crimelord attempted to take control of Jabba the Hutt's operations on Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. Despite his best efforts to raid Jabba's storehouses and disrupt his operations, Djelkh could never gain any kind of foothold on Tatooine. He didn't endear himself to the local population of Mos Eisley, either, for civilians were often caught in the crossfire of his attacks on Jabba's holdings. In a last-ditch effort, Djelkh hired a bounty hunter to set a mole serpent loose in Jabba's palace, in an attempt to assassinate the Hutt. Djelkh then planned to present a gift of cologne - extracted from the scent glands of the mole serpent's favorite prey, the tirginni beast - to Jabba. His plans fell apart almost immediately, when the bounty hunter's ship crashed into the desert, then Harbo Wils tried to peddle the cologne to the highest bidder. When the cologne ended up in the ship of an unsuspecting group of smugglers, Djelkh wanted to part of their story that they were innocent. He went after the smugglers himself, discovering them near the wreckage of the Star Stalker, the ship which was transporting his mole serpent. Djelkh and his thugs set out to eliminate the smugglers, but he was unaware of the presence of A-Zulmun. The Tusken Raider managed to shoot Djelkh several times with a sligthrower rifle, badly injuring the Devaronian and distracting his forces. In the fight, Djelkh was also sprayed with the Tirginni Cologne, when its container was shot and destroyed. In a cruel twist of fate, Djelkh was swallowed whole by the mole serpent he had imported to Tatooine. (SOT)

Ranphyx

this wild beast inhabits the A'driannamieq Mountains of Elom. These large felines prowled their lands in large, social packs, and would attack any outsiders to their territory. They preferred to feed on live prey, but would scavenge whenever prey was scarce. Their pelts were spotted and striped, giving them camouflage in their natural environment. The males had a short mane of fur around their heads. All ranphyx had wide, pointed ears and five horns on their faces: one on their forehead, one below each ear, and a pair on their chin. These horns provided both protection and additional attack capabilities. The leader of the pack was known to the Elomin as the kzenka, and every adult member of the pack helped in the training of the young. The tail of the ranphyx is something of a mystery, being forked and bare. Some scientists argue that it served to help dissipate heat, while others claimed it was for emotional displays. (GG12, COG)

Ransa, Bicon

this Old Republic Senator was one of the many who felt that the Jedi Knights were becoming too powerful. When the Senate was approached by Vox Chun to investigate the death of his son, Bruck, at the Jedi Temple on Coruscant, Senator Ransa was one of those asked to join the investigation committee. He silently approved of Sano Sauro's confrontational prosecution tactics. (JAD)

Ransar Rhai Insignia

this was the highest of the commendations given by the members of the m'Yalfor'ac Order, and virtually guaranteed its holder the position of successor to the current leader of the Order. (AIR)

Ransen, Kyl

this Imperial Moff was in control of the Polith System during the early years of the New Order. After witnessing the virtual subjugation of the Vratix people on Thyferra as a youth, he vowed to help them when he grew older. After attaining the rank of Moff, he allowed himself to be "bribed" by the Ashern terrorist group, and allowed them to contaminate a shipment of bacta. Although he regretted the loss of life because of the tainted bacta, Moff Ransen did not regret helping the Ashern in their struggle for independence. (SWJ3)

Ranso Li

this Twi'lek and his partner, Cruva Lenda, worked for Nirama during the the early years of the New Order. They were dispatched to Nar Shaddaa to negotiate the sale of several used freighters from the Hutt crimelord, Popara. (TF)

Ransom, Tait

this smuggler learned everything he could from his mentor, Karl Ancher, and was a good-natured rival of Kaine Paulsen. Corellian by birth, Ransom was loyal and trustworthy, and measured himself by the integrity of his life. Tait left Socorro many years before the Battle of Endor, hoping to make a name for himself outside the shadow of Kaine Paulsen. Ransom later rescued Drake Paulsen and Karl Ancher from the jail on Omman, but was later arrested and sent to Vizcarra. Drake and his companion, Nikaede Celso, arranged a diversion and managed to get Tait freed before he could be carry off to jail. (SWJ3)

Ransom, Zan

this bounty hunter was active along the border between the Outer Rim Territories and Wild Space, during the height of the New Order. Aside from collecting bounties, Ransom was also known as an excellent scout and hunter, and often took work collecting rare and exotic animal species for eccentric collectors. He flew the modified YT-1930 freighter Wild Menagerie during this time. (WOTC)

Ranste

this searing ball of rock was the innermost planet of the New Plympto System. (CCW)

Ranth

a mammalian race native to the planet Caaraz, the Ranth are humanoid carnivores with bluish fur and flat muzzles. Their mouths are filled with short, sharp teeth. They live on the glacial plains of the dark side of Caaraz, hunting for food whenever conditions allow it. There are two distinct factions of Ranth: those that remain hunters and animal-like in their ways, and those that have become more civilized and have become integrated with the galactic community. They are a short-tempered race, and seem to have little knowledge of their own history as a species. Individual families, however, maintain detailed histories of their own. Each Ranth community, therefore, has its own versions of history, and a planetwide government was never established. This was quickly changed when the Empire discovered Caaraz, which had come to take the eletron gas from the planet. The Ranth could initially put up no resistance, and the Empire later employed the more civilized Ranth as hunters and bodyguards, safeguarding the local garrison against the planet's predators. However, the Empire began dumping its waste and fouling the environment, and the uncivilized Ranth became angry. They began ambushing Imperial soldiers and raiding bases. The Imperials demanded that the civilized Ranth put an end to this, and they began to hunt down their brethren. This led to a number of small skirmishes between Ranth communities and the Imperial forces, and kept the Ranth from emerging onto the galactic scene with a large presence. With the death of the Empire in the wake of the Battle of Endor, the civilized Ranth began to take control of former Imperial outposts, turning them into overcrowded cities. They also pushed their uncivilized brethren further into the wilderness, continuing to deepen the animosity between them. (GG12, UANT)

Ranth

this was one of the many mining settlements, or o'bekis, established on Gorothe Prime. (GSE)

Ranth

this was the native language of the Ranth race. The spoken form consisted of purrs, growls, and throaty grunts, while the written form was made up of clawlike marks that combined to form characters. (UANT)

Ranth, Sigit

this Imperial scientist was part of the team that created the defective clones of Emperor Palpatine on Byss, during the early years of the New Republic. For his part in creating the clones, Ranth was hunted down by Kir Kanos. Ranth was unaware of this attention, and traveled to Dathomir to investigate the Infinite Gate that was discovered there. However, when the Infinite Gate proved useless, Ranth left Dathomir altogether. (WOA30)

Rantine Space Station

this outpost was located in Tamarin Sector during the early years of the New Republic. (POC)

Rantok

this forged steel sword was the traditional weapon of the Unfyr Warriors of the Ka'hren. Its blade measured 1.2 meters in length, and was attached to a wooden hilt about a third of a meter long. Each side of the hilt was studded with a dagger-like crossguard. It could be wielded with one or two hands, and was equally deadly no matter how it was used. (AIR)

Rantorin

Rantweed

this clustering plant was considered a food source by the Hutts. (TF)

Rao

this being, a former native of Mos Espa, was an acquaintance of Kitster Banai and Wald. Rao was known for the incredibly fast and dangerous Novastar rocket swoop she used to travel across the desert. She often loaned it out to other beings who needed to get somewhere in a hurry, but after a sixth rider died in a crash, she refused to loan it out anymore. When Leia Organa Solo and her husband, Han Solo, petitioned Ulda Banai for a swoop, she provided Rao's Novastar only after Han proved he could ride it. (TG)

raoao

this Shyriiwook word was used as the suffix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "kin" or "noble". It could be attached to a prefix by itself, or combined with other suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Raol

this young, Jazbinan male was a member of the underground resistance which sprang up after Jazbina aligned itself with the Empire. He was captured when Luke Skywalker discovered their cell, after being tricked into believing Syayna had been kidnapped. Luke thought Raol was a kidnapper, and tried to kill him. Raol harbored Luke plenty of ill-will and when Syayna rescued Luke from her father, Raol pestered him and played jokes on him. He was jealous of Luke, for he was in love with Syayna. However, after Syayna stood up to Darth Vader and maintained Luke's freedom, she declared her only love was for Raol. (VQ)

Raort, Romort

an Irith spice-jacker, Romort Raort grew up as the local bully. After turning to spice-jacking, his demeanor has changed very little. He was hired by Elaginn, and when Elaginn committed suicide, Raort took over the gang. They worked out of Nar Shaddaa, where he continued to cultivate his contacts. When they heard of a load of spice moving through, Raort would hit the transport ship with his ion cannon. The gang then descended on the ship, hijacking its cargo and rounding up its crew for sale on the slave market. (DE1, DESB)

Raouul

this Tarasin male worked as an assistant to Yara Grugara during the height of the Clone Wars. (LFCW)

Raowen

this name was common among Ithorian females. Although such names do not generally have meaning, Ithorians who studied their race's history learned that the name meant "golden" or "made of gold". (GCG)

Raph-Elan, Yoshi

this young man was a Padawan of the Jedi Knights in the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Shortly after Obi-Wan Kenobi was raised to the level of Jedi Knight, Yoshi himself was admitted to the ranks of the Jedi Knights. On his first mission, he was shot down over a dusty planetoid by an unknown attacker. His ship was destroyed in the crash, and his lightsaber was badly damaged. He found himself in the midst of the machinations of Lord Gar-Oth, where the natives of the planetoid believed him to be The Foreseen. In an effort to help free Princess Lourdes, Yoshi claimed that he had married her, and was forced into battle against Gar-Oth's huge droid, The Goliath. While Lourdes defeated Gar-Oth in combat, Yoshi managed to jump on The Goliath's back and obtain the parts needed to repair his lightsaber. In a swift slash, Yoshi destroyed The Goliath's head and rendered the droid inoperable. It was later revealed that The Foreseen could only be a woman, who turned out to be Princess Lourdes herself. Yoshi was later rescued, but Lourdes asked him to grow up and return to her. (SWS)

Rapid Cloning

this process was developed by the Empire, in a secret laboratory located beneath some Jedi ruins on the planet Dantooine. The cloning facilities themselves were built by the Jedi. The goal of the lab was to process clones in just under two weeks, rather than the year it normally took to produce a viable clone. Darth Vader himself oversaw the project, which started by using genetic material from dead members of the Alliance. Vader was able to clone many races with the facilities on Dantooine. The technique tended to be imperfect, with the resulting clones having only basic memories and lacking any of the original's imagination and technical knowledge. Vader overcame this problem by collecting mindscans from various subjects and impressing them onto the minds of his clones. When the mindscan proved successful, Vader tried to take the project one step further. He hoped to clone the Dantari and create an army of cloned warriors which would have no qualms about killing anything in its path. After the labs were discovered by Tash and Zak Arranda, and their uncle Hoole, Vader learned that there was a clone of himself running the facility. The clone even had some mastery of the Dark Side of the Force, but not enough to survive the real Vader's powers. It was later revealed that the real Vader had not known of the facility until he found it, shortly after the Battle of Yavin, while searching for the Alliance's hidden base. The clone was created from a tiny sample of blood left behind when Vader activated the facility's defenses. (GOF11)

Rapid Repetition Defense Measures

known in the computer world as RRDM, this was an Imperial anti-slicing system which constantly scanned a computer, looking for patterns that were alien to the standard operation of the system. The RRDM system allowed operators to quickly identify when slicers were trying to gain access to a system. (CFG)

RapidProgram Module

developed by Industrial Automaton, this droid programming module allowed the owner of the droid to quickly reprogram it for a variety of duties. (FBS)

Rapier

this was the name of the Duelist Elite dueling droid Darth Maul once trained against. It was named because it was armed with a steel rapier. It was destroyed by Maul in combat, shortly before he was ordered to hunt down Hath Monchar. (DMSH)

Rapier

this was one of the Nebulon-B frigates which were used by the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Rapier, Jobal

this popular holoivid star married his regular co-star, Yari Cranna, more than two years before the onset of the Clone Wars. They split up just two and a half years later. Jobal claimed that he had married Yari because she was the perfect accent to his wardrobe and his image, although Yari claimed that Jobal was jealous of the fact that she made more credits than he did. Jobal simply replied that it was time to put Jobal back in the center of things. (HNN5)

Rapora Mining

this corporation specialized in starting mining booms on planets with deep reserves of natural materials, during the height of the New Order. (SWJ10)

Rapotwanalantonee Tivtotolon

this was the full name of the musician Rappertunie. (CCG9, SWI67)

Rappapor

this man was a member of Samuel Tomas Gillespee's smuggling group during the early years of the New Republic. (TLC)

Rappertunie

this Shawda Ubb musician played the growdi for the Max Rebo Band. His full name was Rapotwanalantonee Tivtotolon. He grew up wanting to travel, something most of his species loathed. As a child, Rappertunie saved his credits and eventually bought passage to Shanpan. While there, he encountered beings from a multitude of species and cultures, and he eventually joined a Shanpa band in order to earn more credits. It while playing with these bands that he adopted the name Rappertunie, since it was easier for other species to pronounce. When he saw the Max Rebo Band play on Manpha, Rappertunie was given the chance to join the band. He eagerly agreed, and his growdi music blended in nicely with the band's jazz sound. When the band was employed by Jabba the Hutt, Rappertunie found that the dry, desert heat affected his playing as well as dried out his skin. He petitioned Sy Snootles to break off the engagement, and his wish was answered when Jabba was killed at the Pit of Carkoon. After touring briefly with Sy Snootles until her career failed, Rappertunie took a job as a computer engineer with Rebaxan Columni, and worked on several upgrades to the MSE-6 line of droids. (RJSE, CCG9, MTSE, SWI67)

Raprice

this annoyingly efficient Imperial officer was assigned to Captain Deyd Llnewe aboard the customs vessel Vigilant in the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. While Llnewe resented Raprice's constant adherence to regulations, Raprice chafed at Llnewe's unorthodox methods. Both men were humbled when they discovered that the ships Han Solo had been piloting through their checkpoints were actually stolen and later sold to the Alliance. (T2)

Raptor

this piscine being was a noted bounty hunter who operated during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Raptor was easily distinguished by the large gills that dominated his head, which was topped with wiry hair that looked like tiny horns. Raptor was part of an unlikely group that was put together by Magus to hunt down Talesan Fry, after the young boy discovered their plans to assassinate twenty galactic leaders at a conference on Rondai-2. Raptor entered the Uta Center by diving into one of the many pools that covered the grounds, using his gills to breathe underwater as he worked his way inside the complex. Upon entering the Uta Center, Raptor found that he had been followed by Qui-Gon Jinn. He tried to fire his rocket launcher at the Jedi Master, but Qui-Gon was able to outsmart the bounty hunter. The Jedi was able to momentarily confuse a rocket, causing it to target Raptor instead. Raptor was unable to move out of the way, and perished in the resulting explosion. (SOJ) an Preybird-class attack ship owned by Mazzic, the Raptor was blue in color with a red bird of flames on its wings. Mazzic and his crews performed heavy modifications to the Raptor and its twin, the Skyclaw, acquiring military parts produced by the Empire on the black market in order to augment their capabilities.

Raptor

The ship required a pilot and a gunner to operate, and was armed with a pair of heavy laser cannons and two concussion missile launchers. (TLC, LCSB, GMR4)

Raptor

an Alliance Nebulon-B Frigate destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Raptor

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was stationed in Kathol Sector, under the command of Imperial Moff Kentor Sarne, during the early years of the New Republic. The Raptor and the Bastion were called into duty during the Battle of Kathol, and began to turn the tide of the battle toward the Imperials, just before the deaths of DarkStryder and Moff Sarne. After Sarne's death, the Raptor was returned to the main Imperial fleet, and was part of the task force commanded by Admiral Pellaeon in the wake of the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. It was dispatched as the flagship on the mission to capture Orinda. (E, WOA30)

Raptor

this was the name of the huge warship that served as the flagship of Iaco Stark's navy, during the Stark Hyperspace War. It was under the command of the Zabrak pirate Zur at the time. The Raptor was infiltrated by Jedi Masters Qui-Gon Jinn and Tholme and their Padawans, Obi-Wan Kenobi and Quinlan Vos, in an effort to put an end to Stark's control. The Jedi managed to rework the navigational computer virus Stark had used to disable Ranulph Tarkin's fleet, placing it within the computers of the Raptor and her support ships. (SHW)

Raptor Run

this swoop racing course was designed by Blizz Pinnix, and built near The Pits on Stend VI. It was named for Pinnix's own racing vehicle, the Black Raptor. It was a dangerous course of twisting pathways, canyons, and mazes formed from demolished buildings. The course was built on the site of a former Imperial ordnance testing facility, which Pinnix purchased for thousands of credits below market value. (WSV)

Raptors

this vicious gang controlled much of Coruscant's Crimson Corridor, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. Their ranks were open to individuals of varying races, and their leader was a human known only as Green Hair. (DMSH)

Raptors

Zsinj's special forces organization, the Raptors were noted for their ability to penetrate and destroy planetary defense systems. They were also Zsinj's personal police force, carrying out his orders in secret. The Raptors took the place of traditional stormtroopers in Zsinj's war machine. Their banner was made up of the colors red, black, and yellow. They wore a modified version of the standard stormtrooper body armor, with the armor being entirely black in color. Following the death of Zsinj at Dathomir, it is believed that surviving Raptors may have set out on their own, looking for another Imperial warlord to serve. (CPL, SOC, CTD)

Raptor-wasp

this immense avian insect was native to the planet Corellia. (E3N)

Raquisth Thoroughfare

found in the center of Quantill City, on the planet Ando, this wide avenue was noted for its architecture. (HNN4)

Raquitayben

this aquatic being was adopted by human parents, after the destruction of her homeworld. The only surviving member of her race, Raquitayben decided to move to Iskalon when she was only enough, to live among the other aquatic races that lived on the planet. (GMR1)

Raquoran, Gregor

this man was, at one time, the Commerce Master Commissioner of the Velcar Free Commerce Zone. A native of the planet Capza, Raquoran suffered from a glandular disorder that made him appear obese and dim-witted. However, Raquoran was a shrewd businessman, and was one of the business leaders who gathered aboard the Reaper to attend the Pentastar Talks which were held by Moff Arduus Kaine. Despite his own concerns that the VFCZ was well in hand, Raquoran eventually submitted to Kaine's will and signed the Pentastar Alignment Treaty, recognizing the New Republic would take control of the VFCZ if he didn't ally himself with Kaine. (SWJ3)

Rar

this was one of the many Twi'leki clans which were native to the planet Ryloth. In the Twi'leki language, the clan's name meant "bold". (GCG)

Raraza

this avian predator was native to the planet Duro, but eventually died out. (GCG)

Raraza

this was a common name given to male Duros children. The name Raraza referred to an extinct species of avian predator once found on the planet Duro. (GCG)

Rarefied Air Cavalry

this was one of the most prestigious military units from the planet Virujansi. During the height of the Clone Wars, the Rarefied Air Cavalry assisted Obi-Wan Kenobi, Anakin Skywalker, and their clone troopers to defeat the Separatist forces which tried to capture Unparala. (SWI72)

Rark

this small creature was the favorite food of a sovler. (VOF)

Rarrhkrorrrho

this was one of the many small communities that were created by the Wookiees of the planet Kashyyyk. Its economy was focused on the harvesting and sale of agricultural goods on Kashyyyk itself. (GMR4)

Ras

this was one of the most common Gungan surnames, taking from the father's side of the family. These surnames were not dropped, even after marriage. To the Gungans, it meant "hunter-gatherer". (GCG)

Rasapan

this gas giant was the sixth and outermost planet of the Kuat System. It was orbited by twenty-two moons. (CCW)

Rasca

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Ace Merrick's X-Wing squadron sent to take out the Arah asteroid mines. (RA2)

Rasch, Dessiva

this attractive and deadly woman was one of the more powerful representatives of the Klatooinan Trade Guild. Always attended by a group of Klatooinan bodyguards, she managed her operations from the moon Gall during the height of the New Order. (PSG)

RA-series Droid

this model of servant droid, manufactured by Cybot Galactica, was based on the 3PO series of protocol droids. However, it was much less expensive, and was designed to appeal to a more domestic owner. (SWJ14)

Rashallo

the green leaves of this plant, native to Haruun Kal, was used to roll small cigarras. (SHPT)

Rashh

this man served the Old Republic as a pilot, and was one of the first military officers to recognize that the rule of Emperor Palpatine was corrupt. Captain Rashh was among the first to throw in his support with the fledgling Alliance. (SWG8)

Rashk

this Bothan name was given to newborn males. Translated into Basic, it meant "peaceful" or "tranquil." (GCG, WOTC)

Rashnoor Pass

this cleft was located on the tallest peak of the planet Belsavis, and nearly split the mountain in two. (EGP)

Rashtah

this Wookiee male was one of Krayn's most trusted lieutenants, some four years after the Battle of Naboo. Rashtah and Zora were the point beings in many of Krayn's hijacking missions. Despite his species' aversion to slavery, Rashtah was nevertheless extremely loyal to Krayn. When Obi-Wan Kenobi infiltrated Krayn's spice processing facilities on Nar Shaddaa, Krayn sent Rashtah to deal with him. Rashtah managed to pummel Obi-Wan quite badly, until the Jedi was able to activate his lightsaber and fight back. Rashtah fought to the death, when Obi-Wan sliced through his chest and killed him. (JQ)

Rask

this man was an ancient Onderonian street philosopher and Naddist, who helped Exar Kun find the hidden Sith artifacts on the Dxun moon. (DLS)

Raskane IV

a planet. (GG9)

Raskar

one of the few surviving Iridium space pirates, Raskar was the owner the last power gem that was existed in the galaxy. He retired to a little-known rim world, and made his money betting on fights which he staged against those who wanted the gem. He kept his skills sharp battling dueling droids. When Chewbacca beat his best warrior and Han Solo took possession of the gem, Raskar faded into anonymity for awhile, becoming a bounty hunter for Jabba the Hutt. He convinced Jabba to let him capture Solo, and tried to capture Solo by tracking the Millennium Falcon to Hoth. Han managed to escape the initial encounter, with some help from Luke Skywalker. Raskar tried to steal Han's reward for rescuing Leia from Grand Moff Tarkin, chasing them beneath the surface of the planet. There, they discovering the presence of lumni-spice. Raskar agreed to let Solo go free for his take of the lumni-spice. A dragon-slug attacked them, and Luke was able to defeat it. After both Solo and Raskar escaped from Hoth, Raskar later rescued Solo from Skorr, on Ord Mantell. (CSW)

Raslan

this former Imperial Captain served under Warlord Zsinj during the period following the Battle of Endor and the breakup of the Empire. He directed the assault force which landed aboard the Kuat Drive Yards facility building the Razor's Kiss, then took command of the stolen Super-class ship as they attempted to flee Kuat. Raslan was unable to make much progress, as the Razor's Kiss was inefficiently tuned, and they were eventually caught by the New Republic. Raslan died in the first wave of attacks on the Super-class ship. (IF)

Rasp

this was the term used to describe a family of avian creatures found throughout the galaxy. (GQRG)

Rasp Ravine

this was the name given to a section of the Agrilat Swamp Circuit, one of the most popular swoop racing courses of the New Order. (SWGAL)

Rasper

this man was a member of the Nebula Front team, led by Captain Cohl, which infiltrated the Trade Federation battleship Revenue shortly before the Battle of Naboo. Unfortunately for Rasper, he was shot and killed in the initial struggle. (COD)

Rass

the bones of this predator, native to the planet Saki, were used by Sakiyan hunters to create handles for knives other bladed weapons. The black surface of a rass bone was pebbled and hard, providing a grip that wouldn't slide around in a bloody or sweaty hand. The use of a rass-bone blade indicated a hunter's prowess, since it indicated that the wielder had taken down one of the most vicious predators on their homeworld. (MBS)

Rassh, Nuendo

this man was arrested on Stend VI, for running supplies to Fortress Keremark, during the Galactic Civil War. Rassh was known to have used five reprogrammed Hatchling maintenance droids to service his personal starship. (HAS, FTD)

Rasterous

Airen Cracken escaped from the Kuat Drive Yards shipyard warehouse on this planet by eluding pursuit on an Aratech A14 repulsor-disk. (CFG)

Rastur

a native of the planet Ennth, Rastur was the leader of the evacuation of Another Hometown. He was married to Shinnan, and they worked tirelessly to ready their town for evacuation when the planet's eight-year cycle of destruction occurred. He was a decorated soldier who served his planet and the galaxy well, and was known for his heroic actions in the heat of battle. He gladly accepted Zekk's help when Ennth's moon began its close orbit, and they got most everyone to a space station before the worst damage occurred. When Zekk questioned why the settlers kept rebuilding rather than resettling on a less active planet, Rastur explained that Ennth was their world, and theirs alone, and they felt that they owed it to the planet and themselves to carry on. He was devastated by the loss of Shinnan, but kept working to ensure everyone else was safe. (SHA)

Rasvin

this Imperial freighter was assigned to deliver hyperdrive repair parts to the stranded Laantis, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Rat Monster

a large, rodent-like creature that inhabits the subterranean realms of Imperial City on Coruscant. It has large tusks that it uses as weapons, and is covered by plated armor and large spines on its back. (JS, DA)

Rat People

denizens living in the depths of the older sections of Imperial City on Coruscant. Like many of the city's sub-world alien creatures, the rat people shy away from bright lights. They are also fairly timid, and will run from any form of confrontation. (CPL)

Rat Roach

this species of insect was known to inhabit the bulkheads of starships and other dark places, where it fed on easily obtained metals such as electrical wiring. They had two antennae, one on each end of their body, and were protected by a collection of sharp quills on their backs. Rat roaches protected themselves by curling up their antennae and rolling into a ball shape, exposing all their quills. (TBSB)

Rata Nebula

this gaseous cloud was located near the planet Csilla, in the Unknown Regions of the galaxy. (GMR7)

Ratamesh

this was the capital city of Thisspias. (NEGC)

Ratch

this was a slang term for any lowlife criminal, often used by smugglers. (HTTE)

Ratchet Gramzee

this male Ugnaught was a member of Sebolto's gang during the years following the Battle of Naboo. The Corporate Alliance issued a bounty for his capture in connection with the theft of classified chemical manufacturing information that was later used in the production of death sticks, which were later discovered to have been laced with deadly neurotoxins. This bounty was eventually claimed by Jango Fett, who managed to locate Gramzee and his partner, Lokk Gimble, on Malastare during his attempt to meet with Sebolto. (BH)

Rath

this man was a small-time criminal during the early years of the New Republic. He was hired by IT to steal Leia Organa Solo's datapad from her Coruscant apartment, shortly after her marriage to Han Solo, in an effort to implicate her in the droid's schemes. Rath was nearly thwarted by Chewbacca's son, Lumpawarrump, who was in the apartment at the time. Rath escaped, but was pursued by the Wookiees. (AFA)

Rath Kelkko

this Anzati male was one of the most powerful crime figures on his homeworld of Anzat, during the height of the Clone Wars. He was Sora Bulq's primary contact during this time, and was working with the former Jedi Master to establish a "shadow army" for the Separatists when they were discovered by Jedi Masters Tholme and Aayla Secura. He traveled to Saleucami to train the cloned Morgukai warriors that had been created for the "shadow army," teaching them the ways of the Anzati assassins. (RT)

Rath, Hogun

this legendary bounty hunter was known as a single-minded individual, quietly and unceremoniously completed each hunt he took on. His skills as a tracker and hunter were excellent, and he had a cold-blooded detachment from his targets that made him all the more efficient. In the wake of the Bounty Hunter Wars, Rath was removed from the Empire's most-wanted list because it was believed he was dead. Rath, however, was quite alive, and was courted by the Alliance to join the Galactic Civil War. (RESB)

Rathalay

this planet is known as a tourist destination, but is by no means popular. This suits its visitors just fine, as many of them go to Rathalay for its private beaches. It was here that the former Imperial Grand Admiral Grant retired, after he defected to the New Republic. Later, Han Solo took his family there during the Yevethan Purge, to help Leia Organa-Solo clear her mind in preparation for the battle to come. (SOL, SWI66)

Rathalayan Firestone

this variety of firestone was similar in appearance to a Gallian firestone. (MBS)

Rathe Palror

this Tunroth sharpshooter was a member of Churhee's Riflemen. A member of the shurlan class, he was one of the few survivors of the assault on Y'Trella. Rathe decided to forgo his pro-Imperial stance and later assisted Riiij Winward in his escape from Tatooine. (GG12, TFE, SWJ12)

Rathleek

this Whiphid Spearmaster was the leader of a group of Whiphids which settled on Kothlis to partake of the wild game to be found in the Arblis Forest. The Whiphids settled into an abandoned smelting plant, left behind by Raynor Mining Enterprises, and used the facility as their base of operations. (SPG)

Rath-scurrier

this small creature was the traditional prey of the Nediji race. (MJH)

Ratidillo

this huge, armored rodent lives in the deepest, darkest regions of the bowels of Imperial City. A row of spikes runs along its back and down its tail, and large tusks stud its mouth. The ratidillo, also called a rat monster or a kragget rat, is a scavenger. (JASB)

Rationalist Party

this socio-political group, formed from the Newcomers to the planet Nam Chorios, was led by the younger incarnation of Seti Ashgad. It served as the main faction of support for Ashgad and his unknown superior, Dzym. They continually attacked Theran gun emplacements on the planet, in hopes of allowing free trade to come to Nam Chorios. They were not aware of Ashgad's connections to Dzym and the real reason for the attacks on the gun platforms. (POT)

Ratitan Whisperfly

this small insect is known for its soft, insistent buzzing. (SOP)

Ratoog

this Gamorrean served as the computer and droid specialist for the Friends of Paran, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He wore a special translation device around his neck, in order to better communicate with his fellow rebels. (OE)

Rattagagech

this New Republic Senator was the Chairman of the Science and Technology Council. An Elomin, Rattagagech supported Borsk Fey'lya, and voted to remove Leia Organa-Solo from power when Krall Praget questioned her ability to rule. (SOL)

Rattatak

the history of this planet was written in blood, as the natives were considered barbarians who lived with violence and bloodshed on a daily basis. The planet was located in a remote corner of the galaxy, and was unknown even into the last days of the Old Republic. Because resources were scarce on the planet, and since there was no trade with the outside galaxy, the struggle for survival became paramount to the native Rattataki. Small tribes gathered together to pool their resources, and wars over fertile ground became commonplace. This evolution toward violence kept the Rattataki from discovering space travel, and they were quite unprepared when a starship full of slavers arrived on Rattatak. However, the Rattataki quickly realized that the slavers could bring stronger warriors to Rattatak, and renewed violence spread across the planet. This barbaristic existence was temporarily halted when Asajj Ventress rose to power, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. When she left Rattatak to join Count Dooku, Rattatak reverted to its old ways. (SWDB, CWC1)

Rattataki

this race of near-humans, characterized by their thin bodies and pasty-white skin, was native to the remote world of Rattatak. Because resources were scarce on Rattatak, and since there was no trade with the outside galaxy, the struggle for survival became paramount to the Rattataki. Small tribes gathered together to pool their resources, and wars over fertile ground became commonplace. This evolution toward violence kept the Rattataki from discovering space travel, and they were quite unprepared when a starship full of slavers arrived on Rattatak. The wiry Rattataki were of no use to the slavers, being too difficult to train. However, the Rattataki quickly realized that the slavers could bring stronger warriors to Rattatak, and renewed violence spread across the planet. Tribal warlords began pitting personal champions and gladiators against each other in large arenas, leading to the formation of the Blood Sport of Rattatak. (SWDB)

Ratter Thist

this small, agile creature has tan fur marked by varying stripes. They have sharp, retractable claws, and are often used to guard livetsock in mountain valleys. Moranda Savich asked for them when she first entered the Exoticalia Pet Emporium, trying to draw out Navett and Klif. They are sometimes called Kordulian krisses. (VOF)

Ratts Tyerell

this perpetually happy alien was considered one of the Outer Rim's best podracer pilots. Ratts was a member of the Aleena race, and flew in a Vokoff-Strood Titan 215 podracer. Unfortunately for Ratts and his family, he was killed during the Boonta Eve Classic race on Tatooine, which saw Anakin Skywalker defeat Sebulba. His family was orphaned on Tatooine in the wake of his death. (RAC, IG1, IWE1, OWS, JQ3)

Ratts Tyerell Foundation

founded by Pabs Tyerell in the memory of his father, Ratts Tyerell, this organization sought to outlaw pod racing. The basis of the Foundation's goals was the death of Ratts Tyerell during the Boonta Eve Classic on Tatooine, which left his family without a husband and father. The Foundation hoped to ban pod racing in order to avoid subjecting other families to similar hardships. (HNN4)

Rault-Sanik

this was a noted member of the Yarkora race. (UANT)

Rav

this female name was common among the Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

RAV

the short name for a repulsorlift assault vehicle. Floating fortresses, command speeders, and repulsortanks are all examples of RAVs, which in turn are a form of ground assault vehicle (GAV). (SWJ9)

Rav Mjalu

this was a noted Bimm individual, distinguished in the history of the planet Bimmisaari. (UANT)

Ravaath

this planet was conquered by the Epicanthix people. (SESB)

Ravager

an Imperial Lancer-class frigate assigned to the Rachuk System about two and a half years after the Battle of Endor. It was destroyed during the New Republic raid on Vladet, when Corran Horn flew his X-Wing directly at the Ravager, allowing Warden Squadrons' Y-Wings to target his ship with their torpedoes. At the last minute, Horn's X-Wing swung around hard near the Ravager's hull. The torpedoes that were following Horn slammed into the Ravager, killing it in a series of explosions. (XWN)

Ravagor

the Imperial-class Star Destroyer Ranulf Trommer was assigned to when he attacked Aguarl 3. (ROC)

Raveen

this Imperial Commander served under Admiral Zaarin, and defected to the Alliance with Zaarin. (TIE)

Ravelev

this independent freighter was owned and operated by Captain Kassler. (PSG)

Ravenbeast

native to the jungles of the planet Seregar, this huge creature was covered with deep purple fur. Its long fangs were clear, and its hands were studded with curving claws. Ravenbeasts were stealthy predators, using a surprise attack to take down large prey. A complete set of fangs and claws from a ravenbeast were a symbol of strength, and brought a high price in Storrd Township. (ND)

Ravenno

this scout ship was part of the fleet assigned to the Loose Cannon, during its attempt to steal a bacta supply from the Twin Suns Transport Services. (XWA)

Raven's Claw

this was the name of the transport ship owned by Kyle Katarn, after the Moldy Crow was retired. When Katarn and his apprentice traveled to Hoth to investigate a disturbance in the Force, the systems aboard the Raven's Claw froze up, forcing the Jedi to travel on tauntauns until they could get the ship up and running again. (WOTC, PH, JO)

Ravenscreecher

this immense avian creature was native to the planet Wxtn. It was distinguished by its six legs, each of which ended with a set of half-meter-long claws. (JQ3)

Raven-thorn

this plant, native to Yavin 4, was distinguished by the sharp spikes that grew on its branches. Any being unfortunate enough brush into a raven-thorn often came away with ragged wounds, as the spikes were razor-sharp and capable of cutting through clothing and flesh. (DA, MBS)

Raventhorn, Jai

this outlaw was working as a mining engineer on Rodaj when her fiance, Krul, was killed by the Empire. She struck a blow of vengeance against Moff Jellrek, and continued to assist the Alliance - and later, the New Republic - whenever she could. After joining the Alliance full-time, she became a Master Sergeant with the Alliance's Infiltrator squadron. She was promoted to Master Sergeant after a failed raid on Bevell III, despite the fact that her entire team had been killed when the mission was compromised. She knew that the promotion was more propaganda than reward, but accepted it. When the Infiltrators were disbanded, Raventhorn became part of Red Team Five, but was captured by Imperial forces on Zelos II after a raid on the garrison there failed. She was imprisoned with Dirk Harkness, and both were severely tortured and interrogated, then left for dead in a prison cell. Neither knew how long they had been there when Platt Okeefe and Tru'eb Cholakk arrived to rescue Harkness, and Raventhorn was rescued with him. Jai's younger sister, Morgan, was a Major in the Alliance's Special Operations team until her death at Endor. (SWJ3, SWJ8, TFNR)

Raventhorn, Morgan Q.

this young woman was Jai Raventhorn's sister. She showed a great deal of aptitude with high technology, and took apart her first hyperdrive at the age of ten. She initially joined the scout service as a mechanic, but soon found herself disillusioned by the lack of direction in her life. She jumped ship at Rodaj and tried to find work with the mining colony there, which was where she met T'Charek Haathi. Haathi's dream of joining the Alliance appealed to Morgan, and she followed Haathi when she left Rodaj. Morgan became one of the best techs in the Alliance, and was recruited by Haathi to join her Special Operations shipjacking team. Morgan joined up, although her youthful exuberance often grated on her team's nerves during a mission. After many successful missions, and as she matured within the military, Morgan was promoted to Major within the Alliance's Special Operations team. A tall, dark-haired girl, Morgan was killed during the Battle of Endor. (SWJ3, TFNR, SWJ13)

Ravik

this tall, emaciated Imperial Grand Moff controlled the Tolonda Sector during the Galactic Civil War. Born with the true nature of the New Order in his blood, Ravik rose quickly through the ranks. However, Ravik was not satisfied with the rank of Grand Moff. He wanted the control and power than Grand Moff Tarkin had in the Outer Rim. During transport to an Imperial enclave, Ravik's shuttle was intercepted by Alliance starfighters and captured. Ravik was taken prisoner and was placed on the transport Celestial for relocation to a penal world. When Bane Nothos devised an escape plan, Ravik supported it, but quickly took control of the ragtag group of convicts. He tried to steal the Celestial, but its Captain sent it into hyperspace with a damaged motivator, hoping to destroy it. Instead, the ship was flung into Otherspace, where the Charon captured it. Ravik made a deal with the Charon leader, Ber'asco, sacrificing his own crew for continued existence. Ravik's deal involved helping the Charon get into realspace and exterminate any life they found there. He planned to deliver the galaxy's rebels to them, solidifying Palpatine's position as Emperor and ensuring his own promotion. However, the Alliance agents sent to pilot the Celestial to a penal world soon found the ship in Otherspace, and tried to capture Ravik. He was by then deep in the clutches of Ber'asco, who survived the Alliance attacks and fled back to Otherspace. Ravik's mind was retained in the Charon computer until the Charon were ready to launch an attack on the known galaxy. When the Desolate was linked to Ber'asco's mind for the coordination of the jump, Ravik's mind attacked Ber'asco's. A strange and epic battle ensued within the computer system, until Ravik finally triumphed over Ber'asco. Ravik then took control of Ber'asco's mind and body, and ordered the Charon bioscientists to create a modified form for him, incorporating the spider-like Charon body with Ravik's human head, arms, and torso. The exoskeleton was created with an energy cannon built into the torso, and a rocket pack on the back to provide the Ravik-construct with more maneuverability. Then, Ravik ordered the assault on the known galaxy under his own command. However, as the Desolate made its jump into hyperspace, Ber'asco was able to take control of Bane Nothis' body and confront Ravik. They fought, with the primary result being damage to the ship's main computer systems. Instead of emerging from hyperspace near Stronghold, a planet Ravik had learned of from the Celestial's computer, the Desolate collided with the world, causing severe damage to the ship. The Charon launched their conquest of the galaxy, but Alliance agents arrived to supplement the settlers. Ber'asco managed to make contact with the Alliance, and their uneasy partnership resulted in a confrontation with Ravik. Ber'asco attacked first, but only wounded Ravik before Ravik crushed him to death. During the battle, the rocket pack on Ravik's back was activated, and Ravik was flung across the barren plains. He somehow survived, and hid on one of the Alliance's transports. Once discovered, Ravik was assaulted by the Alliance soldiers, whose combined firepower penetrated the Charon exoskeleton and destroyed Ravik once and for all. (OS, OS2)

Ravine Squadron

this was one of the starfighter groups which protected the planet of Levian Two, during the early years of the New Republic. (SOC)

RavinsBlud

this was a noted syndicate of Gran criminals who terrorized the streets of Malastare during the last decades of the Old Republic. (BH)

Ravis

Shada D'ukal referred to this imaginary lover when she tried to contact Leia Organa-Solo at Orowood Towers, shortly after Shada left Mazzi's service. (SOP)

Ravn

an Imperial freighter group transporting supplies to the NL-1 outpost in the Pakuuni System. (TIE)

Ravva

this Socorran liquor was favored by Shamus Falconi, especially after a successful mission. It was illegal in some systems, including the Shesharile System. (SWJ9)

Raw Deal

this PLY-3000 luxury yacht was used by one of the smuggler captains recruited by the Alliance to supply arms for the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Rawd, Mij

this man served as the Vice-President of Marketing for the Ardees Beverage Company, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Shortly before the onset of Clone Wars, Rawd pulled something of a coup by signing grav-ball player Deme Tryshyn to become a spokesbeing for Ardees' products. (HNN4)

Rawl

this devious rserpent was distinguished by the frill of skin that surrounded its neck. Rawls were known for their ability to camouflage themselves and lie in wait for their prey, which they dragged into their nests to consume. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, Doctor Relan Smiff discovered that the rawls were growing to immense proportions, and were using the fans on their necks to assist in swimming. (ROD, SWGAL)

Rawl, Boo

this freight hauler, a native of the planet Hazzard, was an independent spacer until the Empire started to dictate how the galaxy - and the individuals in it - should be managed. He chafed against Imperial control until he saw only one viable option: join the Alliance and fight against the Empire. He keeps an extensive collection of hard-core music in his barge driver, the Long Run. Most of the music was banned by the Empire, which was all the impetus Boo needed to listen to it. His collection was believed to be the largest - and loudest - in the Alliance fleet. Boo Rawl assisted Deen Voorson in retrieving a Colony Class 23669 power generator from the Kuat Drive Yards, only to find that Deen's nine-year-old cousin Shannon had stowed away on his ship. The pursuing Imperials left him without options, and the three sped away to an Alliance base with the generator. (SWJ9)

Rawmat

this is corporate slang for raw materials. (SWJ9)

Rawst

one of Ranulf Trommer's wingmen assigned to the Ravagor, Rawst was killed in action over Aguarl 3. One of his wingmen's first names was Seth. (ROC)

Rawwk

a species of winged, mammalian creatures which inhabited Bespin's upper atmosphere, rawwks were named for the distinctive screech they made while hunting. This screech served to disorient their prey. The body of a rawwk was covered with feather-like fur, giving them a sleek, aerodynamic form. (JS, WSW)

Rax

this Alliance soldier accompanied Leia Organa, Luke Skywalker, and Han Solo to Kiva, in an effort to exposed Project Starscream. Unfortunately for Rax, he was consumed by the biological weapon known as Eppon. (GOF6)

RAX-1

this was the first RAGOC missile emplacement produced for military use by Oryn Engineering. (HAS)

Raxine

this female bounty hunter paired up with Krestock in an effort to hunt down Philo Taal, although neither realized that there was no official bounty posted. They disagreed over how to split the bounty, so they agreed to each take one of Philo's legs and pull until he split like a wishbone. In the end, though, Raxine simply shot Philo dead. Raxine and Krestock never received payment, except for the fact that Philo's brother, Reglis Taal, hunted them down and executed them for their parts in Philo's death. (GG10)

Raxsus Nuli

this ancient pirate tried to take over several star systems in the wake of the Great Sith War, believing that the Jedi Knights and the Old Republic were too busy with the Great Hunt to notice "smaller" criminals. However, Nuli was eventually apprehended by the Jedi, however. They discovered that Nuli had been stockpiling Verpine technology and defense systems, as part of his plan for planetary conquest. (KOTOR)

Raxus II

this ball of frozen rock and ice was the second, and outermost, planet of the Raxus System. (WOTC)

Raxus Prime

Count Dooku reappeared on this planet, some years before the onset of the Clone Wars, after having left the Jedi Order to further his own agenda. The innermost planet of the Raxus System, Raxus Prime was known as the galaxy's junkyard, having been set aside for the disposal of all sorts of materials. This created pools of toxic sludge and piles of radiated debris, and gave the planet's atmosphere a toxic undertone. With the construction and operation of a Sienar Fleet Systems refinery and reclamation facility on Raxus Prime, any remaining hospitable conditions were eliminated. Much of the planet's water was polluted, and that which was not evaporated and became acid rain. Nevertheless, Dooku maintained a luxurious abode beneath the scrap, which he used to hide from the rest of the galaxy in the wake of the Battle of Geonosis. Dooku also spend a large sum of credits excavating the surface of the planet, looking for the Force Harvester. Note that the reference to Sienar Fleet Systems comes from the Star Wars Databank, indicating that the transformation of Republic Sienar Systems took place well before the institution of the New Order. The average day on Raxus Prime lasted about 22 standard hours, and its year encompassed 388 local days. (HNN5, BF1, WOTC, SWDB, BF2)

Raxxa

this planet was one of the member worlds of the New Republic. (TT)

Ray

this was one of the many species of scalefish which inhabited the oceans of Naboo. The rays were long-bodied fish that appeared to be all head. The large head of the ray was dominated by its tooth-filled mouth, which could distend to hold its prey. The tail of the ray was crescent-shaped, making the ray a strong swimmer. Gungans and Naboo alike considered the ray an excellent sportfish, because it put up a strong fight and often made spectacular leaps from the water. (IG1)

Ray Shield

a defensive shield used to block or absorb light waves. They use electromagnetic and ultraviolet fields to capture light and drain its power. Thus, they can be used to protect a ship from lasers. They consume more power than particle shields, but serve a much different purpose. (SW, SWSB)

Ray Shield

this small, handheld shield resembled nothing more than a metallic disk. However, it was equipped with a tiny power source which provided a measure of protection against low-powered blaster weapons. Ray shields were often used in gladiator fights, where they could be used in a defensive manner, or to deflect bolts toward unsuspecting foes. (MC22)

Ray, Elena

an employee of the old Shankti Drive Works company, Elena was known as the "Black Manta," and was secretly the leader of the G'uatr Network. She worked her way up in part of Shankti's research and development branch, and earned her nickname from her corporate battle tactics. She was working to set the G'uatr Network up on a new planet, complete with data from both Shankti and Tumleh Navigation, and had been subverting the D'Iarah police in order to obtain much of what she needed. (SN)

Rayc Ryjerd

Rycar Ryjerd's son, he was heavily indebted to Jabba the Hutt for the ship he owned. He was considered even more of an idiot than his father. (CCG7)

Rayf

this was one of the most common male names among the Corellian population. (GMR9)

Raygar

this evil Imperial Doctor discovered the power of the Sunstar, some years before the Battle of Endor. He dispatched Admiral Kaaz to transport a fleet to the Forest Moon of Endor to recover it. Unfortunately, Raygar's plans were smashed by the efforts of the Ewoks and Admiral Kaaz's droid, PD-28. (ECAR)

Raykel

a city located on the planet Darkknell. (TFNR)

Raymeuz

Booster Terrik assumed this alias during the assault on the Ubiquitorate base at Yaga Minor. Commander Raymeuz was intended to be Captain Nalgol's second-in-command. Led by Garm Bel Iblis, the raid was designed to obtain a copy of the Caamas Document. However, the Star Destroyer Errant Venture had been modified to appear to be the Tyrannic, since the New Republic hadn't seen the Tyrannic in months. Moff Disra, present at Yaga Minor after anticipating the attack, was able to see through the ruse and thwart the initial assault. Grand Admiral Thrawn, portrayed by the conman Flim, demanded that Terrik and Bel Iblis cease their raid or be destroyed. (VOF)

Raynar

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Rayne

this rugged woman owned Rayne's Dune Sea Outfitters, based in Mos Eisley on the planet Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. A native of the Core World of Brentaal, Rayne "retired" from Brentaal's Wayward Children, where she had been a route coordinator, and traveled to Tatooine to pursue her dreams of becoming an entrepreneur. She used her network of contacts within the Core Worlds to establish Dune Sea Outfitters in order to ensure she always met her customers' expectations and needs. Her desire to keep the contents of her warehouse a closely-guarded secret - Rodian guards patrolled at all hours, and no one was allowed into the warehouse - meant that Rayne was the subject of many rumors, despite the outward legitimacy of her business. Much of the merchandise hidden within the warehouse was acquired for shipment by Brentaal's Wayward Children. (GMR7)

Rayne's Dune Sea Outfitters

this warehouse was located in the city of Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine, and catered to the needs of the local scouts and explorers. Casual visitors were discouraged from entering by a group of Rodian guards employed by Rayne, but any being who identified Rayne was allowed to enter. No one was allowed into the warehouse itself, as Rayne chose to keep its contents a secret. She maintained a complete inventory on a datapad, and could call up any item in minutes. Spacers could also store their cargoes in the warehouse for a small fee, but Rayne insisted the her Rodian guards load and unload the cargo. The reason for the secrecy and security was that much of Rayne's business was with various criminal and smuggling operations in the Outer Rim, as well as the shipment of goods for Brentaal's Wayward Children. Hidden behind a jumble of shipping crates Rayne kept a hyperwave transmitter, used to make sure she was up-to-date on her customers' needs and shipments. (GMR7)

Rayno Vaca

this Tarnab worked as a taxi driver on the planet Coruscant, during the Battle of Naboo. He was known to be unscrupulous, willing to do anything to trick a customer out of another credit. It was Rayno who transported Jar Jar Binks and Anakin Skywalker to Senator Palpatine's residence, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. (YJC4, CCG15, SWI75)

Raynor Mining Enterprises

this Old Republic corporation mined ores, minerals, and crystals from a number of planets. Raynor was known for its tactics of purchasing a planet, stripping it of allsable resourcesm, then moving on. (SPG)

Raynor, Dominic

one of Cloud City's owners after Ecclessis Figg, Raynor was an inept manager and a worse sabacc player. Despite his poor playing skill, he nevertheless lured Lando Calrissian into a high-stakes match after witnessing Lando's defeat of Barpotomous Drebbel. Note that Galaxy Guide 2: Yavin and Bespin indicates that Raynor was lured into the game by Calrissian. Raynor was recognized as an incompetent by Lobot, who assisted Calrissian in winning the match and claiming ownership of Cloud City from Raynor. Lobot also revealed that the workers and inhabitants of Cloud City had raised more than five million credits, which they donated to Lando in an effort to help him defeat Raynor and rid Clouc City of his ineptitude. (GG2, EGC, T3)

Raynor, Tag

this man was hired by Hahz Fallone to pose as a Clog-dweller, who claimed that his father stole the Black Sphere from Fallone years ago. Fallone employed Raynor in an effort to throw off pursuit. (ND)

Raynor, Ymile

this voluptuous woman was the wife of Dominic Raynor. She pretended to be robbed by Zlato and his partner, in order to lure Lando Calrissian into a high-stakes sabacc match. After Dominic lost Clouc City to Lando, Ymile agreed to leave the station with her husband, claiming that she had a desire to travel and see the galaxy. (T3)

Raystel, Halcor

this man was a Dean at the Alderaan University, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. His appointment was originally met with charges of nepotism, given that he had a lackluster reputation as an educator. Some ten years after the Battle of Naboo, he was suspended by Provost Dalus Othona after there were complaints that his lectures had become offtopic and erratically-presented. Further charges of Raystel's offering course credits for personal relationships with female students compounded his problems. An investigation revealed that Raystel had also been abusing ryll spice during his tenure. Raystel became a recluse during his trial, staying in his home on Delaya. (HNN4)

Rayt

this smuggler was the go-between used by Kavil to get Princess Leia Organa off Eiattu, after Leonia Tavira arranged for Leia's capture. Rayt was intercepted by Han Solo and Soontir Fel at Starforge Station, but was unaware of the true nature of his cargo, and couldn't give them any information about where they were going after he delivered them. He flew with a Verpine co-pilot who kept immaculate logs, and Han Solo was able to steal a datacard from the Verpine with information on the whereabouts of Rayt's contacts. (XWM)

Rayter Sector Broadcast Services

this operation was responsible for the maintenance and upkeep of the subspace relay network used in the Rayter Sector Subspace Broadcast Network (RSSBN). (TA)

Rayter Sector High Advisor Council

this body of governors was formed from representatives of the major planets in Rayter Sector, and was responsible for overseeing the management of resources in the Sector. (TA)

Rayter Sector Law Enforcement Information Network

known as RaSLEIN, this network was created during the Imperial occupation of the sector. Using dermatoglyphic identification databases, RaSLEIN was able to quickly and accurately monitor incoming and outgoing individuals at any starport in the sector. (TA)

Rayter Sector News Central

this primary information source in Rayter Sector. (TA)

Rayter Sector Resource Analysis Committee

this Imperial body was put in place after the Empire discovered useful worlds in Rayter Sector. They were responsible for analyzing the various worlds and their possible contributions (including minerals, ores, biotechnology, and food) to the Imperial war machine. (TA)

Rayter Sector Subspace Broadcast Network

this small communications network was designed by the Rayter Sector's High Advisory Council, in an attempt to replicate a small part of the galactic HoloNet. Known as the RSSBN, is used sixty-four subspace relay stations to continually disperse data. Although much slower than the HoloNet, the RSSBN was significantly less expensive. Of the sixty-four relay stations and the multitude of planets in the Sector, only six planets and eight relay stations were capable of originating broadcasts. The rest were simply relays. (TA)

Razalon

this small speederbike manufacturer produced some unusual designs during the last decades of the Old Republic. (AEG)

Razelfin

this Tynnan was elected to served as Tynna's leader just months before the onset of the Clone Wars. When the Tynna Central Government Building collapsed due to an infestation of stone mites, Razelfin called the collapse an act of terrorism, and blamed the Jedi Knights for not being there to prevent it. Razelfin then threw Tynna's future in with that of Count Dooku and the Separatists by seceding from the Old Republic. (HNN5)

Razers, The

this swoop gang rosse to power on Stend VI in the wake of the departure of the Skulls, and maintained the reign of terror that their predessors established. They specialized in the theft and fencing of vehicles and parts. (WSV)

Razi Khan

this being was a Seyugi Dervish. (WOTC)

Razian Psycho-storm

an incredibly-intense weather pattern. (CSWEA)

Razke

this Alliance Special Forces soldier was a member of Team Razor. (HAS)

Razoor Mountains

this was a rugged mountain range found on the planet Socorro. (T11)

Razor

this was the monicker used by the bounty hunter Tendin Vought. (LFCW)

Razor

this Alliance CR90 corvette was part of the group dispatched to evacuate the base on Kothlis, shortly before the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Razor

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer patrolled the space near the planet Tallaan, maintaining Imperial law after the Battle of Hoth. (TSIA)

Razor Coast

this was one of the many coastlines found on the planet Jabiiim. It was here, during the Battle of Jabiiim, that Alto Stratus concentrated his troops for one massive attack on the forces of the Old Republic. (RBJ)

Razor Fern

this fern, native to the planet Dorvalla, in the Videnda Sector, was known for its sharp fronds. (COD)

Razor Grass

native to many different planets, razor grass is a sharp-bladed plant which grows in clumps. While the blades look supple, they are extremely sharp. The blades are capable of inflicting vicious lacerations if grabbed or trampled. (AC, CRO)

Razor Moss

a tenacious plant that survives among the rocks on the planet Tatooine, razor moss has corrosive roots that break down the crystalline structure of the sandstone outcroppings to extract the moisture contained within. (ISU)

Razor Penitents

this was the name given to the rank-and-file members of the Temple of the Beatific Razor, a fanatical cult of Swokes Swokes that opposed the Congress of Caliphs during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (WOTC)

Razor Reed

species of black-bladed grass native to the planet Trinta, razor reeds are named for its extremely sharp blades. It grows in dense clumps. (DOE)

Razor Starfighter

this three-winged starfighter was commonly found in independent security fleets as well as pirate fleets. Designed and manufactured by Starypan/SunHui Spaceworks, the Razor had a long, cylindrical fuselage and was armed with a pair of laser cannons, two light ion cannons, and a pair of concussion missile launchers. (XWA)

Razorbug

this large, flat insect was bioengineered by the Yuuzhan Vong as a kind of weapon. The shell of the razorbug was extremely sharp and strong, and could cut through many substances. The Yuuzhan Vong warrior could throw the razorbug at a target, and the bug would fly at top speed until it hit something. If the warrior missed his throw, the razorbug often was imbedded in the surrounding cover. They were expendable, and were easily killed if crushed underfoot. After the hostilities between the Yuuzhan Vong and the Galactic Alliance were resolved, and the Yuuzhan Vong were allowed to live on the planet Zonama Sekot, they found that razorbugs and many other bio-engineered weapons simply reverted to their animal forms and fled into the forests. This was one way in which Sekot forced the Yuuzhan Vong to give up their lust for war and embrace a more enlightened existence. (DTO, UF)

Razorclaws

this was an early name used by the Ashern Vratix, during the period known as Alazhixazha. (PH)

Razor's Kiss

this was the name of the Super-class Star Destroyer Warlord Zsinj attempted to steal from Kuat Drive Yards, in an effort to augment his fleet in his struggle with the New Republic. He devised a plan in which several pirate groups would aid in the attempt, including the Hawk-bats of Wraith Squadron. Once his forces got the uge ship moving, several waves of pirates would swoop in and contain the Kuati security forces while Zsinj made off with the ship. However, the Hawk-bats relayed information of the attempt to the New Republic's command, and they sent in Han Solo and the Mon Remonda in order to stop Zsinj. In a series of daring moves, the Wraiths managed to severely disable the Razor's Kiss, leaving it nothing but smouldering scraps after Shalla Nelprin destroyed its shields and the Mon Remonda and Tedevium pummeled it with fire. After the battle over Kuat, Zsinj's forces recovered as much of the Razor's Kiss as they could, building a craft known to Zsinj as the Second Death. It was used at Selaggis Six to simulate damage to the Iron Fist as Zsinj once again escaped the Republic. (IF, SOC)

Razor-stick

this was a vicious, two-bladed dagger developed for use by the Rodians. (GG10)

Razort

this otter-like, alien creature is native to the oceans of Sedri, and has a razor-sharp tail and armor-like skin. (BGS)

Razor-tailed Tiger

this feline predator was native to the planet Yurb, and was revered for its hunting skills. It made its home in the area known as the Dust Pits, preying on the creatures that sought water in the arid landscape. (MBS)

Ra-Zyrth

this Massassi served as one of Naga Sadow's top commanders during the Great Hyperspace War, some 5,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. Like Sadow's other commanders, Ra-Zyrth was altered by ancient Sith magic to become a monstrous warrior, then placed into a suspended animation capsule for transport to Coruscant. Once there, Sadow planned to release his commanders on the unsuspecting Old Republic and take the planet by force. The Sith forces were defeated in combat, but Ra-Zyrth was unaccounted for among the death. Modern rumors persist that his suspended animation capsule landed on Coruscant by failing to open, leaving Ra-Zyrth preserved for the millennia. Other stories claim his capsule opened properly, and he fought the ancient Jedi Knights to his death. This latter story isn't nearly as popular as the first, which was often used by parents to keep their children from exploring too deeply beneath Coruscant's surface, lest they accidentally open the capsule and release the Massassi warrior from his slumber. (CCW)

Razzata

this woman was a friend and companion to Jango Fett, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Razzata was also a kind of conscience for Jango, who had lost much of his own conscience years before. Note that this might be a mistaken reference to the Toydarian, Rozatta. (SWI63)

Razzledy Croom

this musician was popular in the Core Worlds during the early years of the New Republic. (POT)

RB-1

this was a series of maintenance droids produced for use by the Empire. The RB-1 series could perform a number of light-duty activities, and was equipped with four manipulator arms and a fire extinguisher. (POM)

RC-101

this was a series of labor droids that were designed to carry luggage to and from locations in a spaceport. They were often referred to as "redcaps." (MJH)

RC-1080

this was the callsign of the clone commando who was part of the squad assigned to protect Lorca Oviedo to a conference on Aviles Prime, during the height of the Clone Wars. On the return trip from Aviles Prime, RC-1080 and his comrades became expendable when Oviedo tried to fake an attack by Separatist forces near Asturias. RC-1080 was the pilot of one of the escort ships, and was badly injured in the attack. Although Theta-288 managed to return with Oviedo under arrest, RC-1080 died from his injuries just before they reached Coruscant. (T22)

RC-1135

this was the designation number of the clone trooper commando known as Taler. (RCHC)

RC-1136

this was the designation number of the clone trooper commando known as Darman. (RCHC)

RC-1138

this was the callsign given to the clone commando known as Boss. (LAWS)

RC-1140

this was the callsign given to the clone commando known as Fixer. (LAWS)

RC-1207

this was the callsign given to the clone commando known as Sev. (LAWS)

RC-1262

this was the callsign given to the clone commando known as Scorch. (LAWS)

RC-1304

this was the callsign of one of the clone commandos in Niner's squad, during the Battle of Geonosis. Unfortunately, RC-1304 was among the many clones who were killed in the fighting on Geonosis. (RCHC)

RC-1309

this was the callsign of the clone commando known as Niner. (RCHC)

RC-3222

this was the callsign of the clone commando known as Atin. (RCHC)

RC-5093

this was the callsign of one of the clone commandos who actually survived their tour of duty with the Grand Army of the Republic, then retired to the CF VetCenter on Coruscant. Although chronologically RC-5093 was just twenty-three years old at the time of this retirement, his biological age was actually sixty, a victim of the rapid development processes of the Kaminoan cloners. (RCHC)

RC-8015

this was the callsign of the clone commando known as Fi. (RCHC)

RC-8028

this was the designation of a clone commando who was decanted on Kamino for deployment in the Grand Army of the Republic, during the build-up to the Clone Wars. RC-8028 was part of the four-man squad that contained RC-8015 - known to his teammates as Fi - but was killed during a training in the Killing House before every seeing the battlefield. (RCHC)

R'cardo Sooflie IX

this Lannik served as the Crown Prince and ruler of the planet Lannik, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. His abrupt and terse nature earned him the ire of the Lannik people. Despite the fact that the Jedi Master Even Piell - himself a Lannik - saved R'cardo's parents from death at the hands of the Red laro, Prince Sooflie paid the Jedi little heed. In fact, Prince Sooflie was quoted as denouncing Piell's effort, claiming that he could have become Prince sooner if the Jedi hadn't interfered. Prince Sooflie even rebuffed his chief advisor, Hutar Zash, in the public forum of the peace negotiations with the Red laro, on the planet Malastare, shortly after the Battle of Naboo. It was Sooflie's actions which forced the Red laro to alter their philosophy, and their terrorist activities were changed to ousting Sooflie in favor of the old regime. Sooflie was briefly captured by the Red laro, but was freed when the Jedi intervened. He left Malastare without a full treaty, and gruffly failed to thank the Jedi for his life. (ETM)

Rcharrz, Soo

this pale-skinned woman was a member of the Rebel Four. She was distinguished by her blonde hair, which had been shaven from the left side of her head. Rcharrz, along with the rest of her companions, was killed on Vatteria by Darth Vader. Rcharrz herself was obliterated by the Dark Side of the Force. (T9)

R-coil Crate

this form of sleight box was produced by Ecls Industries. (PSG)

RCS-1

this was the first version of Miradyne's starship flight avionics package. For many years, the RCS-1 served as the model on which other flight control systems were developed, since all such systems had to be compatible with each other. When Miradyne went out of business, many manufacturers were left without replacement systems. (SWJ5)

RCS-6

Miradyne's avionics flight system, the RCS-6 was the last in a line of flight systems produced before Miradyne went out of business. (XW, SWJ5)

RD-4

this Merr-Sonn grenade launcher was produced during the last decades of the Old Republic, and was part of the standard weaponry supplied to Separatist battle droids during the Clone Wars. (LAWS)

Rdava-bird

this flying creature was native to the planet Garqi. (TFE, SWJ7)

RDD-7

this model of racing swoop was developed during the last years of the Old Republic. The RDD-7 measured 4.3 meters in length, and could attain speeds near 480 kilometers per hour. (GMR7)

RDP

this was a series of rocket launchers produced by Locris Syndicates during the Galactic Civil War. The RDP series was cloned from the Merr-Sonn RPS-8 launcher, and included a number of sophisticated targeting systems and power controls. However, the RDP couldn't match the sheer destructive power of the RPS-8. (ROE)

R-DP0

this humanoid protocol droid was reprogrammed for espionage work, and was later known as NEK-072. (WOTC)

RDP-12

this Locris Syndicates rocket launcher was part of the RDP series, and could fire rocket darts or gas capsules. (GG10)

RD-RR

this astromech droid was red in color, and resembled a standard R5-series unit. It was placed in a training scenario by its builder, but its batteries ran down before it could complete the mission. The droid remained stuck in the bowels of Tosche Station. (DWK)

Re

this MC40a was part of the Alliance's fleet, during the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Reactant Agitator Injector

a device which captures fission byproducts in a starship engine and thermochemically agitates them, recovering them into catalyst material. (SWSB)

Reaction Drive

a primitive sublight powerplant. (LCF)

Reactivate Switch

the master circuit breaker in a droid's power supply, it is basically the on-off switch. (SW)

Reactive Composite Armor

developed by Rothana Heavy Engineering for use on the TX-130 fighter tank, this laminated armor plating was lightweight without sacrificing strength or durability. Traditional metal plating was laminated with prototype carbon fibers, creating a durable material that maintained the structural integrity of the metallic layers under stress. (OWS, WOTC)

Reactor Core

many individuals claim that this alcoholic beverage should only be available via prescription. It is made from Spice Liquor and Blue Tonic. (GG9)

Reader Tape

this technology was used during the height of the Old Republic, as a way to preserve documents and information. It was put to its best use some 400 years before the Battle of Yavin, when the Jedi Knights stored a wealth of information on reader tapes aboard the training ship Chu'unthor. (PJSB)

Reading the G's

this phrase was used by starship pilots to describe the ability to fly a ship by tactile feel, rather than by instruments. (VP)

Ready

this was the term used by Sullustan females to indicate their breeding years. Until the point of Ready, many Sullustan females were active members of the community. As the time of Ready approached, females began making their choice of husbands. (MJH)

Ready Rations

this was the name given to the prepackaged food that was developed to provide the Grand Army of the Republic with easily-transported sustenance. Species-specific forms of Ready Rations could be created, so that the ingredients included all the essential nutrients a species required. However, the reconstituted pap that formed the basis for Ready Rations was basically a carrier, and provided only the minimum of proteins and carbohydrates needed to sustain a being. Because of this, many field messhalls took advantage of local fruits, vegetables, and meats to augment the diets of their troops. (MBS)

Reakhas

this was a common name given members of Trianii society. (WOTC, UANT)

Realm Beyond

this was the Sakiyan term for death, indicating a belief in some form of afterlife. (MBS)

Realm of Death

this was one of the many Yuuzhan Vong warships which was called to the planet Coruscant - remade into a new version of the planet Yuuzhan'tar - just before the alien invaders launched their all-out attack on the Galactic Alliance's stronghold on Mon Calamari. (UF)

Realspace

the normal space-time continuum in which all of the Star Wars galaxy resides. The normal laws of physics apply here. Realspace is coterminous with hyperspace: every point in realspace has an entry or exit point to hyperspace. Due to the physical laws governing realspace, travel is very slow compared to that which can be achieved in hyperspace. (SWSB, OS)

Realspace Compensator

this hyperdrive component is used to bring the power needs of the hyperdrive back into alignment with the sublight engine's needs during the reversion from hyperspace to realspace. (OS)

Reanyn

this young Sullustan once caught a reeho bird in the house of T'laerean Larn. Unfortunately for T'laerean, his mind was still controlling the bird, and could not return to his body. (SWJ14)

Reaper

this Super-class Star Destroyer was assigned to Moff Arduus Kaine. In the wake of the Battle of Endor, Moff Kaine held the Pentastar Talks aboard this ship, eventually muscling business and political figures into agreeing to the formation of the Pentastar Alignment Treaty. He used it to patrol the Pentastar Alignment about three years after the Battle of Endor. After Kaine was killed during Operation Shadow Hand, the Reaper was absorbed into Admiral Pellaeon's fleet. (SWJ3)

Reaper

this was one of the Nebulon-B frigates which were used by the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Reaper's World

this planet became the de facto capital of Nilgaard Sector during the New Order. It was first colonized some 5,000 years before the Battle of Hoth, and was at the time an idyllic world of green oceans, blue mountains, and a variety of lifeforms. However, over the millennia, Nilgaard Bioprocessing used up the planet's natural resources, and when the planet could no longer sustain the corporation, Nilgaard moved to the Corporate Sector. In part because of its environmental destruction, Reaper's World fell into an ice age, and now its surface is dominated by glaciers and urban cityplexes. (ND)

Rearing Spider

another name for the Endorian spider. (ISU)

Rearqu 10

this Mid Rim world was the tenth planet in the Rearqu System. (JQ5)

Reasonable Doubt

this was the name of one of the many barely-serviceable cruise ships maintained by Kut-Rate Kruises, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Previously known as the Stardust, the Reasonable Doubt was of Verpine manufacture, so was more spaceworthy than most of Kut-Rate Kruises' ships. The Reasonable Doubt was converted to a refugee ship during the Clone Wars, transporting beings to and from Coruscant on a regular basis. The ship's crew was fond of reminding passengers that only the most expensive accommodations received regular maintenance, and lesser rooms received repairs only if something was broken "beyond all Reasonable Doubt." Each corridor and level of the ship was denoted by a specific color, to help passengers find their way around. This was the ship used by Jedi Masters Jai Maruk, Maks Leem, and Yoda to begin their journey to Vjun, some thirty months after the Battle of Geonosis, in an attempt to bargain with Count Dooku for peace. (YDR)

Reassignment Council

this group of Jedi Knights was responsible for organizing work for those apprentices who were not chosen to be an apprentice or a padawan by a Jedi Knight or Master. They worked within the northeast tower of the Jedi Temple on Coruscant, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (IWE1, PJSB)

Reaver

this Yuuzhan Vong frigate-analog was the first ship to first on Coruscant, when the alien invaders launched their Battle Plan Coruscant attack, some twenty-seven years after the Battle of Yavin. The resulting battle became known as the Second Battle of Coruscant, and left the New Republic without a centralized government. (SBS)

Rebaxan Colmuni

this Chadra-Fan corporation manufactured various MSE droids, including the MSE-6 Mouse droid. (ISB, DFRSB)

Rebel Alliance, The

the popular name given to the Alliance to Restore the Republic. (SW)

Rebel Assault Frigate

these highly-modified Dreadnaughts were used by the Alliance as mid-range attack ships. At 700 meters in length, the Assault Frigate was reworked so that automation replaced more than two-thirds of the 16,000 crewmen required by the original Dreadnaughts. Assault Frigates were not equipped with onboard docking facilities, but were given umbilical connections for their support craft. A single assault shuttle was also moored atop the frigate. Each frigate was armed with 15 laser cannons, 20 quad-laser cannons, and 15 turbolaser batteries. (RASB)

Rebel Blockade Runner

this was the name given to those CR90 corvettes which were used to break through planetary or interstellar blockades. It was first coined by Imperial authorities to denote those ships owned by the Alliance and modified for breaking through Imperial blockade lines. (SWN, DARK, CHRN)

Rebel Dream

Leia Organa's personal flagship, this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was originally the Imperial warship Tyrant, until it was captured at Thyferra in the wake of the Bacta War. The ship remained under the Republic's control until it was retaken by Imperial forces at the Battle of Storinal. The ship later appeared near Borleias, in the wake of the Second Battle of Coruscant, and was refitted once again for use by the Republic. The ship was later assigned to the home defense of the planet Mon Calamari, during the final stages of the war against the Yuuzhan Vong. (CPL, ECH, EL1, UF)

Rebel Four

this underground serial was a popular form of comic developed by supporters of the Alliance, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. The stories centered on four rebels - Falaem Onn, Grimgrim, F4-MF, and Soo Rcharrz - who battled the forces of the Empire on any number of worlds. They were vanquished on the planet Vatteria by Darth Vader, whose rage was later turned to redemption at the hands of Luke Skywalker. (T9)

Rebel Heroes

this was one of many pro-Alliance holo-vids produced by No-Holds-Barred during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (WSV)

Rebel Medical Frigate

this was the common used to describe any Alliance Nebulon-B frigate used as a medical ship. (ESB, ROTJ)

Rebel Rock

a stone outcropping high above the Cilpar jungles. The rebels on the planet lured Imperial TIE fighters there, flying through the spires and trying to draw the Imperials with them. When the Cilpari ships were clear, Cilpari resistance fighters hidden in the Rock open fire on the TIE fighters. (XWRS)

Rebel Routers

this Imperial armed forces squadron was part of the Imperial ground forces on Draenell's Point, during the construction of the Bissillirus Resupply Base, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (GMK)

Rebel Star

one of the New Republic escort frigates which were sent to help Han Solo and Leia Organa-Solo rescue Luke Skywalker and the Liberator. When the small fleet emerged from hyperspace near Coruscant, the Rebel Star impacted a drifting Star Destroyer and was severely damaged. (DE1)

Rebellion Blaze

this was one of the most famous gunboats operated by the Alliance, during the early stages of the Galactic Civil War. (SWGAL)

Rebellion Blaze

this area of open space was located near the planet Lok, which was the home of the Alliance's primary base in the area. The area was named for the noted gunship, the Rebellion Blaze. (SWGAL)

Rebellion Remnants

this was the poetic name given by Sonal Serore to a space station that was built by the fledgling Alliance in the Naboo System, several years before the Battle of Yavin. The station was eventually abandoned, and served as a testament to the might of the Empire. However, during the height of the Galactic Civil War, a handful of Alliance operatives re-established their presence on the station, using it as a place to gather information on the Empire's travels in the area. (SWGAL)

Rebellion, The

this was the term often ascribed to the Alliance to Restore the Republic, although it was most popular in the Empire. (SW)

Rebels

this was the Imperial name given to the members of the Alliance to Restore the Republic. It had a very derogatory connotation. (SW)

Rebel's Pride

this New Republic freighter was assigned to the convoy sent to Thyferra to transport bacta to Coruscant, during the height of the Krytos crisis. The convoy's mission profile and timetable was leaked to Warlord Zsinj, who attacked and destroyed it in the Alderaan System. The Rebel's Pride was destroyed in the ambush. (KT)

Rebeton Kl'ian

this droid manufacturer was one of the largest corporations of the Old Republic, until Industrial Automaton became more powerful. (SWJ7)

Rebo

this was a common name among the Ortolan race. (UANT)

Reboam

a planet in the Hapes cluster, referred to by Ta'a Chume when she has dinner with Luke Skywalker on Coruscant. In an effort to distract Luke from his search for Han Solo and Princess Leia, Ta'a Chume tells Luke that a group of 50 Jedi ran a small academy on the planet, before it was sealed up by Darth Vader, with the Jedi inside. The planet has a harsh, mostly uninhabited environment. (CPL)

Reborn, The

this was the name given to the Dark Jedi who were trained by Desann, during the early years of the New Republic. Most of the Reborn were tainted at the Valley of the Jedi on Rusaan, but Desann had other plans for gaining converts. He allied himself with Admiral Galak Fyyar, hoping to use Fyyar's unusual technology to twist beings to the Dark Side of the Force. However, with Desann's death at the hands of Kyle Katarn, the Reborn were left without a leader and a direction. The surviving members - those that chose not to fight back - were rounded up and held for questioning about Desann's activities. (JK2)

Rebus

an Imperial Moff who once worked for Imperial Machines, but left because he didn't like the infighting that went on. After the plans to the first Death Star were stolen by Kyle Katarn, Rebus hid out in the Anoat System. Katarn eventually captured him in Anoat City. (DF)

Recalcitrant

one of the Imperial cruisers sent to blockade the ThonBoka and starve the Oswaft. She was the first ship to fire on The One when he and his people arrived at the ThonBoka. The One returned her fire with much greater force, destroying the cruiser. (LCS)

Recardeon

located on the planet Rimma, the city of Recardeon was noted for the many shantytowns that were formed when the Empire took control of the planet's government and economy. (SWJ3, GCG)

Rece, Ina

this Alliance pilot was Merrick's cousin, and used her dry sense of humor to relieve stress during battle. She was killed when, as part of Ace Merrick's Rascal Squadron, a squadron of Imperial V38's ambushed them. (RA2)

Recham Fortep

this Yuuzhan Vong bio-engineered organism was developed to assist in the decaying of organic matter while capturing methane for later use. Entire colonies of recham forteps were used to cleanse the maw lur of Yuuzhan Vong starships, thereby sustaining the ships over many centuries. (EVC, EVR)

Reckless Abandon

this Gallofree Yards Medium Transport was part of the small New Republic fleet which assembled at Borleias, in the wake of the Battle of Coruscant. The Reckless Abandon arrived from Taanab laden with foodstuffs and other supplies for the base on Borleias. (EL2)

Reckoning

this Imperial-II class Star Destroyer served as Prince-Admiral Krennel's flagship. Krennel was given the command of the ship by Ysanne Isard, during her hunt for Sate Pestage, and he used it to pummel the planet Axxila. As he grew in power, Krennel planned to launch the Reckoning against Coruscant just as the New Republic launched its attempt to liberate the planet Ciutric. Krennel was trapped by Admiral Ackbar's use of the Thrawn Pincer, and the Reckoning was destroyed by the combined firepower of the Selonian Fire and the Corusca Fire. Krennel was killed when the ship exploded under a barrage of laser fire and concussion missiles. (XWM, IR)

Reclaimer

this modified transport measured 22.5 meters in length, and was armed with a heavy laser cannon. (GA)

Reclamation Fleet

this was the largest of the Squib garbage collection agencies. To be hired by the Fleet was a great honor for a Squib. (HR)

Reclamation Services, Incorporated

this smelting and incineration operation was owned by Ukert, and was located on Kothlis. RSI collected the waste materials from all over the planet, and recycled them into reusable metals, plastics, and silicates. (PSG)

Reclumi

this species of large spider was native to the planet Null. The web material exuded by the reclumi spider was incredibly strong, and could stop a fast-moving landspeeder without snapping. The reclumi was not poisonous, and relied on its strong, sticky web to snare its prey. (LOJ)

Recognizer Lock

developed during the last decades of the Old Republic, this small security device allowed suitcases and other personal containers to be locked with a thumbprint, rather than an access code or a key. This ensured that only the owner could gain access to the container. (MBS)

Reconciliation Council

this branch of the Jedi Council of the Old Republic was charged with supplying aid to those member worlds which suffered incredible natural or man-made disasters. It was a five-member body whose membership was rotated often to avoid partiality. (COD)

Reconnaissance Troop Transporter

developed by Sienar Fleet Systems, this 6.4-meter-long speeder was designed for use by the Empire during the height of the New Order. The primary mission profile for the Reconnaissance Troop Transporter was to move patrols to their assigned locations, although many elite units used them for search-and-destroy missions. A twin light blaster cannon was the only weaponry on the speeder, which required a pilot and gunner to operate, and could transport up to six troopers and their gear. The pilot and gunner worked in a shielded cockpit, while the troopers were carried in "racks" on the side of the speeder. These "racks" were spring-loaded, and could open with the push of a button for ease of deployment. (WOA32)

Recopi

this star was the central body of the Recopi System. (CCW)

Recopia

this planet, located in the Core Worlds, was known for its unusual environment. Small island plateaus rose from poisonous oceans, and the atmosphere was laden with gaseous sulfur. It was the fourth planet in the Recopi System, and was orbited by a trio of moons. The average day on Recopia lasted 20 standard hours, and its year lasted 286 local days. Recopia was settled many thousands of years before the Battle of Yavin, when explorers eked out an existence on any remotely habitable world. The settlements on Recopia remained viable as layover points along other hyperspace routes, until advances in hyperdrive technology made it easier to travel long distances. The planet faltered until the Empire took control and subjugated the planet. During the Imperial occupation, the many city-states which existed on the planet joined together to form a loose, planetary government. After the Battle of Endor, this government quickly abandoned the Empire and joined the New Republic. (SWI64, CCW)

Recopian

this was the name used to describe the human natives of the planet Recopia. (CCW)

Record Time

this New Republic armed transport ship was originally an independent spacer's craft owned by Captain Birt. Measuring 170 meters in length, the Record Time had two main cargo pods connected by a narrow tube. She had been pressed into troop transport duty when the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy, and had been "loaned" to General Wedge Antilles during the evacuation of Coruscant. The New Republic troops she carried were later dropped off at Borleias, after the planet was retaken from the Yuuzhan Vong. During the struggle to retake Borleias, the Record Time took moderate damage from plasma weapons, but arrived at Borleias and was repaired to minimal working status. The ship was then used as the insertion mechanism for the strike force - led by Luke Skywalker - that later infiltrated Coruscant. However, the ship was sacrificed as part of the mission, so that the infiltrators could arrive under cover of this ship's destruction. (EL1, UF)

Recorder Rod

a small, plastic device which can be used to record events. It effectively captures audio recordings, playing them back as words that move across its outer surface. It is also capable of capturing two-dimensional images of low quality. (SME)

Recovery, The

this was the Basic term used to describe the rebuilding of Gorothe civilization during the millennia following The Scouring. (GSE)

RecSys

see Treaty Recording System. (SWJ1)

Rectenna

this Fabritech communications and sensor array features active/passive scanners, jamming systems, ship-to-ship transmitters, and short-range targetting capabilities. The Millennium Falcon had one of these dish-like packages attached to its upper hull. (CCG2)

Rectifiers

this was the name used by Christoph Jam to describe his teams of hired mercenaries. Each team was provided with information on unpunished crimes, and dispatched to remedy those situations. (CCW)

Recusant-class Light Destroyer

this needle-shaped warship was developed by the Commerce Guild for the Confederacy of Independent Systems. Like other Separatist vessels, the Recusant-class light destroyer was designed to be operated by droid crews. These ships were designed and built by Hoersch-Kessel Drive and the Free Dac Volunteers Engineering Corps, and measured 1,187 meters in length. A crew of 300 droids was required to operate the vessel, although it had storage space for up to 40,000 deactivated battled droids. The primary armament of the Recusant-class destroyer was a bow-mounted heavy turbolaser cannon, supplemented by four heavy turbolaser cannons and six heavy turbolaser turrets. Defensive weaponry included five turbolaser cannons, thirty dual laser cannons, twelve light laser cannons, and sixty point-defense laser cannons. Although a single Recusant-class destroyer could subjugate a planet on its own, they were more effective in numbers. Six of these vessels could outgun a Venator-class Star Destroyer, when properly arrayed against the target. Three huge ion thrust engines, mounted in a triangle at the rear of the vessel, provided sublight propulsions, while a Class 2 hyperdrive moved the Recusant-class destroyer across interstellar distances. Interestingly enough, the Recusant-class destroyer lacked any sort of hangar or docking bays, although droid starfighters could be held in a cargo area if needed. (TCG10, X3)

Recycler

any device which is used to return a material to its original form. Most clothing is fully recyclable, and when dirtied or ripped, it can be tossed into a recycler for decomposition. (CS)

Recyclopper

this bloated, one-eyes, spine-covered fish was native to the oceans of the planet Naboo. They were known to eat just about anything, and the Gungans used them to dispose of their organic garbage. (E1A10)

Red

this was a nickname used to describe the astromech droid R5-D4. (SW)

Red

this was an alias used by Leia Organa Solo during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. She often traveled abroad with her hair dyed red, to help disguise herself. (SBS)

Red

this man, a native of the planet Atzerri, was a noted weapons collector during the early years of the New Republic. (GUN)

Red & Black League

this criminal organization was led by Janstren Brell, and was based on Herstell V. They were famous for their exploits, which included the Perkell Sector Mining Fleecing and the Trancret Stock Exchange Swindle. Their name derived from the unique coloration of the currency of Herstell V. (HR)

Red Alpha

this was the codename of Andrephan Stormcaller's infiltration unit, first with the Alliance and later with the New Republic. (SWJ8)

Red Ball Organ

this was the type of keyboard played by Max Rebo. (CHRN)

Red Claw

this Yapi clan opposed Imperial Moff Kentor Sarne's presence on the planet Kathol, and later helped the crew of the FarStar defeat Sarne and DarkStryder. (E)

Red Claw

this Interdictor-class cruiser was part of the Imperial fleet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Red Dog

this Alliance Strike-class cruiser was destroyed during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Red Dragon

this was one of the multitude of Imperial-class Star Destroyers which made up the Imperial Navy fleet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Red Dwarf

a potent drink. (CSWEA)

Red Eight

Bren Quersey's callsign as a member of the Alliance's Red Squadron, during the Battle of Yavin. (CCG9)

Red Fang

this modified Incom A-24 Sleuth was owned and operated by the Twi'lek smuggler, Tarquin Zian. (GG10)

Red Feathers

this Imperial cargo carrier was dispatched to follow the Yellow Rover to the battle for control of the planet Ession. The Red Feathers was the primary contact ship for the Night Caller. The crew of the Night Caller initially mistook the Blood Nest for this carrier, as the old pirate ship had placed itself in a position to assist in the assault on Ession. The Blood Nest was actually full of three squadrons of X-Wings. It faked a break-up upon emerging from hyperspace, and set its self-destruct mechanism. As the ship disintegrated, the X-Wings fired up their engines and fell with the pieces of the ship, then broke away and attacked the TIE Fighters coming from the Implacable. (WS)

Red Five

this was Anakin Skywalker's callsign during the space battle that occurred during the First Battle of Coruscant. (E3N)

Red Five

Luke's callsign during the Battle of Yavin (SW)

Red Five

Pop's callsign during the Battle of Yavin (SWN)

Red Flame

among the Chiss, the Red Flame represented an ideal state of perfection. According to Chiss lore, the Red Flame was the essence of courage, cunning, and discipline. It stood for a state of preparedness that was to be aspired to, although rarely achieved. Chiss leaders were often given red piping on their uniforms as a reminder of the Red Flame and what it stood for. (GMR7)

Red Flight

one of the K-Wing groups serving the 24th Bombardment Squadron at the blockade of Doornik-319. (SOL)

Red Flight

this was the designation used by Wedge Antilles, Tycho Celchu, Wes Janson, and Hobbie Klivian when they traveled to Adumar to negotiate with the Adumari for membership in the New Republic. (SOA)

Red Four

John-D's callsign during the Battle of Yavin. (SW)

Red Four

Jojo's callsign, as part of Esege Tuketu's K-Wing bomber group during the blockade of Doornik-319. (SOL)

Red Fury Brotherhood

this was one of two primary pirate organizations which survived in the Cularin System, during the era of the Battle of Naboo. The Brotherhood allied themselves with Nirama, and were given a good deal of work smuggling personnel and supplies into the system underneath the watchful eyes of the Old Republic. (LFC)

Red Gauntlet

this ship was one of the Imperial-class Star Destroyers serving under the Warlord Zsinj, during the early years of the New Republic. When Han Solo and the Mon Remonda tried to capture Zsinj at Vahaba, he sent the Serpent's Smile and the Red Gauntlet to attack the Stellar Web. However, they were no match for the combined firepower of the Stellar Web and her escorts, the Skyhook and Crynyd. The Serpent's Smile was destroyed, and the Red Gauntlet was disabled and left adrift by Zsinj. New Republic forces eventually boarded the ship and took control. (SOC)

Red Ghost

the nickname given to Asha by the Duloks. It described the fact that the Duloks only saw Asha when she was hunting in the forests, and often, all they caught was a glimpse of her red fur. (ECAR)

Red Glie

this form of single-celled algae, native to the planet Naboo, grew on the surface of the water. It was highly dependent on sunlight for growth, and entire colonies of red glie could be wiped out during long periods of overcast weather. Red glie was considered a delicacy by the Naboo and the Gungans, and great care was taken in the growth and harvest of red glie. (GF, SON)

Red Guard

this was the name of the specially-trained members of the former Senate Guard, who were charged with protecting Chancellor Palpatine during the Separatist crisis. These soldiers eventually became the Royal Imperial Guard. (VD2, HNN5)

Red Guardians

this was the name of an independent bounty hunter's guild which was active during the Galactic Civil War. All the members of the guild wore scarlet body armor. (MBC)

Red Hand Squadron

this was the name of the Alliance assault team headed by Bria Tharen, shortly before the Battle of Yavin. The name was given to the team by the slavers they attacked, and alluded to the slaver's symbol for "no quarter given." Red Hand Squadron focused much of their activity on rescuing slaves from any and all servitude, but Bria worked as often as possible to free the Ylesian "pilgrims." Many of the troops which served in the squadron were former slaves, and were extremely loyal to Bria. They were extremely successful in the Battle of Ylesia, quickly removing the Nova Force mercenaries. They met their match, though, on Toprawa, where they had been assigned to support the resistance there. The Empire had tracked the plans to the first Death Star to Toprawa, and mercilessly destroyed the resistance - including Red Hand Squadron. (RD)

Red Harvest

this Victory-class Star Destroyer was part of the fleet assembled by Admiral Pellaeon, which was dispatched to Garqi to assist the New Republic in its fight against the Yuuzhan Vong. (DTR)

Red Hills

this range of craggy mountains was located just south of Foulahn and Navroc Cities, on the planet Cartao. (SWI68)

Red Hills Clan

a clan of Light Side witches on Dathomir. (CPL)

Red Iaro

this was the name of a group of terrorists which rose to power on the planet Lannik, in the years before the Battle of Naboo. Members of the Red Iaro distinguished themselves by wearing bright red military uniforms, with wide sashes and knee-high, black boots. Originally, the Red Iaro were formed to protest the established government of Lannik. The civil war among the Lannik was devastating and costly, as the Red Iaro fought to keep Lannik as independent as possible. However, after R'cardo Sooflie IX assumed the throne of Lannik, the Red Iaro altered their beliefs. Suddenly, they found themselves fighting to oust Prince R'cardo and return Lannik to its former glory. The Red Iaro harrassed the Lannik people until Mace Windu and the Jedi Knights mediated a truce, held on the planet Malastare, to restore peace to Lannik. The Red Iaro, however, planned to kill the Jedi and force Prince Sooflie to accede to their demands. The plan ultimately failed. (ETM, OWS)

Red Knights of Life

this group of fanatic Rhommamoolians was loyal to Nom Anor, during his rise to power on the planet Rhommamool. They abhorred all forms of technology, and spent much of their time destroying anything they deemed an unnatural abomination. At the height of Nom Anor's popularity, the Knights would often publicly beat any being found using any form of technology. Little did they know that they were just disposable pawns in Nom Anor's grander strategy of a Yuuzhan Vong invasion. (VP)

Red Lancer

one of the two Corsair-class cruisers owned by Dharus. The Red Lancer worked with the Blue Queen as a team. (GG9)

Red Leader

this was Obi-Wan Kenobi's callsign during the space battle that occurred during the First Battle of Coruscant. (E3N)

Red Leader

Wedge's callsign during the Battle of Endor (ROTJ)

Red Leader

Esege Tuketu's callsign as part of the New Republic's Fifth Battle Group K-Wing squadrons. (BTS)

Red Leader

Dutch's callsign during the Battle of Yavin (SWN)

Red Leader

Dave's callsign during the Battle of Yavin (SW)

Red Lisken

this casino was owned and operated by Etsero, on his homeworld of Adner. It was the most luxurious - and profitable - of the gambling houses owned by Etsero. (WBC)

Red List

a collection of outstanding debts and the individuals who owe them, the Red List was maintained by Interstellar Collections Limited. It grew in both size and reputation since the growth of the Empire. Han Solo was on the list at one time, for missing a payment to Vinda and D'rag. (HSR)

Red Marble

a expensive stone used in construction. (TB)

Red Mist

also known as the death mist, this Charon weapon uses a bioengineered mist to incapacitate other lifeforms. In small doses, it causes intense pain and induces strange hallucinations and madness as it attacks a body's nervous system. In larger quantities, the mist causes complete failure of the nervous system and kills the victim. The mist does not have to be breathed to cause harm. It clings to exposed flesh and enters a body through pores in the skin. Thus, only a sealed vacuum suit was the only defense against the red mist. (OS)

Red Moint

this species of predatory fish was native to the Harvest Bay area of the planet Cols. (COG)

Red Moon Saloon

a drinking establishment found in Mos Eisley, on Tatooine. (GG7)

Red Moons

this Entrallan mercenary unit, founded by Andrephan Stormcaller, was formed to combat the Pentastar Alignment after its takeover of Entralla was virtually ignored by the fledgling New Republic. The early ranks of the Red Moons were filled with former New Republic Infiltrator soldiers, each as disillusioned with the Republic as Stormcaller. Stormcaller resigned his commission after being told that the Pentastar Alignment was "too powerful to confront at this time," and attracted a number of the Republic's best trackers and soldiers. Because of this, there were a number of rumors which hinted that the Republic was actually funding the Red Moons, but this was not true. The Red Moons were staunchly independent from the Republic. (SWJ3, TFE)

Red Nalroni

this smuggling ring was broken up by the actions of Velgar Borf. (PG3)

Red Nebula

this vast area of reddish gas was believed to be the source of the two huge gemstones which, when separated, caused the disease known as the Crimson Forever. Located beyond the edges of known space, the boundaries of the Red Nebula were littered with asteroids and comets, which helped isolate it from the rest of the galaxy. Theories abound which claim that the Red Nebula was actually one of the known galaxy's arms, but cosmic upheaval separated it and sent it drifting into the intergalactic void between galaxies. It was said that the two gemstones fell into the Nebula when it split off from the known galaxy, and it was their power which protected the Nebula from tearing itself apart. (LTA2, MC50)

Red Nikto

the common name for the Kajain'sa'Nikto race. (GG12)

Red Nine

Lieutenant Naytaan's callsign during the Battle of Yavin. (CCG9)

Red Nova

this Invid pirate ship was roundly defeated by Rogue Squadron when it was escorting the Booty Full while attempting to capture the Glitterstar. (IJ)

Red One

another callsign for Red Leader, it was used by Luke when he and Isolder arrived at Dathomir. (CPL)

Red Police

this is the name given to Foga Brill's security force. The Red Police patrolled Sector 5, in the Core, a decade after the Battle of Endor. (SOL)

Red Quarren, The

this was the name of a notorious pirate who roamed the seas of Lamaredd during the last decades of the Old Republic. (GMR7)

Red Qurang

this Yuuzhan Vong transport craft was commanded by Ushk Choka, during the final stages of the Yuuzhan Vong' attempt to invade the galaxy. It was dispatched to the living planet of Zonama Sekot to recover Nom Anor, who promised to destroy the planet. (FP)

Red Rancor

located within Coruscant's Imperial City, this bar was named for its deep-red interior lighting. Han Solo brought Luke Skywalker to the Red Rancor for his bachelor party, shortly before his wedding to Mara Jade. Banner Sumptor and his fellow Imperial hoped to waylay Luke by instigating a fight, but Luke and his friends soundly defeated the Imperials. (U)

Red Rock

a landmark found on the planet M'haeli, Red Rock was also the location of an Alliance base during the Galactic Civil War. (ROC, EGP)

Red Seven

Elyhek Rue's callsign during the Battle of Yavin. (CCG9)

Red Shadow

a bistro located on the planet Taboon. It was there that Zardra and Jodo Kast tried to catch the Thig Brothers, but ended up killing Mageye the Hutt. (TME)

Red Shift Limit

this techno-rock band of balladeers emerged from the Outer Rim to dominate the anti-Imperial world of music. Their lyrics are highly critical of the New Order, while their instrumentals are mesmerizing and lovely. Red Shift Limit is probably most famous for their remake of Totally Patriotic, defiling the original song (written by The Emperor's New Clothes). (GG9)

Red Sin Chimaera Nebula

this nebula, located some distance from the Forest Moon of Endor, was named for its color and shape, which resembled a mythical creature when viewed from the moon. (SWGAL)

Red Six

Jek Porkins' callsign during the Battle of Yavin. (SW)

Red Smoke Squadron

this group of Alliance soldiers was seasoned during the Battle of Hoth, and assisted in the recovery of an Imperial I2-CG droid on Goratak III, after it intercepted data on the starship manufacturing plant on Tar Morden. (MB)

Red Squadron

this was the designation of the starfighters commanded by Obi-Wan Kenobi, during the First Battle of Coruscant. Kenobi's wingmate was Anakin Skywalker, and the ranks of the fighter pilots were filled by the clone troopers of Squad Seven. (E3N)

Red Squadron

this Alliance X-Wing squadron was under the command of Bakki Sourthal, and patrolled Fakir Sector during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. (AIR)

Red Squadron

a group of Alliance X-wings during the Battle of Yavin. (SW)

Red Squadron

a group of Alliance Y-wings during the Battle of Yavin. (SWN)

Red Squadron

this was the designation of the TIE Defender squadron piloted by Rogue Squadron pilots in support of Colonel Vessery and Ysanne Isard, during the hunt for Prince-Admiral Krennel. (IR)

Red Star I

this modified TIE Defender was owned by Iran Ryad during the early years of the New Republic. It was equipped with enhanced shielding for protection, and an upgraded ion drive system for more maneuverability. Countess Ryad also modified the fire control systems, giving her the ability to target poorly-shielded craft and eliminate them quickly. The Red Star I was destroyed by Soontir Fel, after he declared Countess Ryad a traitor and hunted her down. (WOTC)

Red Star Ring

this small criminal organization was based on the moon of Nar Shaddaa during the New Order. (GUN)

Red Star Shipping Lines

this major shipper worked in the Core and the Colonies. They owned twelve major transport hub systems in the galaxy, and were one of the original voting sponsors of the Corporate Sector Authority. (CSA)

Red Star Squadron

this small unit of Imperial TIE Fighter pilots remained intact following the Battle of Endor, and later allied themselves under the command of Countess Iran Ryad. (WOTC)

Red Team Five

one of the New Republic's best-kept secrets, Red Team Five was a group of highly-skilled Special Forces infiltration experts. They were sent in to scout out a target location and eliminate any perimeter defenses prior to a full-scale operation. Many of the group's agents were former members of the Alliance's Infiltrator team, including Jai Raventhorn. All but Raventhorn were killed in a raid on the Imperial garrison on Zelos II, shortly after the Battle of Endor. Raventhorn was imprisoned at the garrison and brutally interrogated before being rescued by Platt Okeefe and Tru'eb Cholak. (TFNR)

Red Ten

this was the callsign used by Theron Nett, Red Leader's wingman, who killed during the Battle of Yavin. (SW, CCG9)

Red Terror

this was the name given to the group of 500 Warden 10-24 gladiator droids used by Brakiss to guard his base on Telti, some thirteen years after the Battle of Endor. They were named for the scarlet paint which covered them. One of every fifty droids was designated as a lieutenant, and given enhanced programming which allowed it to make decisions without the need for a command center. (EGD)

Red Three

Biggs' callsign during the Battle of Yavin. (SW)

Red Three

Condor's callsign as part of Esege Tuketu's K-Wing bomber group during the blockade of Doornik-319. (SOL)

Red Threxia

this shifty Sauron owned and operated Red Threxia's Boarding House, at the Gelgelar Free Port, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. It was said that Red didn't have a place of his own, that he just curled up behind the maindesk each night and slept on the floor. (PSPG)

Red Threx's Boarding House

located just across the plaza from the Slippery Gelgalar Eel in the Gelgalar Free Port, this collection of pre-fab structures was run by Red Threx. It was the only real place for spacers to spend the night at the Port, and provided spacers with a warm bed amidst the cold, damp environment of Gelgalar. (PSPG)

Red Tide

this was the name of Perit's personal, Mon Calamari star liner. (RESB)

Red Twelve

Red Leader's wingman, killed during the Battle of Yavin. (SW)

Red Two

Wedge's callsign during the Battle of Yavin (SW)

Red Two

Tiree's callsign during the Battle of Yavin. (SWN)

Red Two

Luke Skywalker referred to Prince Isolder as Red Two when they arrived at Dathomir, in search of Leia Organa and Han Solo. (CPL)

Red Wind

an Imperial frigate destroyed by Alliance ships near Plooriod IV. (XW)

Red Wing Squadron

this team of mercenaries was based on the planet Taul, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ2)

Red Wings of Courage

one of the Ancient Tokens of the Legendary Ewoks, the Red Wings are a special headdress of red wings, bestowed on the eldest son of an expedition's leader, or to leader's back-up. They allow the secondary leader to gain courage if the leader is lost. Logray gave the Red Wings to Weechee, Dee's eldest son, before they left to rescue the Towani parents from the giant Gorax. (EA)

Red Zone

this was the primary restaurant and tavern district of the primary spaceport on Pembric II, in the city of Erwithat. (DARK)

RED-47

this was the code phrase given to Lurze Kesh by Davik Kang, as a way for Kesh to open the many shipments of spice that were sent to him on Korriban during the era of the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Reda Jalooz

this ancient Force-user had stolen a Kashi Mer artifact sometime before the formation of the Old Republic. She felt compelled to return the artifact - a small, gray prism-shaped stone - and returned to Kashi just before the planet's star exploded. Reda Jalooz was killed in the explosion, but the stone mysteriously reappeared in the Corva Sector millennia later, after the Battle of Endor. Its purpose was not known. (SWJ6)

Redbeast

this species of long-bodied quadrupedal vermin was native to the planet Reaper's World. They hunted in packs of up to twelve individuals, using their chisel-like teeth to gnaw through just about anything. Their two-meter-long bodies were covered with coarse, grey fur, and they got their name from their crimson eyes and vicious nature. (ND)

Redbill

an Alliance cargo ferry group destroyed by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War as it tried to take possession of supplies provided by pirates. (TIE)

Redcap

see RC-101 (MJH)

Redcap

this Outer Rim world is a barren, ugly world which has been known to break even the hardest of adventurers. It is covered with fluid mud lakes, deep canyons and tall mountains. The settlers who managed to survive the mud lakes have built their towns in the mountains. This limits the location of spaceports and landing fields to the Tyma Canyon. The original settlers were miners, and their descendants continue to eke out a living from the ores they extract. Repulsorlift transportation is impossible, since the mud quickly clogs the engines. The natives have developed skimmers known as olai to traverse the mud lakes. The average day on Redcap lasts 16 standard hours, and its years takes up 212 local days. (SWJ5)

Redcrested Cougar

a predatory feline native to the planet Belkadan, the redcrested cougar was a large, agile creature which could tear a human apart in a few minutes. Danni Quee was forced to kill one, when it slipped into the ExGal-4 outpost and seriously wounded two other explorers. The average cougar was almost four meters in length, weighed about 140 kilograms, and had ten-centimeter fangs protruding from its mouth. The redcrested cougar had large, clawed paws, and the tail ended with a lump of bone which could be swung like a cudgel. Most redcrested cougars were solitary hunters, gathering only during the mating season. After mating, the male cougar left the female behind to raise the cubs. In general, this creature was not territorial, although each male had its own distinct hunting grounds. (VP, NJOSB)

Redd Metalflake

this self-contained droid sound system was owned by Sprig Cheever and Twilit Hearth. Redd was also an important part of their underground team, capable of carrying weapons and other illegal items inside his sound-system components. (TFE)

Red-dish

this was one of the many spore-producing fungi that were native to the swamps of the planet Drongar. It was named for its coloration, and because the shape of an individual plant resembled a large dishplate. (MBS)

Reddjak

the exploits of this pirate served as the basis for the holo-series Space Pirates of the Galaxy, which was popular during the early years of the New Order. In the series, Reddjak was known as The Scarlet Pirate, since he often dressed in bright red clothing. In real life, Reddjak was a notorious criminal who was wanted in several star systems for a variety of crimes. He was captured some years before the Battle of Yavin, but was freed on the planet Majoor by Llez. Reddjak brought the child along with him to his pirate ship, hoping to use the boy to locate his father's diplomatic convoy and ambush it. However, Reddjak didn't count on the child's resourcefulness, nor the fact that R2-D2 and C-3PO had stowed away aboard his pirate ship. Just as he launched his attack, Reddjak found himself weaponless and being boarded by Zell's security forces. In short order, Reddjak was back in police custody. (MDCAR)

Redemption

an Alliance Nebulon-B frigate used as a medical ship, the Redemption was one of the medical ships which was part of the fleet which massed just outside the rim of the galaxy, in the wake of the Battle of Hoth. It was aboard this ship that Luke Skywalker received his prosthetic hand, after surviving his first battle with Darth Vader on Cloud City. Like many ships in the Alliance's fleet, the Redemption had been refitted for its particular duty, with many hangar bays and weapons stations being converted into sick bays and medical facilities. The Redemption joined the full Alliance fleet near Sullust, just prior to the Battle of Endor. It was assigned to assist the wounded from Briggia during Operation Strike Fear. The mission later became one of the New Republic's training scenarios, nicknamed the Requiem scenario because very few pilots survive the simulation. (XW, XWN, XWA, TCG6)

Reder, Dor

a native of the planet Pirralor, Reder served as a Captain in the Imperial Navy and commanded the Star

Destroyer Pulsar until he surrendered it in the aftermath of the Battle of Endor. However, Reder himself managed to avoid capture, and fled the area with a small group of followers. They managed to steal an Alliance transport during their escape, and eventually joined forces with Admiral Drommel. He served Drommel as Captain of the Krieger. (SWSB, SWJ8, WBC)

Redesign

this was a branch of COMPNOR that dealt with the modification of the physiology of entire races, in an effort to create entire armies willing to fight for the Empire. (TBH)

Redeye

this Turazza served as Luskin Exovar's chief of security at Exovar's Emporium, on Neftali, although no one was sure why Redeye took the job. However, Redeye took the job seriously, and very few visitors to the Emporium ever crossed his path. Redeye was simply a nickname used by the Turazza to ensure that no one learned his true identity, which was only known to himself and Exovar. Redeye was also an excellent marksman and sharpshooter, and his skills earned him the grudging respect of Kaori Batta. (WSV)

Red-Eye

this is one of SoroSuub's low-power laser sighting devices designed for mounting onto a blaster. (CFG)

Red-Eye Baldarek

this bartender vacationed on the planet Zeltros several years before the onset of the Clone Wars. He enjoyed the experience so much that he stayed on Zeltros. (PH)

Redfish

this species of fish was native to the planet Amfar. Redfish were unusual in that that tended to congregate out of the water, along the beaches, during certain periods of the day. This trait was evident when there were not many tourists walking along the beaches or playing in the ocean, when their presence often scared the redfish away. (HNN5)

Redfruit

this tasty fruit was native to the planet Drongar, and was harvested for its juice. (MBS)

Redge, Loam

this man was one of Emperor Palpatine's Inquisitors, working from the Emperor's personal retreat on Naboo during the height of the Galactic Civil War. His age was indeterminate, a facet of his persona that Redge cultivated for his own use. With the exception of a few tiny wrinkles at the corners his eyes, Redge's face was smooth, and he could have passed for a man of thirty. However, he was much older than that, and was known for his passion for his work. Redge, himself sensitive to the Force, found a certain enjoyment in locating Force-sensitive individuals, which only increased as he tortured them and watched them die. (SWI65, ROD)

Redhaven

this is the capital city of the planet Rhommamool. Much of the city was leveled when the native Rhommamoolians declared their independence from Osarian rule. (VP)

Redhawk

this mercenary bulk cruiser was boarded by the Azzameen family, shortly before the Battle of Endor, in an effort to remove a potential rival and enemy. (XWA)

Redheart

this was one of several Duros-commanded warships which made up the Galactic Alliance's meager naval fleet, during the last stages of the battle against the Yuuzhan Vong. The Redheart was one of many ships assigned to General Wedge Antilles and the task force dispatched to the Duro System. Unknown to Commander Col was that the task force was not sent to recapture Duro, but to eliminate as much of the Yuuzhan Vong fleet stationed there as possible. Col believed that Antilles was going to simply let Duro remain under Yuuzhan Vong control, and broke formation. Led by the Dpso, all the Duros warships tried to attack the Yuuzhan Vong on their own. However, they were no match for the amassed firepower of the alien invaders. The Redheart and the other Duros ships were destroyed in just under three hours. (FP)

Redilos

this is the single moon of the planet Korbin, known as Redeye to the Korbinites because the moon glows blood-red at night. Redilos orbits very close to Korbin, so its reddish light is quite bright, and the size of its image is quite large. Redilos is a barren, cratered rock. (PG2)

Redjik

a large herd animal native to Kidron. (SWJ11)

Redkihl Rokk

this insectoid pirate was known as the Scavenger of the Galaxy. His band of pirates, a mixture of living beings and droids, flew a squadron of TIE Fighters painted bright red, which distinguished them from the Imperials as well as other pirates. Redkihl and his traveled to the Yavin System, shortly after the Battle of Yavin, and found themselves able to salvage all sorts of things from the wreckage of the first Death Star. Redkihl himself tried to capture Han Solo and the Millennium Falcon, and had nearly boarded the ship when Luke Skywalker returned to Yavin 4 and assisted Han's escape. As the Millennium Falcon blasted off, a bomb planted on Redkihl's ship exploded, killing the pirate and leaving his remains stranded in the debris field of the Death Star. (T8)

Redlio

this Twi'leki spy was a huntress for an Inner-Rim crimelord before she joined the Alliance. She served as part of the Alliance's Sandwind Team during the period between the Battles of Hoth and Endor. (SSR)

Rednax

this Dug and his friend, Manoca, often met for lunch at Dex's Diner, during the years surrounding the Battle of Geonosis. (SWI63)

Redor Sauce

this tangy sauce is often served with nerf meat. (TPS)

Redoubt, The

this globular cluster of densely-packed stars was located deep in the Unknown Regions of the galaxy. Because of the density of stars in The Redoubt, navigation was virtually impossible without an extension knowledge of both the area and astronomical physics. Sensors were useless in the area, due to the intensity amounts of radiation and background noise generated by the stars. Comets and planetoids moved through The Redoubt on orbits that were continually altered by the changing gravitics of the area. Shortly before the Yuuzhan Vong began their invasion of the galaxy, the Chiss had spent more than 200 years studying The Redoubt, trying to understand its mechanics, as a way to ensure their species' survival. Should the time ever come when the Chiss were overwhelmed, they planned to flee into The Redoubt and hide until such time as they could return to their worlds. The pace of their research was quickened during the last fifty years, after the destruction of the Outbound Flight Project. (SQ)

Redoubtable

an Imperial-class Star Destroyer which was damaged in the Battle of Endor and moved to the Black-15 shipyards for repair. It was later captured by the Yevetha and converted for their own use. (BTS, SOL)

Redrish System

this largely uninhabited star system was located near Kuat, and served as one of the two main staging for passenger traffic which was inbound to the Kuat Passenger Port. (PSPG)

Redrobes

this was the term used during the Clone Wars to describe the members of the Red Guard who protected Supreme Chancellor Palpatine. The nickname came from their red cloaks and body armor. (E3N)

Redros

this man was one of the most notoriously dangerous swoop racers who competed on the planet Taris, during the height of the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Redshift Runner

this Z-10 Seeker was purchased used by Elga Arbo, who spent every credit she had - and a few she didn't - on making it the fastest ship in the Corellian Sector. The Bureau of Ships Services once recognized it as the fastest commercial ship on record, a fact the Arbo used to promote her courier business. Unfortunately for Arbo, her indebtedness caught up to her. Her financeer, Gydio Lucone, threatened to seize the ship if she failed to pay off her loans. Arbo disagreed, and a firefight broke out. In the end, Arbo was seriously wounded, and her co-pilot, Maceb Joodsen, stole the Redshift Runner and fled the sector. (SS)

Redspar

this plant, native to Joralla, produced a brilliant red fruit which was nearly half a meter across. This fruit was highly nutritious. (PG1)

Redthorn-class Scoutship

a small, highly-maneuverable craft developed and manufactured by Tykannin Drive, the Redthorn-class had a needle-shaped cylindrical hull and stubby wings. It measured 24 meters in length, and was armed with a forward-mounted, light triple blaster. The Redthorn-class ship required a pilot, co-pilot, and gunner to operate, and could transport up to 10 metric tons of cargo. (THG, PG3)

Ree

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name meant "spear". (GCG)

Ree

this young Twi'lek male was a podracer of some small renown, who grew tired of the way in which the Desilijic Hutts skimmed the profits from the races. He was part of a growing faction of racers who also opposed the sentiment that the racers were "disposable," so long as the races themselves continued to be profitable. During the early years of the New Order, Ree went to work for Kaeline Ungasan as a race scout, searching out new locales in which to stage pod races to rival those of the Desilijics. It was Ree's explorations that discovered a vein of vonium on Ando Prime, leading Ungasan to set up a race there to cover up the mining activities. The plans of the Ungasan organization were thwarted when the Desilijic clans learned of the operation and convinced Jer and Gelune Blankuna to pose as his "parents," in an effort to launch an independent "rescue" operation. The agents eventually exposed Ungasan's ties to the Corporate Sector Authority, and Ungasan was imprisoned. Ree was also captured, and faced justice at the hands of the CSA. (GMR2)

Ree Duptom

famous for being the only individual ever kicked out of the old Bounty Hunters Guild, Ree Duptom was a bounty hunter as ugly as his reputation. With his ship, the Venesectrix, he scoured the border territories of the galaxy's central section for work. Among his specialties was the dissemination of misinformation, sometimes even working for the Empire, in spreading lies which helped himself and his employer. Several years before the Battle of Yavin, Duptom was hired by Kud'ar Mub'at to perform a job for Nil Posondum, although the two parties had never met. Duptom was to kidnap Kateel of Kuhlvelt, erase her memories, and then lose her somewhere in the galaxy. The kidnapping was successful, but the memory Duptom had done was cruel and - ultimately - incomplete. During the final transport of Kateel, Duptom suddenly disappeared. When his ship was discovered by Boba Fett, floating and adrift near the Core, Fett discovered that the Venesectrix had suffered a partial meltdown of its engine's reactor core. The resulting radiation had killed Duptom and caused several damage to the body. However, it left intact the load shifter droid and the only passenger on the ship, Neelah. Fett took both aboard the Slave I and left the Venesectrix in space. (HM)

Ree Shala

this female Twi'lek was a smuggler who operated her business from the Outer Rim moon known as Jaresh. Originally a spice smuggler, Ree Shala managed to develop a sizable organization spread across Corva Sector during the last years of the New Order. (SWJ6)

Ree, Shantee

this famous holovideo star was perhaps best-known for her "Save the Stohl" campaign. Shantee owned a specially-trained attack stohl named Needla, which bit an overzealous fan during an autograph session. The media portrayed the attack as an assault, but Shantee quickly responded by explaining that the attack stohl had been trained to protect her. The result of the media coverage was that the attack stohls were hunted for the thrill of it, until Shantee launched her campaign to save the species. (COG)

Reece

this Inner Rim world was a stop-over point for Han Solo and the Millennium Falcon, during a trip to meet with Lando Calrissian and check out Lando's Folly, just before the Yuuzhan Vong began their invasion of the galaxy. While he was there, Han also took some time to find out more about the actions of Kyp Durron and his vigilante Jedi Knights. The planet was home to a small group of smugglers, until the New Republic Navy took command of the planet and used it as a rear base by Admiral Traest Kre'fey. As the Yuuzhan Vong began to move on Coruscant, the New Republic believed that the alien invaders would attack the capital world from Bilbringi, and so Reece was left relatively undefended. However, the Yuuzhan Vong had been massing in the nebula surrounding the Black Bantha, and planned to conquer Reece for use as a primary base from which to launch their assault on Coruscant. This plan was smashed when New Republic forces fleeing from Borleias arrived at Reece and pummeled the Yuuzhan Vong ships. After a pitched battle, the Yuuzhan Vong force had been eliminated, and Reece remained part of the New Republic. (VP, SBS, NJOSB)

Reedug

this narcotic was created from plant materials grown on the planet Polmanar. Profits from the sale of reedug caused the Empire to take notice of Polmanar and establish a garrison on the planet, until the farmers began to rebel. They received assistance from the Alliance, until the Empire abandoned their garrison in the wake of the Battle of Yavin. (WOA33)

Reef Fortress

located on Hapes, this secure stronghold is used as an emergency retreat by members of the royal household. It is located near the ocean, and looks out over the Dragon's Teeth. (L)

Reef Home

this Alliance MC80 cruiser fought in the Battle of Endor. It was named in honor of Reef Home City, on Calamari. It was used to clear out booby-trapped Imperial probe droids left behind in the Endor System. (TBSB)

Reef Home City

another floating city on Calamari, it was the primary attack point for Daala's Star Destroyers during the second Battle of Calamari. It was reported that the city was destroyed in the attack, but the Mon Calamari and the Quarren were able to rebuild it. (DA, COTF)

Reef, The

this was the name used by the Menahuun to describe the asteroid belt that surrounded the Lamaro System. It was believed that the asteroids were formed when the system's original two outermost worlds collided with each other. (GMR7)

Reeft

this Dresselian boy was one of Obi-Wan Kenobi's best friends, during the time he spent in training at the Jedi Temple on Coruscant. Reeft was constantly hungry, and would clean all of his friends' plates and still be hungry afterward. He was later chosen to further his training as the padawan of Binn Ibes, and traveled the galaxy for many years. Shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars, Reeft was dispatched to Brentaal IV to capture Rotar Lopani. He returned to Coruscant with Lopani's body, as well as that of a bounty hunter named Tosinqas. Tosinqas had actually found Lopani first and attacked him, just before Reeft found Lopani. Both parties were startled by the presence of the other, and Reeft drew his lightsaber in reaction. Tosin'gas charged Reeft, but cut himself in half when he misjudged the blade of the lightsaber. The two deaths raised the ire of both the Galactic Senate and the Bounty Hunter's Guild. (RF, CT, JAD, HNN5)

Reega

the primary planet in the Reegan System. (SWJ7)

Reegesek

a Ranat trader working in Mos Eisley, Reegesek encountered Het Nkik as the young Jawa was preparing to execute some Imperial stormtroopers. Known as a shrewd, but fair, trader, Reegesek offered Het a bantha-horn Sand Person talisman. Het wanted it for strength, but he'd spent all his credits on his blaster. Reegesek asked to see the blaster in return for letting Het have the talisman on credit, and slipped the power cell from it before returning the weapon to Het. Unfortunately for Het, when he attacked the Zeta Squadron of troopers, he was gunned down when his weapon didn't fire. (TME, CCG2)

Reegian System

this planetary system was used by the Alliance as a secret fuel cache in deep space. (RASB)

Reeho

this species of heavy-billed avian was native to Gelgelar. Reehos were distinguished by their bright orange feathers. (SWJ14)

Reek

originally native to the wilds of Ylesia and maintained in great ranches on the Codian Moon, this immense, reptilian herbivore was distinguished by the three heavy horns which surrounded its mouth. The horn atop its nose was used for attack, while the two horns at each side of the mouth were for defense. The long, front legs of the reek allowed it to raise its head quite high, while its short hind legs provided a stable base. The coloration of the reek was mainly gray, although the specimens found on Geonosis had red coloring along its back, neck, and head. This coloration was due to the high percentage of meat in its diet. Reeks were prized by those beings who staged gladiator fights during the last years of the Old Republic, because their hide was incredibly thick and hard to damage. Many fighters discovered that a reek could be best attacked while riding on its back, where the creature's skin was so thick that it couldn't sense the rider's presence. (OWS, TCG1, VD2, SWDB)

Reek Paynees

this male Gran and his brother, Neek Paynees, were noted criminals who worked for Sebolto during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. A bounty was issued for his capture by an anonymous individual, who simply wanted the "worthless scum" off the streets. The bounty was claimed by Jango Fett, when the bounty hunter traveled to Malastare to meet with Sebolto. (BH)

Reeka

this was a common name among the Iskalonian people. (GMR1)

Reekcat

this species of feline, named for its unusual odor, was native to the planet Corellia. (REC)

Reekeene, Lens

this woman and her husband, Mikka, worked with Santhou Lazith'chika to form Reekeene's Roughnecks. She was known as an efficient mercenary, and was employed by the Sartran Corporation until the Empire disbanded it. Her entire team was imprisoned as traitors, and only Lens survived to be released. The other members of the group died or were executed in prison. Upon learning this, Lens joined the Alliance and formed the Reekeene Roughnecks to assist the Alliance in its struggle against the Empire. She was fifty-five years old at the time of the Battle of Yavin. She was shot down while on a secret rendezvous with the Alliance's commanders in Fakir Sector, and forced to land on Flankers. She was rescued by a team of Alliance agents before the planet's star exploded. (SWCP)

Reekeene, Milla

this man and his wife, Lens, worked with Santhou Lazith'chika to form Reekeene's Roughnecks. Milla was a brilliant mechanic working for the Sartran Corporation when he met Lens, shortly after the Empire nationalized the corporation. They first met in prison, and were married soon afterward. When Lens joined the Alliance, Milla followed along with her, although he chose to remain neutral during the Galactic Civil War. (SWCP)

Reekeene's Retribution

this HT-2200 freighter was purchased by the Alliance, shortly after the Battle of Yavin, and issued to Reekeene's Roughnecks. Modified with the addition of a pair of retractable FireStorm missile racks, the Retribution was outfitted to help the Roughnecks defeat Moff Sakai. Unfortunately, Sakai called in the Venom Guard, and the Roughnecks were nearly wiped out. The Reekeene's Retribution was lost, presumably with all hands aboard, and was believed to be adrift in deep space. (SS)

Reekeene's Roughnecks

this group of Irregulars was founded by Lens and Milla Reekeene, along with Santhou Lazith'chika. The mercenary group was not officially part of the Alliance's military, but Lens Reekeene ensured that the missions undertaken by the Roughnecks were against decidedly Imperial targets. They pestered Imperial convoys in the Bakchou arm and Fakir Sector during the height of the New Order, provided cover and assistance to the Alliance whenever possible. The Roughnecks were confederates of the multitude of mining operations which controlled the Sarnikken Asteroid Belt, and helped the miners by scaring off Imperial forces which attempted to take control of the Belt. The base of operations for the Roughnecks was the modified Tsukkian water freighter Home. (SWCP)

Reeko

this starship was owned and operated by Suz Tanwa, during the early years of the New Order. The ship was equipped with a variety of sensors and systems that were used in her work as a treasure hunter and, later, as a xenoarchaeologist. (PH)

Reel

this was the name of a species of thick-bodied, predatory snake native to the moon Yavin 8. These reptiles were covered with purple scales, and were classified as constrictors, squeezing their prey until it could no longer draw enough breath to survive, then ingesting it whole in one continual motion. They were often attacked and eaten by the avrils, and were favored by the Melodies for their flesh. (LW, P)

Reelo Baruk

this obese Rodian was one of the many crimelords who worked from a base on the moon of Nar Shaddaa, during the early years of the New Republic. He maintained a legitimate garbage processing operation on the moon, mainly as a front to cover up his less-legitimate operations. He allied himself with Imperial Admiral Galak Fyyar for several months, supplying Fyyar with sources for raw materials in exchange for certain concessions. He was approached by Kyle Katarn some ten years after the Battle of Endor, and was forced to reveal his information on Fyyar's activities. (JK2)

Reen

this was a common, given name among the Vratix race. (UANT)

Reen, Meeka

this native of Jerne led the largest group of guerilla forces which opposed Imperial control of the planet. She captured Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa from the control of Ryko Vant, and planned to ransom them to the highest bidder. However, she agreed to help the locate the Eternity Crystal, and took them to Adony Station. She hoped to kill them once they gained the stone, and rule the galaxy herself. She was killed in the explosion caused by Luke and Leia trying to open the vault which contained the crystal. The explosion had been rigged by Darth Vader to kill Luke and Leia. (CSWDW)

Reena

this planet, located in Tapani Sector, was the seat of power for House Reena. Reena was a temperate world of many small continents separated by warm shallow oceans. It was known for its prestigious universities, and much of its usable land mass was covered with urban cities. The planet had a somewhat friendly competition with the planet Mrlsst, to see which planet could have the most affluent school system. The planet was orbited by a single moon, on which were stationed a trio of Hex turbolaser batteries that protected the planet from orbital attack. (PGT, LOE)

Reena University

this school was located on the planet Reena, and was one of the most prestigious universities in Tapani Sector. (PGT)

Reena, Trinn

this woman owned and operated Reena's Interstellar Shipping, and was hired by certain Rodian governmental officials to smuggle weapons to the Grand Protector's forces on Rodia. She was forced to hire additional spacers and transport captains in order to handle the volumes. (SPG)

Reena's Interstellar Shipping

this small, independent cargo transport company was founded by Trinn Reena. (SPG)

Re-Engineered, The

this was the name used by the Arkanian people to denote those individuals in which genetic manipulation failed to produce good results. A Re-engineered individual could be of any race, and the Arkanians showed no favoritism in their experiments. The natural Force energies of the living creature to be Re-engineered was altered dramatically after their procedure, and remained tainted for the rest of the individual's life. (PH)

Reenogga Personal Services, Cubed

based in the Delta Sector of Zirtran's Anchor, this operation was founded by the Reenogga sisters within the confines of the staterooms of the old Death Mark. For a large enough fee, the sisters would execute bounty hunts, security and protection services, and even corporate assassinations. (SWJ5)

Reenogga, Adri

this woman, a former student at the Skine Bounty Hunter College, formed the Reenogga Personal Services, Cubed, operation aboard Zirtran's Anchor with her siblings, Kara and Vella. Adri was the company's best pilot and repair technician, and worked to keep the RPS gear in top condition. (SWJ5)

Reenogga, Kara

this woman, a former student at the Skine Bounty Hunter College, formed the Reenogga Personal Services, Cubed, operation aboard Zirtran's Anchor with her siblings, Vella and Adri. Kara was best-known for her fiery temperment and stubborn nature, and was often found at Chabak's, trying to outdrink the patrons. (SWJ5)

Reenogga, Vella

this woman, a former student at the Skine Bounty Hunter College, formed the Reenogga Personal Services, Cubed, operation aboard Zirtran's Anchor with her siblings, Kara and Adri. Vella was the company spokeswoman and business manager. (SWJ5)

Reeor Bufaali

this was the name of a noted Ruurian individual. (UANT)

Reeos, Ngyn

this man was the captain of the Helot's Shackle. He attempted to apprehend Han Solo when he escaped from Ylesia in the Talisman, and even had the ship in a tractor beam until Jalus Nebl shot through the beam with the Ylesian Dream and broke the contact. (TPS)

Reep

a Alliance military transport used during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Reerookachuck

this Wookiee was born on Kashyyyk, but was taken away at an early age and forced to work in the spice mines of Kessel. While on Kessel, Reerookachuck was raised by human slaves, and thus never learned the Wookiee traits of loyalty and honor. Reerookachuck became a dirty, underhanded fighter and schemer, doing whatever it took to maintain his life and his freedom. When he was captured by the slavers of the Sord Montok and taken away for relocation, Reerookachuck saw his chance to escape. He instigated a riot aboard the ship, which resulted in the deaths of twenty slavers and the scuttling of the Sord Montok near the Minos Cluster. Reerookachuck fled into space. Sord Montok placed a bounty on Reerookachuck's head, hoping to bring the Wookiee in to be held accountable for his actions. (GMR6)

Rees Alrix

this Jedi Knight was the first Padawan of Maks Leem. Rees was elevated to the rank of Jedi Knight just before the Clone Wars, and led a mission to Sullust some thirty months after the Battle of Geonosis. (YDR)

Reesa On

this scientist had been an associate of Jenna Zan Arbor's, and was invited to the party she held at Didi Oddo's café. Obi-Wan Kenobi and Astri Oddo discovered that the name Reesa On was actually an alias used by the bounty hunter Ona Nobis. The words "reesa on" were from Nobis' Sorrusian language, and literally meant "catch me." Obi-Wan surmised that Nobis used the name to egg on any of her pursuers. (EVE)

Reesbon

one of the seven ruling clans of Ammuud, and the chief contender to the Glayyd clan for the top clan spot. (HSR)

Reese

an Alliance Lieutenant. (RASB)

Reess

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name meant "metalsmith". (GCG)

Reess Kairn

this Twi'leki was, at one time, a Jedi Knight. However, when he returned to Ryloth and found his betrothed in the arms of another male, he went berserk and killed them both. Reess Kairn then fled the planet and hid out in the Outer Rim for several years. The Dark Side of the Force consumed him, along with a steady supply of ryll spice. He emerged years later as a pirate, and was known to prowl the Gamorr Run during the last decades of the Old Republic. He once invaded the planet Lorahn, stealing a wealth of religious artifacts and killing four Ffib priests. Shortly afterward, he disbanded his pirate crew and returned to hiding. In order to ensure his safety, he convinced a trio of Shi'ido brothers to live their lives in his appearance. The Daughters of the Ffib employed Aurra Sing to hunt down Kairn and eliminate him and his Shi'ido accomplices. One Shi'ido fled to Hoth, the other to Tatooine. Both were killed by Aurra Sing, who then went after Kairn himself on Bespin. At Bespin, she discovered that Kairn had employed a third Shi'ido, which had insinuated himself into a troupe of thranta riders. The bounty hunter eliminated him as well, then returned to Endor to discover that Kairn had undergone reconstructive surgery to make himself resemble a female. He then infiltrated the very Daughters of the Ffib who swore to kill him. Aurra Sing discovered that it was Kairn himself who actually made the deal with her. The bounty hunter, not happy at being so carefully duped, executed Reess Kairn upon her return to Endor. (BHAS)

Reeten, Jona

this famous actress hailed from the Adarlon system. The name Jone Reeten was actually pseudonym used by Rollo Morsai. She appeared in a large number of holo-vids and was quite popular outside the Minos Cluster. Jona Reeten traveled the Cluster in a beautiful and expensive Baudo-class yacht called the Gilded Lily, and her success was due primarily to her talent, although a little bit of luck always seemed to help. That is, until the Empire took control of the Cluster and Babel Torsh began cracking down on the holo-vid industry. Torsh discovered that Reeten had once portrayed a Jedi Knight who fought in the Clone Wars, and he immediately had her blacklisted. The career of Jona Reeten came to a sudden and abrupt end, as no one would hire her. She returned to using her real name, and converted the Gilded Lily into a transport ship. (GG6)

Reeveid

a Rodian bounty hunter who worked with Tirog. (RPG)

Reeven

this was one of the larger Rodian clans, living on Rodia during the last decades of the Old Republic. They were bitter enemies of the Cairn clan, and were led into battle by Jannik the White. In order to ensure victory, the Reeven clan had hired the assistance of Nym and his mercenaries, and the Cairns were quickly dispatched. (CRBN)

Ree-Yees

a three-eyed, goat-faced alien from the Gran race, he was exiled from his homeworld of Kinyen for committing murder. His expulsion from Kinyen eventually drove him mad. After roaming the galaxy, Ree-Yees fell into Jabba the Hutt's entourage. This life didn't please him, and he soon became involved in an Imperial plot to kill the Hutt. Imperial agents placed a small message module in the skin of Jabba's bubo, which they used to communicate with Ree-Yees. They then supplied Ree-Yees with shipments of goatgrass, in which were hidden the various pieces of a massive detonation device. However, someone managed to steal the detonator out of the last shipment, leaving Ree-Yees in a lurch. He blamed the death of Phlegmin, who seemed to be in the room when the detonator was stolen, on Ephant Mon, a creature he didn't trust. When Jabba tried to have Han Solo and Luke Skywalker fed to the Sarlacc, Ree-Yees discovered that Jabba had planted a thought-trigger in Ree-Yees' mind, a trigger that, when activated by a code phrase from Jabba, would compel him to set off a bomb that had been surgically planted in Ree-Yees' belly. When Leia Organa killed Jabba, the threat of an explosion was temporarily averted. However, when Jabba's sail barge exploded, it set off the bomb, killing Ree-Yees instantly. In the novelization of Return of the Jedi, Ree-Yees, ever belligerent, became involved in a fight with Ephant Mon aboard Jabba's sail barge as Jabba was preparing to put Luke Skywalker and Han Solo into the Sarlacc pit. It is believed that Ree-Yees died when the barge exploded. (ROTJ, ROTJN, MTS, TJP)

Reeza

this was one of the many Mandalorians who were stationed on the planet Dantooine, during the height of the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Reezen

born and raised on Coruscant during Palpatine's reign, Reezen was an Imperial Navy Corporal serving under Zsinj. He had a fairly non-descript, seven-year career in the Navy until he noticed the hit-and-run attacks Han had organized to draw Zsinj out. He had surmised that the New Republic was going to make a move at Dathomir, and sent Zsinj a message suggesting reinforcements. (CPL)

Refgar

this planet, located near Orflon, was where the Alliance agents tried to escape from Imperial notice after rescuing Soron Hegerty. It was also a possible hiding place of a pirate treasure taken from Butler's Cove. (SN)

Refka Trell

this starship operator owned the Adela, and was based on Elom. (SOL)

Reflec

this substance is used by many commando groups to plate their armor suits. Reflec has the natural ability to absorb the energy waves emitted by most sensors, effectively removing the substance from a sensor sweep. When coated with a fine mesh of reflec, personal body armor is virtually undetectable, as are the life signs of the wearer. Imperial Storm Commandos were among the prime users of reflec plating. (KO)

Reflection Blast

this phenomenon, experienced mainly on desert worlds such as Tatooine, occurred whenever a vast area was under continual bombardment by the energy of the sun. These areas, such as the Great Chott on Tatooine, absorbed and reflected great amounts of heat and light. This reflected energy created the reflection blast, which overpowered many types of sensors. (TG)

Reflection of the Essential Infinities

this was the Qella name for the strange orrery discovered by Lando Calrissian and Lobot aboard the Teljkon vagabond. The room contained strange, peglike structures which activated a huge viewscreen. The viewscreen depicted a vivid, lifelike image of the Qella home system, providing them with a vision of its existence prior to the cataclysmic loss of its moons. The orrery was destroyed when the Gorath and other ships from Foga Brill's fleet attacked the vagabond in the Prakith System. (TT)

Reflective Blanket

a blanket made of a material which holds in bodyheat and helps hide a lifeform from sensors. (CPL)

Reflex Amendment

this was the nickname applied to the Old Republic Senate's Emergency Amendment 121b, named for the effect it had in increasing Emperor Palpatine's ability to react to the battles being fought during the Clone Wars. (SWI71)

Reflex Races

a casino coin game. Note that Star Wars Adventure Journal #1 claims reflex races were a physically-demanding game. (HSE, SWJ1)

Refnar

Pepper Flarestream and her squadron were decimated by an Imperial attack while protecting a convoy over this planet, during the Galactic Civil War. The battle became known as the Last Stand at Refnar. (CRO)

Refrax Spaceport

this Imperial-controlled spaceport served as a stop-over point for ships travelling through Mortex Sector during the Galactic Civil War. (BI)

Refresher

a room with a fully recycling shower, sink, and toilet. They come in various configurations, from small 'freshers for starships to large, ornate rooms in personal residences. (GG, RD)

Refuge City

located on the northern hemisphere of the planet Caamas, Refuge City was one of the few habitable locations that remained after the planet's destruction. Groups of ecologists and environmentalists used Refuge City as a base of operations, during their attempts to restore Caamas' natural state. Established by Elek D'Cel, Refuge City was a domed city created from the debris of surrounding locations. A central power generator provided the necessary electricity, and much of the city's lighting was in the form of biolum fixtures. A garden graced the main entry to the city, as a reminder of Caamas' former - and future - beauty. The city was home to the 200 or so Caamasi who survived the destruction of the planet's ecosystem, along with a group of Ithorians who were helping to restore it. (WOTC, CCW)

Refugee

this starship was owned by Lorn Moonrunner, and he used it to carry his wife, Artis, to the planet Rhamalai. There, Lorn hid the ship deep in the Great Forest Valley, hoping to avoid attention but keeping the ship active in case he every needed to flee the planet. The Refugee was a modified 1550-LEX yacht from SoroSuub, and was armed with a turret-mounted laser cannon and two proton torpedo launchers. (SWJ13)

Refugee Facility 17

this was one of the many refugee camps on the planet Ruan, established by the Salliche Ag Corporation, to help those beings dishomed by the Yuuzhan Vong invasion. Melisma and Gaph were stranded here, during the search for Droma. Unknown to the refugees, as well as the New Republic, Salliche Ag was using the refugees as unwitting slave labor. They claimed that it was simply a way for them to claim their produce was "handpicked," but in reality the corporation was removing droids in anticipation of the Yuuzhan Vong taking control of the galaxy. It was built on the site of an abandoned junkyard, and the debris provided inventive refugees with a number of useful items. This camp was also located in sight of Noob Hill. Like most other of these refugee camps, Facility 17 turned into a mudpit when it rained, and disease and famine were a constant danger. (JE)

Refugee Relief Movement

this was a Naboo-based, political movement which occurred shortly before Padme' Naberrie was elected to serve as the Queen of the Naboo. The Refugee Relief Movement acted to assist any people who were in need of food, clothing, and supplies, whenever the Old Republic failed to provide assistance of its own. Shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars, the RRM was chaired by Celly Organa of Alderaan. A fundraiser held on the planet Alsakan raised some 75 million credits for the RRM, although critics like Brookish Boon questioned whether the funds would actually reach the refugees. (SWDB, HNN4, HNN5)

Refugee Resettlement Coalition

this collection of planets agreed to open up their spaceports and certain rural areas to refugees who were caught off-planet when their homeworlds seceded from the Old Republic, during the Separatist crisis which occurred just before the Clone Wars. Under the direction of the Refugee Relief Movement, planets such as Naboo, Cerea, and Monastery opened their ports to any being seeking political refuge. When it was first discussed, as many as twenty-five planets agreed to assist with the resettlement efforts, but the number was reduced to ten planets in order to facilitate the distribution of supplies and food. (HNN5)

Regal Bothan Hotel

this upscale establishment was located on the planet Bothawui. (SESB)

Regal Destiny

this House Pelagia starship disappeared during the Mecetti Purge. It was rumored to have been carrying a hold full of valuables from House Pelagia, but supposedly was lost in the deepest regions of space. The Regal Destiny was discovered by the crew of the Bright Seeker shortly after the Battle of Hoth, which was fleeing an ambush sprung by the Knife's Edge under a Letter of Marque from the Alliance. The ship's hull had been breached by several crimson slugs. The crew of the Bright Seeker discovered that the Regal Destiny had been betrayed by a House Mecetti spy who had posed as a crewman and poisoned the ship's air supply. They also discovered that the treasures being carried by the Regal Destiny were Trad and Verinia Paddox, the true heirs of Theus Paddox and House Pelagia. (TSIA)

Regal Heirarchy

this was the primary government of the planet Ilimardon. (WOTC)

Regal Suites

this luxurious suite of rooms was set aside for the wealthier clientele of the Pearl Island Casino, on Pavo Prime, during the early years of the New Republic. Hidden from the more regular customers, the Regal Suites were believed to have been built to complement the ten boasa statues obtained by the casino's owner, Ludlo Lebauer. (SWI67)

Regall

this Rodian modified a MacroMotionMonitor sensor array, placing it on a small hovercam and using it for a security and early-warning system. (GUN)

Regallis Engineering

this small corporation produced a variety of tools, as well as a number of flitter suits and vacuum suits, for use by independent spacers and starship owners. Note that The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology denotes this corporation as Regalis Engineering. (PSG, EGW, GFT, NEGW)

Regar I

the fifth planet in the Garos System. (SWJ1)

Regar II

the sixth planet in the Garos System. (SWJ1)

Regatta Week

this was the name given to the week-long period that surrounded the running of the Spira Regatta Open. (SWJ5)

Regdo's Clan Catalog

this unusual collection of plasticine sheeting was created by an anthropologist during the last decades of the Old Republic, and documented extensive information on the many Rodian clans. Included with the entry for each clan was information on its formation and history, along with cultures and customs that set each clan apart. (GMR7)

Regency

this was the term used to describe the interim leadership of the planet Ord Cestus, after the majority of the native X'Ting were wiped out in a series of plagues. The Regency was ostensibly in charge of the planet, although it was actually little more than a puppet leadership that was controlled by the Five Families. The X'Ting who was named Regent served the position for life. (TCD)

Regency Spires Imperial Trust

this was the largest of the Imperial financial holdings on the planet Ralltiir. It was one of the few Ralltiiri institutions to survive the Imperial subjugation of Ralltiir, especially when it offered substantial rewards for Imperial investors. (CCW)

Regeneration Bandage

any form of bandaging which provides nutrients and medication directly to a wound. These bandages allow the wound to heal faster, while at the same time allowing the injured party some freedom of movement. (CS)

Regen-stim

this was a form of tissue-regeneration drug that was popular during the last decades of the Old Republic. With the use of regen-stim, doctors could minimize scarring from operations. The drugs stimulated the regeneration of skin tissue, allowing new tissue to form over wounds before scar tissue could form. (MJH)

Regg Kuuga

this male Draag was a known pirate and starship thief, living in the industrial district of Coruscant during the years following the Battle of Naboo. It was believed that Regg was working for Groff Haug at the time. He was wanted by the Coruscant police for the theft of several medical frigates, which he scrapped for parts that were used to build his pirate fleet. The fleet, consisting of heavily-modified cruisers, was used to attack tourists on their way to Coruscant. Regg was eventually captured by Jango Fett. (BH)

Regga

this Ithorian pod racer was killed in a preliminary event, leading up to the Boonta Eve podrace on Tatooine, shortly before young Anakin Skywalker beat Sebulba in the famous race. He had been battling young Anakin the entire race, but crashed and destroyed his podracer. (TPM, IG1)

Reggi

Lando Calrissian bargained with this representative of the Soskin Guard for protection services. They met on Cilpar shortly after the revelation of the Caamas Document. Lando needed to defend ore shipments coming from Varn, but decided not to take Reggi's over-priced services. (SOP)

Reggis, Jiki

Po Reggis' wife, they lived at North 5 27 Up in the city of Griann, on Teyr. They had lived there for 28 years when Luke Skywalker and Akanah visited the planet in search of the Fallanassi. Jiki and Po told them about the cyclone that wiped out much of their street, including the houses that Norika and her friends lived in. (SOL)

Reggis, Po

Jiki Reggis' husband, they lived at North 5 27 Up in the city of Griann, on Teyr. They had lived there for 28 years when Luke Skywalker and Akanah visited the planet in search of the Fallanassi. Jiki and Po told them about the cyclone that wiped out much of their street, including the houses that Norika and her friends lived in. (SOL)

Reggs, Darnell

an Alliance Y-Wing pilot who served under Commander Krane. Although he felt Krane was to be respected because of his rank, Reggs held Krane in a somewhat lower regard on a personal level. (RA2)

Regina Cayli

an M-class Imperial Attack Transport that was infiltrated by Roark Garnet on New Bakstre. Garnet had crashed his own ship, the Dorian Discus, into the forest a short distance from the Regina Cayli's position, and the Imperials moved to investigate. (RPG, SWJ1)

Regina Galas

this was one of the many aliases maintained by Han Solo for the Millennium Falcon, during the height of the New Order. The alias remained intact for many years, and Han was able to use it during the mission to recover the Killik Twilight moss-painting from Tatooine, shortly after his marriage to Leia Organa. The idea that the Regina Galas was from Gand evolved when the ship was intercepted by the Star Destroyer Chimaera, and Han had C-3PO communicate with the Imperials in Gand to buy them some time. (TG)

Reginard

the Alliance had a hidden base here during the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ6)

Region

this was the term used by the Old Republic to denote a large section of the known galaxy. They varied greatly in their size, from small patches of space to expanses such as the Outer Rim Territories. (EGP)

Regional Fork-Pitcher's Local

an agricultural union on Saheelindeel. (HSL)

Regis

this was one of the Alliance's Nebulon-B frigates, active during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Regisine

Han Solo and Lando Calrissian were spotted at the corner of Corlloon and Regisine, in the captial city of the planet Bastion, during their search for a copy of the Caamas Document. (VOF)

Registered Bank of Ammuud

this was the most prominent of the financial institutions based on the planet Ammuud during the last decades of the Old Republic. Much of the collateral controlled by the Registered Bank was stored on Aargau during this time. (BF3)

Registry Chip

a small device used to hold data necessary for identifying a person's belongings. They are often used to verify ownership of droids and starships. Some older models have holographic projectors built in, to visually describe the property in question. (CPL)

Reglia

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Reglia, Miko

this man trained as a Jedi Knight under the tutelage of Kyp Durrone, in the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. He proved his flying skills in the new breed of X-Wing, the T-65XJ, and was consistently in the top ten runners of Lando's Folly. Miko was known as a quiet, unassuming individual, who preferred to meditate alone and practice his lightsaber in solo sessions. Miko was nearly killed when the Dozen-and-Two Avengers discovered the Yuuzhan Vong presence near Helska. The invaders launched a swarm of coralskippers against them, quickly dispatching all fighters but Kyp Durrón. Miko's own X-Wing was left powerless, then destroyed by coralskipper fire. However, the Yuuzhan Vong had already captured Miko and brought him to Helska's surface, where he was imprisoned with Danni Quee. His Yuuzhan Vong captors bombarded him with images of his own failure, a technique they called The Breaking. Miko fell into deep despair, buoyed only by the presence of Danni Quee. She eventually got him to assist her in an escape plan. When Jacen Solo arrived with a starship in an attempt to destroy the yammosk, Miko and Danni nearly escaped. However, Miko decided to remain behind in order to ensure that Danni and Jacen made it out alive. He sacrificed himself to prevent two Yuuzhan Vong warriors from capturing them. (VP)

Reglids Taal

an associate of the Keresian, Galasett. (GG12)

Reglis, Aelon

this professional gambler was a native of Chandrila. Shortly after purchasing the transport ship Adventurer, Aelon got married and decided to start a family. He kept the Adventurer, and later gave it to his daughter, Lynx, as a graduation present. (SS)

Reglis, Lynx

this young woman was Aelon Reglis' daughter. After Aelon became the first member of the Reglis family to purchase a starship and travel between planets, Lynx became the first member of the family to attend the Imperial Academy. Upon graduation, her father gave her his personal starship, the Adventurer, as a gift. She loved the ship, but never got a chance to tinker with it due to her duties. She did fly the ship during a mission on which she impersonated the Alliance agent Sapphire, in an effort to thwart an assassination attempt on the life of Commodore Dane Tizzin. She found herself with some free time afterward, and began outfitting the Adventurer with countermeasures packages. She was unable to finish the work, though, as she was implicated in a scheme to steal military secrets and imprisoned. (SS)

Regnuff

this is a small, rodent-like creature. (RD)

Rego Mineral Company

this mining operation discovered the planet Altor 14 some fifteen years before the Battle of Yavin. It obtained the rights to mine silver, gallium, and selenium from the Nuiwit in return for their own native goods. (GG4)

Rego, Vance

a member of the Cilpari Resistance, he was supposed to meet Winter on Cilpar and obtain aid in fighting the Imperials. He was also working for the local Imperials, as a double agent. He led Moff Fasel's stormtroopers, led by Major Ego, to Winter's location. (XWRS)

Regolith Prime

Jiliac the Hutt had a listening outpost on this world, during the early years of the New Order. (THG)

Re-Grav Plate

this device contains its own gravity projection device. It is used in warehouses and junkyards to hold scrap material for later use or distribution. Re-grav plates can be mounted on walls or ceilings, thereby allowing large amounts of material to be stored off the floor. (IG1)

Regulator

this was the brand name of the Loronar X-Q2 systems patrol craft. (FOP)

Regvis

this element is a key component of the truth serum Bavo Six. (CFG)

Reha

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Rehn System

this planetary system, located in Brak Sector, was controlled by the Empire at the height of the New Order. (FBS)

Rehz'nor

this was one of the Alliance's Nebulon-B frigates, active during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Rei

this Nagai warrior was one of many who trained under Lumiya on the planet Kinooine, during the months following the Battle of Endor. (MC96)

Rei Soffran

this revered Jedi Master taught the intermediate level students at the Jedi Temple on Coruscant, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Master Soffran was known for his demanding lectures, as well as for his ability to isolate an individual's faults and dissect them on great detail. (JQ6)

Reiber Manufacturing

this major producer of black-market assassin droid components was headquartered on the planet Jeyell. Reiber was nationalized by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War, in an effort to bring all Mid-Rim droid manufacturing under Imperial control. It was one of four corporations amalgamated into the Imperial Droid Corporation. (SWJ6, FOP)

Reicheds, Lia

this woman was a clerk, working for the Galactic Senate during the years prior to the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Reidi Artom

this Jedi Knight was the first to discover the Force nexus on Almas, after Darth Rivan was driven from the planet millennia before. Could this be the same Reidi Artom who discovered the Cularin System? (LFC)

Reidi Artom

this explorer was generally considered the first being to map the Cularin System. A near-human whose species lived for hundreds of years, Reidi left her homeworld and stowed aboard a starship. When the ship was attacked and the pilot killed, Reidi took command of the craft and repaired it. She assumed ownership of the craft, renaming it the Trailblazer, and set out on her own to make a living as an explorer. No less than six star systems were discovered during her career, and many were named with variations on her own name. Many of these systems were later renamed to conform to the galactic standard established by the Old Republic. During a routine mission, she was pulled out of hyperspace by the proximity of the comet cloud which surrounded the Cularin System, some 200 years before the Battle of Naboo. She named the planets and the system after herself, until a search revealed that an older name had been logged. She accepted this fact, and returned to Cularin to settle the planet with the help of the Tarasin. After establishing the cities of Gadren and Hedrett, she left Cularin and headed into the Unknown Regions, and was never seen again. Just before the onset of the Clone Wars, a collection of documents written by Artom were discovered by a group of explorers, who were assisted by the Tarasin of the Vriisan irstat who had served as their caretaker for more than two centuries. Among the documents was Artom's "manifesto for expansion," in which she implored future readers to seek out a way to live in harmony with new races and new worlds, rather than simply stripping them of resources and abandoning them. (LFC, LFCW)

Reidi Artom I

this was the first of six star systems discovered by Reidi Artom, more than 200 years before the Battle of Naboo. The system proved to be of little value, either for raw material or for colonization. (LFC)

Reidi Artom II

this was the second of six star systems discovered by Reidi Artom, more than 200 years before the Battle of Naboo. The system proved to be of little value, either for raw material or for colonization. (LFC)

Reidi Artom III

this was the third of six star systems discovered by Reidi Artom, more than 200 years before the Battle of Naboo. The system proved to be of little value, either for raw material or for colonization. (LFC)

Reidi Artom IV

this was the fourth of six star systems discovered by Reidi Artom, more than 200 years before the Battle of Naboo. The system proved to be of little value, either for raw material or for colonization. (LFC)

Reidi Artom V

this was the fifth of six star systems discovered by Reidi Artom, more than 200 years before the Battle of Naboo. The system proved to be of little value, either for raw material or for colonization. (LFC)

Reidi Artom VI

this was the sixth of six star systems discovered by Reidi Artom, more than 200 years before the Battle of Naboo. The system was believed to have been undiscovered, but further investigation by the Republic Bureau of Exploration and Colonization revealed that it was actually the Cularin System. (LFC)

Reigalius

this planet was the homeworld of the Reigat race. (SWJ10)

Reigat

a humanoid alien race characterized by its grayish, mottled skin and dark blue lips, eyelids, and hair, the Reigats were native to the planet Reigalius. (CRO, SWJ10)

Reigat Rage

this was the slang term used to describe the incredible fits of anger which sometimes struck the Reigat species. It often resulted in large amounts of destruction. (CRO)

Reige, Vitor

this man served as a shuttle pilot aboard the Chimaera, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. When Grand Admiral Gilad Pellaeon was severely injured at the Battle of Bastion, it was Reige who managed to rescue him and pilot a shuttle back to Yaga Minor so that Pellaeon could be treated. Reige rarely left Pellaeon's side, ensuring that the Jedi healer Tekli gave Pellaeon the best treatment possible. (FH1)

Rei'kas

this Rodian was one of the major crimelords in the Kathol Outback some fifteen years after the Battle of Endor. He was the chief rival of Crev Bombassa, and the two had a long-standing feud between them that often came to blows. Rei'kas was at one time a strike team leader for the Karazak Slavers Cooperative, and was known to be rough, violent, and vicious. Before that, Rei'kas was a member of the Jrah! Ferrin gang. When he discovered that Talon Karrde was searching the Kathol Outback for Jorj Car'das, Rei'kas realized that he had a chance to locate Exocron and eliminate a competitor. He followed Karrde in and, after confirming the location, attacked Exocron. However, Car'das had the Aing-Tii monks on his side, and as soon as Rei'kas' fleet appeared, the Aing-Tii struck. Their Sanhedrim warships quickly eliminated Rei'kas' entire fleet, killing the crimelord and his entire organization. (VOF, GG11)

Reimo, Kail

this man was a representative of the Bazzel Crimewatch Association during the height of the New Order. (SWJ10)

Reis

this humanoid was native to the planet Kodai. Some six years before the Battle of Naboo, Reis provided information to Qui-Gon Jinn and his Padawan, Obi-Wan Kenobi, on the legendary Sith Holocron which was rumored to exist at the bottom of Kodai's ocean. (JAF)

Reiss

this Imperial Lieutenant served as the chief aide to Sub-Commander Brojtal during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (ND)

Reist

this nightmare demon was controlled by Altin Wuho, via a lead-lined helmet and a forcefield bubble. Reist resented Wuho for holding him captive, but knew that Wuho would kill him if he didn't do his bidding. When Wuho was sent to capture Luke Skywalker in the Lapez System, he sent Reist ahead in a trackable capsule, leading him to Lapez 3. There, Reist tried to trap Luke by projecting images of the deaths of Han Solo, Leia Organa, and Luke himself. Luke was able to resist, and wounded Reist in a battle. Luke removed the lead helmet, freeing Reist from his captivity. This was able the time Wuho discovered them, but Reist died before he could exact revenge on him. However, Reist was able to tell Luke that Wuho was a droid, and that Luke could escape the planet with parts from his body. Luke dismantled Wuho and fled the planet. (CSWDW, W149)

Reithcas

this city, located on the planet Bortras, was the birthplace of Jorus C'baoth. (DFR)

Reject Alley

this was the name of a settlement which grew up on the planet N'zoth. Built within a rocky crevasse, Reject Alley was the home of those outcast Yevetha were were cursed to live out their lives in shame. (EGP)

Rejeff, Diew

this wealthy merchant made a living in Mos Eisley, on Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. He had no love for the Empire, and worked toward the day when he could rally the citizens of Mos Eisley to oust Prefect Talmont and restore freedom to Tatooine. (MEAS)

Rejeff's Legion

this was the name of self-styled gang of bodyguards employed by Diew Rejeff. (MEAS)

Rejuvenation Therapy

developed during the New Order and popular during the early years of the New Republic, this form of non-essential medical treatment allowed certain individuals to tone their bodies, both mentally and physically, making them appear younger. (HT)

Rejuvenator

this Imperial-II class Star Destroyer was part of the New Republic's fleet, some twenty years after the Battle of Endor. Stationed at Ord Mantell, it was the closest warship to Dubrillion when Lando Calrissian realized the Yuuzhan Vong were heading toward the planet. He asked Leia Organa Solo to request the Rejuvenator assist in holding off the invasion fleet's front wave, until other ships could gather and help in the protection effort. It was commanded by Warshack Rojo at this time, but Rojo was unable to defeat the Praetorite Vong's war force. A massed attack of coralskippers and grutchins destroyed the Rejuvenator, taking the entire crew with it. (VP)

Rejuvenator-class Star Destroyer

this was the newest form of Star Destroyer, produced by the New Republic during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. It was based on the many improvements made to the Imperial-II class Star Destroyer Rejuvenator. (UF)

Rek

this was a common name given to male Duros children. The name Rek came from the term meaning "intelligent". (GCG)

Rek

a large green alien whose blocky face is eyeless. He has a set of straight teeth connecting his upper and lower jaws, and this tends to slur his speech. He was a thug working with Gudb and Rek for the Stenness system's local Hutt crimelord, but he was killed by Nomi Sunrider after Gudb's pet gorm worm bit and killed her husband, Andur. (TOJ)

Rek

this species of whip-thin aliens has either orange eyes, which denotes a male, or purple eyes, which denotes a female. (TNR)

Rek

this huge insectoid being worked as a bodyguard and soldier for Grappa the Hutt. (CE2)

Rek Tea

this was one of the many kinds of tea which were brewed by the Korunnai from the leaves of plants found in the jungles of Haruun Kal. (SHPT)

Rekara

this Mon Calamari served the Alliance as a personal aide to Mors Odrion. The pair were captured by Karak and his followers when they traveled to Sedri to investigate the development of an Imperial garrison there, but Rekara managed to escape. Odrion was tortured by Karak with a piece of the Golden Sun, and Rekara herself stole a piece before fleeing the planet to get help. However, the dying call of the coral pierced her mind and drove her insane. She returned to the Alliance with nothing more than the coordinates of the planet, and was only able to help the recovery team during brief moments of lucidity. Following the defeat of Karak and the scattering of pieces of the Golden Sun across Sedri's oceans, Rekara's mind was restored to its normal state by the Golden Sun. (BGS)

Rekcus, Naiver

this man was part of a group of twelve Culariners who were ambushed by agents of the Thaereian Military, just after the onset of the Clone Wars. Among the group was the streetperson known as Old Ezil, who returned from his torture to tell people that Rekcus was killed in the ambush. (LFCW)

Rekeene's Roughnecks

Rekkon

a black-skinned human born in the Roundtree System, Rekkon was the only child of a middle-class family. He showed great aptitude for computer programming, and eventually discovered that he could slice into computer systems with ease. Unlike many slicers, though, Rekkon had a conscience and morals. This was due to the teachings of his parents, which he never lost sight of. Rekkon excelled in school, and was offered a programming position with the Corporate Sector Authority. He accepted, and made the move to Corporate Sector space. His brother's family moved with him, and this was how Rekkon became a role model for his nephew, Tchaka. Rekkon was a scholar of many different schools and schools of thought. In his spare time, he began looking into the rumblings and hall-talk of misdealings by the Authority. He believed that the Authority was illegally kidnapping people from all races and using them as slaves or other forced laborers. He was trying to piece together all the clues he had in order to locate the captives and free them. Then Tchaka was discovered missing after speaking out against the Authority. Rekkon had recruited other people who knew of missing people, and they were ready to infiltrate the Authority's Data Center on Orron III when Han Solo agreed to help them. After retrieving the necessary data with Blue Max's help, Rekkon had discovered the whereabouts of the prisoners, but could not complete the mission. He was murdered by Torm aboard the Millennium Falcon, but not before he managed to scribble the name "Stars' End" on the holochess table. This allowed the rest of the team to find Stars' End and liberate the prisoners there, including Tchaka. (HSE, CSA) this tall, stately tree is native to the planet Naboo. It is a long-lived tree, but is also very slow-growing.

Reknew

Groves of reknew trees surround and meander through the city of Theed, a testament to the city's enduring prosperity. (GF)

Reku

this Alliance Special Forces soldier was a member of Team Razor. (HAS)

Rekush

this Mon Calamari served the Alliance as an aide to Admiral Ackbar. Rekush and Ackbar recommended that Wedge Antilles interview Feylis Ardele for inclusion in Rogue Squadron. (HXW)

Rekvan

this man was the primary character in Beneath the Galdronian Moon: A Modern Lover's Epic. (GFT)

Rela

this was the seventh planet in the Obas System. It had eight moons. (IA)

Relal

this was one of the most common male names used by members of the Ithorian race. Although most Ithorian names were not used for a specific meaning, historians found that this name meant "independent". (GCG)

Relal Tawron

this Ithorian priest succeeded Momaw Nadon as the leader of the Ithorian people. Relal Tawron reluctantly agreed to allow the New Republic to work with the bafforr trees, in an effort to gather pollen to defeat the Yuuzhan Vong's vonduun crab armor. Tawron would only allow the Jedi to set foot on the planet's surface, and then only after they each gave up something of themselves in a cleansing ceremony beforehand. (DTR)

Relans

this Imperial Moff survived the Battle of Endor and the splintering of the Empire, but remained within the Deep Core. He hated Moff Feleea, and worked hard to make sure Feleea failed in everything he did. (HR)

Relarr System

this planetary system was located near the Roche Asteroid field. (SWJ10)

Relasi, Janna

this woman was a bounty hunter working for the Salaktori Hunters Guild at the time of her death. She was killed on a hunt, and her dying words were spoken to her faithful armory droid, GSAD-43. She said, "Get them for me..." before expiring, and GSAD-43 the words to mean it was supposed to hunt down her killers. (GG10)

Relas-u di Cadomai kwu-essen?

this Snivvian question meant "What part of Cadomai are you from?" (HNN5)

Relatta System

this star system was known for its many gambling halls. (HR)

Relby-k23

this blaster pistol shot a bolt which caused intense pain shortly before targets died from the blast. The safety on this weapon was prone to failure, and so it was restricted to military use. Nevertheless, it found its way into the hands of Imperial undercover agents. (CCG5)

Relby-v10

this micro-grenade launcher is a modified version of the CSPL ("Caspel") projectile launcher. The Trandoshan bounty hunter Bossk used one of these weapons. (CCG3)

Relearning Circle

this section of the primary city on Kegan was located within the Learning Circle. Most Keganites only whispered of the existence of the Relearning Circle, for any child who failed to adhere to the General Good was sent to the Relearning Circle and were never seen again. (FFT)

Relekin Confidential

based on Danadine, this collection agency started out with a small number of skip-tracers who found that working on the other side of the law was more profitable. Relekin was eventually sold to the Tenloss Syndicate, and became the Syndicate's primary collections agency. (GG11)

Relentless

this was the name of one of the Star Destroyers that served under Moff Vanko near the Maelstrom, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (RM)

Relentless

this Imperial-I class Star Destroyer was originally under the command of Captain Parlan. It was patrolling near the planet Sunaj in the year leading up to the Battle of Yavin. Parlan was later ordered to intercept Adar Tallon on Tatooine, and bring the officer to the Darth Vader. He failed, and Vader had him executed. The Relentless was then placed under the command of Captain Westen, who failed to capture the Alliance transport Celestial as it was moving captured Imperials to a penal world. Westen was also executed by Vader. Later, under the command of Captain Dorja, it fought at the Battle of Endor, and was a secondary part of Thrawn's fleet some five years later. It later became one of the ships in Moff Disra's fleet, and eventually served as one of the primary patrol ships used by Admiral Pellaeon to patrol the Imperial Remnant. (XW, TM, DFR, OS, VOF, DTR)

Releqy A'Kla

this young Caamasi female was the daughter of Elegos A'Kla, living on the colony world of Kerilt. She was attacked and almost raped by Remart Sasyru, but managed to escape with her companion Corran Horn - under the alias Jenos Idanian. She later joined her father in rebuilding the Caamasi Remnant community on Suarbi 7/5, and developed into a noted speaker and politician in her own right. When the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy, Releqy was chosen to act as her father's liaison to the Senate, during his fact-finding mission to the Outer Rim Territories. When Elegos was killed by the Yuuzhan Vong warrior Shedao Shai, Releqy reluctantly took his place in the New Republic Senate. She had been chosen by the Caamasi to take her father's position for the duration of the war against the Yuuzhan Vong, and she chose to pursue peace. She was a vocal proponent of a peaceful resolution to the war, a position which was supported by Cal Omas but opposed by a large number of other Senators. (IJ, DTO, FH1)

Relgim Run

this hyperspace route was used by the Kuari Princess to travel from Mantooine to Endoraan. It passed very close to the Maelstrom, and was forced to drop out of hyperspace to bypass it. (TFE)

Relgim Sector

this area of the galaxy was under Imperial control during the Galactic Civil War. Denn Wessex was the Governor of the sector, and he schemed with his wife, Lira, to lure her father, Walex Blissex, to Relgim Sector in order to coerce him into helping the Imperials. (SF)

Reliable

one of the Imperial cruisers blockading the ThonBoka when Lando Calrissian returns to help the Oswaft. Lando sells its crewers fine cigars and engages in a number of sabacc matches, pretending to be a simple merchant while maneuvering closer to the mouth of the StarCave. (LCS)

ReliaCharger

this was the brand name of Udrane Galactic Electronics' portable power calibration tool. (EGW)

Reliance

an Imperial star hauler which transported the first cargo of Viper Automadons from Balmorra to Byss. The

New Republic, working with the Balmorrans, stowed away inside the Vipers in an attempt to overtake and control the Emperor's Citadel. (DE2)

Reliance

an Imperial-I class Star Destroyer under the command of Captain Gendarr during the Galactic Civil War, it was stationed at Jardeen IV. (SWJ2, WBC)

Reliance

an Old Republic capital ship, and the command ship during the battle to recover the Empress Teta system from the Krath. (DLS)

Reliant

this mid-sized freighter was heavily modified by Liegeus Vorn and the Newcomers working for Seti Ashgad and Dzym. It was designed from the basic I-7 Howlrunner hull, with additional cargo areas added to transport several containers of drochs which were attuned to Dzym. The ship's primary function was to spread them across the Meridian Sector and later into New Republic space. Dzym's goal was to kill off all life he encountered with the so-called Death Seed plague, thereby laying the galaxy at his feet. A secondary function of the ship was to mine Spook crystals from Nam Chorios, to supply Loronar Corporation with enough to manufacture synthdroids and Needle fighters. It was also heavily shielded to keep out sunlight and solar radiation, which would kill the drochs. When Ashgad and Dzym's plans were discovered by the New Republic, they attempted to flee in the Reliant and launch their plans without Moff Getelles and Loronar, but the ship was destroyed by Republic warships and both conspirators were killed. (POT)

Reliant

this Lianna-class corvette served as part of the customs patrol that worked in the Lianna System during the Galactic Civil War. It worked in tandem with the Audacious, waiting until the other ship discovered smugglers or pirates. The Reliant would then intercept the targets as they tried to escape. Modified from the basic design, the Reliant measured 156 meters in length, had a crew of 75, and was armed with four double turbolaser cannons. (ML)

Relix

this large, crustacean-like fish was native to the seas of the planet Maramere. It was a distant cousin to the Opee Sea Killer of Naboo, and had many of the same physical characteristics. (CRBN)

Rel'Kan

this was the Gorothe term for the President of the planetary government - the P'Dar'Ken - of Gorothe Prime. Each Rel'Kan served a five-year term, and there was no limit to the number of terms an individual Rel'Ken could serve. (GSE)

Relkass

this temperate world was known for the Relkass sentinel plant. (COG)

Relkass Sentinel Plant

native to the planet Relkass, this cactus-like plant produced a chemical compound which reacted like a powerful narcotic. The native draagax often consumed the plant, and the narcotic caused them to become frenzied, bloodthirsty killers. For this reason, the draagax were hunted to near-extinction. (COG)

Reli

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Reli

a 300-year-old Dathomir witch of the Singing Mountain clan, she had foreseen the arrival of Luke Skywalker and Prince Isolder on Dathomir well before they came to rescue Leia Organa. This was due, in part, to her negotiations with Jedi Master Yoda over the ancient starship Chu'unthor, which had crashlanded in a Dathomir swamp. She also foresaw that Luke would start a Jedi academy, and have a wife and children. She claimed that these beliefs came to her in a dream, although it was Yoda who originally spoke them. She also believed that Isolder was killed by Gethzerion, proving that the old woman's dreams were not always correct. Rell passed away shortly after Isolder married Teneniel Djo. Note that this character might be the same as the Dathomiri witch Kell, described in the Power of the Jedi Sourcebook. (CPL, CTD, PJSB)

Rella

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Rella

this woman was a member of the Nebula Front team, led by Captain Cohl, which infiltrated the Trade Federation battleship Revenue shortly before the Battle of Naboo. After escaping from the battle, then barely surviving the trip back to Dorvalla to retrieve the Hawk-Bat, Rella began to question her continued work with Cohl. She found that the thrill of narrowly escaping a grave situation no longer appealed to her. In fact, she feared that she would never be able to really retire. After the various hideouts Cohl had used were targeted for surveillance by the Judicial Department, Rella voiced her desire to get out of the mercenary business to Cohl. When Cohl decided to head back to Asmeru to rejoin the Nebula Front, Rella severed their relationship and set out on her own. However, when she heard that Cohl had been recruiting mercenaries to kill Chancellor Valorum, she tracked Cohl down to join his band again. She warned him that the mission was not what he thought it was, but he refused to believe her. Rella went along to keep an eye on Cohl. However, when the Jedi caught wind of Cohl's activities, Havac was forced to take action to avoid discovery of his own plans. Havac's forces intercepted Cohl's people on Eriadu, and a firefight broke out. Rella was shot and killed by Havac in the melee. (COD)

Rellarian

this was the native language of the Rellarin race. (GMR9)

Rellarin

a humble humanoid race native to the moon Rellnas Minor, inhabiting the moon's polar regions and living in harmony with their surroundings. Despite their fearsome appearance, they have been likened to the Ithorians for their love of nature. Rellarins are covered with thick shell plates. Their heads are topped with similar plates, and their small eyes sit above a triangular field of feeding spikes that replace a mouth. Their hands are huge, almost twice the size of a Wookiee's hands. They are a competitive species, but are respected for their fair play and gamesmanship. There are known to be at least 57 unique Rellarin tribes, each with its own religious and cultural beliefs. As a race, Rellarins are not very technological. They are a primitive race that uses spell-like incantations to make decisions and influence their surroundings. (GG12)

Rellio System

this Tapani Sector star system was part of the holdings of House Melantha during the New Order. (LOE)

Relis Flanking Maneuver

a starship combat maneuver in which a group of starfighters tries to flank a larger starship which has attacked their mother ship. The smaller fighters create a concentrated blast of firepower on the attacker's flanks, drawing the attacker's fire from the mother ship. (TLC)

Rellnas

this gas giant is the sixth planet in the Rell System, and has one moon known as Rellnas Minor. (GG12)

Rellnas Minor

this is the single moon of the gas giant Rellnas, and is the homeworld of the Rellarin race. It is covered with frigid polar caps and barren desert islands. (GG12)

Rellow, Hance

this Dentallian noble was the leader of the Dentaal Independence Party. He led the coup which ousted Imperial Governor Taliff. He was killed when the Empire unleashed the Candorian plague on Dentaal. (SWJ5)

Relona

this was the ninth month of the Tapani local calendar, which mapped almost directly to the Coruscant local calendar. (PGT)

Relsted, Minor

this young man was Imperial Supervisor Gurdun's assistant. He was placed in charge of collecting any and all data on the IG-series droids which escaped from Gurdun's pet project at the Holowan Laboratories. He later assisted Gurdun during the manufacturing of the Viper probe droids. When Gurdun was placed in charge of acquiring the computer cores for the second Death Star, Relsted was given the position of Supervisor. (TBH)

Reltooine

a Corporate Sector world visited by the Lady of Mindor. (CSA)

Reluctant

one of the Imperial cruisers sent to blockade the ThonBoka and starve the Oswaft. She was the first ship to encounter the false Oswaft army created by the Oswaft from recycled materials. She fired at the false creatures, beginning a destruction of one-tenth of the Imperial blockade as they fired on nothingness and shot other cruisers. (LCS)

Relus

this terrestrial world was the fourth planet of the Beshqek System, located in the Deep Core of the galaxy. It was orbited by a single moon. (PH)

'rem

this suffix was added to a Bothan's family name to indicate the individual's affiliation to the Trem clan. (GCG, WOTC)

Rem Yonka

this being was considered one of the greatest mozz box players of the New Order. (WOTC)

REM-02

built by Industrial Automaton, this small exploration droid was part of the crew of the New Republic Scout Service ship Founder. Small enough to be carried in a belt pouch, REM-02 used tiny repulsors to fly around and gather data on the environment of a planet. It collected as much data as it could, then returned to its user so that the data could be dumped into an enviro-analyzer for further investigation. (GG8)

Remaga corlat?

this Yuuzhan Vong question translated into Basic as "where are you going?" It was most often used by guards, who demanded to know an individual's destination or business. (SBS, NJOSB)

Remember Derra Squadron

this group of New Republic Y-Wings served aboard the Allegiance during the defense of Adumar. (SOA)

Remembrances of Alderaan

a series of images depicting many aspects of Alderaan's beautiful scenery that was produced in the early years of the New Republic. Han Solo bought a set of them for his wife, Leia Organa Solo, after their marriage. (DA)

Remerel

this was once of the many names given to Duros females. This ancient name originally referred to a class of female servants, but evolved over time to mean "graceful dancer". (GCG)

Remitik

a planet which was used as a supply yard and repair station for the Alliance, just prior to the Battle of Hoth. (TIE)

Remlout

this X'Ting assassin was employed by Trillot during the last years of the Old Republic. He was one of the few X'Ting to leave his homeworld of Ord Cestus, having traveled to Xagobah to learn the martial art of Tal-Gun. When Asajj Ventress arrived on Ord Cestus, as part of Count Dooku's plot to capture Obi-Wan Kenobi, Kit Fisto, and their ARC trooper comrades, Remlout challenged her to one-on-one combat. He fought valiantly for several minutes, before the Rattatak woman made a swift attack and incapacitated him. Her movements left Remlout writhing in pain as his muscled contracted and literally split his shell. Remlout survived, but required many weeks of treatment. (TCD)

Remlyn, Jav

this man served as the First Officer aboard the Eradicator, under the command of Thulian Merast during the early years of the New Republic. Remlyn also served as Moff Kentor's Sarne's agent aboard the ship, reporting regularly on the status and location of the FarStar as it moved through the Kathol Rift. Unfortunately, Remlyn was killed when the Eradicator was destroyed by an intense lightstorm at the edge of the Rift, during the search for the FarStar. (E)

Remoh

this young Squidge and his companion, Otalp, were believed to have encountered a protocol droid in a remote cave on their homeworld. This droid, according to legend, told them of the oppression of the Empire and the struggle of the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. The story was said to have paralleled the history of the Squidge and their subjugation by the Vindar. Before the end of the story, however, a group of Vindar discovered their location. Otalp was caught out in the open with the droid, but Remoh remained hidden. When the Vindar apprehended Otalp, they demanded that he tell them where his companion went. When Otalp refused, he was killed by the Vindar. This prompted Remoh to take up arms against the Vindar, in hopes of freeing his people. (T19)

Remoh

this was one of the multitude of Imperial-class Star Destroyers which made up the Imperial Navy fleet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Remote

a spherical, anti-grav device that can be programmed for any number of uses, including weapons practice or surveillance. They do not have any initiative, and do only what they are told. (SW)

Remote DVI Activator

produced by Bespin Motors, this device allowed a starship owner to remotely activate their ship's pre-flight sequence, allowing them to board the ship and take off almost immediately. (GFT)

Remote Slicer

any device which is used to slice into a remote computer. These devices take the place of an organic slicer working on the spot to crack into secure systems. Instead, they can tap into other computers - usually via tight-beam transmission - and obtain information. Many can also be programmed to cover their own tracks, but the time delay of remotely gathering information often means that they are discovered while still downloading information. (SHA)

Remote Terminator

a strong beverage whose contents vary. The partaker can have the drink served in a preprogrammed fashion, or they can the ingredients randomized. (SA)

Remote-seein

this Gungan device allowed the user to view an event from a remote distance. It was essentially an image recording, transmission, and playback system. (E1A10)

Ren

this Givin gambler lived on Onadax during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Han Solo beat Ren with a cubic sabacc once, much to the Given's surprise. (FH3)

Rena

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Rena

this planet is known for its wondrous vineyards. (TBSB)

Rena

this Imperial Major was garrisoned on Garos IV, during the early years of the New Republic. (SWJ3)

Rena

located on the planet Kodai, this was the only city based entirely on dry land. Rena was situated on a small island, and was the cite of Kodai's only spaceport. The city was surrounded by an immense wall, erected in an effort to keep out the tidal waves which occurred after the ten-year tidal cycle reached it lowest point. (JAF)

Renaant

this was one of the twin suns, along with Centis Major, that formed the center of the Tantara System. (UF)

Renado, Rinn

this man was one of the many gladiators who won enough battles to "retire" from duty in the death matches staged on the city of Ektra, on Metellos. During the early years of the New Republic, Renado began to form a rebel movement against the death matches. Because the losers were usually dropped from the underbelly of Ektra to their deaths, Renado and his rebels began acquiring repulsor-equipped vehicles to catch them before they could hit the surface of Metellos. Any being who refused his offer to join the rebels was dumped over the side. (CCW)

Renalem, Lili

this woman was a noted singer and entertainer during the last years of the Old Republic. When the Clone Wars broke out, she agreed to join Jasod Revoc's Galactic Revue, and traveled across the galaxy to entertain the troops of the Grand Army of the Republic. (MJH)

Renan Bloodwolf

this huge canine predator lived in the mountains which surrounded the vineyards of the planet Rena. The average bloodwolf stood just under a meter tall at the shoulder, and was armed with a pair of blade-like fangs. The enamel coating of the fangs of older bloodwolves is often laden with iron, coloring the fangs a deep, rusty red and giving the creature its name. (TBSB)

Renan Irongut

this strong, alcoholic concoction is named for what you need to have in order to drink one. (GG9)

Renan Wine

a fine, fermented vintage. (GG9)

Renas

this frozen ball of ice was the sixth and outermost planet of the Polith System, located in the Inner Rim. It was orbited by three moons. (PH)

Renatasia III

one of the jewels of the Renatasia System, Renatasia III was one of the first places colonized by the Renatasian humans. They grew to colonize all eight planets, but Renatasia III was still the most beautiful. Following the birth of the Empire, Osuno Whett and Vuffi Raa began studying the Renatasians. Whett was going to use the system as a base of operations, and a way to gain power within the Empire. They were there for 700 days before the Imperial fleet arrived to take over the System. (LCF, LCS)

Renatasia IV

one of the jewels of the Renatasia System, Renatasia IV was one of the first places colonized by the Renatasian humans. They grew to colonize all eight planets, but Renatasia IV remained one of the most artistic worlds, until the Empire invaded the system. (LCS)

Renatasia System

a system which existed outside the bounds of both the Old Republic and the Empire, it never really developed deep-space-faring technology. The system was made up of 8 planets surrounding a medium-sized yellow star. The Renatasians, being hardy stock, began on Renatasia III and Renatasia IV, and eventually colonized all eight, regardless of the heat or cold environments. Its inhabitants were happy in their isolation, until Osuno Whett and Vuffi Raa discovered the system. The Renatasians declared that Vuffi Raa was some form of god or deity, and immediately trusted him and Whett. Whett used this trust to his advantage, and planned to take control of the system and all of its resources for himself. When Whett reported the location of the system, the Imperial Navy stepped in and took over the system, killing nearly two-thirds of the Renatasians before declaring the system Imperialized. Whett and Vuffi Raa escaped, but the surviving Renatasians believed that Vuffi Raa was the cause of their destruction. Led by Klyn Shanga, a group of Renatasian vigilantes hunted down Vuffi Raa and Lando Calrissian, with the aid of Rokur Gepta. (LCF, LCM)

Renatasian

the human natives of the Renatasia System. (LCF)

Renatta Needle Ship

this swift racing ship was developed by Renatta Racing Systems during the last centuries of the Old Republic. Much of their power was derived from the use of Tobal lenses in the photon drive systems, a fact that also made the ships hard to maintain. The Tobal lens was dangerous to handle, and was extremely difficult to replace on the open market. Because of this, Renatta Racing System eventually went bankrupt. The needle ships, however, remained popular with collectors and racers, and commanded a high price if the Tobal lens was still intact. (TG)

Renatta Racing Systems

this corporation, active during the last decades of the Old Republic, produced some of the fastest needle ships in the galaxy. Unfortunately, their ships were quite complex to maintain, and the parts - such as a functioning Tobal lens - were difficult and expensive to come by. For these reasons, Renatta Racing Systems went broke. (TG)

Ren'bl Ettes

this was one of the largest cities found on the planet Almania. (EGP)

Ren-Cha, Gir Kybo

a short, overweight human, Kybo Ren was an infamous pirate captain who operated during the early days of the Empire. He had a long, dangling moustache and a small goatee beard. He and his pirates operated from the Tarnooga System, where Kybo Ren hid his flagship Demolisher until it was absolutely needed. His ambition was to acquire the wealth of the royalty from the planet Tammuz-an, and many of his pirate raids were aimed at Tammuz-an transports. When Kybo Ren and his pirates decided to attack the planet Tammuz-an outright, they found themselves in the midst of a power struggle between Zatec-Cha and Mon Julpa. Because of the efforts of C-3PO, Kybo Ren was captured by Mon Julpa and imprisoned. His former aide, Jyn Obah, later broke Kybo Ren out of prison. During the escape, Kybo Ren took princess Gerin hostage, and fled to Bogden. The Tammuz-an put aside their differences and sent a rescue mission to recover princess Gerin. Kybo Ren was again captured in the fighting, and returned to prison. (DCAR, SWDB)

Renci

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Rend 5

this world was plunged into a planet-wide famine more than twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. Jenna Zan Arbor developed a bio-engineered source of food which allowed the planet to recover. She didn't receive any compensation for her work, which angered her deeply. (EVE)

Rendala Estate

this was one of the largest, privately-owned estates located in the city of Mos Espa, on Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. Shortly after the Battle of Endor, the Rendala Estate went bankrupt, and was forced to close down. (TG)

Rendar, Dash

a mercenary friend of Lando Calrissian, Dash Rendar is a tall, lean human with red hair, green eyes, and pale skin. He attended the Acadmey on Carida, and was a year behind Han Solo. During his time at the Academy, his brother Stanton accidentally crashed a transport ship into one of Emperor Palpatine's Coruscant museums. The Emperor was extremely upset about the damage, and confiscated the Rendar family's wealth and holdings. They were banished from Coruscant, and Dash was expelled from the Academy. This left a bitter taste in Dash's mouth, and he turned to being a smuggler, thief, and card shark to make money. He helped the Alliance out by smuggling them food stores whenever possible. He helped Zak and Tash Arranda escape from the Star of Empire after it had been sabotaged by the Systems Infiltration Manager program. He once delivered food to the base on Hoth, and was about to leave when the Empire attacked. He flew one of the Alliance's modified T-47s against the Imperial AT-ATs during the Battle of Hoth, and was responsible for bringing one of the walkers down. He was able to flee the planet in the ensuing evacuation, but remained a smuggler rather than joining the Alliance outright. He returned a favor he owed to Lando by checking out the rumor that Boba Fett had stopped on Gall before delivering the frozen body of Han Solo to Jabba the Hutt. Having verified the rumor, he led the New Republic to the moon, but opted to stay out of the firefight. Fett managed to escape with Solo's body, but Dash continued to help the Republic. He was present when Luke Skywalker escaped from Jabba the Hutt's swoop gang on Tatooine, and later assisted in the rescue of Princess Leia Organa from Prince Xizor's palace on Coruscant. In the battle that raged following the rescue, Dash's starship, the Outrider was hit by a piece of Xizor's destroyed skyhook. The ship disintegrated, and it was believed that Dash perished in the crash. Rumors abound that he fled into hyperspace, not desiring any repayment or celebrity from the Alliance. Rendar showed up a few years later, having met the reprogrammed Guri on a backwater world known as Hurd's Moon. He recognized that the use of certain procedures would allow a human mind to live much longer than expected if it was placed in a droid body. Working with Guri, Dash adapted the entechment variation developed by the Ssi-ruu for use on humans, allowing the human mind to be stored in the computer center of a human-replica droid. Dash's brother, Stanton, was one of the first humans to undergo the treatment, and eventually took over the business. (SE, SSE, GOF10, SEE, SWDB, NEGC, SWI75)

Rendar, Stanton

this man was the brother of Dash Rendar. Jaina Solo discovered that Stanton was the brains behind the ODT company, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. After it was revealed that Moliere Cundertol had been exposed as an enteched mind in the body of a human-replica droid, Jaina followed Cundertol's trail to Onadax and the ODT company. There, she confronted Stanton about the dangers of the HRDs being produced by ODT. Stanton explained that he was only providing a service to his customers, and was not laible for what they after the modified entechment procedure was completed. He also revealed that he himself had undergone the procedure, and was living proof of its stability and effectiveness. Rather than have Jaina expose him, however, Stanton took his personal files and fled Onadax, but not before setting off a self-destruct sequence that destroyed the entire ODT complex. He had hoped to kill Jaina in the blast, but she too escaped. (SWI75)

Rendar, Stanton

this man was Dash Rendar's older brother. He was a pilot with the family shipping business, RenTrans, and often made runs to Coruscant during the early years of the New Order. Unfortunately for Dash and his family, it was Stanton's ship which suffered a catastrophic failure in its control systems. The ship crashed into one of Emperor Palpatine's private museums of Sith artifacts and lore. Stanton died in the crash, and the Rendar family was ostracized from Imperial favor. All of RenTrans' contracts with the Empire were terminated, and transferred to Xizor Transport Services. (SWDB)

Rendeel Industries

this corporation was one of the galaxy's largest producers of foodstuffs and starship consumables. They maintained a variety of production facilities in space, underwater, and on land. (HAS)

Rendezvous Point 4

this was the codename of the Alliance's secondary base on the planet Edan II. After the loss of Edan Base, Rendezvous Point 4 became the primary base of operations during the liberation of Edan II. (IAG)

Rendili

this planet is the site of the Rendili space construction center. The Victory-class Star Destroyer was built here, in the wake of the Clone Wars. It was during the height of the Clone Wars that the leadership of Rendili agreed to join the Confederacy of Independent Systems, and threatened to turn over their entire fleet of Dreadnaughts to the Separatists. Rendili's military leaders were formerly members of the Old Republic's military, and it was hoped that an agreement could be reached to keep the fleet from joining the Separatist armed forces. Jedi Master Plo Koon, Jedi Knight Anakin Skywalker, and Captain Jan Dodonna traveled to Rendili to try and reach such an agreement, but a mutiny aboard the Mersel Kebir led to a full-scale conflict. (SWSB, ISU, RDR)

Rendili Fleet Crisis

this was one of the major events that occurred during the height of the Clone Wars, shortly after the destruction of Honoghr's ecosystem. The conflict began when the government of Rendili declared its support for the Confederacy of Independent Systems, more than two years after the Battle of Geonosis. They had planned to turn their entire homeworld security fleet of Dreadnaughts over to the Separatists, an act that Supreme Chancellor Palpatine feared would provide the Separatists with a military advantage over the Old Republic. Thus, Jedi Masters Saesee Tinn and Plo Koon were dispatched to Rendili to prevent the defection of the Rendili fleet at any cost, including the utter destruction of the fleet. Captain Jace Dallin of the Rendili navy would have agreed to turn the fleet over to the Republic, but one of his junior officers led a mutiny. Mellor Yago managed to gain control of the fleet for a brief time, but the arrival of Separatist forces only gave the Republic's warships a reason to begin firing. In a brief exchange, many of the Dreadnaughts were disabled. Yago attempted to execute a linked jump into hyperspace, but a daring mission by Anakin Skywalker disabled Yago's flagship. Anakin's mission provided enough cover to allow Obi-Wan Kenobi and Quinlan Vos to rescue Plo Koon and Jace Dallin, and the Separatist forces in orbit around Rendili were defeated. The Rendili fleet was then surrendered to the Republic. The outcome notwithstanding, Chancellor Palpatine saw the possible defection of the Rendili fleet as a dangerous possibility for the Republic, and pushed for legislation that would bring every Republic world's home fleet under the direct command of the Republic itself. (YDR, RDR)

Rendili R/M Facility 4

the Empire's largest operative deepspace dock, it had 125 service bays which could each hold a Strike-class cruiser. These bays are each modular, and can be combined to form larger service bays capable of holding torpedo spheres. (ISB)

Rendili StarDrive

this starship manufacturing company can trace its origins back to the founding of the Old Republic. It had a mediocre existence until it was chosen to build the Victory-class Star Destroyer and Dreadnaught-class space cruiser. Since then, Rendili has spent much of its time designing new capital ship designs, but nothing as popular as these designs. Rendili was one of the original Signatory Sponsors of the Corporate Sector Authority. (SWSB, DFR, EGV, CSA)

Rendor's Riders

this was one of the Alliance troops which participated in the battles to control Kwymar Sector during the Galactic Civil War. (MB)

Rendrake, Ander

this man served as the communications officer aboard the Star Destroyer Vendetta, during the Galactic Civil War. He attended the Imperial Academy, and was two classes behind Han Solo. He and Solo became friends, as both shared an independent streak. Unlike Solo, Rendrake completed his training and remained with the Empire, although his good-hearted nature was sorely tested by Imperial doctrine. Eventually, Rendrake decided to defect to the Alliance. He was asked, and agreed, to return to Imperial service and act as a deep-cover agent. Rendrake developed a kind of black market aboard the Vendetta, providing those luxuries most officers and crews couldn't find in their ration kits. With this network of friends, Rendrake learned a great deal about the ship's movements and missions, and relayed this information to the Alliance. (CRO)

Rendric

this independent spacer was one of the first to discover that the Empire was flooding the Outer Rim Territories with Viper probe droids, in the wake of the Battle of Yavin. He reported it on many of the newsnets, and even went so far as to shoot down Vipers and provide them to the Alliance for bounties. (FTD)

Renegade

originally known as the Freedom's Messenger, this corvette was damaged during the Battle of Ord Torrenze. The wreck was later recovered by the Empire and outfitted for use in battle, and renamed the Renegade. It was assigned to the 15th Deep Core Reserve Fleet under the command of Kentor Sarne, who later stole the ship for his own small fleet when he fled to Kal'Shebbol after the Battle of Endor. The New Republic later took control of the ship and renamed it the FarStar. The ship had been extensively reworked by the Empire, including the addition of new sublight drives and a modular hangar bay designed to hold TIE Interceptors. (DARK)

Renegade

this was the independent freighter whose captain made regular runs to deliver atmospheric gases to Kon Uuln. (WOTC)

Renegade

this heavy blaster pistol was produced by SoroSuub during the last years of the New Order. Developed from the original plans of the Calban Model X, the Renegade was touted as the most powerful heavy blaster on the market, until BlasTech produced its T-6 Thunderer. (GUN, AEG)

Renegade Flight

the escort squadron which accompanied the Alliance supply ships to Hoth, Renegade Flight was under the command of Commander Narra when it was ambushed near Derra IV. (ESBR, OWS)

Renegade Leader

this was Commander Narra's callsign prior to the Battle of Hoth. (ESBR)

Renegades

citizens of Coruscant who have gone underground, living by stealing and pillaging. They are in constant battle with the Scavs. (DE1)

Renegades

this was the name used to describe those Kilian Rangers who succumbed to the Dark Side of the Force. (RESB)

Renegg

this planet was the primary world in the Renegg System, and was the site of an Imperial base during the Galactic Civil War. It was chosen for its proximity to the Kuat System, and the fleet stationed there was in place to defend any attack on the Kuat Drive Yards. The Renegg System also served as a staging area for starship traffic which was outbound from the Kuat Freight Port. (SWJ9, PSPG)

Renei

this young Melida was the child of Quintama and Pinani. Renei was killed in battle during the Twenty-Second Battle of Zehava. (DOD)

Renek

this was one of the more common surnames used by the Duros people. Like all such names, Renek was used only for official business, to indicate one individual from another when in the presence of non-Duros. This archaic name referred to a male leader or king. (GCG)

Renerdat

this man was the Administrator of mining operations for Karflo Corporation during the height of the New Order. Renerdat hoped to mine the poisonous world of Sevetta for liquid metals, making a profit by collecting already-molten forms of raw materials. He was thwarted in his efforts when the scientist DeSelvaine discovered the existence of the Polydroxol species in the molten lakes of metals. It was rumored that Renerdat, and all the personnel aboard the Karflo research station he commanded, was killed when Polly - DeSelvaine's Polydroxol test subject - escaped from the station. (SWJ12)

Renewal

the process by which the Syndicat that controlled the planet Phindar could wipe clean the memories of a Phindian, leaving them without any idea of who they were or where they came from. This process was used to eliminate any Phindians who posed a threat to the Syndicat's control of the planet. Sometimes, the memory-wiped Phindian was placed on another planet, and the Syndicat would bet on how long they could survive. Sometimes, just to be cruel, the Syndicat would release the "renewed" Phindian on Phindar, and they would be unable to find their way home. (HP)

Renewal

the Ssi-ruuvi process by which a human is cleansed of any resistance to the aliens, and in which new thoughts and emotions are implanted. (TB)

Renewal Ceremony

this Gupin ceremony celebrated the rebirth of their spirit, and signified the point at which most young Gupin received their wings. The Guniepal Chest is opened during the Renewal Ceremony, providing the life-energy necessary to fly and change shape. (ECAR)

Renforia

this planet was the site of an Alliance base prior to the Battle of Yavin. Note that this planet might also be known as Renforra. (CCG, SWJ4)

Renforra

this planet was the site of an Alliance base, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Note that this planet might also be known as Renforia. (SWJ4, CCG)

Renhoek

a transport ship used by the Alliance to assist the Stimsenji'kat in recovering the contents of the Xi. cargo ships. This is a reference to Ren Hoek, the chihuahua featured in Nickelodeon's Ren & Stimpy cartoon. (XW)

Renik

a legendary ritual performed by an unverified race called the Delorf, renik was performed to cleanse the hostility and treachery from a villainous person. Once the ceremony was completed, the person was a member of the Delorf race in mind, if not in body. (ISB)

Renik

this Imperial Intelligence counterintelligence agency was an instrumental part of the Death-Hunter project. This was due mainly to the influence of Moff Jesco Comark, who took control of the agency after being ousted from the governorship of Chandrila. Comark redirected the funds which should have maintained Renik into his pet project, the Death-Hunter cyborg. Renik personnel were used to kidnap the various human subjects required to create the lethal cyborgs. (SWJ9)

Renikco

this legitimate front was used by the Empire on Jaemus. Renikco ostensibly was a starship maintenance operation, but the Empire was using Renikco to modify Plexus courier droids to serve as transport modules for Death-Hunter cyborgs. (SWJ9)

Renillis System

this star system was under Imperial control during the Galactic Civil War. (GG11)

Renkel, Zazana

this woman, living on Tarhassan during the years leading up to the Clone Wars, fell in love with Edbit Teeks. Despite his work for the Old Republic's Intelligence agency, Teeks also fell in love with Zazana. His sudden disappearance took the Republic by surprise, and the rookie agents dispatched to rescue him set out to locate Zazana for questioning. The team, led by Cherek Tuhm, latched onto the possibility that Zazana might have betrayed him, and brought her in for questioning. Their bureaucratic style grated on everyone's nerves, especially Joram Kithe and Mapper Gann, who quickly understood that Zazana was innocent. In an effort to get the team back on track, Joram and Mapper agreed to "eliminate" Zazana after interrogating her further. They both agreed to drug Zazana and leave her in a remote location to recover, then set out to locate Teeks themselves. (SWI73)

Renko Losa

this was the name of a noted individual from the Nautolan race. (UANT)

Renkov

this was Darnov's alias when he accompanied Bria Tharen aboard the Queen of Empire. Renkov was Bria Lavval's manager. (RD)

Renliss Bounty Hunters Guild

led by the sister team of Jalindas and Gratina Renliss, this guild only accepted female members. (GG10)

Renliss, Gratina

this woman was one of the two sisters who founded the Renliss Bounty Hunters Guild. The sisters were part of an Imperial deep-cover security team, until their cover was broken and the band assaulted by Alliance forces. The Renliss sisters left for dead - their primarily male leaders fleeing before they could be killed themselves - and Jalindas was forced to drag Gratina out of the battle alone. A female bounty hunter found them and agreed to help them. They survived until the Alliance forces were called to another battle, and made their way back to civilized space. The sisters changed their names and started their guild, attracting only female hunters. The Empire eventually discovered their true identities, but chose to employ them as hunters rather than prosecute them for desertion. Gratina maintained a staunch vigil over her sister's life, taking it as a personal mission to hunt down anyone who threatened Jalindas' life. (GG10)

Renliss, Jalindas

this woman, along with her sister Gratina, founded the Renliss Bounty Hunters Guild. The sisters were part of an Imperial deep-cover security team, until their cover was broken and the band assaulted by Alliance forces. The Renliss sisters left for dead - their primarily male leaders fleeing before they could be killed themselves - and Jalindas was forced to drag Gratina out of the battle alone. A female bounty hunter found them and agreed to help them. They survived until the Alliance forces were called to another battle, and made their way back to civilized space. The sisters changed their names and started their guild, attracting only female hunters. The Empire eventually discovered their true identities, but chose to employ them as hunters rather than prosecute them for desertion. Jalindas remained bitter toward the Imperial officers who abandoned them, and never forgave the Empire for the loss of her right eye in the battle. She had a cybernetic replacement put in to maximize her senses. (GG10)

Renlo

this man was known as "Solo's Bane" to his companions on Selenius VII. A moderately-skilled bounty hunter, Renlo decided that he was going to capture Han Solo and return him to Jabba the Hutt for the bounty on his head. Renlo spent all his credits on a new ship, advanced weapons and technology, and even private combat instructions. In the end, however, his technology was no match for Solo's own skills. Renlo returned to Selenius VII without his ship, and bloodied and battered from battle. His friends jokingly called him "Solo's Bane" from that point on. (GG10)

Renna

this stocky, well-muscled woman served the Alliance as a member of Red Hand Squadron. (RD)

Renna

this female Sullustan owned and operated Renna's Transport Service, based in Gadrin on the planet Cularin, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Note that the official Wizards of the Coast Living Force website indicates that Renna was a Rodian. (EOS, WOTC)

Renna Strego

this smuggler captain owned the Star Traveler, and was based on Nar Shaddaa during the early years of the New Order. (THG)

Renna's Transport Service

this shipment and transportation service was based out of the city of Gadrin, on the planet Cularin, during the last years of the Old Republic. It was owned and operated by the female Sullustan Renna. RTS was the subject of a corporate and financial investigation shortly after the Battle of Naboo, as its business grew wildly, while other transport agencies showed less than a fifth the growth during a two-year periods. The Cularin authorities would not implicate RTS and Renna as being in collusion with Nirama or the Metatharen Cartel, but demanded that RTS open up their books and let the financial facts speak for themselves. (EOS, WOTC)

Rennek

this was one of the most common male names among the Corellian population. (GMR9)

Rennek

this dark-skinned human was Jabba the Hutt's nerf-herder at his Tatooine palace. Despite his scruffy appearance, Rennek was a skilled soldier and a combat expert. (CCG7)

Rennet

a small creature often preserved in sweet liquid and served as a candied delicacy. (TJP)

Renneyn

this was a noted Clawdite vaper, best remembered for taking command of the Clawdite armies and overthrowing the Zolandars after the New Republic tried to establish a peace between them. (GMR10)

Rennik

this man owned and operated the freight hauler Worldhopper with the help of his twin sons. The boys, however, were more interested in becoming fighter pilots, and didn't listen to everything Rennik ordered. He continually had to keep after the boys in order to keep the ship working. Rennik was contacted by the droids Whistler and Gate, through a series of remote contacts, in order to get the droids from their location in Imperial space to Oradin, on the planet Brentaal. The droids escaped the compound held by Ysanne Isard and Broak Vessery, and were trying to reach the Grand Oradin Hotel and meet up with

Talon Kaarde. Rennik's boys welded flags to the droids and used them for target practice during the trip. Whistler stored digitized images of the two boys for later use, as the targets of one of the many practical jokes it had learned while serving with Corran Horn in the Corellian Security Force. (IR)

Rennimdius B'thog Indriummsegh

this former leader of the Elomin Council served as a Senator during the days of the Old Republic. He objected to Herylcha Baakos' order to define above-ground territories for the Elom race, since the Eloms dwelt underground. (GG12)

Renno, Dav-Wes

this Jedi Master served the Order as a spokesman to the various news agencies that served Coruscant and the Old Republic, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Rennokk

this was the innermost of two moons which orbited the planet Cularin. It was a molten wasteland, with lava seas broken by magnificent spires of rocks. From space, Rennokk seemed to glow with the heat of its molten surface. There were many rumors which suggested that a lifeform lived in the lava seas, but no information has substantiated this rumor. (LFC)

Rennta, Egalla

this woman served as the media relations representative for Xizor Transport Services, during the height of the New Order. (SWJ14)

Renoren, Kylie

this woman was a field scientist who was noted for her work with the Kamarians, during the height of the New Order. (EGA)

Ren-Quarr

this Quarren was a frequent patron of the Outlander Club, during the years surrounding the Battle of Geonosis. Ren-Quar was distinguished from other Quarren by his facial tentacles, which were grooming in such a way as to curl upward at the ends. (OWS, SWI75)

Renquet

this Imperial Moff was so impressed with the cooking of Vimran Trel and the service aboard the Star Destroyer Adjudicator, that he requested the starship be promoted to be the flagship of his sector fleet. (CRO)

Rens

this Imperial Academy cadet was a contemporary of Tycho Celchu, and was at the Prefsbelt IV academy when Celchu laid out Cadet Laine. Soontir Fel ordered Rens and Biggs Darklighter to take Laine to the infirmary. (MBF) this former Imperial Navy Captain joined Prince-Admiral Krennel, when the rogue warlord broke away from Imperial service and took control of the Ciutric Hegemony. However, when Krennel ordered him to destroy a village on Liinade III - the home of a person who attempted to assassinate Krennel - Rensen refused. He felt the loss of life was too severe a punishment. Krennel disagreed, and had Rensen executed. (IR)

Rensen

Renspecs

an Alliance freighter destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Rentalles

this planet was once the site of an Imperial base. The Alliance planned to attack the base, but learned that it had been deserted. The Alliance's High Command eventually sent a team to investigate the abandoned base, under the command of Hov Windell. (MBC)

Rentallian Cairnhound

see Cairnhound. (MBC)

Renthal, Drea

this woman was one of the most influential pirate captains who worked the trade during the early years of the New Order. She was hired by the Hutts to assist in the defense of the moon after Moff Sarn Shild decided to level the civilization there as an example to other smugglers. Although the ultimate outcome of the battle went in favor of the residents of Nar Shaddaa, Drea's ship Renthal's Fist was destroyed in the combat. She later hooked up with Lando Calrissian, and the two traveled as pirates for a while aboard her new ship, Renthal's Vengeance. Lando parted ways with her shortly before the great sabacc tournament on Coud City, claiming that pirate life was too "coarse" for his tastes. Drea eventually had the Renthal's Fist rebuilt, although it was never the same ship again. She used an asteroid to drag the Queen of Empire out of hyperspace shortly after Boba Fett captured Bria Tharen and Lando Calrissian. In a brilliant set of negotiations, Drea bargained for their freedom and won it from the notorious bounty hunter by paying Bria's bounty from the spoils of the Queen of Empire. (THG, RD)

Renthal's Fist

this CR-90 corvette was Drea Renthal's command ship. It was one of the many casualties of the Battle of Nar Shaddaa, but was eventually refitted for use. (THG, RD)

Renthal's Vengeance

this Carrack-class cruiser was restored to service by Drea Renthal, after the loss of the Renthal's Fist. (RD)

Renthor

this Corellian thug was a student of an ancient Force-sensitive who tended to twist the Jedi Code to his own designs. Like his fellow students Kym and Ulbert, Renthor had no connection to the Force, but adhered loyally to his teacher's twisted version of the Code. His favorite tenet was "Peace through pieces," which was supported by the law "There is not motion, there is only pieces." Renthorn and his buddies lived aboard the Mynock 7 Space Station, and often harassed the patrons of the Farrimmer Café. (SWJ11)

RenTrans

this shipping corporation was a major rival of Xizor Transport Services, during the Galactic Civil War. RenTrans was owned and operated by the family of Dash Rendar, and serviced much of the Core Worlds during the height of the New Order. However, during the height of the New Order, Stanton Rendar's transport ship suffered a catastrophic loss of control systems while in orbit over Coruscant. Stanton could not handle the ship, which crashed into one of Emperor Palpatine's museums. The museum held a wealth of ancient Sith artifacts and lore, and the Emperor was very angry. He terminated all relationships with RenTrans, black-listed the Rendar family, and transferred all shipping accounts with RenTrans over to Xizor Transport Systems. (SESB, SWDB)

Renxis Dielle

this Padawan Jedi apprentice, along with Jedi Knights Plessus Ghon, Nygreena Clo and Ixian Rovieda, was killed on Kabal during a series of riots broke out when the Trade Federation overtaxed the planet for shipping. The taxation occurred just before the onset of the Clone Wars, and led to massive food shortages among the Kamarian people. The Jedi had been called in to quell the riots, when a fleet of supply ships loyal to Count Dooku and the Separatists began to drop food supplies to the populace. A scramble to obtain food ensued, and the Jedi were killed while trying to maintain the peace. (HNN5)

Renz

this Imperial Lieutenant was the leader of one of the Empire's finest legions of troops. He was always on the look-out for rebellious activity. His troops were placed at the disposal of Colonel Dyer during the garrisoning of the forest moon of Endor, while the second Death Star was under construction. Renz's forces captured Han Solo and his strike team after the Alliance commandos had infiltrated the shield bunker, but they were later captured by the Ewoks in a surprise attack. (CCG10)

Renz, Tyneir

a native of Jiaan, this Jedi Knight held the rank of Colonel in the Old Republic military, and was a veteran of the Clone Wars. He had been a student of anthropology, and studied at Alderaan University, where he met his wife. When Emperor Palpatine rose to power, Renz went into hiding with his family. He also joined the Alliance, staying one step ahead of the Empire while helping to bring about its downfall. Renz later assisted his daughter, Padija Anjeri, during her archeological excavations. He still carried his lightsaber, using it to protect his daughter. He was injured when Imperial forces tried to block Padija's attempts to return the Nercathi clan's crystallite skulls to them, but soon recovered. (SWJ12)

Renzii

this skinny man worked as a waiter at the café owned by Didi Oddo and his daughter, Astri, some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. (DH)

Reopi

this was a desert world located in the Inner Sphere. (COG)

Reopi Sand Crusher

this predator was native to the equatorial deserts of the planet Reopi. (COG)

Rep Been

this respected member of the Gungan military served as part of the Rep Council, which worked for Boss Nass as the ruling body of Otoh Gunga. He was also responsible for maintaining the records of Gungan history, as well as preserving the ancient records of Gungan civilization. Because of his position in Gungan society, and for personal reasons, Rep Been chose not to participate in the competitions of the Festival of Warriors. (YJC1, IG1, E1A9, E1A11)

Rep Council

usually referred to as the Gungan High Council, this was the governmental body which supported the Boss of the Gungans, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (E1A9, GBC)

Rep Slarm

this Gungan, one of the many who served on Boss Nass' Rep Council, was known as the best bubble wort engineer in Otoh Gunga. (SON)

Rep Teers

this Gungan served on the Rep Council, the governmental body that ruled the underwater city of Otoh Gunga, serving under Boss Nass. Teers was appointed to her position by Boss Nass, and was in charge of all the city's power supplies. (IG1, E1A9, OWS)

Repea

this planet was located near the Cron Drift. The government of the planet quickly capitulated to the Empire during the years following the Clone Wars. However, after the Crimson Aces disrupted the relationship between Repea and the Empire, the Imperial forces in the area decided that Repea was actually a hotbed of Alliance activity. The planet was bombarded from orbit, with many cities being destroyed as a reminder of the Empire's power and might. (GMR9)

Repeater 3Z

one of Merr-Sonn's heavy field blasters. (HTSB)

Repeater Display Panel

an old display tool. (DFR)

Repeater Rifle

a blaster weapon used by stormtroopers, the repeater rifle can fire a single energy bolt or three bolts at once, in a triangle pattern. (DF)

Repellent Signal Emitter

this was a device, developed by the Trade Federation, that sent out an encrypted signal to force attack droids to stand down in its presence. Whenever a being used the emitter, the droids - such as the Fastlach-class defense droids - were programmed to view the being as a non-threat and not fire on them. (TAE)

Repka De

this Jedi Master was an instructor in lightsaber combat more than 800 years before the Battle of Endor, when Yoda was still a Jedi Knight. Master Repka De stressed the importance of accepting defeat, especially if the cost of winning was greater than the cost of losing. "It is better to lose well than to win badly," Master De was quoted as saying, "and it is always better to end a duel peacefully than to win or lose." (PJSB)

Replar Splint

this medical device was used to immobilize a broken limb. (FOP)

Replar-640

this was a sophisticated repulsorlift engine produced by zZip Product Concepts during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GFT)

Replihide

a synthetic furniture covering which resembles a variety of animal skins. (TFNR)

Repli-Limb

this was the brand name of BioTech's line of prosthetic replacements. They are sold in template form, with a metal cap that can be fitted to the recipient's body. Neural jacks must be grown for the recipient as part of the operation which "installs" the prosthesis, and they are created in a rejuvenation tank. The entire operation proceeds within the tank, with periodic checks to verify the acceptance of the prosthesis. Synthetic flesh is later grown over the prosthesis, using actual genetic material from the recipient. In addition to hands, arms, and legs, BioTech also produces eyes, ears, hearts, and lungs as part of the Repli-Limb line. (CFG)

Repliwood

this synthetic material could be made to resemble virtually any natural wood. (WSV)

Repness

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Repness, Atton

this New Republic Colonel was in command of a starfighter training group known as the Screaming Wookiees, but was also involved in the selling of stolen starship and parts on the black market. He would use the pilots with the least potential to help him steal ships, promising them a chance to redeem themselves if they would "lose" a starfighter on a mission. His team would later recover the ship and sell it on the black market, after the New Republic listed it missing in action. If the pilot proved to be incorruptible, Repness would either blackmail them into his plans or threaten them with expulsion. If they still refused to help, Repness would backdate progress reports which would indicate the pilot's inability to adapt to the Republic's regimens, and have the pilot ousted from any kind of service. He was also quite paranoid about being discovered, and scanned potential pilots with a comlink-like device that prohibited recording. He also used it when he was working alone, as he tended to talk in his sleep. He was Tyria Sarkin's commanding officer, and when she refused to be part of his plans, he got her blacklisted from the pilot ranks. She later joined Wraith Squadron, and told her comrades about Repness' schemes. This prompted Garik Loran and Ton Phanan to propose a plan to expose Repness to Wedge Antilles, who grudgingly agreed with their plan. They convinced Lara Notsil to be their "bait," but Lara - the former Gara Petothel - proved to be more skilled than they hoped. She stole much of Repness' own records after slicing into them, including the records of all the fighter pilots he had "washed out." She then sent an anonymous message to General Cracken, detailing Repness' entire operation. Repness caught her, and would have beat her senseless if Cracken's forces hadn't arrived to arrest him. In the end, Repness was relieved of duty and brought up on several charges. As an ironic twist, Lara was assigned Repness' X-Wing and his astromech, which she named Tonin. (WS, IF) a Nharwaak container group destroyed by the Empire when it raided the Nharwaak base. (TIE)

Repo

Repose

this was one of the many meditative positions used by the Jedi Knights of the Old Republic. In the Repose position, a Jedi sat on the floor with their legs crossed and knotted, the ankles over the thighs. The back was kept straight, and the hands rested palms-up on the knees. Breathing was essential to maintaining the meditative state, with air being drawn in through the right nostril and expelled through the left. (MBS)

Representative Council of Citizens

this was the name of the planetary government which provided leadership for the planet Aargau, during the height of the New Order. (PH)

Reprive

this was one of the Alliance's medical frigates. It was used to support the Talasea base established for Rogue Squadron. (XWN)

Reprisal

this ship was a Dreadnaught-class warship serving under the Warlord Zsinj, during the early years of the New Republic. It participated in the protection of Levian Two, and was later the point ship in the defense of Comkin Five. However, the ship took a heavy amount of proton torpedo fire from Wraith Squadron, and was destroyed in the battle. Squeaky, the quartermaster droid of Wraith Squadron, remembered that the Reprisal had also been part of the Imperial fleet stationed near Kessel, during the last years of the New Order. (SOC)

Reprise

this Guardian-class light cruiser was owned by House Pelagia. It came to the rescue of the Bright Seeker, which was under attack by the Knife's Edge while trying to recover the hibernating bodies of Trad and Verinia Paddox. (TSIA)

REPSUB Carrier

produced by Aratech, this repulsor-equipped submersible vehicle was designed to move troops into position in areas surrounded by water. It required a pilot and co-pilot to operate, and could insert up to twenty troops into a water-filled area. The REPSUB was armed with a light laser cannon. (TSIA)

Reptile Bird

a creature native to Yavin 4. (HTF)

Reptilian Flier

this species of reptavian was native to the planet Dathomir. (GQRG)

Reptoid

this scaled, cold-blooded creature was native to the planet Gabredor III, and was used as a mount by the Karazak Slavers who maintained a transfer station there. They ran on two legs, and stood slightly taller than a man. (TFE)

Reptoid

this was the New Republic term used to describe those members of the Chazrach race which were enslaved by the Yuuzhan Vong and used as killing machines. (WOA13)

Republic Armed Forces

this was the generic term used to describe the collection of military forces mustered by the Old Republic for participation in the Clone Wars. Included in the Republic Armed Forces was the Grand Army of the Republic and the Jedi Knights. (LFCW)

Republic Bureau of Exploration and Colonization

this branch of the Old Republic was responsible for locating and cataloguing new star systems for use by the Republic. Any new star system documented by an explorer or scout was required to be validated by the Bureau, in case a prior claim was already in force. (LFC)

Republic Charter

this was the name given to the legal documents created by the Old Republic during the early stages of the Clone Wars, giving individual systems the right to defend themselves under the auspices of the Republic. This helped the Republic by ensuring that star systems would remain loyal despite the lure of the Separatists, while it allowed Republic military resources to be moved into important battles zones while local militia protected their sovereign systems. (LFCW)

Republic City

the ancient name of Imperial City, used during the 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. It remained in use for many centuries, but was later renamed Galactic City. This name held until Senator Palpatine instituted the New Order, and renamed it Imperial City. (FNU, TPM)

Republic Civil Liberties Union

this civil rights union was the largest of its kind during the last decades of the Old Republic. The RCLU spent much of its time confronting the growing xenophobia that emerged during the leadership of Chancellor Palpatine, in the years following the Battle of Naboo. (HNN5)

Republic Constitution

see Galactic Constitution \(VD3\)

Republic Core Base

Republic Correctional Officers' Union

this union was formed by the prison guards and corrections officers who worked for the Galactic Correctional Authority during the last decades of the Old Republic. (BH)

Republic Cruiser

manufactured by the Corellian Engineering Corporation, this ship was used by the Old Republic as the basis for its fleet of consular ships. The Republic Cruiser, which measured 115 meters in length and required a crew of eight to control, was built from the same basic design as the Corellian Space Cruiser. Note that The New Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels indicates that the Republic Cruiser is the Consular-class Space Cruiser. Its forward section resembled that of the later Corellian Gunship, while its aft section was dominated by three Dyne 577 radial atomizing sublight engines. This engine array gave the ship a top speed of 900 kilometers per hour in atmosphere. It moved through hyperspace with the help of a Longe Voltrans CD-3.2 tri-arc hyperdrive. Being designed as a purely diplomatic vessel, the ship had no weaponry, but did have 9 escape pods to handle its maximum of sixteen passengers. The communications array that was used on these ships dominated the aft section of the fuselage, and was capable of transmitting and receiving signals from other ships or ground-based installations, in thousands of languages recognized by the Old Republic. However, as the Clone Wars began to drag on, many of these cruisers were refitted with weaponry and armor plating to ensure their passengers could safely travel across the galaxy. (SW1, X1, OWS, SOG, TCG5, NEGV)

Republic Day

this was a major holiday celebrated on Coruscant during the last decades of the Old Republic. (COD)

Republic Defense Procurement Plan

initiated seven years before the Battle of Naboo, this Old Republic action called for the increase and/or modification of the Republic's warfleet. (RP)

Republic Diplomatic Corps

this body of the Old Republic was concerned with identifying and documenting the various cultural and societal policies of the member races of the Republic. (SON)

Republic Diplomatic Services Database

the Republic Diplomatic Corps of the Old Republic stored detailed information on the key diplomatic figures from every member world in this database. (SON)

Republic Enforcement Datacore

this huge computer system was where all legal bounties are posted for the taking, during the height of the Old Republic. Although bounty hunting was considered more or less illegal, it still had to conform to the laws of the Republic. (HNN4)

Republic Engineering Corporation

this starship manufacturer was founded in the early years of the New Republic, and was backed by several prominent Republic corporations. Their first design was the shieldship, used successfully by Lando Calrissina at Nkllon. Following the defeat of grand Admiral Thrawn, Republic Engineering been concentrating on new and useful technologies for starfighters and airspeeders. They were also responsible for the design and manufacture of the "new class" starships used by the New Republic, including the Sacheen-class escort and the Agave-class picket ship. (HTTE, COTF, EGV, CTD)

Republic Executive Building

this immense building, located on the planet Coruscant during the last decades of the Old Republic, was used by many Senators and politicians for their residences and offices. The edifice was distinguished by its many towers, rising high above the cityscape of Galactic City. (AOTCN)

Republic Expeditionary Medical Force

this was the name given to the medical branch of the Grand Army of the Republic, providing hospital facilities for the clone troopers during the height of the Clone Wars. (MJH)

Republic Fleet Systems

this Old Republic starship manufacturer was founded during the midpoint of the Old Republic. Its primary mission was to produce long-range starships to help combat the rise of Sith magic and violence in distant corners of the galaxy. RFS served the Old Republic for 15,000 years until it was disbanded by decree of the Senate just prior to Palpatine's rise to power. (EGV)

Republic Historical Database

this extensive database was maintained by the Old Republic as a way to document the incredibly vast and complex histories of the various civilizations of the galaxy. (SON)

Republic HoloCommunications Commission

this branch of the Old Republic was established during the last decades of the Old Republic to ensure that shadowfeeds and other illegal HoloNet services were quickly stopped from transmitting their signals. (SWI71)

Republic HoloNet News

this news agency was among the many who clamored for data on the planet Coruscant, during the height of the Clone Wars. (SWI81)

Republic Intelligence

this branch of the Old Republic and its military was assigned to monitor the galaxy for vital information. During the onset of the Clone Wars, Republic Intelligence also investigated the value of the clone troopers produced on Kamino for the Army of the Republic. (SWI65)

Republic Measures and Standards Bureau

based in the city of Mennaa, on Mrlsst, this was the Old Republic organization charged with controlling all systems of measurement throughout the galaxy. Their control included the maintenance of the galactic calendar and time systems. (HNN4)

Republic Military Benefit Association

this independent association was charged by the Old Republic with making sure that the various troops deployed during the Clone Wars were adequately compensated for their efforts. Among the many activities undertaken by the association was the lining up of concerts and shows by HoloNet Entertainment. (MJH)

Republic Mobile Surgical Unit

this was the name given to the field hospitals that were established by the Grand Army of the Republic, during the Clone Wars. Each RMSU - Rimsoo, for short - was staffed by military officers, surgeons, medics, nurses, and their supporting personnel, creating a complete hospital location that could be moved close to a battlefield. The primary mission of each RMSU was to patch up the Republic's casualties of battle, in an effort to keep attrition to a minimum in the face of the massive and easy-to-replace troops of battle droids that fought for the Confederacy of Independent Systems. As the name suggested, each RMSU could be packed up and ready to move within an hour's notice, in case the tide of the battle indicated the unit's current position might be overrun. (MBS)

Republic Navy Transmission System

this was the proprietary communications network developed for use by the Old Republic's fleet of starships. Early R2-series droids were given programming which allowed them to communicate with the RNT system, so that the astromechs could work with Republic starships. With the advent of the New Order, the RNT became the Imperial Navy Transmission System. (SWJ7)

Republic News

this news agency was active during the Old Republic days, but was stripped down and reorganized to suit the needs of Emperor Palpatine and the New Order. It was then renamed Imperial HoloVision. (GG9)

Republic Office of Criminal Investigation

this branch of the Old Republic investigated crimes and infractions which affected the activities of the Republic. (SWI67)

Republic Office of Xenosociology

this branch of the Old Republic (known as ROX) was concerned with the identification and understanding of the various sociological characteristics of the Republic's constituent races. (SON)

Republic Outland Regions Security Force

this military force was commissioned by the Old Republic, in an effort to establish some form of law and order in the Outer Rim. A division of the Republic Security Force, the RORSF was formed shortly after the Battle of Naboo, after the reports from Tatooine from Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi. Wilhuff Tarkin started out his military career with the RORSF, and served as a Commander during the period shortly after the Battle of Naboo. (RP, BH)

Republic Peace Officer

see Republican Guard (SWRPG2)

Republic Plaza

this vast, open-air walkway surrounded the Senate Rotunda, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (E3N)

Republic Registry of Corporations

this registry, formed by the New Republic, documented those companies which upheld the right of the New Republic to control the galaxy, and agreed to abide by the Republic's leadership. Corporations applying were often scrutinized for Imperial involvements, in order to ensure that the scattered Imperial forces were not inadvertently armed with weapons and supplies. (POT)

Republic Scout Service

this exploration outfit was funded by the Old Republic, many centuries before the advent of the New Order. (PG3)

Republic Scout Service Database

this immense data repository was created and maintained by the Republic Scout Service, and contained information on virtually every known settlement in the galaxy. Information was kept on full planetary civilizations as well as mining outposts and small colonies. (SON)

Republic Security Force

this was the primary police force maintained by the Old Republic. The mission of the RSF was to assist local jurisdictions in investigating crimes that affected multiple systems, to eliminate any legal wrangling that would impede a swift resolution to a crime. (BH)

Republic Senate

see Galactic Senate \(E3N\)

Republic Shipyards

this branch of Republic Fleet Systems created many well-armed starship designs during the last century of the Old Republic, including the Jedi Justice Cruiser. (PJSB)

Republic Sienar Systems

this Old Republic starfighter manufacturing company was very successful, having been founded more than fifteen thousand years before the Galactic Civil War. It was the first of the major corporations later owned by Santhe/Sienar Technologies, and was the parent company of Sienar Design Systems. Some of the corporation's designs and ideologies led to the production of the first of the TIE Fighters. When Emperor Palpatine took control of the galaxy, RSS was nationalized and renamed Sienar Fleet Systems. (EGV, NEGW)

Republic Spacelane Bureau

this operating committee was formed during the Expansionist Period of the Old Republic, to ensure that hyperspace trade routes were all marked and easily accessible to space travellers. (PGT)

Republic Special Tactics Force

this elite military unit was part of the Old Republic's armed forces, and was the precursor of the Special Forces units of both the Alliance and the Empire. (RP)

Republic Tax Collection Agency

this Old Republic agency was charged with the daunting task of collection income tax from every wage-earning being in the galaxy. (HNN4)

Republic Xenological Database

this database was maintained by the Old Republic as a means to catalog the wide variety of sentient life in the galaxy. Each subdirectory in the database was set up to contain information on the physiological, societal, and cultural aspects of each race. It was tied to the Republic Xenosociological Database. (SON)

Republic Xenosociological Database

this database was maintained by the Old Republic as a means to catalog the communal and social characteristics of the sentient life in the galaxy. Each subdirectory in the database was set up to contain information on the social and personal aspects of each race. It was tied to the Republic Xenological Database. (SON)

Republican Guard

this is the name of the armed forces in charge of keeping the peace for the New Republic. (SOL)

Republican Security Organization

this was the primary security force established to protect the Galactic Senate of the Old Republic. In the wake of several terrorist attacks blamed on the Separatists, shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars, Chancellor Palpatine ordered sweeping changes in the RSO's membership, to root out any spies or double agents. (HNN5)

Republicanists

this was the name given to those Selonians who, during the rise of Thrackan Sal-Solo to power on the planet of Corellia, believed that the planetary repulsors should be used a bargaining chip in negotiations with the New Republic for Selonian sovereignty. They also hoped that they could persuade Han Solo, by rescuing him from Sal-Solo, to help them in these negotiations. Eventually, the part of the Absolutists in the Corellian Crisis allowed the Republicanists to achieve control of their homeworld, when the New Republic dissolved the Absolutists. The Republicanists then set to work to mend their relationship with those Selonians who supported the Sacorrian Triad. (AS, CCW)

Republic-class Cruiser

the Republic-class cruiser was developed and manufactured by Kuat Drive Yards during the early decades of the New Republic, just prior to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (Y, DW)

Republic-class Star Destroyer

this battle ship was a smaller version of the Imperial-class Star Destroyer, and was designed for use by the New Republic. It first saw duty during the latter stages of the Black Fleet Crisis and the battle against the Yevetha, although production was limited to a few ships. The Republic-class was designed to be the follow-up to the Victory-class destroyer, and was developed by Walex Blissex himself. They were designed to be cost-efficient replacements for the Imperial-class destroyer - two Republics could be manufactured for the cost of one Imperial, with twenty percent of the crew complement and twenty percent more firepower than the Imperial-I class destroyer. The Republic-class ship measured 1,250 meters in length, and was crewed by 8,168 crewers with 260 gunners and up to 3,200 troops. They were armed with 40 heavy turbolaser batteries, 40 heavy turbolaser cannons, 20 ion cannons, and 10 tractor beam projectors. It also transported a full wing of starfighters. (SOL, CTD)

Republicists

see Republicanists (CCW)

Republic's Return

this Alliance cruiser was part of the task force assigned to evacuate the personnel from the Massassi Base, following the Battle of Yavin. (SWJ11)

Repulse

this New Republic Defender-class assault carrier served under the flag of the Fifth Battle Group, and led the initial blockade of Doornik-319 during the Yevethan Purge. (SOL)

Repulse-Hand

this cybernetic prosthesis, manufactured by Control Zone, makes not pretense of being a real hand. It is a template which does not grow synthetic flesh, instead remaining metallic and mechanical. There are no nerve connections to the recipient's sensory systems, so there are no sensations transmitted to the brain. The hand is equipped with a repulsor-field generator which is used to parry weapons in melee combat. (CFG)

Repulsor

any anti-gravity device which uses electromagnetic force to levitate an object off the ground. It uses the available gravity as an opposing force, and actually pushes against that gravity. One of the primary sources of repulsor technology was the planet Bakura, which was usurped by the Empire about three years before the Battle of Endor. The Bakurans found ways to create repulsors of various sizes, and used them in chairs, cars, and cargo carriers. (SW, RPG, TB)

Repulsor Boots

this was the generic term for any footwear which came equipped with tiny repulsorlift engines, allowing the wearer to move through the air in short jumps. (RBJ)

Repulsor Chair

a piece of furniture built on the planet Bakura, a repulsor chair is a seat which has been equipped with a repulsorlift and stabilizers. (TB)

Repulsor Disk

a small, anti-gravity platform used to transport personal cargo around a small area. Developed on Bakura, these disks are pulled along by their owners via a short leash. (TB)

Repulsor Hitch

this device is a portable repulsor-field generator, which can lift up to 200 kilograms when attached to an object. This allows the user to move otherwise immobile objects with ease. (GG8)

Repulsor Scout

this small military speeder was built by Mekuun for the Empire. Armed with a single heavy repeating blaster, the Repulsor Scout required a pilot and could carry up to three troopers. It measured eight meters in length, had a flight ceiling of only two meters, and could attain speeds up to 300 kilometers an hour. (POM, GSE)

Repulsor-ball

this unusual form of weapon was created by Tig Fromm. It was essentially a sphere of self-contained repulsor energy, which exploded with devastating force when it reached its target. (EGD)

Repulsorbroom

this specialized broom used tiny repulsors to help trap and maneuver dust and debris into piles that could be vacuumed up. (JQ9)

Repulsor-chute

this ancient form of anti-gravity parachute was used as an escape mechanism in atmospheric ships. (FOSE)

Repulsor-compensator

a part of a starship's hyperdrive system. (DE2)

Repulsor-cruiser

a large, ground-based assault craft. (LCM)

Repulsorgrip

this piece of equipment controls the use of repulsor energy to maintain a vehicle's "grip" on the ground below it. They found widespread use on pod racers, which required a reliable method for maintaining proximity to the ground at high speeds. (RAC)

Repulsor-In

a form of obstacle used in swoopchasing, this large wall of solid material was covered with a repulsorfield that used artificial gravity to pull swoop racers toward it at an accelerated rate. The effect was not unlike being caught in a tractor beam. A racer had to let off the thrust and concentrate on guiding the swoop over the wall, or else be drawn into a crash. (BSS)

Repulsorlift

an anti-gravity device used to lift an object. (HTTE, JS)

Repulsorlight

this device is a light source attached to a small repulsorlift which can be used in places where light is needed but cannot be held in place. (JS)

Repulsor-Out

this swoopchase obstacle was the opposite of a Repulsor-In wall. Instead of using artificial gravity to draw a swoop racer toward the wall, a Repulsor-Out generated a field which repelled approaching racers. This meant that racers had to use their swoop's own acceleration to overcome the repulsing force in order to clear the wall. (BSS)

Repulsorsail

this unique implementation of repulsor technology was developed for ocean-going vessels more than 500 years before the Galactic Civil War. The sails of these vessels were woven with a network of tiny repulsorlift generators, which turned their anti-gravity fields perpendicular to the field of gravity. This caused pressure on the sails that was similar to the forces of wind, allowing a vessel to move about on the water with or without natural winds. (GMR7)

Repulsorsled

this is the generic name for any repulsorlift cargo transport. They are often nothing more than a flatbed with a control station at one end. (SWSB)

Repulsor-trip Mine

this form of detonation device is used against repulsorlift vehicles. The mine's trigger is set off by the presence of the repulsorlift field. (SWJ9)

Request for Privacy

this is a New Republic regulation which allows the owner of a planet to keep certain information out the Library of Systems database. The request is often granted whenever a planet or system contains a military installation or research facility. (GG8)

Requiem for Alderaan

a chronicle of the wonders of Alderaan, written by Hari Seldon after the destruction of the planet, which was her homeworld. (ISU)

Requiem Scenario

this X-Wing training scenario involves a recreation of the missions of the Redemption and the Korolev. It was given the name Requiem because very few trainees ever survived it. (XWN)

Requiem Squadron

this was the name of the experimental TIE Defender group led by Antar Roat, as part of Ysanne Isard's plans to infiltrate Ciutric and defeat Prince-Admiral Krennel. The squadron was made up of the surviving pilots of Rogue Squadron, piloting TIE Defenders supplied by Colonel Vessery. (IR)

Requilisant

this was the brand name of a medical supply. (FOP)

Requital

this Imperial Interdictor cruiser, under the command of Captain Voldt, intercepted the Messenger when it fled Coruscant on its way to Corialis. Taryn Clancy and Del Sato explained that they were making their normal courier run, but failed to elaborate on the presence of Jak Bremen. In the end, Voldt let them go. (TFE, SWJ7)

Rergo IV

this is a small power generator used by computer repair experts. It is small, but nonetheless useful for providing power to mem-stiks during transport. (CFG)

Reridan Reksiss

this being was one of the Old Republic's most popular holodrama actors, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

RES23

this Old Republic HoloNet channel was used to air a variety of entertainment, primarily dramas and stage plays. (HNN5)

Resch, Harkan

this man was a native of the planet Naboo, and owned a starship transport business on his homeworld during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. The invasion of Naboo by the Trade Federation and the subsequent battle that took place to break their blockade caused all manner of economic problems on Naboo, and Captain Resch was not immune to these effects. His business suffered greatly, and he was forced to sell his own ship, the Mystic Burn, in order to make ends meet. (GMR1)

Rescue

a group of Alliance Lambda-class shuttles which assigned to missions geared toward rescues and abductions. One of the group's first missions was to rescue a group of Sullustans captured as slaves by the Empire. (XW)

Rescue Riker

an Alliance Lambda-class shuttle group that docked with the Ars Opus and overtook the crew and captured the R2 units it carried. (XW)

Resdall Towers

this was one of the newest apartment buildings, erected on the planet Coruscant during the height of the New Order. The owners and builders of Resdall Towers claimed that it was one of the most secure buildings on the planet, boasting of the many security cameras and scanning devices which ensured only residents and their guests entered the building. (WOTC)

Reseda

this was the Fia word for the color green. (FH1)

Reseros Meh

this grumpy, female Chevin owned and operated Momma Reseros' Diner, located in Jugsmuk Station on the planet Gamorr. She didn't like the company of other Chevins, and cared little for most other races. Despite her gruff demeanor, Reseros was known as an excellent cook to the spacers who travel through Jugsmuk, and her mushrooms recipes were considered much better than standard Gamorrean fare. (SWJ14)

Resh

this is the eighteenth symbol in the Aurebesh script, and represents the Basic letter "r". (SWM)

Resh Sonax

this Sluissi was the sister of Hass Sonax. When the Empire requested maintenance workers to repair a damaged Star Destroyer, the sisters were accepted as applicants. However, they were treated as slaves by their pro-human workgroup leaders. When it was discovered that a faulty coil caused an explosion that set the repairs behind schedule, the on-duty Imperial officer executed Resh as an example. (SWJ15)

Reshad, Palejo

this Corellian smuggler made a large sum of credits selling spice at Jabba the Hutt's palace. He then used some of the profits to help fund the Alliance's activities. (CCG7)

Reshig

this minor government official owed the loanshark Sires Vant a huge sum of credits, after several failed business ventures and some poor bets. He tried to flee to Dreve, but was cornered by officer Vexan and given two days to repay the debt. (GG11)

Resht VII

a planet. (GG10)

Residual Heat Trend Directionalizer

a tracking device which can detect the residual heat from its surroundings and calculate the path a certain heat trail took. It allows the user to follow a warm-bodied target by determining the target's pathway from the heat it left behind. Q9-X2 had one of these sensors added to himself just before the Solo family arrived on Corellia for the Trade Summit. (AC)

Resik

this Jillsarian bartender worked on Reuss VIII. In his youth, Resik worked as a professional wrestler, where he was known as the Kessel Krusher. When he was named in the will of a fan, Resik found out that he had inherited a tavern on Reuss VIII, and retired from the sport. However, the Imperial presence on Reuss VIII unfairly forced him out of business several times. When an Alliance operative warned him of an impending raid, allowing Resik to escape without being captured, Resik decided to join the Alliance. He allowed his establishment to serve as a safehouse and hideout for Alliance agents on the run. (CRO)

Resinem Entertainment Complex

located on the planet Borcorash, this casino was bombed by a rival casino shortly before the Battle of Endor. Over the years, the Resinem managed to remain in business, and the damage - confined to the western wall - became a form of artwork. Natural erosion and the beautiful Borcorash sunsets made it all the more attractive. Inside, the Resinem is a high-tech complex, with multiple floors and sections that allow all manner of entertainment and meeting places. (SOP)

Resistance

this Corellian Engineering Corporation Gunship was part of the Bothan Combat Response Element, during the early years of the New Republic. (E)

Resjic

this man was an Imperial officer, who served under Commander Dorin Millavec aboard the Crucible during the Galactic Civil War. Resjic was one of Millavec's closest confidantes, and was surprised to learn of Millavec's plans to destroy Nas Ghent and defy Darth Vader himself. (T21)

Resk, Irlyn

this Imperial Lieutenant was the commander of the Dark Riders swoop gang. He relished the chance to take care of the more violent elements of Stend VI's criminal underworld, but he also believed that he could link the swoop gang violence to Blizz Pinnix. (WSV)

Reskan, Trep

this man was the Alliance's commander-in-chief of the Brak Sector, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He held the rank of General at the time. Prior to his service with the Alliance, Reskan was the Commander of the Bacrana System Defense Force. He knew that the Empire would never allow Bacrana remain totally free, and when Moff Lesan Ramier wiped out a group of protestors in Amma, Reskan had had enough. He took those members of the BSDF who would accompany him - virtually the entire force - and fled to the Tel System. From there, Reskan devised several offensive missions against the Empire before attracting the attention of the Alliance. When the Alliance asked him to join, Reskan and the remaining members of the BSDF joined them. (FBS)

Reskik

this Imperial major, a native of Grandeel, was in charge of the salvage crew which deployed to analyze the wreckage of the first Death Star. Reskik was known as a ruthless, yet fair, leader who liked to have every decision go his way. (GG2)

Reslian Purge

this infamous genocide of the Tunroth race was perpetrated by the Lortan fanatics about ten years before the Battle of Yavin. The Lortans killed everything they found in twelve systems, including the Jiroch System. The Tunroth were saved from extinction by the intervention of an Imperial fleet. The Imperials wiped out the Lortans. Note that The Making of Baron Fel calls this the Resalian Purge. (GG12, MBF)

Resner

this Imperial Navy Commander was ordered by Admiral Heggel to root out and destroy the Alliance cells in Trax Sector, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (GMK)

Resolute

this Invincible-class Dreadnaught was part of the military fleet maintained by the Corporate Sector Authority during the early years of the New Order. When a plague broke out on the planet Endregaad, the Resolute - under the command of Angela Krin - was dispatched to blockade the planet, in order to ensure that the plague didn't spread to other worlds in the Tion Cluster. Captain Krin and the Resolute intercepted the freighter Shadowfire, which had been dispatched by Popara the Hutt to rescue his offspring, Mika, who was stranded on Endregaad. (TF)

Resolute

this was one of the multitude of Imperial-class Star Destroyers which made up the Imperial Navy fleet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Resolution

this Venator-class Star Destroyer was one of the first of its kind, produced for the Old Republic during the early stages of the Clone Wars. Some two years after the Battle of Geonosis, the Resolution was dispatched to Drongar to escort the Republic's personnel back to Coruscant, after the Battle of Drongar. (MJH)

Resolution

this was one of the multitude of Imperial-class Star Destroyers which made up the Imperial Navy fleet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Resolve

this New Republic Majestic-class heavy cruiser was part of the Fifth Battle Group, and was outfitted with multiple redundant shielding systems. It was placed on the point in the training exercise at Bessimir, in order for it to take the brunt of the hypervelocity gun's assault while the K-Wing bombers took out the gun. The multiple shields were powered by energy shunted from the engines, leaving the Resolve powerless to escape once the shields were activated. (BTS)

Resolve

this Epoch-class freighter was the personal ship of the Svivreni, Mihalik. It was given to him as a gift for a favor he performed for Caleb Hctaqsas, and was equipped with state-of-the-art Koensayr and KapriCorp thrust packages. This combination gave the Resolve an unheard of lift/mass ratio. (SWJ10)

Resolve

this Alliance cruiser was under the command of Admiral Cov during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (CCW)

Resonance Torpedo

the Sun Crusher's primary weapon. When shot from the Sun Crusher's torpedo bay, it homes in on a star's core and rockets into the gases surrounding it. It then uses a proximity alert to trigger a modulated resonance discharge. This causes the gases in the star's core to become hyper-activated, aging the star and causing it to destroy itself as a supernova in a matter of hours. The star's planets are then destroyed as two intense waves of radiation are blasted into space. (JS, COTF)

Resoria

this was the largest of the three continents found on the planet Corulag. (CCW)

Resorts, The

this was the name given to the 500 or so bases established by pirates, smugglers, and mercenaries who lived on Ord Antalaha. (PP)

Resource Reconnaissance Speeder

designed by SoroSuub for use by the mining industry, the RRS measured five meters in length and was operated by a pilot and co-pilot. It could transport up to two passengers, and could carry up to 70 kilograms of cargo. The RRS was developed to analyze locations for the presence of ores, metals, or crystals. Many mining operations used the RRS as the mobile command base for a fleet of MEMD-2 mining droids. (FBS)

Respectable

one of the Imperial cruisers blockading the ThonBoka when Lando Calrissian returns to help the Oswaft, the Respectable was the first ship to intercept Lando. When Lando boarded it, pretending to be a simple merchant, its cooped-up sailors welcome Lando's cigars and ice cream with open arms. They provide Lando a source of informatio on the blockade, as well as a stepping stone to get closer to the mouth of the StarCave, as the crew radios Lando's permission to move through the fleet, peddling his wares. (LCS)

Respite

this medical frigate was part of the Old Republic task force that was dispatched to Praesitlyn, during the final stages of the Clone Wars. (JT)

Respite-4

this smaller of the TaggeCo escape pods in the Respite series, the Respite-4 could transport up to four passengers, and had enough power to maintain life support for three days. (HAS)

Respite-8

this was a model of escape pod produced by TaggeCo during the New Order. As the name suggests, this escape pod had room for eight passengers, and had enough power to maintain life support for two standard days. (HAS)

Response Package

this was a generic term used to describe any cybernetic implant that heightened the nervous system of a being, giving them enhanced dexterity and sharper performance reactions. The only known drawback to the use of a response package was an irregular twitch in certain muscles. (KOTOR)

Response Time

this learning game was played in the Learning Circle on Kegan, during the last decades of the Old Republic. During the game, the first student to react to a topic flashed across their computer screen was required to recite all known information about the topic. (FFT)

RES-Q Airspeeder

developed by Ubrikkian, this 12-meter-long speeder was designed as a medical relief vehicle. Its oval shape allowed it to transport up to four medics and ten patients, as well as two metric tons of supplies. It was unusual among non-military speeders in that it was shielded, in order to better protect its patients during transport to a hospital. (LOE)

Ressl River

this was the longest river found on the planet Carida. (EGP)

ResSystem

this chemical manufacturer was noted to its synthetic byrothesis, which was used in Imperial heat sensors. (CFG)

Rest, The

members of a large number of aliens who have existed for eons in the depths of space. Having descended from a race of intelligent, organic machines created by an extinct culture (destroyed by a supernova), their race has grown stagnant, and they long for excitement and risks. One such risk became a problem for them, as it caused violence and destruction, and they were forced to recover it. (LCS)

Resta Shug Hai

this grizzled X'Ting fighter was one of the recruits who joined the Desert Wind terrorist group to fight against the Five Families during the height of the Clone Wars. A farmer by trade, Resta and her husband worked hard to eke out an existence in the desert near Kibo Lake. When the Five Families raised energy prices to the outlying areas - a move meant to ensure that their secure bunker was properly protected - Resta and her husband were unable to survive without extra income. Her husband went to work in the mines, but died from exhaustion. Rather than stand by and lose her farm, Resta answered the call sent out by Jedi Master Kit Fisto and the ARC trooper known as Nate. After training with them for several weeks, she joined Desert Wind to strike back at the Five Families and their control over Cestians. She was the only X'Ting to survive the training process with the clone troopers, but she fought for the same thing her comrades did: equal rights and freedom for the workers of Ord Cestus. She earned the respect and gratitude of the AFRC trooper known as Jangotat, after he was brought to the Zantay Hills to recover from injuries sustained during a raid on the Desert Wind encampment. When Jangotat launched a desperate mission to root out the Five Families from their secret bunker, Resta refused to remain behind, even though Jangotat gave her the A-98 Tac Code 12 phrase to receive compensation from the Republic. The only way Jangotat got her to stay behind was to incapacitate her in a swift sleeper hold, rendering Resta unconscious before she could protest. (TCD)

Restful Sleep in Danger

this Jedi technique allowed the Jedi Knights to get much-needed sleep while a corner of their consciousness remained alert and aware of his surroundings. This meant the Jedi could rest while dealing with a potentially dangerous situation. (HP)

Resti Kel

a planet. (SWJ2)

Restimar Mining Corporation

this was one of the many corporations which established a presence in the Cularin System during the last century of the Old Republic. (LFC)

Reston, Nia

this woman and her partner, San Herrera, were Force-sensitive individuals who made conscious decisions not to train with the Jedi Knights on Coruscant. They didn't want to deal with the demands of discipline and isolation imposed by the Jedi, and decided to remain on their homeworld of Cularin in order to help the Tarasin people. San and Nia funded a large relief effort, mainly by themselves, in order to ensure that the Hiironi Irstat was able to feed and defend itself from the predations of the Metatheran Cartel and other human intrusions. Shortly after the Battle of Naboo, San and Nia began working on Life's Memories, a treatise on death which earned them a small amount of notoriety after they were interviewed by Yara Grugara. Years later, during the Clone Wars, they took up the cause of droid rights. In a detailed treatise dispatched to Cularin's newsnets, they argued that droids were sentient beings - more appropriately called synthetic persons - who needed to be set free. They argued that the Clone Wars was actually a struggle between two different kinds of synthetic persons - the droids of the Separatists and the clones of the Grand Army of the Republic - then provided four key recommendations for ensuring synthetic persons can exist as free beings, in parity with organic beings. (EOS, LFCW)

Restoration Day

this New Republic holiday celebrates the formation of the New Republic. (SOL)

Restrainer

this Imperial Interdictor cruiser was supporting the Imperial-II Star Destroyer Subjugator, during its attempt to prevent the Alliance from helping a group of dissidents defect from Imperial service. The Restrainer was destroyed in the battle, forcing the Subjugator to let the defectors go free. (XWA)

Restraining Bolt

a device used to limit the functions of a droid, it is welded to the droid's exterior and controlled by a caller or owner device. It also contained a remote control shutdown switch that allowed the caller to cut off the droid's main power converters. (SW, WS)

Restraining Collar

this was a specialized device that was used to limit the functions of a droid. Unlike a restraining bolt, which was welded to a droid's plating and could cause damage when removed, a restraining collar was a large device that was slipped around the droid's body to keep it from moving around. These devices worked well for astromech and other droids that moved about on wheels, and lacked arms or other mechanisms for detaching the collar. (HTTE)

Restraint Capsule

this was a large, room-sized version of a force cage. (GG10)

Restuss

this was the second settlement established on the moon Rori. It was located across a wide bog from Narmle, and was originally established after the population of Narmle was decimated by an outbreak of brainworm rot. Restuss served as a quarantine center for many decades, until it could be ensured that the brainworm rot had been eradicated. (ROD, GQRG)

Restwell Sleep Station

located within the Outsider Citadels of Cerea, this was a hostel-like grouping of low-cost berths where individuals could sleep for the night. The berths were nothing more than beds and a small refresher station. (PTR)

Resurgence

this Imperial shuttle was the personal transport of Lord Dixon. The shuttle was damaged in a fight with an Alliance starship, and Dixon was forced to land on Masterhome to repair it. While on Masterhome, Dixon and the Resurgence were captured by Alliance forces. The Resurgence was a standard Imperial cargo shuttle, measuring 54 meters in length and armed with a single, turret-mounted heavy blaster cannon. It could transport up to 50 passengers or troops, and up to 1,000 metric tons of cargo. (SWCP)

Resuun, Lobax

this man was the Imperial Governor of Tamarin Sector during the last years of the New Order. He struggled to maintain control of the sector after the Battle of Endor. (POC)

Reswa

this Barabel was a hatchmate of Saba Sebatyne, and planned to have her coming-of-age ceremony a year or so after Coruscant was lost to the Yuuzhan Vong. Saba returned to Barab I for the ceremony, only to find that the Yuuzhan Vong had destroyed the planet. Reswa was lost in the attack. (FH1)

Ret, Engar

this Imperial Captain is in command of the Tempay lunar base. He was constantly at odds with Ulbrek Gostech, for Ret coveted Gostech's position of Imperial Governor. He had planned to discredit Gostech by turning the governor's soft-hearted ways against him. (PG2)

Retaliator

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was dispatched by the remnants of the Empire to assist the Agonizer in subjugating the world of Adumar, after the Adumari had sided with the New Republic. (SOA)

Retaliator

this Star Destroyer was guarding the Project Orrad base on Venaari. The Retaliator was unable to capture Shandria L'hnnar when she stole the plans to the project and fled the planet with Sienn Sconn. (SWJ5)

Retep III

Imperial starfighters attacked a Habassan freighter group near this world, during the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Retep IV

Alliance forces drove off Imperial starships that were attacking Habassan convoys near this planet. (XW)

Reterri

this territory of the planet Baralou was controlled by the Krikthasi. (PG1)

Reth, Yakown

this man served the New Republic as a Navy Captain, leading the Blackmoon Squadron of E-Wing fighters during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Captain Reth and the Blackmoons were part of the forces which assembled at Borleias, in the wake of the Battle of Coruscant. As the struggle to maintain control of Borleias wore on, Captain Reth and his crew began to question the motivations and abilities of both General Wedge Antilles and Commander Eldo Davip. Reth wondered - without knowing the true reasons - how the two could allow the Lusankya to be destroyed bit by bit. (EL1, EL2)

Rethan-K

a harmless material used by most industrial worlds. (TFE)

Rethin

a metal which is molten at relatively low temperatures, it forms the core of the planet Bespin, and is mined for various uses. At slightly higher temperatures, rethin melts and eventually dissipates as a gas. It is very light in its gaseous form, and rethin is consumed by the beldons of Bespin to help them remain bouyant and float. The beldons then produce tibanna gas as a waste product. The unique space beldon, however, can produce its own rethin by digesting the interstellar gases of nebulae and gas clouds. (GG2, WOTC)

Rethin Sea

a name given to the molten metallic core of the planet Bespin. The inner core of the sea contained 30,000 kilometers of liquid metal rethin, while the outer section contained 22,000 kilometers of liquid rethin. (GG2)

Rethorn

this Ithorian was one of the most prominent criminal figures of the Mid Rim Territories. He has been known to fund rebellions against both the Empire and the New Republic, and has continued to gain more and more control since the Battle of Endor. His specialty seems to be the theft and transport of high-technology weapons systems and military materiel. Despite the high profile of his goods, Rethron has managed to maintain a low-key presence in the operation. His whereabouts have never been pinpointed, although his involvement in the illegal weapons market has been verified by captured operatives. (WBC)

Reti

this Toydarian salvage pilot was known to be a gifted talker and story-teller, although many of his stories centered on his own exploits. Nevertheless, Reti was also known as a good friend, and was always willing to help out another being in need. He proved his mettle prior to the Battle of Naboo, assisting Rhys Dallows in investigating the early stages of the Trade Federation's blockade of Naboo. Reti performed his regular salvage operations from the cockpit of his personal ship, the Zoomer. (WOTC)

Retinal Combat Implant

this miniature form of combat implant was placed in a being's eye, to provide greater visual accuity and tracking capability. They were first developed several decades before the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Retinal Disguiser

this device resembled a set of visors or sunglasses. When worn and used by a being who is subjected to a retinal scan, the disguiser projects a false retinal pattern over the wearer's eyes. This pattern can be random or pre-set, and allows the being to bypass retinal-scan security systems. (GG11)

Retinal Lock

developed by the Bith, this computer security device used a complex series of retinal scans to identify users and encrypt datafiles. (GFT)

Retinal print

an identification method which reads the retinal pattern of an individual. (SME)

Retinol, Leito

this man once worked for Dynaic Synergetics, Incorporated, before joining the corporate staff of Karflo Corporation. The rest of his career was documented in highly-classified datafiles, giving rise to speculation on his past. During the height of the New Order, Retinol was named the Managing Director of Karflo's operations on Gorothe Prime. His management team respected his abilities, but wondered if he was too clever for his own good. (GSE)

Retrac, Sheltay

this Alderaanian woman served as Bail Organa's primary aide during the height of the Clone Wars. Sheltay Retrac was portrayed by Caroline de Souza Correa in Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (VD3, OWS)

Retribution

this Imperial Star Destroyer, part of the Qeimet fleet, served as the home base for the Scimitar Assault Wing. After the Battle of Endor, the Retribution was discovered to be part of the fleet controlled by Governor Lobax Resuun of Tamarin Sector. The Retribution served as Resuun's personal base of operations, allowing him to move around the sector at will. (ISB, POC)

Retribution

this Marauder-class corvette was purchased by the Corellian underground resistance from the Corporate Sector during the early years of the Alliance. It served as Bria Tharen's command ship during her attack on the Helot's Shackle, during which she attempted to rescue Ylesian slaves. (RD)

Retribution

this Daupherm Discril-class attack cruiser was stolen from the Daupherm military by Gorvam Shrulldike and his partner, Evram Darkmere. The two hoped to convert the ship into a smuggling craft, then make a living plying the shipping lanes. After Darkmere defeated Shrulldike in personal combat to take control of the operation, he began refitting the ship in order to make it more modern. Darkmere's reputation as a strong-willed captain allowed the ship to overtake its quarry without firing a shot. It was armed with six turbolaser cannons, four tri-particle beamers, two trilaser cannons, and a single tractor beam. (CRO)

Retribution, The

see Rite of the Retribution. (BSS)

Retsa

a strong drink often imbibed by Lando Calrissian. (LCM)

RetSpan Audionics

this small corporation produced a variety of sound slugs which were stolen from other artists, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Many music producers began using combat droids and other sensor-equipped automata to prohibit the piracy of music. (HNN5)

Retsub

an Imperial frigate operative during the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Rett

this was the largest, and least populated, continent on the planet Draenell's Point. It is made up of rocky mountains and populated by a number of predatory animals, contributing to its sparse population. (GMK)

Rett I

this is the first planet in the Rettna System, and is the site of a Jante mining colony. It was the only Jante holding in the system following an attack by their sector neighbors, the Freda. During the New Order, the decades-old feud between Jante and Freda erupted into full-scale war as each sabotaged the other's mining operations. Imperial forces were called in to put an end to the hostilities. (SWJ9)

Rett II

this is the second planet in the Rettna System, and was the site of a Jante mining colony. It was attacked and captured by the Jante's sector neighbors, the Freda. During the New Order, the decades-old feud between Jante and Freda erupted into full-scale war as each sabotaged the other's mining operations. Imperial forces were called in to put an end to the hostilities. (SWJ9)

Rettig

this bookie was a native of the planet Andasala. (GG11)

Retuna

an Alliance container group destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Return of the Jedi

according to the Journal of the Whills, this was the title of Episode 6 of Star Wars. Return of the Jedi won an Academy Award for Special Achievement for Visual Effects (Lesley Dilley). Return of the Jedi was also nominated for the following awards:

- Best Sound (Ben Burtt)
- Best Sound Effects Editing (Richard Burrow, Teresa Eckton, Ken Fisher)
- Best Original Score (John Williams)

(ROTJ)

Returning, The

this was a ritual for the survivors of the destruction of Alderaan. Returning involved making a pilgrimage to the asteroid field created by the Death Star's blast, and leaving behind something to honor the dead. A profitable business formed around the production of Memory Capsules in which the survivors could place gifts. The Capsules were then deposited in the asteroid field. (BW)

Retwin

this native of Ralltiir served with the planet's defense forces during the early years of the New Order. Unlike most natives of Ralltiir, Retwin was sympathetic to the Empire's ideals. He joined the Imperial Navy shortly after Ralltiir was subjugated by the Empire, and was known as a highly-skilled saboteur. He served as a Chief aboard the Executor during the garrisoning of Cloud City. (CCG5)

Reug Yucon

this Bothan male was a scientist, specializing in the fields of trans-system and galactic atmospherics, during the last decades of the Old Republic. He was part of the team, led by Doctor Fort Turan, which traveled to Haariden to investigate the effects of a volcanic environment on the planet's atmospherics and ecosystem. (JQ4)

Reugus, Morrina

this woman was the daughter of parents who owned a respectable shipping business. However, the Empire accused them of smuggling weapons and other treasonous activity, and had them executed. Morrina was sent to Brentaal live with relatives, and decided to join the Alliance and strike back at the Empire in any way she could. She eventually was employed by the government of Brentaal as a starport traffic controller. She worked her way up the ladder as far as she could while still remaining a controller, where she could maintain direct contact with the starships that passed through the starport. In this way, she could monitor incoming traffic for specific code phrases that identified Alliance starships. She arranged for these ships to be berthed where they could be left alone, and worked with Sarchen Snyle to ensure that their cargoes weren't inspected. (CRO)

Reuss Corporation

the industrial giant which is headquartered on Reuss VIII, it virtually enslaved the entire population of the planet. (GG9)

Reuss VIII

this planet, the primary world in the Reuss System, is located in the Portmoak Sector of the Outer Rim. It was once a lush, green world filled with beautiful vistas and a mild climate. It was a major food producer for the Outer Rim Territories. However, the industrial revolution that swept the planet left it a toxic, polluted wasteland under the control of Torel Vorne. Vorne has managed to turn Reuss VIII into Portmoak Sector's industrial juggernaut, at the expense of its environment. Reuss VIII's day lasts 20 standard hours, and its year lasts 210 local days. (CRO, GG9)

Reussi

the near-human natives of the planet Reuss VIII. (GG9)

Reuther

this Najib was a bounty hunter before he retired to his homeworld. He had fled his homeworld when the Empire subjugated the planet, and killed his wife and three daughters in the process. After retiring, Reuther established the tavern he called Reuther's Wetdock. He was a good friend of Thaddeus Ross, and often addressed the pilot in Old Corellian. (TFE, SWJ4, SWJ15)

Reuther's Wetdock

a popular Najiban tavern located in the planet's main spaceport. It was owned and operated by the Najib named Reuther, a good friend of Thaddeus Ross. (SWJ4, TFE)

Rev Terrel

this being was a Captain with the New Republic's Intelligence agency, and was responsible for documenting Luke Skywalker's role in the Black Fleet Crisis and the Battle of N'zoth. (CTD)

Revan

this person served as an aide to a planetary governor during the height of the New Order. (GFT)

Revan

this ancient Jedi Knight was one of the many which participated in the defense of the Old Republic during the Great Sith War, some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. Revan and his fellow Jedi Knight, Malak, put down a Mandalorian uprising in the Outer Rim during the war, but were brought into contact with the Dark Side of the Force. Revan began to study the Sith lore, and eventually named himself Darth Revan, a Dark Lord of the Sith, with Malak as his apprentice. The two set out to wage their own battles against the Jedi Knights and the Old Republic, until Revan was captured in battle. Malak took up his master's mission and set out to continue the war against the Jedi. Meanwhile Revan was given a complete memory wipe by the Jedi Council, which eliminated the taint of the Dark Side and returned him to the ways of the Jedi. To ensure the transformation was complete, Revan was paired with Bastila Shan on a mission to locate Malak and the Star Forge. After the pair was captured, along with Carth Onasi, and held by Darth Malak aboard the Leviathan, Revan was given information about the truth behind his return to the Light Side of the Force. He couldn't comprehend the duplicitous act, and nearly fell in battle during an escape attempt. It was Bastila's brave attack that deflected Malak's attention, allowing Onasi and Revan to escape aboard the Ebon Hawk. (SWI67, SWDB)

Revel Mallinor

this was the name of a distinguished Khil individual. (UANT)

Revella

this young girl was the central character in the holo-drama Revella's Journey: A Story of a Girl and Her Droid. (GFT)

Revella's Journey: A Story of a Girl and Her Droid

this holo-series chronicled the adventures of a young girl and her Guardian-class droid, Seti. Many business experts credit the series for the popularity of the Guardian-class droid, as the largest segment of owners were also families which regularly watched the serial. It was produced by Millennium Entertainments. (EGD, GFT)

Revels, The

this is the name of the boisterous entertainment district of Talos, on the planet Atzerri. (SOL)

Revenant

this ocean-going cruiser was Sol Sixxa's mobile base of operations, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Most of the Mere native to the planet Maramere believed that Sixxa was a ghost, and that the Revenant was nothing but a legend. This belief was augmented by the fact that Sol Sixxa installed an experimental cloaking device aboard the ship. The cloaking device had been stolen from Lord Toat and the Trade Federation cutter Syren. (CRBN)

Revenant

one of two Nebulon-B frigates under the command of Lumiya, following the Battle of Endor. (SWG3)

Revenue

this Trade Federation LH-3210 freighter was dispatched to Dorvalla, shortly before the Battle of Naboo, to acquire a full cargo of lommite. It was under the command of Daultay Dofine at the time, and was crewed by a variety of different species. After taking on a full cargo of lommite, the Revenue was attacked by the Nebula Front pirates. Captain Arwen Cohl and his crew managed to acquire the cache of aurodium ingots before escaping the ship, which they had rigged to explode. Dofine and his crew managed to escape before the Revenue tore itself apart, and they were later rescued by the Acquisitor. It was later revealed that the destruction of the Revenue was one of the opening moves in Darth Sidious' plans to maneuver the Republic to side with the Federation, especially when it came to arming their freighters with battle droids, droid starfighters and additional weaponry. (COD)

Reverend, The

this huge, bushy-bearded man frequented the LoBue casino, and was Torve's contact for smuggling food to the Gado hill clans. (HTTE)

Reverse Thrust

this song, written and played by the band Red Shift Limit, first appears on the compilation Totally Patriotic. It was a beautiful instrumental, and was one of the few RSL songs not banned by the Imperial Board of Culture. (GG9)

Reverse-Polarity Pulse Grenade

developed for use by the Army of the Republic, this highly-charged explosive didn't cause physical damage. Instead, it released an intense electromagnetic pulse that overloaded the electrical systems of droids and sensors within its blast radius. This weapon proved effective against the battle droids of the Separatists. (RDK)

Reversion

a term used to describe the act of returning to realspace from hyperspace. (SWR)

Reversa Global Shipping

this was the largest of the Trandoshan-owned shipping concerns, carrying all manner of goods across the planet's surface during the last years of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

Revidjasa

one of Jabba the Hutt's favored lieutenants, this male Rodian was recognizable by the cybernetic replacement of his left arm. The arm was lost during Revidjasa's rise to power as a gangster in the Mid Rim. Jabba recruited him, but only after eliminating all of Revidjasa's own underlings. The Rodian agreed to join Jabba, but chafed under the Hutt's leadership. Revidjasa was one of the many of Jabba's underlings who wasted no time in carving out his own piece of the Hutt's empire in the wake of his death on Tatooine. Revidjasa quickly made alliances with the Zygerian and Thalassian slaving guilds, building the largest slaving operation in the Mid Rim during the early years of the New Republic. (GG11, GG12)

Revir

this carnivorous mammal is native to the planet Gacerian, where they live in the rocky mountains on the fringes of the desert. The revir can grow to 1.5 meters in length, and they have nasty claws and teeth. The revir uses its ear-piercing howl to disable their prey. They howl can also be modified in pitch and duration as a form of communication between revirs. (PG2)

Revisse

this ball of molten rock was the innermost planet of the Coruscant System. (PH)

Revkinn V

this planet was the primary world in the Revkinn System. (GG10)

Revol Leap

located on the abandoned, floating city of Tibannapolis, Revol Leap was a leaning spire of metal which hung out into Bespin's atmosphere. Beings who scavenged the Leap risked falling into Bespin's atmosphere. (BF2)

Revoltist

any Targonnian who opposed the despotic rule of the Dictator-Forever Craw. They were led by Shay. (DRO)

Revolutionist Purist Council

this faction of Fishfaces held strongly to the ancient ideals of their people. Shortly before the Battle of Naboo, they executed the patriarch of their people and his wife, and would have killed the princess Foolookoola if not for the efforts of Naradan D'ulin and Vilmarh Grahrk. (T3)

Revos

this city was the entertainment capital of the planet Storinal, and maintained its own starport. It was here that Wraith Squadron intercepted the crew of the Hawkbat before it was supposed to rendezvous with the Night Caller. It is connected to the nearby capital of Scohar via a featureless tunnelway that occasionally rose above ground. A number of large, repulsor-powered railcars travelled along the tunnels between the two cities. When the tunnels rose above ground, it gave the passengers spectacular views of Storinal's wonderful landscaping. (WS)

Revos Liberty

this hostel, located in the city of Revos on Storinal, catered to the crews of large ships on shore leave. (WS)

Revo-worm

a small slug that is easily frightened. (SE)

Revt

an Alliance shuttle group destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Revwien

a plant-like species of alien native to the planet Revyia, the Revvien has a bulbous head and flowing, leaf-like appendages. Its body is a thick stalk shaped like a squash. The leafy appendages are prehensile, and are used in the absence of hands and feet. The bulbous head is really a seed case studded with sensory stalks that provide sight, smell, touch, and hearing. The Revvien are a peaceful race with the ability to remain calm in stressful situations. They are curious about the galaxy around them, but have no need for high technology. They prefer to simply develop those planets that have potential value. Many Revvien follow the teachings of the Tyia, a philosophy brought to Revyia by a missionary who travelled on an independent freighter to the planet. Tyia holds a strong regard to life and peace, the two things the Revviens hold dearest. It is believed that the followers of the Tyia are somewhat adept at manipulating the Force, but they chose not to involve themselves with the Jedi Knights. (RPG, GG12)

Revvien Comedy Academy

this school for the entertainment arts was founded by a group of Revvien who had emigrated to Coruscant during the decades leading up to the Battle of Naboo. (IWE2)

Revwien Comedy Academy Playhouse

this small theater, located on Vos Gesal Street in Coruscant's Uscru District, was the site where the Revwien Comedy Academy staged its most popular and newest shows, during the last decades of the Old Republic. The Playhouse itself was located next door to the prestigious Vos Gesal Hotel. (IWE2)

Revyia

this planet is the homeworld of the Revwien race. Located on the fringe of the Outer Rlm Territories, at the end of a few minor trade routes, it is covered with dense, steamy jungles. It is shrouded in a number of contradictory myths about its origins and its history. (GG12)

Revyia Station

this is the only recognizable city on the planet Revyia, and is the site of the world's only spaceport. (GG12)

Rewulga

this was a common name among members of the Dug race. (UANT)

Rex

this pilot droid, whose full designation was RX-24, was assigned to Star Tours Flight 45 near the end of the Galactic Civil War. Rex's first flight, as captain of a ship on the Endor Express, was full of mishaps, and landed him in the middle of the Battle of Endor with a full load of tourists. Rex's voice was provided by Paul Reubens. (ST, BTM)

'rey

this suffix was added to a Bothan's family name to indicate the individual's affiliation to the Erey clan. (GCG, WOTC)

Rey, Tamizander

this man, a native of the planet Esseles, resigned from the Esselian defense force shortly before Emperor Palpatine dissolved the Imperial Senate. He later joined the Alliance, and served as the Senior Deck officer at Hoth's Echo Base, prior to the Battle of Hoth. He struggled to earn the respect of the many pilots who worked at the base, especially after he ordered all supply ships grounded until the base's shield generators were active. (CCG3, SWI74)

Reybn

this Imperial Sergeant was one of a handful who were stationed at the relay outpost on the planet Vaal, during the period leading up to the Battle of Yavin. After having spent many months on the remote world with nothing to do, Reybn and his colleagues had become soft and lazy, and were thoroughly unprepared when Darth Vader crash-landed on the planet. Vader had just survived the destruction of the first Death Star, and needed to re-establish contact with the Empire. As Vader took the only shuttle found at the outpost to return to Coruscant, a pack of mammalian predators entered the compound and killed the officers, including Rebyn. (SWESH)

Reydon

an Imperial trooper who once fired an E-Web blaster by himself. (ISB)

Reyf

this was a common name among the Talz race. (UANT)

Reyna

Rezion

this prominent Sienar Fleet Systems researcher and his daughter defected to the Alliance in a daring escape from Imperial forces on Byblos, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (PSPG)

Reznim

this was a common name among the Ryn. (UANT)

Rezzo

this Rodian worked as a smuggler during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. About five years before the Battle of Geonosis, Rezzo teamed up with the Trandoshan smuggler Drossh, and the pair made their way rimward before ending up in the Cularin System as the Clone Wars broke out. Rezzo was the more cautious of the pair, preferring to remain ignorant of the cargos they were carrying. When Drossh discovered that one shipment contained several huge weapons, Rezzo was unable to curb his partner's enthusiasm. The Trandoshan started activating one of the guns, and Rezzo tried to stop him. This caused the weapon's power systems to overload, resulting in a huge explosion that only multiplied when it set off the rest of the weapons. Both Rezzo and Drossh were killed in the explosion, and their ship - the Vor'Teth - was badly damaged and later sold as salvage. (LFCW)

RFX/K Medisensor

this BioTech medisensor was small and light, making it popular with scouts and military field medics. It allowed field personnel to quickly diagnose the condition of a wounded soldier, and it was able to uplink with a central medical computer for more details analysis. (ROE)

RG9

an early Borstel laser cannon. (SCRE)

RGA-972

this Imperial stormtrooper was part of the Cold Assault force which was dispatched to Hoth to wipe out the Alliance's Echo Base. (JKG)

RGA-972

this was the callsign of one of the Imperial snowtroopers who participated in the Battle of Hoth. (JKG2)

RGL-80

this was the model number of Golon Arms' electronet grenade launcher, which fired a an electrically-charged netting at its target. The netting ensnared and immobilized the target, allowing for easy capture. (GG10, EGW)

RGL-80A

this upgrade to the Golon Arms electronet grenade launcher had a longer range and could hold five electronet grenades. (EGW)

RH Mining Corporation

formed by Rees Haslip, this was one of the most powerful and influential mining corporations which developed on the planet Garos IV during the last decades of the Old Republic. When he died, Rees turned over control of the corporation to his daughter, Keriin, who later sold the corporation to the Empire. (SWJ5)

RH7 CardShark

this was the name of LeisureMech's top of the line dealer droid, manufactured during the early years of the New Republic. This cylindrical automaton was installed over a card table, and hung down with several appendages to deal sabacc and other games. Two of the arms were known as "cheater prods," which had specialized sensors to detect the presence of skifters or other cheating devices. If such a device was detected, the arm would reach out and stun the cheater with a blast of energy, while the central droid alerted security forces. The other arms functioned as card dealers and pot collectors. (IR)

RH7-D Cardshark

this was a small, more agile version of the casino dealer droids produced by LeisureMech, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (MJH)

RH8

Borstel's latest laser cannon, produced during the early years of the New Order. (SCRE)

Rha

this was one of the many Twi'leki clans which were native to Ryloth. The name meant "sunny" or "bright" in the Twi'leki language. (KT, GCG)

Rha

this was a common name among the Yuzzem race. (UANT)

Rha, Cassius Nolath

this man served as one of the primary Spice Lords of Sevarcos during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Rha was a gifted wind-rider racer, and won the competition three years in a row, between the Battle of Yavin and the Battle of Hoth. He was also considered the most vicious of the major Spice Lords, and both Lady Trevaal and Lord Quintas plotted to remove him from power. (SWJ12)

Rha, Cassius Nolath

this spice lord controlled the Equatorial Belt of Sevarcos, the planet's most profitable area of spice production. He was known for his ruthlessness, and allied himself with the Empire only because it supplied him with slave labor to work in the spice mines. He allegiance was to the spice, however, and anyone who could supply workers was welcomed. (SWJ2)

Rha'aid

this Socorran term meant "danger." (BSS)

Rh'ajah Fenn

this Twi'lek was a relative of Kh'aris Fenn. Rh'ajah was incapacitated by Quinlan Vos, some seventeen years after the Battle of Geonosis, so that the Dark Jedi could infiltrate the lair of Kh'aris Fenn and eliminate the treacherous Twi'lek. (RSF)

Rhajani

this was a common name among the Zeltron people. (UANT)

Rhamalai

this planet was subjugated by the Empire sometime after the Battle of Yavin. The planet was first settled some 400 years before the Battle of Yavin by the Cherishites. A hundred years later, the planet was discovered by corporate scouts, and only the intervention of a Jedi Knight - a member of the original colonists - kept the planet free. The Jedi managed to keep Rhamalai under Cherishite control until the rise of the New Order, when he finally passed away. Much of the planet's economy derived from agriculture, and the Empire knew that it could support the military efforts in the area but taking control of its agricultural production. (SWJ13)

Rhamsis Callo

home planet of the schenor race of near-humans. (RPG)

R'han

this H'drachi youth was the first Alliance supporter killed among the H'drachi, according to the Imperial Governor, Grigor. R'han, like many of the human supporters of the Alliance on M'haeli, were enslaved and put to work in Grigor's private dragite mines. (ROC)

Rhanken

this independent trader and shipper owned and operated the Corellian-built Barderia, based on the planet Halmad. (IF)

Rhan'starn

this city was located on the eastern continent of the planet Bothawui. (SPG)

Rhara, Clee

this female Jedi Knight agreed to establish a starfighter training facility on Centax 2, under the control of the Jedi Knights, some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. Distinguished by her orange hair, Clee had trained at the same time as Qui-Gon Jinn and Tahl, and knew both of them well. Many years later, after agreeing to set up the starfighter training facility, she met with opposition from the Old Republic Senate, which feared the Jedi would abuse the privilege of having its own starfighter force. Rumors originating in the Senate claimed that Clee Rhara had sabotaged several starfighters, in order to obtain additional funding for repairs and defenses. It was during this time that Clee Rhara took Garen Muln as her Padawan learner. Despite their efforts, though, the starfighter facility eventually proved too unwieldy to manage. The pair instead exemplified themselves on various missions for the Jedi. Just prior to the Clone Wars, Rhara and Muln accompanied Siri Tachi on a mission to the Xanlanner System. While en route, they discovered Obi-Wan's distress signal from TY44, and helped him reach Vanqor to rescue his apprentice, Anakin Skywalker. (JAD, DOH, JQ7)

Rhe Pabs

this Pho Ph'eahian worked as a technician aboard the BioCruiser in the years following the Battle of Naboo. When the ship was rigged to self-destruct by Kern, Rhe Pabs agreed to stay behind with Uni, in an effort to hold the ship together while its inhabitants evacuated it. (JAD)

Rhelg

this planet was part of the ancient Sith Empire, and was the site of Ludo Kressh's private retreat. (GAS)

Rhen Var

this frigid world was covered with snow-swept mountains, which were dotted with a variety of ruins. (TOJR)

Rhen-Orm

this Old Republic corporation produced a variety of biocomputers and other cybernetic implants. (BHAS)

Rheshalva Interstellar Armaments

this Rodian corporation exported a number of unique, Rodian weapons to the rest of the galaxy. Rheshalva was founded some 6,000 years before the Galactic Civil War by a Rodian warlord. (GFT, NEGW)

Rhet H'rrr

this legendary Jenet warrior was one of a group which helped bring the wild packs of danchaf under control, thereby opening up the planet Garban for further development. This era of history was known to the Jenet as the Great Conquest. (COG)

Rhev

this was a common Psadan name. (UANT)

Rhiannon

this molten world is the second planet in the Kalinda System. (TSK)

Rhigar 3

this near-tropical moon orbited a planet which was controlled by the Chiss, and used as a training facility for the military, under the command of the Syndic Mitth'raw'nuruodo. (DJ)

Rhilitan

this lifeless world was located along the Perlemian Trade Route between Varl and Nal Hutta, and was used as a waypoint for the transport ships that were working for Mika the Hutt, transporting spice to and from Varl during the early years of the New Order. (TF)

Rhinnal

this planet, located in the Darpa Sector, emerged from an ice age more than ten thousand years before the Battle of Yavin. Much of the planet remained covered with glaciers and rivers of ice, which once spanned the entire world. Because Rhinnal had virtually no axial tilt, there was no change in seasons to help melt the ice. Rhinnal was first colonized by travelers who were moving along the Perlemian Trade Route, during the early years of the Old Republic. Throughout much of its history, Rhinnal was controlled by the planetary government of Esseles. In the wake of the ice age, habitation of the planet continued, and it became known as a business education center. During the last years of the Old Republic, the Jedi Knights established and expanded a training and medical center on Rhinnal, near the city of Rhire. The fourth planet in the Rhinnal System, Rhinnal was orbited by a pair of moons. The average day on Rhinnal lasted 27 standard hours, while its year encompassed 357 local days. (SWJ7, JASB, E1A3, CCW)

Rhinnal

this star was the central body in the Rhinnal System. (CCW)

Rhinnal State Medical Academy

this was one of the foremost schools for medical education in the Empire, and was located on the planet Rhinnal. (SESB)

Rhinnalian

this was the adopted by the human natives of the planet Rhinnal. They were a people who were fiercely loyal to their clans, and they also were fond of elaborate ceremonies. They set aside eighty-four of Rhinnal's 357 days for commemorations of all kinds. (SWJ7, CCW)

Rhinorrhea

this disease was common among the Kitonak race. (MJH)

Rhinsome Tracking Corporation

this high-tech company produced several grades of tracking devices, such as the highly-sophisticated SureSnoop. (CFG)

Rhire

the capital city of the planet Rhinnal, Rhire was also the largest of the settlements established there. Much of the city was connected to other locations by travel tubes and tunnels known as the Circulation Network, meant to shelter travelers from the harsh environment of Rhinnal. The city was located just to the north of the Frieste River, on the southern edge of the habitable equatorial band. (SWJ7, E1A3, CCW)

Rhire Concourse of Humanity and History

located on Rhire, the capital city of Rhinnal, this museum was dedicated to the preservation of artifacts and documentation on the history of the human race. (HNN4)

Rhire Medical Academy

this was one of the Old Republic's most prestigious medical education facilities, located on the planet Rhinnal. (HNN4)

Rhirr

this was a common, given name among the Vratix race. (UANT)

Rhodian

this alien race was noted for its unusual delicacies, which many other races thought had the smell of old shoes. This may simply be a misspelling of Rodian. (GMR1)

Rhodi's Silence

this was the name of Nas Ghent's smuggling ship. It was badly damaged during the height of the Galactic Civil War when it was shot down over a desert planet by Darth Vader. (T21)

Rhodium

this metal was used to plate weapons. (SH)

Rhommamool

this planet orbited its star in an ellipse that brought it very close to Osarian every ten years. An inhospitable world populated by the descendants of criminals exiled to work in the mines, Rhommamool appeared to be a large, red ball from space. Although there were many miners who lived on the planet voluntarily, the vast majority were forced to live there because of their criminal pasts. The planet's harsh conditions were only highlighted by the proximity of Osarian, which was a pleasant, temperate planet. The natives of Osarian managed the mines on Rhommamool, keeping watch on the exiles and reaping the profits of their labors. Like Osarian, Rhommamool was not a technologically-advanced world when it petitioned the New Republic to mediate a centuries-old feud which had been refueled by Nom Anor. In fact, neither planet had developed space travel, and Rhommamool was decidedly ground-based. Nom Anor rallied the Rhommamoolians to declare their independence from Osarian rule, and to denounce the New Republic. He then fled the planet to join the Yuuzhan Vong attack force, hoping the Republic would focus on Rhommamool. As he left, he fired a series of missiles at the city of Osa-Prime, launching a full-scale war between the two planets. (VP)

Rhommamoolian

this is the name used to describe any of the inhabitants of the planet Rhommamool. Many were descendents of hardened criminals who were exiled to the planet and forced to work in the various mines, virtual slaves to the Osarians. They despised the Osarians for their wealth and position, but were unable to muster their own frustration and revolt until Nom Anor gave them a rallying point. They rose up and declared their freedom and independence from Osarian rule several years after the Battle of Endor. (VP)

Rhoon

an Alliance transport group operating during the Galactic Civil War, it was used to evacuate Briggia following the first strike of Operation Strike Fear. (XW)

RHTC-560

manufactured by D-Tec, this tall automaton was roughly humanoid in stature, although it's plating and sensor suites gave it an avian appearance. Standing 1.7 meters tall, the RHTC command unit was employed to command a swarm of HT drones during the training of Rodian bounty hunters. All tactical decisions were made by the RHTC unit, then relayed to the HT drones. The drones had to be within fifty meters of the RHTC to receive commands. RHTC units had computer uplinks that allowed them interface with maps and video cameras, in order to better track their targets. (SPG)

Rhu

this doctor of psychology was part of the team stranded at the Q'Maere Research Facility when Moff Sarne was ousted from Kal'Shebbol. Rhu was a psycho-pharmacologist, charged with keeping the resident patients sufficiently sedated and compliant. (KR)

Rhuum

this grain was grown on the planet Taanab, and shipped to a number of planets across the galaxy. (SWJ5)

Rhuvian Fizz

an alcoholic drink. (ROM)

Rhyde'vak

this body of water, known as the Tempest Ocean, was located on the planet Bothawui. (SPG)

Rhymer

this Imperial Major served as the commander of Scimitar Squadron, protecting the shield generator emplacement which guarded the construction of the second Death Star over Endor. (CCG11)

Rhysode, Ganner

this headstrong, opinionated man was one of the Jedi Knights who trained under Luke Skywalker at the Yavin 4 praxeum. A native of the planet Teyr, Ganner was also one of the many student who believed Kyp Durrone was correct in acting by himself, without the sanctioning of Master Skywalker, in dealing with criminals and other felons. Rhysode chafed at the idea of a structured Jedi Council which controlled the actions of all Jedi, feeling that it went against the rights of being a Jedi. Ganner was teamed up with Corran Horn during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion, and the two were constantly at odds when they laid out their plans. Ganner believed that Corran's actions in bringing down the outlaws on Courkrus only validated Kyp Durrone's actions, a fact that Corran quickly denied. Eventually, however, both came to see the other's point of view, and their relationship began to modify itself into one of grudging respect for each other. He built and used a lightsaber which had a sulfurous-yellow blade. When Corran and Ganner tried to rescue the slaves being held by the Yuuzhan Vong on Bimmial, Ganner recovered as many as he could before fleeing the planet. However, he felt Corran's life-force ebb, and returned to the Yuuzhan Vong camp to find the Corran had been bitten by an amphistaff. He had already killed the Yuuzhan vong warrior, but was dying himself. Ganner rescued him and placed him in a bacta tank to recover, then returned to Yavin 4. Ganner's confidence took a major blow when he accompanied Corran and Jacen Solo to Garqi, after Corran had been reactivated by the Garqi militia. In their first confrontation with Krag Val and the Yuuzhan Vong, Ganner suffered a terrible blow from Krag Val. Val caught Ganner in the head with a full swipe of his gloved hand, tearing away much of Ganner's face. After Corran discovered that the pollen of the bafforr tree was deadly to the Vong's armor, he recovered Ganner and they fled to a New Republic medical vessel. Ganner recovered, but chose not to have cosmetic surgery. The scars would serve to remind him that he wasn't all-powerful, and that the Force could only be a strong ally if he gave himself to it fully. His defeat at the hands of Krag Val taught him humility more effectively than Luke's teachings or Corran's patient acceptance of his bravado. With his newfound understanding, Ganner set out on a personal mission: to locate Jacen Solo. Rumors of Jacen's appearance near Coruscant - after it had been captured by the Yuuzhan Vong - led him to seek out the former Jedi. He did so on his own, without backup, but feared that a cadre of Jedi Knights would jeopardize the mission. He nearly lost his life aboard a Yuuzhan Vong camp ship while hunting down a rumor, only to discover that the person he was to meet was Jacen himself. There was no celebration, however, as Jacen had apparently turned to the way of the Yuuzhan Vong. Ganner was to be sacrificed to the new World Brain which lived on Coruscant, now renamed Yuuzhan'tar. Further self-revelation followed as Ganner realized that his bravado and showmanship had amounted to nothing, but his will to live was rekindled when Jacen explained that he was not with the Yuuzhan Vong. Jacen was supposed to be the one to perform Ganner's sacrifice, but he used the opportunity to gain private access to the dhuryam World Brain. He gave Ganner the lightsaber which had belonged to Anakin Solo, and asked him to protect him as long as he could. Ganner agreed to help, knowing that there was no other outcome than their deaths. Ganner reached deeply into the Force, drawing on resources he didn't know he had, and single-handedly fought off several hundred Yuuzhan Vong warriors. However, their sheer numbers and use of stronger weapons eventually defeated Ganner. Ganner died valiantly, disappearing into the Force as he expired, knowing that he had given Jacen the time he needed to work with the dhuryam. With the effort, Ganner died knowing that he had finally become the hero he always believed himself to be. When Jacen hesitated to leave because of Ganner, Ganner projected the "Go!" into Jacen's mind, ensuring that their mission would end in success. (DTO, DTR, T)

RI

an outdated series of general-purpose droids. (COJ)

Riam

this race of vicious, flying reptiles is native to the planet Mima II. They are large enough that they can swallow their favorite prey, the Bilars, whole. (GG4)

Rian

this was the name of the capital city of the planet Frego. (TOW)

Rian Rann

this Sullustan pilot served Talas Piran as the head navigator and master pilot for the Mytaranor Slaving Council, and was in command of the slave ship Vanquisher. Rian Rann was known as a merciless slaver, and loved the Vanquisher as if it were his own ship. In order to help keep the ship operable, Rian Rann employed a trio of Verpine technicians to supplement his crew. (AIR)

Rian Vitt

this Sullustan male worked as a dockworker at the Bilbringi shipyards during the years following the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. When the rogue Jedi Dal Konur arrived at Bilbringi to steal a ship that could take him to Bastion, Rian Vitt was assigned to move his cargo from its arrival bay. Konur then clouded Vitt's mind so that the Sullustan couldn't remember where the cargo came from, or where it was moved to. This gave Konur a bit of a headstart on the Jedi who trying to track him down. (WOA29)

Riane

this Alliance starship Captain was in command of the squad which ambushed Lant Mining Corporation's LMC-55c convoy, shortly before the Battle of Yavin. (FBS)

Rianon System

this Tapani Sector star system was part of the holdings of House Melantha during the New Order. (LOE)

Riao Siao

this young, female Felacatian was in love with Reymet Autem, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Riao's parents died shortly after the family's arrival on Coruscant, and Riao had to struggle to make her own way. She was often ill, as much a result of being away from her homeworld as living in the lower levels of Coruscant. Reymet spent much of his free time participating in the garbage pit races in the Wicko District, hoping to make enough credits to book passage for her back to Felacat. Their prayers for passage offplanet were answered when Reymet's uncle, Venco Autem, arranged for passage in return for Sagoro Autem's authorization codes. Despite the fact that Reymet's actions nearly led to the death of Senator Simon Greysshade, Sagoro allowed Reymet and Riao to leave Coruscant and return to Felacat. (RHD)

Rib Hutt

this was the name of a fast-food restaurant that was popular during the decades leading up to the Battle of Naboo. The restaurant was famous for its Rancor Ribs. (T9)

Ribba

this Hutt managed a legitimate textile business on the planet Celanon, in an effort to hide his less legal operations. (ND)

Riboga

this former Hutt crimelord was exiled from his homeworld some eighty years before the Battle of Naboo. He found his way to the Cularin System, where he found that illicit trade was flourishing but unregulated. Establishing himself at a base on Tolea Biqua, near the planet Genarius, Riboga formed the so-called Smuggler Confederation and set about organizing the crime in the system. However, the cost of maintaining the organization began to weigh on Riboga, and an increase in piracy began to eat into his profits. Riboga was more than willing to turn over control of the system to Nirama, his chief lieutenant, when he lost it to the unusual alien during a sabacc match. Riboga returned to Nal Hutta without any regrets, unaware that Nirama had manipulated events and accounts in order to force Riboga to leave. Years later, it was believed that Riboga began to manipulate events in the Cularin System to unseat Nirama and re-establish himself as the dominant crimelord in the system. Working with unseen spies and thieves, Riboga apparently was developing a series of discrediting documents and events to erode Nirama's standing. (LFCW)

Riboga's Barge

this floating gambling hall was established from one of the repulsorlift transports left behind by Riboga the Hutt when he abdicated his control of the criminal underground of the Cularin System to Nirama. Riboga's Barge was attached to the city of Tolea Biqua, and was purchased by a pair of Trandoshans who hated the Hutts and thought it would be appropriate for them to purchase it. They converted the huge, open spaces in the barge into a variety of gaming rooms, and the bathing pool was modified to serve as an immense hottub. The breeding chamber, which was found to have been never used, was turned into a "museum of useless inventions," a name which applied to its contents and took a jab at Riboga's lack of offspring. (LFC)

RIC-920

this RIC-series droid was modified to work as a rickshaw driver in the city of Mos Espa, on Tatooine, some ten years after the Battle of Naboo. RIC-920 operated as part of a group of unlicensed rickshaw operators, and was employed by Anakin Skywalker and Padme' Amidala when they returned to Tatooine shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars. (SWDB)

Rica

this Daan youth was the grandson of Gueni, and a member of The Young. (DOD)

Ricaev

this was a common, given name among the Vratix race. (UANT)

Ricaldi System

this Tapani Sector star system was part of the holdings of House Melantha during the New Order. (LOE)

Riccix New Galactic Dictionary

this dictionary attempted to document every known word in the Basic language. (WSV)

Riccix's Revised Basic Holodictionary

this was one of the galaxy's most comprehensive collections of the words in the Basic language. In addition to text descriptions of words, this dictionary also provided holographic images to visually describe something. This dictionary was noted for the fact that its editors refused to use a picture of Jabba the Hutt within the entry for "Hutt", claiming that "everyone in the galaxy uses that same image of Jabba, and we're sick of it." (WOTC)

Rich

this Alliance technician claimed to be Luke Skywalker's biggest fan, in the triumphant turmoil which followed the Battle of Yavin. (VQ)

Rich Strike Hotel

this large hotel tent was located in Roaring Crater, on the planet Tasariq, and catered to those miners who didn't have their own tents. (SWJ15)

RIC-series Droid

this series of Serv-O-Droid labor automata was developed as a unipod unit, propelled by a pair of disc-mounted treads. The RIC-series was roughly humanoid from the waist up, and was given rudimentary programming in order to allow it accomplish its tasks. Note that this automaton is referred to as an ES-PSA droid in the novelization of Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones. (SWDB)

Ri'Dar

a batlike alien, infamous for their mass paranoia. They are native to the planet Dar'Or, and are about a meter tall. Their faces resemble those of bats, but with large red eyes and sloping foreheads. Their arms are actually wings, and have a span of up to three meters. Six fingers mark the primary joint on the arms, and they have six toes on each foot. Downy, brown fur covers their body. The Ri'dar have a communal society built around the inhabitation of the 200-meter-tall waza trees found on Dar'Or. A warren of Ri'dar families lives in a single tree, while a particular section of forest forms a Ri'Dar city. The original Ri'Dar were simply tree-dwelling mammals, and over time their wings evolved into flying apparatus. Young Ri'Dar are the favorite food of the sloth-like indola, and this probably helped accelerate the development of their wings. The Ri'Dar were considered primitive by the Empire, and were of little consideration when Imperial scientists relocated the elix species to Dar'Or. The avians quickly adapted to life on Dar'Or, and also found the Ri'Dar a tasty meal. The Empire then declared Dar'Or an Imperial Species Preservation Zone, not for the Ri'Dar but for the elix. (CPL, GG4)

Riddle Eight

one of MicroThrust's more efficient computer spikes. (CFG)

Riders of the Maelstrom

this group of humanoid pirates lurked near the Maelstrom, and were under the command of Big Jak Targrim. They had a lucrative operation going, attacking ships that were forced to revert to sublight speeds to pass near the cloud of dust. When Rodin Higrone won the planet Oasis - located within the Maelstrom - in a crooked sabacc match, the Riders suddenly found themselves with competition. To make matters worse, Higrone's pirates only preyed on Imperial ships, and brought Imperial forces into the area. Targrim made a vow to stop Higrone, and created a unusual plan to capture a large starship and crash it into Oasis. When he put the plan into motion, the Riders ended up capturing the Kuari Princess. They managed to lock out any control of the navigational system, and aimed the liner at the planet. Only the timely intervention of Alliance agents saved the Kuari Princess. Most of the Riders escaped. (RM)

Ridil

this man served as a communications officer aboard the Esfandia Long-Range Communications Base, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (FH3)

Riding Bantha

this position of the teras kasi martial artform provided the warrior with a wide stance which provided a solid base from which to move into other positions. (DMSH)

Riding the Mirror

this was the name used by the workers onboard Coruscant's Orbital Solar Energy Transfer Satellites (OSETS) to describe their tours of duty. (CCW)

Riebold's Foam and Sizzle

a notorious drinking hole located on the planet Reecee, known more for murder, mischief, and mayhem than for its food and drink. Han Solo intercepted Dugo Bagy here to obtain information on Lando's Folly. If you killed a rival inside the tavern, but cleaned up the body and the mess, nobody noticed or cared. (VP)

Rieekan Historical Collection

this collection of historical recordings and artifacts was established by Carlist Rieekan, as a kind of museum dedicated to depicting what life was really like during the New Order and the Galactic Civil War. Much of what the galaxy knew about the planet Hoth and its surrounding system came from the Rieekan Historical Collection, due to General Rieekan's extensive investigation into Hoth's suitability for an Alliance base. (PH)

Rieekan, Carlist

a native of Alderaan, Rieekan was the Rebel General in charge of Echo Base on Hoth, just prior to the Battle of Hoth. He joined the Army of the Republic when he was 17, and returned to Alderaan for active duty. There, he became a secret member of the Alliance, and was assisting with the inspection of the satellite transmitters around Delaya when the Death Star moved into position near Alderaan. He knew that Tarkin had been secretly building the battle station, but felt that any transmission warning Alderaan about it would result in the Empire's knowledge of the security breach. He held off in warning Alderaan, but Tarkin destroyed the planet anyway. This single incident hardened Rieekan's resolve to never hesitate in battle, and to never let the Empire surprise him again. After fleeing Delaya with as many of the Alliance's personnel as possible, Rieekan continued to assist the Alliance as commander of Echo Base on Hoth. It was his foresight and planning that allowed the Alliance to escape from Hoth, once its location was discovered by one of Darth Vader's probe droids. Following the loss of Echo Base, Rieekan continued to assist the Alliance, as well as the New Republic, as a General in the armed forces. After Leia Organa-Solo was chosen as the Republic's Chief of State, Rieekan accepted a promotion to Minister of State. He later became the head of New Republic intelligence before retiring. Unfortunately, Rieekan was called out of retirement during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, to act as the commander of Coruscant's Planetary Defense Force. Rieekan was portrayed by Bruce Boa in Star Wars: The Empire Strikes Back. He was also portrayed by Merwin Goldsmith for the The Empire Strikes Back Radio Drama on National Public Radio. (ESB, ESB, MTS, ISU, POT, TT, SBS)

Riemann, Gayla

a native of the planet Aldraig IV, she joined the Alliance shortly after being forced to go into hiding on her homeworld. An artist of some renown, Gayla had studied with some of the Empire's greatest talents during her education. However, she chafed at the snobbish, elitist world in which artists lived during the reign of Emperor Palpatine, and returned to her homeworld to find some peace and joy in her life. She returned to find an Imperial AT-AT production facility in full operation, and a TIE Fighter hull assembly plant under construction. Hating to see what was happening to her homeworld, Gayla began selling her artwork in order to buy weapons for the fledgling underground. She was incarcerated by Governor Talloryn for "agitation," and ordered to paint a series of pictures of the construction of the TIE Fighter hull plant as punishment. However, Gayla gained access to the plant by claiming it was "research" for the pictures, and managed to commit the floorplans of the plant to memory. She later transferred the floorplans to her underground friends, who succeeded in destroying it. The rebels also smuggled Gayla off-planet, fearing that Talloryn would figure out her part in the attack, and she eventually joined the Alliance. She proved to be an excellent starfighter pilot, dedicated to wiping out the Empire, and eventually joined Rogue Squadron. She attributed her skills as a pilot to the fact that she viewed space combat as an artform, and to her hatred of the Empire. (TB, TBSB, WS)

Riesa

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was part of the Empire's fleet in Tapani Sector, at the height of the New Order, and was assigned to patrol the space around Tallaan. This patrol also included the protection of the Tallaan Shipyards. (LOE)

Riesa System

this Tapani Sector star system was part of the holdings of House Calipsa during the New Order. (LOE)

Riethcas

C'baoth's birthplace on Bortras. (DFR)

Riev

this was a common female name given to Sullustan females. It referred to a movement in Sullustan music. (GCG)

Riev

this was a noted musical movement which was popular on the planet Sullust. (GCG)

Riff-Raff

this Gymsnor-3 freighter was rebuilt over a period of years by Korkeal Hai. She had the help of an old computer, which continually nagged Korkeal about the disarray aboard the ship. The 34.1-meter ship was armed with a single heavy blaster cannon, and much of the cargo space was filled with Korkeal's personal cache of spare parts. (GG6)

Rifle Worlds

this section of the Hapes Cluster was settled during the Cluster's industrial period. Much of the Cluster's manufacturing takes place on the worlds of this region. The worlds of the interior regions of the Cluster regarded these planets as second-class worlds, which the settlers deeply resented. The area gets its name from the fact that these worlds once tried to secede from the Cluster in protest of their second-class treatment. (CTD)

Riflette

this was the original name of the SoroSuub X-45 sniper rifle, before it was re-classified as a military weapon. (AEG)

Riflor

this planet, the second world in the Riflorii System of the Mid Rim, was the homeworld of the Advoszec race. It had a thick, deep atmosphere which was laden with volcanic ash. The airborne ash diffused the natural light of the three Riflorii suns, causing native species to develop specialized vision. Riflor was geologically unstable, and was constantly being stressed as it orbited through its trinary star system. Additionally, Riflor was orbited by three moons, adding tidal stress to volcanic activity. The filtered sunlight dropped the average temperature on Riflor despite its proximity to its suns, a situation that forced the Advoszec and other species to live near geothermal rifts. This proved potentially dangerous, since frequent earthquakes cause large amounts of damage. However, the Advoszec found ways to survive for millennia, until the Yuuzhan Vong launched their invasion of the galaxy. The Yuuzhan Vong unleashed a bio-virus that killed the planet's plantlife, starving millions of Advoszec to death. Only those Advoszec who were offworld at the time, as well as the Bomminde family of Tejrivozs, managed to survive. (GG12, GMR4)

Riflorii A

this red giant star was the largest of the three stars that formed the center of the Riflorii System, located in the Mid Rim. (GMR4)

Riflorii B

this unstable, yellow star was part of the trio that formed the center of the Riflorii System, located in the Mid Rim. (GMR4)

Riflorii C

this yellow star was part of the tiro that formed the center of the Riflorii System, located in the Mid Rim. (GMR4)

Rift Disaster

this was the name given to the explosions which destroyed all but one of the ancient Kathol launch gates. In the struggle between the ancient Jedi Knights and the Dark Jedi who had enslaved the Kathol, the launch gates were destroyed, ripping the hyperspace continuum in Kathol Sector. The result was twofold: the creation of the Kathol Rift and the entrenchment of Dark Side energy in the Sector. (E)

Rift Mutation

known to the Empire as the Variant, this bacteria was found in the Kathol Rift. The Mutation was known to do one thing: eat. Once it ran out of food, the bacteria would burn out and die. The Q'Maere Research Facility was almost wiped out by the Mutation, until the bacteria ran out of food when the facility did. This killed off the bacteria, and gave the scientists at the facility a chance to begin growing their own crops. However, they knew that another ship traveling through the Rift would bring the bacteria back. Doctor Vin Emil developed a strain of the bacteria known as Variant Alpha, which would live longer if it didn't eat so much. It was released within the facility, where it bred with the natural form of the bacteria and bred the desire to continually eat out of its genetic makeup. (KR)

Rift Skyrail

this elevated commuter shuttle traverses much of the length of the Teyr Rift, a major tourist attraction on the planet Teyr. It connects all the major cities and spaceports with the various visitor centers and resorts near the landmark. (SOL)

Rig, The

this space station was taken over by the Crimson Nova chapter of the Bounty Hunters' Guild during the last decades of the Old Republic. Located in a remote asteroid field within the Stenness Node, The Rig was a needle-shaped vessel that provided the security and anonymity the bounty hunters required. (RSF)

Rigahuerr Publishing Combine

a large publishing conglomerate headquartered on the planet Coruscant. (CSA)

Rigel VII

this high-gravity planet was the homeworld of a race of hulking, fish-like humanoids. (MC48)

Rigelian Iris

this flowering plant was native to Rigel VII, and was noted for the way its seemed to open at the touch of a hand. (YDR)

Rigglan

this being was a noted pirate, working during the early years of the New Republic. (GUN)

Right ID

this is the brand name of Jaso Corporation's dermatoglyphic identification system. It was regarded as the premier form of physical identification in the galaxy. (TA)

Right to Rule

this was one of the main Imperial-class Star Destroyers serving the Imperial Remnant under the command of Grand Admiral Pellaeon, during the early years of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. It was also one of the oldest ships in the remaining Imperial fleet, and was under the captaincy of Commander Ansween. It was aboard the Right to Rule, during the Imperial defense of Borosk, that Jacen Solo arranged to have known Yuuzhan Vong and Peace Brigade infiltrators stationed. This allowed Jacen and the Imperial to confront their enemies and isolate or eliminate them as necessary. The Right to Rule continued to pursue the Yuuzhan Vong, eventually locating the small force which was dispatched to destroy the New Republic communications base on Esfandia. (FH1, FH3)

Right-handed

this was the Eickarie term for any words which were considered to be the truth. Left-handed words were considered to be lies of falsehoods. (FB)

Rights of Sentience

this set of Old Republic laws governed the rights of any being or race deemed sentient. By law, any being or race deemed sentient was required to be given a full chance to develop itself without outside interference. Such outside interference included slavery and other abuses. (COD)

Rights of Sentience Party

this political faction grew in size and influence during the early years of the New Republic. They believed that the original inhabitants of a given planet, if they were sentient and could make decisions for themselves, should have equal representation in their planetary government. If the original inhabitants were in the majority, then their decision was valid for the entire planet. In some circles, this party was known as the Rights of Sentience League. (POT, COD)

Rigneldia II

this planet, the second world in the Rigneldia System, was the manufacturing center of the Centrality. It was known to have developed its own measuring system which was based on the sizes of its indigenous legumes. Lando Calrissian and Vuffi Raa bought some replacement shield components there, to beef up the Millennium Falcon's shields before aiding the Oswaft. (LCS, GMR5)

Rignik

this Imperial TIE pilot attempted to intercept Boba Fett when the bounty hunter returned to Tatooine with Han Solo's frozen body. (MTS)

Rigo

this alien bounty hunter was the leader of the gang that cornered Obi-Wan Kenobi and the clone trooper known as Alpha on Riflor, during the height of the Clone Wars. Distinguished by his canine snout and eyes that sat atop short stalks, Rigo was a powerful individual. Obi-Wan and Alpha had just escaped from Asajj Ventress' fortress on Rattatak, and their ship had crashed on Riflor. Rigo chose to kill them, rather than capturing them alive, since it was the safest route to collecting the bounty. Unfortunately, the Jedi and the clone were more than a match for Rigo's gang, especially after Anakin Skywalker and Ki-Adi-Mundi arrived to help the escape. Like his comrades, Rigo was killed in the firefight. (RNML)

Rigora

originally defined by Arvo Norstrag as part of the Rules of the Blade, this form of duel was adhered to by the Phosphura Belt Pirates. There were three basic forms of rigora: just rigora, honor rigora, and oath rigora, and they were only invoked in situations where there was a serious breach of personal honor. A rigora could be fought to unconsciousness or death. (PP, SWJ5)

Rigoran

this planet was the site of an Imperial Production Laboratories installation during the Galactic Civil War. (SL)

Rigorian Bloodmite

an insect native to Rigoran. (SL)

Rigorian Mudeater

a slow-moving creature native to Rigoran. (SL)

Rigovian Technical University

one of the best accredited schools of technical knowledge of the late Old Republic. (RP)

Rigton

this small city, located on the planet Naalol, was the site of the planet's major starport. Rigton attracted all sorts of beings who wanted to escape the rest of daily life, many of whom lived underground in the network of tunnels that led into the nearby mountains. (GMR5)

Rigton Spaceport

this was the primary spaceport on the planet Naalol, located in the city of Rigton during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Much of the spaceport was carved from the natural rocky outcroppings found on Naalol, and no two berths were shaped alike. (WOA36)

Riha Archipelago

one of the primary population centers of Rellarin found on the moon Rellnas Minor. (GG12)

Rihkxyrk Attack Ship

this heavy starfighter was developed for Black Sun by TransGalMeg, during the early years of the New Order. The Rihkxyrk (pronounced "rik-zerk") was noted for its incredibly heavy-duty armor plating, which gave it a huge advantage in combat. This plating added substantially to its weight, but the sluggish nature of the Rihkxyrk was offset by its weaponry. The ship had a long, needle-shaped central fuselage that was supported on either side by two pairs of sloped wings. The wings on each side were connected for stability by a pair thick rods, and a pair of flaps at the rear of the ship gave it maneuverability. (SWGAL)

Rihn Utrila

this Force-sensitive Twi'lek worked with his siblings as assistants to Popara the Hutt, during the early years of the New Order. Popara employed Rihn Utrila to scrutinize visitors and identify any who might be Jedi Knights, or latent Force-sensitives who might try to influence his mind. After Popara's death, Rihn and her sisters, Koya and Dai, went to work for Popara's youngest offspring, Mika. The sisters believed it had been Zonnos - and not Mika - who had killed Popara. They were among the many beings Mika employed to protect the Tempest facility on Varl. Rihn herself was in charge of the bridge crew aboard the vessel, on alert to lift off in case the facility was threatened. (TF)

Riileb

this is the homeworld of the Riileb race, located on the fringes of Hutt Space. The planet literally teemed with life, despite the fact that it was exceptionally hot and humid, with little dry land. Note that Alien Encounters claims the planet was located in the depths of Hutt Space. (SWJ13, AE)

Riileb

a race of tall, gray-skinned bipeds native to the planet Riileb, the Riileb were distinguished by their long, thin limbs and knobby hides. They have four nostrils, two for inhalation and two for exhalation, and a pair of insectoid antennae atop their heads. These antennae were polygraphic remnants from their insectoid ancestors, and could be used to detect the moods and biorhythms of other beings. All males, but only married females, were allowed to grow hair on their heads. They maintained strong clan relationships, with the females being regarded as the leaders, and the Motherclan is the ruling body of Riileb. The leader of the Motherclan is deemed the Holder of the Clan Ring. The Riileb were first encountered by a group of Nimbanese scouts who reported their existence to Velrugha the Hutt. The Riileb resisted every assault Velrugha launched at them, and the Hutts eventually left them alone. (SWJ6, SWJ13, AE)

Riin Raas

this tall, mouse-eared Sullustan was a New Republic Intelligence agent who worked on the planet Kirima. His cover was that of a COMPNOR ISB surveillance agent, sent to monitor the activities of Bren-Jules Rordan and his operation. This cover had been established some two years before the implementation of Project Second Chance. (TSK)

Riina Kwaad

this was the name given to Tahiri Veila by the Yuuzhan Vong Mezhan Kwaad, during her attempt to twist Tahiri's memories and create a living bridge between the Yuuzhan Vong and the Jedi Knights. After Tahiri was rescued by the Anakin Solo from Yavin 4 and given a chance to recover, the personality that was Riina remained deep in her subconscious. It began to reassert itself when Tahiri encountered something that was imbued with the Yuuzhan Vong spirit, such as a pendant of Yun-Yammka she found on Galantos. When this happened, Tahiri was plunged into a deep state of unconsciousness, where Riina took control of her mind and tortured her. After several blackout incidents on the planet Bakura, Jaina Solo discovered that the Riina Kwaad personality inside Tahiri's mind still existed, and was rebelling at the possibility that it might be cast out of Tahiri. The blackouts she was experiencing were Riina's attempts to cast out Tahiri's own personality. Riina would have been fully eliminated if Tahiri hadn't experienced the death of Anakin Solo, which triggered doubts within Tahiri's mind. The Republic's victory at the Battle of Ebaq then reinforced the belief that the Republic was winning the war against the Yuuzhan Vong, and Riina began asserting herself more fully in order to avoid complete extinction. Further investigation into the Tahiri/Riina relationship revealed that it had been Riina, not Tahiri, who created a Force bubble to protect Tahiri from the bomb set on Bakura by Blaine Harris. This pointed to a much deeper melding of the two personalities than was first believed. Within Tahiri's mind, the two personalities struggled for control, before both came to the realization that they had to unite in order to survive: if one were killed, the other would die as well. In the end, the two agreed to meld into a single individual. Tahiri's peace was brief, for asfter she agreed to accompany Nen Yim and the Prophet Yu'shaa to Zonama Sekot, she discovered that the Riina Kwaad personality had ben created from the memories of Nen Yim herself. (EVC, FH1, FH2, FH3, FP)

Riirdo

an pirate cargo ferry group destroyed by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War as it tried to deliver supplies to the Alliance. (TIE)

Riistar's Raiders

this pirate group was a member of the Invid conglomerate, and was the chief rival of the Khuumin Survivors. (IJ)

Riizolo, Phan

this pirate was the owner and captain of the Booty Full. He had been working for Leonia Tavira, but broke off their relationship and struck out on his own. He used information she had provided to attempt to capture the Glitterstar, but was apprehended by Rogue Squadron. (IJ)

Rijel-12

this planet was one of many worlds that was caught up in the wave of political maneuvering that occurred shortly after the Battle of Naboo. Only through sensitive negotiations was the Old Republic able to keep Rijel-12 from leaving its membership. (TCD)

Rika/Moab

this small corporation produced a number of high-powered weapons for installation on droids and other automata, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (YDR)

Rikap

this man served as a sensor operator aboard the prospecting ship Pulverizer. Rikap was often overlooking the possibility of trapped gases inside asteroids, which suddenly exploded when the asteroid was blasted apart for retrieval. (FBS)

Rikhous

manufacturers of the Masterline-70 OcTerminal. (VOF)

Rikki

this Codri-Ji was a mere wyrsulf during the height of the New Order, when Mammon Hoole first visited Munto Codru. (EGA)

Rikknit

this multilegged crustacean was native to the hiakk tree canopies of the planet New Plympto. Similar in appearance to a crablike spider, the rikknit was noted for its eggs, which were a vital ingredient in many intoxicants. Individual rikknits create large webs, which trapped the birds and insects that made up the rikknit's diet. During the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo, Supreme Chancellor Finis Valorum tried to make the rikknit a protected species, hoping to stop the flow of ji rikknit and other drugs from New Plympto. (CCW)

Riknak

this Weequay thug was a member of Gardulla the Hutt's crime organization, shortly after the Battle of Naboo. A bounty for his capture was taken out by Hurleydo Travels, after they learned that Riknak had been behind the hijacking of several of their tourist speeders and their occupants. Jango Fett later claimed the bounty, during a mission to locate Gardulla the Hutt. (BH)

Rik-tak

this Ranat cab driver worked on Procopia, always looking for the wealthiest customers. Rik-tak was also an operative of the Justice Action Network, who maintained a regular correspondence with the Rodian Kelsek, providing the Rodian with information he garnered from his customers. Shortly before the Battle of Endor, Rik-tak became involved with a group of Alliance agents who had been hired by House Cadriaan to discover what Vaskel Savill and House Melantha were up to. After the Alliance agents learned of JAN's concurrent plans to destroy the Imperial torpedo sphere at Tallaan, they used the opportunity to discover the location of JAN headquarters. Rik-tak did everything he could to disrupt the actions of the Alliance team, and managed to alert the leaders of the JAN cell on Mrlsst to the impending Alliance assault. Unfortunately for the Justice Action Network, their plans were exposed by the Alliance team. (LOE)

Rikyam

this was the name of the feathery, coiled mass of ganglia that served as the "brain" of a Yuuzhan Vong worldship. It was protected by a thick shell, and could only be accessed by a Shaper. Specialized forms of rikyams were used as libraries to house qahsa memory banks. The rikyam served to provide the basic guidance needed to keep the worldship alive, freeing the Shapers to mold the ship into the desired form. This allowed the worldships to become self-contained ecosystems, maintaining the delicate balance of life throughout generations of travel through the intergalactic void. (EVR, FP)

Ril

this small city was located on Bacrana, just south of the Great Plains. (FBS)

Rilba Bronk

this was a noted member of the Rybet civilization. (UANT)

Rilka

this elderly woman and her husband, Gar, lived on the planet Dantooine some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. (KOTOR)

Rill

this species of bristly-furred carnivore was native to the planet Tatooine. (QQRG)

Rill Out

this was a slang term which indicated a being was going to go to sleep, as in "Don't rill out in the middle of a fight!" (LFCW)

Rill, Tamaron

this man was a supporter of the Alliance, and was wanted by the Empire for a number of crimes. After a bounty was placed on his head, Rill was hunted by his own daughter during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GG10)

Rillao

a female Firrerreo, she fell in love with Hethrir when he was rising to leadership on Firrerre. They both became noticed by Darth Vader for their Force sensitivity, and both trained under Vader to become Jedi Knights. Her special ability to heal with the Force set her at odds with Vader's ideals. Like Hethrir, Rillao's final challenge was to construct a lightsaber which could only be activated by using the Force to complete certain circuits. When she learned that she was pregnant, she was very happy until she learned that Vader and Hethrir were hoping for a Force-sensitive child to carry on the Dark Lord's evil mission. This angered Rillao, and she broke off her training after seeing her son, Tigris, safely aboard a colony ship. Her actions led her to be cast out of Vader's plans, and when the Empire destroyed Firrerre, she was forced to hide out wherever she could. Hethrir eventually hunted her down, and placed on one of the colony ships as he took Tigris with him as a personal slave. There Rillao remained, unable to do anything, until Princess Leia and Chewie discovered the stranded colony ships while trailing Hethrir. Leia woke Rillao, who grudgingly agreed to help Leia take out Hethrir. When they had succeeded in removing Hethrir's threat from the galaxy, Rillao took Tigris and set out to recover the boy's mind from the punishment he had received under Hethrir's rule. (CS)

Rillish

according to Ewok legend, this animal spirit often crept into Ewok villages to surprise and startle Ewoks. (GCG)

Rillish

this was a common name for Ewok females. Like other Ewok names, it referred to a spirit or character in the Ewoks' mythology. (GCG)

Rillrrnnn

native to Kashyyyk, the seeds of this plant are used as a garnish by Wookiee chefs. Dried seeds of the rillrrnnn are ground up and used as a spice. (RD)

Riltka

this was one of the more common surnames used by the Duros people. Like all such names, Riltka was used only for official business, to indicate one individual from another when in the presence of non-Duros. This name literally meant "metalsmith". (GCG)

Rim 3

Boba Fett caught up with the Orramas on this planet, during his hunt for Abal Karda. (EOE)

Rim Commercial Mining

this corporation mined a number of planets in the Mid and Outer Rim Territories. (SWJ14)

Rim Merchant Einem

this converted cargo hauler was used by Wilhuff Tarkin as the flagship of the small Trade Federation fleet he diverted to Zonama Sekot. Tarkin commanded the attack of the planet from the ship, overriding the activities of Raith Sienar. Tarkin planned to present the planet to Supreme Chancellor Palpatine, in an effort to gain favor with the new galactic ruler. The Rim Merchant Einem was damaged in the attack on Zonama Sekot, rammed by its own ships when the planet escaped into hyperspace. (RP)

Rim Riders' Travel Associates

this travel agency specialized in arranging trips to the Rim Territories for Core Worlders who preferred middle-market starliners. (GG9)

Rim Securities

manufacturers of security droids. (RPG)

Rima

this heat-seared ball of rock was the first planet in the Demar System. (FBS)

Rima Borealis

an alias used by Winter when she remained on Coruscant following the Battle of Endor. Rima was the pilot of the slaver ship Merisee Hope. (WG)

Rimble-wine

this was one of the most expensive wines found in the galaxy, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Because its vintages were rare, a single bottle cost a thousand credits or more. (MJH)

Rim-Bound Outfitters

this was one of the many stores which could be found at the Grand Colonnade, on Brentaal, during the height of the New Order. They specialized in a wide variety of equipment and clothing for outdoor activities. (WOTC)

Rimcee Station

this Imperial penal colony was where Moff Disra held Colonel Vermel, after kidnapping him before he could deliver an offer for peace treaty negotiations to Garm Bel Iblis. (VOF)

Rimebat

this sluggish, avian creature was native to the polar regions of the planet Lurr. (CCW)

Rimk

this was one of the most common Gungan surnames, taking from the father's side of the family. These surnames were not dropped, even after marriage. To the Gungans, it meant "powerful swimmer". (GCG)

Rimkar

this alien was one of Tatooine's best pod racers, although he invariably lost races to Sebulba. Rimkar's pod racer was unique among the pods, having a bubble shape instead of something more streamlined. This allowed glancing blows from an opponent's pod racer to slide off, rather than cause damage. However, on a preliminary podrace leading up to the Boonta Eve spectacular, Rimkar failed to properly compensate for the demands of Metta Drop, and destroyed his pod. Note that the Star Wars: Episode I Insider's Guide claims Rimkar was killed when Sebulba forced him to crash into the face of a cliff. (SW1, TPM, IG1)

Rimkin

this was a Core Worlds slang term for anyone who lived beyond the Inner Rim. Most natives of the Outer Rim took great offense at the term. (TFNR)

Rimma

this planet was the site of riots and looting following the cancellation of a concert that was to be performed by Fitz Roi, who was deported for firing his ancient projectile pistols. (SWJ4)

Rimma 13

see Rimma 18 (DMS)

Rimma 18

this was one of many worlds in the Rimma System. During the last decades of the Old Republic, InterGalactic Ores used Rimma 18 as a stopover point for lommite barges moving from Dorvalla, in the Videnda Sector, to Eriadu. Note that this world is also referred to as Rimma 13 in Darth Maul: Saboteur. (DMS)

Rimma Trade Route

anchored by the planet Rimma, this hyperspace pathway connected the Core Worlds with the Colonies as well as the Outer Rim Territories and continued into Kathol Sector. During the height of the Clone Wars, Separatist forces planned to litter the route with proximity mines, hoping to cut off travel for the the Old Republic. The plan was thwarted when the Metrobig Interplanetary Blastport on Skor II was liberated by Jedi Master Mace Windu. Still, the entire Rimward leg of the Rimma Trade Route had eventually been cut off from Republic shipping concerns, after planets long that portion of the route joined the Confederacy of Independent Systems. (SS, PGT, SWI69, LEV)

Rimmer's Alley

this garrishly-lighted thoroughfare was located in the city of Baron's Hed, on the moon of Sulon. Known for the wide variety of vices which could be procured in its shops, Rimmer's Alley led directly to the base of Baron's Knoll. (RAG)

Rimmer's Delight

this bouncing tune was often played by lounge acts and cantina bands during the height of the New Order. (SFE)

Rimmer's Rest

located on the moon of Nar Shaddaa, this tavern was something of an institution among the locals. It was known as a place where any being - regardless of their race, religion, or preferences - could obtain their favorite alcoholic drinks. A collection of more than 1,200 decanters of liquor, along with a wide selection of stimulants and depressants, could be mixed and matched to produce virtually any concoction. Within the walls of the Rimmer's Rest were more than 100 private booths, many of which were configured to support the needs of a variety of alien species. (RAG)

RiMPack

this cybernetic implant is created by 'Geneering Corporation, and is the abbreviated form of Response iMprovement Package. The RiMPack is an extensive replacement of the body's nervous system with a fine neural web of reflex threads produced by the Poraskors of Betal. The neural net has a bio-interface which communicates with the recipient's brain. With a RiMPack, the individual's entire sensory system goes into hyperdrive. They receive incredible amounts of sensor data, and the bio-interface allows them to process it at incredible speeds. This intense sensory load often drives the recipient into intense spasms of paranoid irrationality. (CFG)

Rimrider

this small, Imperial scout ship was stolen by Halagad Ventor when he fled from Darth Vader and landed on Trinta. (DOE)

Rimrunner

this Hutt transport ship crashed into the Jundland Wastes on Tatooine, many years before the Galactic Civil War. (IWST)

Rimrunner

this Alliance freighter group was used to supply the Organarms facility. It was destroyed when the Empire attacked the Organarms platform and destroyed it. (TIE)

Rimrunner

this was the name of Salla Zend's first smuggling ship. She acquired the ship after leaving her job as a tech on a corporate transport. It was a Gymsnor-4 light freighter, and was often referred to as resembling a mynock by Salla's friends. She and Han Solo flew their ships in the Kessel Run several times, and the Millennium Falcon beat the Rimrunner more often than not. In a fateful attempt to beat Han, Salla flew the Rimrunner in a microjump across the mouth of the Maw. The re-entry into realspace fried her instruments and left the ship adrift among the black holes. Han managed to rescue Salla, but the Rimrunner was consumed in the Maw. The fact that she nearly died shook Salla quite hard. (THG, RD)

Rimrunner, Lira

this woman was the Governor-General of Dalos IV during the height of the New Order. She was a convicted criminal, but was elected because she was honest about her past. She used the slogan "At least I'm honest about being a crook" to defeat her opponents, and her sharp wit and charismatic personality ensured her election. Before turning to politics, Lira made a living as a smuggler and gunfighter. (ND)

Rimsen

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Rimsen

a native of the planet Agamar, this man was a Captain in the New Republic Navy, and was in command of the Corusca Fire during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion. He had been ordered by the Republic's High Command to stay away from Dubrillion and Belkadan, a change that kept him close to Agamar. He later took the Corusca Fire to Dantooine, where he served as one of the leading ships in the defense of Dantooine against the Yuuzhan Vong. It was responsible for protecting the refugees fleeing from Dubrillion to Agamar, and nearly destroyed a Yuuzhan Vong worldship in the battle. The only reason it was at the battle in the first place was because Rimsen had learned that Leia Organa Solo had petitioned Agamar for help when the New Republic turned a blind eye to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion.

Rimsen ignored his patrol orders and flew to Dantooine, saving the refugees from almost certain destruction. (DTO, NJOSB)

Rimsoo

this was the phonetic name given to a Republic Mobile Surgical Unit, or RMSU. Each RMSU on a given planet was numbered sequentially, with RMSU-1 being the primary base of operations for all other RMSUs. (MBS)

Rimsoo Five

this was one of the dozen Republic Mobile Surgical Units established on the planet Drongar, during the height of the Clone Wars. It was located about ninety kilometers south of Rimsoo Seven during the early stages of the Jasserak Engagement. (MBS)

Rimsoo One

this was the term used to describe the ground-based medical headquarters of the Grand Army of the Republic, during the height of the Clone Wars. A Rimsoo One facility was constructed on each planet with an active battlefield, and all other Republic Mobile Surgical Units - RMSUs - were erected on subsequent areas of combat. All other Rimsoos were numbered sequentially, starting with Rimsoo Two, for ease of identification. (MBS)

Rimsoo Seven

this was one of many Republic Mobile Surgical Units that were established behind the battlefields of the planet Drongar during the Clone Wars. The facility was attacked during the height of the Jasserak Engagement, an action that went against most accepted military conventions. Up until that point, neither side had purposely attacked the other's medical facilities, in an effort to preserve life wherever possible. However, Rimsoo Seven was overrun in short order, leading to the deaths of many patients and at least one doctor, Zan Yant. The facility was eventually relocated eighty kilometers southeast of its previous position. (MBS)

Rimsoo Three

this was one of the many Republic Mobile Surgical Units that were established on the planet Drongar, during the height of the Clone Wars. Rimsoo Three was located near the Sea of Sponges. (MJH)

Rimstint

this was a term used by law enforcement officers from the Core Worlds who had to track down a criminal who had fled beyond the Inner Rim. The mission to recover the felon was known as a "rimstint." (TFNR)

Rimworld

a generic term used to describe the various planets within the galactic rim. (CSWDW)

Rin Assid

this legendary adventurer and businessman was known in his day as Assid the Lucky. His exploits during the fourth millennium of the Old Republic became the stuff of myths and legends. A jovial fellow, Rin was fond of food and drink of all sorts. A wealthy man, Rin suddenly went bankrupt after donating much of his wealth to needy people and charities. During his heyday, Assid developed a line of cargo transports that were still in production during the New Order. (CSA)

Rin Assid Bulk Hauler

one of the designs of Rin Assid that have recently been produced by Eobaam Shipping Lines, the bulk hauler measured 350 meters in length. It was manned by a crew of 15, and could accommodate ten passengers. The design of the craft was over 700 years old at the time of the New Order, and could accommodate up to 100,000 metric tons of cargo. The navicomputer could handle up to four unique jump coordinates. The bulk hauler had minimal shields, and was not armed. Many of these transports were used by the Corporate Sector Authority. (CSA, PP)

Rin Hawaz

this New Republic Intelligence Major spent time investigating the appearance of battle-site scavengers and the effects of the Historic Battle Site Preservation Act and Operation Flotsam. (CTD)

Rin Shuuir

this being was an ancient Sith sorcerer, active nearly 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. (TOJC)

Rin, Obo

this staunch Imperial supporter worked for Darth Vader himself as a sentientologist, collecting information on the galaxy's many intelligent, non-human races. Rin also developed a "universal definition of life" for use in identifying the difference between living and nonliving creatures. While his work helped expand the information known about many unusual races, Rin's intensely pro-human stance led to several incorrect theories about several species. He made a number of harmless species out to be cold-blooded killers, including the Proteans and Ugors. (GG4, GG8, SWJ12)

Rina Fio

this Vulptereen female served as the President of Viper Sensor Intelligence Systems during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. She was removed from office when Arakyd Industries launched an assault on VSIS headquarters on Vulpter, in response to VSIS' theft of the plans for probe droids. Rina Fio and her directors spent their entire security budget on hiding the development of the XPLR-R droid, leaving the corporate security force at minimal strength. They were no match for Arakyd's AAD-4 assault droids. Rina Fio was removed from her position as President, but remained an employee for Arakyd after the takeover. (HNN5)

Rinacat

a two-meter-long, mountain-dwelling predator native to the planet Carosi XII. The rinacat can track its prey for weeks, and can survive without water for a month. It uses its sharp teeth to hold and tear at its prey. (PG2)

Rincholar

this was a common name among the Snivvian race. (UANT)

Rindao

this planet was under Imperial control during the height of the New Order. (SWJ15)

Rindian

this petite alien race was characterized by their eight-fingered hands and their singsong voices. (EVE)

Rinfo

this man, a small-time criminal from the planet Umgul, was once captured and detained with stun cuffs. (GUN)

Ring Defenders

a title given to those Jensaarai Defenders who maintained a vigilant watch for incoming ships to the Suarbi System, and especially Suarbi 7. After Leonia Tavira obtained control of the Jensaarai, the Ring Defenders also used their Force powers to divert attention away from the Invidious, which was hidden in Suarbi 7's asteroid belt. (IJ)

Ring Drive

this was one of the main engine systems located on a podracer. The ring drive required constant lubrication during operation, or else it could become overheated and seize up. (ETM)

Ring Lake

located near the High Castle on Jomark, this natural lake was formed in the crater of the ancient volcano housing the High Castle. The castle itself was situated nearly 400 meters above Ring Lake, affording a spectacular view of its brilliant, blue waters. It was named because the waters of the lake surrounded a single island, creating a ring of water in the crater. This small island served as the base of operations for

Grand Admiral Thrawn's Imperial forces, sent to Jomark to protect Joruus C'Baath during his attempt to capture Luke Skywalker, some five years after the Battle of Endor. (DFR)

Ring, The

this small nebula was considered part of the Twin Nebulae, located in the Greater Javin area of the galaxy. The Ring was actually the last cloud of radioactive gases being given off by the star that exploded eons ago, creating the Twin Nebulae in the intervening millennia. The star at the heart of The Ring was now a black dwarf. (WOA33)

Ring, The

this was the name given to the innermost circle of buildings and hovels that surrounded the LH-3010 freighter that became the center of Bartyn's Landing, on the planet Lamaredd. The Ring was originally settled by those indentured beings who were imported to Lamaredd to work for Hugo Bartyn's illicit seafood harvesting business. Many of the beings who were brought to Lamaredd balked at being virtually enslaved, and were set free in the middle of the planet's oceans to survive on their own. (GMR7)

Ringali Nebula

a spectacular purple gas cloud located within the Ringali Shell. (SWJ7, E1A1)

Ringali Shell

named for the Ringali Nebula which fills its boundaries, the Ringali Shell was an area of the galaxy that contains space in the Core Worlds outward to the Colonies region. It encompassed Darpa and Bormea Sectors, and served as the wellspring of the Perlemian Trade Route. (SWJ7, FOP)

Ringali Shell Security Force

this largely civilian security force patrolled the Ringali Shell during the Galactic Civil War. The RSSF was given the mission to provide emergency assistance to disabled ships, and could deal with minor smugglers and criminals without requiring Imperial support. They had jurisdiction in both Darpa and Bormea Sectors. The RSSF was formed early in the history of the Ringali Shell, and was the premier security force in the area before the Old Republic expanded its borders and left behind a small fleet. (FOP)

Ringed Moon Shadowmoth

this species of moth was native to the planet Coruscant. It was noted for its incredibly beautiful wingsong, a form of music created when the moth beat its wings in the night skies. Shadowmoths were nocturnal, so beings who wanted to hear their song had to wait up for it. What was unusual about the shadowmoth was its silicate-based cocoon. This cocoon was incredibly tough, and was seemingly too strong for the larval shadowmoth to break through. However, each infant moth was equipped with a specialized beak with which to crack the cocoon. In the struggle to break free, the shadowmoth's own body was strengthened, so that it could survive once it had evolved into a moth. Many beings felt that the cocoon was too strong, and often assisted the shadowmoth in getting free. While the intentions of these individuals were good, the shadowmoth was not forced to break free on its own, an activity which strengthened its wings and developed a stronger body. Because they could not fly, these shadowmoths often died because it was unable to survive. (T)

Ringer

ringer was a sport popular on the planet Stassia during the Imperial occupation of the planet. Entire tournaments are set up for it, culminating in the week-long Sweepstakes each year. All participants, known as tossers, were required to use the same equipment: small metallic disks which could be thrown through the air. Each contestant stood behind a line, facing an open area filled with rings. Each ring was different: some were held in place, while others swayed on lines or floated on tiny repulsors. The goal for each player was to toss their disk through as many rings as they could, gauging the direction and force of each throw to pass through the maximum number of rings. Among the rings was the Ace Ring, which was worth more points than the others, and could help a tosser quickly gain points. It was difficult at best, though, to put a disk through the Ace. (SWJ6)

Rinit, Nir

this Imperial Security Bureau agent was assigned to seek out Alliance activities in the space surrounding the planet Naalol, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He was known to have employed a variety of mercenaries and other goons to do his dirty work. Among Rinit's best operatives was the bartender, Aveton Prit, who was able to glean all sorts of information from the customer's at Prit's Free Pit. (GMR5, WOTC)

Rinn

this remote, Outer Rim planet was the homeworld of the Tin-Tin Dwarves. (EGA)

Rinn, Denglass

this man was installed as the Imperial Prefect of Kallistas simply because he couldn't cause any harm to the Empire there. He was a paranoid man who suffered from a series of delusions, many of which he developed to explain his slow progress up the Imperial power ladder. He maintained a set of long, jet black mustachioes and beard. He chafed at the preceived "lack of respect" he received from Governor Linrec, and was openly defiant about many trivial matters. He plotted with the Mantis Bounty Hunter Syndicate and a minor Imperial official on Revkinn to destroy Linrec's career, hoping to take over Kallistas for himself and reaping the profits from the sales of gemstones and radioactive isotopes. Rinn began importing weapons, with the help of Tarquin Zian, and started stockpiling the isotopes in order to manufacture bombs. After arranging for the capture of Pallas Quintell, and upon hearing of Cressis Linrec's plans to marry Jondrell Inx, Rinn offered a bounty for Inx's capture. The bounty hunters nearly captured the pirate, but had to settle for returning Cressis to her father. Unfortunately for Rinn, the bounty hunters also discovered Rinn's plans to unseat Governor Linrec. He fled the planet, and went into hiding somewhere in the Outer Rim. (GG10, GG11)

Rin'na

this was the Rodian word for the finest hunters of a Rodian clan. In the Basic tongue, it meant "protector," as these Rodians were charged with protecting their clans from the predators of the planet. (SPG)

Rinou, Shella

this woman was the youngest of Malcolm Dallory's daughters. During the height of the New Order, she rose to power as the Captain of a large smuggling fleet, with the help of her good friend, Kelric. She gained a great deal of respect from her father and his name, which helped keep her business growing. (SPG)

Rin-Rin

this Gupin, the only member of his clan without wings, was blamed for the illness that befell the Ewok DeeJ, some time before the Battle of Endor. Wicket and his brothers, Willy and Weechee, discovered that Rin-Rin was not responsible, and freed him. Rin-Rin and the Ewoks then sought out the herbs and plants that could be used to create a cure for DeeJ. (ECAR)

Rintatta City

this city, located on the planet Exocron, was the site of a secondary spaceport. Talon Karrde landed here, during his search for Jorj Car'das. It was primarily a military outpost, and was nestled against a range of short mountains. (VOF)

Rintonne

this planet was the primary world in the Rintonne System. (HNN5)

Rintonne System

this star system was located in Lambda Sector. It was controlled by Imperial Governor Serdis Tount during the early years of the New Republic. (WBC, HR)

Rintonne's Flame

this Bayonet-class light cruiser supported the Thunderflare and the Stalker in Moff Andal's fleet patrolling the Elrood Sector. It was commanded by Captain Dongal Tezrin. (OE, PG3)

Riome

this small world was one of the outermost planets in the Dorvalla System of Videnda Sector. It was blanketed by a perpetual mantle of snow and ice. During the last decades of the Old Republic, the Toom Clan maintained a staging base on this world, to deflect attention from their main base on Dorvalla itself. (DMS)

Riome Seasnake

this ribbonlike reptile was native to the oceans of the planet Riome. (CCW)

Rion

this tropical paradise world was the home of Tana's Resort until the Empire, represented by Captain Bzorn, used the Ionic Ring to turn it into a frozen wasteland. Bzorn suspected that Alliance cells were growing on the planet, and chose it as a target. (CSWEA)

Rion

this Corellian man was one of the leaders of the rebels on the world who opposed Imperial rule. Rion was Bria Tharen's main link to the rebel leaders, and she worked at the Imperial headquarters on Corellia so that she could obtain information for him. (THG)

Rion

this was the capital city of the planet Junction 5, located along the banks of a wide, blue river. (LOJ)

Rior

this planet is the homeworld of the Riorian race. (WBC)

Riorian

this insectile race of humanoids is native to the planet Rior. Their large heads are dominated by a drooping cranial sac, and they lack noses and mouths. In their place is a series of chitinous gills that protect the Riorian's respiratory organs and ingestion tissues. The average Riorian has large, red eyes. They are a peaceful species. (WBC)

Riot Gun

any large laser weapon used to subdue a crowd. (HSE)

Rip da slippity

this was a phrase used by Gungan bongo racers to indicate and daring, high-speed maneuver that resulted in reaching the finish line fastest. (GMR4)

RIP-17

a SoroSuub autochef. (GG9)

Ripclaw

this predatory beast was known to feed on nerfs, although certain populations of nerfs learned to ram the ripclaw in the chest to prevent being eaten. (GMR5, OWS)

Ripclaw

this Imperial Star Destroyer was dispatched to Delphon to eliminate the Black Hole Gang, during the years following the Battle of Yavin. (GMR6)

Ripoblus

a group of starships destroyed by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Ripoblus

this planet is the homeworld of the Ripoblus culture, and is located in the Sepan System. (TIE)

Ripoblus

native to the Sepan System, the Ripoblus culture was locked in a bitter civil war with the Dimoks until the Empire intervened, shortly after the Battle of Hoth. The Ripoblus tended to welcome the added Imperial presences, but changed their minds when the Empire impartially defeated both sides in numerous battles. The Ripoblus joined forces with the Dimoks, but their combined might was not enough to overcome the Empire. (TIE)

Ripter

one of Captain Huba's thugs, Ripter was a large, red-skinned humanoid with a wide body and pointed ears. He lost a vump-shugga race with C-3PO and R2-D2, when a vynock attacked him. Ripter tried to remove the small beast, but lost control of his skyhopper and crashed into a rocky spire. Ripter managed to survive, and returned to the pirates' hideout in time to disarm Olag Greck, who had come to kill Huba and his chefs. (DRO)

Riptide

this was one of the Nebulon-B frigates which were used by the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Ris

this technology was invented during the height of the New Order. (GQRG)

Ris Darsk

this was Erii Dlarit's alias when she infiltrated Coruscant. Ris Darsk was the Kuati master of the telbun Darsk Ristel, played by Corran Horn. (WG)

Risa

this young woman was a princess, and the daughter of King Cleroff, who ruled the daylight side of her homeworld. Risa and Prince Gil were pursued by a band of brigands when Han Solo and the Millennium Falcon suddenly appeared from an energy disturbance and crashed into their planet, some months after the Battle of Endor. She became enamored of Han when he saved them from the brigands, but Han knew he could never return her affections. In order to escape this sticky situation, Han arranged to have Prince Gil kidnapped by other brigands, so that King Cleroff could pay his ransom and make Gil's family indebted to him. In this way, Cleroff could demand Gil's marriage to Princess Risa as recompense. Risa's reaction was exactly what Han had hoped for: she called him all manner of names and demanded that he get Prince Gil back unharmed. Han's plans were nearly thwarted by Marius, but Han had anticipated his treachery and outwitted him. (MC101)

Risban

this planet was located in the Tion Hegemony. (HAS)

Rish

this was a common name given to male Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Rish

this name was given to female Zabrak, and meant "young" - or, more literally, "youthful appearance". (GCG)

Rish

primary star for the planet Rishi. (DFRSB)

Rish

this was one of the most common names used by the Farghul people. (UANT)

Rish Who Slew Vahgar the Drunken Houk

this was the name of a Jenet who was famous in the history of the planet Garban. (UANT)

Rish-ek olgrol immek'in inwey

this Yuuzhan Vong phrase was often used by the members of the Shamed Ones, to plead that they were nothing in the eyes of their masters. It indicated an individual's lowly status, but its exact meaning was never fully comprehended. (FH1)

Rishi

the third world orbiting the star Rish, Rishi was the backwater world where Talon Kaarde tried to hide from the Empire following the discovery and infiltration of his base on Myrkr. It was the homeworld of the Rishii, and was known as the base for the religious sect called the H'kig. The native Rishii allowed offworlders to visit the planet, so long as they didn't break the religious laws. Of the habitable land found on Rishi, much of it was swampland that had to be drained in order to provide a stable building platform. Over time, this created large sinkholes, and the colonists who settled the planet were forced to relocate their homes inside these sinkholes. The rest of the planet was carved by deep canyons. Rishi's crust has a few marketable metal ores which were mined by the native humans. The planet had an orbit of about 268 local days, each of which lasted 20 standard hours. (DFR, DFRSB, SWI80)

Rishi Maze

although many beings who first hear of this name come to think of the Rishi Maze as a remote trade route that was located beyond the Outer Rim Territories, in reality the Rishi Maze was a irregular dwarf galaxy that was completely contained within the known galaxy. The Rishi Maze was gravitationally locked in place, and the multitude of stars and planets caused all manner of trouble for hyperspace travel in the area. Thus, the name Rishi Maze came about, because any hyperspace routes through the Maze were incredibly snarled. (AOTCN, SWI80)

Rishi Rift

this interstellar deadzone was located near the planet Rishi. (GMR4)

Rishii

this species of small, flying creatures was native to the mountainous regions of the planet Rishi. These primitive, feathered creatures have human-like hands located at the joint in their wings, which they used to manipulate their tools. These hands were also used to wield primitive slings while hunting. They prefer to live in nests located in the tallest trees and on mountains, and have a great capacity to learn languages. The Rishii considered the offworlder who settled on their planet to be curiosities, not understanding their need to live in the lowlands. The Rishii were very interested in the "shiny rocks" used by the settlers - their spaceships - because they allowed species without natural wings to fly. (DFR, DFRSB, AE, EGA)

Rising Meditation

this meditative technique was developed by the Jedi Knights, and involved using the Force to rise off the ground while maintaining a meditative position such as Repose. (MBS)

Rising Moon

this hotel was considered the most luxurious of the three establishments in the town of Corestrike, on Chrona, and catered to the needs of visiting executives and wealthy gamblers. (SWJ12)

Rising Path, The

this was the Basic translation of a Wookiee term, used to describe the decision by a young Wookiee to leave Kashyyyk and explore the galaxy. (GB)

Rising Star

this was the name of Raabakyysh's skimmer. (TEP)

Riskin

this native of the planet Nordra served the Alliance as a Colonel on the planet Baskarn, commanding Advanced Base Baskarn during the early stages of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ2)

Risky

this was one of the many names given to female Bothans. In the Bothan language, it meant "inquisitive" or "curious." (GCG, WOTC)

Rislar

this man was a noted Corellia pirate, who maintained his crew's loyalty and behavior by carrying a Duelist vibrorepier. During the last years of the Galactic Civil War, Rislar and his crew signed on with the Alliance as privateers. (GUN)

Risol

this independent spacer worked from a base on Tatooine during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Risol had heavily modified an LE-series repair droid to serve as his scheduler, bookkeeper, and repairman. (FTD)

Ristel

this ball of searing rock was the innermost planet of the Kuat System. (CCW)

Ritam

an Alliance Corvette destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Rite of the Retribution

this was one of the primary laws of the Society of the Black Bha'lir. In the event of a member of the Society deceiving or dishonoring its brotherhood, that member was bound by their oaths to accede to the Rite of Retribution. In this ritual, a tribunal convened to mete out punishment, and the offending being was bound by their oath to accept the punishment, be it expulsion or execution. Those members of the Black Bha'lir who personally hunted out and eliminated violators of the Society's laws were considered "bloodied," and were held in high esteem. (BSS)

Rites of Conch-tar

this Anguilla ritual was developed to prove the strength and skills of a fighter. Those who survived the rites were elevated to positions of power. Those who failed were ostracized. The Rite of Conch-tar involved entering a dark cave which is covered with a phosphorescent seaweed which can affect the mind of certain beings. Force-sensitives were immune to the affects of the seaweed, which induces a deep, dreamstate in which a being must confront their deepest fears. Force-sensitive beings, or those who recover from the seaweed's effects, must confront a piscator and defeat it in battle. (OE)

Rith Tar'ak

this renowned Ebranite served the Alliance as an intelligence operative and recruiter. Rith and her sisters, Nyik and Tor'ara, were members of the Rull clan, and were sold into slavery in their youth when the Empire took control of Ebra. The three sisters managed a daring escape, forcing the pilot of an Imperial shuttle to take them to the Alliance, where they became some of the first Ebranites to serve. They served in Kesh Sector before joining the ranks of Scandium Team, where they founded the Sandstorm Unit of desert-environment Infiltrators. Rith herself was considered the best desert fighter of the trio, although she rarely used a blaster and preferred to use the traditional weapons of the Ebranites. Rith was the only surviving member of the family following the Wellte-ir Massacre. Rith was transferred to Yntrann, but later turned down a promotion to full Colonel in order to return to Ebra as a recruiter. (GG12, SWJ11)

Rithgar

this old pirate served as the administrator of the Kothlis Shadowport during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He maintained a chamber within the caverns of Kothlis' second moon to house the treasures he had plundered during his days as a space pirate. (SESB)

Ritinki

this Bimm, the main rival of Guttu the Hutt, ordered the murder of Lyle Lippstroot. He then inserted his own double in Lyle's place, hoping to obtain possession of a locked box which Vop the Usurer had acquired from the Ithorians aboard the Song of the Clouds. Ritinki had learned that the lockbox held a Hapan Gun of Command. Ritinki agreed to meet with Vop on the herdship, mainly to draw the Rodian into a trap. In the end, Vop was shot and killed, but Ritinki was caught in the backlash of an explosion set off by the pirates who worked for Cecil Noone. Noone and his crew made off with Ritinki's personal starship, the Asaari Wind. The thieves also obtained the lockbox, and Ritinki was left for dead. Inside the box was a rifle-sized Hapan gun of command, which Noone and his band tried fruitlessly to sell. (SWJ15, GMR1)

Ritual of the Children

this Ewok ceremony insured that the spirit of a dying Father Tree was transferred to a seed to be reborn. This ritual was required before any a Tree could be cut down. (SWJ1)

Ritual Tale of Kibh Jeen

this was the story of the fallen Jedi Knigh Kibh Jeen, which was retold annually by the instructors of the Almas Academy during the last centuries of the Old Republic. (LFC)

Riun Riev

this Sullustan was one of the many designers who worked on the Incom Industries I-7 Howlrunner. He was also one of the few designers who were retained by the Empire when Incom was nationalized. When Colonel Garr took command of the Fresia installation, Riun Riev was assigned to "clean up Incom's image" after a series of engineers defected with the plans to the T-65 X-Wing starfighter. He worked hard to accomplish this task, more out of fear of failing than any desire to achieve the goal. He secretly hoped that a team of Alliance agents would arrive on Fresia and liberate them from the Empire. (CCW)

Riv Shiel

this Shistavenan Wolfman was a member of Wedge Antilles' X-Wing Rogue Squadron. He earned an Imperial deathmark by killing a stormtrooper who thought he was Lak Sivrak. He continued to serve with distinction until he contracted the Krytos virus after the liberation of Coruscant. He was treated with bacta almost immediately, but was sidelined for some time during his recovery. Riv returned to active duty after the Rogues broke away from the New Republic, but was killed near Thyferra when the Corrupter intercepted the Rogue waylaying a bacta shipment. Riv and Gavin Darklighter were escorting the Xucphra Alazhi when the Star Destroyer took out Riv's X-Wing. The dead ship slammed into the Alazhi and detonated it. Darklighter fled to Halanit as the other Rogues returned home. (XWN, KT, BW)

Riva

this woman was Denetrus' landlady on Telos, some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. She had survived a famine on the planet some fifty years before, and was considered crazy because of the way she hoarded things. (DOR)

Rivan, Dix

a member of the X-Wing Rogue Squadron following the Battle of Hoth, Dix was a shy, private person known to his squadron-mates as "Dixie." He was the squadron's rear guard, both on land and in space, and worked hard to ensure that his team made it safely home before making his own escape. Dix was killed in the raid on the moon Gall, during the attempt to recover Han Solo's body from Boba Fett. (SE, SESB)

Rivaz

this man was a professor of science at the Imperial Academy on Raithal, during the height of the New Order. He worked with the physical science department to modify the programming of several GY-I information droids for use in analyzing certain natural phenomena. (FTD)

Rive

this was a common name among Cerean females. Unlike their male counterparts, Cerean females use a single name unless they became a bond-wife. In this case, a female will take on their husband's grandfather's name for official matters. The name Rive referred to a wise wife in Cerean mythology. (GCG)

Rive

this was the name of a wise wife from Cerean mythology. (GCG)

River District Flyway

this spur of the Rift Skyrail was a speeder route which had only a single track. (SOL)

River Gardens

this name was used for the Kell Plath subdivision of Sodonna, on Teyr, after the Fallanassi fled the planet. (SOL)

River of Blood

this was one of the many Yuuzhan Vong warships which was called to the planet Coruscant - remade into a new version of the planet Yuuzhan'tar - just before the alien invaders launched their all-out attack on the Galactic Alliance's stronghold on Mon Calamari. (UF)

River of Light

this wondrous waterway was located on Qui-Gon Jinn's homeworld. Qui-Gon kept a worn stone from the River of Light as a reminder of his homeworld. (HP, NEGC)

River Serpent

this dangerous reptile inhabits the rainforests of Kirtania. These lizards grew to three meters in length, and used their long bodies to constrict their prey. Their bodies are protected by a large frill that surrounds their neck. (SWJ1)

River Solleu

this river meandered across the surface of the planet Naboo, and was at the base of the plateau on which the city of Theed was built. Small tributaries of the River Solleu wind through and under the city, creating a vast array of waterfalls that drop to the riverhead below. (IG1)

River Weeping

this wide river, located on the planet Vjun, fed into the Bay of Tears. It was a major waterway for the transport of goods and people, which also made it a perfect place for pirates. (YDR)

River, The

not really a body of water, the River is wide boulevard in the Off-worlders' Quarter of Ropagi II. Both sides of the road are lined with bars and cantinas which serve every sort of drink imaginable to the visitors of the planet. Visitors whose droids are forced to leave them in the Scrap Heap during their visit to the River. (TSK)

Rivers of Stone

a cavern on Dathomir where Barukka lives, it is named for the flowing patterns of stone throughout its length. (CPL)

Rivers, Meghan

one of the survivors of the Battle of Hoth, Rivers was evacuated on the Bright Hope. (TBH)

Riversnake

this aquatic snake was native to the jungles of Haruun Kal. (SHPT)

Riverwander

this was one of the many clans of the Nosaurian race, which was native to the planet New Plympto. (CCW)

Rivorian Grain-bandit

this rodent was named for the fact that it stole ripe grain from farms. A swarm of them could wipe out an entire field of crops in an evening. (JH)

Rivves

this was a common name among Quarren females. It meant "musical", and was generally believed to refer to low-pitched percussion instruments. (GCG)

Rivvidu

this planet was under Imperial control during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (ANT)

Rix

this was one of the more common names given to males of the Mon Calamari race. To the Mon Calamari, this name meant "secretive". (GCG)

Rixen

this woman was an Alliance agent. She was double-crossed by Do'naal and captured by the Empire on Kuat. (SESB)

Riza

this Alliance agent was an expert speeder bike pilot. (GMH)

Rizaar, Fenn

this bounty hunter once worked for the Mantis Syndicate. Rizaar was employed to track down Kaine Paulsen during the early days of the New Order. He mistakenly shot an Imperial stormtrooper in the process, and was about to be shot down when Paulsen himself rescued Rizaar. They fled to Socorro, and after learning that Mantis has denied his very existence and placed a bounty on his head, Rizaar accepted an offer to join Paulsen. Paulsen found himself between a rock and a hard place, for he learned that the Black Bha'lir wanted to turn Rizaar in for the bounty. Paulsen's testimony in front of the leadership of the Black Bha'lir eventually led to Rizaar's freedom, and he swore a life-debt to Paulsen and the Black Bha'lir. Rizaar also hoped one day to exact a measure of revenge on Mantis, but his loyalties remained with the Socorrans. (BSS)

Rizaron

this was one of the Aramadia-class thrustships that was guarding the Yevethan shipyards in ILC-905 when the Vanguard and its fleet arrived in the system. (TT)

Ri'zat

this was a common name among the Noehon race. (UANT)

Rizz, Valon

this man served as a Corporal at the garrison on Stassia, where he grew a number of unusual and exotic plants. A native of Stassia, Rizz was an ambitious young man who was attending the local police academy when the Empire arrived to take control of Stassia. Using the opportunity, Rizz dedicated himself to becoming an Imperial investigator, and was part of Imperial Governor Pergallis' public relations plans to promote the Empire and its New Order. Rizz, however, was not willing to give the Empire complete credit for his success. He did realize, though, that he'd be just a dirt-side cop if the Empire hadn't arrived when it did. (SWJ6)

Rizzal

this Turazza was the sister of Nizzal and Vizzal, the trio of Turazza which bonded to Loh'khar when they hatched from their eggs at Galliwig's Cantina. The trio thought of Loh'khar as their father, and traveled Kathol Sector with him. When Loh'kahr decided to join the crew of the FarStar, Rizzal and her sisters followed him. Rizzal was the quietest of the three sisters, and served as Loh'khar's primary information gatherer. Like her sister Vizzal and Loh'khar, Rizzal was emotionally damaged by Nizzal's defection with Khzam. (DARK, KO)

RJ-2/ZZ/8000

a made-up verbal code phrase Han Solo uses to try and gain access to the Maw Installation. (JS)

RK-7

this Trade Federation battle droid was one of the commanders dispatched by Nute Gunray to secure the Theed Palace during the Battle of Naboo. (SON)

RK-720

this SoroSuub freighter design was originally conceived by engineers and designers on the planet Genarius. The prototype RK-720, known as the Sivulliq, was stolen from the SoroSuub headquarters in the Cularin System, but was eventually returned to SoroSuub by the citizens of Cularin. Miim Te'Suub, the Director of Formal Activities for SoroSuub, announced that the corporation decided to forego producing such an exquisite starship design. Instead, they turned the Sivulliq over to one of the Cularin natives who turned the ship in. (WOTC)

R'Kayza

this Gand assassin was employed by Yin Vocta as a bodyguard and hired gun for the Bantha Traxx establishment. He had been a legendary Findsman and also a bounty hunter, but left the bounty hunting trade because of the difficulties in bringing back live marks. He decided to become an assassin, and his exploits attracted the attention of Vocta, who hired him on the spot and partnered him with Haelon Tice. Where Tice was loud and obnoxious, R'Kayza was stealthy and cunning. Like all Findsman, R'Kayza used ancient meditative ceremonies to plan his work, and he rarely said anything more than was absolutely necessary. (WSV)

Rkik Dnec

this was the name of a noted Jawa. (UANT)

R'kik D'nec

this Jawa, often found roaming the palace of Jabba the Hutt, was undefeated at the Dune Sea version of sabacc. At least, there were no witnesses to any defeats. Popular legend had it that R'kik single-handedly defeated a tribe of Sand People in the desert near Tatooine's Dune Sea, and a bantha tusk he owns seems to prove the story. He is known to his tribe as the Hero of the Dune Sea. (CCG7)

Rkrrrkrl

this is the name given by the Wookiees to a creature which inhabits the Shadow Forest of Kashyyyk. The name rkrrrkrl translates to 'trap-spinner,' which describes the way the creature builds elaborate traps to catch its prey. (TT)

Rkok

a clan of Tatooine Jawas that tried to sell questionable merchandise to Jabba the Hutt. Jabba destroyed their sandcrawler and fed the entire clan to the Sarlacc. (ISU)

RL-40

this was Golan Arms' stun netting launcher. Smaller than the RGL-80A, the RL-40 fired a duracord netting which was covered with liquid adhesive and interwoven with stun threads. When the netting hit its target, it stuck fast to capture the target. Any movement or struggle set off the stun threads, immobilizing the target with an electric jolt. (EGW)

RLG System

this is the brand name of Arakyd's guardian droid security system. It was known as a system, because the RLG was actually two droids, one which was operating and one which was recharging, giving the owner complete protection with little downtime. The small droids were equipped with tiny repulsors, and floating along behind their owner. One droid was worn on a belt pack, where it recharged its power cells. The other trailed slightly behind the owner, scanning the surroundings for any perceived threat. Each small droid was armed with a blaster pistol. (FOP, GFT)

RLW-77

this model of wrist laser was designed and manufactured by Koromondain PDS. (GG10)

R'Iyek

this ancient Twi'lek clan was a sworn enemy of the Doneeta clan for many generations. Tott Doneeta returned to Ryloth, following the Exis Convocation, and merged the two clans in an effort to end the feud. (TOJR)

RM-2020

this was the designation of MerenData's espionage droid, manufactured during the height of the New Order. Built to intimidate rather than infiltrate, the RM-2020 was designed to gather information from the battlefield. Its primary mission profile was to spot enemy troop movements and analyze an enemy force's weaknesses, then relay the information back to its base. Measuring a meter in height and equipped with a repulsorlift engine, the RM-2020 was unarmed but sported a variety of sensory packages. (FTD)

RMD-20

also known as the Eye In The Sky, this was the model number of Kystallio Detection Plus' surveillance remote. The RMD-20 was popular because it was very inexpensive yet reliable, providing audio and video surveillance of a specific target. Because the RMD-20 measured just under a third of a meter in diameter, it could get into locations most other surveillance droids could not. (EGW, GFT, AEG)

Rneeki

an alien race of pirates that tried to ransom a captured TIE Defender scientist back to the Empire. They were double-crossed by the Imperials, losing the scientist and the ransom money. (TIE)

Ro

this was a common component used to create the names given to Cerean males. In general, male Cereans given an individual name, which is added to the names of their father and grandfather. Complete male names are arranged based on harmony and cadence, but the literal meanings are arranged to ensure proper descriptions. The name Ro indicated fire, flames, or heat. (GCG)

Ro Fenn

this obese Twi'lek male was the leader of his clan, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. He was a member of the Twi'leki head-clan when Pol Secura was killed, and was to be forced to walk into the Bright Lands by Twi'leki law. Ro Fenn hired Vilmaar Gahrk to find a way to ensure his life was not sacrificed. Villie suggested kidnapping Nat Secura, the son of Lon Secura and the one Twi'lek who stood to benefit the most from Ro Fenn's death. Ro agreed, but was unaware that, behind the scenes, his exiled son Kh'aris Fenn actually carried out the kidnapping. Ro then confronted Lon Secura, planning to use the disappearance of Nat Secura as a bargaining chip, when Kh'aris decided to come out of hiding. Kh'aris, angry that his father had not worked to overturn his exile, forced Ro Fenn and Lon Secura to agree to his demands. Ro Fenn refused, but Kh'aris had had enough. He exiled Ro Fenn, and set out to take control of the planet. Before Kh'aris could put his plans fully into motion, Lon Secura secretly met with other clan leaders. He presented all the evidence of the treachery of Ro Fenn as well as Kh'aris Fenn, and the combined leaders decided to exile both Fenns to the Bright Lands. Ro was captured immediately, while Kh'aris escaped. (ROP)

Ro Hypa

this fat, red-scaled reptile was native to the deserts of Mataou. The ro hypa appeared to be a snake, but it moved about by using four black tentacles like legs. The ro hypa was considered one of the most venomous - and dangerous - creatures in the Greater Javin, as its venom could swiftly transform blood from a liquid to a gas. Any being bitten by the ro hypa suffered an agonizing death, although it was generally a swift demise. This venom was found to have certain medicinal properties, and was harvested by snake wranglers for sale throughout the Greater Javin. (WOA33)

Ro Vira

this was the name of a noted Zabrak individual. (UANT)

Ro, Idris

this man commissioned Jobany Cyrs to scout the planet Socorro for the Alliance. (BSS)

Roa

Roa was a smuggler from the times of the Old Republic, and was a master of the Kessel Run. He regularly pushed the envelope and made the Run in near-record times. He was living on Nar Shaddaa when he met Lwyl, and the two fell in love. Their romance was nearly ended when Roa crashed during the Battle of Nar Shaddaa, but he managed to escape before his ship - the Lwyl - exploded. He resolved to restrain his cockiness, and he and Lwyl were married shortly after the battle. They began to think of the young smugglers Roa was working with as their children. Among the youths they took was Han Solo, who was just starting to cut his smuggler's teeth after being expelled from the Academy. He was known as one of the best smugglers and blockade runners in the galaxy. He took Han under his wing and taught him a great deal about smuggling. Han participated in his first Kessel run while on a mission with Roa. When Han began to excel, he and Roa parted company on somewhat honorable terms. Roa and his wife, Lwyl, retired from smuggling soon after, and built a large and lucrative import-export business near Bonadan. Han bumped into Roa while trying to book passage from Roonadan to Ammuud. They met again nearly forty years later, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Roa's wife, Lwyl, had been killed in a Yuuzhan Vong attack which was precipitated by the efforts of the Peace Brigade, and Roa was out for revenge. He convinced Han, who was still grieving the loss of Chewbacca, to help him in locating Reck Dosh. However, the trail led them to Ord Mantell and the Jubilee Wheel, just before the Yuuzhan Vong attacked there. Despite Han's efforts, Roa was literally sucked into a Yuuzhan Vong carrier and taken away to become an energy source for the immature yammosk growing aboard the Creche. On the clustership, Roa met Wurth Skidder. They tried to disrupt the plans of the Yuuzhan Vong commander Chine-kal, but only succeeded in exposing their plans. Roa managed to survive, and was rescued by Han and Droma at the Battle of Fondor. (HSR, CSA, THG, HT, JE)

Road to Mandalore

this song, written and played by the band Red Shift Limit, first appeared on the compilation Thoughts from the Core. It was banned by the Imperial Board of Culture. (GG9)

Roahks 7m Skyship

this unusual form of transportation was developed and manufactured by OmoTact Corporation. It measured fifteen meters in length, and required a crew of six to operate. It could transport up to eight passengers and their cargo on a trip through the atmosphere. They were propelled by Ponrez/Arc repulsorlifts in the event that there was no natural breeze. (GG2)

Roak

this man served the Alliance as a naval officer, and was the First Officer serving under Captain Chedaki on Leia Organa's mission to Shiva IV. Roak was forced to take control of the ship when a micromine struck the hangar bay, disabling the shuttle that Leia and Chedaki had taken for the trip to Shiva IV. (MC53)

Roali

this was a common name among Cerean females. Unlike their male counterparts, Cerean females use a single name unless they became a bond-wife. In this case, a female will take on their husband's grandfather's name for official matters. The name Roali referred to a willow-like tree that was native to the planet Cerea. (GCG)

Roali

this species of willow-like tree was native to the planet Cerea. (GCG)

Roamer-6

this model of breath mask was produced by Gandorthral Atmospheric. It was a simple unit, designed for ease of use, and consisted of a rigid mask, and air canister, and a filtration device. The mask was equipped with an adjustable strap to keep the mask over the user's nose and mouth, and the air canister could be filled with a variety of atmospheres. The filter could be linked to a computer system for uploading of filtration parameters, allowing the Roamer-6 to operate in a wide range of toxic environments. (EGW)

Roan

this member of New Apsolon's Civilized faction was elected to serve as the planetary leader, after Ewane stepped down from the position. One of Ewane's closest advisors, Roan was one of the few members of the Civilized who called for social reform, which eventually led to the election of Ewane as planetary leader. Although middle-aged, Roan was an imposing man distinguished by the shock of gray hair that covered one side of his head. Roan was accused of backing the assassins who later murdered Ewane, but even Ewane's daughters, Eritha and Alani, scoffed at any possible connection. After they were kidnapped from Roan's residence, he agreed to meet with Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi because he felt that he was powerless to stop the rapid degeneration of his society. Roan was later given an ultimatum from the kidnappers: resign his position as planetary ruler or the twins would be harmed. He agreed to their demands, but was later killed when he went to meet with them. The twins were soon released, but Eritha discovered that Alani was secretly working for Balog. She made her own connections, blaming Balog for Roan's death as well as that of Ewane. (TTB, DOH)

Roaring Creater

this was one of the many Tasar Crystal mining settlements on the planet Tasariq which were active during the height of the New Order. It was the largest, active boomtown of the time. (SWJ15)

Roaring River

this river flowed into Roaring Canyon, on the planet Tasariq, forming a series of waterfalls which led to Echo Lake. (SWJ15)

Roaring River Cantina

this tavern was located within Roaring Crater, on the planet Tasariq. Like most other establishments in Roaring Crater, the Cantina was little more than a permanent tent. (SWJ15)

Roar's Rules

Han Solo, shortly after his discharge from the Imperial Navy, learned to live by these rules as a smuggler: "never ignore a call for help, never take from those who are poorer than yourself, never play sabacc unless you're prepared to lose, always be prepared to make a quick getaway, and never pilot a ship under the influence." (THG)

Roat, Antar

pronounced "Ro-At", this was Wedge Antilles' alias when the Rogue Squadron pilots infiltrated Coruscant. Roat was an Imperial Colonel who was shot down over Vladet, in the Rachuk System. Roat's face was severely injured, and was temporarily covered with a metallic cover. This served Wedge fine, since it covered up most of his face. Roat was scheduled to have reconstructive surgery at the Rohair Biochemical Clinic, which explained his presense on the planet. Wedge thought the Roat alias had been abandoned, but was asked to take it up again when Ysanne Isard - having escaped from the Battle of Thyferra - recruited Rogue Squadron to hunt down Prince-Admiral Krennel and the clone of Isard herself. Using her contacts within both the Empire and the New Republic, Isard had Roat's files updated to indicate he was in command of Requiem Squadron, an experimental squadron of TIE Defenders. Her plan was to have Roat and his squadron of TIE Defenders defect to Ciutric to offer their services to Krennel, whose forces had suffered huge losses in the struggle to capture the Rogues over Distna. Krennel accepted their offer, which allowed Wedge and the Rogues to infiltrate Krennel's forces and bring about their destruction. Once they had gained Krennel's confidence, the Rogues could then take out much of Ciutric's orbital defenses while a ground assault team, led by Major Telik, would eliminate any surface defenses. (WG, IR)

Roath Vogog

this was the name of a famous Houk individual. (UANT)

ROB

this was an abbreviation for the rear observation blister of a starship. (BF2)

'rob

this suffix was added to a Bothan's family name to indicate the individual's affiliation to the Irob or Arob clans. (GCG, WOTC)

Roba

this species of giant-tusked, pig-like animals was native to the planet Aralia. Weighing more than 900 kilograms on average, robas had few enemies on Aralia until the Ranats managed to find their way to the planet. Since then, the roba have become the Ranats' favorite food, and their population has dwindled rapidly. A population of roba were also raised on Taanab as food sources. (GG4, EGP)

Robalto, Gibsun

this man was the head of his local COMPNOR SAGroup, and traveled the width and breadth of the Empire to witness first-hand the might and power of the New Order. (HR)

Robari, Alhond

this man worked as the head chef at the Firaxa Room, on the planet Manaan, during the height of the New Order. He was known for his unusual and exotic dishes, and he often surprised his patrons by serving their food by himself. (PH)

Robeir XXIII

this descendant of the House of Cron ruled the Cronese Mandate during the New Order. He was loyal to Emperor Palpatine, but ruled the sector as a client king. (ML)

Robeskin

this was the term used to describe a thin, living membrane developed by the Yuuzhan Vong as a portable cloak. The robeskin provided the wearer with minimal protection, but served to cover their body. The robeskin received food by feeding on the bodily secretions of the creature that wore it. Skin cells, sweat, blood, and skin oils were all ingested by the robeskin as it hung around its owner's form. In return for this sustenance, the robeskin kept its owner covered from the elements, and could even assist in the healing process if its owner were injured. By consuming the pus and effluvia of an injury, the robeskin helped prevent infection while using its own curative properties to help its owner heal quickly. (EL2, T)

Robida Colossus

the huge, steam-powered starship that served as the flagship of King Empatojayos of Ganath. It is shaped like a pointed submarine. (DE2)

Robo-barge

any automated cargo transport ship. (HSE)

Robo-flatbed

any automated cargo movement system. (SWR)

Robo-hack

any automated taxi craft. (HSE)

Robot Starfighters

another name for the Imperial TIE/D ships. (DE1)

Robo-vassal

a generic term used to describe any automaton programmed for domestic occupations. (HSR)

Roc

this young man was a native of the planet Tatooine, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. He was one of the many youths Amee had a crush on, after Anakin Skywalker left Mos Espa for the Jedi Temple. (TG)

Rocatrinicel

this was a noted individual from Frozian history. (UANT)

Roche

a planet near the Roche Asteroid Field. It was the base for Ackbar's Project Shantipole. (XW)

Roche Asteroid Field

sector of the galaxy that contains the homeworlds of the Verpine, the Barabels, and the Kubaz. It also is a breeding site for mynocks and space slugs. It is a collection of asteroid belts orbiting a small yellow sun. (DFR, DA, SFS, GG4)

Roche G42

an asteroid in the Roche Asteroid Field, is was the site of a Verpine colony. (XWN)

Roche Hive Mechanical Apparatus Design and Construction Activity for Those Who Need the Hive's Machines

this was the full name of Roche Industries. (EGD)

Roche Industries

this was the name given to the small group of Verpine technicians who produced several varieties of droids during the height of the New Order. Many of their original designs, such as the J9-series worker drone, were not accepted by human droid buyers, but several later designs - like the Siak-series - sold quite well. (FTD)

Roche Lobe

a term used to describe a section of a black hole. (JS)

Roche System

another name for the Roche Asteroid Fields. (COTF)

Rock Boots

produced by Malik Technologies, Rock Boots were specially-designed and reinforced footwear created for use in the harsh environments found near volcanoes. (GSE)

Rock Dragon

this small reptile is native to the planet Dathomir. It has rough, mottled skin which helps it blend into its surroundings. The rock dragon is an egg-laying species, and they build nests among the rocks in which to lay their eggs. They then use their bodies to warm the eggs, with their natural camouflage helping to hide the nest. They eat mainly insects and plants, but have a defensive poison that they inject with a small stinger to protect themselves. The poison is strong enough to kill a full-grown rancor. (SHA)

Rock Dragon

this Hapan passenger ship was owned by Tenel Ka, but was constantly being upgraded by Jaina Solo and Lowbacca. The ship was a present from Tenel Ka's parents, following her wish to have her own ship. Much of the influence on her parents came from her grandmother, Ta'a Chume, who felt that her granddaughter needed adequate protection while at the Jedi Academy on Yavin 4 - especially in the wake of the Shadow Academy's attacks. The ship was by no means on the leading edge of technology, and was cleaned of any Hapan markings so that Tenel Ka could travel in anonymity whenever necessary. The name of the ship was given by Tenel Ka, and refers to the small reptile native to Dathomir. It also alludes to the Hapan custom of naming their starships "dragons." Jaina used it to rescue Zekk, Raynar, and Bornan Thul from Boba Fett, in much the same way her father bought Luke Skywalker an extra minute during the Battle of Yavin. She came at Fett with the blazing light of a star behind her, blinding the bounty hunter to her approach. (ROM, TEP, SHA)

Rock Dwellers

this was another name for the Treka Horansi. (PG1, AE)

Rock Hornet

this swarming insect was native to Tatooine. (MC17)

Rock Ivory

a valuable and controlled mineral that is often smuggled. It is used commercially in antigrav units. (COJ)

Rock Lizard

this reptile was native to the planet Tatooine, and was smaller than a dewback. (EGA)

Rock Mouse

a small rodent found in desert or rocky terrains. (GOF6)

Rock One

this callsign became the New Republic standard for the first Yuuzhan Vong warship encountered in a space battle. (DTO)

Rock Palace

this remarkable rock formation, located outside Mos Espa on the planet Tatooine, was known for its alabaster pinnacles. (TG)

Rock Shrew

this small creature was the favored food of many predatory avians. (MJH)

Rock Spitter

this was New Republic starfighter pilot slang for the plasma cannons and magma launchers of the Yuuzhan Vong coralskippers. (UF)

Rock Squadron

one of the Tri-fighter flight groups of the Eyttyrmin Batiiv Survivors, it wasn't as prestigious as Bolt Squadron. Corran Horn, under the alias Jenos Idanian, was admitted to the Survivors as a pilot in Rock Squadron. (IJ)

Rock Sucker

this species of flat-bodied mollusk was native to the planet Mytus VII. One of the only creatures which could survive on the planet's surface, rock suckers feed on the minerals of the planet's crust by exuding an acidic secretion from the suckers on their underside. The secretion begins to break down the rocks, and the rock sucker then draws the raw minerals into its body. (EGP)

Rock Tabbie

an easily-frightened creature. (TME)

Rock Viper

this poisonous serpent was native to the rocky deserts of the planet Ord Cestus. (TCD)

Rock Wart

a vicious, slug-like creature found on the planet Tatooine, the rock wart was a worm with large eyes and a gaping, fang-filled mouth the opened vertically. The bite of the rock wart delivered a potent neurotoxin which could kill a human in a short period of time. Once a rock wart had killed its prey, it consumed as much of the prey as it could, then burrowed inside the body to lay its eggs. (SWIJ, SOT)

Rock Wizard

this unusual being lived on the Forest Moon of Endor. Many years before the Battle of Yavin, the Rock Wizard controlled the Jindas, who farmed his lands. When the Jindas angered him with their mistakes, the Rock Wizard banished them from his kingdom, forcing them to wander the surface of the moon in search of a new home. Many years later, when Logray attempted to break the curse that kept the Jindas on the move, the Rock Wizard reappeared and tried to punish the Ewok for meddling. However, Logray managed to banish the Rock Wizard and free the Jindas. (ECAR)

Rock Workers

this was a branch of The Workers faction, based on the planet New Apsolon some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. The Rock Workers were miners by trade, working in the quarries of their homeworld to harvest wondrous stone and ores. During Balog's attempt to take control of New Apsolon, the Rock Workers allied themselves with the Tech Workers. When the Absolutes who were working with Balog attacked the Rock Worker settlement, they killed every living being they encountered. They wanted no witnesses to their theft of weapons, explosives, and supplies, and even killed the children of the Rock Workers. Their only survivor had been Yanci, who had been sent out to ask for assistance from Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi. Yanci later returned to the base and buried the dead. (DOH)

Rockcan

this box-shaped prospecting scow was owned by operated by Gideon Smith. (JH)

Rock'co

this slimy character lived on Narigus III, and was the original owner of the Kubaz Insect. The statue was stolen from him by two small-time criminals called Lauren and Sam, and Rock'co tried to get it back before they could leave the planet. Rock'co caught Sam, but he had already mailed the statue to Lauren, and he died under Rock'co's interrogation. Rock'co later teamed up with Jorkatt the Render and captured Lauren. They fought over the Insect, but soon discovered that Rock'co's statue was a fake. (GMS)

Rocker Pose

this was one of the many meditative body positions practiced by the Jedi Knights of the Old Republic. (MBS)

ROCKET

this ancient, Zim Systems personal rocket pack was a bulky forerunner to the modern jetpacks. (TOJC)

Rocket Grass

this woody plant grew on the plains of Usean II. (TBSB)

Rocket Trooper

this specialized Imperial stormtrooper was trained to move into and out of military actions via a simple rocket pack that was integrated into the standard stormtrooper armor. Because the pack was part of the armor, it had limited usage, being capable of just twenty total seconds of flight before requiring recharging. Each rocket trooper also carried an M-SMS missile system. (WOTC)

Rocket-Jumper Elite Advance Unit

known most often as the Rocket Jumpers, this Old Republic military division was made up of short-range assault troops that deployed from floating fortresses while harnessed to a rocket backpack. The backpack allowed the soldier a full range of motion that was controlled via movements of the head. The mission of the Rocket Jumpers was most often to break stalemates and seize control of an area until regular units could advance and reinforce the area. They were one of the original SpecForce units, created shortly before the onset of the Great Sith War. (FNU, ROE)

Rockhopper

this large beast, native to the planet Roon, was domesticated by the natives of the planet and used in a variety of roles. Rockhoppers were best known as mounts, and rockhopper races were one of the primary events of the Colonial Games. (SWDB)

Rockmelon

this hard-shelled fruit is grown underground by the Eloms. (GG12)

Rockmite

these rapidly-multiplying creatures are native to the planet Tatooine, where they built huge underground nests in the sand. (DESB, CSA)

Rock-vulture

this avian scavenger was native to the planet Utapau. (E3N)

Rockwalker

this was the brand name of a type of boots made specifically for miners. The soles of Rockwalkers are studded with metal hooks that open and close with the user's pattern of walking, allowing the wearer to remain on the surface of an asteroid without the need for artificial gravity or magnetic plating. (SSR)

Rocshore Fish

native to the coastal waters of the planet Senali, this timid, spined fish had three large claws, which it used to catch its prey. The Senalis discovered that the rocshore fish would regenerate a claw if one was removed, and hunted the fish for their clawmeat. By spearing the fish in the tail, where there were no nerves to cause pain, the rocshore fish could be immobilized long enough to twist off a claw. The Senalis were careful to remove a single claw at a time, for the fish was unable to hunt with a single claw, and eventually died of starvation. The rocshore fish's clawmeat was a staple in the Senali diet. The Senalis learned that they had to hunt for rocshore fish underwater, for the fish were easily spooked by the presence of a boat. Whenever spooked, rocshore fish would bury themselves in the sand to hide. (SP)

RO-D

this Balmorran Arms automaton was developed to address the security and defense needs of musicians and artists who were traveling the galaxy during the last decades of the Old Republic. In addition to being equipped with several sensor suites and advanced life-protection programming, each RO-D could be armed with lethal or non-lethal weaponry. They were also capable of moving heavy loads, and were designed to be used as roadies when not on active duty. Unlike most other droids, the RO-D was available in more than 70 different color schemes, allowing musicians to use them discreetly in virtually any stage set-up. (HNN5)

Roda Lem

this being was a noted member of the Advoszec race. (UANT)

Rodaj

this planet was the site of a mining operation that was invaded by the Empire. (SWJ13)

Rodan, Fyor

this man, a native of the planet Commenor, was a member of the New Republic Advisory Council. As a Senator, he opposed the formation of a new Jedi Council, shortly before the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Many rumors spoke of Rodan's own ties to the smugglers that the vigilante Jedi led by Kyp Durrone were taking out of business, and hinted that his dislike of the Jedi was based more on lost profits than anything else. However, these rumors were not true of Fyor, but his older brother Tormak. Later, Rodan threw in his support to Borsk Fey'lya, who argued for the defense of Bothawui when it was learned that the Yuuzhan Vong were going to attack either Bothawui or Corellia. Rodan believed that the Jedi had manipulated the information in order to force the New Republic into a poor position, which would leave the door open for the Jedi to take control of the galaxy. He went so far as to call the Jedi way a "quaint philosophy" in the presence of Luke Skywalker. Shortly afterward, Rodan was one of few members of the Advisory Council to reach Borleias, in the wake of the Second Battle of Coruscant. He joined the self-appointed Chief of State Pwoe in trying to take control of the Republic's future, but realized that Pwoe was really only in the game for his own personal agenda. When the remnants of the Republic called for a meeting on Calamari, Rodan abandoned Pwoe and returned to the rightful Republic. However, he held no more love for the Jedi or their efforts with the war, and made sure to take every public opportunity to belittle Luke Skywalker and the Jedi. His bid to become the Republic's Chief of State was thwarted when

Cal Omas was elected, but Rodan grudgingly swore to work with Omas and the new Jedi High Council to help turn the tide of battle against the Yuuzhan Vong. (VP, JE, BP, EL1, DW)

Rodan, Tormak

this man was the older brother of New Republic Senator Fyor Rodan. Tormak was a smuggler who worked for Jabba the Hutt, and went solo when Jabba was killed on Tatooine. Tormak worked from a base on Nar Shaddaa during much of his career. The two brothers hated each other, taking opposite sides of virtually every issue. Tormak's exploits were mistakenly attributed to Fyor during his early Senatorial career, and rumors of his ties to smugglers led many to questions of his veracity. Fyor found that he couldn't admit to Tormak's smuggling, as the admission would damage his career almost as much as the rumors had. (DW)

Rode to Ruin

this starship was owner by the spacer Fracca, and was based out of Orron III. The New Republic Ship Registry identified it as RN27-382992. (SOL)

Rodeo Thranta

this domesticated species of thranta was bred on the planet Bespin by the acrobats and daredevils of the Air Rodeo. These thrantas were originally brought to Bespin from Alderaan many generations before, and were prized for their ability to be tamed while maintaining enough spirit and intelligence to perform complex tricks. Individual rodeo thrantas were trained to respond to high-pitched whistles, allowing their riders to turn them as needed. These thrantas usually have about ten years of performing before they are "retired" and used as mounts or pets. Because of the thrantas' inability to survive without the correct atmosphere, the Air Rodeo rarely traveled away from Bespin. (WOTC)

Rodese

this was the language spoken by the Rodian people. (WOTC)

Rodia

the tropical home world of the Rodian race, Rodia was the second planet in the Tyrius System. Rodia was orbited by four natural moons. It was once a lush paradise teeming with life, but the hunters of the Rodians wiped out much of the planet's native life in search of food and dominance. Since then, it has become highly industrialized. Because of this industrialization, Rodia was subjugated by the Yuuzhan Vong, shortly after the alien invaders took Druckenwell and Falleen. The native Rodians fled into the wilderness, and continued to stage guerrilla raids on Yuuzhan Vong settlements throughout the remainder of the war. (SW, SCRE, GG4, BP, SPG, NJOSB)

Rodiak Ocean

this was the largest body of water found on the planet Rodia. (SPG)

Rodian

this bipedal race with tapir-like face and multifaceted eyes is native to the planet Rodia, in the Tyrius system. The skin of a Rodian is green in color, and there is very little physical variation within the species. Thus, non-Rodians often cannot tell two Rodians apart. The Rodian race has ears that swivel in their sockets, allowing them to hear in several directions. There is a ridge of spikes which crests their skulls, and their long, flexible fingers are tipped with suction cups. They are a race of hunters by nature, and bounty hunting seems to hold a place of high esteem. As a race, they evolved as hunters, surviving their planet's tropical environment and establishing a series of war games which lasted for thousands of years. When an Old Republic scout team landed on the planet, the Rodians were there to meet them, armed to the teeth. They annihilated the scout team, and the Grand Protector declared that it was time to take their skills to the stars. Since then, they have not done as well as they had hoped. Many of the Rodians who make a living off-planet are working as bounty hunters for corrupt crime lords. Their weapon of choice is the thermal detonator, since a widespread explosion tends to kill more than a single blaster shot. Each bounty hunter is obliged to bring a valid record of his or her kill to the Guild on Rodia for logging in the record books. Others are making a living as Imperial lackeys. Rodians almost wiped themselves out as a race, during a time when the birthrate among females dropped below the level at which they were killing each other off. Harido Kavila, the Grand Protector at the time, devised a way for the Rodian people to funnel their violent tendencies through dramatic plays. The stories revolved primarily around violence, but had a well-defined plot and used the violence to magnify the emotional impact of the plays. The Rodian dramas became well-known throughout the galaxy, in part because they were strong dramas but also because they portrayed the full impact of violence on the perpetrator and his victim. When the Yuuzhan Vong subjugated Rodia, the surviving Rodians fled into the wilderness, preferring to stay alive and fight with terrorist-like attacks. The fact that these attacks continued with increasing violence caused the Yuuzhan Vong to admire the Rodian spirit, and many Rodians who were captured were given favored status as slaves. (SW, SCRE, GG4, NJOSB)

Rodian Hunting Grounds

known as the Etyyy in the Shyriiwook language, this area of the planet Kashyyyk was located to the southeast of Kachirho. Comprised of several safari compounds established by various Rodian hunters who paid regular tazes to the Wookiees for the use of the land, the Rodian Hunting Grounds became the planet's primary proving grounds for big-game hunters of all species. However, the original ideals of the Etyyy - treating both the land and the hunt with respect - gave way to the accumulation of credits and the arrival of the Empire. The Imperial agents who subjugated Kashyyyk stripped the Wookiees of any income they were receiving from the Rodians, and then demanded that the Rodians pay a hefty tax to continue their hunts on the now Imperially-controlled land. The Rodians were more interested in the credits than their agreement with the Wookiees, and simply started paying taxes to the Empire to preserve their ability to hunt. The appearance of Chiss poachers was not welcomed by either the Wookiees or the Rodians, but the Empire chose to ignore the situation, causing even more damage to the environment of the Etyyy. (SWGAL)

Rodian Hunting World

this Rodian weapons manufacturer was part of the holdings of the Roolek clan. The clan used the primary production plant as its based of operations. (SPG)

Rodno

this diminutive Kadrillian served as an administrative aide to Dal Quirz, during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. Rodno was a very self-confident individual, although his knowledge was often incomplete. This was due mainly to his young age and lacked of experience, but it didn't stop Rodno from trying to learn more, as quickly as he could. When it was learned that the Empire was planning to subjugate the Kadrillians and the Nocivs in order to steal all the kunda stones on Kadirl, Rodno led Luke Skywalker and Han Solo into Nociv territory. There, he reunited with his chosen mate, Deerna, who had decided to remain with the Nocivs. Rodno's love for her remained strong, and he stepped in front of a blaster bolt meant for Deerna in the fighting. The wound was not fatal, and Rodno survived. Deerna agreed to marry him, and Rodno agreed to remain with the Nocivs. (LAT3)

Rodomon Family Farm

this was one of the many Tatooine moisture farms which sold their water and produce on a contract basis, during the early years of the New Republic. (TG)

Roek

this Imperial Navy Admiral was in command of the Super-class Star Destroyer Aggressor, during the last years of the Galactic Civil War. He was placed in command of the fleet which protected the shipyards of Corellia, shortly after the Battle of Endor. (SWJ2)

Roen

known as Firefather in the Gorothis language, this city was the site of the only major spaceport found on the planet Gorothis Prime. (GSE)

Roenni

this young girl was a member of The Young. She watched over the injured body of Tahl while Qui-Gon

Jinn searched for Obi-Wan Kenobi in Zehva. Later, as The Young battled against their elders, Roenni and Obi-Wan disabled the five starfighters used by the elders to attack the children's base. She remained Obi-Wan's friend, even after he was exiled from The Young by Nield following Cerasi's death. (DOD, UP)

Roeosss

this was one of the more common names used by Trandoshan hunters. Like most Trandoshan names, it was reserved for males, but could be adopted by those rare females who became hunters. In the Trandoshan language, the name meant "crushes with his claws". (GCG)

Rog

this Gamorrean male was Vrokks' brother, and was the warlord of the Nudskutch clan. He demanded vengeance of Guth and Captain Ugmush after Vrokk's death, which he claimed to have been caused by an outlander from a starship. Rog challenged Guth to a duel, and promised to kill Ugmush as soon as he dispatched Guth. However, before the duel could take place, Callista Ming and Kufbrug discovered the plot set in place by Rog's wife, Gundruk, to kill Vrokk and assume control of Bolgoink. It was learned that Gundruk had ordered Rog to obtain a tiny homunculus-wasp and place it into the wax seal of the false challenge document given to Vrokk. Callista could only assume that Rog was just a pawn in the entire plan. Rog and Gundruk fled Gamorr, rather than face Kufbrug's wrath. (SWJ14)

Roga

this squat, six-legged creature was native to the planet Geonosis. The insectile roga moved about on its spindly, hose-like legs, and was attracted to sources of heat. Its mouth was surrounded by grasping mandibles, and a pair of feathery antennae sprouted from its head. Some Republic scientists who studied the species of Geonosis after the onset of the Clone Wars theorized that the Geonosians had actually evolved from an ancient form of roga. (OWS, AAOTC, SWI79)

Rogak

a clan of Gamorreans on the planet Gamor. (MTS)

Rogan

this was one of the most common male names among the Corellian population. (GMR9)

Rogan

this loyal man was married to Tyerle, and they settled on the planet Quesal to escape the threat of the New Order. Rogan became involved in the resistance for two reasons: first, because his brother-in-law Tiree was an Alliance agent; second, because the Empire installed Moff Bandor to rule Quesal and control the production of ardanium. Rogan began establishing resistance cells, but was eventually caught in the waves of fear created by Bandor's hurlothrumbic generator. Rogan was sent to the Game Chambers, and was a mindless survivor when he was rescued by Alliance agents. He eventually recovered, once he was free of the influence of the generator. (GCQ)

Rogar Farnoster

this being was the author of The Slug Named Grendel and Night Mynock. (WSB, HNN4)

Rogar Garret

this New Republic Navy officer was the Sector Commander in charge of the Kalinda System and its surrounding space. He passed on the orders which implemented Project Second Chance to Admiral Ackbar. (TSK)

Rogelo

this was one of the Alliance's Nebulon-B frigates, active during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Roger Roger

this was the code for "affirmative" used by the Trade Federation's battle droids. (TPM)

Roget

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Rogg

this Grave Tusken was one of the tribal leaders who were exported to the moon of Sulon by the Empire, during the height of the New Order. Despite being the leader of his tribe, he scoffed at the idea that a leader had to actually lead his forces into battle. Rogg felt that this meant that leaders were killed quickly in battle, eliminating their expertise and knowledge before they could be put to good use. When Kyle Katarn returned to Sulon to recover his father's belonging, he was attacked by Rogg's forces near the homestead. In the confusion of the firefight, his second-in-command Bordo shot Rogg dead. (RAG)

Rogh'ma Ixsan

this Dug slaver was one of the many members of his species who joined the RavinsBlud crime syndicate during the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo. A bounty for his capture was issued by the Coruscant police force in connection with the transport of death sticks between Malastare and Coruscant. Jango Fett later claimed this bounty during his attempt to locate Sebolto on Malastare. (BH)

Rogir-boln

this plant, which produced a sweet-fleshed white fruit, was grown as a foodsource on the planet Zonama Sekot. (FH3, UF)

Rogoe

this was one of the most common Gungan surnames, taking from the father's side of the family. These surnames were not dropped, even after marriage. To the Gungans, it meant "wise pilot". (GCG)

Rogor

man was one of the Alliance troopers who was assigned to the Massassi Base on Yavin 4. Rogor was a Lieutenant during the evacuation following the destruction of the first Death Star. (IS)

Rogos, Dal

this Imperial Security Bureau agent spent part of his career trying to expose the Ithorian Poliss as an Alliance sympathizer. He eventually discovered a team of Alliance agents who were searching for the ruins of the Alderaan Royal Palace within the Graveyard, and followed them to Mining Outpost 11. He was unaware that Darth Vader himself had planted rumors of the Palace's location, in an effort to capture Leia Organa as part of Operation Yavin Kill Two. Rogos had no more luck than Janus Bonn in capturing the Alliance members who bit on the rumors, and they eventually recovered the Alderaanian armory ship Another Chance. (GA)

Rogriss, Asori

this woman was the daughter of Admiral Teren Rogriss. When Rogriss was dispatched to accompany Turr Phennir to Adumar, she was twenty-eight years old. Her whereabouts were not known. Wedge Antilles promised Admiral Rogriss to contact Asori and her brother, Terek, to inform them of their father's bravery and to protect them from Imperial reprisals. (SOA)

Rogriss, Terek

this young man was Teren Rogriss' son. At the time of the Admiral's mission to Adumar, Terek was a twenty-four year old member of the Imperial Navy. Wedge Antilles promised Admiral Rogriss to contact Asori and her brother, Terek, to inform them of their father's bravery and to protect them from Imperial reprisals. (SOA)

Rogriss, Teren

this man served the Imperial Navy for many years, eventually being promoted to Admiral. After the Battle of Endor, Rogriss remained loyal to those who upheld the ideals of the New Order, and vehemently opposed the warlords who sprang up in the wake of the Emperor's death. He especially despised Zsinj, and went so far as to contact the New Republic warship Mon Remonda to request an audience. During the meeting with Garik Loran, Rogriss proposed a secret alliance in which both sides would trade information about Zsinj, in the hopes that one of them would bring the warlord down. He even went so far as to "loan" the Interdictor-class warship Stellar Web to Han Solo for his attack on Zsinj at Selaggis Six. After learning that Zsinj was still alive, Rogriss was sent on several other missions to hunt the warlord down. However, Rogriss was always a step behind Admiral Ackbar and Solo, and was eventually demoted from fleet commander - although he remained an Admiral - and given only a single support ship to command with the Agonizer. In this capacity, he was assigned to escort Turr Phennir and the pilots of the 181st Fighter Group to Adumar for the negotiations on Adumar's future. He was ordered by his superiors to ensure the Empire gained control of Adumar, at any cost. This order conflicted with his own sense of personal honor, and he eventually decided to ignore any order which called for the destruction of Adumari resources, should they side with the New Republic. He made his intentions known to Wedge Antilles, who agreed to help contact his family if he ever had to flee the wrath of the Empire. Rogriss' wife had died several years prior, but his two children survived. Wedge agreed, and Rogriss proved true to his word. When the Adumari chose to join the Republic, Rogriss chose to take the Agonizer out of orbit and leave the system, rather than destroy their society. Rogriss then returned to Adumar, in the hopes of helping them learn more realistic warfare techniques to replace their honor-based system. He remained on the planet as a defense minister for the perator. (SOC, SOA, PH)

Rogue

this was the name given to those boras trees which lived outside the community of the Zonama Sekot tampasi. (RP)

Rogue Alpha

this was Wedge Antilles' callsign, when he rejoined Rogue Squadron during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion. He flew a reconnaissance X-Wing during the insertion of Corran Horn on Garqi. (DTR)

Rogue Eight

Erisi Dlarit's callsign as a member of Rogue Squadron about two and a half years after the Battle of Endor. Note that The Krytos Trap indicates that Dlarit's callsign is Rogue Four. It was later used by Leth Liav, in the wake of the Second Battle of Coruscant. (XWN, KT, EL2)

Rogue Five

this callsign was used by Wes Janson for most of his career with Rogue Squadron. Note that Dark Tide: Onslaught claims that Rogue Five was also used by Hobbie Klivian and Tycho Celchu, although none of the other texts reveal this. (DTO)

Rogue Four

Pash Cracken's callsign when he joined Rogue Squadron. Note that The Krytos Trap indicates the the Rogue Four callsign was used by Erisi Dlarit during the months after the liberation of Coruscant, despite the fact that Cracken was still a member of the squadron. (WG, KT)

Rogue Group

this was the name used by Luke Skywalker to denote his squadron of modified T-47 snowspeeders while stationed at Echo Base on Hoth. Derived from the memory of the Red Squadron that helped win the Battle of Yavin, Rogue Group eventually evolved into Rogue Squadron. (RESB)

Rogue Houses

this was the name given to those Tapani Sector noble Houses which opposed Shey Tapani's plans to unify the planets of the sector, some 6,000 years before the Battle of Endor. (TSIA)

Rogue Imperial 5

this modified N-1 fighter was owned by the criminal known only as Stormtrooper X, who maintained the ship despite its age. (GMR6)

Rogue Null

Tycho Celchu's callsign when, as the newly-named Executive Officer of Rouge Squadron, he piloted the shuttle Forbidden into the Chorax System. (XWN)

Rogue Runner

this modified Corellian Space Gymsnor-3 Freighter was modified by its first owner to have a faster hyperdrive, better lateral control, and increased shielding. It can transport up to 75 metric tons of cargo without losing any performance. Its ion drive was badly in need of repair when Fiz Cor'gril acquired it. (SWJ9)

Rogue Seven

Rhysati Ynr's callsign as a member of Rogue Squadron, about two and a half years after the Battle of Endor. Note that The Krytos Trap indicates the Ynr's callsign is Rogue Three. It was later used by Dakorse Teep, in the wake of the Second Battle of Coruscant. (WG, KT, EL2)

Rogue Seven Angel

this was Leia Organa's private, diplomatic cipher, used while she was the Chief of State for the New Republic. (AC)

Rogue Squadron

initially, Rogue Squadron was the unofficial name of the X-Wing Red Squadron which assaulted the first Death Star. It became the official title of the snowspeeder pilots on Hoth, and eventually became the designation given to Luke Skywalker's group of 12 X-wing pilots. After Luke resigned his commission from the New Republic, Wedge Antilles was promoted to Rogue Squadron's commander. He took Rogue Squadron into battle at Bakura, and tried to keep the squadron vital in the aftermath of the Galactic Civil War. However, a number of rookies got killed trying to live up to the history of Rogue Squadron following Bakura, and so Admiral Ackbar approached the Provisional Council of the New Republic to petition them to let him restructure Rogue Squadron, from a political tool to a real team of crack pilots. Wedge continued to be the squadron's commander, and Aril Nunb was named Executive Officer. Wedge, however, felt that she was not as good a teacher as she was a pilot, and petitioned to have her replaced with Tycho Celchu. Under Antilles and Celchu, and a few Rogue Squadron veterans, the squadron regained its mystique and became the elite group of pilots it was destined to be. Following the liberation of Coruscant from Ysanne Isard, the Rogues were awarded the first Coruscant Star of Valor for their efforts. The squadron was then ordered to augment Han Solo's fleet, which was planning to attack the Warlord Zsinj. All of the squadron's members were against the mission, wanting instead to liberate the planet Thyferra from Isard and exact their revenge on the way Isard and Erisi Dlarit had used the squadron. The Republic refused this request, ordering them to report for duty to Solo. Instead, every member of the squadron submitted their resignation and created their own force with which to attack Thyferra. After the battle to retake Thyferra was decided, it was "discovered" by Airen Cracken that their resignations were never processed, so the Squadron was reinstated to active duty. The squadron served as part of the support structure for the Mon Remonda during the hunt for Warlord Zsinj. It remained under the command of Wedge Antilles until the defeat of Grand Admiral Thrawn and Prince-Admiral Krennel, when Wedge accepted a promotion to General. Tycho Celchu became Rogue Leader at this time, but eventually gave up the position to Wedge several years later. The Rogues were reported destroyed while supporting a reconnaissance mission over the moon of Distna, during the hunt for Krennel. Ysanne Isard's clone, obsessed with eliminating the Rogues, had laid an ambush for them at Corvis Minor Five. The ambush would have succeeded, if the real Ysanne Isard had not dispatched Colonel Vessery to recover the Rogues. This allowed them to work with Vessery's people to eliminate Krennel and Isard's clone before returning to active duty. A semi-permanent monument to the fallen Rogues was erected in the wake of the failed rescue of Sate Pestage from Ciutric, after Ibtisam gave her life to allow the squadron to escape. It was made up of holograms of those Rogues who had given their lives to the Alliance and the New Republic. The insignia of the Rogues was centered on the blue shield of the Alliance. Surrounding it were the images of twelve X-Wing starfighters with engines burning, flying outward from the shield. Four 12-pointed red stars surround the fighters, signifying the far-reaching strength of the squadron. The number twelve is significant, of course, because it represented the twelve positions of the squadron. (ESB, HTTE, XWN, JS, KT, IJ, IF, SOC, XWMR, IR, TTSB)

Rogwa Wodrata

this female Holwuff represented her people in the Confederacy of Independent Systems, during the last decades of the Old Republic. She was present during the summit on Geonosis, just before the Battle of Geonosis took place. (SWI65)

Roh

this is one of the larger Fyodoi tribes on Fyodos. They often greet newcomers to the planet. The Roh are led by Kalor. (PG2)

Rohair Biochemical Clinic

a reconstructive surgical clinic located in Imperial City on Coruscant. Iella Wessiri posed as Irin Fossyr, a representative of the Clinic, in order to meet up with Wedge Antilles, who was portraying Antar Roat. (WG)

Rohak

this elderly man was one of the many Force-sensitive individuals who were exiled to the planet Dathomir shortly after the Clone Wars, when Emperor Palpatine began eliminating any possible threats to his position of power. It was Rohak, along with his aides Noldan and Paemos, who first located the site that would become the Village of Aurilia. Because of his age and experience, Rohak was named the Village Elder, and took control of the regular business of the Village. Although he was initially against the idea, Rohak eventually agreed with Marite that the Village of Aurilia should open its arms to Force-sensitive offworlders. In this way, the lore and knowledge of the settlers could be passed on, while the offworlders helped defend the settlement from attacks by the Nightsisters. (SWGAL)

Rohal Cross

this distinguished award was given by the Alliance to those beings who displayed unusual levels of valor and bravery during a mission. (CRO)

Rohan

meaning "dutiful", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Roi, Fitz

this legendary jatz musician was a native of Tapani Sector, and returned there after touring the Core during the height of the New Order. His family was native to the planet Lenniera, and maintained an estate there after Roi himself established a residence on Esseles. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, Fitz Roi was known almost as much for his mastery with the Faln horn as he was for his flamboyant stage shows. He carried a pair of projectile pistols at his side at all times, and often shot them off in concert. These slug throwers, relics of the Manderon Period, were stolen by the Tombat while Roi was playing at the Priole Danna Festival, after his Summerside Tour was cancelled. Later, on Esseles, he went on stage dressed as a Jedi Knight. His career had been sponsored by a young female noble of House Barnaba, who was infatuated with him. (SWJ3, SWJ4, SWJ6, LOE)

Roi, Mettez

this man was a noted promoter of arena gladiator events, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. He was one of the senior members of the Galaxy Gladiator Federation at the time, and spent much of his career working to standardize the often-illegal gladiator events. (HNN5)

Roite, Barst

this Xucphra middle manager was appointed a Major in the Thyferran Home Defense Corps, and managed the day to day operations of the paramilitary group under the command of Aerin Dlarit. (BW)

Rojahn

this Imperial Naval Captain was the commander of the Star Destroyer Expeditious. (XWN)

Rojarra

this Wookiee diplomat was killed by Kaox Krul, some years before the Battle of Ruusan. (GMR5)

Rojer 621

this was the codename of the New Republic spy who was infiltrated into Imperial Moff Kentor Sarne's administration on Kal'Shebbol, shortly before the Republic was able to oust Sarne from power. His information, while often obscure, helped the crew of the FarStar track down Sarne in Kathol Sector. It was later revealed, in the wake of the Battle of Kathol, that Rojer 621 was really Imperial Captain Brannij of the Bastion, who had tired of Sarne's disregard for his subordinates. (DARK, E)

Rojio's

this was a tavern, located in the city of Hullis, on Halmad. It was here that several members of Wraith Squadron provoked a fight with Captain Wanatte's team, as part of their plan to infiltrate the Imperial garrison and steal TIE starfighters. (IF)

Rojo Fever

this form of illness was almost often fatal when contracted, and it spread quickly once established. For this reason, once Rojo Fever was identified in a community, the entire area was quarantined to prevent an epidemic. (MBS)

Rojo, Warshack

this Corellian man was a Commander with the New Republic military at the time of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galax. He was in command of the Imperial-II class Star Destroyer Rejuvenator, and helped plan the assault on the Praetorite Vong base on Helska. He was easily distinguished by his shaved head, furrowed brow, and the diamond-stud earring he wore. He was killed when the Yuuzhan Vong warforce surrounding Helska destroyed the Rejuvenator before the remainder of the New Republic's fleet could arrive on the scene. (VP)

Rokak'k

probably the most respected of the Gree guild masters in the modern era, Rokak'k was the master of the Rokak'k Baran. He cared little for politics and prestige, except when they interfered with his ability to maintain the Rokak'k Baran's schedule. He commands the 5,000 Gree who work aboard the ship, and he tolerates the multitude of aliens that he transports throughout the Gree Enclave. (SWJ8)

Rokak'k Baran

this huge Gree starship is the primary method of transportation between the many worlds of the Gree Enclave. Its primary port is at the world of Asation, where any non-Gree visitors to the Enclave must first stop and put to port. They are then free to board the Rokak'k Baran and travel as permitted to other Gree worlds. The Rokak'k Baran resembles a huge Ithorian herdship in its design, being a five-kilometer wide, disk-shaped ship. The ship requires nearly 5,000 Gree to maintain and operate, and can transport up to 10,000 passengers. It can pas through hyperspace lik emany starships, but it uses a Gree-designed propulsion system. It is armed with a single weapon, the Varat'k Snarap, and protected by the Karkak'k Marek. The ship is named for its owner, the Gree shipmaster Rokak'k. (SWJ8)

Rokar

this was a common name used by the Klatooinan race. (UANT)

Rokarn Vth'naar

this Sludir was the mate of Qesya Vth'naar. Like Qesya and her brother, Quyyik, Rokarn was forced to fight in gladiator battles for the Empire. In one fateful battle, Quyyik was pitted against Rokarn. Rokarn allowed Quyyik to win the battle, knowing that Qesya was pregnant. Unfortunately for Quyyik, this meant that he had to kill Rokarn in order to survive. Quyyik carried the guilt of this act only for a short time, for the Empire then forced him to fight against Qesya herself. In the battle, Qesya defeated Quyyik and killed him in order to survive. (KR)

Roke

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Roke

the slave boss in the Kessel spice mines (NE 30), he looks as if his muscles are attached wrong. He was killed by one of the energy spiders living the spice mines while overseeing a deep mine excavation. (JS)

Roki Morjara

this was a noted Bimm individual, distinguished in the history of the planet Bimmisaari. (UANT)

Rokna

a tree that was prevalent in the forests of Endor's Sanctuary moon, the rokna was known as a host to a spiky, blue fungus which was poisonous, and even deadly, to most races. The poison caused memory loss, rapid aging, and eventually death. However, in a slightly refined state known as Rokna Blue, it was a highly-addictive euphoric. (ECAR, GMR9)

Rokna Blue

this deadly poison was collected from the rokna tree on the Forest Moon of Endor. In very small quantities, it could induce exquisite states of bliss in its users. A microgram could cause death, however, so the recreational use of Rokna Blue was considered highly dangerous. Prolonged use of rokna blue caused severe memory loss. The illegal use of Rokna Blue reached its peak around the time of the Black Fleet Crisis, but dropped sharply in the years afterward. It was sold in small, blue, pebble-like pieces. (SOL, GMR9)

Rokna Station

this space station was erected in orbit in the Endor System, between the planets Megiddo and Dor. It was built some twelve years after the Battle of Endor, and was named for the illicit refining of rokna that took place during the early years of the new Republic. However, due to the Republic's swift crackdown on the production of Rokna Blue, the station was abandoned just ten months after its completion. The drug kingpin known as "Blue" Imcrix tried to re-establish the production facilities on the station, but the New Republic quickly shut him down. (GMR9)

Roko

a tall, thin humanoid alien working for Finhead Stonebone. (TOJ)

Rokur Gepta

Rokur Gepta, a Croke who had aspirations of power and control, was the last surviving Sorcerer of Tund, although no one was aware of it when he surfaced in the Rafa System several years before the Battle of Yavin. He was an ancient lifeform already when he appeared on Tund, asking to join the Sorcerers. He was the best student they could have asked for, soaking up knowledge like a sponge. When he continued beyond that knowledge and learned more than the Sorcerers did, Gepta struck out, destroying the brotherhood and reducing the planet Tund to a burned-out ball of ash, using a very specialized lifeform. He then continued to spread rumors and stories about the Tund Sorcerers, to keep them shrouded in mystery as he began collecting power. One of his first goals was to recover the Mindharp of the Sharu race. When Lando Calrissian foiled his attempt to control the Mindharp, Gepta began plotting his own personal revenge on Calrissian. When Lando foiled his assassination attempt on Oseon 5792, Gepta became more enraged, and stepped up his attempts to kill Calrissian. Gepta nearly caught Lando at the StarCave, but was told that the Millennium Falcon was destroyed in a battle with the Imperial Navy. In keeping with the legends of the Sorcerers of Tund, Gepta conceals his true form in dense wrappings of gray cloth, the color of which very closely matches the color of the ashes of Tund. He wears a large, turban-like wrapping on his head, revealing only his eyes. If he were ever seen without these wrappings, Gepta would appear as the Croke he is, a twelve-legged slug capable of modifying its appearance as it saw fit. Gepta is finally destroyed in a duel with Lando Calrissian at the ThonBoka. He and Lando struggle for awhile before Lando is able to shoot Gepta's enlarged form with his stingbeam. This forced Gepta to return to his normal Croke state. Lando then grabbed the slug and squeezed it until it ruptured. (LCM, LCF, LCS, NEGC)

Rol

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name meant "sun". (GCG)

Rol

this burly man served as one of 8t88's henchmen during the years following the Battle of Endor. He wasn't very bright, but made up for it with his brawn. Unfortunately, when Kyle Katarn tracked 8t88 back to Sulon, during his search for the data disk that contained information on the location of the Valley of the Jedi, Rol and his companions were killed by Kyle in an effort to capture 8t88. (RAG)

Rol Stone

Rol Two

the Empire maintained a prison facility on this planet, during the early years of the New Order. (AIR)

Rolado, Vyn

this man served the Alliance as a Corporal during the years following the Battle of Yavin. Corporal Rolado led the first Alliance scout team dispatched to the planet Hoth, during the search for a new base. He met with Jonox Forb to discuss the possibilities of using Hoth as a base, and it was on Forb's advice that Rolado investigated the use of tauntauns as mounts. A native of Velmor, Rolado had previous experience riding ycaqts before his family moved to Corellia. He was able to capture a group of tauntauns, and was only able to approach a female after sedating her. This proved to be the turning point, however, as the female soon accepted his companionship. She then used the tauntaun's own form of communication to relay to her companions that the Alliance personnel were friendly. (PH)

Rolai Frac

this Bothan youth attended the Leadership School on Andara, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. He was a scholarship student, and found himself ostracized by the wealthier students. He was chosen to join Gillam Tarturi's small band of mercenaries, and quickly distinguished himself as a leader. Rolai also became the group's security expert and financial officer, and often met with prospective clients to discuss terms. It was later discovered by Anakin Skywalker that Rolai had been working with Rana Halion, of the planet Ieria, to set up a mission in which Berm Tarturi of Andara would be forced to acknowledge the other planets under his representation. The group of students was originally going to simply strafe an Andaran landing platform, but Gillam planned to use the action as a way to "die." He planned to have Anakin be killed in a firefight, ensuring that his body was damaged enough to pass for that of Gillam. The goal of this plan was for Gillam to fake his own death and blame it on his father. Anakin and his Master, Obi-Wan Kenobi, were able to thwart Gillam's plans. Rolai, Gillam, and the entire team were expelled from the Leadership School and transported to Coruscant for questioning. (JQ5)

Rolanda Gron

this Klatooinan technologist was part of the team which assisted Jedi Knight Qu Rahn on a variety of rescue and relocation missions, during the Galactic Civil War. During their mission to save the people of Dorlo, the team was captured by the Dark Jedi Jerec and his band of followers. When Rahn refused to submit to Jerec's will, the diminutive being known as Pic killed Gron by stabbing him in the throat with a dagger. (RAG)

Rolk-Mahgir

these predatory creatures, whose name means "horned death" in the Yinchori tongue, scoured the surface of Yinchor in search of food. (LTA6)

Rolk-Mangir

native to the planet Yinchorr, this large creature resembled a krayt dragon in many ways. Essentially a big lizard, the rolk-mangir was heavy-set and thick-limbed, giving it a lumbering appearance. Nevertheless, the rolk-mangir was quite fast when on the hunt, and used surprise to catch its prey. Compared to its body, the rolk-mangir's head was quite small, with a toothy mouth surrounded by six stout horns used to spear its prey. Its name was derived from the Yinchorri phrase for "horned death". The average rolk-mangir stood nearly four meters tall, and was quite cunning when it came to stalking its prey. Rolk-mangir lived in small packs, each of which had its own hierarchy and pecking order. (WOTC, ANT)

The article, drafted by Hiram Drayson, was designed to help bolster public support of Leia Organa-Solo. (TT)

Rollem, Xig

this man, a native of the planet Grathus, owned a cantina near one of the planet's larger mud basins. He purchased the Supreme-class droid which was sent to Grathus by mistake, and named it Threna. He then used it as a bartender and bouncer at his cantina, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ10)

Rollerball

this sport is played on a wide, smooth field that is often made from stone or permacrete. (POT)

Rollerfish

this meter-long, elusive fish was native to the upper ocean layers of the planet Kamino. (AOTCN)

Rollock

this type of candy is lozenge-shaped, and comes in cylindrical packages. They were often mint-flavored. (GG11)

Rollos

this Gigoran was rsold into slavery to a Sullustan master, where he was befriended by Reina Gale. She was the only being in the slave camps who could speak his language, and Rollos quickly developed a friendship with her. When the Sullustan threatened to injure Reina for being obstinate, Rollos grew angry and destroyed the slave camp. Rollos and Reina then stole the slave master's starship and fled, taking up the life of smugglers and swindlers. (SWJ4)

Rolo

this gladiator was one of the combatants in the Telosian game of Katharsis, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. (DOR)

Rolo, Andrews

the leader of the infamous Spectrader Ring, Rolo was imprisoned by the Empire on Captivity, where he led one group of inmates against Dedelin's group. (RC)

Rolo-droid

this was the name given to any squat droid which moved about on a thick, single wheel. One of these droids inhabited the slave quarters on Mos Espa, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. (ATPM)

Rolsat Noviee

this Clawdite posed as a Lannik, under the nickname "Rolstone", participating the sport of Pugil until he was exposed by a random blood test, shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars. Noviee fled Lannik without notice. At the time of his disappearance, he was the highest-paid athlete to ever participate in professional Pugil events. (HNN5)

Rols'Kus

this gladiator arena was established by the Coynites on their homeworld of Coyn. Combat games were staged each night, especially during holidays and championships. The ultimate winner of all competitions was named Tawws'Kroyn and was revered by all of Coynite society. (OE, PG3)

Rol'Waran

this Twi'lek male ran a spice operation from the bulk freighter Starmaster, stationed in geosynchronous orbit above Ryloth, during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Rol'Waran was part of a group of beings who worked for Crev Bombassa and Borga the Hutt. After the fall of Gyndine, Talon Karrde met with Rol'Waran in an effort to gain information on the halting of Hutt business in the Tynnani and Corellian Systems. (JE)

Romany

this male Ryn was the leader of a small clan which was stranded on the planet Duro, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Romany was distinguished by the patches of bleached-white fur on his arms and tail. At first, Romany found himself a rival of Mezza, as both clan leaders accused the other of trying to escape Duro and strand the other on the planet. They eventually banded together, when the Yuuzhan Vong actually attacked Duro, in an effort to make sure that the refugees escaped. (BP)

Romar

this planet, located in the Galov Sector, was known for the Derrbi Wastelands. (SWJ2)

Romba

according to Ewok legend, this hunter managed to trick the Gorax into eating its own feet in order to escape. (GCG)

Romba

this was a common name for Ewok males. Like other Ewok names, it referred to a spirit or character in the Ewoks' mythology. (GCG)

Romba

an Ewok scout, Romba was part of the group which prepared defenses against the Imperial AT-STs during the Battle of Endor. (ECAR, CCG10)

Romex

this tough material is often used to make sturdy dresses and aprons. (POT)

Romey, Belyssa

this woman served as an Alliance Major in the 132nd Forward Division, stationed in the Atrivis Sector during the last years of the Galactic Civil War. (MTSE)

Romi Moola

this Twi'lek female fled Jabba the Hutt's fortress shortly after the Battle of Naboo, when her attempt to poison the crimelord failed. She had Jabba's chuba stew laced with poison, but the stew was taste-tested by Jabba's chef before it reached the Hutt. When the chef died, Jabba discovered the treachery, forcing Romi to flee Jabba's fortress. Jabba then issued a bounty on her head, hoping to "question" her about the attempt. She fled to Gardulla the Hutt, but was later captured by Jango Fett. Fett had been trying to gain an audience with Gardulla to question her about the Bando Gora, and captured Romi in Gardulla's fortress. (BH)

Romin

this race of humanoid beings was native to the planet Romin. Romins were distinguished by their golden skin and eyes, and their faces were dominated by their wide mouths. The nose of a Romin was flat, and barely raised up from their face. Just before the onset of the Clone Wars, the Romin population was divided into two groups. The minority group was made up of the richest Romins who supported Roy Teda and his dictatorship, turning a blind eye to the fact that criminals were making their homes on the planet. The vast majority of Romins were workers who were exiled from cities like Elior, forced to live in decaying hovels and shacks. Many of these Romin workers died before adulthood, due to the disease and squalor that dominated their lives. (JQ8)

Romin

this planet, the homeworld of the Romin race, was located in the Mid Rim. It was orbited by a single moon. During the years leading up to the Clone Wars, Romin was a haven for criminals and other wanted individuals, after Roy Teda altered the planetary laws and made it impossible to extradite a wanted being from Romin. This law made Teda exceptionally wealthy, since he demanded a high fee for the relative security his planet offered. (JQ8)

Rominaria

this plant, native to Naboo, was known for its wondrous flowers. Many varieties were grown by the Naboo, in different colors and patterns. (T5)

Romm

one of several inhabited worlds of the Delantine system, Romm had a small cell of Alliance supporters shortly after the Battle of Yavin. It was here that Stuart Zissu, along with the droids R2-D2, C-3PO, and 4B-X, were directed to go when they were forced to land on Da'nor, after their ship was captured by the Empire. Stuart's father, Trux, had been sent to the system to rally the rebels on Delantine and gain the support of the Romm cell. However, Trux was taken captive in order for Stuart to escape. (SA1)

Romm Zqar

this Yuuzhan Vong Commander was the representative dispatched by the Warmaster, Tsavong Lah, to accept Borsk Fey'lya's surrender at the conclusion of the Second Battle of Coruscant. Romm Zqar was sent instead of Lah himself, as the Yuuzhan Vong anticipated treachery on the Bothan's part. The alien invaders were correct, as Fey'lya set off a series of huge explosions, killing himself and the entire complement of Yuuzhan Vong warriors who had captured him. Romm Zqar died in the blast. Zqar's command ship and two smaller craft were also consumed in the kilometer-wide blast radius, along with some 25,000 Yuuzhan Vong warriors. (SBS)

Romodi

the oldest Imperial officer working under Tarkin aboard the first Death Star. He has a number of deep, jagged facial scars, which even laser surgery couldn't repair. He supports Vader's plan to seek out and destroy the heart of the Alliance. (SWN)

Romodi Interstellar

this was one of the largest passenger transportation lines active during the last decades of the Old Republic. Based on Coruscant, Romodi Interstellar was also one of the first transportation providers to expand their fleets as planets such as Ando and Sy Myrth began to secede from the Republic. They recognized that many aliens living on Coruscant would flee the planet to return to their homeworlds after secession, as well as the fact that many natives on worlds which did secede might want to remain allied with the Republic. (HNN4)

Romold

a Mugaari cargo ferry destroyed by the Empire shortly after the Battle of Hoth. (TIE)

ROMStat Services

based on Cloud City, this manufacturing operation was one of the largest on the outpost at the time of the Battle of Yavin. (GG2)

Ronay

this was one of the two moons which orbited the planet Kuat. (CCW)

Rondai

this alien race was native to the planet Rondai-2. All Rondai were dark-haired, with little variation in hair color across the race. (SOJ)

Rondai-2

this was a temperate planet, noted for its mild temperatures and rolling plains. The temperature never dropped below the freezing point, and much of the landscape was flat and open. (SOJ)

Rondat

this small creature inhabits the planet Kuan. (TIE)

Rondel, Zeke

this man was the Commander of the Alliance's base on Berrol's Donn, following the Battle of Yavin. He initiated the mission which rescued the Shashay Crying Dawn Singer from the hands of the Farool brothers. Rondel was noticeable by his thick, curly black hair and gruff demeanor. Note that Cracken's Rebel Operatives spells the name Rondell. (TA, GMH, CRO)

Rondle

this man, a member of the crew of the Hawkbat, was the ship's unarmed combat instructor. (WS)

Rondo

this man was one of the guards who was employed by the Corporate Sector Authority, during the early years of the New Order, to protect shipments of medicinal spice to the planet Endregaad. The spice was destined to treat those beings afflicted by the Endregaad Plague, and Rondo and his fellow officers were dispatched to keep bandits and thugs from stealing the spice. Rondo was among the guards who often accompanied Simol Toc and his caravan to the Temple Valley. It was on one of these missions that Rondo was killed, after he wandered away from camp one night and was attacked by a group of oasis children. (TF)

Rone Mothin

this New Republic Commander was placed in control of the outpost on Sheris. His troops guarded the shield generators protecting the Marter An spaceport, and were pressed into active duty when Imperial forces attempted to gain control of Bhir'Khi Pass. (SWJ9)

Ronet Coor

this being represented his homeworld of Iseo in the Old Republic Senate, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. The Senator later served on Chancellor Palpatine's Loyalist Committee. Unfortunately, Senator Coor was blamed - along with Senator Onaconda Farr - for the loss of the planet Duro and its shipyards to the Separatist forces under General Grievous, during the height of the Clone Wars.

Investigation by the Senate Bureau of Intelligence discovered that warships had been dispatched from Iseno to protect Duro, but had been rerouted to protect Rodia instead. Initial thoughts were that the rerouting was a mistake, but the investigation clearly pointed to Senator Farr's role in trying to protect his homeworld. Senator Coor was forced to resign amidst the scandal, tendering his resignation and returning to Iseno in shame. (HNN4, SW176) this planet, the eighth planet in the Empress Teta System was maintained by Empress Teta and her judicial advisors. The worst sorts of criminals were shipped to Ronika to terraform the world for future use as a penal colony. Jori Daragon was sent here, upon her return from the Sith Empire, for punishment based on her outstanding debts and actions. When Naga Sadow attacked the Koros Systems, Empress Teta launched her own counterattack. Part of her reinforcements were the prisoners from Ronika. They agreed that fighting for Teta's worlds was more preferable to certain death at the hands of the Sith masses, and fought with all their might to repel the Massassi warriors. (FOSE, PH)

Ronika

Ronin

this was a race of dark-skinned humans. (T20)

Ronk

a vicious carnivore native to the planet Cilpar, the ronk is a compact, lion-like creature. The male ronk is considered a delicacy by the locals, while the female is fatally poisonous. (XWRS)

Ronnie the Rocketpack Rodent

this comical character was the mascot of Galaxy Ways theme park. (GMS)

Ronse, Deakis

this man was a noted Professor of Cosmology at the University of Sanbra, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Doctor Ronse and his team were the first to note that the star Demophon was approaching supernova phase. (HNN4)

Ronson

this man was one of the Peacekeepers who protected the survivors of the Outbound Flight Project, during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (SQ)

RonTha

this Meerian man ran the Agricultural Corps base on the planet Bandomeer, during the time when the Corps was working to overcome decades of damage done by mining operations. RonTha spoke in a monotonous drawl, and could ramble for hours on the most meaningless subjects. (DR)

Ronto

a huge sauropod beast of burden, the ronto was actually a mammal which resembles a long-necked brontosaurus. Its small head was crowned with two pairs of ears and a knobbed, calloused dome. The smaller pair of ears gave the ronto excellent hearing in the high-frequency range, while the larger pair provided low-frequency hearing as well as body-heat dissipation. They have a keen sense of smell, which makes up for their poor eyesight. Many of them were transported to Tatooine, as they seemed to adapt well to the dry climates. A trader from Tatooine donated one to Luke Skywalker and his Jedi Academy on Yavin 4, to assist in repairing the Great Temple after the battle with the Shadow Academy. (SWSE, SHA, CCG9, EGA, WSW)

Ronto

this was the name of one of the constellations visible in the night sky above the planet Corellia. The Ronto was split by the constellation known as Drall's Hat. (REC) meaning "willful", this was one of the most common names among Rodian females. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Ronu

Ronyards

this planet was set aside by the rest of the galaxy as a junkyard for old droids. It has become covered with the parts of droids, but in a strange set of circumstances, the droid parts have fused together and created a large, single-minded entity that covers much of the planet's surface. The droids that roam free refer to the huge conglomeration as the Body of the Living God, and the free roamers refer to themselves as brothers of the Body. The Alliance learned that the Empire was going to melt the droids on Ronyards down for slag to reconstitute into the ores contained in it. They sent R2-D2 and C-3PO to warn the droids, who were led by Brother Fivelines. The Body of the Living God was aroused by the invasion of the Empire, and helped destroy the Imperial forces. (CSWDW)

Rood

this term was used in the Elrood Sector to describe any being who was born and raised in the sector. (PG3)

Roodji

this species of predator is known for its loud, howling, pack attacks. (XWWP)

Roofoo

one of many names used by Doctor Evazan. (SWR)

Roogak

this Ithorian surname referred to an obstinate but hardy herd animal, according to historian who studied the Ithorian race. (GCG)

Roogak

this was the name given to a species of hardy, though obstinate, herd animal that was native to the planet Ithor. (GCG)

Roogak

this Ithorian was the Captain of the herdship Galactic Horizon during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. Roogak was unusually greedy for an Ithorian, but he was nevertheless loyal to his friends. Among those he most trusted was Dayla Kev, who allowed the Galactic Horizon to land on her jungle planet and participate in the safari expeditions she hosted. When he learned that Dayla had planned to kill Milac Troper aboard the Galactic Horizon, Captain Roogak did his best to distance himself from her plot. After her capture and arrest, Roogak had the gasnits and other creatures she placed on board jettisoned into space. (GMR6)

Rook

this Ghtroc freighter was owned by Culan Brasli, Ral, and the Desilijic Hutts, who wanted Ghitsa Dogder eliminated. They sabotaged by hyperdrive on the Star Lady during a stopover on Chad, then followed the ship to Prishardia. (TFNR)

Rooker, Lye

this man defaulted on a "generous" loan from the InterGalactic Banking Clan just before the Battle of Naboo, prompting the IBC to issue a bounty for his arrest. The bounty was issued through the Jetters Bar, so as not to implicate the IBC in illegal seek and detain activities. Just after the Battle of Naboo, Rooker was apprehended on Coruscant by Jango Fett and turned over to the authorities. (BH)

Rookie One

this was the callsign of an unnamed pilot who flew with the Alliance during the struggles leading up to the Battle of Yavin. A native of the planet Tatooine, Rookie One later was instrumental in the destruction of the Empire's V-38 project. (RA, RA2)

Rookna Tree

native to the Forest Moon of Endor, this tree had unusual fungus-like bark. The bark was sharp, and could cut flesh if a creature got too close. (ECAR)

Rooks

one of Ulic Qel-Droma's Krath starship captains. (TSW)

Roolek

this Rodian clan was subjugated by Navik the Red and the Chattza clan, who later ordered their extermination. The surviving members of the clan were off-planet when the killing took place, and they remained in hiding lest Navik's agents seek them out. (SPG)

Room 030

this field-shielded room is located deep in the bowels of the Imperial Palace, and served as the primary meeting location for the New Republic's Council on Security and Intelligence. (SOL)

Room of a Thousand Fountains

this was one of the upper chambers of the Jedi Temple on Coruscant, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Used for meditation and quiet study, the room was filled with fountains and waterfalls surrounded by a forest-like planting of flora from around the galaxy. (RF)

Room of Arches

this small chamber, named for its arched entryways, was located beneath the sands of the planet Tatooine. It was part of the underground complex that formed Jabba's Palace, and was located near the droid torture facilities of EV-9D9. For many years during the height of the Galactic Civil War, the Room of Arches was the home of an outcast clan of Jawas. (IWSST)

Room of Morning Mists

this rotunda, located in the Varykino retreat in the lake country of Naboo, was named for the way in which the morning streamed through the windowed walls, illuminating the mists that rose from the lake. It was in this room that Anakin Skywalker and Padme' Amidala shared a meal, when Padme' returned to Naboo after her cruiser was destroyed on Coruscant. (IWE2)

Roona

this was one of the more common Kel Dor surnames. Its meaning translated into Basic as "navigator". (GCG)

Roon

this star was the primary body in the Roon System, located in the Outer Rim Territories. (WOTC)

Roon

the primary planet in the Roon System of asteroids and moonlets, Roon orbited its sun at such a distance and with sufficient rotation to be tide-locked. One side was a lush, tropical paradise while the opposite side was a cold, dark wilderness that was only lit by the planet's single moon. The planet was first settled about 1,000 years before the Battle of Yavin, and stories of the remote world began to attract treasure-seekers and explorers. Rumors spread over the years that the planet held untold treasures, but no one ever found them. After the Battle of Endor, Roon became a haven for all manner of criminals, primarily smugglers who were working the Death Wind Corridor. (DCAR, WOTC)

Roon Comet

this was the name given to the most visible comet that orbited Roon's star. Its path was not a pure ellipse, and could not accurately be predicted. (MBS)

Roon Sea

this was the primary ocean found on the planet Roon. (EGP)

Roon Tours

this travel agency was based on the planet Roon, and provided wealthy patrons with luxurious trips to many locations throughout the Outer Rim Territories during the height of the New Order. (IWSST)

Roon Trade Guild

established in the wake of Governor Koong's death, the Roon Trade Guild provided the newly-freed provinces of the planet Roon with a centralized system of fair practices and exchange rates. The Guild also provided starships to patrol the Manda-Roon Merchant Route, protecting it from pirates and other criminals. (WOTC)

Roona

this world was a member of the Old Republic. (TPM)

Roonadan

fifth planet in the Bonadan System, in the Corporate Sector. Han Solo and Fiolla boarded the Lady of Mindor there, during their travel to the planet Ammuud. (HSR, XW)

Roonan

this was the term originally used to describe the human settlers who inhabited the planet Roon. Over time, the term came to encompass the Duro and Sullustan portions of the population as well. (WOTC)

Roonat

an alien known for its squeak (CPL)

Roonis

this was a common name among the Lepi people. (UANT)

Roonstone

this was a variety of extremely rare, infinitely valuable crystal found on the planet Roon. First brought to light by Mungo Baobab, the Roonstones were covered with carvings and glyphs. However, the mining or export of Roonstones by offworld interests was strictly forbidden and punishable by any number of methods, since Roonstones were always retained for the benefit of the Roonan economy. (DCAR, SES, WOTC)

Roonyard Noon

this Sy Myrthian lawyer lost his wife and children when they were captured by Merson Slavers while aboard the Elegant Wake, shortly after the planet Sy Myrth seceded from the Old Republic. Noon's family was returning to Sy Myrth along with a shipful of other refugees when the liner was attacked near an asteroid field. It was Noon who started the barrage of lawsuits against Romodi Interstellar, claiming negligence on the part of the Elegant Wake's crew led to the ship's capture. (HNN4)

Roop

this young boy was the youngest of Bedran Veb's grandchildren. (TOJC)

Roopak Weelak

this was the name of a noted Pa'lowick. (UANT)

Roor Trevol

this was the name of a distinguished Kel Dor individual. (UANT)

Roos Tarpals

this Gungan warrior served Boss Nass as a Captain of the guard. A former criminal and thief, Tarpals later volunteered to join the Gungan Grand Army, where he was known for his physical skills, and regularly placed in the top ten positions in the Big Nasty Free-For-All. It was during his career as a thief that he first met Jar Jar Bink, and took the clumsy Gungan under his wing. Their friendship was cut short when Tarpals enlisted, however. Tarpals patrolled the city of Otoh Gunga, keeping the city safe and under control. When Jar Jar Binks returned from exile, Tarpals was forced to bring the outcast before Boss Nass. Much later, when Jar Jar brought Queen Amidala before Boss Nass, Tarpals was surprised to discover that the Gungan leader had promoted Jar Jar to the rank of General. Like many of the other army officers, Tarpals questioned Jar Jar's abilities but not Boss Nass's decision. In the Battle of Naboo, Tarpals followed General Ceel and helped lead the Gungan army against the Trade Federation's droid armies, and maintained the tide of the battle until the droids managed to destroy the Gungan shields. The battle was nearly lost until Anakin Skywalker disabled the droid control ship. With the droids powerless and adrift, Tarpals and Jar Jar quickly rounded up the automatons and took control of the battlefield. Tarpals was portrayed by Steven Speirs in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace. (SW1, TPM, E1A10, NEGC)

Roosha

this condiment was used as a topping on meat pies. (SWJ11)

Root

this man was the older cousin to the youths known as Tomcat, Bug, and Rain, and was a native of the planet Somov Rit shortly before the Battle of Ruusan. Root recognized the Force sensitivity in Tomcat and Bug, and allowed the Jedi scout Torr Snapit to take the children to Ruusan, where they could augment the strength of the Jedi Knights massing there against Lord Kaan and the Brotherhood of Darkness. (JVS)

Root Oath

this Ewok oath was given by a warrior whenever they agreed to help another being. As the name implied, the Root Oath was a strong oath, anchoring itself in the swearer's person and growing outward. (SWJ1)

Rootgrass

this blades of this thick grass were dried and used to steep a soothing kind of tea, which was especially enjoyed by the Hutts. (UYV)

Rootjigger

this small beetle was native to the planet Naboo, and lived among the nola grass plains. It was known for its annoying screech, used to attract a mate. (GMR2)

Rootleaf

a plant native to Dagobah, rootleaf was harvested and used as food by Yoda. He cooked some for Luke Skywalker, when the youth first arrived on the Dagobah. (ESB, IWS)

Rootline

this is basically the family tree of each M'shinni clan, but it holds a much deeper significance than that. Each M'shinni can trace his ancestry along their Rootline to one of the Firstmothers, the extinct humanoids who first created the M'shinni race. (GG12)

Rooty

this Cragmoloid was a noted gambler made his home on Nar Shaddaa, during the years just prior to the Battle of Yavin. He defeated Lando Calrissian in a game of sabacc, and would have killed the human when Lando failed to cover his debts, if Bib Fortuna hadn't intervened on Jabba the Hutt's behalf. Although Jabba paid Lando's debts in full, Rooty maintained a grudge against Lando for the rest of his life. When Rooty did travel away from Nar Shaddaa, he used a delapidated CRX Tug known as the Solar Grazer. (UYV, GMR6)

Roоз

see Rooze (WOTC)

Rooze

this germ strain was developed by Governor Koong of the planet Roон, during the early years of the New Order. He sprayed it over the Umboo Province in order to force them to submit to his will. Unfortunately for Koong, he also managed to spray himself with the germ. Nilz Yomm eventually discovered a cure for the germ, on the orders of Koong himself. (WOTC, SWDB)

Rop

this was a common name given to male Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Ropaga Sea

this vast ocean covers the planet Ropagi II, and isolates the two main continents of Forethought and Afterthought. (TSK)

Ropagi

this yellow-white star is the primary solar body in the Ropagi System. Its location in space anchors one end of the Kira Run. (TSK)

Ropagi II

the second and primary world in the Ropagi System, Ropagi II is remarkable in that the highest point on any land mass is no more than 20 meters above sea level. It also has a normal temperate of around 25 degrees Centigrade, making it a pleasant world for living. The planet is the homeworld of the Ropagu and Kalduu races. Its average days last 30 standard hours, and its year lasts 375 local days. (TSK)

Ropagis

this city is located on the continent of Forethought, on the planet Ropagi II. It is connected to Ebyl, as well as Torvane and Balarik, via monorail service. (TSK)

Ropagu

this delicate, peaceful race of near-humans was native to the planet Ropagi II. They are similar to humans in height, but they have wispy, black hair that sharply contrasts with their pale skin. Their tall, thin frames were the result of generation upon generation living in the low gravity of Ropagi II. The eyes of the Ropagu are a strange pink hue. Facial hair among males is regarded as a sort of badge of honor, although the Ropagu are a peaceful race by nature. This has not always been so, for 4,000 years before the Battle of Endor there were 45 different Ropagu nations battling with each other over which was superior. The intervention of the Kalduu race saved the Ropagu from destroying not only themselves, but their planet as well. Since then, the largest conflict the Ropagu have engaged in is a series of philosophical and theoretical debates in which the loser is encouraged to find a better argument and return to the debate. At the advent of the New Order, the Ropagu had no military whatsoever, instead turning their activity toward obtaining knowledge. The Ropagu are also excellent computer technicians, and can program nearly every programmable device in the galaxy. (TSK, AE)

Ropedancer

a serpentine predator native to the moon Yavin 8, the ropedancer can reach lengths of nearly 50 meters. It was named for the side-winding motion it used to travel across the tundra of the moon, although the ropedancer preferred to live in the water. These huge creatures use their fangs to capture and hold their prey, which they swallow whole and alive. (GG2)

Roper Slam

this humanoid being was one of the founders of the criminal gang known as the Slams. He and Valadon founded the gang on their homeworld of Mamendin, with Slam's skills as a conman augmenting Valadon's skills as an identification theft expert. The gang was briefly imprisoned at the Greylands Security Complex on Tentator, but managed to escape about two years before the Battle of Geonosis. Slam was known as something of a fop, preferring extravagant clothing and luxurious appointments wherever he traveled. Several years before the Battle of Geonosis, Obi-Wan Kenobi impersonated Slam in an effort to infiltrate the planet Romin and located Jenna Zan Arbor. Slam and his gang had gone underground, but suddenly turned up on Romin at the same time as Obi-Wan and the Jedi. Obi-Wan hoped that the confusion of the revolt launched by the Citizens' Resistance would help cover their tracks, but the real Slam confronted them after locating Roy Teda's safehouse. After Teda was ousted from Romin, Roper and the Slams agreed to assist him in his work with Granta Omega, and traveled to Coruscant to help disrupt the ceremony in honor of the passage of the All Planet Relief Fund legislation. Roper and Valadon were disguised as Blue Guards during the event, which allowed them to gain easy access to the vertex crystal that served as the financial basis for the Fund. They were apprehended by Obi-Wan and Anakin

Skywalker, and held for questioning. It was revealed that the real plan had nothing to do with stealing vertex, but rather the kidnapping of Chancellor Palpatine himself. (JQ8, JQ9)

Rope-spike

this unusual weapon was popular among the Neimoidians of the Trade Federation, during the last years of the Old Republic. It was essentially a pointed spike that was attached to a length of cord, which could be thrown at an opponent in close combat. When used properly, the rope-spike could serve as a grappling line, a lariat, or a projectile weapon. (RCHC)

Ropna

this bordok was the pet of the Ewok princess, Kneesaa, during her childhood. (ECAR)

Ror

this was one of the most common male names used by members of the Ithorian race. Although most Ithorian names were not used for a specific meaning, historians found that this name meant "strong" or "mighty". (GCG)

Ror

this Shyriiwook word was used as the prefix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "marsh", "hidden", or "swamp", and could be combined with one or more suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Ror Ithh

this Ithorian barhopper was a frequent patron of the Outlander Club, during the years surrounding the Battle of Geonosis. (OWS)

Rorak 5

this space station was located a half-day hyperspace jump from Nar Shaddaa. (JQ)

Roran, Isnal

this Alliance operative was stationed on the planet Lok during the early stages of the Galactic Civil War. It was Roran who discovered Voria Sergar in the wilderness, and brought the girl back to his base to recover. (SWGAL)

Rorand Zuzz

this Ugnaught served as a medical technician for the Old Republic, and was stationed at the Rimsoo Seven military hospital on Drongar during the height of the Clone Wars. It was Rorand who supplied information to Den Dhur about the inevitable mutation of the bota plant. Rorand had obtained the information from Rachott. (MBS, MJH)

Rordak

this world was chosen as an Imperial penal colony for two reasons. First, it was under the control of an orbital nightcloak, which was used to keep the prison camps cold and prohibiting escape. Second, the native Viska are a ruthless race that was not affected by the nightcloak. Rordak was the only world in the Rordak System, and has a day which lasts 14 standard hours. Its year lasts 201 local days. The planet was once the outermost of four worlds surrounding the star known as Rordak, until the star expanded to become a red giant. The inner three planets were destroyed, and much of Rordak's surface was scoured with heat and radiation. Over the millennia, life returned to Rordak, and the Viska soon evolved. The surface of the planet was covered with volcanoes which constantly reshaped the planet. (PG1)

Rordak

this red giant star was the central body in the Rordak System. The system originally had four planets, but the inner three were destroyed when Rordak expanded into its red giant state. Only the outer planet, also known as Rordak, survived. (PG1)

Rordan, Bren-Aarica

this is the pseudonym used by Aarica Vost, during her undercover work while on the planet Kirima. (TSK)

Rordan, Bren-Jules

this small, rat-like man was a native of the planet Kirima, and grew up during the Imperial occupation of the planet. He joined COMPNOR at an early age, and served loyally in order to foster his own position. Bren-Jules was a greedy, selfish, manipulative man, but at the core he was vastly incompetent. He gained favor in COMPNOR by being a yes-man, and was eventually promoted to the position of head agent on Kirima. From his cover as the proprietor of B.J. Rordan's Collectables - a cover which was never truly complete, due to his own incompetence - Bren-Jules kept an eye out for Alliance activity in the starport. (TSK)

Rordan, Bren-Nevin

this man was the proprietor of Rordan's Galactic Exotic Art, located in the city of Verena, on the planet Kirima. A skinny, balding, non-descript man, Bren-Nevin was also an undercover Intelligence officer for the New Republic. Born on Kirima, he joined the Alliance after the destruction of Alderaan. He made his way off Kirima for training, then returned to assist in keeping tabs on the Imperial and Corporate Sector Authority forces at work in the Kalinda System. (TSK)

Rordan's Galactic Exotic Art

this establishment, located in the city of Verena on the planet Kirima, catered to the exotic tastes of art lovers on the planet. It was also the front for its owner, Bren-Nevin Rordan, who used it to monitor the activities of the Corporate Sector Authority and Imperial agents in the city. Alliance - and later, New Republic - agents could make contact with him when they asked about certain pieces of art he currently did not have in stock. (TSK)

Rordan's Spaceship Parts and More

this sand-colored building is owned and operated by Bren-Aarica Rodan, in the starport city of Verena, on Kirima. The display area is a large, roomy affair which holds every conceivable starship part and tool available. (TSK)

Rordis City

this city, located on the planet Nubia, was the site of Industrial Automaton's primary R5-series droid production facility during the last decades of the Old Republic. (HNN4)

Rordys

this was a common name among the S'kytri people. (UANT)

Rorgam

this planet was inhabited by immigrants from a wide variety of other planets. The elite class of beings wore a turban-like head wrapping to distinguish themselves from the more common folk. (CTV)

Rori

this moon, one of several which orbited the planet Naboo, had a terrain which was vastly different than the idyllic settings of Naboo, with twisted forests and knotted vegetation covering much of the ground. The Naboo established a small outpost on Rori, managing to eke out a living during the height of the New Order. However, no one could agree on who actually established the first settlements on Rori, nor could any agreement be reached on which parts of its flora and fauna were native to the moon. Some people believed that the Naboo first tried to colonize the moon, but found it too inhospitable. Other thought that a group of spice miners tried to establish a base on Rori, but abandoned it when no spice could be found. (SWI65, SWI66, SWGAL, ROD)

Rori Spice Mining Collective

this was the only licensed group that was allowed to mine spice from the moon of Rori, during the height of the New Order. They were often at odds with the Kobola guild, which was run by the Hutts. (SWGAL)

Rork

this man served as a crewman aboard the luxury liner captained by Quasar, during the years following the Clone Wars. (MC24)

Rormaroo

this large creature was native to the planet Pallaxides. It had a wide, flat body, measuring up to 300 meters in length, up to 100 meters across, but standing just 10 meters tall. Their heads were dominated by wide mouths, which were used to graze on the plateaus of the planet. A pair of small eyes helped them see, and two gas-filled wings ran along the length of their body. These wings helped the limbless rormaro move about, and they could transport several tons of material on their backs. Most rormaroo acquire a covering of plant material over their lifetimes, appearing from above to be floating islands. Because of their size, these docile creatures had no known predators. (ND)

Rorn, Taska

this woman was a navigation officer aboard the FarStar during the search for Moff Sarne. Although unaware of it, Taska and her team discovered the presence of Velst Nay'sro and Bem Lyu'kij at the edge of the Kathol Rift, when they located a group of unmoving asteroids. (KR, E)

Roron Corobb

this Ithorian Jedi Master once trained under Yarael Poof, who helped develop Corobb's already strong mental skills. He agreed to take on the rank of General during the Clone Wars, commanding a group of clone troopers in battle. Master Corobb was part of the task force that was dispatched to protect Chancellor Palpatine when General Grievous launched his attack on Coruscant. Unfortunately, Grievous was able to kill both Master Corobb and Master Foul Moudama before taking Palpatine hostage. This character was named in honor of Ron Cobb, who created the original designs used for the Ithorian alien in Star Wars: Episode IV - A New Hope. (SWDB, ROF)

Rorq

this muscular Mawan male was a tunnel worker during the years leading up to the Great Purge that destroyed the city of Naatan. Distinguished by his gelaming dark hair, Rorq was one of many Mawans known to Euraana Fall as willing to help re-establish a central government on the planet. His knowledge of the fuel supply systems beneath Naatan came from his former career as a fuel-supply system programmer. (JQ6)

Rorworr

this Wookiee, who lived on Kashyyyk some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin, was one of a small number who wanted to sell his fellow Wookiees into slavery to the Czerka Corporation. When he explained his plans to Jaarak, Rorworr was unprepared for any resistance. Rorworr was later killed by Jaarak, in an effort to prevent the enslavement of the Wookiees. Jaarak, however, was eventually cleared of any charges, after the true nature of Rorworr's plans for the Wookiees was revealed. (KOTOR)

Rorworr

this Wookiee scout was part of the Naboo Underground resistance to the Trade Federation's invasion of the planet Naboo. Rorworr had been a student at the Royal House of Learning, employing a translator droid designated TD0-2 to communicate with his teachers and classmates. Rorworr was on Naboo with his father, who was on a diplomatic mission to Naboo at the time of the Trade Federation's blockade of the planet. Following the Battle of Naboo, Rorworr went to work as a scout for the Republic, but became disgruntled when his recommendations were ignored in favor of those from his human counterparts. Following the formation of the Alliance to Restore the Republic, Rorworr became a pilot for the Alliance. He traveled in a modified A-Wing, which was equipped with enhanced sensors that allowed him to hide in an asteroid belt and track Imperial ship and troop movements. However, he grew tired of fighting, and wished to simply "get away" from the politics and return to his life as a scout. For many years, Rorworr wandered aimlessly along the galactic rim, trying to forget the death of Sia-Lan Wezz at the Battle of Skorupon. Eventually, after the Empire was defeated at the Battle of Endor, Rorworr was offered a scout's position with the New Republic. He became something of a scouting legend, traveling in a camouflage-painted Svelte-class shuttle and participating in a variety of famous escapades. (IOT, WOTC, GCG)

Rory

one of the survivors of the Battle of Hoth, Rory was evacuated on the Bright Hope. (TBH)

Ros Lai

this deformed woman, known as the Rancor, was the daughter of matriarch Zalem of the Witches of Dathomir. Zalem abandoned Ros Lai and forced her to work with the male slaves, as punishment for her ugliness. The other Witches often played practical jokes on her, and Zalem ignored them. When Quinlan Vos arrived on Dathomir, Ros Lai tried to help him. She was later shot and wounded by Yongti, during a raid of the slave pens. Ros Lai survived, but Zalem tried to kill her again, Zalem gave her a drink, after Vonya found her hiding after the raid. The drink contained a live artery worm, which Zalem hoped would consume Ros Lai's blood vessels. Despite these efforts, Ros Lai survived, and later helped Quinlan free the Kwi. Ros Lai also revealed that her deformities were actually the daughter of a Jedi Knight whose wife murdered him after using his Force talents for her own schemes. She later revealed to Quin that she was quite strong with the Dark Side of the Force, and had been maintaining her guise as "The Rancor" in order to gain the power of the Star Chamber for herself. She managed to escape from Vonya and return to her mother's side, claiming to deliver Quin as a way of "making up." In reality, Ros Lai used the ruse to get close enough to Zalem to kill her mother and avenge the death of her father. She then tried to kill Quin, but he managed to capture her and bring her to Coruscant to receive justice. Quin hoped to return her to the Light Side of the Force. (SWIE)

Rosen

meaning "pure", this was a common female name among the Mon Calamari race. (GCG)

Rosen

this man was a shipmate of Benchar and Carewa, and a companion of Cecil the Wookiee. They often hung out while on shoreleave, playing sabacc in the local bars. Note that this is a reference to the baseball player Pete Rose. (SWJ11)

Rosewing

this exquisite, flying insect formed the final step in the lifecycle of the peggelar. (BP)

Rosh

this common, though archaic, Zabrak surname meant "builder", although it referred to individuals who built either edifices and machines. (GCG)

Rosheed, Pippa

this Doctor of Biology worked for the Fernandin Scouting Expedition, and spent a great deal of time on Yavin 4 determining whether or not the moon was suitable for habitation. She was responsible for isolating the infectious disease which was brought to Yavin 13 inadvertently by the Expedition, and developing a cure which saved both humans and Gerbs from the disease's effects. She was known as a loner, distrustful of strangers and rarely emotional. (GG2)

Roshton

this man served as a Commander in the Army of the Republic, during the early stages of the Clone Wars. Commander Roshton was assigned to accompany Kinman Doriana to Cartao, about a year after the Battle of Geonosis, to secure the facilities of Spaarti Creations for the manufacture of modern cloning cylinders. When the Separatists discovered the plan, they launched an attack on Cartao. Roshton found himself between two conflicting orders: defending Spaarti Creations from being captured, and ensuring the continued production of cloning cylinders. Faced with challenge of opposing 5,000 battle droids with just 900 troops, Roshton initially chose the former: he troops would hide inside the manufacturing facility, using it as cover despite the incredible damage a firefight inside the facility would cause. After being contacted by the Jedi guardian on Cartao, Jafer Torles, Roshton realized that there were other options he could take. He ordered his troops to move below-ground, taking the tunnels that led away from the main plant to establish positions from which they could harass the rear flanks of the Separatist forces. Roshton himself assumed the guise of a landscaper, so that he could plant remote-activated landmines around the grounds. His plans nearly worked, until his forces were trapped in an access tunnel when Separatist forces collapsed its exits. Doriana and Torles launched a daring mission to free them, only to see Spaarti Creations destroyed by a Republic gunship supposedly under the command of the Jedi Knights. (SWI68, SWI69, SWI70)

Roshu Sune

this Gotal guerilla group rose to prominence in the months preceding the Battle of Antar 4, in an attempt to force the planetary government to secede from the Old Republic. It was the terrorist attacks of the Roshu Sune which led to the bloody Battle of Antar 4, but which did not obtain the desired result. Several months later, Roshu Sune agents kidnapped Gotal Emissary Nathanjo Nirrelz, and simply issued the Articles of Secession to the government of Antar 4, instead of any formal demands. Roshu Sune later announced that they would free Nirrelz in return for a signing of the Articles. (HNN5)

Rosie's Joint

a grill which has live entertainment in Teguta Lusat. (LCM)

Rosion

this Imperial Navy Lieutenant served as Joak Drysso's Chief Navigator aboard the Lusankya. (BW)

Rosit, Anjavay

this man was a member of the Blue Guard, during the months leading up the Clone Wars. Shortly before the vote on the Military Creation Act, he was knocked unconscious by a horde of rioters who were protesting the possible passage of the Act. His fellow officers managed to extricate him from the mob. (HNN5)

Rosk

this Imperial Navy Commander served under Captain Soontir Fel aboard the Pride of the Senate. (THG)

Rosk 102

this Khommite, the 102nd clone of Rosk, was distinguished in the history of the planet Khomm. (UANT)

Roskin

this woman was one of the many settlers who were transplanted from Sulon to Ruusan by Morgan Katarn, after the Empire took control of Sulon. She struggled to board the Cyclops to escape Imperial persecution, worrying about where her three small boys were. Katarn himself helped Roskin get her family aboard the transport ship. (RAG)

Ross

this man was the owner and operator of the Sontor Skipper, and made regular runs to Baralou for the Alliance. (PG1)

Ross, Rosco

this man accompanied Jan Ors aboard the Star of Empire, shortly before the Battle of Yavin. Rosco was known for his hand-to-hand combat skills. He and Ris Waller apprehended Kyle Katarn aboard the ship, and brought him to Jan for questioning. (SFE)

Ross, Thaddeus

this Corellian pilot and freighter owned the battered YT-1300 Kierra, which he had outfitted with a sophisticated computer he nicknamed Kierra. Thaddeus himself was a former bounty hunter who returned to the smuggling occupation which had been in his family's blood for many generations. As the computer in his developed its own personality, they developed a mother-son kind of relationship, with Kierra constantly nagging Thaddeus and making sure he was okay. Kierra filled a void in Thaddeus' life which had been formed when Saahir Ru'luv broke off their three-year relationship. Later, while smuggling weapons to the Alliance from Merich's Bend, Saahir died in Thaddeus' arms. The Empire had discovered the base, and raided it before all personnel could be evacuated. When he took a job transporting Adalric Brandl to Trulalis, Ross got caught up in an Imperial operation to recover the Dark Jedi. They were ambushed on Trulalis by Menges, and Ross fled the planet with Brandl. They were intercepted just outside of Trulalis by Imperial Captain Grendahl, who had been sent by High Inquisitor Tremayne to recover Brandl. Grendahl held Ross for questioning, but eventually let him go with a 10,000 credit "reward." (TFE, SWJ4, SWJ15)

Rossi, Todrin

this former Imperial Captain was a native of the planet Coruscant, and served under Warlord Zsinj during the period following the Battle of Endor and the breakup of the Empire. (IF)

Rossik

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Rossik

this Imperial Captain was assigned to accompany Tavin Notsil to New Oldtown in order to recover Gara Petothel. However, when she refused to join Tavin and return to Warlord Zsinj, both Tavin and Rossik were shot by Myn Donos and Lara Notsil. (IF)

Rossorworm

this despicable creature is native to Togoria. The Togorians often refer to smugglers and pirates as rossorworms, because they despise such trash with a passion. (GG4)

Rosswell, Stant

this Imperial governor was placed in charge of the planet Indu San. He was known as a lenient man, and often cut favors for native businesses. For this reason, the natives tolerated Rosswell; it could even be said he was popular. Unfortunately for Indu San, Rosswell was later replaced by Ekam Ouway. (SWJ6)

Rost Mountains

this was one of the most rugged chains of mountains found on the planet Ragoon-6. (JQ2)

Rostat Manr

this Sullustan male served the Alliance during the last years of the Empire, flying Y-Wings into battle. He also served the New Republic, but a year after the Battle of Endor, he resigned his commission and went to work in the private sector. He had tired of war, and believed that he had achieved his goals. He took a position as a pilot with Event Vistas, and within a year was promoted to chief pilot aboard the Nebula Queen. However, on a short leave, he was kidnapped and brainwashed by agents of the Imperial warlord Zsinj as part of Project Minefield. A trigger phrase was implanted in his head which, when activated by a phrase dealing with the existence of Ewoks in his nose, would cause him to crash the Nebula Queen into a planet. The code phrase contained the planet Coruscant, and Rostat would have succeeded in crashing into the planet if not for two things. The first was intervention of his counterpart, Nurm, who stunned Rostat and rendered him unconscious. The second was that Wraith Squadron had already determined Zsinj's actions, and had warned the Republic of the potential for a Sullustan to be brainwashed in the manner Tal'dira and Nuro Tualin were. Rostat was arrested and detained by New Republic Intelligence. (SOC)

Rostek, Tisha

this woman served the Alliance at the base on Dantooine, where she fell in love with Harovan Toth. They married and had a daughter, named Samona, but Tisha was killed in the Battle of Thovinack. (SWJ11)

Rostu

this was one of the many nomadic Korunnai tribes, known as ghosh, which were native to the planet Haruun Kal. The Rostu were one of several small tribes which allied themselves with the Windu ghosh for protection. (SHPT)

Rostu, Nick

this Korunnai man was one of the many who joined the Upland Liberation Front, during the height of the Clone Wars. When Jedi Master Depa Billaba began leading the ULF, Nick was the person she dispatched to Pelek Baw to intercept Mace Windu, should the other Jedi Master come looking for her. Rostu missed Windu several times before eventually rescuing him, then escorted the Jedi Master into the jungles. Nick earned Windu's trust by displaying Master Billaba's own lightsaber as evidence of his fealty. Despite his obvious association with ULF, Nick maintained that he was fighting the war for the money he could earn. Although he acknowledged his Korun ancestry, he proclaimed to want nothing more than to leave Haruun Kal and explore the galaxy. This was, of course, mainly talk that Nick used to distance himself from his own feelings. Deep down inside, he wanted to see the Korunnai regain control of their planet. He later revealed to Master Windu that he had helped Depa Billaba and Kar Vastor set up the gruesome message of death that had been discovered by the Old Republic, and that he himself had provided the tip to the Republic's Intelligence agency. Later, when Vastor attacked a group of Balawai prospectors under Windu's protection, Nick agreed to take four of the Balawai children under his protection. When Master Windu witnessed Nick's bravery in defying Vastor to care for the children, he decided to invite Nick to join the Army of the Republic, bestowing the rank of brevet Major. Nick then assisted Master Windu in the attempt to capture Pelek Baw so that they could defeat the Balawai and their Separatist supporters. While defending the droid control bunker from attack by Kar Vastor's Akk Guards, Nick suffered a devastating chest injury from Iol's vibroshields. Despite the injury, Nick managed to save Master Windu from an attack from Depa Billaba, who had been trying to free the Korunnai through sheer willpower. When Depa tried to slice Windu with her lightsaber, Nick managed to grab a blaster and shoot the lightsaber from her hand. His luck continued to hold, as Nick was rescued from Haruun Kal and brought to Coruscant for treatment. Master Windu made sure that his brevet Major rank was confirmed with the Army of the Republic, and submitted that Nick be awarded the Medal of Valor for his part in ending the Summertime War. (SHPT)

Rot Crow

this small scavenger was native to the jungles of Haruun Kal. (SHPT)

Rot Mite

this scaly, scavenging insect was native to the planet Talus. (GQRG)

Rota

the Ewok word for food. (EA)

Rotan, Detta

this woman was one of the Alliance' primary operatives on the planet Gotida, during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. (AIR)

Rotary Plug

this form of power plug, used pod racers and other high-speed ground vehicles, used a series of small power sources which were tapped in a regular order. However, only a single source was active at any time. It was the predecessor to a cluster plug, which used power from all sources at once. (RAC)

Rotas V

this planet saw battle during the Clone Wars. The natives who fought back against the forces of the Confederacy of Independent Systems wore a skirt woven of strong material, which served as both protection and identification. The use of these skirts was later adopted by the ARC Troopers and clone commanders of the Grand Army of the Republic. (VD3)

Rotfurze Wastes

this was one of the most barren locations found on the planet Drongar. Exploration into the region showed that the blight that affected the Wastes was ecological in nature, not caused by modern technology. (MBS)

Roth, Dengar

an underworld toughguy killed by Mara Jade on Rishi. (DFR)

Rothana

located in the Kuat Sector of the galaxy, Rothana was one of the most industrialized planets in the sector. The primary world in the Rothana System, it served as the base of operations for Rothan Heavy Engineering, a subsidiary of Kuat Drive Yards, during the last century of the Old Republic. Its proximity to the Kamino System meant that Rothana was chosen by the Kaminoans as the construction site for many of the war machines employed by the clone troopers of the Army of the Republic. (X2, SWDB)

Rothana Heavy Engineering

a division of Kuat Drive Yards, this was one of the largest manufacturing corporations found in the Old Republic, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Rothana produced the Acclamator-class military transport and several other ground-based vehicles in support of the Army of the Republic. (HNN5, X2, SWDB)

Rothana HR

see Rothana Heavy Engineering (SHPT)

Rothingham, Lucius

this Imperial agent was assigned to the planet Kuat and the Kuat Drive Yards during the height of the New Order, where he was in charge of eliminating the outlaw techs and shipwrights who threatened to provide Imperial secrets to outside influences. He made a virtual career out of trying to abduct Marcus Sione, but the youth always managed to escape. An engineer by training, Rothingham was known for his annoying habit of using technical metaphors in everyday conversation. (CCW)

Rothrrawr

this ancient Wookiee was infamously known as the chieftain who broke Bacca's Ceremonial Blade. Rothrrawr underestimated the ferocity of a beast in the Shadowlands, and was forced to stab it with the sword. The blade broke off in the beast's hide, and Rothrrawr was forced to return to his home with just the hilt. This hilt became the symbol of the chieftain's power, and was passed down for many generations before it was re-attached to the blade by Zaalbar. (KOTOR)

Rothwall, Gam

this man was one of Emperor Palpatine's many personal advisors. He was the target of several assassination attempts during a surprise inspection of the Imperial facilities on the planet Garnib. (GMS)

Roti

this grain was a staple in the diet of the Seratians. It was also consumed by tympts who have migrated into urban areas of the planet Serat, after the Seratians decimated the population of symers. The symers preyed on the tympts, keeping their population to a minimum. However, the Seratians killed off the symers in order to obtain their organs and appendages, which supposedly had mystical powers. This allowed the tympt population to explode, and virtually destroyed the roti crops on the planet. (COG)

Roti

this is the orange star that is the binary of Ow, at the center of the Roti-Ow System. (GG4)

Roti-Ow System

a binary star system which is made up of Roti and Ow, and is the system which contains Altor 14. (GG4)

Rot-Maggot

this was the name given to the huge, legendary aplilid worm that supposed lived at the bottom of the Abyss, the deepest mine found on the planet Vasha. According to Vashan legend, the Rot-Maggot was the god of decay, who nested at the very core of the planet Vasha. (GMR9)

Rotsino, Esu

this woman served her homeworld of Abrion Major, as well as the entire Abrion Sector, in the Galactic Senate of the Old Republic, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. It was Senator Rotsino who delivered Abrion Sector's Articles of Secession to the Republic, throwing her entire sector's wealth and agricultural resources to the Separatists. (HNN5)

Rotten to the Core (Empire's Crumbling)

this song, written and played by the band Deeply Religious, first appeared on the compilation Advanced Explosives Handbook. It was banned by the Imperial Board of Culture. (GG9)

Rotting Disease

this was a type of disease which was carried by the tesfli piercer of Gorsh. Victims bitten by the tesfli piercer who do not get medical attention find the bitten limb suddenly swells, then turns black. The flesh then falls apart, rendering the limb useless. This disease is worst when a victim is bitten dozens or hundreds of times when they encounter a swarm of tesfli piercers. (PG1)

Rotwort

an aromatic plant that Wuher uses to create the perfect liqueur for Jabba the Hutt. (TME)

Rough-grass

this was a species of dense, green ground cover which grew on the planet Athiss. (TOJC)

Roughskin Rat

this small mammal has coarse, abrasive skin. (SOL)

Rouh

an Imperial freighter destroyed by Dev in the Senex System, during the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Roundtree System

this planetary system is the home of a dark-skinned race of humans. (CSA)

Rout of Hensara

this is the name of the battle between Imperial forces on the planet Hensara III and the X-Wing Rogue Squadron. The pilots of Rogue Squadron were sent to rescue Dirk Harkness and his crew from the planet, and managed to do so without losing anyone. (XWN)

Rov

this was the title of the religious leader of the planet Ventooine. The Rov was in charge of protecting the shrine built to honor Han Solo and his defeat of the Shadeshine, thereby saving the natives of Ventooine. (LTA5, MCA2)

Rovello

this was a common name among the Toydarian race. (WOTC, UANT)

Rover

an Alliance transport group that participated in the attack on the Imperial station NL-1. (TIE)

Rover

Evazan's pet Meduza, Rover helped Evazan keep his Andoan castle laboratory clean. Rover gave his life to Evazan when he perished while trying to break Evazan's fall into the ocean. (TME)

Rover

this highly-sophisticated tracking device was manufactured by Astroserver Industries, and was more effective than the TrailMaster. It could provide information on the range, direction, and speed of the target to which it was attached. (CFG)

Rover

an Imperial utility tug operative during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Roverine

this insectile predator inhabits the Davirien jungles, swarming in groups of millions and stripping the landscape of all vegetation. They also ate any small creature which was too slow to escape the swarm. (VOF)

Row, The

this was one of the major thoroughfares found in Bartyn's Landing, on the planet Lamaredd. Travelers moved along The Row toward the area of the city known as Center Sphere. (GMR7)

Row, The

see Treasure Ship Row (SWI66)

Roweedu

meaning "flowery", this was one of the most common names among Rodian females. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Roweedu

this Rodian teamed up with Krussk, in the aftermath of the breakup of the Bounty Hunters Guild, to work together to hunt down Alliance agents and spies for the Empire. Roweedu was the brains of the operation, using her knowledge of hunting lore to guide Krussk's actions. (RESB)

Rowel

this Ferroan man, distinguished by his pale blue skin and gold-black eyes, was one of the first of his people to greet Luke Skywalker's Jedi Knights, when the Jedi located Zonama Sekot during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Along with his partner, Darak, Rowel was openly suspicious of the presence of the Jedi on the planet, despite the fact that Sekot itself allowed the Jedi to land. After Sekot had successfully tested the Jedi Knights to ensure that their mission was, indeed, a peaceful resolution to the conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong, the planetary sentience agreed to return to the galaxy and help the Jedi. Rowel and Darak both accepted Sekot's decision, and eventually decided that the Jedi were worthy of their assistance. When Zonama Sekot made a blind jump into hyperspace to avoid the sabotage of Nom Anor, the Ferroans were forced to flee underground to avoid the ecological damage that occurred on the surface. Rowel and Darak made many trips into the wilderness to look for survivors, often with the help of the Jedi. (FH3, UF)

Rowen

an Imperial Lieutenant who served aboard the Victory-class Star Destroyer Sentinel, Rowan was once punished for publicly embarrassing his captain. As punishment, he was forced to work as an attache to the Imperial Customs office on Wroona, boarding and inspecting commercial and independent starships which passed through Wroona's spaceports. He was known as a bitter man who demanded adherence to the letter of the law, and who never - ever - took a bribe. Several spacers found that he could be sidetracked, though, by complaining about the law he was trying to enforce. Rowen would launch into a long-winded justification of Imperial law, and eventually would let the spacer go on with their business. (PSG)

Rowi

this Galacian man married Tema. He was known as a healer, and many believed he was truly Elan's father. He raised her as his own, and Tema never revealed that her real father was King Cana of Galu. Rowi passed on his knowledge of healing to Elan before his death. (MOC)

Roy Teda

this short-statured Romin ruled the planet Romin with an iron fist, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Teda had been identified by the Galactic Senate as being in violation of many galactic laws, including torture, embezzlement, and unjust imprisonment of political and personal rivals. It was also believed that he had rigged the elections so that he would be chosen as Romin's leader. Once in office, he altered Romin's laws to make it impossible for offworlders to arrest or transport criminals from Romin. This allowed him to expand his personal wealth by offering Romin as a refuge for all manner of criminals.

Distinguished by his multicolored robes, Roy Teda presented visitors and prospective homeowners with a personable demeanor that bordered on cloying condescension. In exchange for being able to live in relative peace on Romin, criminals agreed to pay Teda huge sums of credits, and allowed him to have security access to their properties. Teda then used droid armies to patrol the city of Elior, ensuring that none of the workers entered the city without authorization. He preferred to be called by the title of Great Leader, but many Romins forced the name out only because it pleased Teda. However, his extravagant lifestyle and demanding leadership took its toll on his supporters, and many of his personal guards began to simply leave his services, several years prior to the Battle of Geonosis. He was forced to backfill them with guard droids, but he could only afford a handful of operative units. When the Citizens' Resistance launched their rebellion, Teda was forced to flee his palace and hide in a safehouse, well outside the city of Elior, with Jenna Zan Arbor. They requested a meeting with the Slams, who were actually Obi-Wan Kenobi, Siri Tachi, Anakin Skywalker, and Ferus Olin in disguise. It was at this point that Teda realized he was no longer in control of Romin, as Zan Arbor asserted herself as the leader of their group. However, their plans were cut short when Mace Windu and a group of Jedi reinforcements landed on Romin and captured them both. They were turned over to Joylin for sentencing, but Joylin simply allowed them to reach the real Slams and escape Romin, thereby solidifying his own position of leadership. Teda and his cohorts fled to Falleen, where they had been building the Blackwater Systems facility to test distribution methods for the Zone of Self-Containment. They were forced to flee to Coruscant when the Jedi followed them to Falleen, but they were able to gain an audience with the Senate through Bog Divinian. Roy Teda spoke eloquently against the Jedi Order, using subtle twists of the truth and outright lies to spin a tale of how the Jedi were behind his ouster. Unknown to Teda, however, was the fact that Granta Omega considered him expendable, an asset to be used and then thrown away. Teda realized this was Omega launched his Zone-laden seeker droids on the Senate, and one of the seeker droids targetted him specifically. Despite the efforts of Ferus Olin to protect both Palpatine and Teda, a seeker droid managed to get a clear shot, and killed Teda with a single blast to the chest. (JQ8, JQ9)

Roy Teda Colored Fountain of Lights

this beautiful fountain, which seemed to bubble and flow with light, was created in the city of Elior, on the planet Romin, under the direction of Roy Teda. (JQ8)

Royal Academy

this was the school at which the young nobles of Naboo were trained to become governmental leaders. (IWE1)

Royal Alderaan Civil Fleet

this volunteer defense organization was formed on the planet Alderaan, to ensure the safety of the planet's inhabitants, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (E3N)

Royal Alderaanian Court

the ruling classes of the planet Alderaan and its hierarchy. (DFR)

Royal Armaments Guild of Charubah

this Hapan weapons manufacturer was the only known source of the weapon called as the Gun of Command, which was produced exclusively for use by the Hapan military. (SWJ15, PH)

Royal Carriage, The

this was the name of Dustini's starship. (MMY)

Royal Casino

this Cloud City casino was owned by Jacc Maldelbrot. (GG2)

Royal Chalcedony Shield

this award was presented by the government of Alderaan to those Alderaanians who were "champions of civic virtue and held uncompromising moral convictions." Bail Organa presented this award to the Senator Horox Ryyder, when the Anx retired from politics shortly before the Clone Wars. It was believed that Senator Ryyder was the only non-Alderaanian to ever receive the award. (HNN4)

Royal Court of Naboo

this was the name given to the royal household of the elected leader of Naboo, during the Old Republic. (SON)

Royal Flower

this custom-built pleasure yacht was part of the small fleet maintained by the royal family of Mindabaal, during the early years of the New Order. It was later stolen by Jericho Donovan and modified to serve as a smuggling craft. It was renamed Jericho's Pride. (SWJ5)

Royal Galaxy Hotel

this hotel was located in the tallest building in the city of Curamelle, on Corulag. (SWJ12)

Royal House of Learning

this prestigious school was located in the city of Theed, on the planet Naboo, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (IOT)

Royal Hutt Hotel

this noted hotel was located near several rowdy and disreputable cantinas, which detracted from its appeal. (SWRPG)

Royal Icqui Aquaria

this large aquarium was located on the planet Coruscant during the last years of the Old Republic. It was known for its collection of exotic and dangerous ocean life from across the galaxy. Located in the Hirkenglade Prefecture, the Royal Icqui Aquaria was one of the few facilities that was allowed to draw its water supply directly from the polar pipelines. (WOA21, CCW)

Royal Imperial Guard

red-armored protectors of the Emperor, these servants are specially-trained stormtroopers who met certain physical and emotional characteristics. No one has ever discovered exactly how many guards made up the Royal Guard. They were trained on the barren world of Yinchorr, where they learned that deadly art of Echani and often fought to the death against their fellow trainees in order to prove their loyalty to Emperor Palpatine. Their red armor is based on two unique designs: that of the Mandalorian Death Watch and the Thyrsus Sun Guards. Following the death of Emperor Palpatine in the Battle of Endor, the Royal Imperial Guard made a change to their robes. A hem of black was added to the bottom of their robes, indicating that they were mourning the death of Palpatine. Even after the mandatory year of mourning had passed, the black hem remained as an homage to the dead Emperor. When Palpatine reappeared, in body of one of his clones, on the planet Byss, the Royal Guard returned to his side. When the clones were destroyed by the New Republic, many of the Guards were killed as well. The survivors gathered on Yinchorr, and were told of Carnor Jax's treachery against Palpatine's clones. Jax then attacked the Yinchorr compound, eliminating all the Royal Guards except for Kir Kanos and Kile Hannad. Hannad died, fighting back Jax's troops so that Kanos could escape to plan revenge for Jax's treason. (ROTJ, ISB, XWN, CE)

Royal Imperial Shockball League

this was the foremost profession shockball league operating during the New Order. The best shockball players in the galaxy played for more than eighty teams in this league, such as the Shad Furies and the Quent Assassins. Many of the teams were based on Core Worlds. (CRO)

Royal K Casino

a gambling establishment found on Kwenn Station, it was owned and operated by Kassar Kosciusko during the height of the New Order. (CRO)

Royal Kalindan Mounted Police

a branch of the Kalindan Royal Constabulary, this police force protected the major starport cities of the Kalinda System, including Verena and Jael. They were easily seen because of their ornate uniforms, which consisted of maroon jackets with gold trim, black helmets and body armor, and black boots. (TSK, HNN5)

Royal Kuat Holo-Theater

this was one of the most prestigious theaters found on the planet Kuat. (GCG)

Royal Mistress

this cumbersome-looking medium freighter was owned and operated by Hawker Bryce-Kelley and his partner, Rypka. The ship could carry up to 500 metric tons of cargo, and was armed with a concealed quad laser cannon. (PSG)

Royal Naboo Security Forces

this is the name used to describe the volunteer organization which pledged itself to the protection of Naboo's planetary rulers, during the last years of the Old Republic. This group included all branches of the Naboo military, including the Security Guards, Palace Guards, and the Space Fighter Corps. Under the rulership of Queen Amidala, these forces were commanded by Captain Panaka. (TPM, IG1, X1)

Royal Palace

this was the name of the primary governmental building on the planet of Alderaan. Located in the capital city of Aldera, the Royal Palace was also the home of the ruling family. (CCW)

Royal Pistol

this was the name of the custom-made weapon produced for the rulers of the planet Naboo by Theed Arms. They were designed to be an extension of the user's own hand, being weighted and balanced for each individual. (SON)

Royal Protectors

the elite group of bodyguards assigned to protect Aleema and Satal Keto. (TOJ)

Royal School of Leadership

this prestigious school was located in the city of Testa, on the planet Rutan. It provided an excellent education to those Rutanians who were destined to become politicians and leaders. (SP)

Royal Sovereign of Naboo Medal

this medal, stored in the Theed Palace treasure rooms, was worn by the ruler of the Naboo, and indicated their position as the sovereign ruler of the planet. (VD1)

Royal Spymaster

this was the title given to the leader of the Velmor military's espionage and intelligence agencies. (WOTC)

Royal Way

this was the name given to the interstellar approach vector to the planet Naboo, used by the elected rulers of the planet for several generations. Although much of the Royal Way was considered a public fly zone, the entire zone was regularly patrolled by starfighters of the Royal Security Force. (SWGAL)

Royal Yvarema Scout Ship

developed by the Yvarema, this ship was designed to allow the royal explorers to travel beyond their home system. It was a primitive design by modern standards, but was nonetheless reliable and sturdy for local exploration. These ships measured 20 meters in length, and were manned by a crew of two, with room for three additional passengers. They were hyperspace-capable, but only at Class 4 speeds. The only weaponry, per se, was the navigational deflector system used to keep the craft safe from space debris. Most of the systems of this craft were based on fluidic technology, which meant that they were immune to the effects of ion weapons. (KR)

Royce

this Nikto was once the prospecting partner of the man named Samuel. Their work paid off when they discovered a barren world in the Outer Rim Territories that was rich in ores and other natural resources. They set out to extract as much of the ore as they could, but Samuel doublecrossed Royce and assumed complete control of the facility for himself. In retaliation, Royce kidnapped Samuel's daughter, Leddar, and held her for ransom. Samuel managed to convince the Jedi Knight Darca Nyl to locate Royce and bring Leddar home. Once Darca Nyl got them together, he managed to uncover the truth behind the situation, realizing that Samuel only cared about credits and ensuring the Royce remained quiet. Darca allowed them all to live, forcing Royce to drop his revenge and leaving Samuel to explain his actions to his daughter. (T21)

Royux

this version of the Arakyd Emperiax walking throne had half of the cargo space of the Emperiax, but replaced it with a pilot's chair. This allowed severely disabled beings to have an assistant in moving about. (AEG)

Roz

a free trader who worked for the Alliance, he was wounded helping Almera Zan and Grashk rescue Enid Vahr. (SN)

Rozatta

this Toydarian owned and operated the Outland Transit Station, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Rozatta was also a good friend of Jango Fett during this time, and delivered a message to him from Darth Tyranus. Tyranus was trying to recruit Fett's assistance in tracking down Komari Vosa, a job that Jango quickly accepted. Roz tried to talk him out of it, but her words were not enough to turn him away from the job. Resigned to watching him leave, Roz gave Jango all the information she knew about Komari Vosa and the Bando Gora. Unknown to both Rozatta and Jango Fett, the message from Tyranus was also received by Montross. Rozatta continued to help Jango during the search, providing snippets of information and running searches and tests while Jango was in the field. Unfortunately, Montross managed to stay one step ahead of Jango, and set out to destroy any chance Jango had of finding the Bando Gora. To accomplish this, Montross traveled to the Outland station after being defeated by Jango on Malastare. He killed Rozatta and set a series of thermal charges to destroy the station, hoping that Jango would return to rescue Rozatta. Jango did return, and Rozatta managed to give him a datacard with information on the Bando Gora. As she died, Rozatta begged Jango to find something besides money to live for, a request that led Jango to request an unaltered clone for his son, Boba. (GMR10, BH)

Rozess

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Rozess, Jude

this Jedi Knight was a contemporary of Theen Fida and Obi-Wan Kenobi. A strong woman with dirty blonde hair, Jude was killed when the Yinchorri invaded the Jedi Temple on Coruscant. She and Tieren Nie-Tan were the primary guards on duty at the time, and were caught by the sheer numbers of Yinchorri warriors. (AOW)

Rozhdenst, Gennad

this man served the Alliance as the Commander of Scavenger Squadron during the last years of the New Order. Shortly before the Battle of Endor, Rozhdenst and his squadron were dispatched by Mon Mothma to guard Kuat Drive Yards from Imperial assault. Distinguished by the huge scar that ran diagonally across his face - a reminder of another struggle with the Empire - Rozhdenst was at odds with Kuat of Kuat over his squadron's presence, and drawn into the plans of Kodir of Kuhlvelt from the moment he arrived at Kuat. She twisted the facts in order to gain his confidence, then forced him to admit that Kuat of Kuat was never going to recognize the Alliance. Fooled by it all, Rozhdenst and Wonn Uzalag agreed to ensure Kuat had an accident, thereby installing Kodir herself as the leader of KDY. However, there plans were crushed when Kuat began destroying the shipyards, rather than letting them fall into the hands of anyone else. Rozhdenst ordered the Scavengers to board as many of the capital ships under construction as they could to rescue them from the destruction. Many were saved, but many more were lost. (HM)

RP Trooper

this was the designation of the Old Republic's arpitrooper, during the height of the Clone Wars. These troopers were ground-based militia which entered a battlezone by dropping from the air, using disposable repulsor packs to quickly reach the ground. (SS2)

RPC-12

this was the model number of Damorind Securities' restraint capsule. (GG10)

RPI Carrier

this personal-use rocket pack was manufactured by Fersherid during the height of the New Order. (GFT)

RPS-8

this was the model number of Merr-Sonn's standard rocket launching system. While not as accurate as the RDP series of launchers Locris Syndicates produced, the RPS-8 was much more directly lethal. (ROE)

Rq8.Y

Torplex shipboard avionics package. (SCORE)

Rq9.Z

Torplex shipboard advanced avionics control package. (SCORE)

Rrabel Drage

this Duros loyalist opposed the influx of refugees to the orbital cities of Duro, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. He worked to sabotage the New Republic's plans to provide shelter for the refugees, until a team of freelance mercenaries captured him. (GMR2)

Rrakktorr

this was the Wookiee term used to describe a male's honor and strength of character. In the Shyriiwook language, the word rrakktorr literally meant "the defiant, adventurous heart of a Wookiee." (TT, AFA)

Rrann Hhoss

this Togorian championship centered around the use of the sc'rath in both hunting and combat. (AIR)

Rroshm

this slow-moving creature inhabits the Shadow Forest on Kashyyyk. It eats the leaves of the wroshyr tree and other vines, keeping the Rryatt Trail clear. (TT)

Rrowv

this young Togorian taught Han Solo how to ride a mosgoth, when Han returned Muuurgh and Mrrov to Togoria. (TPS)

Rrr'ur'R

this was the nickname of UroRRuR'R's personal bantha, raised for his use by RR'uruurr. (CCG9)

Rrudobar

this was one of the twenty orbital cities built above the planet Duro, after the Duros fled its contaminated surface. During the Battle of Duro, Rrudobar was destroyed by the Yuuzhan Vong. (BP)

Rrulinn

this planet was decimated by the Reslian Purge. (GG12)

RR'uruurr

this Tusken Raider was part of UroRRuR'R's tribe, and was responsible for the tending and development of their banthas. An expert with the gadderffi, RR'uruurr was the Raider who attacked Luke Skywalker in the Jundland Wastes. (CCG9)

Rrush'hok ichnetar vinim'hok

this Yuuzhan Vong blessing translated into Basic as "Die well, brave warrior." (FH3)

Rruurrfhurra

this Wookiee was a firefighter in his home village in the city of Rwookrrorro, on the planet Kashyyyk, during the years following the Clone Wars. Shortly after a swarm of flame beetles set fire to an office that was being used by Turren Lonarr to drop off a pool of protocol droids, Rrurrrhurra was found shot to dead in a cargo container. His death was later linked to Lonarr's own alliance with the Trandoshan government, as he was agreed to help smuggle Trandoshan hunters to Kashyyyk. The flame beetle fire was a cover for getting the Trandoshans into Rwookrrorro. Rrurrrhurra's own investigation into the cause of the fire got too close to the truth, and he was killed by one of Lonarr's Trandoshans. (GMR4)

Rryatt Trail

this forested path through the trees outside Rwookrrorro, on the planet Kashyyyk, led to the city of Kachirho and passed the Well of the Dead. It meandered downward from the limbs of a wroshyr tree, descending some eighteen kilometers through the Shadow Forest before reaching the Well. Beyond the Well, the Rryatt Trail led to the city Kkkellerr. (TT, SWGAL)

RS-12962/NG-54X

this subdirectory of the Republic Xenosociological Database contained information on the technology of the Gungan people. (SON)

RS-17

this was the designation of a low-level agent of the Old Republic, during the era of the Clone Wars. (SHPT)

RS557

this was a series of podracer developed by the Vulptereen manufacturing centers. The cockpit measured 3.66 meters in length, and the 7.92-meter-long engines were capable of speeds close to 760 kilometers per hour. It is sometimes referred to as the Vulptereen 327 in certain racing manuals. (IG1, SWDB)

Rseik Sector

this area of the galaxy, located near the Minos Cluster, was the home of the Rseikharhl species. (FTD)

Rseikharhl

this alien species was native to the Rseik Sector of the galaxy. (FTD)

R-series Droid

this highly-successful series of astromech droids from Industrial Automaton has seen widespread use throughout the galaxy. Originally limited to five models (numbered R1 through R5), each succeeding model was touted as superior to its predecessor. However, only the R2 models continue to be popular, due to their high level of reliability. (SWJ7)

R-series Repulsorgrip

this piece of equipment controls the strength and magnitude of a repulsor-driven craft, such as a pod racer. The grip maintains the vehicle's "grip" on the ground below it. The R-series has several versions, each capable of a specific amount repulsor force. They are numbered in strength from R-20 (light duty gripping strength) to R-600 (highest amount of grip). (RAC)

R'shinnos Sh'neel

this M'shinni represented his homeworld of Genassa in the Galactic Senate, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. During the rise of the separatist movement, Senator Sh'neel did not openly question Chancellor Palpatine's actions, but voiced the concern that the Chancellor "was up to something." (HNN4)

Rsidd

this was a common Psadan name. (UANT)

RSS

this was the abbreviation of Republic Star Ship, used to denote any of the ships that formed the navy of the Old Republic during the height of the Clone Wars. (E3N)

RST-series Droid

this model of translator droid was produced by Plintep Cybernetics, and was given a distinctly female shape and personality. This was mainly because the males of Mephout society were quite tempermental, and Plintep didn't want to have that impression ladeled upon the RST-series. Unfortunately, the RST series was susceptible to electromagnetic pulses, and their rationality and life-preservation circuits were often fried when a droid simply passed too close to an energy source. (SWJ11)

RT441

this stormtrooper was part of the guard that protected Imperial Moff's Vanko and Torpin while they were on board the Kuari Princess. (RM)

RT-56/X

this silver protocol droid was abandoned in the city of Grig, on the planet Narg. In order to survive, it allied itself with the farmer and conman, Biull Sangtwo. Sangtwo discovered that the droid had a SureDeal-R bargaining and negotiating module in its brain, and decided to put the droid to use. Together, they roamed the streets of Narg Starport, looking for unsuspecting off-worlders. When a suitable "victim" was found, RT-56/X would plead with them to remove it from its "cruel master's service" as a farm drudge. If the off-worlders were sympathetic, Sangtwo would bargain with them to sell the droid. Once the purchase was made, RT-56/X would wait until its new master entered a dense-populated area of the city, where it would disappear and return to Sangtwo's farm. (TA) manufactured by Willienk Data Systems, this device was a remote text data scanner that allowed a user to read hardcopy documents with a camera. The RTDS-1000 converted the scanned information into a transmission, which could be sent to a remote computer for viewing online. This device allowed a being to scan the archives of a remote library on a distant planet, without incurring travel costs. (GFT)

RTDS-1000

R-TechApp

this was a model of mantrap produced by Ubrikkian Industries. Although mantraps were marketed as safe and effective methods for detaining a being, the R-TechApp was known for its high-powered containment field. This field literally crushed a being flat against the trap itself, and the being's lungs were often unable to fully expand under the pressure. In some cases, the field generated by the R-TechApp literally squeezed the bodily fluids from a being's internal cavities, causing internal bleeding and other devastating injuries. (GG10, GMR1)

R'terleD'er

this planet is a hunter's paradise. (GG12)

RTZ

this was a form of security filter used to encode and protect computer and holographic data. (SWJ1)

Ruac Outpost

this was an Imperial military base, established early in the New Order. (AIR)

Ruan

this world, the primary planet in the Ruan System, was the site of the headquarters of Salliche Agricultural Corporation. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Ruan was one of many planets which agreed to take in refugees fleeing the battlegrounds. Han Solo later learned from the droid Baffle that Salliche Ag had been taking on refugees, not to claim their produce was "handpicked," but in order to comply with the Yuuzhan Vong's anti-droid sentiments. (SWJ2, HT, JE)

Ruan System

this planetary system encompasses eighteen agricultural planets run by the Salliche Ag Corporation. (SWJ2)

Ruati

this Jedi Master was beheaded on this planet, during the height of the Clone Wars. It was believed that he was killed by the Dark Jedi Asajj Ventress. (O)

Rubat

this was one of the many crystals used by the ancient Jedi Knights in the construction of a lightsaber. It was believed to have given the wielder the ability to heal faster, especially when a wound involved the loss of flesh. It was believed that rubat crystals were only mined on the planet Phemis. (KOTOR)

Rubindun

a valuable ore. (EGC)

Ruby

this gas giant was the seventh and outermost planet in the Rhinnal System. It was orbited by twenty-one moons. (CCW)

Ruby Bliel

this non-alcoholic drink is a favorite of young children. (TPM)

Ruby Gulch

this rocky section of the planet Nam Chorios was located near Hweg Shul. It was a hiding place for the Theran natives who shot down large ships entering the planet's atmosphere. (POT)

Rubyflame Lake

this vast body of water, situated directly above an active lava floe near the city of Muracie, was one of the most popular tourist attractions on the planet Centares, until the Empire took control of the planet. Because the lava beneath the water glowed with a deep red light, the waters of Rubyflame Lake appeared to be glowing as well, earning it its name. Unfortunately, when the Empire stepped in, the lava was tapped as a source of intense geothermal power. Within ten years, Rubyflame Lake as reduced to an industrial wasteland. It waters were laden with toxic chemicals, and the lava was diverted to other factories. (MC29, WOA32)

Ruck's Rut

a multi-level rift network found in Tyma Canyon, on Redcap. (SWJ5)

Ruda

meaning "curious", this was one of the most common names among Rodian females. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Ruda, Palee

this woman was a frequent patron of the Coruscant underworld during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. She was distinguished by the heavy, metal-link veil that covered almost her entire skull and neck, leaving just the eyes and forehead exposed. (SWI75)

Rudd, Jerris

this human was under the employ of Bib Fortuna, during the Twi'lek's tenure as Jabba the Hutt's majordomo. It was Rudd who transported Oola and Sienn to Tatooine. Rudd lost his life trying to kill Luke Skywalker, who had intervened and was trying to save Twi'lek females. Rudd tried to shoot Luke with his blaster, but Luke parried all of his shots with his lightsaber until one of the blasts ricocheted back and hit Rudd. Fortuna left him for dead. (TJP)

Rude Awakening

Lilmit's starship. (ROM)

Rudic

this crystalline mineral is a prime component in the manufacture of sensor devices. Rudic was once found in abundance on the planet Hirsi, and the native Qwohog allowed the Alliance to establish a base there to mine it. When the Empire caught wind of the availability of rudic on Hirsi, it invaded the planet, killed the Alliance team, and stripped Hirsi of a large percentage of rudic. They then left the planet in a ruined state when the rudic ran out. Since then, the only rudic found on Hirsi is small, water-borne pieces given to the Alliance and, later, the New Republic. (GG12)

Rudrig

a planet in the Tion Hegemony, site of the Hegemony's only true institution for higher learning. The University of Rudrig was in the process of expanding to other planets when Han Solo was on Saheelindeel. It is the primary planet in the Rudrig System. (HSL, XW)

Rudy

this was the name of Grubber Vapps' customized RDD-7 swoop. Among the modifications Vapps made to the swoop was the addition of a repeating slugthrower that was mounted to the front of the swoop, which allowed him to use the vehicle to hunt down criminals in the area surrounding Barty's Landing, on the planet Lamaredd. (GMR7)

Rue

this planet, which is covered by frozen methane plains, is the sixth world in the Gacerian System. It has no moons. (PG2)

Rue, Aehrrley

this freelance pilot worked out of Mos Espa, on the planet Tatooine, during the last decades of the Old Republic, and attended the Boonta Eve Classic podrace which was won by Anakin Skywalker. (YJC6)

Rue, Elyhek

this Alliance starfighter pilot served as Red Seven during the Battle of Yavin. A veteran of the Galactic Civil War, Rue was part of Griffon Squadron, part of the Alliance's forces on Ralltiir that attacked the Devastator. (CCG9)

Ruetsavii

this Gand title is translated into Basic as "observer" or "examiner." The ruetsavii are appointed to chronicle and criticize the life of special Gand who had demonstrated unusually worthy talents or actions. If the ruetsavii deems it, these Gand are given the privilege of referring to themselves in the first-person. The three that were sent to chronicle the life of Ooryl Qrygg flew in heavily modified TIE Bombers, which had wings like TIE Interceptors. The bomb delivery system was replaced with a concussion missile launcher, and the ships had hyperdrives and shields. (BW)

Rufar

this Kironak name was common across Kirdo III. (UANT)

Rufarr

this Wookiee was the owner of the Jaunty Cavalier, and operated a shipping business which made a regular run to Bakura during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Rufarr and his crew were implicated as radical members of the Freedom movement, when Mollie Cundertol employed them to "kidnap" him and bring him to Lwhekk to be enticed. In order to ensure the secrecy of his actions, Cundertol deliberately sabotaged the Jaunty Cavalier, causing it to explode upon exiting hyperspace near Bakura. Rufarr and his entire crew were killed in the explosion, while Mollie managed to escape in an emergency pod. (FH2)

Rugeyan, Mar

this well-dressed man served as the Head of Public Affairs for the Galactic Senate, during the height of the Clone Wars. Rugeyan's job was to make sure that the Senators of the Old Republic were portrayed in the proper light, so as to ensure that the galactic populace saw their Senators working to affect improvements in the way of life. During the height of the Clone Wars, Rugeyan was dispatched to cover the kidnapping of Meena Tills, and had to deal with the death of Jedi Master Kaim on live holocam coverage. It was later learned that Senator Tills wasn't the primary target, just a convenient diversion for the possible killing of N'zaet Nir. (SWI81)

Rugg

this was a common name among the Talz race. (UANT)

Rugger

a succulent rodent found on the Forest Moon of Endor, the rugger was the favored food source of the yuzzum. The rugger was a small, jumping creature covered with wispy, greenish or yellowish fur, depending on whether it lived in the forest or the savanna. Their long, clawed toes were designed for grasping and running, making the ruggers fast and agile. (ISU, WSW)

Ruggert

an Imperial freighter under the protection of the Warspite near Dellalt. (XW)

Rughja

this alien species has 15 flexible limbs and multiple eyes. Their natural dexterity lent naturally to musical ability, and they are best known for the Rughja style of music. Their natural form of communication is inaudible to most humanoid races. (RD)

Rughja

this musical style was created by the Rughja race, and combines orchestral composition and big-band swing. In traditional rughja music, a Rughja will play ten instruments at once. (RD)

Rugle

an Imperial transport group operative during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Rugor

this name, which meant "proud", was common among Gungan males. (GCG)

Rugor

this Gungan warrior served under Captain Tarpals at the Battle of Naboo. (SWRPG)

Rugor Nass

this Ankuran Gungan was the leader of his people during the Old Republic's struggle with the Trade Federation. There are a number of rumors surrounding his childhood, but all center around the fact that Nass showed signs of being a great leader even as a young Gungan. He held many different jobs before becoming the Boss of Otoh Gunga, including soldier, engineer, miner, and executive. Boss Nass was well-known among the Gungans as the individual who united the Ankuran and Otollan races. This union resulted in the dissemination of technology and sparked trade between the two races, and led to the construction of the vast, underwater city of Otoh Gunga, created from bubbles made of bubble wort and other well-kept secrets. He was a large Ankuran, whose immense body weight had compacted his skeleton into a much shorter version of the normal Gungan physique. Boss Nass was prone to nervous ticks, and often grumbled his dissatisfaction by violently shaking his jowls. During the Battle of Naboo, Boss Nass tried to remain apart from the battle, leaving the snobbish Naboo to worry about the Trade Federation armies. However, when Queen Amidala came to him in the Gungan sacred place and knelt before him in a show of peace and humility, he changed his mind. In Amidala, he found a Naboo leader who was willing to shed the prejudices of the past and work toward a brighter future for both races. He supplied the vast Gungan Grand Army to assist in Amidala's plans to oust the Federation. The Gungans rallied around him, and despite a large loss of life, they were successful in holding off the Federation's droids long enough for Anakin Skywalker to destroy the Droid Control Ship, and for Amidala to capture Nute Gunray and Rune Haako, breaking the Federation's hold on Naboo. Over the following decades, Boss Nass decided that the leadership of Chancellor - and later, Emperor - Palpatine was unworthy of his support. Nass decided to support the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War, working to disrupt any Imperial that was established on Naboo. Boss Nass was portrayed by Brian Blessed in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace. (SW1, TPM, IG1, OWS, GB, SWI65, NEGC)

Ruhk

Ruins of Paran

this was the name given to the remains of the city of Paran, on the planet Derilyn, after the city was bombarded during the Imperial subjugation of the planet. Because of its remote location and its obvious lack of resources, the resistance movements which opposed the Empire used the Ruins as a base of operations. The Ruins were also the base of operations for the resistance movement known as the Friends of Paran, although their base was well-hidden. (PG3)

Ruisto

this planet was the site of a Mon Calamari colony, during the early years of the New Order. When the Empire began making plans to eliminate the shipyards of Calamari, they chose Ruisto as a suitable training location. Using a fleet of Star Destroyers, the Empire bombarded Ruisto's surface, obliterating the entire Mon Calamari colony. (RESB)

Rujj, Anj

this man was a member of the Thugs of Thule, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (IWE2)

Rujo

this silver-furred beast was native to the planet Annaj, and was domesticated for use as a mount and pack animal. The four-legged rujos were eventually exported to other worlds in the Moddell Sector of the galaxy. (GMR9)

Ruk

one of the family names used by the Bothan people, it literally meant "warrior". (GCG, WOTC)

Ruke Chowall

this Quarren worked as the editor of the newsnet Bends during the last decades of the Old Republic. He publicly denounced the work of Senator Tundra Dowmeia, proclaiming the Senator to be "a tool of both the Old Republic and the Mon Calamari" who would sell out his people for a few credits. (SWI73)

Rukh

this Noghri was a member of clan Baik'h'vair, and was the successor to Ir'khaim as Grand Admiral Thrawn's personal bodyguard, during the early years of the New Republic. Following Leia Organa Solo's mission to Honoghr and the dynasts' message about the falsehoods the Noghri had endured under Darth Vader, Rukh began to question his loyalty to Thrawn. When Thrawn was finally defeated at Bilbringi, Rukh used the first opportunity he found to drive a knife into Thrawn's alien heart. He tried to flee the Chimaera, but was caught and executed by Major Tierce's stormtrooper unit. (HTTE, TLC, SOP, TTSB)

Rukil

this being was one of the many inhabitants of the Lower City of Taris who believed in the existence of the Promised Land. Rukil and his apprentices from among the ranks of the Outcasts searched for the Promised Land during the years surrounding the Great Sith War. He was disheartened when his apprentice, Malya, was killed in the Undercity, although her body was eventually returned to him. The Jedi Knights who discovered her body helped Rukil locate several of her journals, but he was unable to pinpoint the exact location of the entrance to the Promised Land. (KOTOR)

Ruku Koof

this female Rodian was part of a triumverate of Rodians who controlled a small corporation at the height of the New Order. Ruku was not xenophobic, and was friendly in the company of humans and other aliens. She disliked Mannee Swaano, and did her best to outdo him in the presence of their boss, Teeko Soonca. (SPG)

Rul

this female name was common among the Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Rul

one of the family names used by the Bothan people, it literally meant "mechanic" or, more specifically, "one who repairs machines". (GCG, WOTC)

Rula

Smuggler captain in charge of the convoy that was attacked by Hapans during Han's early smuggling days. (CPL)

Rulaan Prolik

this polymorphic being was a noted criminal who hid on the planet Kashyyyk, more than 4,000 years before the Battle of Endor. He was eventually caught and killed by a group of Jedi Knights, after he began impersonating several known Wookiees who had disappeared in the Shadowlands. (KOTOR)

Rulaarian Pleasure Yacht

this was a small, bullet-shaped yacht which was popular among playboys and flamboyant gamblers during the height of the New Order. (MC20)

Rulacamp

this elderly woman served as a baymaster at the primary spaceport facility on the planet Aphran IV, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (EL2)

Rule by Fear

the doctrine of imposing rule on a population, not with direct force, but with the threat of direct force. This doctrine was proposed by Moff Willhuf Tarkin, and also bears the title The Tarkin Doctrine. Emperor Palpatine embraced the theory behind the doctrine, and built his forces accordingly. Huge Star Destroyers, lumbering AT-AT walkers, and even the full body armor of Darth Vader were all parts of the Emperor's implementation. (SCRE)

Rule of Simple Solutions

this was the term used to describe a tenet that many races embraced over the millennia. Under this rule, when a situation presented a being with many complex possibilities, it was often the simplest solution that was the right one. (MBS)

Rule, Dherik

this man was a detective in the Taung Heights constabulary, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Rule was dispatched to investigate Latika Garboren's claim of finding a Sith icon in a dollop of pastebread. (HNN4)

Rulebook

this slang term was used by many beings who lived in criminal organizations, and referred to a blaster weapon. It derived from the phrase "making your own rules" by taking the law into your own hands and enforcing it at blaster-point. (PG3)

Rules of Engagement

this doctrine, developed by the Jedi Knights of the Old Republic, discussed the many ways in which a situation could be addressed by a Jedi in the field. The fifth rule stated that a Jedi must understand the dark and light in all things. The sixth stated a Jedi must learn to see things accurately. The seventh rule required the Jedi to open his or her eyes to what is not evident in the situation. The eighth rule urged the Jedi to exercise caution, even in trivial matters. (COD)

Rules of the Blade

part of the set of laws and regulations established for pirate gangs by Arvo Norstrag, the Rules of the Blade described the various forms of challenges and duels which could be initiated between two combatants. The three basic forms of combat allowed under the Rules of the Blade were Tente, Negate, and Rigora. (SWJ5)

Rulffe

this New Republic junior surveyor was part of the crew of the Astrolabe, which was shot down near Doornik-1142. (BTS)

Ruling Council

this New Republic governmental body was originally part of the Provisional government. Much of its power had been dispersed during Leia Organa-Solo's tenure as Chief of State, as the Senate began to create fully-function councils. The primary power retained by the Ruling Council was the ability to remove a Chief of State who had become too powerful. This power had never been used, until the Yevethan Purge forced them to consider Leia's presidency. (SOL)

Ruling Council

this was the name used to describe Kamino's primary governing body. (IWE2)

Ruling Power

this was the name given to the government of the planet Euceron. The Ruling Power spent much of its budget on the planetary security force that maintained control on the planet, thereby ensuring that the population was repressed enough to disregard thoughts of rebellion. The Ruling Power was made up of ten members, each of which had a vote in the formation of laws and regulations. Each member went simply by the name 'Ruler', with their position on the council added on (Ruler Three, for example). Much of the Ruling Power's activities were meant to intimidate the Eucerons into obeying the law, with little regard for individual freedoms. (JQ3)

Rull

this Ebranite clan (or thildas) had a long-standing rivalry with the Jih-tan clan. The Rull clan's insignia portrayed a hag'thyr engulfed in flame and wielding a spear. (GG12, SWJ11)

Rullak

this male Quarren worked for Nola Tarkona and the Diversity Alliance. He died in the Imperial storehouse of viruses which contained the Emperor's Plague. (TEP)

Ruls

this ancient Quarren surname meant "pilot of vessels". Like many Quarren surnames, it could be traced back to the time of the Battle of Ruusan. (GCG)

Rum Sleg

this bounty hunter was working in Mos Espa, on the planet Tatooine, during the last decades of the Old Republic, and attended the Boonta Eve Classic podrace which was won by Anakin Skywalker. Rum Sleg had a skeletal appearance, but only his face was visible from his full-body, armored flight suit. (YJC6)

Rumble-pins

a game played in Jabba the Hutt's palace. (TJP)

Rumbo, Crizby

this fat, red-faced man was the Vice President of Cosmohaul Shipping. He and his staff assistant Felben Cuplatt hired a group of what he called "freelance marines" to combat the rash of piracy which plagued Cosmohaul's transport ships. The New Republic had provided X-Wings to escort the company's cargo ships, but military demands forced the Republic to recall the X-Wings. The pirates turned out to be Xalto Sneerzick and his followers, but they were ultimately foiled by Rumbo's "marines." (SWJ9)

Rumen

this was the Gorothe term for the smaller of their two stomachs. (GSE)

Rummy Tonic

an alcoholic beverage. (TJP)

Rumun

this was a common name given to male Duros children. The name Rumun came from the term meaning "strong voice". (GCG)

Run Ashore

this was a term used by the commanders and instructors of the Grand Army of the Republic to describe any downtime that clone troopers and commandos could experience in between combat. The official description of a "run ashore" was a "social adventure", meant to introduce the clones to the beings they were trying to protect during the Clone Wars. (SW181)

Runaway Droid Ride

this was the popular name given to the planned escape of a huge number of droids from the spice processing centers of Kessel. Led by the former protocol droid known as Squeaky, many of the droids on Kessel began boarding a freighter, They did so in small numbers, but none of them ever left the ship. Before the ship could be loaded with spice, Squeaky reprogrammed the autopilot to head west from the processing plant, then shoot into the atmosphere and jump out of the system. However, the autopilot wound up in a series of canyons, and the droids were jostled and bounced around until they were free of the canyons and into space. (WS)

Runaway Prince

this planet, located deep in Hutt Space, was reformed by the Yuuzhan Vong as a breeding ground for yorik coral and villips. (JE)

Runcart

an underground transport sled developed by the Selonians. (AS)

Runck Das

this Yuuzhan Vong warrior was the only survivor of the group which pursued Corran Horn and his infiltration team on Garqi. Despite the implication of cowardise his survival might imply, Das was ordered by his commander, Krag Val, to return to Shedao Shai and tell their commander about the strange reaction of vonduun crab armor to the pollen of the bafforr tree. (DTR)

Rundee

this Huttese word translated into Basic as "activate." (GMR5)

Rune Haako

this Neimoidian served as a Trade Federation settlement officer and legal counsel, and was Nute Gunray's lieutenant during the time leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Known as a ruthless businessbeing who viewed his associates as enemies, Haako was the only one of the Neimoidian leaders to ever have encountered the Jedi Knights. Rune Haako strongly disliked direct confrontation, and developed skills in stealthy attacks as a result. During the search for Hath Monchar, it was Haako who suggested to Gunray that they employ Mahwi Lihnn to hunt the rogue Neimoidian down. Later, after the blockade of Naboo had been started, he was extremely disturbed to learn that Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi had been dispatched to Naboo. When Darth Sidious had Daultay Dofine demoted for questioning his plans, Haako was promoted into Dofine's position. Together, Haako and Gunray managed to carry out the Sith Lord's plans against the Naboo and the Gungans, but were unable to completely control the planet. They were captured during the Battle of Naboo by Queen Amidala and her forces, and were returned to Coruscant for trial. Like the rest of the Trade Federation's leadership, Rune Haako was allowed to go free after what amounted to a slap on the wrist, much to the dismay of the inhabitants of Naboo. In the wake of the Republic's victory at the Battle of Geonosis, Rune Haako fled with Nute Gunray and the Separatist leaders to several remote worlds, always trying to remain one step ahead of their Jedi pursuers. After hiding on Utapau under the protection of General Grievous, the Separatists were taken to Mustafar. It was there, after Darth Sidious finally lured Anakin Skywalker to the Dark Side of the Force, that the Separatist leaders met their deaths. Skywalker was dispatched to Mustafar by Sidious himself, with orders to eliminate them. Skywalker eventually killed Haako, before setting off after the rest of the Separatist leaders. Rune Haako was acted by Jerome Blake and voiced by James Taylor in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace. (SW1, IG1, DMSH, SON, CCG15, IS3)

Runnor

this was one of the six major continents found on the planet Celanon. (PG1)

Runyip

a creature native to Yavin 4, the runyip was a massive, clumsy forager. This shaggy-furred beast had a nasty temper, and was very stubborn. It used its flexible nose to dig out plant roots for food. A similar herbivore, considered by many xenobiologists to be the root-stock of the runyip, lived on the planet Tran Mariel. They had a distinctive green and brown pelt. (GG2, DA, GG, ROE, WSW)

Ruori

this avian beast was native to the planet Zuliria, and was often used as a mount by the locals. (AIR)

Rupin Tree

found on the planet Aruza, these trees seem to breathe and sigh as they sway in the wind. When touched, the rupin tree reacts vocally. A light touch will bring more of the lulling sighs, while a sharp bump or chop will elicit a loud shout. (TBH)

Rur

this individual was the former High Shaman of the Order of the Terrible Glare. He was the sole survivor of the war with the Jedi Knights that wiped out the Order. A humanoid with thick cranial nodules on his bald pate, Rur placed an image of himself within the Portal Desolate on Garn, in order to guard the Order's secrets and exact a future revenge on the Jedi. He placed his image within a computerm and left it on standby, waiting for the Jedi to return. When Luke Skywalker discovered the Portal sometime after the Battle of Yavin, Rur demanded information on the Jedi. Luke told him that a great deal of time had passed since the creation of the Portal, and that Emperor Palpatine and Darth Vader had purged the galaxy of the Jedi. The computer which generated Rur's image was unable to reconcile the huge gulf of time that elapsed, or the fact that the Jedi was gone. The computer overloaded and exploded, destroying the last vestiges of Rur. (CSWDW)

Ruris Plin

this Rodian playwright worked with Hishinu Booj and Onaconda Farr to write The Trickery of Vosdia Nooma, shortly before the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Rurk

this was one of the more common surnames used by the Duros people. Like all such names, Rurk was used only for official business, to indicate one individual from another when in the presense of non-Duros. The exact meaning of this name has been lost over time, but it was believed that it meant "sailor". (GCG)

Rurra

this was one of the many names given to female Bothans. In the Bothan language, it meant "funny" or "witty." (GCG, WOTC)

Rus, Beyla

this man, a native of the planet Tibro, was known as the "Gentleman Pirate." He and his band of mercenaries preyed primaily on merchant ships, and never killed anyone. They always set their weapons to stun, and stole cargoes and not lives. Rus' pirates remained neutral during the Galactic Civil War, but began ambushing New Republic vessels after the Battle of Endor. His claim was "to the victor goes the spoils - and then I take them for myself." (WBC)

Rusc'te

this warm beverage was a staple on the planet Exocron, and was often drank in the mid-afternoon. (VOF)

Ruse

this deadly virus was produced by the Empire, during the early years of the New Order. Governor Koong tested it by spraying it over the Umboo province of Roon. Luckily for the natives of Roon, Nilz Yomm was able to discover the cure and eradicate the virus. (DCAR)

Rush

a highly-charged, carbonated beverage, Rush contained enough natural stimulants to keep the average human wide awake for several days. (TFNR)

Rush Gas

this chemical is used in warfare to disable an enemy from afar. (POT)

Rusha

this was the diplomatic ambassador of the planet Eckless, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. She was an old, white-haired woman with reddish skin and a suspicious nature. She spent much of her life trying to recover the Black Sphere from Hahz Fallone, whom she claimed destroyed her people and her planet. Her dead body was discovered the bounty hunters who had been hired to locate the stone, in the Gold Plaza in Iritisa. (ND)

Rushing

this man was a member of the Royal Naboo Security Force when the Trade Federation began its invasion and blockade of the Naboo System. His wife and children were among the first of the Naboo to be captured by the Federation's battle droids. (CCG15)

Rusk

this male humanoid was Cabrool Nuum's hot-tempered son. Rusk convinced Jabba the Hutt to kill Cabrool Nuum in his sleep, then assumed control of his father's empire. He ordered Jabba to kill Vu Chusker, to eliminate any opposition to his assumption of his father's position, but Jabba refused. Rusk had Jabba imprisoned, but Norba released the Hutt, and the two agreed to kill Rusk. Jabba throttled Rusk enough to keep him alive while he jumped on top of the helpless humanoid, squashing him into a pulp. (JTH)

Ruskor Votaran

this was the name of one the few Tarro who were living in the galaxy during the early years of the New Republic. (UANT)

Russok

this Trandoshan was the founder and first administrator of the city of Nub Saar, which was built in the atmosphere of the planet Genarius. Russok was a stern being who ordered round-the-clock work on construction in order to have the floating city ready for occupancy ahead of schedule. He drew people to the station with claims of the unlimited potential for wealth in mining the gas clouds. However, Russok and his people were unprepared for the radiation storms which swept across the planet, and he died in the intense storm which nearly destroyed the city. (LFC)

Rust Gardens

a metallic, artificial common area found on the planet Ronyards. (CSWDW)

Rust Rat

the nickname given to any member of the lowest social class on the planet Reuss VIII. (GG9)

Rusted Cutlass

this battered corvette served as the primary pirate ship of Mendel Cutter, during the last years of the Old Republic. It was believed that Cutter attached the ship to the Zirtran's Anchor space station, but there was no record of it when the station emerged from hyperspace near the Phosphura Belt Nebula. (SWJ5)

Rusted Cutlass II

this old starship section of Zirtran's Anchor formed the base of operations for the Phosphura Belt Pirates. A bulbous, creaking hulk of an old freighter, the Rusted Cutlass II was part of the space station's Delta Sector, and was a haven for all manner of pirates. It was originally named in honor of Mendel Cutter's battered corvette, the Rusted Cutlass, which was believed to have been part of Zirtran's Anchor before the station fled into hyperspace after being occupied by Imperial forces. (SWJ5)

Rusti

this obsolete RST-series translator droid was given to Bungo Bung as a reward for services rendered by the Mephout. (SWJ11)

Rustibar

a planet subjugated by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War, Sulamar falsely attributed the Empire's success to himself. (DS)

Rustle Snake

a type of snake that sheds its skin in two pieces, split down its length. (COTF)

Rusty

this man, a native of the planet Omman, was a friend of Tait Ransom. Rusty worked for Seth at the planet's primary starport, and helped Tait escape from Imperial captivity, along with Karl Ancher and Drake Paulsen. (SWJ3)

Rusty Bucket, The

this bar was located in the city of Takari, on Iyuta, but it burned down shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (SWCP)

Rusty Eagle

this winged Alliance transport craft was used to deliver small vehicles and troops to the surface of a planet. (FC)

Rutal 4

Ry-Kooda's base was located on this primitive, backwater world. It was located in the Fferon System. (BF)

Rutan

several centuries before the Battle of Naboo, the natives of this temperate planet decided to relieve the pressures of a growing population by colonizing the planet's primary neighbor, Senali. In a violent and catastrophic civil war, Senali won its independence in a stunning upset. However, the war left both worlds devastated. The government of Rutan agreed to recognize Senali as a unique world, and both agreed to work together for peace. In an effort to continue the peace, it was agreed that the first-born child of each generation of the ruling houses on both worlds would travel to the other world once they reached the age of seven. They would remain on the other planet for nine years, learning about the other society. During this time, the children were allowed to receive visitors from, and occasionally visit, their homeworld, so that they never forgot their heritage. At the age of sixteen, the youths were allowed to return home in preparation for taking over as ruler of their homeworld. Another member of the royal family moved to the other world until the next generation was born. This arrangement worked well for many years, until the Rutanians sold information on the Senali to the Yuuzhan Vong. The alien invaders utterly devastated Senali, wiping out the civilization and much of the planet's surface before turning their attack to the Rutanians as well. Those Rutanians who weren't killed in the attack were enslaved by the Yuuzhan Vong. (SP, FH1)

Rutanian

this race of green-eyed, blue-skinned humanoids was native to the planet Rutan. The average Rutanian stood more than a meter taller than a human, and was muscularly strong. They were known as hunters, and the hides they produced were renowned throughout the galaxy. They bred many of the native Rutan creatures on special preserves, where the beasts were maintained in order to produce exquisite pelts and furs. The aggressive Rutanians considered their cousins, the Senalis, to be primitives, lacking any form of cohesive society. Despite their differences, a sort of peace was achieved several years before the Battle of Naboo. This arrangement worked well for many years, until the Rutanians sold information on the Senali to the Yuuzhan Vong. The alien invaders utterly devastated Senali, wiping out the civilization and much of the planet's surface before turning their attack to eliminate most of the Rutanians as well. The few survivors were taken away and enslaved. (SP, FH1)

Ruten

this planet, located in the Cerenia System, was under Imperial control following the Battle of Endor. A group of Republic agents was able to successfully establish a resistance on the planet and eventually ousted the Imperial Governor, Bursthed. (TSK)

Ruten Pet Show

this annual event, held annually on the planet Ruten, attracts exotic pets and their owners from across the galaxy. When Imperial Governor Bursthed became fascinated by the strange creatures in the show, the event became more and more regular, with as many as five "annual" shows each year. Bursthed's penchant for torturing Alliance agents found an outlet at the show, where the larger creatures were allowed to battle with captured agents in fights to the death. (TSK)

Rutgar-4

a high-density explosive found only on the planetoid Jatee, it was used by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War. (SN)

Ruthless

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was part of Governor Newen Streeg's fleet, which patrolled the Sisar Run during the last years of the New Order. The Ruthless made regular patrols along the Periphery. (SSR)

Rutian Twi'Lek

this is a race of Twi'leks which is virtually identical to normal Twi'leks, except for their bright blue skin. (IG1)

Rutigar

this being, a member of the crew of the Jynni's Virtue, was killed on the planet Korriban by unknown forces, after the ship was forced to crash-land on the planet, near the Valley of Golg. Rutigar was killed by the Korriban Zombies, and his dead body was reanimated to join the zombies. (PH)

Rutiger

this tree is native to the shallow swamplands of the planet Naboo. Its complex root system is quite temperamental, and can survive only when the water conditions are exactly the right level. The sap of the rutiger is harvested by the Gungans and used to boil the blades of saago grass they use in weaving cloth. (GF)

Rutledge, Jared

a spy for House Mecetti, this minor noble was known as a quiet man who was capable of working among the Imperial elite or the backwaters of the galaxy. (LOE)

Rutralli Optor

this Mon Calamari was the leader of the rebel group which hijacked the Telgordo's Pride, shortly after the Battle of Heg. In reality, these "rebels" were nothing more than opportunistic pirates who robbed the passengers of the ship "in the name of the Alliance." (GMK)

Rutt

this Houk served Tyro Viveca as a servant at the crimelord's estate in the Palisade area of Kabal, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Rutt was killed by a female Florn Lamproid when it was set free from Viveca's estate by Cecil Noone. The Lamproid had seen its mate hunted down and killed for sport by Viveca, and attacked the Houk before setting itself on Viveca himself. (GMR1)

Ruudi Buundaz

this talent agent scouted the Inner Rim for voluptuous women during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (PH)

Ruuin

this Radnoran youth was part of the team hired by Nonce to pillage the homes of those Radnorans who were evacuated from their homeworld, some five years after the Battle of Naboo. The evacuation came after a plague was unleashed in the city of Aubendo, part of a plan hatched by the Avoni to take control of Radnor. Ruuin and his pals were unaware of the larger picture, having been hired to bring their loot to a warehouse for later retrieval. They were promised safe passage off Radnor, but Ruuin was intercepted by Anakin Skywalker, Ferus Olin, and a group of Jedi Padawans. (JQ1)

Ruuk

this Trade Federation functionary served Lord Toat on the planet Maramere, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. After Toat was killed by Sol Sixxa, Ruuk was thrown overboard and their cruiser Syren was scuttled. However, Ruuk managed to survive, and became the nominal ruler of the planet. He continued to work toward exploiting the stygium crystals found on Maramerer in the development of cloaking devices for Trade Federation warships, unaware that both Sixxa and the Feeorin mercenary Nym were hunting down the Federation. Once he learned of their efforts, Ruuk tried to lure them into a trap. Unfortunately, Ruuk and the Trade Federation were unprepared for Nym's insane tactics. The Feeorin rammed the Sunrunner into Ruuk's cutter, destroying both ships and killing all the Neimoidians. Ruuk perished in the explosion. (CRBN)

Ruukas

this was a common name among the Togorian race. (UANT)

Ruul

it was on this moon, which orbited the planet Sriluur, that Sora Bulq established his base of operations in the months following the Battle of Geonosis. (J1, SWDB)

Ruurese

this elegant, complex language was used by the Ruurian race. While the spoken form was comprised of a wide range of vocalizations, the written form consisted of complicated swirls of lines, all drawn at various angles. (UANT)

Ruuria

this planet, located in the Corporate Sector of the galaxy, was the homeworld of the Ruurian race. It was a humid, jungle-covered world known for its institutions of higher education. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Ruuria was overrun during the second wave of attacks. (HSL, HT, UANT)

Ruurian

the alien race native to the planet Ruuria and its 143 colonies, the Ruurians pass through three unique stages during their lives. First, they are hatched from eggs into a larval stage, when they resemble multi-legged caterpillars. Six stubby legs support the Ruurian's body, while ten spindly arms allowed a Ruurian an incredible range of dexterity. Each of the legs had four mutually-opposable fingers, with the exception of the rearmost pair of legs, which ended in a blunt "foot". They also have fine, wide antennae on top of their heads, and large, multifaceted red eyes. The larval Ruurians are the most creative and intelligent of their race, and perform the various tasks required to run their planet. The second stage of life is a pupal stage, in which the larva spin a cocoon around themselves and transform themselves in beautiful chroma-wing fliers. This is the third and final stage of Ruurian development, but it is also the most stagnant. The fliers only wish to eat, fly, and mate. They are single-minded creatures with no inclination to work. (HSL, EGA, UANT)

RuuR'Ur

this Tusken Raider sniper was part of a small group which lined the racecourse during the Boonta Eve Classic pod races, hoping to take out the loud vehicles and their alien drivers, during the last decades of the Old Republic. RuuR'Ur worked with Urror'Ruur during the race which was won by nine-year-old Anakin Skywalker. (YJC6)

Ruusan

this planet, located in the Colonies region of the galaxy, was the site of the decisive battle between Lord Kaan and the Brotherhood of Darkness and Lord Hoth and the Army of Light. The struggle, known as the Battle of Ruusan, ended with both armies being obliterated by the Sith thought bomb. Only one being survived, the Sith Lord Darth Bane. Much of the planet's surface was destroyed by the intense Force battles waged by the combatants, and the damage took many centuries to repair itself. By the time of the New Order, Ruusan was a forgotten world which served as the base of operations for many independent spacers and merchants. It was orbited by three moons, known as the Triplets. In the years that followed the Battle of Ruusan, an unusual form of sentient life evolved on the planet. Resembling large, rubbery balls, the natives had specialized flaps of skin that allowed them to catch the wind and help change the direction of their movements. A collection of tentacles were held close their bodies when in motion, but could be unfurled for use in catching food and for stopping their movements. While these bouncing creatures could understand languages, their only form of communication was written, using their tentacles to manipulate a stylus to scribe words in the sand. Note that the Power of the Jedi Sourcebook claims Ruusan was located in the Mid Rim. (ECH, JVS, RAG, PJSB)

Ruusan Reformation

this was the name given to the point in galactic history, a thousand years before the onset of the Clone Wars, when the Republic Measures and Standards Bureau reset the galactic calendar. The outcome of the Reformation produced one of the most accurate depictions of galactic time known to the Old Republic. (HNN4)

Ruusanian

this was the name given to the race of near-humans which settled the planet Ruusan during the height of the Old Republic. Their history showed that they believed they could feel the "rhythm of the planet", although the Jedi Knights discovered no connection in them to the Force. In the aftermath of the Battle of Ruusan, many Ruusanians survived the blast of the thought bomb unleashed by the Brotherhood of Darkness, thanks to the efforts of Lord Hoth and the Army of Light to shield them from the blast. Note that the Power of the Jedi Sourcebook claims that it was the Ruusanians who prophecied the coming of a Knight to free the souls trapped in the Valley of the Jedi, not the Bouncers, despite what was chronicled in the Jedi versus Sith comic series. (PJSB, JVS, RAG)

Ruva

this nutritious grain is grown on the planet Moorja. (SWJ8)

Ruwaa

this was a common name among the Celegian race. (UANT)

Ruz

this was once of the many names given to Duros females. This was the female form of Rek, meaning "intelligent". (GCG)

Ruznee

this was a common name among the Ortolan race. (UANT)

R'vanna

this male Ryn was considered the leader of Ryn City, on the planet Ruan, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. R'vanna himself had been working in the Tion Hegemony when a Yuuzhan Vong assault force uprooted him. The Ryn were approached by two men, known simply as Tall and Short, who wanted to secure their services as forgers in order to create seemingly official documents which would allow high-paying refugees to obtain passage off Ruan. Gaph used his skills at line drawing, which R'vanna used his calligraphy skills, to create the document. In return, the Ryn were to be transported to Abregado-rae. Although the Ryn made it off Ruan, they missed Droma and Han Solo, who arrived shortly after their departure and were arrested for the forgeries. R'vanna and his group ended up on Duro, where they were accepted as part of Romany's small clan. R'vanna himself became Romany's chief lieutenant. (JE, BP)

RVR-325

this Bith Vehicle Voice Lock was produced by Cassillis Electronic Defenses, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GFT)

RWOO-99313

this was one of the many public information channels maintained in the city of Rwookrrorro, used for communicating information to the Wookiees who lived in the city. (GMR4)

Rwook

this is the Wookiee subspecies which is characterized by their red, brown, and chestnut fur. Chewbacca was a rwook Wookiee. (RD)

Rwookrrorro

Chewbacca's home village on Kashyyyk, and one of the planet's most metropolitan centers of activity. It was a kilometer-wide platform built in a tangle of huge wroshyr trees. One huge branch had been hollowed out by the Wookiees for use as a hangar, and smugglers routinely evaded Imperial patrols to deliver supplies and weapons to the Wookiee underground. (HTTE, RD)

RWStar A/P Transceiver

this standard piece of equipment is used by various Imperial systems to communicate with Sector Plexus PDVs or in-system communications conduits. (ISB)

RX-24

see Rex (ST, BTM)

RX4

this Trianii Ranger Patrol Ship was designed for long-term patrol of Trainii space. It was not designed for combat. Measuring 33 meters in length, the RX4 was manned by a crew of two, with two gunners and room for six passengers. It was used in space and in atmosphere, travelling up to 850 kilometers per hour in atmosphere. It was armed with a pair of twin turbolasers and an ion cannon. (CSA)

RX5-TLN

this assassin droid was dispatched by CUTH-BRT-92-X3 to eliminate the crew of the FarStar, during their layover on Gandle Ott. It attacked the command crew during a performance of the Madra Teene at the Theatre Danske, but was disabled before it could kill anyone. (DARK)

RX7

designation of a Damorian ion engine. (EGV)

RX-8

a highly poisonous gas, RX-8 was the preferred "weapon" of the assassin Kyr Laron. (WBC)

Rya

a planet. (AIR)

Ryad, Iran

this woman was an eccentric Imperial supporter and politician who had a love for starships and fighters in particular. During the height of the New Order, she spent huge sums of credits on her "hobby," training as a starfighter pilot aboard the TIE Defender. In the aftermath of the Battle of Endor, she stepped down from her political position to become a starfighter pilot for the Imperial remnant, leading the Red Star Squadron on runs into the Core. She flew in her own, personal TIE Defender, and ship she dubbed the Red Star I and which was heavily modified from its stock condition. However, Countess Ryad soon took matters into her own hands, attacking ships in Imperial-held space without direct orders. She was labeled a traitor and was hunted down and killed by Baron Soontir Fel. (WOTC)

Ryannar N'on Dikasterar

this Elomin was a member of the underground rebellion on Elom, during the height of the New Order. He was a miner by trade, and was one of the first Elomin to discover the Elom civilization living below the surface of the planet. He became good friends with Kav Dryfus, and fought alongside the Elom during many battles. (EGA)

Ryanthi Products

this corporation was based on Rydonni Prime, and was a primary subcontractor in the development of Imperial AT-ATs, AT-STs, and many combat vehicles. (FOP)

Rybcoarse

this synthetic, bio-engineered compound is used in cardio-muscular repair and enhancement operations. The rybcoarse is wrapped around muscles - including the heart- and lungs, providing additional reinforcement and added strength and stamina. (CFG)

Rybese

this was the name given to the native language of the Rybets, a language that consisted of grunts and croaks. (ANT, UANT)

Rybet

a small, squat alien race with unusual green and tan coloring, the Rybets were amphibian in appearance. They have overlarge, lanternlike eyes and wide, suction-cupped webbed fingers, and consumed primarily insects. In their larval stage, they are blind but perfectly formed and able to move about. Note that Jedi Search indicates that the Rybets have four arms, but this may simply be a result of their larval development. The Rybet people believed that they originated on the planet Varl, but were forcibly evicted when the Hutts took control of the planet in a devastating war. The Rybet people believed that they would one day rise up against the Hutts and repay them for their treachery. By the time of the Battle of Endor, it was estimated that fewer than one billion Rybets existed in the galaxy, a fact attributed as much to their solitary nature as to the males' hatred of their females. As a people, Rybets were generally considered to be sly opportunists, and well-adapted to a nomadic lifestyle. (JS, ANT, UANT)

Rybettian Shac

this was a culinary delicacy favored by the Rybet race. (FTD)

Rycar Ryjerd

this Bimm trader was also an efficient starship weapons smuggler. He'll do business with anyone, and willingly takes on apprentices. He has also mastered the Jawa language. He was also reckless and considered to be borderline psychotic, and has been known to fly through dense asteroid fields to evade capture. He was once captured in the Obana Asteroid Belt, but managed to avoid being imprisoned for any length of time. After the Battle of Hoth, Ryjerd joined up with his friendly rival, Nabrun Leids, to smuggler goods along the Sisar Run. Both used their own ships in the enterprise, with Ryjerd manning the Tower. Note that the Wizards of the Coast website indicates Rycar was a human, not a Bimm. (CCG, CCG4, SSR, WOA11)

Rych Ha'andeelay

this unusual Nikto was born on Nar Shaddaa, and was noted for having the characteristics of two Nikto races. He was outcast from his people, since he lacked a definitive allegiance to one race or another. (EGA)

Rycher

this independent spacer was once boarded by pirates who used modified Stiletto security droids as weapons platforms. (FTD)

Ry'coz

this alien race was native to the planet Novor XXIII, and developed after Novor Major expanded into a red giant. (SSR)

Rycrit

a bovine creatures raised by Twi'leks as a food source, rycrits have been exported from Ryloth as source of food for many generations. However, their nasty temper led many farmers to abandon them to the wilderness, and populations of feral rycrits have developed on planets like Talasea. (SWSB, JS, PSPG, EGP)

Rydan

this humanoid race native to the planet Rydar II. (GG4)

Rydan Beer

an alcoholic brew. (TME)

Rydar II

the second planet in the Rydar System, Rydar II was the original homeworld of the Rydan race and the Ranat species. When it was discovered that the Ranats were fond of eating Rydan babies, all but three were exterminated. This occurred several hundred years before the Galactic Civil War. (GG4)

Rydarian

this was another name for the Rydan race. (EGA)

Rydge

this Trandoshan and his brothers, Xydge and Stydge, served as chiefs of security for the band Distraction, during the early years of the New Order. They all wore full-body armor, as well as a blaster at each hip. (WOA28)

Rydo

this star is the central body of the Namaryne System. (SWJ9)

Rydonni Prime

this is the only habitable planet in the Namaryne System. It has enjoyed the wealth of the Empire for a number of years, primarily because of the contributions of Rythani Products to the Imperial war machine.

Even after the death of Emperor Palpatine, Moff Caerbellak continued to employ the planet, in his quest to wrestle power from the New Republic. The wealth of the planet is vast, and its pro-Imperial feelings run deep throughout its society. The planet has been ruled by the K'ntarr monarchy for several generations, a situation which continued with the ascension of Kalieva K'ntarr to the throne. The temperate planet has an average day which lasts 22 standard hours, and its year encompasses 370 local days. (SWJ9)

Ryell

this is the capital city of the planet Rydonni Prime. (SWJ9)

R'yet Coome

this Exodeenian served as one of Exodeen's junior Senators to the New Republic, serving under M'yet Luure. He was actually the second junior Senator, but the explosion of specially-modified droids inside the Senate Assembly Chamber on Coruscant killed Luure and the first junior. R'yet then became the senior Senator, and was highly supportive of Meido during the investigation of the bombing. R'yet also questioned Leia Organa-Solo's role in the bombing. He was later elected to the Inner Council, following the series of elections which were to fill in those Senatorial positions left vacant by the bombing. (TNR)

Ry-Gaul

this was a Jedi Master, working at the Temple on Coruscant during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Ry-Gaul was known as a quite and thoughtful Jedi, and was well-respected by his peers for his knowledge of the galaxy. Ry-Gaul rarely spoke unless it was important, a trait which made him something of a mystery to students of the time. A tall man with an imposing figure, Ry-Gaul was often able to forestall a fight by sheer intimidation. Ry-Gaul accompanied Tru Veld and a group of other Jedi Knights to Korriban, several years before the Battle of Geonosis, on a mission to apprehend Granta Omega. (JQ1, JQ10)

Rygelli, Denis

known as Reggie to his friends, this young man joined the Alliance shortly after the Battle of Yavin. He was known as a techie, and a whiz with anything that needed to be fixed. This allowed him to be part of something he believed in, but kept him out of the primary action. (GMK)

Rygg-noodles

these noodles were a staple in the Rodian diet. (GMR8)

Rygulan

this was the name of a noted member of the ZeHethbra race. (UANT)

Ryhl, Angrail

this man was one of the galaxy's most noted xenoarchaeologists, primarily because he wasn't a treasure hunter and simply wanted to preserve the ancient wonders he discovered. He often waged a sort of war-like rivalry with Nardo Sau, and sometimes was forced to resort to the same kinds of underhanded tactics Sau used in order to reach a site before him. Ryhl spent his career searching the most obscure and remote Outer Rim worlds for surprisingly wonderful finds, like the Ch'hosk Cave Drawings of Antmuel VI or the Skull of Thalemute. One of Ryh's major disadvantages was his lack of corporate sponsorship, something Sau used to get past the Imperial bureaucracy to obtain licenses before Ryhl could. (HR)

Ryko, Max

this man was a member of the Coruscant police force during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. As an officer who worked a beat in Coruscant's financial district, Ryko was known for his underhanded enforcement of the law. His access to secret documents allowed him to obtain sensitive information on Senators and businessbeings, and he used this information to blackmail his targets for huge sums of credits. Because of this, an anonymous bounty for Ryko's capture was issued shortly after the Battle of Naboo. Jango Fett claimed the bounty sometime later, when he was apprehended by Ryko and his fellow officers. Fett had just killed the Twi'lek Senator Trell, and Ryko's gunship was the first to arrive on the scene. Fett managed to disable the gunship and take control of the police officers who survived. (BH)

Ry-Kooda

this Koodan was Bar-Kooda's older brother. Ry-Kooda operated from a base on Rutal 4. Ry-Kooda had a flatter head and more spots than his brother, but was no less mean-tempered. When he discovered that Boba Fett had captured and killed his brother, Ry-Kooda launched his own attack on Fett and his employers, Gorga and Orko. He tracked them to Skeebo, and got caught in the middle of the Skavers' kidnapping of Gorga's bride, Anachro. Ry-Kooda was able to corner the bounty hunter on Skeebo, but Fett launched a concussion missile in the Skeendo Tunnels, trapping Ry-Kooda in the resulting rockslide. The hulking creature did not die, however, and began to exact revenge on Orko and Boba Fett. He started by hunting down Orko in his palace, removing all the guards, killing and then eating Orko to repay the death of Bar-Kooda. Ry-Kooda then set his sights on Arachno, but Boba Fett intervened. Ry-Kooda nearly killed the bounty hunter in one-on-one combat, but Fett managed to lure Ry-Kooda into a toxic waste dump. There, Fett set the waste ablaze, consuming Ry-Kooda in the flames. The Koodan exploded from the extreme heat. (BF)

Ryl

this remote world was located in the Outer Rim Territories, just off the Manda-Roon Merchant Route. (WOTC)

Ryl

this was one of the many dialects spoken by the Twi'lek people of Ryloth. (GMR3)

Rylca

this augmented form of bacta was created by Qlaern Hirt's verachen shortly after the New Republic liberated Coruscant from Ysanne Isard. It was created from normal bacta that was infused with kor ryll from the planet Ryloth. It was vastly superior to normal bacta, and Hirt gave the New Republic its own license to produce rylca in large quantities. This helped the Republic break out of the grip of the Krytos virus and escape from the virtual lock on the bacta market formed when Isard took control of the planet Thyferra. It was first produced at the Alderaan Biotics facility on Borleias. (KT)

Ryless

this species of tree was native to the planet Ganlihk. (COG)

Rylith

a unique crystal that was found on the planet Demophon, rylith was unique in that it could collect and store solar energy. They had many technological uses, including weapons power sources. (SN)

Rylkra

this was a common name among the Toydarian race. (WOTC, UANT)

Ryll

a mineral that generates a type of spice, but not the same variety as glitterstim. It is mined on the planet Ryloth, and is used in a number of medicinal ways. It is also illegally smuggled around the galaxy as a recreational drug. In any form or usage, ryll is highly addictive and very dangerous. Most refined ryll had a blue color. (SWJ2, JS)

Ryll Beer

this fine lager is created with a touch of ryll spice. (GG9)

Rylle'vak

this body of water, known as the Quiet Ocean, was located on the planet Bothawui. (SPG)

Ryloon

a planet famous for its orbital factories. (COJ)

Ryloth

this planet was the homeworld of the Twi'lek race, located in the Outer Rim Territories. It orbited its sun in such a way that one side was perpetually lit and the other was locked in the dark. The bright side generated huge heat storms which whipped around the planet and died on the night side, but not before warming the dark side up enough to support minimal life. It was a dry, rocky world with a thin, breathable atmosphere. The Twi'Leks there mine the mineral ryll for various legal and illegal uses throughout the galaxy. Ryloth was orbited by five, red-colored moons. (SW, DA, SWSB, PSPG)

Ryloth

one of two New Republic assault transports used in the conquest of Coruscant, following the Battle of Endor. It carried 100 troops to the planet. (WG)

Ryloth

this New Republic CR90 Corvette was part of the force sent to liberate the planet Ciutric from the control of Prince-Admiral Krennel. It supported the flagship Emancipator, along with several other Corvettes and a trio of Nebulon-B frigates. (IR)

Ryloth Street

a thoroughfare located in Xakrea, on Darkknell. (TFNR)

Ryloth Ventures

this Ryloth-based industrial corporation was active during the last decades of the Old Republic. Headed by Has Doneeta, Ryloth Ventures made a fortune in trade. (J3)

Rylothean

this was another name for the Twi'leki language. (EGP)

Rylspice

this was a diluted form of ryll, often sold by crimelords to get a being addicted to pure more powerful varieties of ryll. (GMR5)

Rym Mountains

a range of dormant volcanoes that runs through the Doaba Badlands on Socorro, the Rym Mountains extend nearly 30,000 kilometers across the eastern hemisphere of the planet. (SWJ2, BSS)

Rym, Ian

this man joined the starfighter group known as Kyp's Dozen, shortly before the planet Coruscant fell to the Yuuzhan Vong. Unfortunately, the Dozen arrived at Coruscant shortly after the death of Borsk Fey'lya, and were immediately engaged by Yuuzhan Vong warships. Ian Rym was killed early in the battle, when his X-Wing got caught in the crossfire of a Yuuzhan Vong warship. (DJ)

Rymm

this volcanic world is the third planet in the Zelos System. It has a single moon. Both Rymm and its moon have been ravaged over time by their proximity to the Zelos System's gravity well. (PG2)

Ryn

this species of humanoids was distinguished by their birdlike faces and the stiff hair covering their bodies. They had a slender, prehensile tail and a chitinous nose. The males had drooping moustachios and crests at their temples, while the females lacked moustachios and had slicked-back hair in place of the crests. Their noses were formed from a series of holes, making it appear to be a musical instrument, and the tips of their tails were sky-blue in color. They were known to be hard workers, but with a penchant for thievery and confidence games. The Ryn also had a distinct odor, which many other species found offensive. As a people, Ryn were highly superstitious, and had a number of rituals involving eating and bodily fluids. They were considered nomads, and those Ryn which were encountered most often were enslaved or being hunted down for some crime. Most xenobiologists were unable to discover the homeworld of the Ryn. The Ryn themselves had forgotten its name and location, but their histories showed that they were native to the Core and were driven from their homeworld long ago. Some Ryn believed that they were descended from a civilization of 10,000 musicians who agreed to move to a planet which was bereft of music. Others believed that their ancestors were warriors who were planted on other worlds to fend off a threat from the Inner Rim. This latter explanation was considered the most plausible, since the Ryn language contained a variety of military terms, including words for "non-Ryn" and "civilians." A large colony of Ryn settled in the Corporate Sector, moving from planet to planet. Some contingents of Ryn were quite fatalistic, claiming that they had been abused by the rest of the galaxy for so long that they often abused themselves whenever they were alone. When the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy began, many families of Ryn were suddenly split apart as refugees were shipped off to any planet which seemed to be on the far side of the invasion. Despite their separation, the Ryn maintained close contacts, and managed to create a tightly-knit web of information gatherers. They chose to blend into their environments, taking advantage of the way other races ignored them to insinuate themselves into their host culture, using these vantage points to collect information. Using secure channels, the Ryn began to anonymously provide their information to the Galactic Alliance, in the hopes that it could be used to defeat the Yuuzhan Vong. It was believed that the Ryn were led by a single individual, but no one knew who it was. Among the Ryn, it was rumored that this leader established the information network after learning about the Great River of the Jedi Knights. (HT, JE, FH1, FH2)

Ryn

this was the native language of the Ryn people. Many xenolinguists decribed the spoken form of Ryn a melodious collection of tones and inflections. (UANT)

Ryn 115

this was the codename of the Ryn who worked as part of the secret information network which sprang up during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Based on the planet Vortex, Ryn 115 worked with the rest of his race to unobtrusively gather information about the alien invaders and relay it to the New Republic and the Galactic Alliance. It was Ryn 115 who managed to infiltrate the prison camps of Selvaris and deliver a mathematically coded message to Judder Page and Pash Cracken, who later entrusted Thorsh to carry it to the Republic. (UF)

Ryn City

this was the name given to the location on Ruan where thirty-two Ryn lived, after they were forced to leave their homes during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (JE)

Ryna, Tuner

this independent spacer discovered a teek aboard his starship, some years before the Clone Wars. The teek identified itself as Yeep, and Ryna discovered that the little furball was incredibly fast. Ryna later entered Yeep in the biped class of races in the "Mobquet Presents: Fastest Land Beings" series. (HNN5)

Rynalla

this woman was a Profex at the University of Sanbra, studying the ancient Sith and their affect on the galaxy. Over the years, Profex Rynalla had picked up a fair amount of sensitivity to the Force, mainly due to her secretive research of Dark Side magic. She traveled to Leritor to investigate the rumors that the Bracers of Najus were hidden beneath the Bleaks mountain range. However, she was unable to afford a real excavation crew, so she paid a team of slavers to capture Sauvax and human natives to dig at the site. Her efforts to locate the Bracers was cut short when a team of independent investigators, on Leritor to help settle dispute between the Sauvax and the settlers, stumbled upon her excavation. The investigators destroyed the site in a battle with Rynalla's bodyguards, and Rynalla herself was captured and held for trial. (GMR10)

Ryntail

this was Tan Dicum's personal luxury yacht. (WOA32)

Ryo

this Twi'lek smuggler and his partner, Gerthylament, worked together during the height of the New Order. (SWJ11)

Ryoo

this was a blue and yellow wildflower that grew on the plains outside of Keren, on the planet Naboo. (SWDB)

Ryoone

this Outer Rim Territories world was in the remotest sections of the outer arms of the galaxy. It is special in that six unique, sentient species evolved on the world, including the Lyunesi. The planet's continual seismic activity has meant that the world's atmosphere is always filled with volcanic ash, making life on the planet harsh and dismal. (MA)

Rypka

this dour, morose-seeming Twi'leki female accompanied Hawker Bryce-Kelley on his travels throughout the Outer Rim Territories, rescuing spacers who seemed to be in dire need of assistance. Her origins were unknown, but she rarely communicated in speech. Instead, she used her head-tails to speak, along with hand and body movements. Together, they traveled the galaxy in the Royal Mistress. (PSG)

Rysais

this grain was a staple in the Bothan diet. (SPG)

Rysais Producers Co-operative

this farming cooperative produced rysais from their huge facility, located south of Tal'cara on the planet Kothlis. Run by the Ithorian known as Thanek, the cooperative produced huge quantities of rysais in an effort to feed the growing population of the planet. They barely turned a profit, and were subsidized by the government. (SPG)

Ryshcate

a dark brown, Corellian sweetbread served for birthdays and other special occasions, ryshcate was made with vweliu nuts and Corellian whiskey. Note that the Wizards of the Coast website names this food rycate. (XWN, WOTC)

Ry'shyrr

this Charon was one of the many members of the splinter group known as the Cult of Light. (UANT)

Rysken Mokksi

this was a noted Besalisk individual, prominent in the history of the planet Ojom. (UANT)

Ryssk

this Trandoshan scout often did odd jobs for Mika the Hutt, including the occasional assassination, during the early years of the New Order. (TF)

Rystall Sant

this humanoid female was one of Jabba the Hutt's favorite dancers, during the last years of the Galactic Civil War. Originally born on the planet New Bornalex, Rystall and her human mother, Cyl Sant, moved to Coruscant several years before the Clone Wars, in hopes of finding a better life. Unfortunately, Coruscant provided nothing better, and Rystall was abandoned by her mother, who hoped that she would be adopted by wealthier parents. Sadly, this was not to be, and Rystall was raised by Ortolan parents who were musicians. Rystall was easily distinguished by her flowing red hair and spotted skin. Her face had a unique structure in that it flowed from her nose and cheeks to her ears in a fan-like spread. Her feet were elephantine, being thick stumps with several thick nails. Although her mother was a human, Rystall never knew her father's origins. Note that the official Star Wars website indicates that Rystall's father was human while her mother was an alien. Living in the underworld of Coruscant, Rystall was eventually caught in the web of Black Sun after being approached by one of Xizor's vigos who offered her a deal: join him in one of his vacation houses, and he would provide a better life for her adopted family. Rystall agreed, hoping to provide more for her Ortolan family. However, the vigo locked her in a cell and forced her to dance for him, claiming that he would kill her family if she refused. The vigo captured her family and used them as slaves for over two years before the vigo hosted a sabacc tournament. Lando Calrissian took part in the games, and took a liking to Rystall. He eventually won the freedom of Rystall and her family, and they all fled Coruscant before the vigo could have them killed. Rystall and her family drifted to Tatooine, where her parents met an old friend, Max Rebo. The Ortolan band leader asked Rystall to join his band as a dancer, and she heartily agreed. After Jabba's death, Rystall was given the opportunity to join a band known as the Palpatones. In addition to incredible notoriety for her musical ability, her tenure with the Palpatones also brought her to Nar Shaddaa. There, she met Shug Ninx, and discovered that her father must have been among the last of the Theelin race. She left the Palpatones and set out to locate information on who her father was. (RJSE, CCG9, MTSE, SWDB, SWI67, VD3)

Rytal Prime

this is the capital city of the moon Dayark. (KO)

Rytar

this man was an independent spacer native to the planet Khuiumin, active during the early years of the New Republic. (GUN)

Rythani Labs

a subsidiary of Rythani Products, this research and development operation produced many new military innovations for the Empire. (SWJ9)

Rythani Products

this pro-Imperial technology manufacturer was headquartered on Rydonni Prime, and was historically run by the K'ntarr monarchy. Among the products which rolled off the Rythani lines were AT-AT replacement parts and repulsorlift parts. They produced several weapons prototypes for the Empire, and continued to support Imperial military needs after the fall of Emperor Palpatine. (SWJ9)

Rythii Beast

this vicious creature is found on the planet Rydonni Prime. A number of them are kept in the zoo maintained by the K'ntarr monarchy. (SWJ9)

Ryu

this was one of the many dialects spoken by the Twi'lek race. (LFC)

Ryuk

a being (EL2)

Ryvellia

this planet, located in the Avhn-Bendara System, was the site of violent anti-Imperial demonstrations prior to the destruction of Alderaan. The Imperial fleet levelled entire city blocks in an effort to quell the rebellions, but managed to kill more innocent bystanders than Alliance supporters. (SWJ5, SWJ12)

ryyhn

this Shyriiwook word was used as the suffix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "danger" or "silk", often in reference to the syren plant. It could be attached to a prefix by itself, or combined with other suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Ryyk

this was a species of tree-like aliens which lived extremely long lives. These beings were also referred to as the Neti, and were believed to have evolved on the planet Myrkr. It was later revealed that the alternate of "Ryyk" was actually a reference to the true homeworld of the Neti. (TOJC, EGP, EGA)

Ryyk

a long, wicked-looking knife was one of the traditional weapons used by Wookiees on Kashyyyk. There were several different variants of the ryyk blade, and a Wookiee could train to wield one or two ryyks at a time. It was believed that the bounty hunter Aurra Sing used a ryyk in her work. (HTSB, NEGW)

Ryyk

this ancient planet was the homeworld of the Neti race, which was also known as the Ryyk. The planet Ryyk was destroyed shortly before the onset of the Great Sith War, more than 4,000 before the Battle of Endor. (EGA)

Ryyk

this immense, gray-furred Wookiee was forced to watch as a group of Mandalorians killed his family, during the last decades of the Old Republic. For his part in killing most of them, Ryyi was sent to prison on the planet Brentaal. When Shogar Tok took control of the prison for use as his own fortress, during the early stages of the Clone Wars, Ryyk joined Sagoro Autem and several other inmates in an attack on Tok and his forces. Ryyk had befriended Lyshaa, and fought to protect her during the battle. With the Republic's forces pinned down, Shaak Ti offered the three their freedom in exchange for helping the Jedi to destroy Tok's hold on Brentaal. They reluctantly agreed, seeing no better path to freedom. Unfortunately, while infiltrating the sewers beneath the fortress, the group was attacked by a scrange, and Ryyk was badly injured by a swipe of the creature's tail. Without proper medical attention, the Wookiee died in the sewers. Shaak Ti swore to recover his body and have it transported to Kashyyyk for burial. (J2)

Ryyk Kerarthorr

this was a modified form of the ryyk knife used by the Wookiee race. Instead of having the blade mounted inline with the handle, the ryyk kerarthorr had its handle mounted at a ninety-degree angle to the blade. In this way, a Wookiee warrior could wield a pair of these blades held close to his or her body. (EGW)

Ryyts

this Aargauun man was, at one time, a Captain serving Bank of Aargau Security, Limited, during the height of the New Order. (PH)

Ryyvv, Severus

this noted assassin was captured during the height of the New Order and held for questioning. Ryyvv was apprehended during an intense firefight, and he was rushed to the hospital for treatment. He was kept under heavy security, so that he could recover enough to be interrogated about his underworld contacts. (WOTC)

Ryzrytch

this was the name of a noted Sludir individual. (UANT)

Rzadi

this was a common name among the Falleen. (UANT)

 S ***

S-1 Viper Automadon

a typographic name given to the X-1 Viper Automadon. (DE2)

S-100

this was Corellian Engineering Corporation's version of the Stinger-class fighter. Measuring just 3.5 meters in length, the S-100 was lightly armed but highly maneuverable. Developed around the time of the Great Sith War, the S-100 boasted a pair of assault laser cannons and two proton torpedo launchers as armament. These ships were favored by the Jedi Knights of the era, because their maneuverability allowed them to avoid an outright dogfight while disabling a target. (PJSB)

S12-series Droid

a series of cylindrical droids produced by Industrial Automaton. (CRO)

S1BR

a SoroSuub blaster weapon. (WG)

S1S Surveillance Droid

produced by TapTronics during the New Order, this surveillance droid was designed to supplement actual security forces. It was a simple automaton, essentially a repulsor-equipped camera with minimal computer memory and skills. (TSIA)

S-2

this was a standard communications encryption protocol used by the Thaereian military, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (LFCW)

S2P-030

this research droid was essentially a rolling computer which was equipped with arms. Known as OhThreeOh, it was programmed for biological research and was assigned to the Almas Academy during the last decades of the Old Republic. Unknown to the researchers on Almas, S2P-030 was actually an espionage droid, although the droid did not know who or where it was sending its data-filled signals, nor did it even know it was sending out the data. (LFC)

S2R

this was a series of scientific droids produced by TelBrinTel during the height of the New Order. Originally designed to Imperial military specifications, the S2R series had the ability to "brainstorm" due to the use of an advanced protocol chip. They were deployed in laboratories which focused on biological and chemical warfare, as well as armor and guidance system development facilities. (SWJ13)

S2R(A)

this was the civilian version of the TelBrinTel S2R science droid. It had the same capabilities as the military version - including the ability to "brainstorm" - but was hard-wired so that it could not knowingly work on weapons projects. (SWJ13)

S-3

this was Damorind Securities' portable force cage. (GG10)

S-4

this was the model number of an underwater torpedo launched designed and produced by Czerka during the Galactic Civil War. (HAS)

S40K

this was the model number designation of the Phoenix Hawk-class light pinnace, designed and built by Kuat Systems Engineering. (SOG)

S-4QD

this protocol droid was the only non-organic entity left on the moon of Tilnes, at the time of the Battle of Naboo. S-4QD remained on Tilnes even after the Verga Mer Mining Company instituted its "purely organic workforce," because it served as a representative for the droid manufacturing centers on Uffel. S-4QD was unsure why it was left on Tilnes, although it understood that its role was of an advisor. S-4QD was not even sure that S-4QD was its original designation, having withstood nearly 100 system shutdowns in its twenty years of service on Tilnes. (LFC)

S-5

this was the designation of the heavy blaster used by the Security Officer Corps of Naboo, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Produced by Theed Arms, the S-5 was also the base used for ascension guns, and a quick modification allowed a general-use blaster to become an ascension gun. Note that the Arms and Equipment Guide indicates that this weapon was produced by SoroSuub. (IG1, SON, AEG)

S-5

this was the designation of a mid-sized power generator developed on Nubia. The S-5 was developed to complement the 150 hyperdrive core. (X2)

S-6

this was a Nubian power generator, developed to accommodate some of the Nubians' most advanced hyperdrive systems during the years following the Battle of Naboo. (X2)

S-87

this starship sensor system was developed and manufactured by Gavvatronics during the Old Republic. (SWJ5)

S87 Dynamo

Gurian's hovercraft power plant dynamo, similar to that used on Mekuun's Hoverscout combat vehicle. (ISB)

S9 Heavy Power Droid

this was Veril Line Systems' answer to the EG-6 power droid. Measuring just under a meter in height, the S9 moved about on a pair of heavy-duty treads. It could recharge the power cells of a starship in just under a day, making it a more powerful energy supplier than the EG-6. (FTD)

Sa Kasik

this was a Nothoiin term used to describe an elderly member of society. (WOA33)

Sa kyr'am Nau tracyn kad, Vode an this Mandalorian war chant translated into Basic as "Forged like the saber in the fires of death, Brothers all." (RCHC)

Saadoon-Kauldi

a crimelord active during the Galactic Civil War, Saadoon-Kauldi was recruited to the world of Socorro by Abdi-Badawzi to help expand the presence of Ethra Brewery and other Socorran businesses beyond the Socorran System. A member of the Kadri'Ra species, it was rumored that Kauldi was enslaved and transported on a slaveship with the great-grandfather of Abdi-Badawzi, and that he was freed when the Badawzi family arranged for the ship to be attacked and the slaves freed. Abdi-Badawzi called on a "debt of honor" when he recruited Kauldi, promising a portion of the profits from the Ethra Brewery as well as a stronghold on the planet Neftali. Kauldi eventually agreed, hoping to begin a working relationship with the Society of the Black Bha'lir as well. Pret Swain later supplied a bulk cruiser for Kauldi to use as a personal transport, which he named the Merkel and used as an orbiting base near Neftali. However, the plight of his people - enslaved by the Empire - was never far from Kauldi's mind. He also never forgot the fact that he himself was a former slave, and he worked hard to free slaves and give them positions in his organization where warranted. (SWJ5, BSS)

Saadul

an alien race. (JE)

Saago

this species of grass is found on near the deserts and beaches of the planet Naboo. Its blades are tall and brittle, and have a greenish-gray color. The Gungans harvest large amounts of saago grass and boil it in the sap of the rutiger tree, during which the saago grass is softened and strengthened. The pliable blades are then woven into a heavy cloth that is used by soldiers as a natural armor covering. (GF)

Saahir Ru'luv

this Twi'lek female was a noted singer and entertainer who often worked at the Orange Lady Tavern on Corellia. She was also a contact for the Alliance's weapons smugglers in the area. During her early career, she fell in love with Thaddeus Ross, and the two remained together for three years before she broke off the relationship. She turned her attention to Juri Marbra, and the two planned to get married when Saahir asked Thaddeus to run some weapons for the Alliance. She was fatally wounded when the Empire discovered the location of the Alliance's base at Merich's Bend, and raided the facility. Thaddeus managed to recover her body, but she died in his arms shortly afterward. Before she passed away, Saahir made Thaddeus swear to go to the moon of Isamu with someone he really cared for, to forgive her for her breaking off of their relationship. (SWJ15)

Saak'ak

this was the name of the Neimoidian freighter which Nute Gunray and Rune Haako used to launch their blockade of the Naboo System with Darth Sidious. The ship was visually just a simple freighter of the horseshoe-designed favored by the Trade Federation, but was well armed and protected. The name Saak'ak translated into Basic as Profiteer. Note that Star Wars: The New Essential Guide to Characters indicates that the Saak'ak was the Droid Control Ship destroyed in the Battle of Naboo. (DMSH, COD, NEGC)

Sa'Alana

this was a noted member of the Tarasin race. (LFC)

Saalo Morn

this ancient Sith fanatic had originally failed in his training as a Jedi, some 1,000 years after the Great Sith War. He stole his master's helmet, which had been infused with the Force, and fled the Core Worlds to set up his own kingdom. He was able to quell the locals, but never found an apprentice worthy of training. Saalo Morn never really died, but passed into a state of unity with the Dark Side of Force when he was buried in his crypt. He remained within his crypt, assuming the guise of a bas-relief on the walls, until a group of adventurers discovered his crypt many millennia later. Awakened by the presence of the Force among the adventurers, Morn's spirit led the group deeper into the crypt and drew on their Force-sensitivity, hoping to get one of the group to don the ancient helmet of his master. The adventurers refused to accede to his wishes, and destroyed the helmet. Saalo Morn's spirit was dissipated, and was never seen again. (WOA7)

Saar

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Saar, Anton

the author of Of Droids and Men. (RASB)

Saar, Valara

this woman was a member of the Force-sensitive Yashuvhi, and was living on the planet Yashuvhu when the crew of the Old Republic exploration vessel Pathfinder III located their planet. She was eager to learn more about the Jedi Knights, and spent a great deal of time with the team from the Old Republic learning what she could. She convinced the crew of the Pathfinder III to take her with them when they returned to their base. Valara wandered the galaxy for many years, learning everything she could about the civilizations she encountered, before returning to Yashuvhu to share her experiences. She was deemed a Prophetess, and spent the rest of her life training the Yashuvhi in the use of the Force. (SWRPG, WOTC)

Saarai-kaar

this was the highest rank any of the Jensaarai Force users could achieve. At any point in time, there could only be one Saarai-kaar among the Jensaarai, much the same as there was only one Dark Lord of the Sith. Like the other Jensaarai, the Saarai-kaar wore cortosis-covered armor. Nikkos Tyris was one of the most powerful of the Saarai-kaar, until he was defeated by Nejaa Halcyon. When Leonia Tavra twisted the Jensaarai to her uses, she made them believe that a Halcyon would be their undoing unless they served her. How she discovered Corran Horn's true identity is a mystery, but she kidnapped Mirax Terrik and made the Jensaarai hold her on Suarbi 7/5 in order to draw Corran into her trap. The Saarai-kaar believed the charade whole-hearted, especially after Tavra shot the former Imperial governor and claimed to be liberating the natives of Suarbi 7/5 from Imperial control. When Corran and Luke Skywalker assaulted Suarbi 7/5 in an effort to free Mirax, they came up against Tavra, the Saarai-kaar and the combined might of the Jensaarai. Luke took care of the warriors while Corran battle their female leader. She nearly had him, until he recognized the fighting style she used from his vision of Halcyon's death, and implanted an image of Tyris in her mind. Her momentary lapse in concentration dropped her defenses, and Mirax stunned her with several blasters from her own weapon. When she awoke later on, she accused Luke and Corran of prolonging her death, but Elegos A'kla used his memnii of her husband's and Nikkos Tyris' deaths to try and convince her of the truth in their words. She chose not to believe, revealing that the Jensaarai were descended from Force users who had learned of Sith magics, but their number died with Tyris. The new Saarai-kaar continued to believe the Jedi were wrong, but actually trained her disciples with the light side of the Force. The word Saarai-kaar is a Sith term meaning "keeper of the truth." When Emperor Palpatine began his Jedi purge, his discovery of Force users on Suarbi 7/5 led him to send Darth Vader there. Rather than accept the allegiance of the new Saarai-kaar's son, Vader killed him as a Jedi, since he lacked the Sith magic. (IJ)

Saarge

this crimelord ran a top-notch organization during the height of the New Order. His mercenaries and hired thugs were always well-armed, finely attired, and smugly confident in their abilities. (GMS)

Sa'arli

this Tarasin served as an aide to Senator Lavina Wren of Cularin, during the early years of the Clone Wars. She was distinguished from other Tarasin by an unusual tattoo of a snakelike lizard, whose tail ran from her jawline up to and around her ear-slit. (LFCW)

Saarn

this backwater, Outer Rim world was once the site of a major Alliance base. This base served the sector as an intelligence and communications relay station. It was abandoned following the Battle of Endor, when the Star Destroyer Stormhawk entered the system and destroyed the base. The New Republic dispatched a team to reclaim the base. (SWJ6)

Saava Silk

this was one of the galaxy's finest fabrics. (SESB)

Sab Rufo Academy

an institute of higher learning, Sab Rufo Academy maintained an oceanographic institute on Trieron. (PG1)

Saba

this was the alias used by the Dark Lady during her mission to infiltrate the estate of Vien'sai'malloc, during the height of the Clone Wars. Saba was the servant of Tuulaa Doneeta. The alias was discovered by Aurra Sing, who was secretly working for Vien'sai'malloc at the time. (J3)

Saba Sebatyne

this Barabel was one of the leaders of the rogue group of Force-sensitives known as the Wild Knights. Saba and her comrades had been trained by the Jedi Knight Eelysa, during the human's mission to Barab I. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Saba felt that it was time for the Wild Knights to join the Jedi Knights in defending the galaxy. She sent three of her students - her own son Tesar and his hatchmates, Bela and Krasov Hara - to join Luke Skywalker at Eclipse. Later, after the death of Anakin

Solo at Myrkr, it was Saba who suggested that the Jedi Knights begin using Force-melds to join their minds together with the Force, using their combined might in battle against the Yuuzhan Vong. Her suggestion was two-fold, to assist the New Republic's military and to help the Jedi Knights - especially Tahiri Veila - regain a measure of their humanity in the face of devastating loss and anguish. Saba remained part of Luke Skywalker's inner circle of advisors, and she continued to fight against the Yuuzhan Vong invaders. When her hatchmate, Reswa, was to have her coming-of-age ceremony, Saba returned to Barab I, only to find the world engulfed in flames. The Yuuzhan Vong had reduced the planet's surface to bubbling lava and eliminated all lifeforms. Angry and hurt, Saba attacked the remaining transport ship and its coralskipper escort. Unknown to Saba was the fact that the transport was a slaveship which held all the surviving Barabels, who were to be enslaved by the alien invaders. As she destroyed the transport, Saba watched in horror as Barabel bodies spewed out. Later, after returning to Master Skywalker, Saba was forced to admit that death was probably better for her people than slavery. Nevertheless, Saba felt responsible for the death of her people, and fought back against the Yuuzhan Vong with a vengeance. That fire was quenched somewhat when Master Skywalker asked her to accompany him on a mission to locate Zonama Sekot. Saba took the offer as Master Skywalker intended it, as a way to take the hunt back to the enemy. An unexpected outcome of Saba's loss at Barab I was a heightened Force-sense for life. Saba found that she could sense life around her in greater detail, and could even sense when another being was ill. It was not quite a healer's skill, but something that Saba used on many occasions to help her fellow Jedi. This ability brought her closer to the Chadra-Fan healer Tekli, as the two worked together to try and heal Tahiri Veila and, later, Gilad Pellaeon. When the Yuuzhan Vong then attacked Borosk in an effort to eliminate the Imperials, Saba volunteered - along with Danni Quee - to infiltrate a slaveship to liberate the captured Imperials and destroy the ship from within. Their actions in freeing the surviving Imperials earned her the respect of Pellaeon and several other military leaders. Later, after the Jedi had finally located Zonama Sekot, Saba felt herself drawn into the planet's immense life force. She felt more at home on the rogue planet than on her own homeworld, and this helped her see that in locating the planet and proving that the Jedi indeed looking for a peaceful resolution to the war, she had acquitted herself of the loss of Barab I. Saba found a new resolve to help settle the conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong. During the final stages of the battle against the Yuuzhan Vong, after the living planet Zonama Sekot agreed to help bring about an end to the conflict, Saba was one of several Jedi Knights were bonded to seed-partners and provided with Sekotan starships. Sabacc

a card game played in most every casino, sabacc used a standard deck of seventy-six cards. The deck was split into four suits and a set of face cards. The four suits were represented by sabres, coins, flasks, and staves; each suit had eleven regular cards numbered 1 through 11 and four ranked cards - the Commander, The Mistress, the Master, and the Ace. The ranked cards were valued from twelve to fifteen. The face cards were split into two groups of eight cards, with pairs having positive and negative values. Among the face cards were The Idiot (value zero), the Queen of Air and Darkness (positive or negative 2), Endurance (positive or negative eight), Balance (positive or negative eleven), Demise (positive or negative thirteen), Moderation (positive or negative fourteen), the Evil One (positive or negative fifteen), and the Star (positive or negative seventeen). Note that Galaxy of Fear 4 - The Nightmare Machine claims there are only 72 cards in a sabacc deck. Non-standard sabacc decks have included such face cards as Chance, Hazard, the Satellite, The Wheel, and The Damaged Starship, among others. The object of each hand was to come as close to positive or negative twenty-three as possible. A score of greater than twenty-three, less than negative twenty-three, or zero was known as a "bomb-out." In a sabacc match, there were multiple rounds played, and wagering occurs in each round. The winner of each hand won the contents of the hand pot, while the sabacc pot was kept separate for the winner of the entire match. According to most gaming experts, there were five major forms of sabacc played across the galaxy. Many beings, Lando Calrissian among them, claimed to be able to tell fortunes with a deck of sabacc cards. The various cards were used like tarot cards, and Lando considered the Commander of Staves to be a representation of himself. The Ryn nomad Droma claimed that the Ryn were the original inventors of the sabacc deck, but they used it as a spiritual training device: in other words, to tell fortunes. Each suit represented an aspect of the individual's being - staves represented spiritual enterprise, flasks represented emotional states, sabers represented mental pursuits, and coins represented material well-being. The ranked cards indicated individuals of specific inclination, and the face cards represented specific events or actions. (ESB, LCM, HTTE, DA, HTSB, GOF4, HT)

Sabacc Mask

this was the term used by gamblers - especially sabacc players - to identify the completely expressionless face of a competitor. A sabacc mask betrayed no emotion, not even in the slightly twitch of an eyelash. A true sabacc mask was said to be unreadable even by a Lorradian. (MBS)

Sabacc Pot

this was the name given to the main collection of credits and goods which was reserved for the winner of an entire sabacc match. The winners of individual hands were awarded credits from the hand pot. (HTTE)

Sabacc Solitaire

any of the one-player forms of sabacc. (TMEC)

Sabador

a Rakririan who owns a petshop on Etti IV. (HSE)

Sabador's

an exotic pet store on Etti IV, owned by the Rakririan Sabador. It specializes in unique, non-sentient species that make almost any level of pet, from the passive to the dangerous. Han Solo buys a dinko from Sabador, to give to Ploovo 2-for-1 as a "gift." (HSE)

Sabaoth Starfighter

this starfighter design incorporated a tiny, central body to which a pair of long, down- and forward-sloped wings was attached. The ship resembled an attacking bird of prey when flowing in battle. Laser cannons were mounted beneath the cockpit and at each wingtip, giving the Sabaoth fighter a wide firing arc. (TCG5)

Sabe'

this young Naboo woman was very similar in appearance to her Queen, Amidala. Sabe' served as one of Amidala's handmaidens, but also played a more important role. Like the other handmaidens, Sabe' was chosen by Captain Panak for her strength, loyalty, and resemblance to Amidala. As part of carefully maintained ruse, Amidala often wore elaborate clothing and make-up in public. This tended to mask her actual appearance somewhat. In times where the Queen's safety was at risk, Sabe' would take the Queen's place, dressing up in the clothing and make-up and acting as the Queen herself. Amidala, meanwhile, would assume the role of Padme Naberrie, another handmaiden. The pair had also worked a method of covert communication that they could use whenever Sabe acted as Queen and had to answer important questions. Thus, the deception was nearly flawless to anyone not familiar with Naboo. Sabe' was portrayed by Kiera Knightley in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace. (SW1, TPM, JQA)

Saber Cat

this enormous, black-furred predator was native to the planet Monastery. Distinguished by the thick horn which grew from the crown of its skull, the saber cat had four huge paws, each of which ended with five clawed toes. The sisters of the Order of the Sacred Circle befriended a number of saber cats during their time on Monastery, keeping them as pets while allowing them to roam the rainforests like wild creatures. (MC35)

Saber Enterprises

a dummy corporation set up by the Empire as a front for its secret anti-espionage operations. It was run ostensibly by Renik during the Galactic Civil War. (SE, SESB)

Saber Rakes

this subclass of Tapani Sector's nobility was born from those youths who formed themselves into gangs and fought with lightfoils. These groups had well-developed rivalries, and their feuds often ended in death. These events led the Great Council to ban the use of functioning lightfoils within the sector, a law which the Empire supported. Nonetheless, the Saber Rakes continue to duel, but newer rules prohibiting the killing of an opponent have been formed. (PGT)

Saber Squadron

led by Soontir Fel, this TIE Interceptor squadron was formed to defend the second Death Star during its construction over the forest moon of Endor. Membership in the squadron required a minimum of ten kills by a pilot, and their fighters were painted with a bloodstripe to indicate their skills. The squadron was assigned the responsibility of protecting the Avenger during the Battle of Endor. (CCG11)

Saber Squadron

this was the name of Luke Skywalker's personal starfighter squadron, put together from Jedi and non-Jedi pilots in order to defend the Jedi Knights' base on Eclipse from Yuuzhan Vong invasion. This squadron was called to duty during the Second Battle of Coruscant, and took heavy losses. The survivors were redeployed to other units, including the Twin Suns Squadron commanded by Skywalker. (SBS, EL1)

Sabercat

a vicious predator with arm-long fangs. (SE)

Saber-class Fighter Tank

this was the designation of the TX-130 series of repulsor tanks produced by Rothana Heavy Engineering for use by the Army of the Republic, during the Clone Wars. (OWS, WOTC)

Saberdart

this was a unique form of projectile created by the Kaminoan race. The central dart was surrounded by two knife-like wings, and a series of unusual cuts along the side identified it as a Kaminoan design. (AOTCN)

Saber-fang

this vicious predator, named for its razor-sharp fangs, was native to the planet Saki. (MBS)

Saber's Tooth

this cantina was located near the starport in the city of Taskeed, on the planet Yefowr. (SWJ14)

Sabiador Slavers

one of the larger slaving operations allowed to continue during the Galactic Civil War, although they disbanded during the early years of the New Republic. (DARK, KO)

Sabilon

this region of the planet Glee Anselm was the home of the Nautolan race. (NEGC)

Sabis, Archa

this wealthy cyborg lived in a luxurious skyhook which was tethered to the planet Coruscant during the height of the New Order. Much of his fortune came from the manufacture of energy shield generators, and Sabis was able to buy his way into Coruscant's high society. However, his meteoric rise was cut short when he contracted a nonlethal form of Knowt's Disease, and he lost his right arm and most of his torso and face to the disease. In order to survive, his arms and other body parts were replaced with cybernetic prostheses, including much of his brain. He was abandoned by his socialite "friends", and isolated himself in his skyhook. Many beings considered Sabis to be insane, especially after he began to speak out in favor of the rights of droids. Little did they realize that the cybernetic implants in his brain had been infected by a computer virus, which drove him slowly insane. At some point during the Galactic Civil War, Sabis' skyhook suddenly became untethered, and would have been shot down if it hadn't been rescued by a group of freelance operatives. In the wake of this near-disaster, Sabis tried to initiate the Second Droid Revolution. His efforts were thwarted, however, when the construction droid he was using as a base of operations was disabled. (CCW)

Sabit

this X'Ting was the mate of Caiza Quill. They managed their relationship by timing their sexual phase changes to be nearly opposite one another. (TCD)

Sable II

this modified Corellian gunship was owned by the pirate Karn Granzor. It was the Sable II which attacked the merchant ship Eclipse. The pirates didn't board the Eclipse with guns blazing, preferring to take the cargo with minimal bloodshed. Drek Drednar was a crewman aboard the Eclipse, but jumped ship when he discovered the pirates were not the bloodthirsty bandits he was led to believe. However, Drednar eventually jumped ship and started his own pirate gang, and later returned to destroy the Sable II and killed captain Granzor. (SWJ5)

Sable III

formerly known as the Anto's Star, this heavily-modified CR90 corvette was stolen by the pirate gang controlled by Drek Drednar. It was named for the gunship Sable II, from which Drednar had his crew learned the ropes of piracy before jumping ship to set out on their own. The Sable III was armed with five double turbolaser cannons, a turret-mounted ion cannon, and a pair of tractor beam projectors. (SWJ5)

Sabo Leeda

this male Aqualish was a pirate of some renown during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. He worked briefly with Meeko Ghintee before the Muttani was arrested, and later worked with Quallung Tula, Grillo Zaman, Bado Karpa, and Tuba Acho to steal fuel cells from the Outland Transit Station during Ghintee's escape from Oovo IV. However, a bounty was placed on all their heads by Rozatta, and Sabo Leeda was captured by Jango Fett shortly afterward. (BH)

Sabol

this Imperial Lieutenant was serving as an Intelligence officer during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Lieutenant Sabol, despite being one of the few female officers in the Empire, was known for her ruthless nature and her intolerance of failure. However, her career was marked by the acquisition of often useless information, which kept her from advancing up the chain of command. (SWGAL)

Sabosen

this was one of the four ruling families of the Chiss civilization. Like the other families, the Sabosen bloodlines predate modern Chiss society. The Sabosen syndic was charged with ensuring that justice, health, and educational services were evenly distributed across all Chiss colonies. (GMR5, FH2)

Sabra

this YT-1300 light freighter was owned and operated by Twin Suns Transport Services. It was flown by Ace Azzameen during his early training with his sister, Aeron. (XWA)

Sabran

this female Imperial naval officer was known for her fluency in alien languages. She was able to speak in over 300 unique tongues, and was also known for her diligence and self-confidence during a mission. She was framed for leaking information to the Alliance and sent to an Imperial prison. However, Janq Paramexor learned of her language skills, and arranged to have her freed if she agreed to join his guild as a bounty hunter. She quickly agreed, and put her determination and training to work for his operation. (GG10)

Sabrashi

this alien race was noted for the creation of the fear stick. (NEGW)

Sabrashi Bio-chemical Deterrants, Incorporated

this weapons manufacturer produced a variety of chemical weapons for personal protection. Note that The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology indicates that the Sabrashi were an alien people. (FOP, NEGW)

Sabre

a Ripoblus assault transport operative during the Sepan Civil War. (TIE)

Sabre Club

located within The Ace of Sabres, on Kluistar, this exclusive casino was open to only the wealthiest VIPs. Situated on the (lucky) thirteenth floor, the Sabre Club catered to all sorts of royalty, nobility, and corporate elite. Membership was limited to 999, with each member paying 25,000 credits for a two-year membership. Members in current standing were given the guaranteed option to renew their membership. (WSV)

Sabrin Ring

this small empire was forged by Lady Miletta Sarbin, shortly after the Battle of Endor. She later negotiated with the Hutts for support and protection. The Ring was the prevalent force on the planets Sabrix, Elokas, and Helisk, and was more of a criminal empire than a political one. (GG11)

Sabrin, Miletta

this woman was one of the few females who rose to political power in the Empire. She was born to a wealthy family with influential connections, but she distinguished herself as a member of the Imperial militia during the assaults which ousted the Alliance from Koradin Sector. She later became the Prefect, then Governor, of the Renillis System four years before the Battle of Yavin. Her belief in the Empire was shattered with the destruction of Alderaan, and the casual acceptance of the destruction by the Emperor and her own staff. Although she hated the Alliance, she was still dismayed by the loss of life during the Galactic Civil War. After the Battle of Endor, she deserted the Empire and took a small frigate and a crew with her to the Outer Rim. There, she established the Sabrin Ring on Sabrix and negotiated with the Hutts for support and protection. (GG11)

Sabrix

this was the primary world in the Sabrixin System, one of three worlds in the system which were habitable. It was named for Miletta Sabrin, who fled to the previously uncharted planet after the Battle of Endor. (GG11)

Sacbee

this was a species of bulbous insect which was bio-engineered by the Yuuzhan Vong. (UF)

Sache

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Sache'

this young Naboo girl served as one of Queen Amidala's handmaidens. Like the other handmaidens, Sache was chosen by Captain Panak for her strength, loyalty, and resemblance to Amidala. Of all Amidala's handmaidens, Sache and Yane were the youngest, and were left behind when the Queen traveled to Coruscant to petition the blockade of Naboo by the Trade Federation. Sache as portrayed by Sofia Coppola in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace. (SW1, JQA)

Sacheen-class Escort Ship

this starship was the first of the new class of ships designed for use by the New Republic. It measured 375 meters in length, and served as the blueprint for the Hajen-class fleet tender. They were the smallest of the new class designed for independent operations, and were often assigned screening duties in support of large fleets. They could also serve as system patrol ships when supported by a squadron of starfighters berthed in its main hangar area. The Sacheen-class escort was armed with 10 heavy turbolaser cannons, 8 laser cannons, and 8 ion cannons, and was equipped with a Class-1 hyperdrive and enhanced shielding and hull plating. (SOL, CTD)

Sachoor, Denlace

this man was a clerk for the Corporate Alliance, until it was discovered that he had a tiny computer memory system implanted into his skull. He was arrested for embezzling millions of credits and later interrogated, during which time he provided information on the training facility on Yirt-4138-Grek-12, shortly before the Clone Wars. (HNN4)

Saclas

this barren planet, located along the Solenbaran Merchant Route, was the homeworld of the Ocsinin race. It was perhaps best-known for the gelatinous pet slimes which lived on the planet, and were popular among young Gamorreans. (AIR)

Sacor

this yellow star was the central body around which the planet Sacorria orbited. Note that Coruscant and the Core Worlds denotes this star by the name Sacorria. Also note that this source claims the Sacor star was an orange giant. (CTD, CCW)

Sacorrata

this large city was located on the main continent of the planet Sacorria. The Sacorria Central Spaceport was located on the outskirts of the city. (CCW)

Sacorria

a planet located in the Outlier Systems in the Corellian Sector, Sacorria orbited the star known as Sacor, and had a single moon known as Sarcophagus. Among the many traditions observed on Sacorria was the requirement that all women have their father's permission to marry. During the Old Republic, Sacorria kept primarily to itself, and it had token representation in the Galactic Senate by way of its natives coming from other planets in the Sector. The population of Sacorria, made up of humans, Dralls, and Selonians, each provided a representative to the planetary government, known as the Sacorrian Triad. This Triad chafed under the New Order, when it was subjugated to the authority of the Corellian Diktat, but regained power in the aftermath of the Battle of Endor. When the racial separation began in the Corellian Sector, just prior to Thrackan Sal-Solo's rise to power, the Sacorrian Triad also ruled that marriages to off-worlders would be outlawed. This put a kink in Lando Calrissian's plans to marry Tendra Risant. Despite the resolution of the Corellian Crisis, the Sacorrian Triad remained the official government of the planet. The average day on Sacorria lasted 23 standard hours, and its year lasted 343 local days. (AC, CTD, CCW)

Sacorria

see Sacor (CCW)

Sacorria Central Spaceport

located on the primary continent of the planet Sacorria, this spaceport was one of the most impressive buildings found on the planet. Located on the outskirts of Sacorrata, some 500 kilometers inland from Dorthus Tal Island, the Sacorria Central Spaceport catered to the needs of offworld visitors to Sacorria. Filled with shops, restaurants, and hotels, the spaceport was practically a self-contained city. (CCW)

Sacorrian

this was the term used to describe any being who was native to the planet Sacorria, whether they were human, Selonian, or Drall. (CCW)

Sacorrian Grain Whiskey

this spirit was distilled on the planet Sacorria, from the many grains which were grown there. (CCW)

Sacorrian Triad

this was the primary governmental body of the planet Sacorria. It was formed from three leaders, each representing one of the three main races - human, Selonian, and Drall - which made Sacorria their home. During the New Order, the Triad was forced to cede power to the Corellian Diktat, at the order of Emperor Palpatine., but it re-established its control in the wake of the Battle of Endor. Shortly after the defeat of Grand Admiral Thrawn, the Triad attempted to secede from the New Republic and take control of the Corellian Sector. They made a deal with Thrackan Sal-Solo, who provided his Human League members as disposable troops in return for his chance to become Diktat of the Corellian System. The Triad then severed all ties to the Republic by blockading the entire Corellian system with an interdiction field. The Triad also managed to operate the immense planetary repulsors located within the hearts of the planets in the Corellian System, setting off a series of actions they called the Starbuster Plot. The combined forces of the New Republic and the Bakuran navy managed to defeat the interdiction field and discover the plans of the Sacorrian Triad, and the threat to other worlds was avoided. Despite this setback, the Triad remained the primary government of the planet Sacorria. (AC, AS, CTD, EGP, NEGC, CCW)

Sacred Aeries

this was the name used by the S'kytri to describe the holiest and most sacred of the locations on their homeworld of Skye. During the Imperial occupation of the planet, many of the Sacred Aeries were desecrated by the Imperials, who used the land for munitions factories. After the Supreme Council was freed by The One, the factories were immediately destroyed. (GMR1)

Sacred Ch'hala Tree Grove

located on the planet Cularin, this grove of ch'hala trees had remained untouched for more than 300 years at the time of the Battle of Naboo. Forty-two trees existed at the time the grove was declared a sacred location by the Tarasin, and another twenty-eight grew in over time. Under the declarations of the Cularin Compact, the Sacred Grove was off-limits to any form of offworld intrusion. (LFC)

Sacred Pinnacle

this tower of red, desert stone was sacred to the Sand People who lived in the deserts of Tatooine. The ancient Sand People carved out caves in which they told stories, performed secret rituals, and executed blood sacrifices. However, as Jabba the Hutt asserted his control over the planet Tatooine, the city of Mos Espa grew up in the near near the Pinnacle. As pod racing grew in popularity, the Sand People were driven away from the Sacred Pinnacle by the whine of their engines. Eventually, Jabba built Mos Espa Arena surrounding the Pinnacle, but left the stone pillar intact. During the height of Jabba's reign, the Pinnacle housed luxury accommodations for visitors who came to see the pod racer. The Sand People, hating the way that their sacred grounds had been usurped, camped out on the pod racing course and shot at the racers in retaliation. (IWE1)

Sacred Pools

one of the most famous landmarks found on the planet Telos. Of all the global parks on the planet, the Sacred Pools were held in the highest regards. Thus, when it was revealed the Xanatos was using the pools as a toxic waste dumping ground, Andra and the POWER party suddenly found themselves at the forefront of a political uprising. Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi helped expose Xanatos' plans, and worked to help the Telosians get started on cleaning the Pools for future generations. (DOR)

Sacred Precinct

this was another term used by the Yuuzhan Vong to describe the area surrounding Supreme Overlord Shimrra's Citadel, located on the planet Coruscant after it had been captured and terraformed it into a simulacrum of their homeworld of Yuuzhan'tar. (UF)

Sacred Pyre

this Yuuzhan Vong warship was under the command of Bhu Fath, during the final stages of the aliens' invasion of the galaxy. It was dispatched to the planet Selvaris to acquire a cargo of prisoners - captured during the New Republic's Operation Trinity near Bilbringi - for transport to Coruscant. There, the prisoners were to be sacrificed to the Yuuzhan Vong gods at a ceremony that would remove any doubt of the Yuuzhan Vong's devotion. (UF)

Sacred Way

this religion was one of many practiced on the frontier world of Aduba-3, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. It was considered by many historians as the founding religion on the planet, and was controlled by the Verpine known as Pera during the years following the Battle of Yavin. (MC7, GMR4)

Sacredot

this was the title used by the Underpriests who served Teroenza on Ylesia. (TPS)

Sacul, Jorg

this man served the Alliance as a starfighter pilot, and was a member of Red Squadron during the Battle of Yavin. (SWI61)

Sacworm

this thick-skinned worm was bioengineered by the Yuuzhan Vong to serve as a way to transport liquids. Small sacworms were grown in the shape of cups, for use as drinking vessels. (T)

Sadain

this four-legged creature was native to the plains of Ansion. It was one of the many creatures which had been domesticated by the Alwari Ansionians, for used as a pack animal. Unlike the huge suubatars, the sadain were built for endurance and strength instead of speed. This was further pointed out by the long, flared ears of the sadain, which were filled with a vast network of blood vessels to help dissipate body heat. (APS)

Sadeet

this was one of the more common names used by Trandoshan hunters. Like most Trandoshan names, it was reserved for males, but could be adopted by those rare females who became hunters. In the Trandoshan language, the name meant "butchers his enemies slowly". (GCG)

Sa-di

one of the Emperor Palpatine's closest friends, and a member of the reborn Emperor's Dark Side Adepts. He soon realized that the Emperor's continual rebirth through the use of clones was not what it seemed to be. Along with Nefta, Sa-Di formulated a plan to destroy all of the Emperor's clones and trap his Dark Side energies in the netherworld forever. Following the reborn Emperor's death on Byss, both Sa-Di and Nefta began destroying the clone vats. Before they could finish the job, however, they were both killed by Sedriss. Unknown to both of them at the time, Palpatine had already entered a new clone body. (DE2)

Sadie

the Abyssin bartender of the Jungle Lust, when Han Solo visited Bran Kemple there. (COJ)

Saduu Nagag

this Aplocaph was constantly cleaning his skin, keeping it gleaming in case he makes "that one, crucial meeting." Saduu was on board the Kuari Princess when it was attacked by the Riders of the Maelstrom. (RM)

S'ae

this species of tree is native to the planet Gacerian. They can grow to incredible sizes, with twelve-meter diameters and up to 100 meters in height. Their root systems reach deep into the planet's crust, and allow the s'ae to respond to the planet's seismic activity. The s'ae trees can detect even slight geological shifts that are undetectable by many races. The s'ae trees have the unique ability to resonate to the pitch and vibration of the earth beneath them, and are known as singing trees by the Gacerites. (PG2)

Saell-Terae

this Yarkora was known as an antiquities dealer who roamed the Unknown Regions during the early days of the New Order. He traveled the area in his modified DeepWater freighter, the Lost Reef, and had mapped out a considerable portion of the Unknown Regions before he ran afoul of Admiral Thrawn. Thrawn was interested in a group of statues Saell-Terae had acquired, hoping to learn something about their creators in order to subjugate them. Saell-Terae refused to part with the statues, but was forced to leave the Lost Reef behind in his flight. The ship later showed up, empty and adrift, near Elrood. Saell-Terae managed to escape Thrawn, and vowed to recover his ship no matter what the cost or who he had to kill. (SS)

Saelt-Marae

this male Yarkora posed as an alien artifacts trader at Jabba the Hutt's palace, although no one really knew what his intentions were. He often associated with the B'omarr Monks, and many believed that Saelt-Marae was an assumed name. While at Jabba's palace, Saelt-Marae made a living as an inside informant, providing secrets about the activities of the palace's denizens to Jabba himself. After Jabba's death, Saelt-Marae stole a sizable portion of Jabba's computer records and fled the sector. (CCG7, MTSE)

Saen

a Coway swear word known to Halla, it has something to do with a person's parentage. Halla tells Luke that it's a Coway word meaning "quit," used when two combatants are fighting to determine Canu's decision on a dispute. The battle is decided when one combatant dies or quits. She says this in hopes that Luke would use it if he was near to defeat, to momentarily disengage his assailant and gain the upper hand. (SME)

Saesee Tiin

this Iktotchi Jedi Master was born on the moon of Iktotch, where he learned to fly a variety of starships. Over time, after discovering his ability with the Force and being trained as a Jedi under the tutelage of Master Omo Bouri, Tiin could instinctively fly virtually any craft. He was known in the Old Republic military as an excellent dogfighter, but was also something of a loner who preferred solitary contemplation over crowded meetings. Saesee Tiin was also one of the few Jedi Masters who never took a Padawan to train. Saesee Tiin served on the Jedi Council at the time when Qui-Gon Jinn petitioned to have Anakin Skywalker trained as a Jedi, and was known on the Council for his foresight and his ability to foresee the future. After the Battle of Naboo, Master Tiin was able to recover Darth Maul's Sith Infiltrator from Naboo, and spent many hours examining its unusual systems. During the height of the Clone Wars, it was Master Tiin who encouraged Anakin to continue the development of a personalized Delta-7 Aethersprite fighter, despite Obi-Wan Kenobi's concern that Anakin viewed the ship as a possession. Master Tiin, however, was hoping that Anakin's innate ability to repair, modify, and improve technology would result in new improvements to the Delta-7 that might give the Jedi an edge in the battle. The pair again worked together near the end of the Clone Wars, when they accompanied Plo Koon to Rendili to ensure that the planet's fleet of Dreadnaughts was not turned over to the Separatists. Their orders to secure the fleet or destroy it, a stance that led the crew of the Mersel Kebir to mutiny and attempt to remain at Rendili. When Master Koon was taken hostage, Master Tiin was forced to act to destroy the fleet. Anakin then proposed a desperate plan to disable the Dreadnaughts without bloodshed, and Master Tiin was unsure how to proceed. The appearance of Obi-Wan Kenobi and Quinlan Vos allowed him to give Anakin his chance. Young Skywalker's plan succeeded, and the Jedi were able to put an end to the siege over Rendili. As the Clone Wars began to wind down after the First Battle of Coruscant, Master Tiin was among the group of Jedi Masters who accompanied Mace Windu to arrest Chancellor Palpatine, after it was learned that he had finally been revealed as Darth Sidious. However, the Jedi were unprepared for Palpatine's powers, and Saesee Tiin was quickly beheaded during the fighting, leaving Mace Windu to face Palpatine alone. Saesee Tiin was portrayed by Khan Bonfils in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace, by Jesse Jensen in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones, and by Dee Chudasama and Kenji Oates in Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (SW1, IG1, OWS, SWDB, RDR, IS3, E3N)

Saf

this female name was common among the Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Safari One Squadron

this group of Alliance soldiers was seasoned during the Battle of Hoth, and assisted in the recovery of an Imperial I2-CG droid on Goratak III, after it intercepted data on the starship manufacturing plant on Tar Morden. (MB)

Safe Home

this is the name of a hollowed-out asteroid maintained by a group of former Old Republic scouts. Located in an unknown asteroid belt and purposely erased from government records, Safe Home provides a place for independent scouts to stay in between missions. A group of pirates which plied the space surrounding the asteroid has convinced the scouts that the Empire is still in power and is looking for them as criminals, thereby keeping the scouts near to Safe Home. The pirates then use the scouts as hired muscle, claiming that a juicy civilian target is actually an Imperial ship in disguise. (GG8)

Safecube

this box was designed to hold explosives for transport. (SSR)

SafeScreen

this form of sensor alarm was available in several different models. Type I SafeScreens were basic devices used to protect homes. Type VII SafeScreens were used by royalty and corporations to guard their riches and research. (SWJ9)

Safety Cage

a large, round basket that can be lifted by a sling or moved in a tractor beam. It is used to quickly transport cargo or people from one starship to the next while docked at a spaceport or other location within a safe atmosphere. The cage is constructed so that its contents will not fall out. (HSR)

Safety Inspection Certification

this Imperial document was one of a number of documents required from any spacer who plied the spacelanes during the New Order. The procedures for obtaining the certification were documented in the Spacer's Information Manual. Known as an SIC, this document provided information on the space-worthiness of the starship it was issued to. (SWJ9)

Saffa

an alien race. (TFE)

Saffa Painting

this art form predated the Empire, reaching its height between 1550-2200 years prior to the New Order. The artworm changed subtly after the Saffa made contact with the Thennqora. (HTTE)

Saffalore

this Corporate Sector world was the headquarters of Binring Biomedical Product. It remained neutral during the end of the Galactic Civil War, although Binring was staunchly loyal to the Empire. (WS)

Saffch, Kara

the owner and pilot of the freighter Night Havoc. At the age of 17, she ran away with her brother, Willi, to explore the galaxy. They worked on various starships until they could earn enough credits for a downpayment on a ship of their own. They finally were able to purchase the Night Havoc, but the two have been unable to completely make ends meet. They have incurred large debts, which they try to pay off as salvagers. Kara is an excellent salvager, and worked primarily near Korbin. She is upbeat, proud of her accomplishments, and full of enthusiasm. (PG2)

Saffch, Willi

Kara Saffch's kid brother, Willi was a technical genius, and served as the co-pilot of the Night Havoc. He was a tall youth, with a bald head adorned with a topknot of hair. (PG2)

Saffkin Room

this was one of the eight luxurious casinos found aboard the Coral Vanda. (DFR)

Safidine Industries

this weapons manufacturer was subcontracted by the Empire to develop high-powered blasters. Unfortunately, the prototypes that were created by Safidine researchers were stolen by Devidia Vennsiol and Dorbus Kyrullus. Although Kyrullus was captured, and many of the weapons recovered, Vennsiol remained free. Safidine issued an Imperial bounty for her capture, in the hopes of recovering the prototypes before they were obtained by another manufacturer. (GMR6)

Safonne Pendon

this male Rodian was the leader of a group of pirates that targetted New Republic convoys and ambushed them. Pendon's pirates then forced the crews of the ships to surrender before taking possession of the ships and their cargoes. The Rodian maintained a base on the cold world of Seltaya, hidden within the cave systems that exist naturally below the icy surface. He maintained a modest, though effective, fleet of ships, led by the Corvette Safonne's Sword. (WBC)

Safonne's Sword

this modified CR90 Corellian Corvette was the flagship of Safonne Pendon's pirate fleet. Its armament was upgraded to include six turret-mounted double-turbolaser cannons. The Rodian also upgraded the ship's drive systems and shields. (WBC)

Sagbat

an Askajian dish, often served jelled. (TJP)

Sagcatcher

this is a species of swift-footed predator native to the planet Aleen. (IG1, OWS)

Sage, Vana

this woman was a Naboo expatriate who roamed the galaxy as a hired gun. Originally born on Alderaan, Vana left home at fifteen and worked for a number of bounty hunters before she ended up on Naboo. There, she joined the Royal Security Force, but was frustrated with the pacifism and naivete' of the Naboo military. After being rebuffed in her request for additional military build-up, Vana left the RSF and struck out on her own as a mercenary for hire. She flew in a starship she named the Guardian Mantis, and was soon employed by the Trade Federation as a bounty hunter. She was known to have captured the Feeorin pirate Nym, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. When the Federation blockaded Naboo, Vana began to question whether her alliance with the Federation was going to work out in her favor. She eventually returned to legitimate service with the Naboo Royal Security Force. (OWS, SFT, STF, CRBN)

SAGEducation

this branch of COMPNOR brought education to the billions of forgotten youths of the Old Republic. Through SAGEducation, COMPNOR gained a great deal of public support. (ISB)

Saggery

this plant produces flowers which have gracefully-curving petals. (SOP)

Saggery-blossom Maneuver

this naval attack pattern involved sending a group of starfighters at a specific target in parade flight formation. This formation allowed the fighters to overlap their shields for added protection. Shortly after the fighters are launched, a series of proton torpedoes is launched along their attack vector. Shortly before impacting the target, the starfighters break their parade formation and spread out like the petals of a saggery flower, curving away from the target as the proton torpedoes slam into it. The split-second timing requires the starfighters to attack in parade formation, allowing them to conserve shield energy until they break off. The additional power can then be used to prevent any collateral damage from the proton torpedo strikes. (SOP)

Sagina

this modified Strike-class cruiser was part of the Alliance's fleet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Sagma

this planet was the site of a great battle during the Galactic Civil War. Ganig and Stecker were participants in the battle, and their heroics were the fodder of Imperial propaganda for a short time, until they were suspected of sympathizing with the Alliance. (ISB)

SAGRecreation

this branch of COMPNOR was created to provide wholesome activities for all SAGroup members. Wegsphere was created as part of SAGRecreation, while other parts of SAGRec are specially designed to harden youths to harsh conditions for future assignments in the Imperial armed forces. (ISB)

Sagresh

one of the two moons orbiting the planet Ergeshui. (PG2)

SAGroup

Sague

an Alliance shuttle group destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Sah'c

this wealthy family owned much of the property in the H-46 quadrant of Coruscant's Galactic City, during the last decades of the Old Republic. For this reason, the quadrant became known as Sah'c Town. (IWE2)

Sah'c Canyon

this was the name given to the deep channel that cut through Coruscant's Sah'c District, during the final decades of the Old Republic. The Sah'c Canyon was rimmed with skyscrapers, and plummeted several hundred stories toward the actual surface of Coruscant. The depth and width of the Canyon allowed a large part of Coruscant's air traffic to move through the Canyon on a regular basis. (LEV)

Sah'c District

see Sah'c Town (LEV)

Sah'c Town

this was the colloquial name of quadrant H-46 of Coruscant's Galactic City, popular during the last decades of the Old Republic. It was named for the family which owned most of its buildings. (IWE2)

Saheelindeel

a planet in the Tion Hegemony which, like many others in the Hegemony, was a backward world trying to play catch-up with the technological growth of the rest of the galaxy. The planet was overrun during the Yuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (HSL, HT)

Saheelindeeli

the ape-like aliens native to the planet Saheelindeel, they are green-furred humanoids. They have a limited technology, and are just starting to move ahead toward automation. They have a matriarchal society. (HSL)

Sahh

this was the Orfite word for their tribal groups. Each sahh controlled a vast section of jungle on the planet Kidron. (AE)

Sahl-Evin

this was the primary port city of the planet Jenenma. Much of the city's population was made up of Duros who worked in the starshipwrights which filled The Blinders district. (WOA19)

Sahr

this stunning female was a pirate worked with Larken aboard the Pillage, during the height of the New Order. Sahr, Larken, and their partners, Druug and Bak, once tried to attack the lowly freighter known as Kizbon's Box. They were unaware that it was actually an Interceptor-class Helix freighter, more than well-enough armed to handle the pirates. Two of Larken's ships were destroyed before he and Sahr were forced to surrender. She later revealed that she was in love with the owner of the Kizbon's Box, and had joined Larken's group in order to exact revenge. (SWJ5)

Sahreel

this Imperial Admiral served under Moff Nile Owen, and commanded the Star Destroyer Impending Doom during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TA)

Sahrumba

this Dug was a member of Sebolto's gang during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Sahrumba and his younger brothers, Nahrunba and Jahrunba, worked as smugglers during their employment with Sebolto, transporting death sticks from Tatooine to Malastare. The Pixelito Grand Council issued a bounty for their capture, and Jango Fett managed to capture all three brothers during his attempt to meet with Sebolto. (BH)

Sahsahlah

this was an Old Corellian term meaning "the promised land" or "the place of wise fools." It was used in conversations where your opinion differed from someone else's, and they wanted to indicate that you were not going to get your way. (SWJ7)

Sai

this was the term used by the Jedi Knights of the Old Republic to describe a Force-assisted jump, employed to evade an attack on the legs during lightsaber combat. (VD2)

Sai Cha

this was one of the many "marks of contact" defined by the Jedi Masters of the Old Republic. Derived from the ancient words for "separate" and "head", sai cha meant the beheading of one's opponent. The use of sai cha was restricted to those points in battle when the situation was deadly serious or threatening, or when an opponent was considered too dangerous to engage in prolonged struggle. (SWI62)

Sai Tok

this was the more dangerous of the "marks of contact" defined by the Jedi Knights of the Old Republic, both for the Jedi and for their opponent. Literally, sai tok meant the bisection of an opponent's body. This was considered a form of butchery by many Jedi Masters, and represented a Sith-like desire to utterly destroy an opponent. It was to be used on in the most extreme situations, and required a Jedi to meditate on the necessity of avoiding it in the future. (SWI62)

Sai-Ani Kanna

this Cerean bounty hunter and assassin was active during the last years of the Old Republic. Although he was a skilled hunter, Kanna had grown tired of killing, and hated much of the tedium involved with his line of work. At one point in his career, Kanna had been forced to kill a Jedi Knight, an act that he was neither proud of nor wished to repeat. After a job on Rodia, Kanna had briefly considered giving up his career as an assassin, having finally tired of the killing. He arrived on Cularin to meet a contact about a possible job in the wake of the deaths of twelve Jedi Knights, all of whom had been killed in recent days. Much to his dismay, he had been contacted by a wealthy human who needed his skills as an assassin. His mood brightened slightly when he learned that he was to put his skills to use in protecting eleven key Cularin figures from being killed; Kanna had been hired to stop other assassins. These individuals had been working to keep the Cularin System free, and had become targets of certain unscrupulous organizations. He eagerly took the job, vowing to keep his work secret from the eleven unsuspecting targets. (LFCW)

Sai'da

this B'omarr monk befriended Han Solo while the smuggler was held in Jabba the Hutt's palace, shortly after being released from his carbonite block by Princess Leia. Sai'da considered himself a historian, and longed for information about the outside world, especially the Galactic Civil War. (JHS)

Saiga

this was one of the many names given to female Bothans. In the Bothan language, it meant "wealthy" - or, more precisely, bejeweled." (GCG, WOTC)

Saiga Bre'lya

this Bothan female was one of the New Republic Intelligence agents sent to meet Major Showalter aboard the Queen of Empire, during the transfer of the Yuuzhan Vong priestess Elan to Coruscant. She had been working on Ord Mantell before being assigned to the mission. The mission was compromised by a source internal to the New Republic, and the Peace Brigade infiltrated the ship. Two members of the Peace Brigade contacted Showolter before Saiga and her partner, Jode Tee, and posed as the NRI agents. Jode and Saiga arrived just after the false agents, and a firefight broke out. Both Jode Tee and Saiga Bre'lya were shot and killed in the struggle. (HT)

Saijo

this planet was once the site of an Alliance base, during the early stages of the Galactic Civil War. It was here that the Tofs made their final stand against the New Republic, shortly after the Battle of Endor. Despite Imperial backing from Lumiya, the Tofs were defeated. (NEGC, MC93, MC107)

Sail Barge

this was a form of huge, repulsorlift pleasurecraft which could be used over water, sand, or any relatively flat surface. Their repulsorlifts could move them along at speeds of 100 kilometers an hour, with a maximum ceiling of 10 meters. One of the most popular sail barges was produced by Ubrikkian Industries during the New Order, and was made even more popular because Jabba the Hutt bought one for his personal use while on Tatooine. At thirty meters in length, the Ubrikkian barge required a crew of 26 to fly, and could handle up to 500 passengers and 2,000 metric tons of cargo. It was armed with a single heavy blast cannon. A sail barge was the preferred mode of transportation used by the Hutts, since it allowed them to transport their huge bulk in comfort, while they were surrounded by their retainers. Jabba's sail barge, known as the Khetanna, was destroyed when Luke Skywalker and Han Solo escaped from the Sarlacc pit. Bogga the Hutt had a spaceworthy sail barge that he used to travel through the Stenness system. (ROTJ, TOJ, SWSB, NEGV)

Sailor's Union

this union was formed on the planet Lamaredd, when several beings of non-human origins discovered that they were an invaluable part of Hugo Bartyn's illicit seafood business. Bartyn himself was a pro-human bigot, but couldn't discount the fact that many of the Mon Calamari and Quarren he imported to Lamaredd were exceptionally skilled mechanics and technicians. When these technicians realized that they were the only reason much of Bartyn's ocean-going fleet was still operational, they decided to form a bloc and demand a larger portion of the profits. Their ranks were augmented by the handful of non-human ship captains working for Bartyn, and the Sailors' Union was founded when Sirrik Olyeg joined their group. She organized work stoppages and managed to channel the anger of the non-humans toward Bartyn himself. The base of operations for the Union was moved to the settlement of Farsands, on Jotsen's Island, and the Union remained a powerful force for many centuries on Lamaredd. Over time, the Union began accepting human members, despite its origins as a protest against the human treatment of aliens on Lamaredd. Centuries after its formation, the Sailors' Union found itself at the center of a whirlwind, after the predations of Hugo Bartyn were revealed to the population of Bartyn's Landing. When Guthur Bartyn ceded control of Bartyn Gourmet Delicacies, control of the operation was passed to the Sailors' Union. (GMR7)

Sair

this was one of the most common male names among the Corellian population. (GMR9)

Sai'Torr Kal Fas

this female Saurin was the bodyguard of her cousin, the Saurin droid trader Hrchek Kal Fas. She was an accomplished warrior, and has been willing to teach battle skills to those who prove themselves worthy. (CCG)

Sajak

this was the Dradan word for "food." (DOE)

Sajan

this was a common name among the Chev race. (UANT)

Sajax Astiax

this was a noted figure in the history of the Anx race. (GMR7)

Sajsh

this lizard-like being maintained a curio shop on Treasure Ship Row, and was supposedly the contact Grand Admiral Thrawn had for getting into Black Sun. He used Haber Trel to contact Sajsh, who was supposed to handle a "cargo" for Borbor Crisk. Sajsh was from an unknown species, and had a three-forked tongue. He referred to his right hand as his "killhand." (TFE)

Sajun

this frozen ball of rock was the fifth and outermost planet in the Colavas System. It was orbited by a single moon. (SWMW)

Sakai

this Imperial Moff was in control of Thuris Sector during the Galactic Civil War. (GG9)

Sakanga Shai

this Yuuzhan Vong warrior was stationed aboard the Baanu Miir during the invasion of the known galaxy. Sakanga Shai was one of the oldest Yuuzhan Vong onboard the ship, nad had a mummy-like pallor to his skin and scars. (EVR)

Sakhisakh

this Noghri, a member of the Tlakh'sar clan, served as one of Leia Organa-Solo's bodyguards on her trip to the Bothan homeworld of Bothawui, during her investigation of the Bothan financial situation during the Caamas Incident. He also traveled with the Solos to Pakrik Major and Minor, during their attempted vacation at the height of the build-up of ships near Bothawui. (SOP, VOF)

Saki

this was another name for the planet Sakiya. (ANT)

Saki Prime

this aging, red star was orbited by the planet Saki, which was also known as Sakiya. (MBS)

Sakins

this man served as the Presider of Vannix, up until the point when Coruscant fell to the Yuuzhan Vong. Upon hearing of the loss of Coruscant, Presider Sakins looted the planetary treasury and took his aides, his family, and his mistress and fled the planet. Sakins' departure left Vannix without a leader and virtually bankrupt. (EL2)

Sakirab

this was the code phrase used to recall TIE Fighters to their base in Revos, on Storinal. It was the name of the bunker controller's daughter. (WS)

Sakiya

this planet was the homeworld of the Sakiyan race. Note that this planet is name Saki in the Alien Anthology. Sakiya was a tropical world, located near the center of Hutt Space. Much of its landmass was covered with jungles and marshes, but it also had open stretches of savannah and hardwood forests, giving it a much nicer appearance than other humid worlds. It was orbited by a single, large moon, and the interaction of this moon with Sakiya's own gravity produced regular tides and helped evenly distribute the seasonal variations. (E1A5, ANT, MBS)

Sakiyan

a race of humanoids native to the planet Sakiya, Sakiyans were characterized by their deep, dark skin color and their huge crania. While black, purple, and red skin colors were mst prevelant, a pale-skinned subspecies was also known to exist. They also have pointed ears, giving them an almost devil-like appearance. Most Sakiyans have the ability to see into the infrared spectrum, and have keen senses. They are known for their skills as hunters, and have been sought out for employment as trackers and assassins. During much of the Old Republic, there was considerable debate on the classification of Sakiyans as near-human or alien. Imperial scientists firmly established them as alien, but could only cite the differences in the brain structure of the Sakiyans as the basis for their decision. Over the millennia of their civilization, the Sakiyans have resisted or survived invasions, from the ancient Sith to the Drackmarians. This made them wary and suspicious of the galactic community. The musculature and ligament-attachment angles of the Sakiyan body gave them incredible strength and agility, making a Sakiyan about half again as strong as a comparable human. (CCG, CCG9, E1A5, ANT, UANT, MBS)

Sakiyan

this was the name given to the native language of the Sakiyan people. (ANT)

Sakresh

a game played with a specialized deck of electronic cards. The object was build the strongest hand, in terms of rank. The highest rank was a perfect pyramid with clusters. (GG10)

Sal

this was one of the most common surnames found among the human population of Corellia. (GMR9)

Sal

this was one of the most common male names among the Corellian population. (GMR9)

Sal

this Shyriiwook word was used as the prefix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "lightning", "storm", or "thunder", and could be combined with one or more suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Sal Olbeg

this Kathol Republic senator from Pitann was a political rival of Sho'ban Do. He was outspokenly against the use of gladiator droids for entertainment. Olbeg, like Do, was a near-human, but was genetically engineered for life on Dayark. His nostrils were capable of closing at will, his feet were extremely wide, and his fingered had webbing between them. Olbeg was particularly helpful to the crew of the FarStar, who were stranded on Dayark after being mistaken for the Lance of Endor. He helped them expose Do's plans to build an army of gladiator droids for use against his political rivals. (KO)

Sal Orbego

this was the name of a noted Pa'lowick. (UANT)

Sal Vhe'starn

this city was located on the eastern continent of the planet Bothawui. (SPG)

Sal, Randil

a native of Corellia, Randil married into the Solo family when he wed Tiion Solo. The union resulted in the birth of a son, Thrackan, but Randil died about a year after his birth. (TPS)

Sal, Tiion Gama

this was the name of Thrackan Sal-Solo's mother, according to the eBook Ylesia, contradicting the name provided in The Paradise Snare. (Y)

Sala Natu

one of the survivors of the Battle of Hoth, Sala Natu was evacuated on the Bright Hope. Natu was a cold-weather survival specialist, and was chosen to be one of the leaders of the group which jettisoned from the transport in one of the remaining escape pods. (TBH)

Salaban, Geng

this man, a native of the planet Bestine, was a member of the New Republic Navy. As a Captain, he served as the commanding officer aboard the Allegiance, when it was dispatched to support the diplomatic mission to Adumar. He had recently gained this promotion from a position aboard the Battle Dog. (SOA)

Salacious Crumb

Jabba's ratlike retainer, he is a Kowakian monkey-lizard. Salacious has an obnoxious laugh, and has the annoying habit of mimicking what is said around him. Crumb was a resident of the space station Kwenn when Jabba the Hutt visited there. Crumb escaped a group of Mantilorrian rat catchers by stowing away on Jabba's starship. He sustained himself by eating Jabba's leftovers, until Jabba discovered the lizard-monkey and tried to eat him. Bidlo Kwerve and Bib Fortuna both tried to capture Salacious Crumb, but Crumb dumped Jabba's food on Kwerve and fled to the rafters. Kwerve tried to shoot Crumb, but only food squirted out of the gun, landing on Fortuna. Jabba's laughter resounded throughout the ship, and from that point on the Hutt kept Crumb around for a daily dose of laughter. Salacious Crumb knew that the day he couldn't make Jabba laugh was the day he died. He searched Jabba's palaces and townhomes for new jokes. He even waylaid strangers and tried to set them up for a meeting with Jabba, just to give the crimelord a laugh. It is believed that Salacious Crumb died when Jabba's sail barge exploded at the Pit of Carkoon. Note that the Return of the Jedi expansion set for the Star Wars Trading Card Game gives Salacious the middle initial B. (ROTJ, MTS, TJP, TCG9)

Salaktori Hunters Guild

this freelance bounty hunters' guild was run by the members of House Salaktori, and was active during the height of the New Order. It was one of the oldest bounty-hunting guilds in the galaxy, dating back well into the Old Republic. The Guild's leader, Jeslor Salaktori, was known as a strong man who stood up for his member hunters to the Imperial officers who confronted them. It was a known fact that no being - hunter or not - who killed a member of the Salaktori guild has lived more than a year after the incident. (GG10)

Salaktori, Jeslor

this man was the leader of the Salaktori Hunters Guild and House Salaktori during the Galactic Civil War. He brooked no obstruction to his hunters, and stood up to Imperial governors and Moffs to defend his members. He was also rumored to have been the driving force behind the collapse of three rival houses. (GG10)

Salamander

this New Republic Nebulon-B frigate was dispatched to Krann to recover Vanel and her Imperial undercover agents. It was rumored that the Republic responded to a tip from the House of Tagge, which was working to gain a foothold in the nova crystal mining on the planet. (TSK)

Salamini Chemical Munitions

Saldith

this Ithorian surname was believed to mean "lichen", according to historian who studied the Ithorian race. (GCG)

Saldith

this Ithorian was a Jedi Master, during the years leading up to the Stark Hyperspace Wars. (SHW)

Saleeh

this man was one of the many Jedi Knights who gathered on Ruusan to fight against Lord Kaan and the Brotherhood of Darkness. A friend and supporter of Lord Hoth, Lord Saleeh was killed in one of the early struggles against the Sith. (JVS)

Salek

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Salek Weet

Salek was Noa Briqualon's partner when the two of them set off to see the universe, some six years before the Battle of Naboo. Their maiden voyage, however, was cut short when their crystal oscillator shorted out in the Monsua Nebula, cutting off power to their starship and causing them to make an emergency landing on the moon Endor. When Salek determined the cause of their forced landing, he set out to find another oscillator. However, he was captured by Terak and tortured, for Terak believed that Salek might know the source of "The Power." Salek died in Terak's dungeon. Their ship was never found, although Salek's father, the noted kloo horn soloist Jimke Weet, spent every last credit he owed trying to locate them. (BFE, HNN4)

Salek-Come-Home

this HoloNet registry was established by Jimke Weet, during his four-year search for his son, Salek. Jimke set up the registry so that any being who had information on Salek's whereabouts could reach him almost immediately. (HNN4)

Saleucami

this planet, noted for its unusual, bulbous plantlife, was the site of an intense battle during the final days of the Clone Wars. Saleucami, a name which meant "oasis" in the native language, was an arid world marked by volcanic calderas formed by powerful meteor strikes. This meant that the many oases found on the planet were filled with magma, not water. Although many saw this as a problem, the natives used the available magma as a source of power. Saleucami was singled out by Supreme Chancellor Palpatine, during the last stages of the Clone Wars, as one of the Outer Rim worlds that would be targetted by the Grand Army of the Republic. According to Palpatine, the worlds of Mygeeto, Felucia, and Saleucami were a "triad of evil" that served as Separatist bastions. Much of his statements were true, as Sora Bulq had established a cloning facility on the planet, where he was producing clones of the Morgukai warriors. Ostensibly, Palpatine ordered troops to Saleucami and several other worlds as a way to end the Outer Rim Sieges and bring the Clone Wars to a halt. In reality, it was just another ruse to spread the Jedi too thin to support each other. Jedi Master Stass Allie led a contingent of clone troopers into the fighting, which lasted for many days before the Republic seemed to emerge victorious. However, Palpatine issued the Order Sixty-Six command to the clones, who then turned their fire on Master Allie and the Jedi. (OWS, LEV, RT)

Salforo

this plant, native to the planet Kirdo III, is a thick-bodied plant which is eaten by the chooba. (GG4)

Salfur

a New Republic entrepreneur, he maintained Salfur's Trading Post on the forest moon of Endor. Although business was initially good during the years immediately following the Battle of Endor, Salfur saw profits tail off as travel into Moddell Sector became more and more hazardous. (DFRSB, GMR9)

Salfur's Trading Post

this large landing area and trading post was set up by the New Republic near Bright Tree Village on Endor's forest moon, during the years immediately following the Battle of Endor. It was set above the forest floor about ten meters on huge columns, and was surrounded by a force field that kept the moon's indigenous lifeforms out at night. The post was manned on an as-needed basis, and staffing levels correspond to the New Republic's visits to the moon. Although business was initially good during the years immediately following the Battle of Endor, Salfur saw profits tail off as travel into Moddell Sector became more and more hazardous. (DFRSB, GMR9)

Salin Corridor

this hyperspace trade route was one of the largest in the Outer Rim Territories, running along the outside skirt of the Rim and only coming back toward the Core near Nwarcol Point, where it connected with the Sisar Run. (SSR)

Salin Glek

this Quarren was a lieutenant with the Alliance, and was part of the team supporting Admiral Ackbar during Project Shantipole. Glek was also a traitor, inserted into the Alliance by Bane Nothos so that he could leak information on the progress of Shantipole to Nothos. Glek grew up in the bowels of a Calamarian floating city, and thoroughly despises the Mon Calamari. He joined the Alliance and quickly rose through the ranks, all the while planning to make the Mon Calamari pay for his suffering. He was approached by Nothos and accepted the Imperial's offer of work. When Glek realized that Ackbar was about to send off the B-Wing prototypes for manufacture, Glek notified Nothos to begin his attack. Glek fled Shantipole by stealing the Out Runner, and was not heard from after the defeat of Nothos. (SFS, EGC)

Salinrerian Sea

this was one of the many distinct areas of ocean found on the planet Mon Calamari. Shortly before the Battle of Naboo, a seismic disaster occurred in a deep rift in this sea, which was later attributed to the terrorist group Calamasthon Defiance. The event caused untold environmental damage, and resulted in a perpetual rain in the immediate area. Slaag Lado was eventually captured by Jango Fett and brought to Mon Calamari for questioning in the event. (BH)

Salis D'aar

Bakura's capital city and the Imperial seat, Salis D'aar was located on the southwestern coast of Prytis, at the headwaters of two major rivers. The city was designed to imitate the vista of stars and planets in the system, with its streets and major buildings forming roughly concentric circles when mapped out. The center of the circle was the Bakur Complex. Each district within the city had different lighting schemes: the inner circle had pale blue lights, the middle district had pale yellow lights, and the outer circle had deep red lights. (TB, TBSB)

Salis D'aar Academy

located in the capital city of Salis D'aar, this was the most prestigious university found on the planet Bakura. (TBSB)

Salisbury

this was a major city-state found on the planet Ralltiir. (SWJ9)

Salishh Tilloman

this Devaronian grew up as an orphan, although he developed a number of expensive and refined tastes during his adolescence. He eventually was forced to find his way off Devaron in order to meet his own exacting standards, but had few marketable skills. He soon found work as a grifter, moving from planet to planet and scamming everyone he came in contact with. He eventually took on several apprentices, to help fill his coffers without doing any "real work." He cared little for the Empire or the New Order, but had no reason to hate it, either. (HR)

Salissians

this bands of mercenaries, distinguished by their black-and-purple thinskin suits, provided their services to Count Dooku and the Confederacy of Independent Systems during the height of the Clone Wars. (MBS)

Salje' Tasha

this female Anzat, distinguished by her silver-white hair and piercing green eyes, was a noted assassin who worked for a variety of clients during the final years of the Old Republic. Her specialty was in political jobs, and she was known to be very picky when it came to her clientele. During the Clone Wars, she was hired by a mysterious agent who provided her with all manner of unusual equipment, including cortosis gauntlets. After she was tracked down by Quinlan Vos, Salje' Tasha revealed that she had been the one who arranged for the murder of former Chancellor Finis Valorum. She then tried to feed from Quinlan's "soup," but the Jedi had other ideas. He used a talent he had learned from Count Dooku - an augmentation to his natural ability to read an object - to learn that it had been Sora Bulq who hired her for the job. Salje' nearly killed Quinlan for taking the knowledge, but Khaleen Hentz stopped her before she could do it. (RT)

Salkeli

this male Rodian was one of the leaders of the Freedom movement, serving Malinza Thanas during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. When the location of the Stack was discovered, it was Salkeli who volunteered to get Jaina Solo to safety. In reality, Salkeli had been working for Blaine Harris all along, and stunned Jaina into submission before bringing her to Harris. He explained to Jaina that Freedom had gotten in too deep, and was about to expose information that was best kept in secrecy. However, when Harris was shot by Cundertol and the plot to subjugate Bakura was exposed, Salkeli was arrested and charged with a wide variety of crimes. Each and every charge was sentenced to jail time, and Salkeli was forced to spend much of the rest of his life in jail. (FH2)

Salla C'airam

this Bergamasque ran an upscale bar and casino which catered to the tastes of the galaxy's most elite beings. In deference to their security, C'airam confiscated the weapons of anyone entering the establishment. In order to unobtrusively detect the presence of a weapon, C'airam kept a group of ergovores near the entrance to the building. The ergovores were purposely denied a steady diet of energy, heightening their ability to sense its presence. (HM)

Sallabas

this name was common among the Kerestian people. (UANT)

Sallap

this species of tree was native to the planet Generis. (COD)

Salliche

this planet is located in the Core. An agrarian world, it houses the headquarters of the Salliche Ag Corporation. The planet is also the site of the Vaults of Narner. (CRO, SWJ2)

Salliche Agricultural Corporation

this Imperial agricultural conglomerate that owned planets in the Yulant, Ruan, and Broest Systems. After the Battle of Endor, the workers on many Salliche Ag planets rebelled against the company by burning fields and destroying hydroponics facilities. In an effort to avoid such rebellion in the future, Salliche Ag replaced much of its workforce with droids. However, after the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy, Salliche Ag began shutting the droids down and welcomed refugees to worlds like Ruan. Salliche Ag claimed to be helping the refugees by giving them shelter in return for their labor, which gave the corporation the ability to claim their produce was truly "handpicked." In reality, Salliche Ag was eliminating their droid workforce in preparation for the Yuuzhan Vong's takeover of the galaxy. If their workforce was organic, the leaders of Salliche Ag believed that they would get preferential treatment from the Yuuzhan Vong. They also planned to offer the now-useless droids to the Vong as a sacrifice and a token of their esteem. (SWJ2, JE)

Salloon

this Muurian transport was part of the smuggler fleet which agreed to supply the Alliance with arms, just prior to the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Salm

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Salm, Horton

a native of Norval II, Salm was a decorated Y-Wing pilot who served the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. He earned the rank of Colonel, and was given command of the Aggressor Wing shortly after the Battle of Endor, and led his Y-Wings during the Battle of Brentaal. After the battle, Salm was promoted to General. A small-statured man who believed in hard work and dedication to his cause, he disdained the exposure and fame given to Rogue Squadron, feeling that the hot-shot X-Wing pilots believed they were superior to Y-Wing pilots. During the hunt for Prince-Admiral Krennel, Salm commanded a B-Wing squadron based on the Moonshadow. (XWES, XWN, IR)

Salmakk

this was one of the more common names given to males of the Mon Calamari race. To the Mon Calamari, this name meant "bright sky". (GCG)

Salmakk

this Mon Calamari was a noted smuggler whose band constructed an outpost on the planet Hoth during the early years of the New Order. The outpost was nearly destroyed when Han Solo and Luke Skywalker traveled to Hoth to see if the planet would serve as a new location for the Alliance's base of operations, in the wake of the Battle of Yavin. Solo had been to Hoth once before, and had considered Salmakk as an equal. However, the bounty on Solo's head was too great for Salmakk to ignore, and he opened fire on them. In an effort to escape, Luke and Han mistakenly flew into the smugglers' base. Trying to survive, Luke used his lightsaber to set off a chain reaction of icy stalactites falling from the ceiling, burying the smugglers and their ships. Salmakk and his smugglers gave up trying to capture Solo, and decided to leave Hoth rather than rebuilding their former base. When the Alliance eventually decided that Hoth would serve as their new base, Salmakk's former outpost became the Alliance's Echo Base. Salmakk disappeared for several years, but never left the Anoat Sector and eventually reappeared in a partnership with the Mugarri pirate, Clabbrun the Younger. Unknown to the authorities, the pair was actually under the employment of Figg Excavations. Salmakk and Clabburn were eventually apprehended and questioned about their activities, but were later released in exchange for information on their contacts within FiggEx. (EGA, 3D2, WOA34)

Saloch

this is the fifth planet in the Jiroch System, and was one member of the Triumverate, along with Jiroch-Reslia and Kalok. It was colonized by the Tunroth. This world was sometimes referred to as Jiroch-Saloch, on certain starcharts. (GG12, UANT)

Saloch 2

this was one of several Tunroth worlds caught in the Reslian Plague. It was freed from the Lortan fanatics by the Imperial forces led by Captain Tessra and the Abrogator. (MBF)

Saloor

this being was one of more than 72 individuals who were murdered by the Nikto assassin Ma'w'shiye, after the Nikto deserted from the Alliance. (SWJ4)

Saloth

this planet was located in the Minos Cluster, and was the homeworld of the Triparates, at least according to Kaird. (MJH)

SalPivo, Tuga

this Corellian was a jack of all trades who could never keep a steady job. He was living on Poytta shortly before the Battle of Yavin. He was known to Jabba the Hutt for his expertise with explosives, and was hired to take out the t'landa Til leading Colony Eight, just before the Battle of Ylesia. (RD)

Salporin

childhood Wookiee friend of Chewbacca's who was killed when the Imperials found Leia hiding on Kashyyyk. He was killed in Leia's defense. (HTTE)

Sal-Solo, Thrackan

Han Solo's first cousin, being the son of Han's father's sister, Thrackan looked and sounded very much like Han himself. Thrackan was a little heavier-set, with a little more gray in his hair, and a beard. As children, Thrackan continually bullied Han, until he was able to sell Han to Garris Shrike. Thrackan claimed to have been a highly-ranked Imperial officer in the Corellian Sector during the time of the Empire, but he was actually just an employee of the Imperial Governor on Corellia. He dreamed of attending the Imperial Academy, but Han's dishonorable discharge put a black mark on the Solo name. Nevertheless, Thrackan showed promise, and was the heir-apparent for the position of Diktat when he supposedly died. This was about the time Han became a smuggler. Thrackan actually went underground, and began plotting the secession of the Corellian Sector from the enforced interspecies relations the Empire demanded. When the New Republic emerged, Thrackan continued to remain hidden, and built the Human League as the beginnings of his pro-human plans. He became the League's Hidden Leader, and he emerged from his hiding just after he initiated the intra-species wars in the Corellian Sector, just prior to the Corellian Trade Summit. With Chief of State Leia Organa-Solo confined to the Sector, Thrackan announced the secession of the Sector from the New Republic, and declared himself Diktat. Using technology he didn't understand, Thrackan erected a huge interdiction field around the Corellian System, centered at Centerpoint Station. In the confusion which surrounded the inter-species fighting and the isolation from the Republic, Thrackan captured Han and held him prisoner, hoping to use him to maintain control of Leia. Thrackan continually harangued his cousin, lashing out in drunken fits of rage. He even pitted Han against Selonians in forced battle, just for pleasure. This worked against him, for Han and the Selonian - Dracmus - eventually escaped by working together. Their escape was soon followed by an assault from the New Republic, which was bolstered by Bakuran forces, that managed to penetrate the interdiction field erected in the sector. Feeling his fragile plans collapsing, Thrackan ordered the kidnapping of Jaina, Jacen, and Anakin Solo. This action also backfired, as it was the children, with the help of Chewbacca, Ebrohim, and the Drallian Duchess Marcha, who discovered the key to the planetary repulsors hidden within the planets of the Corellian System. They also slipped through his grasp, during the battle between the Sacorrian Triad and the New Republic. Thrackan gave chase, but the children managed to damage his ship enough to allow it to be captured by the Intruder's tractor beam. Thrackan was placed in jail and eventually convicted of a multitude of crimes. After spending eight years at the Dorthas Tal prison on Selonion, Thrackan was given a chance to prove his rehabilitation by helping the archaeologists aboard Centerpoint Station discover how to reactivate it. He later was part of the team assigned to discover if the station could be used as a weapon against the Yuuzhan Vong. When it was learned that the Yuuzhan Vong had attacked Fondor instead of Corellia, Thrackan and his workforce insisted that Anakin Solo use his connection to the Station and his abilities with the Force to fire on the Yuuzhan Vong fleet at Fondor. Anakin refused, so Thrackan took the shot himself. Unfortunately, the shot was inaccurate, and destroyed much of the Hapan fleet which was supporting the New Republic. It also grazed the planet Fondor itself, and wiped out the Yuuzhan Vong armada. Despite the political repercussions from the Hapes Consortium, Thrackan Sal-Solo was portrayed as the hero of the Battle of Fondor for taking the shot which caused so much destruction to the alien forces. With the ouster of Governor-General Marcha, Thrackan suddenly found himself a leading candidate to lead the Corellian Sector as an independent entity. His actions, despite their failure to do any good, made him something of a hero in the Corellian Sector, and gained him the election to Governor General. He clamped down on the security measures in the sector, assuming command of the Centerpoint Party and striving to ensure that the sector was not compromised by the New Republic or the Yuuzhan Vong. However, in the wake of the Second Battle of Coruscant, Thrackan Sal-Solo threw his support to the Yuuzhan Vong, and offered to sign a "treaty of friendship" with them in return for the recognition of the Corellian Sector's neutrality. Rather than allow Thrackan to return to Corellia, however, Supreme Overlord Shimrra appointed him

President of Ylesia and the Commander in Chief of the Peace Brigade. Unfortunately, Thrackan was captured by the New Republic on Ylesia, where he also learned that the Centerpoint Party had exiled him from the Corellian Sector. After being incarcerated by the Republic, Thrackan was extradited back to Corellia to stand trial. (AC, AS, SC, JE, BP, REC, Y, NEGC)

Sal-Solo, Tiion

Thrackan Sal-Solo's mother, Tiion was a reclusive widow who doted on her son. She and Thrackan lived in a veritable fortress, with rigid security measures. The Sal-Solos were never social, and did their best to keep people out. Tiion was a member of the Solo family, and married Randil Sal about three years before Thrackan was born. She was far from attractive, especially in her old age. (TPS)

Salt

this word was used by New Republic starfighter pilots to designate a medium-sized Yuuzhan Vong assault cruiser. (DTR)

Salt Mynock

this unusual subspecies of mynock was native to the planet Lok. (SWI62)

Salt Pan

this unit of measurement was used by the Priapulins. Roughly equivalent to 1.2 kilometers, the salt pan measurement was believed to have derived from the Priapulins' exploration of dried sea beds. (GMR8)

Salta

according to Corellian mythology, Salta was the giant who supported the weight of the planet as it moved through space. His brother, Yorell, saw that Salta was growing tired, and built a platinum cast into which the planet could be placed. (MJH)

Saltan valoramosa n telvalk mord

this Old Corellian phrase translated into Basic as "assumption is the first step into a shallow grave." (TFNR)

Salted Wound

Saltfish

this fish was native to the oceans of Kabal, where it was harvested as a food source. (GMR1)

Salthia

this plant produces a tasty bean which was often served with curdled milk. Salthia beans were also mashed into a spreadable paste. (TNR, DW)

Saltnut

this was a legume that was grown on the planet Corellia. It was often ground into a thick, butter-like paste that could be spread on bread. By itself, saltnut butter was quite tasty. However, its taste was dramatically altered by certain jams and jellies, including bluefruit jam. When these two spreads were combined in a sandwich, the resulting taste was said to gag a sand cat. (MJH)

Saluc

this Mon Calamari was second in command of the merchant transport Dewback's Burden when it was attacked and captured near Bhuna Sound. (T5)

Salus Corporation

this Rodia-based manufacturer created Stalker battle armor and the Tangler Elite 1 tangle gun specifically for Rodian bounty hunters, but would sell their equipment to just about any bounty hunter. Salus stole the design of the DF-D1 from the Golan Arms FC-1 flechette launcher, in the hopes of gaining a contract with the Empire. However, the DF-D1 was plagued by numerous flaws and accidents, and Salus was eventually nationalized by Imperial Munitions. (SWJ3, HR, AEG)

Salutation to the Force

this was a meditative exercise practiced by the Jedi Knights, allowing them to achieve a greater communion with the Force. It was a combination of postures that started with the body arched upward, followed by a deep squat that led to a leg-extended stretch to the rear. (MBS)

Saluup Fing

this Yuuzhan Vong commander was the first to appear before Warmaster Nas Choka and announce that Zonama Sekot had traveled across the galaxy to appear near Coruscant, some five years after the alien invasion of the galaxy began. The Yuuzhan Vong had spent years transforming Coruscant into a likeness of their long-lost homeworld of Yuuzhan'tar, only to have Zonama Sekot set off a chain reaction of seismic events that damaged or destroyed most of it. (UF)

Salva

this Imperial Lieutenant was placed in charge of the tours given at the Tol Ado prison facility, during the height of the New Order. Imperial Governor Parnell was so confident in the security of the prison, that he regularly invited beings in for tours of the prison. Salva's job was to escort tourists from the main hangar to the reception area, then take them on a guided tour of the prison. (JH)

this planet was located seven kiloparsecs from Damualer Triac. (GG9)

Samdew

this man, a native of the planet Typha-Dor, was a member of Shalini's resistance group during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Mezdec claimed that it was Samdew who had been planning to undermine the group's efforts by transmitting the exact location of their base on TY44, just before Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker arrived in the Uziel System to mediate a cease-fire. Mezdec claimed that he had awakened to find Samdew at the communications station, and shot him with a blaster to stop him. In the ensuing firefight, Rajana shot Samdew in the chest, killing him instantly. It was later revealed that it was Mezdec, not Samdew, who was the traitor, and that Mezdec had tried to kill Samdew to cover his tracks. Four other members of their group were killed when the fire systems activated in their quarters, shutting down their oxygen supply. Their deaths were also attributed to Mezdec. (JQ7)

Sami

this Selkath was one of the many scientists who worked at the Hrakert Station facility, beneath the waters of the planet Mana'an, during the era of the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Sami

this feline being was one of the leaders of the Alliance cell located in the Cantros System, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Sami was also enamored of Minka, and was glad when she returned from Saijo safely. (MC93)

Samnt

this man lived on the planet Dantooine some 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. He fell in love with the widow Elise, after she lost her husband and her droid, C8-42. (KOTOR)

Samol

this Alliance transport group was present when the Alliance attacked the SpecWar manufacturing facility during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Samp

meaning "mean-spirited" but generally implying an affectionate tone, this name was common among Gungan females. (GCG)

Sampo's

this restaurant, owned by Vabrick Axo and located in Chasin City on the planet Commenor, was consistently rated as one of the city's finest restaurants. It was best-known for its assortment and preparation of aquatic gmefowl and vegetables. However, during the year leading up to the Clone Wars,

Sampo's suffered from a planet-wide shortage of foodstuffs, and was forced to severely curtail its operations. (HNN5)

Samt, Devlor

this Imperial scientist adopted Voegliss as his own son, after the death of his natural son. (HR)

Samuac

this race of near-humans evolved on the moon of New Kiske. The remote location of New Kiske kept the Samuac out of Imperial notice. (SSR)

Samuac Tree Code

this was the spoken language of the Samuac people. (GMR9)

Samuel

this was the only name used by the leader of the small outpost that was visited by Darca Nyl, during the Clone Wars. Samuel had discovered a rich lode of ore in the crust of a remote planet, and set up a mining operation that made him wealthy and powerful, at least in his own circle of friends. Just before Nyl's arrival, Samuel's daughter Leddar had been kidnapped, and Darca Nyl had interfered with the capture of one of the suspects. Samuel himself was an immense, bald-headed man who was distinguished by the minimalistic cybernetic prosthesis that replaced his right arm. Samuel agreed to drop any charges against Nyl, so long as he helped locate his daughter and bring the kidnappers to justice. He also agreed to provide Darca with information on the Lycan Dark Jedi he was tracking. Leddar had been captured by Royce, who was once Samuel's business partner. Royce was holding the girl in revenge for Samuel's actions, which involved obtaining complete ownership of the planet and its resources, despite the fact that both Samuel and Royce had found the world together. Although Darca Nyl managed to defuse the situation, he exposed Samuel's true nature to Leddar. Samuel, for his part, finally realized that Leddar was the most important thing in his life. (T21)

Samvil

this was the name given to the demon who ruled the underworld, according to Sakiyan religious beliefs. (MBS)

San Hill

this humanoid Muun served as the Chairman of the InterGalactic Banking Clan, just before the onset of the Clone Wars. His pale skin was the result of living indoors for many decades, monitoring the financial and economic position of the IBC and ensuring that it continued to grow. Just prior to the Battle of Geonosis, San Hill agreed to support the war effort of the Separatists, but reminded Count Dooku that he was not going to enter an exclusive agreement with the Separatists. San Hill correctly surmised that the IBC could gain considerable profits by providing loans and financial services to the Old Republic as well as the Confederacy of Independent Systems, making huge sums of credits by helping newly-independent planets mint their own currencies. He also made a number of arrangements with the criminal underground on Aargau, in an effort to supplement the income of the Separatists. It was also discovered that it was San Hill who traveled to Kaleesh, in the wake of the Huk Wars, to seek out General Grievous. After secretly arranging for Grievous to be badly injured in a shuttle crash - Hill knew that Grievous was too seasoned a warrior to fall in combat, and ensured even after the crash that Grievous would be virtually unable to recover without help - Hill arrived on Kalee to "rescue" the Kaleesh by funding the resurrection of their society. Grievous agreed to accompany San Hill, because he wanted his people to survive the injustice that had befallen them at the hands of the Jedi. Hill then brought Grievous' body to Geonosis, where it was transformed into a part-alien, part-droid monstrosity. During the Battle of Muunilinst, San Hill hid in his offices while letting Durge do the dirty work of fighting for the planet's freedom. Just before the First Battle of Coruscant and the end of the Clone Wars, San Hill and the other leaders of the Confederacy were whisked away to Utapau by General Grievous, in order to ensure their safety. After hiding on Utapau, the Separatists were taken to Mustafar. It was there, after Darth Sidious finally lured Anakin Skywalker to the Dark Side of the Force, that the Separatist leaders met their deaths. Skywalker was dispatched to Mustafar by Sidious himself, with orders to eliminate them. Skywalker quickly kill San Hill before setting off after the rest of the Separatist leaders. (HNN4, SWDB, OWS, LEV, IS3)

San, Kurth

this burly, dark-skinned man was a member of the Old Republic military, and served as the Base Commander for the garrison in the city of Soboll during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Whiel stationed on Cularin, Major San was loyal to his commanding officer, Jir Tramsig, and would do anything Tramsig ordered. (LFC)

Sanani

this was the name of the voorpak which was kept as a pet by Ryoo and Pooja Naberrie. (SWDB)

Sanasiki

this ancient Echani warrior hunted down and killed the assassin Nelinik, many millennia before the Battle of Yavin, for the assassination of a High Protector. Sanasiki's blade, which had cortosis woven into the steel, was preserved as an icon of Echani dedication. (KOTOR)

Sanbra

this planet was the capital of Sanbra Sector, and was located in the De'elta System. (GG12)

Sanchango

this game of skill and luck was popular on the agricultural world of Chrona during the early years of the New Republic. (SWJ12)

Sancretti Arms and Munitions, Interstellar

this Rodian weapons manufacturer produced a number of cryogenic weapons. (FOP)

Sanctuary

codename of one of the Alliance's oldest safe world colonies, the name was used even before the official declaration of rebellion. The planet was then a refuge for persecuted religious pacifists; they agreed to join the Alliance so long as they did not have to take up arms. The planet is home to a huge variety of fish and seaweed. (RASB)

Sanctuary

this was the Ferroan name for the planet Mobus, used after the mobile planet Zonama Sekot took up residence in orbit around Mobus. (FH3)

Sanctuary Moon

this was another name for the Forest Moon of Endor, used by the Old Republic after setting the entire moon aside as a nature reserve. Scientists of the Old Republic hoped that the designation would keep tourists and corporate interests from interfering with the natural development of its sentient species. (ROTJ, IWST)

Sanctuary Pipeline

this extension of the Sivistri Trace hyperspace lane was formed by the Empire, so that it could bring supplies and workers to the Forest Moon of Endor, during the construction of the second Death Star. Because travel through the Inner Zuma region of the galaxy was dangerous, the Sanctuary Pipeline was built using non-mass S-thread boosters in hyperspace all along the Pipeline, which provided continual information on the next point along the path. Maintenance crews were hired to clear the realspace path of the Pipeline of debris, ensuring that there were no unknown mass shadows being projected into hyperspace. The Sanctuary Pipeline required near-continual maintenance and upkeep, but allowed the Empire to regularly supply the crews working on the second Death Star. After the Battle of Endor, the Sanctuary Pipeline fell into disrepair, as natural disasters and the theft of the S-thread boosters left large portions of it unnavigable. (GMR9)

Sanctum Arcti

located in the city of Calius Saj Leeloo, this was one of the most famous of all structures ever erected on the planet Berchest. It miraculously survived an intense earthquake which shook the city, shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars. (HNN4)

Sanctum Sanctorum

this was the name given to the modified A4 Juggernaut located at the heart of the Bhishana Bhaga, which served as the primary workshop and laboratory of Min Erthen. It was adapted to have a droid crew, with a pilot droid handling movement if the vehicle ever had to leave the ship. Six ASP-series labor droids did the manual labor aboard the craft, which was protected by polarized energy shielding. (WOA18)

Sand Art

this was a form of artwork developed by the Bith people. (RAG)

Sand Bar, The

this was the only local tavern in the outpost location known as The Puddle. (HAS)

Sand Bat

this creature, native to Tatooine, produced a poisonous venom used by Tusken Raiders to tip their gaderffi sticks. (MC17)

Sand Bear

this large predator was native to the planet Kallistas, and was known to hunt down and devour humans. (GG10)

Sand Beetle

this was a species of scavenging insect that was native to the deserts of Tatooine. (SWI74)

Sand Bunny

a small mammal native to the planet Nam Chorios. (POT)

Sand Burrower

this immense worm inhabited the sands of the desert world of Blenjeel. Although blind, the sand burrower was able to use vibrations to track its prey across the desert. The average sand burrower was large enough to swallow a human in one bite. (JKA)

Sand Cat

this small, feline creature was native to the planet Sullust. (MBS)

Sand Crab Nebula

a galactic nebula that resembles a sand crab. (AS)

Sand Dragon

this was another name for the tailring, which was native to the planet Socorro. (BSS)

Sand Drain

developed on Tatooine and used on desert planets throughout the galaxy, these specialized drainage systems draw away sand from streets and buildings. Like water drains, sand drains help remove unwanted sand which drifted around the cities on desert planets. (E1A8)

Sand Drill

a tool used to dig holes in the sands of Tatooine, it employs a forceful vacuum to blow out extracted sand. (COJ)

Sand Flea

a small creature found in the deserts of many planets, including Nam Chorios, sand fleas often live on the bodies of nerfs. Large specimens of sand fleas make good pets. (POT, GOF1)

Sand Hood

this specialized cloak was used on Tatooine to help desert travelers keep sand and grit out of their noses and mouths. (TG)

Sand Leech

a small, blood-sucking creature found on some desert worlds. (RA2)

Sand Lice

this species of insect, native to the planet Beheboth, took over most of the environment after the planet's water supply dried up. (LTA3, MC66)

Sand Lice

this small, parasitic insect was native to the planet Tatooine, and was known for its ability to resist most drugs and physical forms of destruction. (MC23)

Sand Lightning

encountered on Tatooine, this form of lightning was created when airborne sand built up enough static electricity to give itself a charge. The lightning, which cascaded in sheets, occurred when the sand clouds passed over oppositely-charged areas of dunes. (TG)

Sand Lizard

the flesh of this creature was considered a delicacy by most beings. (LTA2)

Sand Louse

a small, parasite native to Tatooine. (JTH)

Sand Panther

a large, predatory feline native to Corellia, the sand panther had specialized claws that could exude a poison when they cut into flesh. The fur of the sand panther, which was dense yet soft, was prized by hunters, even though it was illegal to kill the creatures. This fur helped mask the sand panther's stalking activities, as it muffled wind and yielded to surrounding obstacles. (TJP, ANT)

Sand Skiff

this open speeder was developed by Ubrikkian Industries to serve as a cargo transport, but many buyers liked the fact that it was designed to accommodate weapons. This adaptability made the Sand Skiff appeal to a wide range of customers. At nine meters in length, it was essentially a stripped-down version of the Bantha II skiff, and had a maximum speed of 250 kilometers per hour. (LAWS)

Sand Skimmer

a one-person repulsorlift disk, the sand skimmer also has a rear-mounted sail to catch the wind. (DCAR)

Sand Sloth

a huge, fur-covered beast of burden native to the planet Annoo. (DCAR)

Sand Snake

this furred snake was native to the planet Geonosis. (BF1)

Sand Tick

this large insect, about the size of a human fist, was native to a number of planets. These creatures lacked true eyes and ears, and relied on their ability to sense vibrations in order to interpret their environment. These insects fed on the blood of mammalian species, burrowing into the thick fur of beasts such as the bantha and feeding for several months before killing the host. An individual tick can survive without blood for up to a year, curling into a ball to await the presence of a new host. Despite their hunger for blood, the most dangerous aspect of a sand tick is its ability to carry and transmit diseases. When the sand tick bites, it injects a small amount of numbing saliva, which can also carry viral and bacterial infections. (WOTC)

Sand Well

found on the planet Socorro, these vast sinkholes formed in the volcanic-ash deserts of the Doaba Badlands. A large concentration of them was found in the Adsila Rifts, where they dot the landscape and often open up unexpectedly on unprepared travelers. Their existence was first documented by Kirr Cyr's. (BSS)

Sand Wine

this form of wine was created on the planet Tatooine. (SWRPG2)

Sanda

this woman was one of the leaders of a smuggler gang, along with Lemo, which operated on the planet Arcan IV during the height of the Galactic Civil War. They hoped to steal the Dancing Goddess and the Minstrel, in order to help fund their operations. (LTA4, MC79)

Sandbiter

this was the Yuuzhan Vong name for a slashrat. (DTO)

Sand-borer

this digging herbivore was considered a nuisance on the planet Tatooine, where it dug its way into hydroponic gardens and destroyed crops. (MC63)

Sand-buzzer

this small device was used on many worlds where vermin were prevalent in outlying areas. The sand-buzzer was originally developed on Tatooine to ward off scurriers and other creatures. It created an electronic field that affected the creature's innate senses, driving them away from the area. (SWI61)

Sand-casting

a unique form of artwork found on Tatooine. (ISB)

Sandcrawler

a huge, lumbering contraption that moved about on four tracks, the sandcrawler was used as both a transport and a warehouse by the Jawas. They were originally Corellia Engineering Mining Digger Crawlers, ore haulers brought to Tatooine during the first attempts to extract ores and valuable minerals from the planet. Tatooine, however, had a limited natural ores which had strange, magnetic characteristics, and so the haulers were abandoned after the destruction of the space station Tatoo III. The various Jawa clans assumed ownership and used them to traverse the deserts. A Jawa sandcrawler was refitted to house nearly 100 clan members, as well as to accommodate a large cargo hold and processing station. The operation of a sandcrawler was nearly impossible for a non-Jawa, as many of the onboard systems had been modified to suit the Jawas' needs. The primary advantage to using these slow machines was the protection they afforded a Jawa clan in the open desert. The inside of a sandcrawler was relatively cool, and the armor plating protected the Jawas from Sandpeople and smaller krayt dragons. (SW, TME, GG7, EGV, RESB, SOT)

Sander

this Imperial Moff was one of the eight which survived to meet with Grand Admiral Pellaeon on Bastion, some ten years after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. When Pellaeon tried to propose a negotiated peace treaty with the New Republic, Sander felt that he might retain control of his own sectors, but would lose some planets to the Republic. (SOP)

Sandfish

a creature that "swims" in sand. (CS)

Sandfly

a small, annoying insect found on various dry worlds, like Tatooine or Socorro. (SWN, SWJ2)

Sandgale

this was a form of sandstorm which swept the surface of the planet Bimmieel. (DTO)

Sand-glass

this form of glass, created from the silicates found in the sands of Tatooine's deserts, was used in the creation of unusual works of art. The best specimens of sand-glass were created during intense storms, when heat lightning fused the natural sand into strange shapes. A similar effect could be created using a blaster set to maximum power, but these works were much smaller and often resembled lumps of melted glass. (TG)

Sand-grass

a wild, thorny grass native to the planet Ylesia. It grows along the coastline, and helps keep the dunes intact. (RD)

Sand-grub

a small desert creature raised by the Tusken Raiders on Tatooine, the sand-grub will gnaw through anything, including flesh. (TJP)

Sandhawk

this Tatooinian bird is hunted for its tasty flesh. (GG7)

Sandi

this young girl was all of fifteen when she went to work for Orman on Lianna. She had grown up in the streets, and believed that working for Orman would help her make a name for herself. (ML)

Sandi Maba

this Aqualish female and her family were forced to flee Coruscant, when the planetary government decided to seced from the Old Republic. Maba and her family were supporters of the Republic, and fled to Alderaan as refugees rather than return to Ando. Sandi Maba was one of the many Aqualish who chose to remain on Alderaan, instead of returning to Ando. (HNN4)

Sandjigger

a small arthropod native to the planet Tatooine, the sandjigger survives by eating the native razor moss. (ISU)

Sandmaggot

a small creature found on Tatooine. Jabba used them as food, favoring their kidneys. (TME, TJP)

Sandmask

the protective facial shield worn by the Jawas. It helps them avoid the harsh Tatooine environment, and also keeps their facial identity a secret. (HSE)

Sandmouse

this small animal was kept as a pet on the planet Lianna. (ML)

Sand-mouse

a timid creature native to Tatooine. (SWJ11)

Sando

this young Venan male was the son of Baron Kindoro and his wife, Omnino, the Baroness of Vena. Sando attained the rank of Baron when his father died while on business, although his mother served as Regent until he was old enough to take his father's place. He agreed to accompany his mother to Coruscant during her negotiations to join the Old Republic, but his ship was lost in the Bright Jewel System near Ord Mantell. Omnino requested that Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi locate Sando after a rescue team failed to respond to hails. The two Jedi were able to locate the ship, but found the crew of both craft had been brutally killed by two escaped Mantellian savrips. Baron Sando was among the dead, his neck broken. The Jedi learned that the savrips had been captured and enslaved by Taxer Sundown, who had provided them to Baron Sando for breeding purposes. Baroness Omnino later revealed that the flesh of the savrips were considered a delicacy by her people, despite the fact that the savrips were intelligent. Sando had to destroy the female, and the male attacked the crews to avenge her death. Sando perished while fighting against the savrips. (LSOM, WOTC)

Sando Aqua Monster

this huge creature was native to the deep oceans of the planet Naboo. It was an aquatic mammal which essentially resembled a fish, although it was feline in stature and moved on its hind legs. It had a long tail, and its blocky head was dominated by a wide maw filled with serrated teeth. They were indiscriminant feeders, and had no natural enemies in the seas of Naboo. The largest specimens have been measured at 160 meters in length, but this was an estimate based mainly on remains. It was believed that the males, which were generally larger than the females, could attain lengths of up to 200 meters. The actual lifecycle of the sando was a mystery, as they were dangerous, although reclusive, predators. To most natives of the planet Naboo, the sando aqua monster was more of a myth than an actual creature, mainly because they had never been observed in the wild and reports of their washed-up corpses were rare and incredible. There have been reports of sando aqua monsters breaching the surface of the water to attack their prey, and have been known feed on fambaas and falumpasets as well as aquatic prey. (SW1, IG1, GMR2, WSW)

Sandov's Dance Palace

this popular dance hall was located on Streysel Island, during the height of the New Order. (WOTC)

Sandpearl

an opaline stone found in the last chamber of a krayt dragon's gizzard, these stones are also called dragon pearls. The krayt dragon ingests stones of various sizes and materials for use in its gizzard to crush food for easy digestion. When the stones get too small, they are expelled. The resulting pearls have been smoothed and polished to a brilliant finish, and have various values depending on their color and size. (TME, TJP)

Sandpeople

a race of nomadic desert mutants on Tatooine who roam the Jundland Wastes, the Sandpeople were often called Tusken Raiders. This name came from the humans who survived their first attack on a human settlement, which occurred at Fort Tusken. Sandpeople were believed to have descended from the Ghorfas, but there was no hard evidence to link the two. Their origins - either native to Tatooine or transplanted - had been lost even to the Sandpeople themselves, although there were legends of a time when Tatooine was covered with grasslands. These legends held that the Builders - a group of Rakatan explorers - arrived on Tatooine and tried to enslave the ancient Sandpeople, who had discovered space travel and angered the Builders. They fought back and won their freedom, but the Rakatans burned the grasslands in retaliation, leaving Tatooine a desert wasteland. This story also claims that the root of the Sandpeoples' intense hatred of other beings derived from their war with the Builders, although written history points to a more recent event. Some 400 years before the attack on Fort Tusken, the desert bandit Alkhara slaughtered a group of Sandpeople who had befriended him. This was generally considered the source of the Sandpeoples' anger and mistrust. The Sandpeople dressed in heavy cloth robes, and had covered their heads with strips of cloth that held a breath mask and eye protection on their faces. Only an individual's mate was allowed to see them with their coverings removed. They learned how to train the banthas native to Tatooine as mounts, and a marauding group of Sandpeople would always ride them single file, to hide their numbers. Each individual worked with the same bantha for life. When a mount was killed or dies, the rider was left to wander the desert alone. If the bantha's spirit deemed it so, the rider would be befriended by another bantha. Otherwise, the rider would die in the sands. On the other hand, if a rider was killed or dies, its bantha was turned out into the desert. Although the Sandpeople were aggressive and violent by nature, they had deep-seated traditions that were tightly coupled to their everyday lives. Young individuals were required to prove their adulthood in various physical activities, the hardest of which was the manhood ritual of hunting down a krayt dragon. Because the Sandpeople had no written language, the most revered member of a clan or tribe was the storyteller. He knew the life-story of every member of his clan, and also knew the clan's history. The storyteller was required to memorize the histories word-for-word, eliminating any chance for misinterpretation or distortion. Apprentice storytellers often were more hard-pressed to prove themselves than warriors, for a single mistake in reciting the histories meant instant death. As violent as their nature was, Sandpeople stayed as far from the moisture farmers as the farmers did them. There were occasional attacks on the more outlying settlements. A few scientists claimed that Sandpeople had human origins, but the autopsies done on what few dead that were left behind revealed cyborg eyes and other non-human characteristics. In battle,

Sandpeople have been rumored to spit streams of blood at their victims, but this was attributed to superstitious moisture farmers. (SWN, SWSB, TME, ISU, VD2, SWDB, SOT, KOTOR)

Sandpopper

this model of landspeeder was produced by the Caelli-Merced Syndicate on Socorro. It measured nine meters in length, and could transport a pilot and up to three passengers. The speeder was named for an unusual noise the repulsor engines make when they get sand stuck inside their housings. Caelli-Merced placed additional filters around the intakes to prevent the noise. (BSS)

Sandral

this was one of the most powerful families who lived on the planet Dantooine, during the centuries leading up to the Great Sith War. The Sandral family was the bitter rival of the Matale family, and many of the long-standing disputes stemmed from land ownership. The Matale Fields were separated from the Sandral Fields by a small patch of land known as The Grove, which held a certain mystery for the Jedi Knights who lived on Dantooine during that time. (KOTOR)

Sandral Estate

this was primary living quarters of Casus Sandral, and was the historical family residence of his family. The family owned the Sandral Fields, on the planet Dantooine, during the generations leading up to the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Sandral Fields

see Sandral Grounds (KOTOR)

Sandral Grounds

this was the name of a large, open plain found on the planet Dantooine. The Sandral Fields, located south of the Matale Fields, were known to the Jedi Knights of ancient times as the location of the Crystal Cave. The plains were named for Casus Sandral's family. (KOTOR)

Sandral, Casus

this amateur archaeologist spent much of his career on the planet Dantooine, some 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. It was believed that he found one of the first links to the existence of the Rakata on Dantooine, although he never made the connection himself. Unfortunately, during one of his investigations to the Rakatan ruins, Casus was attacked and killed by a pack of kath hounds. His body was discovered by one of the Jedi Knights who served at the enclave on Dantooine, and returned to his father, Nurik. (KOTOR)

Sandral, Nurik

this man was the leader of the Sandral family, living on the planet Dantooine during the era of the Great Sith War. Nurik was greatly saddened when his son, Casus, was killed by kath hounds during an archaeological expedition to the Rakatan ruins found on the planet. To add insult to injury, Nurik discovered that his daughter, Rahasia, was in love with Shen Matale, and they had been secretly meeting together in spite of the family feud. Nurik had Shen taken captive, but the Jedi Knights intervened and freed Shen. Nurik was forced to admit the kidnapping, and he and Ahlan formed a tenuous truce after learning of their children's love for one another. (KOTOR)

Sandral, Rahasia

this young woman was the daughter of Nurik Sandral, and was living at the family estate on Dantooine during the era of the Great Sith War. Despite her father's wishes, Rahasia had fallen in love with Shen Matale, the son of Nurik's rival, Ahlan Matale. When Nurik discovered that they had been secretly meeting together, he had Shen taken captive. Shortly afterward, the Jedi Knights intervened and freed Shen, after Ahlan asked for help in freeing Shen. Nurik was forced to admit the kidnapping, and he and Ahlan formed a tenuous truce after learning of their children's love for one another. (KOTOR)

Sandrat

a small rodent-like scavenger found on Adony Station. (CSWDW)

Sandrat

this was a scavenging vermin native to the planet Tatooine. (BF4)

Sand-rat

this was a species of small, desert creature native to Aduba-3. (MC8)

Sand-reed

this thin, grassy reed grew in the deserts of the planet Ord Cestus. It was often dried and used to weave durable baskets. (TCD)

SandRest

this was one of the many hotels which sprang up in the city of Anchorhead, on Tatooine, after the success of the Sidi Driss Inn. (TG)

Sandro the Hook

this acquaintance of Captain Bortrek worked from a base in Celanon City. Bortrek hoped to sell his load of precious cargo, along with the droids R2-D2 and C-3PO, to Sandro. (POT)

Sandrock

a hard stone created over the eons by densely-packed desert sand. Jabba the Hutt's palace was built from sandrock, which was covered with ditanium shielding. (MTS)

Sands in Winter

this was the autobiographical novel written by the Talz, Muftak. (EGA)

Sandscorpion

this deadly, stinging insect was native to the planet Tatooine. (BF4)

Sandskimmer

this was the name, used on many desert planets, for a small repulsorlift vehicle which could transport a single person and minimal cargo. In many instances, the sandskimmer was nothing but an oblong board with one or two tiny repulsor engines attached. Other versions were as large as landspeeders. (TJP, E1A5, MC66)

Sandskimmer, Falynn

this woman, a native of Tatooine, was one of the first members of Wraith Squadron. As a pilot from Tatooine, she was continually being compared to Luke Skywalker, a comparison she chafed at badly. She joined the Alliance in order to prove herself, but remained behind Luke's shadow. This led to what her commanding officers described as a "chronic insolence" and an inability to keep her mouth shut. Despite already being an ace pilot, she was constantly passed over for promotion and demoted after her outbursts, and came under the notice Wedge Antilles during the formation of the Wraiths. She made the cut, partly because of her ability to fly Y-Wings as well as X-Wings, but mostly because of her piloting skills. She was also the squadron's acquisitions agent. Falynn was killed in the battle that destroyed the Implacable over Ession. (WS)

Sandsnake

a reptile native to the deserts of Tatooine. (ISU)

Sandspeeder

this was the generic term used to describe an repulsor-equipped vehicle used on desert or otherwise arid worlds. The T-47 was an excellent example of how a speeder could be modified for use as a swampspeeder, with advanced filtration systems to keep out sand, augmented engine cooling systems, and specialized long-range radar to scan for sandstorms. (NEGV)

Sandstorm Flightknife

one of the many Yedagonian fighter squadrons which supported Wedge Antilles and the Running Crimson Flightknife during the war against the forces of the Cartann nation, on Adumar. One of their pilots rescued Tycho Celchu, after he was shot down in battle. (SOA)

Sandstorm Shipping Concern

this shipping and transport agency was run by Qes Dollis, out of his offices in Mos Eisley, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Sandstorm Shipping was owned by Jabba the Hutt during this time. (RESB)

Sandstorm Team

this group of desert fighters and Infiltrators was part of the Alliance's Scandium Team, and was originally formed by the Ebranite sisters Rith, Nyik, and Tor'ara Tar'ak. (SWJ11)

Sandsurfing

a sport originated on Tatooine in which the participant rides behind a sandskimmer on a small repuslordisk. The disk is attached to their feet, and they surf over the dunes. The origin of the sport is traced back to the Fixer, who taught it to Luke Skywalker. Fixer was nearly consumed by the Sarlacc in a sandsurfing accident. (MTS, EGC)

Sandtek

this small Naboo-based vehicle manufactured produced the Skyflipper transport craft. (NEGC)

Sandtrooper

this was the name used to describe Imperial stormtroopers who were trained to operate in arid, desert environments. They were also known as Desert Assault Troopers. The standard stormtrooper armor was enhanced with special temperature regulators, and the body glove was designed to allow for efficient perspiration. (ISB, SWDB)

Sand-wagon

this was the name of a cargo vehicle used on the planet Ord Cestus during the last decades of the Old Republic. (TCD)

Sandwasp

this stinging insect was native to the deserts of Ord Cestus. (TCD)

Sand-wave

a ballet which Yarna d'al' Gargan used to perform for Jabba the Hutt, when the crimelord couldn't sleep. (TJP)

Sandwhirl

a desert storm on Tatooine, sandwhirls appear at first to be lesser storms than sandstorms. However, despite moving slower, sandwhirls had internal wind speeds which could be ten times faster than those experienced in a sandstorm. (SW, SOT)

Sandwind Team

this cell of Alliance support worked in the Periphery, along the Sisar Run, during the period between the Battles of Hoth and Endor. They had established a base in the Lesser Cueva Expanse on Sriluur, and were known in the sector for their well-placed intelligence agents and high rate of mission success. (SSR)

Sandworm

a burrowing, desert creature. (TME)

Sane, Berra

this woman, a native of the Austogie settlement on the planet Rhinnal, was trained as a geologist during the height of the New Order. She was hired by the Keiger clan to scout out new land opportunities. An unscrupulous and evil-minded woman, Berra Sane would have betrayed her own sister if it meant a great profit for herself. During one exploration, she discovered the location of a Dellaltian starship, presumably buried in the ice before the formation of the Old Republic. She went to great lengths to ensure that credit for the discovery went entirely to herself, ensuring a greater percentage of the profits. (CCW)

Sang

this was one of the more common Kel Dor surnames. Its meaning translated into Basic as "hunter". (GCG)

Sang

this common Zabrak surname meant "shaman". (GCG)

Sangen

this unit of pressure was used by the Selkath, on their homeworld of Metaan. (KOTOR)

Sanger

this was a term used by the Grand Army of the Republic to indicate any dug-out or hastily-erected defensive structure. (RCHC)

Sanglui

this near-human simian was one of the leaders of the Alliance cell on Vorzyd 5. He had a walrus-like face and a squat body. He gave Luke Skywalker the instructions for meeting an Alliance contact on the planet. (CSWEA)

Sangorn's Net

this bar was located on Berrol's Donn, and was known for its criminal clientele. (CRO)

Sangtwo, Biull

this burly human being poses as a farmer and roamed the streets of Narg Starport, trying to swindle credits from unsuspecting visitors. Sangtwo came into the possession of the silver protocol droid RT-56/X, which he discovered had a SureDeal-R bargaining and negotiating module in its brain. Together, they roamed the streets of Narg Starport, looking for unsuspecting off-worlders. When a suitable "victim" was found, RT-56/X would plead with them to remove it from its "cruel master's service" as a farm drudge. If the off-worlders were sympathetic, Sangtwo would bargain with them to sell the droid. Once the purchase was made, RT-56/X would wait until its new master entered a dense-populated area of the city, where it would disappear and return to Sangtwo's farm. (TA)

Sanhedrim

this was a warrior class of the Aing-Tii monks. They believed that the Kathol Rift was a holy site, and forbade any ships to travel through it. (KO)

Sanhedrim Ship

this is the typical Aing-Tii starship design. Referred to sometimes as pilgrimage vessels, the Sanhedrim ships are huge, cylindrical craft which are very organic in design. Like the Mon Calamari star cruisers, no two Sanhedrim ships are exactly alike. They are unlike anything seen or produced by the rest of the galaxy, with engines, thrusters, and weapons sprouting at weird angles and placements. The hulls of Sanhedrim ships are covered with millions of glyphs and sigils that mirror those found on the bony plates of the Aing-Tii themselves. The ships average about 300 meters in length, and have a crew of 150 plus 66 gunners. Typical Sanhedrim ships are armed with the unusual Aing-Tii weaponry, often 30 energy web generators and 6 null-burst projectors. Sanhedrim ships are often well-shielded, and are hyperdrive-equipped. However, instead of a slip of pseudomotion before entering hyperspace, the Aing-Tii ships simply disappear. They reappear just as suddenly, as if they were created in their new location. Rather than direct fighting, the Aing-Tii often use these ships as battering rams, seriously disabling the slave ships they hunt. (KO, VOF)

Sanjin

a planet located in the Core. (SWJ7)

San-Kur-Lor

this Tiss'shar businessbeing was a constituent of the Tiss'shar League. (GG12)

San-lampris

this parasitic creature was native to the oceans of the planet Naboo, which it attached itself to aquatic mammals such as the sando aqua monster. (WSW)

Sanl'jek

this creature, named for the zoologist who first encountered them, was native to the planet Dancreti. Their existence has puzzled scientists for years, for they seemed to have a communal society of nomadic gatherers which possessed social structure. The average sanl'jek is a small, thin-bodied, quadripedal mammal with a long, whiplike tail. The females of the species carried their young in birth pouches, and they carried their young for nearly a year before allowing them to roam on their own. One of the more unusual aspects of the sanl'jek society is that they can determine outsiders to their social structure by their heartbeats. This sensitivity to heartbeat had a strange outgrowth: a member of one group could be attacked in a remote location, and his comrades could detect the change in the heartbeat and come to their aid. This response is immediate, and the protective sanl'jeks attack with incredible aggression. Any such inter-group struggles are fought until one side or the other is destroyed or backs off from the battle. (COG)

Sanna

this Alliance agent was part of the team which was sent to the Ishanna System to counteract the inevitable Imperial subjugation. She was a confidante of Leda Kyss, and accompanied Kyss to the Combat Moon. It was here that Andos Delvaren had led Imperial forces, in an attempt to escalate a dispute between the Rabaanite and S'krrr races. A short, sturdy woman with curly hair, Sanna was accompanied to the Combat Moon by an unknown Alliance pilot (who looks a lot like Wedge Antilles). (SWJ9)

Sannah

this Melodie child trained as a Jedi on Yavin 4. She was discovered by Anakin Solo and Tahiri Veila when they accompanied Lyric to Yavin 8. They brought her back to the Junior Jedi Academy with them, and persuaded Luke Skywalker to let her stay. Luke recognized the need to train the Melodies to fight back against the hostile predators of Yavin 8, and let Sannah stay. Unlike Lyric, who was nearly twenty and near her changing when she attended the Academy, Sannah was about eleven when she first attended. Sannah was still training at Yavin 4 when the Peace Brigade tried to capture the students at the praxeum and turn them over to the Yuuzhan Vong. She was caught in the crossfire and forced to hide with Valin Horn and Kam Solusar, while Anakin tried to rescue them. Sannah was turned over to Kam Solusar and his wife, Tionne, for safekeeping during the conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong, training aboard the Errant Venture until a more permanent base was established at the Maw Installation. Sannah was among the handful of Jedi Knights who ultimately survived the conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong. (LW, EVC, UF)

San-Ni Staff

this weapon resembled a normal staff, about half a meter in length, when carried in its inactive mode. When each end is twisted and pulled apart, the San-Ni staff split into three pieces. From the two ends, a stun prod springs outward. This motion pushed a pair of power couplings into the "center" of the staff, with crackling energy keeping them connected to the stun prods. The San-Ni staff could then be used to strike or stun an opponent into submission. (GMR10)

Sanohb'I

this was the Socorran name for the summer equinox experienced on the planet. It was an incredibly hot season, and influenced by the orbit of Neftali as well as Socorro's distance from the star Sokor. (BSS)

San-pilot

this parasitic creature was native to the oceans of the planet Naboo, which it attached itself to aquatic mammals such as the sando aqua monster. Unlike the san-lampris, the san-pilot formed a symbiotic relationship with the sando. (WSW)

Sanrafsix Corridor

this hyperspace travel route was located near the Sisar Run. (SWJ10)

Sanriv

a Rodian gemstone. (EGV)

Sansanna

a form of spice found on the planet Ventooine, sansanna was so rare that it had been priced out of existence in fourteen systems during the Galactic Civil War. The supplies of sansanna were controlled by the Satab during the early years of the New Order, which angered the populace of Ventooine because they saw none of the financial benefit from its sale. (MC, LTA5)

Sanseon, Harris

this man was a reporter for the Old Republic's Holonet, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. He specialized in research pertaining to the Jedi Order, and developed a good working relationship with Jocasta Nu. (HNN5)

Sansil

a musical instrument created on the planet Adarlon. (GG6)

Sant

this is the name of a Weequay religion. (GG12)

Sant, Cyl

this woman, a native of the planet New Bornalex, had a brief affair with a Theelin male during the early days of the New Order. The result of their tryst was a daughter, Rystall. Cyl tried hard to earn enough credits to support herself and her daughter, as the father fled New Bornalex and was never seen again. Cyl moved her small family to Coruscant during the height of the New Order, hoping to make enough credits to survive. When things didn't go exactly as she planned, Cyl was forced to give up Rystall in order to survive. She placed her infant daughter into a parked speeder, along with a note which begged the owners to love her daughter as much as she did. Cyl disappeared into the cityscape, and was not heard from again. (SWI67)

Santage, Keir

this man was rescued from an Imperial detention facility by Wedge Antilles, and later joined Rogue Squadron as a pilot and supply officer. Santage flew as Rogue Seven, and participated in twelve sorties against the Imperial shipyards at Fondor, shortly after the Battle of Hoth. He later flew with Red Squadron during the Battle of Endor. (CCG11)

Santarine

this planet is located in the Hook Nebula. (GG9)

Santhar Squadron

this Alliance squad was stationed at the base established on the planet Taul. They fought bravely on the ground, but were unable to stop the Imperial orbital assault from the Dominator. (SWJ2)

Santhe

one of the ruling houses on Lianna, they controlled the various companies managed by Santhe/Seinar Technologies. The Lady Valles Santhe was a supporter of the Empire, for she felt that the Old Republic never gave her any favors or support. (DESB, ML)

Santhe Blockade Runner

a patrol craft manufactured by Santhe/Sienar Technologies on Lianna. (ML)

Santhe Corporation

this was the overseeing holding company that controlled the various Santhe and Sienar corporations. The two primary subsidiaries of Santhe Corp were Santhe Security and Santhe/Sienar Technologies.

Santhe/Sienar Technologies, in turn, controlled Sienar Fleet Systems, Santhe Passenger and Freight, and Curich Engineering. (MBC)

Santhe Passenger and Freight

one of the subsidiaries of Santhe/Sienar Technologies. (ML)

Santhe Security

one of the various subsidiaries of Santhe/Seinar Technologies, Santhe Security provided security forces for various Imperial outposts and space stations. (SWJ9)

Santhe, Kashan

this young man was Phillip Santhe's son. A quiet man, Kashan was also a close contact of Terri Karl and a dedicated supporter of the Alliance. He uses his relationship with the Lady Valles Santhe to obtain information vital to the Alliance, although Valles and Phillip are unaware of Kashan's activities. Much of his rebellious attitude came from the acquaintances he made while at school in the Core Worlds. (ML)

Santhe, Kerred

this founder of Santhe/Sienar Technologies, Kerred Santhe managed to purchase controlling interest in Sienar Technologies some 100 years before the Battle of Yavin. A native of the planet Lianna, he moved the corporation's headquarters to Lianna and renamed the company Santhe/Sienar Technologies. (ML)

Santhe, Miri

this young girl was Phillip Santhe's daughter, and Valles Santhe's granddaughter. (ML)

Santhe, Phillip

this short, corpulent man was Valles Santhe's only son. A talented engineer, Phillip had no aptitude for politics or diplomacy. A staunch supporter of the New Order, Phillip was the leader of the NOVA project. He couldn't wait for his mother to retire so he could take control of Santhe/Sienar Technologies, and didn't care if the corporation destroyed Lianna or her people. Phillip is the only surviving member of Valles Santhe's family; the other children were killed in anti-Imperial actions by the native Lianns. He was somewhat intimidated by the presence of Rodin Verpalion during the design and creation of the NOVA project. (ML)

Santhe, Valles

this regal woman was the granddaughter of Kerred Santhe, and controlled Santhe/Sienar Technologies during the New Order of Emperor Palpatine. She favored true independence for Lianna, but remained loyal to the Empire. She detested the presence of Rodin Verpalion, and was glad when the Imperial advisor decided not to live on Lianna. It was later discovered that she had knowingly sent out transport ships into pirate traps, allowing the pirates - who were actually Alliance starship crews - to obtain needed supplies. After the Emperor's death at Endor, she managed to gain a measure of that independence, but also claimed home rule for Lianna. Lady Santhe also maintained control of the Santhe/Sienar empire, and tried to reinforce her loyalty to the New Order by creating Sienar Army Systems to supply Imperial forces with TIE crawlers and other ground-assault vehicles. (ML, NEG)

Santhe/Sienar Technologies

this conglomerate was originally known as Sienar Technologies, until Kerred Santhe managed to purchase a majority control of Sienar. He forced the corporation to move its headquarters to Lianna, where it was responsible for the design of several civilian starship designs and components. It was also the parent company of Sienar Fleet Systems, Santhe Passenger and Freight, and Curich Engineering. Following the growth of the New Republic, Lady Valles Santhe decided that she would enter the military market, and began designing war machines under the monicker Sienar Army Systems. Their first designs were provided to the forces supporting the reborn Emperor Palpatine in the battle for Coruscant. Note that the Dark Empire Sourcebook says that Lady Santhe wanted to take control of the floundering Seinar Fleet Systems and remake it in her own image. The result was Santhe/Seinar Technologies, a company independent of Imperial control but willing, nonetheless, to deal almost exclusively with the Empire. Santhe/Sienar was one of the original voting sponsors of the Corporate Sector Authority. (DESB, EGV, CSA, ML)

Santherian Tenho-root

this plant's extract is often used by drug addicts who wish to escape the harsh realities of life and experience everything as a gentle sunset. The effects of tehno-root were especially powerful to members of the Falleen race, which experienced an intense psychotropic episode after taking it. (POT, MJH)

Santheship

this is one of several small, industrial towns strewn across the northern coast of Anai, on the planet Lianna. (ML)

Santhou Lazith'chika

this alien was Force-sensitive, and decided to learn everything he could about the Force and Jedi during the height of the New Order. Santhou was a friend of Lens and Milla Reekeene, and together they founded Reekeene's Roughnecks. Santhou's species was unknown in the galaxy, and Santhou worked hard to maintain the secret. A humorous and warm being, Santhou balanced the aggressiveness of Lens Reekeene and the neutrality of Milla. He was humanoid in stature, but his legs had an extra joint and his eyes were very wide. Santhou's skin was a pasty-grey color, which made him look like a corpse. Santhou had been travelling the galaxy for 200 years before joining the Roughnecks. (SWCP)

Santo

this Twi'lek was a member of Warburton's criminal underground until Luke Skywalker met him inside the Tol Ado prison facility. Santo was actually an Imperial spy, sent out to infiltrate Warburton's gang and discover their whereabouts. Santo nearly succeeded, but Luke managed to warn Warburton before Imperial Governor Parnell could attack their hideout. (JH)

Santo

this man served in the ranks of the Empire's Ghost Squadron, in the year leading up to the Battle of Yavin. Santo was part of the platoon dispatched to subjugate Sulon and capture Morgan Katarn, and served under Lieutenant Brazack during the attack. It was Santo who disabled Morgan's droid, Weegee. (SFE)

Santor

this portly man was the leader of Shawken's government, during the last years of the New Order. He welcomed Luke Skywalker and Plif to Shawken shortly after the Battle of Endor, to discuss the future of the galaxy's government. (MC87)

Sanwiwood

the wood of this tree, native to the planet Ansion, was used to create wondrous sculptures by the Ansionian artists of the Old Republic. (APS)

Sanyassa

this star was the central body in the Sanyassa System, located in the Moddell Sector of the galaxy. (GMR9)

Sanyassa IV

this gloomy, storm-shrouded world was located in the Moddell Sector of the galaxy. It was known as the homeworld of the Sanyassan race. (UANT)

Sanyassan

this humanoid race of beings was native to the planet Sanyassa IV, located in the Moddell Sector of the galaxy. They were known as scavengers, and would readily attack any being who crossed their path. Tall and well-muscled, Sanyassans resembled walking skeletons, with lanky hair and greenish skin. Their history contained several eras of advanced thinking and technology, which were eventually wiped out by the current "might makes right" kleptocracy. The Sanyassan preferred to prey upon the Ewoks of the Forest Moon of Endor, hoping to eventually exterminate the small bipeds. A subspecies of Sanyassan, known as the Marauders, evolved on the Forest Moon of Endor after their ship crash-landed there. (SWI66, UANT)

Sanyassan

this was the spoken language of the Sanyassan race, punctuated by guttural snarls, shrieks, and growls. (UANT)

Sanza

this planet was the homeworld of the Krish race. A temperate world, Sanza's landmasses were dedicated to agriculture, manufacturing, or sports arenas and casinos. (AE, UANT)

Sapella

this planet, located in the Kathol Outback, is one of the most isolated worlds of Kathol Sector. It was located between Timbra Ott and Binaros, but was not as profitable a run as going to Jangelle and the Kathol Republic. The planet had entered an ice age during the last millennium of the Old Republic, and much of the planet was covered by the advancing polar ice caps. A band of temperate lowlands straddled the equator, and this fertile land was settled by a group of colonists. The colonists there grew fruits and grains for trade with Timbra Ott, and created a tasty wine from their grapes. This trade allowed the colonists to maintain a mutual defense pact with Timbra Ott, although the Sapellan navy was quite small and outdated. (KO)

Saper

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Saper

this was a common name among the Lepi people. (UANT)

Saper, Hallis

this woman was a sludgenews reporter from the planet Bonadan before she joined the New Republic as a documentarian. She had developed a way to interview her subjects without interfering with their actions, but implemented it in a strange way. She found that children disliked being recorded by beings with cameras and other equipment, but that they actually enjoyed the presence of a droid who served as the interviewer's assistant, but which could also record them. She thought that the best of both worlds would be to have a specially-made protocol droid head created, complete with recording instruments, which she could wear on her shoulder. The droid head, which she nicknamed Whitecap for its coloration, had specialized components that allowed it to follow her eye movements and record what she was looking at. However, the combination - which made Hallis resemble a two-headed lady - tended to cause more disruption than reduce apprehension. When she accepted the role of documenting the negotiations with the Adumari, she brought Whitecap along with her. Wedge Antilles, who served as the chief diplomat, Wes Janson, Tycho Celchu, and Hobbie Klivian all wondered at the effectiveness of Whitecap. They each had a part in developing a system which fit within an ornate hair clip to replace Whitecap's protocol droid head, allowing Hallis to record everything without the intrusive stares aimed at the "two-headed lady." During the negotiations with the Adumari, Hallis managed to record a secret conversation between Tomer Darpen and the perator of Cartann, Pekaelic ke Teldan, in which Darpen accused Wedge of being a rogue and acting on his own behalf instead of that of the New Republic. This evidence exposed Darpen's own treacherous plans to bring the planet Adumar into the Republic. She managed to get copies of this recording into the hands of the New Republic Intelligence agency, which arrested Darpen and allowed Wedge to complete the negotiations. After the Adumari agreed to join the Republic, Hallis returned to her regular duties. She later accepted a position within the New Republic Intelligence agency, and spent the early part of her career investigating the Yuuzhan Vong. (SOA, BP)

Sapha

this red-furred Ryn was part of the group, led by Melisma and Gaph, who was on Gyndine searching for Droma. Sapha was separated from her sister Melisma when the Yuuzahn Vong attacked Gyndine before the refugees could be evacuated. Sapha was part of a group captured by the Vong and enslaved aboard the Creche', tending to the needs of an immature yammusk. When the priest Moorsh arrived on the ship, he summoned the Sapha and the other Ryn to have them tell his fortune. (JE)

Sapir

this fragrant plant was grown for its leaves, which were dried for use in steeping tea. The tea made from sapir leaves was a subtle green in color, and was equally as fragrant as the leaves themselves. Many beings drank sapir tea because they believed it had soothing qualities. (SOJ)

Sapith

this was one of the many crystals used by the ancient Jedi Knights in the construction of a lightsaber. It was believed to have given the wielder better control of the lightsaber, thereby increasing the ability to cause more energy damage to an opponent. Each sapith crystal was formed from the excretions of the volice worm, which only created the crystals once every eleven years. (KOTOR)

Sapor

this bartender assisted the New Republic's Sector Rangers in capturing the Karazak slaver Iquar by getting the man extremely drunk and asking him to relate the story of the capture of Janissa Locrin. (GG11)

Sapper

this was the slang term used to describe those individuals who performed hard labor for the Balawai, on the planet Haruun Kal, during the height of the Clone Wars. (SHPT)

Sapphire

this strikingly beautiful woman was a courier and smuggler working for the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. She grew up as a Navy brat, since both of her parents worked as TIE Fighter maintenance techs for the Empire. Sapphire was going to join the Imperial Academy when an explosion in a fighter bay killed her parents. The cause of the explosion was discovered to be the carelessness of Lieutenant Tizzin, the new officer at the base, but his family ties kept him in command. Sapphire's parents were blamed for the explosion, and she has hated the Empire ever since. She vowed to hunt down Tizzin and exact revenge on him. She joined the Alliance short after the deaths of her parents, and ran several smuggling runs with Kevan Startron. When she completed a major run for him, but kept her role in the job a secret, he bequeathed her his starship, the New Cov Quasar. She later renamed the ship to be the Sapphire's Gem. (CRO)

Sapphire Lake

this artificial lake was formed in Hollowtown, on Centerpoint Station, as a kind of nature preserve. (CCW)

Sapphire's Gem

formerly known as the New Cov Quasar, this smuggling ship was owned by the Alliance courier known as Sapphire. A Hyrotil Crescent-class transport, it was equipped with an array of passive sensors and stealth equipment. Sapphire armed it with a pair of fire-linked concussion missile launchers, claiming that these were easier to shield than conventional energy weapons. (CRO)

Sappire

located near Dentaal, the planet Sappire was a strong supporter of the Alliance. (SWJ5)

Sapra

this Corellian smuggler played a game of sabacca with Tere Metallo on Sarahwiee, while the Riileb was helping Gil Crosear and Alex Winger rescue Carl Barzon. (SWJ6)

Saprah

this was the name used by the Troig people to describe the left head on their body. (SWDB)

Saprin

this was the name used by the Troig people to describe the right head on their body. (SWDB)

Saqc'or

this elderly Svivreni was a noted metallurgist and miner who worked for many years on Ovis III before retiring with his personal fortune to the planet Thonner. During the early years of the New Republic, he established his own venture prospecting company, searching for hidden pockets of resources beneath Thonner's shallow seas. It was rumored that Saqc'or had once been a slave of the Empire, placed on Thonner to help search for raw materials during the construction of the second Death Star. (GMR9)

Sar Agorn

this ancient Jedi Master was a member of a race which resembled an amorphous blob, suspended in a greenish mixture of gases. His personality was placed into one of the few surviving Jedi Holocrons, from which Master Agorn provided education and historical insight on Jedi traditions and philosophy. (PJSB)

Sar Galva

this small mining outpost was located in the Murul Trench, on Calamari. (SWJ10)

Sar Labooda

this Chalactan Jedi Knight served the order as a contemporary of Depa Billaba, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Sar X

the Sullustan Lambda-class shuttle dispatched from the Cosuf transports, it carried the Sullustan diplomats to their rendezvous with Alliance personnel, just prior to the Battle of Yavin. (XW)

Sarab Mullo

this was the name of a noted member of Nimbanese society. (UANT)

Saraban City

this was one of the largest cities found on the planet Sibusime. (GMR10)

Sarafur

this desert world was the third planet in orbit around the star known as Kuna's Tail, and was often referred to as Kuna's Tail III. At one point in its distant history, Sarafur rotated about its axis like most other planets, and supported an indigenous form of sentient life. Over the millennia, however, it stopped rotating, and the ancient race soon died out. Sarafur remained tidelocked from that point forward, and much of its landscape was either scoured by heat or frozen. Among the ruins found along the terminus, lawless communities arose, founded by prospectors, treasure hunters, and fugitives. Many of the planet's inhabitants told stories of the artifact known as the Tessent being hidden somewhere on Sarafur, either in the tomb of an ancient alien king or in the horde of a long-lost crimelord. (GMR9)

Sarahwiee

this Mid Rim world is located in the Bseto System, but was unknown to the Old Republic. It was discovered shortly after the birth of the Empire, and Palpatine kept its location a secret in order to create a research base there. Following the Battle of Endor, some of the remaining fleet captains continued to make stops there, and the facility continued to run. However, after the Battle of Bilbringi, the supply runs were contracted out. On one of these runs, Luke Skywalker and a group of Alliance agents infiltrated the base and liberated some of the scientists. Sarahwiee is a frigid, rocky world which has a day of 28 standard hours and a year of 398 local days. (SWJ6)

Saran Vydek

this was the name of a noted Vodran individual. (UANT)

Sarapin

this planet was known as the homeworld of the vaapad. A volcanic world, Sarapin was considered inhospitable to most forms of life. The Old Republic tapped into the fathomless energy of the lava hidden beneath the planet's surface by erecting collection facilities that bored into the volcanic rock to draw heat and other forms of energy. Although the Energy Collection Repository was protected by a dense energy grid, it was overrun shortly before the Battle of Yavin. (NEGC, GBC)

Saras Krenin

this female Rodian was a bounty hunter with a burning desire to capture Han Solo. A member of House Benelex, Saras was known as an individual who would turn in her best friend, if the bounty was high enough. Once on a case, she made every effort to make her target aware of the fact that she was coming to get him, a practice which helped her spook many a bounty into a stupid move. However, she was known to have broken off several hunts on word that Solo was in the vicinity. (GG10)

Sarconian Green Flea

an insect with little intelligence of any kind. (DMSH)

Sarcophagus

Saccoria's single moon, Sarcophagus was a source of pride among the native Sacorrians. The natives of Sacorria buried all their dead on the moon, in order to help preserve the natural beauty of their world. This also allowed them to look up into the night sky and think of the billions of bodies buried there. Many superstitions arose around the moon, most of them associating the full moon with a period of an increased number of deaths. Also, it was illegal to focus a telescope on the moon, out of reverence for the dead and tradition. (AC, CCW)

Sardis

this Imperial warship was stationed near the Obsidian research platform as protection. However, the Alliance's assault on the station was too powerful for the Sardis to repel, and the Imperial facility was destroyed. The Sardis was also destroyed in the battle. (XWA)

Sardoran

a planet. (AIR)

Sardu Sallowe

this being - it was believed that he was human - was one of the galaxy's best trackers, during the height of the New Order. Sardu's face was hidden beneath a heavy cloak, and was covered with a complex respirator that allowed him to discover the underlying scents of his surroundings. It was rumored that Sardu was the son of moisture farmers who were attacked by Tusken Raiders. Left to die, Sardu was taken in by a clan of Jawas and raised to adulthood. He developed his clothing to mimic the appearance of a Jawa, complete with glowing, yellow eyes and the respirator unit. This device allowed him to track his quarry by scent. Sardu was attended by a swarm of Jawa assistants, who served as information scouts to assist in his searches. He even traveled the deserts of Tatooine in a TaggeCo Survey-class crawler, a smaller version of the huge Sandcrawlers used by the Jawas. Sardu Sallowe was hired by Embra the Hutt to assist Zuckuss and 4-LOM locate the Yavin Vassilika, shortly before the Battle of Yavin. (UYV, GMR6)

Sareet System

this planetary system is the home of the Sareeta race of humanoids. (SWJ8)

Sareeta

this race of humanoids is native to the Sareet System. They have mottled pink skin and large, lidless eyes. (SWJ8)

Sarell Harmion

one of the three Harmion brothers employed by Sarlim Gastess, Sarell was just as ruthless and cunning as his siblings. In the Gastess' Finance system, the Harmions were installed as upper-level managers in newly-acquired corporations, where they removed management and employees much like a surgery removing a growth. The Harmions seemed to relish their work, enjoying the destruction of corporations and the anguish caused to their employees. (GG9)

Sarella

this Drall female served as the Duchess of her family during the height of the New Order. A heavysset individual with graying fur and intricate earrings, Sarella was known for her ties to both the government and the corporations of the planet Drall. Much of this information came from her close relative, Drusa. (CCW)

Saresh, Guun Han

this ancient Jedi Knight was dispatched to Korriban, with Duron Qel-Droma and Shaela Nuur, during the period of history known as the Great Hunt. Their mission was to hunt down any rogue terentateks that had escaped from the Sith fortress on Korriban. He was jealous of the love shared by Shaela and Duron, and made no effort to hide his feelings. Rather than accept it, Guun Han railed at them, claiming that their relationship was leading them all down a path to the Dark Side of the Force. He left their group in anger, refusing to work with them. He took a ship and traveled to Kashyyyk, confident that he could destroy the terentatek that was terrorizing the planet all by himself. His skills, however, proved inadequate to the task, and he was killed and eaten by the terentatek. The only record of his demise was found in the remains of the terentatek that had eaten him, after it was finally killed by another team of Jedi Knights. (KOTOR)

Sareth, Owen

this Alliance agent was responsible for recruiting Devon Fuller. (GG9)

Saretti, Ephin

this young man served as the Imperial Moff of the planet Bastion, shortly after Admiral Pellaeon signed a peace accord with the New Republic. Unlike his older counterparts, Saretti had never been in the presence of Emperor Palpatine, and held no ties to the old Empire. Saretti grew up on Coruscant during the Galactic Civil War, and his family fled to Bastion when Coruscant fell during the early years of the New Republic. He was, nevertheless, much wiser than the older Moffs, and advocated the support of the New Republic during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Saretti was also one of Admiral Pellaeon's strongest supporters, and offered to accompany Pellaeon during his discussion with Leia Organa Solo in regards to joining the fight against the Yuuzhan Vong. Pellaeon, however, requested that Saretti remain on Bastion to help the other Moffs understand the situation. Later, after the Imperial Remnant joined the New Republic in combatting the Yuuzhan Vong, Saretti opened up the Imperial archives to the Astrographic Survey Institute, in an effort to provide them data on the Outbound Flight Project. The hope was that the data would provide information on the origins of the Yuuzhan Vong. While this took some time, Saretti continued to support Pellaeon's efforts. After the fall of Bastion and the successful defense of Borosk, it was Saretti who spoke loudest to the Moff Council, demanding that they band together and join the Galactic Alliance, lest the individual Moffs retreat into their own systems and become easy targets for the Yuuzhan Vong. Sargheet this hardy grain was grown on the planet Dagro. For many years, it was a staple in the diets of many worlds in the vicinity of Dagro, but the market suddenly dropped during the height of the Clone Wars. Many of the farmers on Dagro found themselves with acres and acres of a crop that couldn't quite keep up with the cost to grow it, and turned many of them against the Old Republic. The most usable part of the sargheet plant was the upper stalk, but the lower part - known as crop stubble - could be stripped of its blue bristles and used as feed for livestock. The bristles, which were easy to remove but impossible to digest, had to be removed because they built up in the digestive tract and caused blockages that could lead to death. However, when simmered in water, the bristles released flavors that created a tasty soup stock. (SWI76)

Sargonian Behemoth Tick

this immense, blood-sucking insect was known for its tenacious hold on its host. (LTA2)

Sarhah Yad

this female Gran and her sister, Moree, were noted smugglers who worked from a base on the planet Malastare during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. (BH)

Sarhl, Fenris

this Imperial Major was known for his skills and success in quelling rebellious activity. He was placed in command of the Demnadi Relief Operation, and was the sole member of the team dispatched to the planet. This was because Governor Cathers only requested help with a single riot, not a planet covered with rebellion. (HR)

Saricia

this Devaronian was Lai Nootka's gunner aboard the Star's Delight. (TFE, SWJ7)

Sarin Sector

this area of the galaxy is located in the Outer Rim Territories, adjacent to Parmel Sector. (GG9, SWJ15)

Saris Uli

this being served as the Director of University of Sanbra's Biological Research center, during the years leading up the Clone Wars. Professor Uli discovered that the stone mite infestations which plagued many Mid Rim and Colonies planets appeared to be non-random, and more than likely a series of terrorist actions. (HNN5)

Sariss

one of the Dark Jedi working with Jerec, Sariss was physically and mentally stronger than her companions. She was of near-human stock, and was known to be quiet and reserved. Note that the Wizards of the Coast website indicates that Sariss was human. Sariss was raised by the Prophets of the Dark Side, and might have been sired by one of their members. Regardless of her lineage, Sariss grew up in a world that was consumed by the Dark Side of the Force, and was tortured and raped by the Prophets for many years until she was sent of missions for the Church of the Dark Side. She was known by the codename Prophetess, and worked for Tour Aryon on Tatooine before being taken in by the Dark Jedi Jerec and trained as one of Emperor Palpatine's Dark Jedi. Under the tutelage of Jerec, Sariss became skilled and dangerous with a lightsaber, and eventually earned enough of his trust to become his second-in-command. In the wake of the Battle of Endor, Sariss abandoned her connections to the Empire and joined Jerec in his quest to reform the Dark Side Elite. It was during this time that she discovered the abilities of the Epicanthrix youth Yun, and insinuated herself into his father's life. Sariss led Yun to believe that she loved him, twisting him to the Dark Side until he killed his father out of love for her. Sariss then seized his father's assets and took them to Jerec, along with Yun. Sariss then committed herself to assisting Jerec in reaching the Valley of the Jedi. After locating the Valley on Ruusan, she was defeated by Kyle Katarn while protecting Jerec. During the fight, she was prevented from killing Katarn outright when Yun blocked her killing blow. Reflexively, Sariss struck out at the lightsaber, killing Yun instantly. This brief moment allowed Katarn to take up Yun's lightsaber and stab her through the heart. (DF2, RAG, WOTC)

Sark, Dagnian

this Imperial Security Bureau agent was dispatched to Sirpar, shortly after the Battle of Yavin, to search out any potential Alliance sympathizers. While loyal to the Emperor, Sark hoped to gain power and prestige by locating rebels and bringing them to justice. (SWJ2)

Sarka

this planet was a New Republic supply center attacked by Grand Admiral Thrawn some five years after the Battle of Endor. It was the homeworld of the Sarkan race, and was known for its abundance of nova rubies and other gemstones. (DFR, CCG9, AE)

Sarkan

this race of humanoid lizards was native to the planet Sarka. They had short, pointed snouts and large eyes, and were often brightly colored. They walked upright, and used their thick tails to balance themselves. Many xenobiologists believed that the Sarkans shared a common ancestry with the Barabels. Their clothing was often adorned with gemstones, and they preferred to travel in groups of three. They had their own version of protocols, and anyone who didn't adhere to them was considered a barbarian. Their standard greeting had its own protocol, and had to include the life history of each individual, the number of battles each had won, the number and value of all gemstones each had mined, and the various mates each had acquired over time. Obviously, these greetings often lasted for hours, and any greeting of less than an hour greatly diminished the giver's worth. Many fine arts experts considered Sarkan ballet to be among the most beautiful in the galaxy. (CCG9, TTSB, AE, SWJ15, GMR7)

Sarkanian Jelly

a fruit spread created on the planet Sarka. (GOF4)

Sarken

this name, which meant "smiling", was common among Gungan males. (GCG)

Sarken Rimk

this Force-sensitive Gungan worked as a diving instructor on the moon of Dorumaa, during the era of the Battle of Naboo. He lived on Whitesand Island, and operated his diving school from the coast. He was not a patient being, and often forgot that non-Gungan species took more time to adapt to diving beneath the surface of the ocean. He sometimes used his ability with the Force to leave his customers with the impression that they had a wonderful time, regardless of their experience, and they often tipped generously because of it. (LFC)

Sarkese

this was the spoken language of the Sarkan race. It consisted of a complex collection of words and subtle body gestures. For written and other communications, most Sarkans use Basic. (UANT)

Sark-I

an Imperial shuttle which was commandeered by an assassin droid and purposely crashed into the Imperiak palace on Weerden. The droid performed this action in order to kill the Grand Inquisitor, Lord Torbin. (SWSB)

Sarkin

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Sarkin, Doran

this young boy was the son of Kell and Tyria Sarkin, and was gifted with his mother's connection to the Force. He traveled with his mother during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, as she searched for her own true calling. Doran and his family were among the handful of Jedi Knights and their supporters who ultimately survived the conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong. (UF)

Sarkin, Tyria

this blonde-haired woman, a native of the planet Toprawa, was member of the Antarian Rangers and was one of the first pilots to serve in Wraith Squadron. All members of her family were killed when the Empire subjugated Toprawa, after it was discovered that the plans for the first Death Star were transmitted from there, and she survived using her ranger skills until the New Republic rescued her. She had a small sensitivity to the Force, although a short series of training sessions with Luke Skywalker led her to believe she didn't have the depth of ability to become a Jedi Knight. This shattered one of her dreams, because she longed to gain more strength with the Force. However, the New Republic wanted her to train as a pilot, hoping that her sensitivity to the Force would make her a better pilot. By her initial scores, she wasn't cut out to be a pilot. She was approached by her commanding officer, Colonel Repness, who had altered her failing grades to make them passable, then threatened to blackmail her if she didn't assist him in stealing an X-Wing. She refused, and Repness had her thrown out of the training program, citing "gross insubordination." However, her scores were good enough to attract the attention of Wedge Antilles, and she became part of the Wraiths. Her training with the Antarian Rangers allowed her to become the squadron's scout. It was Tyria who came up with the name "Wraith Squadron." She soon fell in love with Kell Tainer, and their relationship continued to grow with Wedge's quiet assent. Her tiny sensitivity to the Force helped the Wraiths during their attempt to infiltrate the Binning Biomedical facility on Saffalore, as she could feel the residual pain and anguish of the creatures that were tested there. Tyria spent some time training with the Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4, before she and Kell were married. Tyria eventually attained the rank of Jedi Knight, and event which continued to elate her as the years went by and the New Republic fell into disrepair. While Kell remained a member of the Wraiths and fought against the Yuuzhan Vong, Tyria began travelling the galaxy with their young son, Doran, teaching him about the Force and expanding his - and her own - horizons. Tyria and her family were among the handful of Jedi Knights and their supporters who ultimately survived the conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong. (WS, IF, SOC, EL1, UF)

Sarkli

this Imperial officer was known as a fearless spy who would work through virtually any assignment. A nephew of Admiral Piett, Sarkli was once granted a personal audience with Emperor Palpatine, and was on the fast track to promotion. Sometime after the Battle of Yavin, he set out to join the Alliance, and eventually earned a place as a pilot on the newly-commissioned Rogue Squadron, serving under Luke Skywalker and Wedge Antilles. Despite having a large role in saving the group that rescued General Jan Dodonna from Yavin 4, Sarkli received very little in the way of recognition or trust. In an effort to establish himself, he set up an ambush that took the lives of several Rogue Squadron pilot, but returned to the Alliance with the claim that he was the sole survivor. His "heroism" went unrewarded, however, and he decided to "defect" to the Empire, a series of actions that allowed him to return to his true masters. The information he brought back to the Empire was well-received, and it was believed that he was given command of an Escort Carrier for his actions. He was later assigned to the team protecting the shield generator on the Forest Moon of Yavin, in order to ensure that the construction of the second Death Star went as planned. However, Han Solo and his strike team managed to infiltrate the bunker and place a series of explosives. Sarkli apprehended the rebel band as they exited the bunker, but Solo managed to shoot him in the chest. The armor he was wearing buckled under the assault, and he was killed when a bolt pierced the armor and his heart. (CCG11, RSG3)

Sarko

this man was the leader of the bounty hunters who tried to capture Quinlan Vos on Ord Mantell, some years after the Battle of Naboo. (ROP)

Sarko VI

this planet was believed to have been the site of an Alliance cell, during the years leading up to the Battle of Hoth. Imperial forces under the command of Captain Korvellen attacked the supposed cell's location, destroying buildings and communities in an effort to eliminate the rebels. Unfortunately for the natives of Sarko VI, there was never an Alliance presence on the planet. Korvellen later justified the slaughter of innocent beings by claiming that the natives were "...poor and without hope, potential rebel scum waiting to turn against the Empire." (RESB)

Sarlacc

a great beast which buries itself in the ground and waits for food to wander nearby. Only the Sarlacc's mouth remains visible, with inward-curving teeth covering its entire surface. A number of long, prehensile tongue-tentacles are connected to the inner mouth, and are used to grab its food and pull it into the lower sections of its body. The Sarlacc's body is apparently divided into two sections. The first is a large chamber where the prey is initially deposited. Branching off from this chamber are many smaller digestive chambers. Once prey has been dragged into the main chamber, the Sarlacc's internal musculature - which is connected to thousands of whip-like tentacles - moves it along the sticky inner walls to a holding place. There, its prey is stuck to the inner walls with various tendrils while the Sarlacc's internal fluids begin to flow around the prey. This allows the Sarlacc, which has no natural digestive system, to physically assimilate its prey. The theory is that the Sarlacc latches onto its prey, pumping its own caustic blood into the prey's system. The blood breaks down the prey slowly, picking up nutrients before passing back into the Sarlacc. The Sarlacc's blood also provided a minimal sustenance for its prey, so they are kept alive inside the beast for a long time. The Sarlacc's prey eventually becomes part of a huge network of consciousnesses created from all of its victims. Thus, it is believed that many of the Sarlacc's victims go mad before they die. Many theories exist on the reproduction of the Sarlacci, but it is known that they Sarlacc can regenerate lost flesh, especially the long tongue-tentacles. One theory is that the full-grown Sarlacc can send out spores, when conditions are right, that are capable of surviving the hard vacuum of space. Those spores that survive long enough to reach solid ground then attempt to bury themselves. Another theory held that there were two distinct sexes, with the female being the larger of the two. The male Sarlacc was actually a parasite, which would grow over time to devour its mate. When an offspring is produced, this theory claimed that a male and female would pair up and emerge as a single, nomadic entity. Most Sarlacc prefer dirt and damp earth; the female spore that landed on Tatooine is one of the few that managed to survive in the desert. Note that Wedge's Gamble indicates that Sarlaccs like the sand. The Tusken Raiders who live on Tatooine have a legend that says the Sarlacc gave birth to itself in the core of the planet, in the days before the twin suns had split apart from a single star. The Sarlacc, according to the legend, would continue to eat everything until it was forced to consume itself, thereby perpetuating a cycle of death and rebirth. The bounty hunter Dengar once told a drinking buddy that, after he pulled Boba Fett from the Sarlacc on Tatooine, he found that Fett's DNA had been mingled with that of a number of smugglers and lowlifes who had disappeared while in Jabba's service. It was surmised that they had been fed to the Sarlacc as punishment, and that through the pseudo-digestive process, the Sarlacc's blood had carried them into Fett's body. It is believed that the lifespan of a Sarlacc can measure 20,000 years or more. (ROTJ, DESB, MTS, TJP, WG, MA, WSW)

Sarlacc Gardens

this was one of many deep-desert locations found on the planet Tatooine. It was located near Monk's Well. (TG)

Sarlain Star Press

an anti-Imperial publisher which released Heroes of the Republic. (GG9)

Sarlim Gastess

this "blind" Gotal is the founder and Chief Executive of Gastess' Finance. Sarlim is blind because he has no sensitivity to the Force, unlike most others of the Gotal species. This has not proven to be a disadvantage, however, for his is a ruthless and domineering businessperson. Among other Gotals, Gastess is considered a clinical psychopath, but he functions well with other species. In general Sarlim is ill-tempered, ill-mannered, brash, and manipulative. He runs Gastess' and the corporations it consumes with an iron fist, uncaring about the work he does as long as the profits are good. (GG9)

Sarma

this hulking, battle-scarred Dubravan was a bounty hunter during the Galactic Civil War. He controlled many of the locals in his home village by extorting money from them. Nevana tried to get Sarma to wipe clean her father's debt by leading him to Luke Skywalker. Unfortunately, she was mistaken in believing that Jal Te Gniev knew Luke's whereabouts. Sarma contacted the local Imperial garrison and arranged to capture Jal, but scared Nevana into running. The Imperial troops followed her, and shot her in the back. (VQ)

Sarn

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Sarn

this Imperial Admiral was in command of the Super-class Star Destroyer Terror, as part of Darth Vader's V38 development plan following the Battle of Yavin. Sarn spearheaded several weapons-research efforts, in hopes of winning the Emperor's favor. When Sarn's crews failed to apprehend Rookie One and Ru Murleen, Vader used the Force to crush Sarn's windpipe before leaving the Terror. (RA2)

Sarna

this woman was a member of the Sith warriors who subjugated the planet Taris, during the height of the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Sarna

this woman was the Queen of the planet Drogheda, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Queen Sarna did everything she could to thwart her sister, Princess Danu, and her efforts to free the people. Sarna was one of Lando Calrissian's lady-friends, and invited him to Drogheda shortly after the Battle of Endor. She hoped that Lando could help her defeat the rebels who were trying to overthrow her, outwardly fearing that the rebels were being backed by the Empire. In reality, Sarna and Danu were using Calrissian as a way to rid themselves of the insurgents, thereby ensuring their continued rule of Drogheda. However, Danu was actually a rebel at heart, and exiled Sarna to any planet that Calrissian cared to drop her on. Lando, however, struck up a business relationship with Sarna. (LTA6, MC83)

Sarne, Kentor

this Imperial Moff was in command of Kathol Sector during the height of Emperor Palpatine's New Order. He had been a young Navy officer when Emperor Palpatine took control of the galaxy, and became a loyal Imperial officer and a member of the Imperial Survey Corps. During the advent of the New Order, he claimed to have been the sole survivor of a navigational mishap in Kathol Sector. The accident took the life of the entire crew, and only Sarne survived. It was during this time that Sarne discovered the existence of DarkStryder, and made a deal with the creature to provide it with hyperdrive technology in exchange for its own technology. Upon returning to Coruscant, Sarne was reassigned to a posting as the Captain of the Renegade as part of the 15th Deep Core Reserve Fleet, but eventually made his way back to Kathol Sector with a fleet of ships, including the Renegade. He established a base of power on Kal'Shebbol, and continued to exploit DarkStryder's technology while keeping the bio-engineered creature stranded on Kathol. Sarne most wanted to re-establish the launch gates of the ancient Kathol, which he planned to use in conquering the galaxy. After the Battle of Endor, Sarne was flushed from Kal'Shebbol by New Republic strike teams, and he fled the sector capital and hid in the Marcol Void. He took with him as much firepower as possible, including a sizable portion of his fleet, and hoped to refit the warships before the Republic could get much of a hold on the sector. He began negotiations with the Qektoth Confederation, trading several starships and their crews for certain biochemical weapons technology. After the crew of the FarStar began tracking him down, Sarne maneuvered them into position to be the bait in an elaborate trap to capture the New Republic and further utilize the DarkStryder technology. Unfortunately for Sarne, he underestimated the desires of the native races of Kathol to free the Precursors from the Lifewell and defeat DarkStryder. He tried to protect himself by hiding in DarkStryder's fortress, but was unable to defeat the crew of the FarStar and their companions. He tried to flee Kathol and reach the Bastion, but the Republic forces were tipped off to Sarne's escape and managed to shoot down the shuttle. Sarne was killed in the explosion. (DARK, KO, KR, E)

Sarne-One

this was DarkStryder's designation for Imperial Moff Kentor Sarne. (E)

Sarnikken Asteroid Belt

this dangerous belt of planetoids was located in Fakir Sector. Its asteroids contained a wealth of heavy metals, and mining operations struggled for control of them. The Empire tried to take control of the Belt for its own use, but the resident miners proved to be quite tenacious in their holdings. Imperial officers and bureaucrats had the tendency to disappear during trips to the Sarnikken Belt. The attempts by the Empire to take over the Belt only served to push the miners toward an agreement with the Alliance, and the Alliance received a wealth of raw materials from the Belt for the construction of its starships and weapons. The Alliance was often provided the assistance of Reekeene's Roughnecks to protect transports into and out of the Belt. (SWCP)

Sarnizak

this was the name of a noted member of the ZeHethbra race. (UANT)

Sassan Sareeta

this Sareeta is one of the many mercenaries which were hired by Executive Results. Sassan is well-known for his escape from an Imperial blockade along the Harrin Trade Corridor. He was ambushed by a TIE Fighter picket line in the Lazerian System, and jury-rigged his ship's shields to force all power to the forward shields. The ship, known as Moondrake, plowed into the picket line, punching through several TIE Fighters in order to flee the blockade. After being hired by Executive Results, Sassan became the coordinator of the transport of weapons from Syndicate One's operations on Valgauth. He was also responsible for calculating hyperspace routes for its transport ships. Note that the Ultimate Alien Anthology indicates that Sassan Sareeta was a Sullustan. (SWJ8, UANT)

Sassich

this Inspector with the Corellian Security Force was a contemporary of Iella Wessiri and Corran Horn, before they joined the New Republic. She was named as CorSec chief at the young age of forty, ditched her husband, and started taking personal training lessons from a pair of twin brothers who were half her age. (IJ)

Sasso

this Rodian worked as a guide on the planet Caluula, when he wasn't serving as an resistance operative for the New Republic. During the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Sasso and his Ryn partner, Ferfer, assisted Team Meloque in destroying the yammosk which had been installed on Caluula. During the mission, the team felt that it was being led into a trap, but their fears weren't borne out until they reached the location where the yammosk was kept. After Ferfer was killed by a hidden group of Yuuzhan Vong Slayers, Sasso was stabbed in the back by a warrior's coufee and died shortly afterward. (UF)

Sasyru, Remart

a vain man who wore a goatee and long, flowing moustaches that flared out like wings from his face, Sasyru was one of the pilots in Bolt Squadron, serving under Jacob Nive for the Khuiumin Survivors. Sasyru was a bully and a coward, and beat Caet Shrovl when she rejected his false friendship. This got Sasyru kicked out of Rock Squadron and moved to Bolt Squadron. However, his looks attracted the whimsy of Leonia Tavira, and Corran Horn's flying ability did as well. Sasyru was demoted from Bolt Lead, but was considered Tavira's next plaything. He and Corran - under the alias of Jenos Idanian - were constantly at odds. Their rivalry came to blows on Kerilt, after Sasyru tried to have his with a young Caamasi female. Corran, using a little of the Force to anticipate the larger man's attacks, managed to soundly defeat Sasyru. Corran stunned him for transport back to the Invidious, but Tavira had him executed for insubordination. (IJ)

Sato, Del

this employee of the Core Courier Service served as Taryn Clancy's co-pilot aboard the Messenger. He had been a pilot with CCS for more than thirty years, and retired after they evaded capture by the Imperial cruiser Requital after escaping from Coruscant. They were captured because he and Taryn were conscripted to help Jak Bremen reach the cruiser Hope with information vital to the New Republic, despite their own misgivings. Del was especially inconvenienced by Bremen's presence aboard the ship, as Bremen's military ego rubbed him the wrong way. After surviving the run to Coriallis, Bremen offered them a chance to join the Republic, but they declined. (TFE, SWJ7)

Satomi

an Alliance YT-1300 operative during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Sa'tosin

this was the Tarasin word used to describe the quills which lined the back of the Tarasin forearm. The word sa'tosin was unheard of until just after the Battle of Naboo, when the recorded memoirs of Dariana were discovered. (LFCW)

Satrank

this Godling worked for Trisstan the Godking during the era of the New Order. He pretended to be attempting to overthrow Trisstan when the crew of the Long Shot arrived on Masterhome, in an attempt to see what the Alliance agents wanted. (SWCP)

Sat'Skar

this planet, the second in the Coyn System, is the sister-world to Coyn itself. Sat'Skar's atmosphere is very dense, and has set up a greenhouse effect across the face of the planet. Thus, the only life there is microbes and primitive bacteria. The planet was named for the ritual sword used in Coynite combat. (PG3, OE)

Sat'skar

this was the name of the traditional Coynite sword. (OE)

Sat'skars Fas'Ba

this Coynite greeting translated into Basic as "Swords ended in battle." This was not a happy greeting, and indicated that unresolved conflicts remain between two Coynites which will not be forgotten. (PG3)

Sat'skars Fas'Tawws'Rattar

this Coynite greeting translated into Basic as "Swords ended in honor and friendship." It was used whenever two Coynites met with the intention of ending all conflicts and forming a friendship. (PG3)

Sat'skars Kabar'Ba

this Coynite greeting translated into Basic as "Swords together, joined in battle." This greeting was used when meeting an adversary, and was essentially a challenge to battle. (PG3)

Sat'skars Kabar'Rattar

this Coynite greeting translated into Basic as "Swords together, blunted in friendship." (PG3)

Satunda

this was the third day of the Tapani local calendar's week. (PGT)

Saturation Bombing

this technique of orbital or aerial attack uses a dense carpet of bombs to cover a large area with destructive force. Several runs by the attacking ships continue to pelt the target with bombs, effectively saturating the target with explosions. This technique is often used when a target is believed to be hiding underground, as the successive bombing runs often set up seismic disturbances and reduce the geological structure of the surrounding land. (MA)

Satyn

a stylish fabric used in men's clothing. (LCM)

Sau, Nardo

this xenoarchaeologist was one of the new breed which sprang up during the early years of the New Order. Unlike historians such as his chief rival, Angrail Ryhl, Sau was in the business to sell his discoveries to the highest bidder. Sau developed ties to several major corporations, and obtained a great deal of corporate sponsorship, something he used to get past the Imperial bureaucracy to obtain licenses before Ryhl could. Most of Sau's largest customers were on the planet Coruscant, and were private citizens or corporations with Imperial ties. (HR)

Saujutta-Ok-Topii

this female Pan-preneur was Director of Marketing for Trigdale Metallurgy until the corporation downsized following the Battle of Endor. She had been one of the few aliens to have established business relationships with the Empire, and was allowed to mingle within Imperial society. However, this did not save the division from being cut off by Trigdale. She took control of the defunct division and used her own money to build it back up in her own image. Moving the division's headquarters to Valgauth, she established Syndicate One as a weapons manufacturing facility. She used many of the business relationships she had developed over the years to gain suppliers and outlets, and formed Executive Results as a front for the weapons the Syndicate produced. (SWJ8)

Saul Moegantz

this diminutive humanoid being was a passenger aboard the Aurorient Express, during its last voyage some six years before the Battle of Naboo. A tan-skinned being with black hair going gray at the temples, Saul was unaware that his cargo - supposedly medicinal-grade survapierre, had been switched with a cargo of Fastlach-class defense droids. At the time, Clode Rhoden owed Saul a fairly substantial debt from poor gambling, a fact that allowed the alien the chance to transport the illegal survapierre without fear of repercussion. However, when Madam Rhoden was targetted for execution by her own husband, Saul offered to join forces with her to strike back at Clode. Madam Rhoden reluctantly agreed, seeing that a partnership with Moegantz was the lesser of several evils, including her own death. They planned to sue Clode for divorce, on the grounds that he tried to have her killed, then take all of Clode's wealth and split it between them. (TAE)

Saurian

this beast, of which there are several species, is native to the planet Eiattu. Many species are hunted for sport, while others have been domesticated. (XWWP)

Saurian Hornet

an extremely quick-tempered insect. (SE)

Saurin

a race of reptilian humanoids from the planet Durkteel, characterized by their long, tooth-filled snouts and their large, sunken eyes. Many xenobiologists believed that the Saurin race was a subspecies of the Trandoshan race, differentiated by their human-like hands. (CCG2, IWS)

Sauro, Sano

a native of the planet Telos, Sano Sauro was a friend of the Chun family. He was distinguished by his black eyes and stern gaze, and represented the Chuns as a legal counsel and prosecutor during the inquest into the events surrounding the death of Bruck Chun in the Jedi Temple on Coruscant. He was ruthless in his questioning of Obi-Wan Kenobi and Bant, and twisted their words to meet his needs. However, in the end, Obi-Wan was acquitted of any wrongdoing in Bruck's death. Sauro later moved his residence to the refueling world of Eeropha, where he swiftly gained enough power to be voted the planet's Senator to the Old Republic. He discovered the brilliant mind of Granta Omega, and sponsored his education at the All Sciences Research Academy on Yerphonia. As the Old Republic began to crumble from within, Senator Sauro began to gather more and more power to himself. When Granta Omega was implicated in several attempts to kill Jedi Knights - most notably, Obi-Wan Kenobi - Senator Sauro openly refused to cooperate with the investigation, despite his ties to Omega. Later, after Bog Divinian was elected Senator from Nuralee, they began stirring up anti-Jedi sentiments in the Senate, as part of a larger plan devised by Granta Omega to discredit the Jedi and cut off their Senate support. He invoked several subcommittee bylaws - some of which he had amended himself - to convene a panel of Senators with little or no love of the Jedi, much to the chagrin of Bail Organa and Mace Windu. Obi-Wan later discovered the scope of the plans being hatched by Granta Omega, when he set out to stop the theft of vertex crystals from the All Planet Relief Fund dedication. After capturing Valadon and Roper Slam, Obi-Wan realized that much of the activity the Jedi had uncovered was a ruse, meant to throw them off the true path. In reality, the group was planning to assassinate Chancellor Palpatine, then discredit the Jedi Order for failing to protect his life. Then, with the Senate in chaos, Bog Divinian would step forward and nominate Sano Sauro to succeed Palpatine, thereby allowing Granta Omega to secretly assume control of the galaxy. The plan was ultimately foiled, when Granta and Jenna Zan Arbor were forced to flee Coruscant under the pursuit of the Jedi. When Bog Divinian's proposal to eliminate Senate funding for the Jedi Order came to a vote shortly afterward, Senator Sauro was among the majority of Senators who voted against it. It was later learned that Senator Sauro had been offered the position of Deputy Chancellor by Palpatine himself. Palpatine explained to Anakin Skywalker that, by luring Sauro with power, Palpatine had made an ally out of an enemy. Because of this, Palpatine was able to monitor Sauro's every move. (JAD, JQ4, JQ5, JQ9)

Sauropoda

this was a species of huge, lumbering reptile that moved about on four legs, seemingly oblivious to the fact that they were crushing everything in their paths. (MBS)

Sauropteroid

see Swimming People of Dellalt. (HSL)

Saurton

this yellow star was the primary body in the Saurton System. (PG1)

Saurton

an alien race native to the planet Essowyn, the Saurton were thin-bodied, bipedal reptiles with golden scales and long snouts filled with sharp teeth. They were warm-blooded creatures whose advanced immune systems helped them avoid a wide range of diseases and infections. They had evolved enough to realize that their planet was continually bombarded with asteroids, and built their cities underground to protect them from impacts. As a society, they were perfectionists, with no tolerance for failure. Workers who failed to do their jobs were beaten or executed by their co-workers and managers. (PG1)

Sauvax

this was the native language of the Sauvax people, made up from a simple set of vocalizations. (GMR10, UANT)

Sauvax

this was a race of stout, crab-like beings which was native to the planet Leritor. The average Sauvax was amphibious, and moved about on six spindly legs. The arms of a Sauvax ended in heavy claws, and their entire body was covered with chitinous armor. This natural armor was flexible enough to allow a wide range of movement for the Sauvax's limbs and neck. Each hand-claw ended in five fingers: two large pincers and three opposable digits for finer manipulation. Despite their fearsome appearance, the average Sauvax was not warlike in nature, preferring to resolve disputes through discussion and negotiation. (GMR10, UANT)

SAV

the short name for a surface assault vehicle. Juggernauts, mobile command bases, and compact assault vehicles (CAVs) are all forms of SAVs. SAVs, in turn, are categorized as ground assault vehicles (GAVs). (SWJ9)

Savage Pleasure

Mael Sidras was assassinated by Imperial forces while vacationing aboard this luxury liner. The action also killed scores of other passengers, including all but two members of the Khzrry family of Xi'Dec. (CRO)

Savage Squadron

this was one of the two fighter squadrons created from pilots who were on Dubrillion when the planet was attacked by the Yuuzhan Vong. It was made up of Ugly-style starships piloted by non-military personnel, but they impressed Rogue Squadron with their tenacious will to survive. The Rogue Squadron pilots had referred to them as Salvage Squadron, but quickly dropped that moniker when the pilots proved their skills. They supported the Republic's defense of Dantooine from Yuuzhan Vong invasion, but took heavy losses in the fighting. (DTO, NJOSB)

Savan

this Falleen female was Xizor's niece, who survived the devastation on her homeworld and rose to power shortly after Xizor's death. Savan hoped to re-establish the glory of Black Sun, in the wake of Xizor's death. She used prosthetics to outwit her foes, making herself into the antiques dealer Azool as well as one of the remaining vigos of Black Sun. She instigated a civil war among the rest of Xizor's lieutenants shortly after his death, hoping to eliminate them without much effort. She used a meeting with Han Solo and Princess Leia Organa as bait, and staged an attack that she blamed on Vekker, Sprax, and Clezo. She tracked Guri to Hurd's Moon, hoping to obtain the services of the human replica droid for herself. Once she made contact with Guri, Savan used a hidden code phrase to activate specialized programming Xizor had installed in Guri's brain. The droid, however, had been reprogrammed by Doctor Thrumble, and pretended to accede to Savan's command. Instead, Guri whirled and knocked Savan unconscious with a single punch. Savan was imprisoned and eventually brought to trial. (SEE) developed by MerrSonn, the savant missile is known as a "surprise attack" weapon. They appear to be dumb bombs to their targets, used only to establish line-of-sight and not dangerous. When a pilot moves to avoid the seemingly dumb bomb, the savant's internal computer system kicks in after a short delay. The computer then re-establishes its target lock and slams into the target from behind, well before the pilot can react to the new threat. (TTSB)

Savant Missile

Savareen Brandy

this brandy is created with arcane procedures, and is well worth the time and expense. (GG9)

Savareen Brandy Stinger

an alcoholic drink favored by Tribune Challer, Ysanne Isard's agent put a lethal dose of poison in one for him. Challer was killed almost instantly by the poison. (XWMR)

Savareen Dancer

this moderately-priced cruiser liner took passengers on a tour of the Outer Rim Territories. (GG9)

Savax

this male Ubese was the leader and war-master of the Vorsazg clan, and ruled the Southern Wastes of Uba IV during the early years of the New Order. Disgusted with the yrak pootzck Ubese who fled to Ubertica, Savax gathered up a huge force and set out to destroy Ubertica. Savax's forces nearly succeeded in wiping out the Ubese population on Ubertica, but their bombardment was halted by the appearance of an Imperial fleet. The fleet destroyed Savax and his fleet in short order, but not before much of Ubertica was destroyed. (SESB)

Save the Stohl

this public relations campaign was started after Shantee Ree's attack stohl bit an overzealous admirer during an autograph session. The fan grabbed her arm, and the stohl - Needla - responded as she was trained. The media immediately portrayed the attack stohls as vicious, and hunters began killing them for no reason. Shantee responded quickly, first explaining Needla's reaction, then launching the "Save the Stohl" campaign to halt the slaughter of the creatures. (COG)

Save, Whimper

this dark-haired woman was a frequent patron of the Outlander Club, during the time of the Battle of Geonosis. She stood out somewhat from other patrons in that she wore a hood, covering up most of her upper body. (OWS, SWI75)

Saveen, Jog

this woman was a Jedi Knight who succumbed to the Dark Side of the Force when she began using the Force for evil deeds. (DSSB)

Savich, Moranda

before this woman worked as a courier for Talon Karrde, she was a freelance pick-pocket and information broker. She became wrapped up in the Alliance when she lifted the plans to the first Death Star from the courier who was in the Continuum Void tapcafe waiting for Garm Bel Iblis. Once she figured out that the datacards were Imperial property, she tried to get rid of them. Later, she and Bel Iblis were able to recover the plans, with the help of Hal Horn. Horn had been chasing Moranda to arrest her, but ended up helping them all escape the presence of Ysanne Isard, who had come to recover the plans. Following the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn, she was protected on her runs by the Noghri Plakhmirakh. They met Luke Skywalker on Cejansij, when he helped break up an attack directed at them. She later re-appeared on Bothawui, when Wedge Antilles and Corran Horn were trying to see if anyone was going to attack the Drev'starn shield generator. She managed to re-steal their wallets, after a pair of Bothans lifted them. They worked together to narrow down the list of possible suspects until Wedge and Corran were recalled to Rogue Squadron, to accompany Garm Bel Iblis on the raid on Yaga Minor. Working alone from that point, Moranda proved to be quite a thorn in the sides of Klif and Drend Navett, nearly stopping them from successfully taking out the generator with her subtle yet terrorist-like attacks. Once she finally discovered their identities, she broke into the Exoticalia Pet Emporium and ransacked the shop. Moranda then called the Bothan police force to investigate. She followed this up by starting a small fire in the shop, which essentially broke their cover. They were forced to kill the Bothans, but still managed to take out Drev'starn's shields. (SOP, VOF, TFNR)

Savielk Trey'dra

this Bothan was the leader of the Bothan Council, and the de facto ruler of the Bothan people, at the height of the New Order. Savielk owned a rare copy of The Way by Golm Fervse'dra, and modeled his life and his philosophies after the ancient Bothan Way. (SPG)

Savill, Vaskel

this roughly handsome young man was a high-ranking lord within House Melantha at the height of the New Order. He was generally considered the mastermind behind House Melantha's plan to destroy the Imperial torpedo sphere which was stationed near Tallaan shortly before the Battle of Endor. He proposed that plan to Annora Calandra and House Melantha during a Vor-cal hunt, using the event as a cover for their meetings. Vaskel's cocky, self-assured confidence helped push the idea through to its implementation. Shortly after the Vor-cal held on Vilhon, Savill hired Lord Sef Falken to assassinate Calandra, and then hired Lord Barleos to execute High Lord Bal Jaset on Procopia. Both attempts were thwarted by a team of Alliance agents hired by House Cadriaan to discover Savill's plans, and Savill's political career was ruined. Ultimately, the torpedo sphere was destroyed, but it resulted in the almost complete subjugation of Tapani Sector by the Empire. (LOE)

Saving the Universe (again)

this song, written and played by the band Deeply Religious, first appeared on the compilation Deeply Religious. It was banned by the Imperial Board of Culture. (GG9)

Savorium

this herb was discovered by Klorr Vilia about ten years before the Battle of Yavin. Vilia was looking to create an herb that would appeal to a wide variety of species and palates. What he created was a large, tree-like plant with leaves which, when consumed, produce the illusion of rapture. Vilia became the first victim of the plant's effects when he used it to prove to Zorneth that he had created the wide-appeal herb he had set out to create. Vilia was suddenly locked in a blissful state, and Zorneth was struck with the realization that savorium, in the wrong hands, could be used as a devastating weapon. The users of the drug, known as Smilers, are locked in a perpetual state of bliss, and often require protection. Zorneth created the Caretaker virus to covertly use droids to protect them. (DRO)

Savrant

this gas giant was the fifth and outermost planet in the Bacrana System, and was orbited by six moons. (FBS)

Savrip

this hulking race of humanoids, native to Ord Mantell, was strongly muscled and massively built. To much of the galaxy, savrips were simply predatory creatures. A savrip was often portrayed as one of the creatures in a dejarik game. However, savrips are fully sentient. They were forced into the wilderness when the Old Republic first colonized Ord Mantell, and they chose to maintain a low profile in order to retain their civilization. However, their combative nature and unusual language led to a deeper sense of the savrips' unintelligence, and many were hunted or exported. Thus, very few savrips remain on Ord Mantell. The average savrip individual can live to be over 500 years in age, provided that it survived that long. (CCG, ANT)

Savrip

this was the name given to the guttural language of the Savrip species. (ANT)

Savrip

this was the first Imperial Vindicator-class Heavy Cruiser, assigned to patrol the Mid Rim during the height of the New Order. The Savrip was also one of the first Vindicator-class ships that was not later converted to an Immobilizer 418 Interdictor-class cruiser. The Savrip was later captured by the Alliance and renamed the Molator. (SOG)

Savrip Clan

this was one of the many "clans" formed by the Jedi Council to facilitate the training of young individuals, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Like other such groups, the Savrip Clan was made up of children of varying species between the ages of four and eight standard years. They trained in these groups until they were thirteen years old, at which time they were either chosen by a Jedi Master as a Padawan learner or given other duties outside the Jedi Order. (PJSB)

Sav-ro

this was one of the many Eickarie clans that made up the Hu-shi-crive tribe on the planet Kariak, during the height of the New Republic. (FB)

Sav'ruuchi

this being was a noted fashion designer, who produced wondrous pantsuits and casual attire during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Savvam Lake

like most bodies of water on the planet Coruscant, Savvam Lake was an artificial lake built for the enjoyment of those living near it. Constructed for the pleasure of the rich and famous, Savvam Lake was lined with trees and flowers which had been genetically bred for their year-round blooms and wondrous fragrances. Also like other bodies of water, Savvam Lake was constructed more than 200 stories above the actual surface of Coruscant, atop the interlocking roofs of several buildings. (APS)

Savvlock's School of Big Business

this well-hidden, though widely publicized, educational institution prepared underhanded businessmen with the know-how to operate in the various underworld activities of the modern galaxy. (WSV)

Sawkee

an alias used by Ponda Baba. (SWR, OWS)

Sawrtin, Thi

this smuggler captain plied the Essien Run during the early years of the New Order. He was summarily executed after trying to bribe Captain Gresia Vleen, after the Tory's Catcher intercepted his vessel. (AIR)

Saw-toothed Grank

this species of large, predatory feline was native to the planet Naboo. The grank's jaws were filled with huge, serrated teeth which it used to capture and tear at its favorite prey, the shiro. The meat of the grank was considered a delicacy by the Gungans, and its hard toenails were machined for use in the engines of bongo submarines. In the wild, granks were solitary predators that hunted with acute senses of hearing and touch. The latter sense was obtained by the hairs that ran along the creature's sides, which could detect vibrations in the air and ground. A few specimens of saw-toothed grank were exported from Naboo as pets or guardbeasts, but these usually became too feral to manage and were set loose. These wild granks quickly dominated their ecosystem, and often preyed upon sentient beings before being destroyed. (GF, WSW, WOTC)

Sayblohn

primary planet in the Sayblohn system, it is the homeworld of the Okfili race. (RPG)

Saychel

this Doctor worked at the New Republic's Meridian Sector medical facility on Nim Drovis, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Saychel was Major Showolter's primary contact on the planet, and the two were old friends from time they had spent on Coruscant during the early years of the New Republic. Saychel's team was in charge of learning everything they could from the Yuuzhan Vong priestess Elan, after the priestess was captured near Exodo II. (HT)

Sayings

this ancient manuscript was written by the scribes of Uueg Tching, who sought to write down his parables, analogies, and military instructions. The document was kept in the Atrisian Imperial Historical Library on Kitel Phard for 3,000 years before it was removed to be copied. The copies were distributed to all living members of the Tching royalty some 1,500 years before the fall of the Old Republic. Later, at the height of the New Order, Emperor Palpatine demanded that the original manuscript be brought to Coruscant, where it disappeared into his private collection. Following the Battle of Endor, the exact location of the manuscript was unknown. (SWJ14)

Sayl

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Sayla

this name was common among the Feeorin race. (UANT)

Sayla Voth

this was the name of a noted Zabrak individual. (UANT)

Sayn Ta

this female Kaminoan was one of the Master Cloners who were assigned to the development of clone troopers for the Army of the Republic. In the wake of the Battle of Geonosis, Sayn Ta and her assistant were tasked with enhancing the already excellent combat skills of the clone troopers. When the troopers suddenly started dying from an internal nano-virus, Sayn Ta was called upon by Aayla Secura and Kit Fisto to investigate the problem. It was discovered that her assistant had been bribed by the Separatists to infect the clones, as revenge for toiling under Sayn Ta without receiving any of the accolades. The assistant used the virus to kill Sayn Ta, hoping that an antidote would not be created. The assistant then threatened to inject the virus into Aayla Secura, but he accidentally injected himself. The assistant also died, but the virus was used to create an antidote and vaccinate the clones. (T14)

Saz

this being served as a Captain in the New Republic military, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Captain Saz was eventually placed in command of the Blackmoon Squadron of E-Wings, following the Battle of Ebaq. (UF)

SB1

Imperial slang for a battalion's captain, second-in-command to the battalion's major. SB1 is responsible for the unit's intel. (ISB)

SB-109

this was one of two GAT-12h Skipray blastboats assigned to the small fleet used by Captain Vocis Kenit during his search for the Far Orbit. (FOP)

SB2

Imperial slang for a battalion's logistics officer. (ISB)

SB-20

this was a series of security breach droids. It was an espionage droid created from an R2 shell. (SOP)

SB-20

this was a series of computer-slicing droids produced by Illicit Electronics during the Galactic Civil War. Resembling a standard R2 unit, this droid could enter virtually any computer system solely upon its appearance. Underneath the basic R-series shell was a sophisticated package of espionage software and encryption/decryption gear which allowed the SB-20 to access and collect all manner of sensitive data. (FOP, GFT)

SB3

Imperial slang for a battalion's medical officer. (ISB)

SB-32

this was one of two GAT-12h Skipray blastboats assigned to the small fleet used by Captain Vocis Kenit during his search for the Far Orbit. (FOP)

SB4

Imperial slang for a battalion's technical officer. (ISB)

SB5

Imperial slang for a battalion's headquarters officer. This designation has no counterpart at the company level; SB5 is responsible for coordinating the battalion's support, security, and order. (ISB)

SB-9

a shutterbug droid designed to take pictures. Lando Calrissian had one at the Hologram Fun World theme park. They have cameras built into their chests, and their eyes act as strobe flashes. (QE)

S'Basso

this was a common name used by the H'nemthean race. (UANT)

SBP-200

this blaster pistol was produced by Elmainin Armaments during the height of the New Order. It was considered by many to be an ineffective knock-off of other, better-made weapons. Its housing was fragile, and its focusing crystals were substandard and poorly tuned to the weapon's power capabilities. (GFT, AEG)

SC1

Imperial slang for a company's lieutenant, the second in command. (ISB)

SC2

Imperial slang for a company's logistics officer. (ISB)

SC3

Imperial slang for a company's medical officer. (ISB)

SC4

this model of Taim & Bak heavy blaster cannon was used on the Explorer submergible. (CFG)

SC4

Imperial slang for a company's technical officer. (ISB)

SC-4

this blaster pistol was produced by Imperial Munitions from plans provided by SoroSuub, and was noted for the unusual design of its internal mechanisms. The SC-4's power packs and handle were given unique codes that could be tracked by Imperial computer systems. This allowed law enforcement officers to quickly locate any being who used an SC-4 in committing a crime. Using specially-coded transmissions, Imperial officers could also detonate the power pack of an SC-4 from a remote location, rendering the weapon - and, quite often, the user - badly damaged. (IA, GUN)

SC-401

this was the model number of a pair of stun cuffs developed by Locris Syndicated Securities. Like other such devices, the SC-401 automatically adjusted its cuffs to the size of the being in custody, and continued to tighten if the being tried to struggle out of the cuffs. The cuffs could only be removed by entering a seven-digit code into the keypad. (EGW, AEG)

SC-4X

this was a security droid which was manumitted and given its independence. (MB)

Scabwit

a derisive term used by the Gamorreans. (SWJ14)

Scale Dust

this was a mild poison created by Amira Nasrabi, from natural materials collected from the sea life of Vaynai's shallow oceans. It caused wild hallucinations in those beings who inhaled it. (GMR8)

Scale-10 Battery

a small battery used in emergency kits. (COJ)

Scale-20 Battery

a medium-sized battery used to power portable bases. (COJ)

Scale-5 Syrup

a sugary syrup. (COJ)

Scale-50 Battery

a large battery, capable of powering older models of TIE Fighters. (COJ)

Scalefish

this is the generic name given to a wide range of shiny, scaled fish native to the oceans of Naboo. (IG1)

Scalpel Grass

this form of grass was bio-engineered by the Yuuzhan Vong to have thick, sturdy blades. Each individual blade of scalpel grass had razor-sharp edges, and grew to the height of a Yuuzhan Vong knee. Because of its sturdy blades, scalpel grass could cut into exposed flesh with realtive easy, making it the perfect plant for growing outside slave compounds and prison camps. (UF)

Scalp-Hunter

this experimental weapon design was developed by the Trade Federation and Merr-Sonn Munitions several years before the Battle of Naboo. The Scalp-Hunter was slow to production, especially after a cargo of the weapons were stolen by Nym and his crew. The Scalp-Hunter was fully automatic, with a collapsible stock and a cortosis alloy barrel. It was produced during a time when mercenaries and other criminal organizations were wary of fighting against the Jedi Knights. (T7, NEGW)

Scaly Tauntaun

this unusual variation on the standard tauntaun evolved on Hoth as a hairless species, despite the obvious advantages of a layer of fur. Unlike its surface-dwelling cousins, though, the scaly tauntaun lived in small herds well below the surface, where they sought out geothermal vents and bubbling hot springs. They seemed to be able to follow the slightly sulfur atmosphere produced by the springs and upwellings, burrowing tunnels where necessary to reach a new cave. These traits made the scaly tauntaun a target of scientific investigation for two reasons: research didn't have to be done in the bitter cold of Hoth's surface, and scaly tauntauns provided an example of a highly-efficient energy processor. They used very little heat in their daily activities, trapping as much as possible within their bodies. This may have allowed them to keep their underground lairs warmer than usual. Scaly tauntauns were extremely skittish creatures, and bolted for the safety of their lairs whenever a wampa appeared. (WOTC)

Scamp

this red-haired youth tried to steal Luke Skywalker's lightsaber, while Luke was on the planet to help it become a member of the New Republic. When Imperial forces retok the planet, Scamp made his move. Luke caught him in the act, however, and Scamp agreed to help Luke look for Raggold's killer in exchange for Luke's protection from looters. Shortly afterward, Scamp revealed to Luke that he only stole things to keep his father from beating him. Scamp then took Luke to meet with Braxas. (MC89)

Scan grid

a device used to measure the properties of metals. Darth Vader used one to torture Han Solo on Cloud City. (ESBN)

Scandium Team

this group of Alliance operatives was led by Dutra Zeneta, and Harovan Toth but was soundly defeated at the Wellte-ir Massacre and later disbanded when only six of its original twenty-eight members survived. It was formed in the early days of the Alliance, and was based in Tharin Sector. However, their influence was felt throughout the galaxy. (SWJ10, SWJ11)

Scandoc

the official form of communication between Imperial Intelligence agents, a scandoc is intelligible upon receipt. Immediately following its receipt, a scandoc is coded to begin mutating some time later. The mutations begin with a few message packets out of every thousand. If the document is reproduced, further mutations occur until the document is no longer understandable. (ISB)

Scanoven

this food preparation unit is found in many starship galleys. (OS)

Scapio

this was ostensibly the capital city of the planet Recopia. One of many city-states that existed on the planet's high plateaus, Scapio gained prominence simply because the Thoren Spaceport was located within its boundaries. It was made up from islands that formed a long chain, each of which was linked by bridges that spanned the acid seas. (CCW)

Scar of Remembrance

this red facepaint was used by the rulers of Naboo's human population in times of crisis. The paint was applied to the lower lip in a thick line, and signifies the intense struggles the Naboo faces in the war-filled era preceding the Great Time of Peace. Queen Amidala wore the Scar of Remembrance during the Trade Federation's blockade of her planet. (IG1)

Scarab

this Trade Federation starship participated in the Battle of Naboo. (OWS, SFT)

Scarab Droid

a small, beetle-shaped droid developed for Emperor Palpatine by Sienar Intelligence Systems, a scarab droid could infiltrate most places like a normal insect. The Scarab was produced in order to avoid any legal hassle involved with hiring trained assassins to eliminate Palpatine's enemies. These palm-sized, arachnoid automatons could be programmed to seek out specific targets and deliver a venomous bite. There were some eighteen distinct versions of the Scarab Droid produced, with spines, claws, and shredders serving as the primary weapon on each version. (DE2, EGD)

Scarab Mark VI

this sixth version of Scarab Droid produced by Sienar Intelligence Systems, the Mark VI posted the best kill-ratio among all eighteen versions of the Scarab. These droids had a pair of hard injection fangs mounted on their heads, which could deliver a wide range of poisons. (EGD)

Scarab-class Fighter

this flat-bodied starfighter design was produced during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. The design featured two outrigger-like wings, each connected to the fuselage by a pair of heavy struts. (STF)

Scardia Station

a cube-shaped space station that served as a base of operations for the Prophets of the Dark Side, it patrolled the Null Zone until it was destroyed by Grand Admiral Makati several years after the Battle of Endor. (LCJ, SWI66)

Scardia Voyager

the private starship used by the Prophets of the Dark Side. (MMY)

Scarlet

this term was used by the Imperial Board of Culture to indicate those songs which were artistically worthless or offensive. (GG9)

Scarlet Pirate, The

this was the nickname of Reddjak, the pirate who was the leading character in the holo-series Space Pirates of the Galaxy, which was popular during the early years of the New Order. (MDCAR)

Scarlet Thranta

this Old Republic corvette was under the command of Captain Zozridor Slayke, serving the Judicial Branch of the Republic during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. As the crisis with the Separatists reached a fevered pitch, Captain Slayke and his crew defected from the Old Republic, vowing to take the fight to the Separatists until the Republic decided whether or not to get involved militarily. Although Jedi Master Nejaa Halcyon and an entire task force was to Bpfassh to intercept him, Slayke managed to escape. He also managed to steal Halcyon's starship, the Plooriod Bodkin, which led to the Jedi Master being temporarily relieved of any command duties. (HNN5, JT)

Scarlet Vertha

this Ghtroc Class 720 freighter was owned and operated by Nabrun Leids. It was armed with a double laser cannon. The ship's life-support systems were modified provide a methane-only atmosphere, allowing Leids to travel without the heavy breather mask he had to wear on methane-poor worlds. (SSR)

Scarns

a Sullustan slang word referring to an unknown part of their anatomy. (XW)

Scat

this man was a member of the Garosian underground resistance, during the early years of the New Republic. Scat was held prisoner at the Imperial garrison in Ariana, but was freed from the facility by Alex Winger and her strike team. (SWJ1)

Scatalpen

this predator was native to the planet Aleen, and was known to attack prey that was much larger than itself. The scatalpen would slash open the belly of its prey during a hunt. When the prey tripped over its own entrails, the scatalpen killed it. (NEGC)

Scatalpen

this was the name of Ratts Tyerell's Vokoff-Strood Titan 215 podracer. It was named after the scatalpen predator of Aleen. (NEGC)

Scatter, The

this shallow valley was located on the planet Iego, and it was here that the Diathim - also known as the Angels - dragged wayward starships and crashed them. It seemed to be covered with a sheet of ice, but the shiny surface was actually formed by the reflection of light off starship hulls. The Scatter was surrounded by the wreckage of thousands of starships, and the twisted wreckage made access to the valley floor difficult and dangerous. The survivors who managed to eke out an existence on Iego made their homes along the Scatter, using the hulls of starships as shelter. (WOTC)

Scattergun

this old form of weapon uses expanding gas as its propellant. Pellets of stone or metal are loaded into a chamber, and are expelled at high velocity by the release of a certain amount of the expanding gas. (POT)

Scaur, Dif

this man was the Director of the New Republic Intelligence agency during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Prior to heading up the NRI, he had been an Admiral with the Republic's Fourth Fleet. He was distinguished by pale blue eyes and pronounced widow's peak, although many wondered how the frail-looking man could command such power and respect. Scaur and his forces worked in concert with the Chiss, Hapans and Bothans, gathering a wealth of information about Yuuzhan Vong culture and physiology under the auspices of the Alpha Red operation. Scaur was more than angry when Cal Omas and the leaders of the New Republic chose not to employ the Alpha Red virus, based on the concerns of the Jedi Knights. He harbored a deep-seated resentment toward the Jedi, but continued to work toward what he believed were the best interests of the galaxy. Years later, Scaur was placed in charge of organizing the missions to destroy the yammosks on Caluula and Toong'L, just prior to the anticipated Yuuzhan Vong attack on Mon Calamari. His posting as organizer was secondary to his true mission, which was to deploy a new strain of the Alpha Red virus at Caluula. When the virus worked too well, killing not only the Yuuzhan Vong and their biotechnology but also flitnats and winged-stars, the Alpha Red project was once again put on hold. With the surrender of the Yuuzhan Vong at Coruscant shortly afterward, Dif Scaur was quietly forced to resign his position by Cal Omas. (HT, DW, UF)

Scavenger Hawk

these great birds are native to the planet Corellia. They are much like vultures, waiting for an animal to die or be killed. They then consume the leftover flesh. (AS)

Scavenger Moth

this carnivorous moth was native to the planet Drongar, and fed on the decaying bodies of all manner of creatures. (MBS)

Scavenger of the Galaxy

Scavenger Squadron

led by Commander Gennad Rozhdenst, this Alliance Y-Wing squadron was dispatched by Mon Montha to guard Kuat Drive Yards against Imperial attack during the Battle of Endor. Its ranks were filled with pilots who had been orphaned from their original squadron as a result of the losses taken in previous battles, and it had proved itself almost from its inception. (HM)

Scavenger Young

this was the name used by those members of The Young who lived in the wilderness outside the city of Zehava, during the height of its civil war between the Daan and the Melida. (DOD)

Scavenger-series Labor and Recycling Droid

this series of droids, developed in an unusual joint project among several groups of outlaw techs and criminal organizations, was designed to salvage the scrap left behind during the Galactic Civil War and recycle it. The various groups who designed and used the Scavengers quickly turned a profit, selling recycled metals and plastics back to the corporations that were manufacturing war materiel. The Scavenger moved about on two heavy treads, and was equipped with a pair of heavy-duty lifting arms. Six small tractor beam projectors ringed the main refuse chute, into which the arms dumped whatever refuse the droid located. Once inside, the materials were broken down and compacted for later storage. (SWJ10)

Scavs

junk traders on Coruscant, these social castaways loot battlefields for armor and weapons. (DA)

Scavs

scavengers who roam the spaceports of the galaxy in search of cheap parts and materials. (DE2)

Scelli

this female Meri worked as a speedercab driver on Derilyn, during the height of the Imperial occupation of the planet. (OE)

Sceltor

this was one of the many Victory-class Star Destroyers which were still active, as part of the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Scenic Replicator

this entertainment device places the user into a simulated remote environment. Ranging in size from a one-person booth to an entire dance floor, scenic replicators provide detailed reproductions of alien worlds. (SWJ9)

Scent of Fear

this Taloron Prey Chaser was owned and operated by Crutag, during the height of the New Order. He and a group of bounty hunters flew in the ship to Trinta, in an effort to capture a group of Alliance agents. It was stolen by Halagad Vantor, in order to ensure Crutag remained on the planet. After the deaths of Crutag and Vantor, the Alliance agents took possession of the ship and fled Trinta. (DOE)

Scenter

this small device was created by those Toydarians who traveled away from their homeworld. The scenter would regularly emit a spray of algae-mat into the atmosphere, recreating the natural environment of the swamps of Toydaria. (SWK)

Scentwood

a wood which has a unique fragrance when cured and finished. (HSE)

Scepter of Entreaty

this Yuuzhan Vong staff was carried by any individual who wished to discuss matters of grave urgency with the Supreme Overlord. (UF)

Scepter of Power

this large amphistaff was controlled by Supreme Overlord Shimrra, as a symbol of his leadership of the Yuuzhan Vong race. (UF)

Scepter of Ragnos

this ancient Sith artifact was believed to have been lost on Yavin 4 during the Great Sith War. It was recovered by the Disciples of Ragnos some ten years after the Battle of Endor, and used by Tavion to drain the Force energy from many locations across the galaxy. The Dark Jedi then planned to utilize the stored power in the scepter to resurrect Marka Ragnos. Although Tavion reached Korriban and was able to transfer the power from the Scepter to Ragnos' tomb, she was killed in combat by Jaden Korr before Ragnos was able to possess her body. Korr then destroyed the Scepter with a slash of his lightsaber, forcing Ragnos back into his tomb. (JKA)

Schaum/Yfarg/Welbig/Fabrico and Associates

known as SchaumAssoc, this Twi'leki advertising agency pioneered media and public relations for the Corporate Sector. They were one of the Corporate Sector Authority's original voting sponsors. (CSA)

Schenor

also known as schenor sapiens, this near-human race remained neutral in the Galactic Civil War until Luke Skywalker helped persuade them to join the Alliance. The schenor are native to the planet Rhamsis Callo. They average about eight feet in height, and resemble upright cats. These feline-humans are extremely skilled in the martial arts. They have a deep-seated code of honor and family, and follow a strict social casting system. (RPG)

Scherkil Hla

this squat, flightless bird was raised by the Yuuzhan Vong as a source of protein. (FH3)

Schickele

a game of chance played in many casinos. (TME)

Schifil

this man was a security officer working at the Bakuran Senate Complex during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (FH2)

Schinga

this was the generic name of several species of huge snakes that were native to the deserts of Makem Te. Among the many subspecies were the schinga equa, the schinga klaug, and the schinga shikou, which was known as the "pride of Makem Te." (WOTC)

Schinga Equa

this was one of the many species of schinga, native to the planet Makem Te, that proved to be easily domesticated by the Swokes Swokes. The schinga equa was also the most obedient and strongest of the various schingas. (WOTC)

Schinga Ikkow

this was one of the many venomous subspecies of schinga, which were native to the planet Makem Te. The schinga ikkow's fangs literally dripped venom when it opened its mouth to attack. (WOTC)

Schinga Klaug

this was a subterranean species of schinga, native to the planet Makem Te. (WOTC)

Schinga Picai

this was one of the smallest subspecies of schinga that was native to the planet Makem Te. (WOTC)

Schinga Shikou

this was the most noble of all the schinga subspecies native to the planet Makem Te, and was domesticated by the Swokes Swokes for use as a mount. These serpent-stallions were often referred to as "the pride of Makem Te" because of their strong bodies and regal demeanor. (WOTC)

Schmood

this Yuzzum was a member of Grappa the Hutt's court. After Mirith Sinn locked the Hutt in a holding cell, Schmood discovered him and released him. Grappa was thankful for the split second it took Schmood to unlock the door, then blamed his imprisonment on the small creature. (CE2)

Schnil Hakoon

this Kubaz crime lord rose to power in the city of Kinkosa, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. He employed the Ebon Coursers as his personal band of mercenaries. Hakoon originally left his homeworld of Kubindi for Kirtania, after hearing that Kirtania's biosphere was teeming with insects. He then turned to criminal activity to fund his schemes for cornering the market on insect farming. He also set his sights on taking control of the insecticulture on Kubindi, but he realized that he needed a great deal of financial backing in order to accomplish this. (SWJ1)

School For The Learning, The

this was formal name of the Keganite educational facility for The Learning. (TTW)

School of Hidden Widsom

this was the only known dueling academy to survive the Clone Wars and the rise of Emperor Palpatine. Founded by Ephaan Kenzon on his homeworld of Baltimn, the School of Hidden Wisdom was outwardly a quaint reminder of the chivalrous fighting styles of the Old Republic. What few beings knew was that the School served primarily to train Jedi Knights and other Force-sensitive individuals in the fight against the Empire. The irony of this situation was that virtually every other dueling academy of the Old Republic failed when popular opinion of the Jedi Order plummeted during the Clone Wars. However, this was the very reason the School of Hidden Wisdom was able to survive. Coupled with Baltimn's remote location, the School had never been heavily attended. When other academies died out, school officials decided to lay low, fading from the public consciousness. Then, as the atrocities of the Empire were revealed, Kenzon began to accept Jedi Knights who were fleeing the Emperor's Purge. He continued to train his students in combat arts as well as in the use of the Force, although Kenzon had abandoned the Jedi Order before becoming a Knight himself. Nevertheless, his maintenance of the School of Hidden Wisdom allowed a great many Jedi to survive and fight against the Empire which tried to destroy them. After the Battle of Endor, Kenzon realized that he had begun to attract the attention of the dying Empire. However, the emergence of the New Republic and the re-establishment of the Jedi under Master Luke Skywalker, gave Kenzon a reason to finally rest. He disbanded the School of Hidden Wisdom, especially after several of his students were accepted for further training at Skywalker's Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4. (PJSB)

School of Public Policy

this branch of the Imperial University specialized in educating people on the ways in which a citizen should behave as a member of the Human High Culture. (SWJ7)

School of the Arts

based on the planet Reena, this educational institution taught the finer points of acting and theater. The school put on a series of free performances across the planet. (LOE)

School of Torturers

a specialized training facility set up by Emperor Palpatine on Coruscant. Its students learned the fine art of torture. (COJ)

School, The

this was the term used by the Iskalonians to describe the seventeen distinct races that made up their civilization. The exact origins of The School were lost over time, although environmental upheavals on many of the original homeworlds of the Iskalonians occurred in close temporal proximity, many millennia before the Galactic Civil War. These events were followed by several rescue missions, and many of the devastated races were relocated to the planet Iskalon, due to its similarity to their homeworlds. Mammon Hoole later led an expedition to the ruined planets to further investigate the origins of The School. (GMR1)

Schoolpad

this was a specialized form of datapad, used to transport schoolwork to and from the classroom. (HNN4)

Schoon

this was another Huttese word for "fool," or any foolish being. It was less common than the term stoopa. (TF)

Schostri

this was a species of vicious, stinging insect native to the Geroon homeworld. They were raised by the Geroon as a form of biological weapon, and they delivered a deadly poison with their stingers. Entire colonies of schostri could be grown in small, lumpy sacs that could be attached to a Geroon's arm, allowing the diminutive alien to pass most sensor scans and deliver the schostri into the target area. The schostri colony was genetically altered to accept the Geroon host as its queen or hive, and remained close by even when the Geroon moved around. (SQ)

Schutta

this weasel-like creature was native to the planet Ryloth. (JQ)

Schutta

this was a Twi'leki swear word, used to indicate a being of poor repute. It was derived from the name of a weasel-like creature native to Ryloth. (JQ)

Schwa

an Alliance freighter charged with recovering the supplies that were captured from the Star Destroyer Kotiate. (XW)

Science of Darkness

developed by Mage Lord Cronal, the Science of Darkness was a combination of Dark Side energy and high-technology that could be used to identify an individual's sensitivity to the Force. (OWS)

Science Service

this was one of the many branches of the Corulag Academy. Boonda the Hutt's application for entry into the Science Service was not accepted, and his father Groodo tried to destroy the Academy to exact retribution. The plan was thwarted by the Jedi Knights, who discovered that the Hutts had employed Bartokk assassins to do the job. (E1A4)

Scientific Galactica

this was a journal of science which was published during the last decades of the Old Republic. (DMSH)

Scientific Information Packet

this was a special form of datadisk that had high encryption and security features that protected its contents. Developed during the last decades of the Old Republic, an SIP was often used to carry important plans or operational details between members of the same workgroup. Only members of the group could open the SIP and read its contents. These devices were also referred to as scientific instrument packages, depending on their usage. (SWI77, RAR)

Scientific Instrument Package

Scillal

this planet was the site of the Centrality's largest and most prosperous shipyards, managed by Scillal Designs. (GMR5)

Scillal Designs

this was the largest shipwright based in the Centrality, and was based on the planet Scillal. (GMR5)

Sciltra Rega

this was a noted Ishi Tib individual in the history of the planet Tibrin. (UANT)

Scimitar

this was the name used by Darth Sidious to describe the Sith Infiltrator used by his apprentice, Darth Maul. After the Battle of Naboo, the Scimitar disappeared, and its whereabouts were never discovered. (DSSB, NEGV)

Scimitar Assault Bomber

one of the first new starfighters commissioned by Grand Admiral Thrawn, the Scimitar was developed by Captain Tomax Bren. It had the maneuverability of the TIE Interceptor or the X-Wing, the armament of a TIE bomber, and the ability to fly in an atmosphere. It was a dedicated bomber designed with the help of the Scimitar Assault Wing, from which it obtained its name. It had a long, central tube for a hull, and was the first TIE-like craft to be a two-man ship. The pilot and bomber sat in the forward section of the hull, which could be jettisoned in emergencies. This forward section was situated in front of the wings, providing enhanced visibility over most TIE designs. The middle section of the hull contained the power generators, sensors, and targetting computers. The rear section contained the bomb bays and engine. The Scimitar was different from the TIE Bomber in that it had only a single ion engine - paired with two interlocked repulsorlift engines - to propel it. It was armed with two racks of eight concussion missiles and two laser cannons. Proton grenades and free-falling thermal detonators can also be carried for deployment via the bomb bays. Roughly 13.8 meters in length, the Scimitar bomber has been rated at speeds of 850 kilometers per hour in atmospheric conditions. By introducing thrust from the repulsorlift engines, speeds of 1,000 kilometers per hour can be sustained during bombing runs. Note that the Star Wars Databank indicates that the Scimitar could attain speeds of 1,150 kilometers per hour in atmosphere, and 1,250 kilometers per hour on bombing runs. The Scimitar was protected by additional hull plating and the introduction of shields. The Scimitar was manufactured by Seinar Fleet Systems for several years after Thrawn's death, but it was eventually phased out of production. (HTTE, DFRSB, EGV, SWJ15, SWDB)

Scimitar Assault Wing

known as the White Death because of the light-colored bodies of their starfighters and bombers, this subgroup of the Qeimet fleet consisted of three TIE Bomber squadrons, two TIE Fighter squadrons, and a recon/drop ship squadron. Under the command of Tomax Bren, the White Death squadrons bombarded key enemy emplacements, taking care not to destroy potentially useful locations. The squadron lent its name to the new Scimitar Assault Bomber, which was a much more accurate and devastating craft than the TIE Bomber. In the wake of the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn, Captain Bren and the Scimitar Assault Wing went into hiding. (ISB, SWJ15, SWDB)

Scimitar Mark II Assault Bomber

this second generation of the Scimitar Assault Bomber was released shortly after the death and defeat of Grand Admiral Thrawn. It has improved repulsorlift and ion engines, compared to the original Scimitar bombers. This allowed for cruising speeds of 1,150 kilometers and hour, and bombing-run speeds of 1,250 kilometers an hour. Weapons and hull protection consistent with the original design. (EGV)

Scimitar Squadron

this Imperial TIE Bomber squadron flew regular missions in defense of the shield generator emplacement on the forest moon of Endor, in defense of the second Death Star during its construction. (CCG11)

Scimitar Squadron

this New Republic A-Wing squadron was commanded by Colonel Ijix Harona, during the height of the struggle against the Yuuzhan Vong. Scimitar Squadron was paired with the Twin Suns Squadron in the wake of the Battle of Coruscant. (DW)

Scintillant Orb

this was a name used to describe the planet Coruscant during the last decades of the Old Republic. (COD)

Scitrok

this bronze weapon was used almost exclusively by the Scitrok Warriors. It resembles an eight-foot-long scimitar with barbed spikes lining the inside curve. (GG8)

Scitrok Warriors

this is a sect of warrior monks which live in the barren hills of the planet Vengler. The monks must complete religious training before taking up training in the use of the Scitrok blade. Once they complete their weapons training, they are sent out into the world to sell their services as mercenaries. Any credits they earn are returned to the monastery. The religious training allows the monks to obtain some ability to use the Force, although they don't understand what it is, and are not Jedi. (GG8)

Scizzic

this Ugnaught was typical of his species in that he loved to tinker with machines and tools, but cared little for the mining life of his people. So, when he met Talandro Starlyte on Cloud City, Scizzic jumped at the chance to work for the rogue. Scizzic's first assignment - and many say it will be his only assignment - was to get Starlyte Stationup and running, after years of neglect. Once the Station was more or less self-sufficient, Scizzic went to work establishing the Graveyard repair facility. Scizzic developed a knack for modifying starships, and many independent owners sought him out for repairs. (WSV)

Sclipune

this large mollusk was one of the Yuuzhan Vong's bio-engineered devices, and was developed as a form of safe used to transport villips and other delicate pieces of technology. The heavy shell was parted when the Yuuzhan Vong caressed a fleshy patch near the hinge of the shell. (DTR)

SCM-22

this was the designation of PowerPost's stenographic droid, produced with components designed by Industrial Automaton. The SCM-22 could fit in the palm of a being's hand, providing an ease of use not capable in administrative droids like the CZ series. the SCM-22 could record dictations and conversations, then could be dispatched to store the information in a remote computer system. Two small treads allowed the SCM-22 to move about, and a specialized jack allowed it to communicate with a host computer. The SCM-22 was originally designed for the New Republic military, but PowerPost eventually expanded its product line with civilian models. (SOL, EGD)

Scod

this man was a member of the cleaning crew known as the Tripod, working on Bakura during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (FH2)

Scohar

this is the capital city of the planet Storinal. It is connected to nearby Revos via a featureless tunnelway that occasionally rose above ground. A number of large, repulsor-powered railcars travelled along the tunnels between the two cities. When the tunnels rose above ground, it gave the passengers spectacular views of Storinal's wonderful landscaping. (WS)

Scohar Xenohealth Institute

this educational facility was the primary center for disease control, and was located in the capital city of Scohar, on Storinal. Wraith Squadron infiltrated this facility to steal a disease which they could use to help avoid an inspection from the Hawkbat while they commanded the Night Caller. (WS)

Scomp Link

any one of the standardized droid access ports, a scomp link allows a droid to access a central computer system. The scomp link is a circular port into which the droid inserts an access probe. (CCG)

Scomp-spiker

this device is attached to a standard scomp link, and is used to destroy the computer system attached to the link. Once inserted into the scomp link, a power pack is then attached to the scomp-spiker. Once the scomp-spike is charged, it emitted a high-voltage spike of energy into the computer system, destroying the local computer substation and several downstream components. (SWJ13)

Sconn, Davith

this Imperial Navy Lieutenant was an executive officer on the Forger when it attacked Gra Ploven. He was later captured by the New Republic and imprisoned at the Jagg Island Detention facility. It was discovered, during the Yevethan Purge, that Sconn had spent time on N'zoth while part of the crew of the Moff Weblin. He was questioned by Leia Organa-Solo, and was able to provide valuable information about the Yevethan people to the New Republic. (SOL)

Sconn, Sienn

a native of the planet Ryvella, Sconn's parents were killed during an Imperial retaliatory strike on V'eldalv. Sienn was raised by his uncle, Cryle Cavv, who gave the orphan love and attention, and also taught him the finery points of being a thief. He turned to a life of crime, becoming a master thief by the time he was 23. He limits his work to obtaining wealth from former Imperials, crimelords, and the obnoxious rich beings of the galaxy. He has the uncanny ability to fall into the middle of trouble, and the equally uncanny ability to escape from it unharmed. He once stole a prototype weapon from Rythani Products and Moff Caerbellak, but this was part of a larger plot by Caerbellak to discover New Republic research facilities and command positions. (SWJ5, SWJ9)

Scoop Miner

this term describes any starship designed to mine interstellar gas and rock by simply travelling through space. Scoop miners have a specially-designed bow which collects the tiny debris and passes it into a processing center inside the ship. (SOL)

Scoopball

this was a small ball that was thrown about by players using long, scoop-like baskets. (RCHC)

Scooptrooper

armed forces jargon for a stormtrooper who travels on a swoop, rather than a speeder bike. (SSE)

Scooter

a small, personal repulsorlift vehicle, it is basically a bucket chair with a control panel and an engine attached. (HSR)

Scorch

this clone commando, designated RC-1262, was among the first members of the original Delta Squad. Scorch was known as a competent soldier and a demolitions expert, and his ability to overstate the obvious irony of a situation made him the squad's resident wisecracker. He earned his nickname when an ordnance accident burned off his eyebrows. (LAWS)

Scorch Stick

this material was used to assist larger explosives to cause more damage, or to control the damage of an explosion. Made from an acid-based paste, which could withstand high temperatures, an individual could trace a pattern with the scorch stick. When ignited, the paste would burn a shallow score mark into the material, weakening it and allowing a larger explosive to crack it open. (SQ)

Scorch Zanales

this chubby, equine Daimlo was one of the galaxy's best podracers, some ten years after the Battle of Naboo. He survived for many years, and later participated in the illegal races held on Euceron during the Galactic Games. (RACR, JQ3)

Scorekeeper

this Trandoshan deity is responsible for judging each of the reptiloids upon its death. The Scorekeeper tallies the number of jagnannath points a Trandoshan collects, and determines the proper place for it in the afterlife. A female deity, the Scorekeeper is reptilian, with lidless eyes and a bloodthirsty temperament. If she felt the whim, she could double a Trandoshan's jagannath points for a particularly brave and daring kill. She could also, as a point of pride, reduce a Trandoshan's count to zero for being captured or shamed. (TBH)

Scorn, Datoro

this mercenary was employed by Begas Tok as a bodyguard, during the time that Tok tried to sell the Shard of Alderaan. Unknown to Tok, Scorn was also under orders from Jabba himself to kill Tok if the auction ended before Tok's debts could be paid off. Scorn was easily distinguished by the scars of his face, the reminders of a shoot-out battle with Lex Kempo. He was also noticeable by the cybernetic eye which replaced the real one lost in the battle. Scorn spent much of the rest of his career as a mercenary and hired gun, hoping for a chance to exact a painful revenge against Kempo. They met up on the Dune Princess, during Tok's auction of the Shard of Alderaan. (LAA)

Scorp Club

located on the Kuari Princess, this nightclub is more sedate than Xerrol's Place. (RM)

Scorpion IV

one of four Corellian CR90 Corvettes under the command of Lumiya, following the Battle of Endor. (SWG3)

Scorpion-rat

this denizen of the spice mines of Kessel is a deadly, insect-like rodent with a stinger-topped tail. (CCR)

Scorylance

this was a noted individual from Frozian history. (UANT)

Scoryn

this outlaw was part of the crew of the New Republic starship FarStar, working directly for Gorak Khzam. A former slave who fought her way out of indentured servitude, Scoryn found work as a security officer for a minor crimelord. She organized a mutiny against him, destroying his palace and most of its inhabitants. The crimelord put a bounty on her head, and Scoryn fled the sector. She hid out on Kal'Shebbol, and decided that crewing on the FarStar would help keep her location a secret. She was hired to keep order in the ship's close quarters, serving as Khzam's second-in-command. After the Rodian defected, Kaiya Adrimetrum promoted Scoryn into his place. She used her new position to resolve the conflict between herself and Thanis Gul-Rah, who had tried to bring her to justice many years before. She had been "saved" from capture by Imperial Captain Brannij, but held no loyalty to the Empire. Despite her freedom, Scoryn still had a deathmark on her head. She knew, though, that Gul-Rah was part of the team which murdered Kaiya Adrimetrum's husband, and kept this knowledge secret even after she joined the FarStar's crew. After the FarStar escaped from Q'Maere, Scoryn rallied against Captain Kaiya Adrimetrum's plans to continue their mission, citing a mutiny was being discussed among the rest of the crew. After she promoted him to her second-in-command, Scoryn's fears were realized when Lowen Chase actually instigated a mutiny. The ship was plunged into chaos, and despite their differences, Scoryn and Adrimetrum worked together to put the rebellion down. Once control of the FarStar was restored to her crew, Scoryn was placed in charge of investigating any deaths and convening court-martials where necessary. (DARK, KR)

Scotian, Will

this Alliance starfighter pilot was a veteran of Rogue Squadron, and served the Alliance during the attempt to rescue Han Solo from Boba Fett on the moon Gall. Will was a brash, young pilot from the planet Brentaal, and his service record at Oracle Base in Brak Sector caught Wedge Antilles' attention enough to recruit him. His X-Wing was damaged in the battle, and he actually spent very little time with the squadron. He was part of the Alliance assault team which rescued a group of slaves from mercenaries who were supporting the Empire. Among the slaves was a Chev humanoid named Pedna. She was so thankful that she adopted the surname Scotian as her own, in honor of Will's part in the rescue. (WS, SE, SESB)

Scott, Franklin

known as "Shorty" to his friends, Franklin was the only member of the Farns to have a repulsor craft. However, despite the fact that the Farns called themselves a swoop gang, Franklin owned a highly-modified Starhawk speeder bike. Franklin joined the Farns because of their good-natured approach to being a swoop gang, for he is scared of the authorities in Mos Eisley. (GG7)

Scourge

this experimental Qektoth Attack Cruiser was owned by the Qektoth Confederation. It measured about 103 meters in length, and was crewed by 30 officers and 10 gunners. It was hyperspace-capable, and was armed with some of the Confederations bioweapons. The primary armament was four plasma cannons and a single bio-energy array. The power requirements of the prototype bio-energy array drained much of the ship's power, so the Scourge was only effective against a single ship, and only if it had the element of surprise. After the initial blast, the Scourge was defenseless until the bio-weapon was recharged. This allowed the crew of the FarStar to defeat the Scourge in combat near Qu'mock Station. (KO, KR)

Scourge

this Victory-class Star Destroyer patrolled Darpa Sector during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (FOP)

Scourge

this yacht was Atlee Thanda's personal starship. To protect himself while traveling, Atlee also maintained a flight of twelve Z-95 headhunters to escort the ship. (WOA26)

Scourge One

an Imperial Hunter assigned to Sedriss and Operation Shadow Hand, Scourge One tracked Luke Skywalker and Kam Solusar to Ossus and followed them to the surface. (DE2)

Scourge Squadron

this was the primary fleet of Star Destroyers established to protect the Pentastar Alignment. It was under the direct command of Moff Ardus Kaine, and was led by the Super-class Star Destroyer Reaper. (SWJ3)

Scourge, The

this gang of pirates tried to claim the planet Alluuvia as their own, shortly after Radell Mining Corporation established their own claim. The Scourge then captured the Gray Griffins, an Alliance scout team dispatched to explore the planet. In reality, the Scourge had been employed by Imperial Mining, Limited, to guard the planet Alluuvia, after Chalmer Trillili made a deal with the Empire. These actions forced the Alliance to send out a team of soldiers to recover the Gray Griffins. The Scourge was defeated in the assault, and the planet was returned to Radell. (OE)

Scouring, The

this was the Basic name of the Se'Lenti, which was the term used by the Gorohtites to describe the ecological and environmental destruction wrought on the planet Goroht Prime during the Aqualish-Corellian War. The offworlders, who each paid handsomely to the P'Dar'Ken for limited and conflicting mining rights, had grown fed up with the manipulations of the Rel'Kan, J'Kek D'rith Kalama. Since neither side could control the planet, they decided that no one would control it. They sent waves of asteroids on a collision course with Goroht Prime, and the resulting impacts wreaked incredible amounts of damage. It was estimated that nearly five billion Gorohtites died in the resulting cataclysm, with barely two million survivors going underground to escape the destruction. Because of this event, hyperbarides which had been locked into the crust of the planet were vaporized, becoming part of the atmosphere and altering the Gorothe physiology over many generations to accept its presence. The resulting atmospheric conditions had one unique side-effect: repulsorlift engines failed to work on Gorothe Prime. (GSE, AE)

Scout

see Enwandung-Esterhazy, Tallisibeth (YDR)

Scout Collector

this was the name used to describe any automated scout vehicle which could move into a hostile or unknown environment and retrieve biological samples for later investigation. (JE)

Scout Collector Unit

this droid, essentially a floating dumpster, was used in conjunction with several scout survey units to collect specimens and samples from a planet or moon under exploration. (SWJ2)

Scout Craft

lightly-armed, 100-meter-long ships used by the Empire to quickly reconnoiter an area and report back to its base. They are armed with only 3 turbolasers, but are well-shielded (150 SBD shields protecting a 60-RU hull). They are fast for a large ship, having been rated at a top speed of 80 MGLT. (TIE)

Scout Soldier

this is the name given to any member of the New Republic Scout Service who maintains their military training, rather than actively exploring the galaxy. Like all Service Scouts, the Scout Soldier receives military training from the New Republic, but serves to ensure that newly discovered planets are protected from claim jumpers and other hostile forces. They can also be called in to quell native uprisings. (GG8)

Scout Survey Unit

this model of ancient exploration droid resembled a large, mechanical spider. Moved about on eight articulated legs, the spherical body of the scout survey unit bristled with sensors, probes, and grasping claws. Small groups of these droids worked in coordination with a scout collector unit, collecting specimens and samples for later analysis. (SWJ2)

Scout Troopers

lightly-armored stormtroopers assigned to guard Imperial garrisons. (HTTE, ISB)

Scout Walker

see AT-ST (ESBN)

Scouter

an Alliance transport ship destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

SCr-114

this droid was a member of the computer crew aboard the Malka'an Eternal when the ship was abandoned to crash on Edonaaris. Realizing that he was stranded on the planet, SCr-114's programming caused him to resent the organic life that left him there. When a salvage crew came to recover the wreckage, SCr-114 killed them and took their ship. He later became a notorious Outer Rim smuggler, going by the alias Skar to cover his identity as a droid. SCr-114 modified a variety of droids to serve as his crew aboard the Efficient, removing their inhibitors and creating a loyal crew. (SWJ5)

Scraf

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Scraf, Arvid

this settler was one of the first residents of Nam Chorios to greet Luke Skywalker, after the Jedi's B-wing was shot down by Theran forces. He befriended Luke (who used the alias Owen Lars) and helped him get into Hweg Shul during Luke's search for Callista. It as Scarf, using his out-dated and heavily-modified 74-Z speeder, who helped Luke recover his belongings and get a job in Hweg Shul. (POT)

Scrag-end

this was a crude term used by criminals and other seedy beings, during the last years of the Old Republic, to indicate any being who made the criminal angry or upset. (RCHC)

Scramball

this was a team sport that was popular during the last years of the Old Republic. (E3N)

Scrambas, Pello

this 20-year veteran of service to the Royal House of Alderaan's homeguard was one of the first troopers killed when stormtroopers from the Devastator boarded the Tantive IV. (CCG2)

Scramble 9

this was the code phrase used to highlight urgent messages for the New Republic's Chief of State. Although this is the highest level of urgency that can be attached to a message, it can also be color-coded to indicate how urgent it is. A scramble 9 message that has been given the color purple is generally regarded as the utmost of urgency. (POT)

Scramble Code Five

this was a high-priority encryption code used by the Jedi Knights of the Old Republic. It was used whenever a transmission needed to reach Coruscant from a remote location, with utmost speed and maximum security. (AOTCC)

Scrambler

this device is similar to a caller, except that it scrambles the programming of the droid it is aimed at. (TNR)

Scramjet

this is an air intake system that force-feeds air into the drive system, boosting the power output of existing engine systems. (EGV)

Scrange

this was a species of crustacean-like amphibians native to the planet Dagobah. These creatures moved about on six crab-like legs, and had a pair of heavily-muscled arms for grasping and crawling. A collection of bio-luminescent patches dotted the dorsal surface of the scrange's body, used for attracting prey or providing light in dark locations. In order to incapacitate its prey, the scrange lashed out with its tusked tail, stunning or badly injuring any creature that came within its reach. (WSW, IWSW)

Scranton Toon

this Rodian was a noted pilot who worked for Plook Hartar during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Scranton Toon was chosen to participate in a race, devised by Hartar and his rival, Servid Norn, to prove which of the two had the best pilots working in their respective pirate gangs. Norn, in order to ensure that his pilot won the race, posted a bounty for the capture of Scranton Toon. The bounty requested that Toon be brought in alive, so as to maintain any semblance of a working relationship between the rival pirate gangs. Scranton Toon was known as a laid-back mercenary who was arrogant and skilled. He lost his left eye in a swoop wreck, and had it replaced with a cybernetic photoreceptor. (GMR6)

Scrap Heap, The

this is the derogatory name given to the area of the River, found on Off-worlders' Quarter, where droid congregate while their owners imbibe at the River. The droids which are left in the Scrap Heap are fitted with a special restraining bolt of Ropagu design. This bolt overrides the droids' original programming, installing a subroutine which is unique in the sector. If an attempt is made to steal a droid from the Scrap Heap, the programming in the bolt compels the remaining droids to attack the thief and prevent the theft. (TSK)

Scrap Mouse

this small rodent was native to the planet Coruscant, where it lived in trash piles and back alleys. (YDR)

Scraper

this Imperial stormtrooper was one of many that were dispatched to Golrath, under the command of Lieutenant Giel, to search for information on the Alliance's location. Scraper and a friend were shirking their duties when they discovered that the native rock of Golrath had the strange ability to replay images of light it captured when it was hot. (MC65)

Scrapper

this was the nickname of the Aqualish bounty hunter Negollup. (GMK)

Scrappier's Run

this was one of the many podraces which meandered through the cloud-cities of the planet Ord Ibanna during the last decades of the Old Republic. (RAC)

Scrapyard

this was the name of the largest junkyard found on the planet Belgaroth. Filled with all manner of debris and toxic waste from the Imperial occupation of the planet, the Scrapyard was avoided by virtually every Belgarian. Its existence gave rise to the phrase "living in the Scrapyard", which was used to describe any being who had died recently. (CCW)

Scrat

a small scavenger. (JTH)

Scratch

this was the term used by many Cestians to indicate an existence in which an individual or family made enough credits to feed themselves, with a little left over to barter with. Usually, it referred to farming communities that eked out sustenance, but never enough to sell for a profit. (TCD)

Scratchback

this term, used in the city of Talos on Atzerri and on most of the Free Trader Worlds, describes the practice of setting up progressively intense areas of merchants in the vicinity of spaceports. The initial area surrounding Free Trader spaceports is set up to fleece unsuspecting travelers of their credits through the use of illusory taxes and shoddy merchandise. Most experienced travellers are detected by these merchants, and are expertly routed to more intense sales areas farther from the spaceport. If the travellers still didn't part with their credits, chances are their funds will be stolen as they move further from the law enforcement present at the starport. The "scratchback" occurs when the more intense salesbeings pay a "referral fee" to those businesses close to the spaceport who pass on the more experienced travellers. (SOL)

Scratcher

this beast, native to the planet Ansion, was named for the way it rubbed its belly against the stones, in an effort to satisfy an itch or remove unwanted parasites. (APS)

Sc'rath

this was the name of the traditional Togorian scimitar. They were rarely seen off Togoria, and commanded a high price among collectors and weapons aficionados because of their high-quality materials and excellent craftsmanship. (AIR)

Screamer

this was the name of Bertrik's active jamming system. It was used to disguise a starship's ion drive emissions to prevent long-range detection as well as missile and targeting locks. (EGW)

Screamer

this Aratech jumper jet pack is based on a fiberlight chassis, to which are attached a pair of thrust cones. Propulsion is created through the ignition of solid and liquid fuels, and is capable of carrying the user 100 meters horizontally. The Screamer can also propel the user 70 meters vertically. Each pack can make about 10 jumps before it requires refueling. (CFG)

Screamer

this was the Imperial name for the teezl, used by the line officers and soldiers who served under Admiral Giel. (MC61)

Screamer Gong

this type of musical cymbal was used in conjunction with a drumheller harp. (VD)

Screamer Squadron

this New Republic squadron of X-Wings was hastily formed in the wake of the Battle of Coruscant, and assigned to the Ralroost. Virtually every member of the Screammers was a rookie, with their commander being barely twenty-three years old when the squadron was launched into battle over Ylesia. (Y)

Screaming Jawas

this band often played in the Arcade Omicron, where their alternately thunderous and screeching music has found an audience. (SWJ9)

Screaming Kroobles

this phrase is used to describe a sensation of fear or loathing. (CSWDW)

Screaming Wookiees

this was the name of the training squadron commanded by Atton Repness, before his blackmarket starfighter schemes were exposed. They were based on the starship Tedevium. (IF)

Screed, Terrinald

an Imperial Admiral, Screed was Palpatine's right-hand-man during the early years of the Empire and the New Order. Originally trained at the Caridan Military Academy, Screed was a no-nonsense military expert, and wore an electronic eye-patch. During the years leading up to the Clone Wars, Screed was a Judiciary for the Old Republic, and was one of the loudest supporters of Chancellor Palpatine's Military Creation Act. When Duro fell to the Separatists during the height of the Clone Wars, Screed was placed in command of the Coruscant Planetary Defense forces, as it was feared that the Separatists would use Duro as a staging point for striking at the Core Worlds. Years later, after a distinguished career in the military, Screed was assigned to take control of the fuel refineries on Biitu. While he managed to capture Mungo Baobab and install the Great Heep on Biitu, he was unprepared for the efforts of R2-D2, C-3PO, and the young boy named Fidge. This unlikely trio rescued Mungo and destroyed the Great Heep, leaving Screed with nothing to show for his efforts. This was only a temporary setback for Screed, who later survived the Battle of Endor and established a relationship with Warlord Zsinj. The relationship didn't last long, however, as Zsinj ultimately executed Screed for an undisclosed reason. (TGH, DCAR, HNN4, HNN5, FH1, SWI75, SWDB)

Screel'sara

this is the name of the Adarian caste system, which is very rigid and inflexible. (GG12)

Screw Maggot

this was one of the many carnivorous insects which were native to the jungles of Haruun Kal. (SHPT)

Screwworm

this long, thin annelid was named for the corkscrew-shape it obtained as it grew. (T)

Scrimpi

this tasty dish was served at many tapcafes, often with a glockaw sauce. (BP)

Scrin

this was the name of a noted Vuvrian individual. (UANT)

Scrivininir

this was the name given to the supreme representative of the Centrality. The name was derived from the High Trammic word for "head writer." (GMR5)

Scrivner's Revenge

this long-running holo-drama chronicled the exploits of Carma Dame. It was popular during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SWJ5)

Scrobb

this Hutt slang term is used to indicate a small denomination of money. (JTH)

Scrub Lizard

one of the most predominant forms of life on the planet Korbin, the scrub lizard grows to be three meters in length. The scrub lizard is a carnivorous reptile, and lives near cities and the LastCall. Scrub lizards crawl flush to the ground, and are often mistaken for snakes. They are attracted to the kyrf that grows on Korbin, but seem to be immune to its intoxicating effects. The scrub lizard is armed with spiky scales and a tooth-filled maw. When they capture their prey, scrub lizards hold it in their mouths while they shake it violently until it dies. They are ill-tempered beasts. (PG2)

Scrubber Droid

produced by Industrial Automaton, this series of droids was designed to clean up hazardous materials from spaceports and hangar areas. The scrubber, which resembled a squat box, moved about in search of fuel spills and other areas where potentially dangerous chemicals pooled. The scrubber was effective at its work, collecting as much of the hazardous material as possible without any sort of fear of its dangerous situation. In those situations where a fire broke out before the scrubber could clean up a spill, the droid was equipped with a fire extinguisher to put out a variety of fire types. (AEG)

Scrub-loak

this variety of the common loak is a small, compact plant that is more adapted to survival in desert environments. (POT)

Scrubwort

a plant native to the planet Endor. (AT)

Scrumma Jawbone

this was a broad, shallow arm of Lake Paonga, located on the planet Naboo. (NEGW)

Scrup

a species of small fish native to Calamari. (IDC)

Scruts

this man, a native of Edan II, led a small group of guerrilla fighters which opposed the Imperial occupation of the planet during the period leading up to the Battle of Yavin. Later, he joined his forces with those of the Alliance during the liberation of Edan II. (IAG)

Scry-mint

this sweet-tasting herb was used in the creation of many desserts. (BF4)

SCS-19 Sentinel

manufactured by TaggeCo, this personal landspeeder provided a measure of security and defense for beings who worried for their own safety. Armed with a twin laser cannon and protected by heavy armor and shields, the 12-meter-long SCS-19 could transport a pilot and two passengers through a number of hostile environments. Note that the Arms and Equipment Guide indicates that the SCS-19 can accommodate up to four passengers and fifty kilograms of cargo. (GFT, AEG)

SCT-1000

this Bith hiding cube was produced by Veretrex Securities. Resembling a small cube, the SCT-1000 was formed from a unique material that distorted light which encountered it. When placed in a niche or on a small shelf, the SCT-1000 appeared to blend into the surrounding wall, producing the visual sensation of a continuous wall panel. (GFT)

Scufflemug

this Gran Lord was one of the political cronies installed by Vosdia Nooma, in the Rodian drama The Trickery of Vosdia Nooma. Lord Scufflemug was meant to represent one side of the debate on the Military Creation Act, and was couterpointed by Lady Puffdove. Although critics generally hailed The Trickery of Vosdia Nooma as entertaining, they political allegory and heavy-handed mimicry of the Galactic Senate - represented by Scufflemug and Puffdove - was panned and often described as being in poor taste. (HNN5)

Scum-scrubber

this specialized droid was created by environmental and sanitation engineers on the planet Coruscant, as an automated way to ensure that algae and other natural pollutants didn't foul up Coruscant's fresh water supplies. (CCW)

Scuppa

this humanoid was, at one time, Jabba the Hutt's pilot. Before that, they were partners in crime. Jabba ensured Scuppa's loyalty by implanting a vial of xenoboric acid in his skull following a head-wound sustained during a battle. Jabba held a control stud that could open the vial and release the acid into Scuppa's system. Scuppa was eaten by Princess Nampi, after she had captured Jabba's starship. (JTH)

Scupper Bantoo

this aging CorelliSpace Gymsnor-2 freighter was owned and operated by Maddie Macatten. It was outfitted with obsolete parts and maintained with a loving hand, but barely made it through its travels. The Scupper Bantoo had a slow hyperdrive system, minimal shielding, and was armed with a single heavy blaster cannon. (KO)

Scur

this creature inhabits the forests of Kashyyyk, travelling in large groups. (TT)

Scurrg H-6

this experimental bomber design was developed by Nubian starshipwrights during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. At twenty-two meters in length, the Scurrg H-6 resembled a flattened square, with the center spine raised slightly to provide room for the cockpit and shipboard systems. The ship was developed by the Bith engineer Jenkins, who was working for the Nubian Design Collective at the time, and was proposed for sale to the government of Naboo as a defensive craft. The original design was armed with six wing-mounted laser cannons, a turret-mounted double laser cannon, and a proton bomb launcher. A crew of five was required to fly the ship, consisting of a pilot, navigator, and three weapons officers. However, when the Naboo rejected the design as excessively armed, the Nubians scrapped the project, much to the consternation of Jenkins. The Bith then sought out Nym and arranged to steal the prototype. The ship was eventually refitted with a number of new and enhanced systems, and was renamed Havoc. (SWDB, NEGV)

Scurrier

this four-legged, insectoid creature was the only indigenous form of life found on the planet Artus Prime. Living in the tunnels and caverns that riddled the planet's crust, these creatures were essentially blind, but used their other senses to track down their prey. When settlers began mining the planet, the scurriers discovered a new source of food. Many miners lost their lives to scurriers, a fate that also awaited the Imperial stormtroopers who later arrived on the planet. (JK2)

Scurrier

this small, rodent-like creature inhabited the urban areas of the planet Tatooine. Resembling a large, kangaroo-like mouse, the scurriers jumped along on their powerful hind legs. The males were easily distinguished from the females by the prominent curved horns on each side of thier heads. Most females had short, straight horns. Scurriers congregated in the outlying areas of cities like Mos Eisley, hunting for the insects which come to feed on the rubbish of civilization. The scurrier could also scavenge on the garbage it finds. When cornered or surprised, the scurrier could attack with a vicious bite. Large specimens of scurriers have been known to reach twelve meters in overall length. (SWSE, CCG9, WSW)

Scurrier Disease

this unusual disease, believed to be carried by wild scurriers, was sometimes contracted on the planet Tatooine. (SWRPG2)

Scurry

this ferbil was kept as a pet by V-Davi, in defiance of the rules of the Learning Circle. (FFT)

Scute

this was the Yuuzhan Vong name for the living scales taken from a dora-mu and used to create living armor on one of their bio-organic vessels. A scute resembled a long, chitinous scale, and could be grown in groups that overlapped their bodies to provide protection on vessels such as the vangaak. (NEGV)

Scuttle Grazer

this big-eyed creature inhabits the third level of the Kashyyyk forests. They are quick and elusive, moving on several legs across the jungle. (TT)

Scutz

an Alliance shuttle that was captured in the Javin Sector, following the Battle of Hoth. (TIE)

Scuz

this bounty hunter worked with Gyran during the Galactic Civil War. (SSR)

Scylla

this was one of the many Strike-class cruisers that made up the front lines of the Imperial Naval fleet. (XVT)

Scylla

this warship was commanded by Daala during the years surrounding the Black Fleet Crisis. Having come out of retirement to help the New Republic win the Battle of Nam Chorios, Daala returned to the Deep Core and tried to establish a new Imperial fleet. The Scylla served as her flagship, and led her brief charge into New Republic territory against Garm Bel Iblis. Unfortunately, Bel Iblis was able to trap Daala's fleet using a pair of CC-7700 frigates. In order to escape, Daala rammed one of the frigates with the Scylla before limping into hyperspace. Due to damage to the ship's navigational systems, the Scylla's jump was blind, and Daala was not seen again. (NEGC)

Scythe

the Alliance ambushed a convoy which was led by this Strike-class cruiser, shortly before the Battle of Enodor. (XWA)

Scythe Squadron

this Imperial TIE Fighter group was assigned to defend the second Death Star during the Battle of Endor. Their primary mission was to identify and eliminate any Alliance starfighters which attempted to destroy the battle station from within. The fighters of this group were given P-w702 upgraded maneuvering thrusters to give them more control during flight within the superstructure of the Death Star. (CCG11)

Scythe-class Bomber

this is an Adumari assault craft. (SOA)

Scythis

an Imperial system patrol craft operative during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

SD-1

this was the earliest of the SD-series war droid produced by Balmorran Arms. It was extremely well-armed, but lacked the tactical programming needed to prioritize and eliminate multiple targets. (EGD)

SD-10

a war droid produced by Balmorran Arms for the New Republic, it was the follow-on to the SD-9 and was used by the Balmorrans to battle the Executor Sedriss. Sedriss eventually received some of the droids in a bargain he struck with Beltane. The original design of the droid was done by Umak Leth, and incorporated heavier weaponry and more intelligent programming. The SD-10 was armed with a repeating blaster, a concussion missile launcher, and a plasma-burst cannon. It was also given advanced servomotors and gyrobalancing systems, in part to keep its massive bulk from toppling in combat. (DE2, EGD)

SD-2

this was the second SD-series war droid produced by Balmorran Arms. Like the SD-1, it was extremely well-armed, but lacked the tactical programming needed to prioritize and eliminate multiple targets. (EGD)

SD-3

this was the third SD-series war droid produced by Balmorran Arms. Like its predecessors, it was extremely well-armed, but lacked the tactical programming needed to prioritize and eliminate multiple targets. (EGD)

SD-4

this was the first Balmorran Arms war droid to take advantage of enhanced programming to prioritize multiple targets. It accomplished this by integrating programming which had been stolen from the defunct Darktrooper program. (EGD)

SD-47

this model of servodriver was produced by the Corellian Engineering Corporation. (PSG)

SD-489

the New Republic registry number of the Star Destroyer Gnisnal. (BTS)

SD-5

this was the second Balmorran Arms SD war droid prototype produced which took advantage of enhanced programming stolen from the defunct Darktrooper program to improve its targeting systems. It improved on the SD-4 design, but was eventually replaced by the SD-6. (EGD)

SD-6

this was the sixth Balmorran Arms war droid prototype produced in the SD series, before mass-production began on the SD-9. Like its predecessors, the SD-8 took advantage of enhanced programming stolen from the defunct Darktrooper program to improve its targeting systems. (EGD)

SD-7

this small, squat droid used by the Empire as an assistant to IMP-22, performing the more menial tasks while IMP-22 interfaced with human officers. SD-7 had no legs, treads, or wheels, but sat in position to monitor military activity. It had six manipulator arms, used to perform computer-related activities. (REB)

SD-7

this was the seventh Balmorran Arms war droid prototype produced in the SD series, before mass-production began on the SD-9. Like its predecessors, the SD-8 took advantage of enhanced programming stolen from the defunct Darktrooper program to improve its targeting systems. (EGD)

SD-77

this was the model number of Pacnorval Defense Systems' sonic pistol. Like the SG-82 sonic rifle, the SD-77 fired a wide pattern of high-intensity sound waves which could shatter solid objects or stun a living being into submission. (EGW)

Sd-77

see SD-77 (AEG)

SD-8

this was the last Balmorran Arms war droid prototype produced in the SD series, before mass-production began on the SD-9. Like its predecessors, the SD-8 took advantage of enhanced programming stolen from the defunct Darktrooper program to improve its targeting systems. (EGD)

SD-9

a war droid produced on Balmorra for the Empire. It was built during the period of the reborn Emperor's reign on Byss. The original design of the war droid was done by Umak Leth and was basically a three-meter-tall, humanoid automaton armed with a plasma-burst cannon and a heavy repeating blaster, and protected by laser-reflective armor plating and an ionization shield system. Parts of the SD-9's programming and technology was borrowed from the Empire's Dark Trooper project, although this information was not initially released to the new Republic. Balmorran Arms failed to keep development costs down during the design of the SD-9, hoping to overcome the problems it had with earlier models. Thus, the SD-9 proved to be prohibitively expensive to anything smaller than a planetary government. Most SD-9s were conscripted by the Empire. (DE2, EGD, AEG)

S'denSta

this Mrlssti was considered an expert in droid programming, during the height of the New Order. (FTD)

S'diawae

this former Jedi Master was honored by Bisquit Baron for his contributions, with a commemorative holocube that documented his history being included in many QuickSnack and QuickSnackLite meals. The meals and holocubes were available shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars. (HNN4)

SDS-632

this Dalabar Micro-Electronics surveillance detection system was manufactured for use by private individuals and small corporations. It used a variety of sensors and detectors to identify and track any outgoing transmissions which it encountered. While the Empire chafed at the availability of this type of device, it allowed consumers to purchase them on the understanding that military technologies existed that could bypass the abilities of the SDS-632. (GFT, AEG)

SD-series Infantry Droid

this series of combat droids, produced by Balmorran Arms, was first designed during the last years of the New Order. Actual production didn't begin until after the Battle of Endor, so Balmorran Arms decided to sell the technology to the New Republic. The Empire's forces managed to capture Balmorra and taken control of the SD-9 droids, but Balmorran Arms provided the prototype SD-10 to the New Republic during the planet's liberation. (AEG)

SE-14

this was a basic blaster produced by BlasTech during the height of the New Order. It was nothing more than a tube with a grip, and had a small energy pack mounted below the barrel. (JKG)

SE-14C

this was an upgraded model of the basic SE-14 blaster from BlasTech. Ponda Baba used one of these weapons. (JKG)

SE-14r

this upgrade to the standard BlasTech SE-14 was produced for use by the stormtroopers of the Empire. It was considered a back-up weapon to the E-11 blaster rifle. It was considered a light repeating weapon, with a semi-automatic action. (LAWS)

SE2 Service Droid

this droid was built in the centuries before the Clone Wars, and was designed to act as receptionists and gatekeepers. The remnants of the Empire used SE2 droids to maintain their databanks, such as the one on Bastion. (VOF)

SE-2-4

this SE-4 series servant droid was owned by Lord Vaskel Savill. (LOE)

SE4

a series of servant droids manufactured by Industrial Automaton, the 1.6-meter-tall SE4 was the first major series of droids produced by Industrial Automaton, and helped them grow into the huge corporation they are today. One of the oldest known droid lines, the SE4 resembled the humanoid 3PO protocol droid in shape, and can be equipped with various personality modules. They are used throughout the galaxy in cantinas, messhalls, and tapcafes. (RASB, ROE, FTD)

SE-4

see SE4 (DFR)

SE4-10

this droid, along with its partner, SE4-12, were modified from their original servant droid programming to act as bodyguards to Eelien Kirat. Both droids had been owned by Ral Nalmar, but in the wake of his assassination, Kirat needed an added layer of protection from Qual'om Soach. SE4-10 and SE4-12 were armed with an internal blaster rifle. (FBS)

SE4-12

this droid, along with its partner, SE4-10, were modified from their original servant droid programming to act as bodyguards to Eelien Kirat. Both droids had been owned by Ral Nalmar, but in the wake of his assassination, Kirat needed an added layer of protection from Qual'om Soach. SE4-10 and SE4-12 were armed with an internal blaster rifle. (FBS)

SE-4-I7

this SE-4 servant droid served aboard the New Republic corvette FarStar, acting as the chief assistant to DD-19 in the droid repair bay. SE-4-I7 was easily distinguished by its matte-black paint, giving the droid an ominous appearance. (DARK)

SE-4-LQ3

this SE-4 servant droid served aboard the New Republic corvette FarStar, working with R-97 to ensure that the ship's stores and supplies were well-stocked and in good order. SE-4-LQ3 discovered that nearly a quarter of the ship's food supply was contaminated, shortly after it entered the Kathol Rift in search of Moff Sarne. (KR)

SE4-T25

this servant droid worked for Radell Mining Corporation shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (OE)

SE-4-TQ5

this was one of the many SE-4 servant droids which were part of the droid pool aboard the FarStar. SE-4-TQ5 was known for its ability to create wondrous meals from simple fruits, and was assigned to the mess hall. (DARK)

SE-5

this is a series of service droids used in restaurants and cantinas. (SOP)

SE-6

this series of domestic droids was first produced shortly before the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (EVR)

Sea Cabbage

a plant grown in the oceans of Drexel One, sea cabbage was a basic food consumed by the natives of the planet. (MC12)

Sea Dew

this beverage was created by the Quarren, and was popular in many bars. (SWJ11)

Sea Eel

this long fish was native to the planet Kamino, where it was often caught and kept as an unusual pet. Sea eels fed primarily on sea-mice, but were often eaten themselves by larger predators. The narrow eyes of the sea eel sat upon a head that was dominated by a huge mouth, which was used to swallow its prey whole. (BF1)

Sea Flea

this small, aquatic insect was native to the planet Calamari. (UYV)

Sea Hog

a creature native to the planet Toola, hunted for sport and food by the Whiphids. (TJP)

Sea Killer

this modified B'zabuu-class Transport was owned and operated by the Gungan Toba, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. Just over twelve years old at the time, the Sea Killer had seen many owners before being purchased by Toba. Toba had the craft painted to resemble a huge opee sea killer, and added a Getaway missile launcher to its armament. (WOTC)

Sea Legacy

this Old Republic assault ship was dispatched to the planet Pengalan IV during the early stages of the Clone Wars. (SWI65)

Sea of Graves

this was the second-largest ocean found on the planet Veron. (PG1)

Sea of Hope

this was one of the oceans on Ylesia, and separated the primary slave colonies from Colony Five. (RD)

Sea of Jarad

located on the planet Tralus, this storm-tossed sea was located far from the warmer climate of the planet's equatorial regions. The natives who lived along its shores were a hardier breed of beings, hunting styanax for food and other products. (CCW)

Sea of Jarad

this was one of the largest bodies of water found on the planet Tralus. (WOTC)

Sea of Memory

according to the Anzati, the Sea of Memory was the collection of life forces that was created from the life energies of dead Anzati. When an Anzati died, their life energies - later referred to simply as "soup" - left their bodies and ascended to the stars. Individual energies created the lights known as the Silent Voices. (RT)

Sea of Sponges

this unusual body of water, named for the abundance of sea sponges that filled it, was located on the planet Drongar, about 1,000 kilometers north of the Qarohan Steppes. (MJH)

Sea of Translucency

this wondrous body of water was located on the planet Dremulae, and was named for the way in which its waters absorbed the ambient light and reflected it back in patterns of muted color. (JQ9)

Sea of Veruna

this was the name given to a large area of dead, empty space located near the Naboo System. Many local hyperspace travel lanes passed through the Sea of Veruna, since it provided an obstacle-free approach to Naboo. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, the Imperial forces controlling Naboo "secured" the Sea of Veruna, patrolling it on a regular basis. (SWGAL)

Sea Shrike

an oceanic bird native to the planet Coruscant. (BTS)

Sea Sprite

this repulsorlift aquaculture harvester was purchased by Tirgee Benyalle for use on Kaal. It was part of a fleet of ten such vehicles owned by Benyalle, as she harvested as much as she could from Kaal's oceans in order to make a profit. (SWJ7)

Seaan

this alien race was subjugated by the Empire. (RD)

Seabed Lodge

this hotel was located within the Fathoms restaurant complex, situated in the Glitter Cay Tower of Wildwater City on Calamari. A wide variety of leisure activities was regularly scheduled for its guests, and there were a number of different decors a visitor could choose from. (WSV)

Sea-Breaker

this old Mon Calamari light freighter was owned and operated by Basz Maliyu. (PSG)

Seabreeze

this was the brand name of one of the scent tablets produced for use in an Orfite Scent Mask. (PG3)

Sea-dragon

a large, dragon-like creature inhabiting the waters of Drexel One, a planet in the Drexel System. They are intelligent creatures that communicate over ultra-sonic frequencies. The sea-dragons accepted and even welcomed the Dragon Lords when the humans were first exiled, and agreed to help them overthrow Quarg. The baby dragons were used as spies. Quarg used a sonic jammer to injure the sensitive hearing of the sea-dragons, but Han Solo managed to destroy the weapon before it could do serious harm. (MC12)

Seafah

this microscopic creature inhabited the oceans of Pydyr. Their small shells were highly valued as jewels in the Almanian System, and were quite expensive. Their value was due in part to their small size as well as the fact that only Pydyrians seemed to be able to locate them. The Pydyrian government once tried to manufacture droids to search for the shells, but the droids were unable to match native Pydyrian abilities. Seafah shells come in a rainbow of pearlescent colors. (TNR)

Seafern

a oceanic plant native to Spira. (SWJ5)

Seaflowers

carnivorous plants that inhabit the oceans of Calamari. (DA)

Seahorse Casino

this casino was located on Pavo Prime, until Han Solo managed to break the bank. The casino was forced into bankruptcy, and never re-opened. The Seahorse had been owned by the family of Ludlo Lebauer, who never forgot Solo's actions. (SWI67)

SEAL

Serridge's capital ship shield generation system. (SCRE)

Sealman

a derogatory term used to describe the Sedrians. (BGS)

Seameadow

located along the Tsilor Sea, just north of New Plympto's capital city of Phemiss, this open grassland stood in stark contrast to the decay of the Drowned Chase, (CCW)

Seamote

this small crustacean inhabits the seas of the planet Rathalay. It protects itself by forming a shell around its soft body. The shell has a jewel-like sheen, and it considered by some to have minimal value as a gem. (SOL)

Sea-mouse

this small creature was native to the stormy, ocean-covered world of Kamino. These creatures evolved as small, furry rodents with paws, living on the ground during their infancy. However, when they were placed in the water, their paws began to change into flippers, allowing the sea-mice to move about in the ocean. However, their small size meant that they could not swim very fast, and many sea-mice were consumed by the denizens of the planetary ocean. (BF1)

Sea-prig

this oceanic bird congregated in bustling nests, and their raucous calls could be heard for miles around. (TCD)

Search and Rescue Corps

this civilian agency was funded by the New Republic, during the early years of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. The Search and Rescue Corps provided assistance to those worlds which were too remote for Republic rescue ships to reach in time to save their inhabitants. While Republic warships fought against the Yuuzhan Vong, operations like the Search and Rescue Corps helped transport beings from planets in the warzone to other worlds which had managed to avoid being attacked by the Yuuzhan Vong. (EOV, GMR8)

Search Team 102

a group of Imperial soldiers on board the Chimaera and assigned to locate Luke Skywalker and Mara Jade. They were killed when Luke, Mara, and Talon Kaarde escaped from the Star Destroyer. (DFR)

Search Team 207

a group of Imperial soldiers on board the Chimaera and assigned to locate Luke Skywalker and Mara Jade. They discovered the remains of Search Team 102. (DFR)

Searcher

this was Tash Arranda's ID whenever she scoured the Imperial HoloNet for information. Note that Galaxy of Fear 5: Ghost of the Jedi claims Tash's ID is Searcher1. (GOF1, GOF5)

Search-Scan 4

developed for military use by BlasTech, the Search-Scan 4 was a self-contained collection of scanners and sensors. It was moved about in a large crate, and contained probes and receptors that could penetrate some forms of shielding to reveal hidden details. (GUN)

Searous Hair

this wondrous fiber was woven to create exquisite necklaces and jewelry. (APS)

Seas of Mists

this was the term used by the Yvarema to describe the foggy coastlines of their homeworld of Yvara. (KR)

SeaScape

this small corporation produced a variety of underwater diving suits. (SWJ1)

Seascape Mountains

this was the name of a range of underwater peaks located in the seas of Calamari. (GDV)

Seaskimmers

repulsorlift watercraft used on Calamari. (DA)

Season Scepter

according to Ewok legend, this scepter was used by the gods of the weather to bring on the individual seasons. There were four beings who controlled the weather - the Flower Queen, the Sun King, the Leaf Queen, and the Snow King - and each could possess the scepter for a short time. During this time, the being could bring their own, unique form of weather to the Forest Moon of Endor, resulting in the four seasons. The Snow King and his mistress, Oodra, once plotted to steal the Season Scepter and use it to obtain the Sunstar, in the hopes of taking control of the weather and of Endor itself. Their plans were thwarted by the Leaf Queen, who called upon the Ewoks and the other creatures of the moon to help defeat the Snow King. (ECAR)

Season-turn

this was the name given to the transition period between autumn and winter, on the planet Hargeeva. (SWJ10)

Seaspice Soup

this soup was a favorite of many Mon Calamari. (WSV)

Seasquid

native to the oceans of Mon Calamari, this cephalopod was desired for its tasty flesh. (WSV)

Seatrees

native to Calamari, these are underwater trees with supple, leather-like bark and leathery fronds shot through with bright blue and red veins. Air-filled fruit-like bladders keep the treetops afloat. The fronds of the trees form complex underwater networks used as homes by many forms of sealife. They are also used to store supplies. (DA, JASB)

Seatrooper

this specially-trained stormtrooper provided the Empire with soldiers who could operate underwater or in aquatic environments. They were modified combat armor that was based on the scoutrooper armor, with a two-piece body glove that protected the seatrooper against temperature extremes and toxic environments. These soldiers were also known as Aquatic Assault Troopers. (BGS, ISB, SWDB)

Seawatcher

this was one of the many clans of the Nosaurian race, which was native to the planet New Plympto. (CCW)

Sebairns

this man served the Old Republic as a shuttle pilot during the height of the Clone Wars. He was dispatched, along with Biggs Bogan, to serve aboard the MedStar Nineteen medical frigate on the planet Drongar. The two pilots took shifts as the pilot for the Admiral in charge of Drongar, allowing the Admiral to come and go when needed. He was known to have an allergy to certain legumes, a trait that was exploited by the assassin Kaird, who needed to steal a starship to escape from Drongar. Kaird slipped a powdered form of the legume into Sebairns' drink one night, (MJH)

Sebb

this Jazbinan was drinking in a bar with some friends when 3DVO was able to show live holovids of the execution of Prepedenko and its own destruction. Sebb suddenly didn't feel like drinking, and began to rethink his support of the Empire. He led a huge group of his buddies in a demonstration against Vader, and helped disrupt the Dark Lord's attempt to capture Luke Skywalker. When Jal destroyed Vader's starship, Sebb's rebels quickly disabled Vader's stormtroopers. (VQ)

Sebiri

this race of humanoids was native to the planet Sebiris. A primitive race of skilled hunters and trappers, the Sebiri were superstitious by nature. The skin of the Sebiri was covered with thick, greenish-brown scales, and their red, slit-pupiled eyes were equally adept at seeing in the light or the dark. (DARK)

Sebiris

this jungle planet was located on the edge of the Marcol Void near the galactic boundary, in the most remote area of Kathol Sector. It was the homeworld of the Sebiri people. (DARK, KO)

Sebiris Run

this hyperspace navigation lane is one of two that cut through the Marcol Void, linking the population centers of Kathol Sector with the Kathol Outback. It connects the world of Sebiris to the planets of the Pimbrellan League. (KO)

Seboca

this Dug, a popular holodrama star who moved from his homeworld of Malastare to Coruscant during the years following in the Battle of Naboo, was a frequent patron of Dex's Diner. Seboca was entertaining Bogg Tyrell with a night on the town in Galactic City when Anakin Skywalker and Obi-Wan Kenobi tried to chase down Zam Wesell. Note that the final chapter of Star Wars: Episode III - The Making of Revenge of the Sith, as provided on the official Star Wars website, indicates that Seboca was a taxi driver. (SWDB, IWE2, OWS)

Sebolto

this Dug was a known distributor of death sticks, who worked from a base on his homeworld of Malastare during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Jango Fett hoped to gain an audience with Sebolto after tracing the death sticks from Groff Haug back to Malastare, during his search for the Bando Gora cult. However, Fett knew that Sebolto wouldn't see him without a good reason. It was then that Rozatta mentioned to Fett that Sebolto had issued a bounty for the capture of Bendix Fust, who Fett quickly apprehended and brought to Malastare. Sebolto had issued the bounty after Fust provided information on his smuggling operation in the Gazzari System to the Republic Security Force. The Republic shut down Sebolto's operations in the Gazzari System, causing the loss of huge amounts of credits. Jango was forced to fight his way into Sebolto's compound on Malastare, along with help from Zam Wesell, and was able to confront the Dug crimelord. He explained that he received death sticks from Tatooine before exporting them to specific buyers, including Groff Haug. Sebolto tried to flee Jango out of fear for his life, but stumbled down a ramp and over a steep wall before plummeting to his death. Before leaving Malastare, however, Jango discovered that Sebolto had been working with both Komari Vosa and the Hutts. This led Jango to travel to Tatooine in his search for Komari Vosa and the Bando Gora. (BH)

Sebulba

this unusual creature was a member of the Dug race, and was generally regarded as one of the best pod racers on the planet Tatooine, during the final years of the Old Republic. A native of Pixelito, a village on the planet Malastare, Sebulba resembled a small, hairless horse, although he could walk on his thin hind legs. Sebulba could trace his roots back to the Black Shred Water clan, to the respected statesman Surdu, a fact that provided him with fodder to inflate his ego. He always wore his racing goggles, either over his eyes or on his forehead. While Sebulba was known as one of the best pod racers, he was also known as one of the dirtiest. It was once suspected that Sebulba caused more than three dozen crashes a year during pod races, many of them fatal. The Dug would stop at nothing to eliminate the competition, and kept a supply of old parts and junk in his pod. When an opponent would get too close, Sebulba would drop a piece of junk out of his pod, interfering with the other driver or - worse - causing massive damage to their pod. Sebulba's pod racer was also equipped with fire cutters, razor saws, and other illegal attachments that could be used to disable an opponent's pod racer. Unknown to many pod racing fans, Sebulba also ran a strong slaving operation on the side, using his travels to many worlds on the pod racing circuit to move large numbers of exotic slaves in his large freighter. When Anakin Skywalker challenged him to the Boonta Eve Classic on Tatooine, Sebulba could hardly contain his laughter. The human boy was good, but he didn't understand how to cheat in order to get ahead and stay there. The race featured several spectacular pod crashes, many of them the direct result of Sebulba's work. However, he had met his match that day in Anakin, who came from way back in the pack to challenge the Dug. Sebulba tried to disable Anakin's pod, but in doing so he only managed to tangle their Steelton cables together. Anakin was able to maneuver his pod in such a way to break them free, but Sebulba was unable to recover. The huge, X-shaped engines of his pod were sent flying, dragging the pod behind until the cable broke. Sebulba slid to a stop just outside the entrance to Jabba's main concourse. Shortly after the race, Sebulba bought Anakin's pod from Qui-Gon Jinn to replace his own. Because of his actions in the Boonta, Sebulba was forced to re-qualify himself for every major pod race on the professional circuit. Sebulba fathered many children and grandchildren during his lifetime, among them the equally-dangerous pod racer Pugwis. Fate, however, eventually caught up with Sebulba, who died in a fatal crash during his

"revenge tour" of podraces. Sebulba as portrayed by Lewis MacLeod in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace. (SW1, TPM, SW1S, QGJ, E1A5, ETM, NEGC)

Sebulba's Legacy

this pod racing course was built on Malastare's southern continent several years before the Battle of Naboo. It was designed by the Dug pod racer, Sebulba, who chose to name it after himself. (NEGC)

Secciah

Isolder's aunt. Isolder believes that she murdered Elliar to help pave the way for her own daughter to rule Hapes. (CPL)

SecForces

not to be confused with SpecForces, SecForces were the individual sector forces used by the Alliance to maintain control of a sector of space. The SecForces were made up of regular troops. (ROE)

Secles Uslopos

this sniveling despot of a Sluissi was a member of Abdi-Badawzi's criminal organization. Originally the leader of a territorial gang on Socorro, Secles was recruited to join Abdi-Badawzi's organization as a chancellor and "morale officer." Always impeccably dressed and groomed, Secles maintained the loyalty and adherence of the Twi'lek's organization. (SWJ2, BSS)

Seclusion Braids

this was the term used to describe the many braids woven by Weequay males into their topknots, during their travels away from Sriluur. In general, a Weequay twisted one seclusion braid for each year they were away from their homeworld. (TG)

Second

an Alliance container group destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Second Battle Group

also known as the Second Fleet, it was one of the New Republic's defensive starship fleets. It was recalled to Coruscant just before the Yevethan Great Purge. (BTS)

Second Battle of Calamari

Admiral Daala, trying to gain some momentum for the crumbling Empire, launched an attack on the homeworld of the Mon Calamari. She targetted the main floating cities, which the Mon Calamari were still in the process of repairing following the First Battle of Calamari. She quickly struck when the Mon Calamari were not expecting, and was able to severely disable the Mon Calamari cities. The Mon Calamari, however, were able to destroy one of her Star Destroyers and then send a distress signal to the New Republic. Daala's anger at losing the Star Destroyer drove her to reckless attack, which was quickly negated by the arrival of a New Republic fleet. Daala chose to flee rather than press the attack, and the battle was quickly ended. (DA)

Second Battle of Coruscant

this was the name used to describe the struggle to control the planet Coruscant, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Under the guidance of Battle Plan Coruscant, the Yuuzhan Vong were to have two attack forces arrive at Coruscant in a classic pincer move: one force from Borleias and the other from Reecee. However, the Yuuzhan Vong force from Reecee was destroyed by the Republic forces fleeing Borleias, reducing the Yuuzhan Vong attack force by half. Despite the loss of a major part of his fleet, Warmaster Tsavong Lah continued with the planet. A portion of the remaining ships from Borleias entered the Coruscant System by hiding a wave of warships in the OboRin Comet Cluster. As the comets neared Coruscant, the alien warships launched the first wave of attacks on the planet. The New Republic's forces fought valiantly, and nearly defeated the first wave of ships before noticing another huge fleet of Yuuzhan Vong warships dropping out of hyperspace. Chief of State Borsk Fey'lya agreed that the Republic could not maintain control of the planet in the face of the overwhelming odds, and agreed to turn Coruscant over to Warmaster Tsavong Lah. Suspecting treachery, the Warmaster sent Romm Zqar, an aide, in his place. Chief of State Fey'lya, already under intense scrutiny from the Republic, allowed the Yuuzhan Vong to take Coruscant, but not before setting off a large bomb while in the presence of Romm Zqar. The New Republic's forces scattered, left without a centralized government. (SBS, NJOSB)

Second Battle of Kashyyyk

this was the name given to the New Republic's effort to free the planet Kashyyyk from the control of the Second Imperium, after Brakiss and the forces of the Shadow Academy tried to steal Imperial technology from the planet. (JE)

Second Battle of Sernpidal

this was the name given by historians to the New Republic's attempt to destroy a shipwomb which was being grown by the Yuuzhan Vong in the rubble of the planet Sernpidal. The Republic decided to launch the attack after Kyp Durron provided the military leaders with evidence of a "superweapon" being constructed in the system. Kyp knew that the New Republic - and especially the Jedi Knights - would never condone an attack on a living ship that provided the growing medium for much of the Yuuzhan Vong's technology, so he used the superweapon threat to force the Republic to react. A gutted Interdictor Cruiser was sent into the Sernpidal System first, to set up its gravity wells as a way to get New Republic fighters directly into the combat zone. As the Yuuzhan Vong forces protecting the shipwomb tried to destroy the interdictor, arriving Republic forces quickly decimated the alien fleet and disabled the shipwomb. It then plunged into Sernpidal's sun and was destroyed. When she found out that Kyp had lied about the true nature of the shipwomb in order to get approval for the attack, Jaina Solo broke off any relationship she might have had with him. Many of the Republic's own fighter pilots also condemned Kyp's actions, claiming that he had dragged them all down to the level of their enemy. (NJOSB, EVR)

Second Battle of Yavin

this struggle for control of the fourth moon of Yavin occurred shortly after the Battle of Endor. The scattered forces of the Empire had been searching for a leader, and several Moffs put forward Trioculus as the true son of Emperor Palpatine. The fledgling New Republic had been trying to establish the location of the Lost City of the Jedi, with Luke Skywalker hoping to obtain more information on restoring the Jedi Order. Trioculus and the Imperials needed to destroy the Jedi and wipe out the leadership of the Republic, and the two sides met on Yavin 4. Trioculus ordered that much of the forest be burned to the ground, in an effort to destroy the Republic's forces. While the Imperials were defeated, the Lost City was shut down during the battle, and all access to the city was cut off. (GMR5, LCJ)

Second Birth, The

this is the Yevethan term for what the New Republic called the Yevethan Purge. It represented the resurgence of the Yevetha as the primary power in the Koornacht Cluster, as they extended their influence beyond the twelve Duskhan League worlds. (SOL)

Second Dawn

this was the term used by the natives of the planet Tatooine to describe that period of the day when the second sun rises above the horizon in the morning. It was at this time that most activity on Tatooine began. (SOT)

Second Death

this was the name used by Warlord Zsinj for the unusual warship created from the pieces of the destroyed Razor's Kiss. Nothing more than the spine, engines, and bow of the Razor's Kiss, the Second Death was used near Selaggis Six to help Zsinj feign the destruction of his flagship, the Iron Fist. All markings on the pieces were changed to those of the Iron Fist. A Sentinel-class shuttle was docked at each end, to allow the crew to escape its eventual destruction. The Second Death was left to be destroyed by the New Republic fleet under Han Solo's command, giving them the false impression of the Iron Fist's demise. Zsinj placed the ship within a null-vision barrier comprised of Nightcloak satellites. He then flew the Iron Fist into the satellites' midst, and detonated the Second Death. To external viewers, it would appear that the Iron Fist was destroyed, and the physical evidence would back it up. However, Zsinj had actually leaped into hyperspace after emerging from the far end of the Nightcloak barrier and returned to Rancor Base on Dathomir. (SOC)

Second Droid Revolution

this was the codename of the revolution planned by Archa Sabis, during the height of the New Order. He longed to recreate the ancient Great Droid Revolution on the planet Coruscant, giving the planet's automaton population the freedom he felt they deserved. His plans were thwarted, however, when the construction droid he was using as his base of operations was disabled by special forces agents. (CCW)

Second Fleet

this was the name given to one of the secondary naval fleets of the Galactic Alliance, during the final stages of the war against the Yuuzhan Vong. The Second Fleet, comprised mainly of the surviving ships of the New Republic's Second Battle Group, was commanded by General Garm Bel Iblis from his flagship, the Harbinger (UF)

Second Hollastin Insurrection

this uprising of the underground resistance on the planet Hollast VII took place shortly before the Battle of Endor. (SWJ4)

Second Ilthmar Defense

a defensive strategy used in holochess. Blue Max suggested that Han Solo might have used it in a game against Chewbacca. (HSE)

Second Imperium

Brakiss' vision of the reborn Empire, the Second Imperium would hold to the ideals set up by Palpatine while taking advantage of the power of the Dark Side of the Force.. Brakiss was trying to train a group of Imperial Jedi to act as caretakers for the Second Imperium, just as Luke Skywalker's Jedi were to the New Republic. He was assisted in the creation of the Second Imperium by renegade Admiral Daala, who had been defeated in battle by Garm Bel Iblis and had retreated to the Deep Core. In the midst of Brakiss' work, four former Imperial Royal Guards began a ruse in which they claimed to be the reborn Emperor Palpatine. Three of them guarded a large meditation chamber, while the fourth used a vast collection of sound bites and holo-clips of Palpatine to create an illusion of his presence. Brakiss, as well as the entire crew of the Shadow Academy, were fooled by the ruse, until the Shadow Academy attacked Yavin 4 and the Jedi Academy. As Brakiss came to demand why Palpatine was ignoring him, he discovered the trickery of the four guards. He killed the three protectors in his anger, but the fourth escaped. He managed to activate the Shadow Academy's self-destruct systems before he fled, killing Brakiss in the explosion. (SA, JUS, ECH)

Second Jungle Zone

this was one of two areas of jungle terrain contained within the Zones of Territory C2, on the planet OM813. It followed the trek through the Turas Valley. (AIR)

Second Mistake

this was the name used by Ludlo Lebauer to describe an unusual piece of art: the carbonite-frozen body of the Squib, Grees. The Squibs had been passing information on Imperial activities to the Invisible Shell in exchange for rare artworks. The artworks were sold to the Empire in exchange for information. Grees, however, managed to convince his companions to start feeding Ludlo false information. In this way, they could get rich while Ludlo was discredited in the eyes of the New Republic Intelligence agency. Ludlo discovered that the information was bogus, and captured Grees. For his treachery, Grees was frozen in carbonite and hung on a wall in Lebauer's office. The Squibs, hoping to recover their friend, convinced Leia Organa Solo to include the Second Mistake in her negotiations with Ludlo for ten Alderaanian boasa statues. Leia managed to back Ludlo into a corner, forcing him to return the artworks in order to simply save face. Grees was eventually freed of the carbonite. (SWI67)

Second Twilight

this was the term used by the natives of Tatooine to describe the period of night after the second sun has finally set below the horizon. This is the time of darkest night, when the criminal underground of the planet did most of its business. (SOT)

Second Wind

this was the name of a cracian thumper which was raced at the Heatherdowns Hotel and Track, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TSIA)

Secrecy Act

this law was enacted on the planet Bakura during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, around the time that Prime Minister Mollierre Cundertol began his negotiations with the Ssi-ruuvi Imperium. Ostensibly, the Secrecy Act was created to ensure that Bakuran information remained on Bakura, and was not acquired or stolen by the New Republic, the Yuuzhan Vong, or the Ssi-ruuk. In reality, the Secrecy Act was meant to ensure that Cundertol's plans were not discovered. (FH2)

Secret Order of the Empire

the elite group of Imperial servants who are sworn to protect Emperor Palpatine at all costs, the Order consists of a number of people at varying stages of development and loyalty. The newest members of the Order are known as First Initiates. First Initiates move upward in the Order through the Second, Third, and Fourth Circles, then they can become members of the Inner Circle. Those individuals who are the most dedicated and trusted can reach the level of Emperor's Hand. (TIE)

Secret Treasure of the Jedi

Vilmarh Grahrk claimed to have been hired to locate this fabled, secret treasure and steal it from the Jedi Knights, shortly after the Battle of Naboo. He claimed that he was hired by Bobo - a codename for Darth Sidious - to retrieve the treasure. In order to do so, he "distracted" the Jedi by inciting the Yinchorri to start their conquest of several planets, including Mayvitch 7. This allowed Bobo to infiltrate the Jedi Temple and steal the treasure. However, Bobo left Villie and the Yinchorri to die, and tried to flee unscathed. Villie managed to track him down and take the Treasure for himself, in hopes of returning it to the Jedi for a huge reward. The Jedi Knights, according to Villie, were willing to pay anything for its return, and practically begged him to recover it. Villie later claimed that he lost the reward while betting on Sebulba during the Boonta Eve Classic podrace on Tatooine, when Anakin Skywalker beat the Dug on the final lap. Despite the amazing story, Vilmarh Grahrk never revealed what exactly the Treasure was. (TDV)

this area of the galaxy is contained within the bounds of the Core, and contains the Prakith System. (SOL)

Sector Governance Decree

considered one of the many Security Acts passed by the Galactic Senate during the Clone Wars, the Sector Governance Decree was promoted by Chancellor Palpatine as a way to streamline and consolidate the defense and security of individual star systems. Under this Act, regional governors would be appointed to oversee the security and defenses of entire sectors, thereby eliminating redundancy and removing the bureaucracy involved in maintaining defenses at the system level. Ultimately, the regional governors would report to the Senate, although the direction for consistent implementation and management came from Palpatine himself. Many Senators believed that this virtually eliminated the need for the Galactic Senate, since the decisions of the Senate were established on a system-by-system basis, with each Senator representing one or more systems. Over time, this fear became reality, when Palpatine dissolved the Senate and turned complete control of system defenses over to the regional governors. (E3N, SW)

Sector Ordnance/Supply

the branch of the New Republic that is responsible for keeping the various armed forces bases fully-stocked and ready for action. It is also responsible for peacetime supplies. (TLC)

Sector Patrol

this police and security outfit controlled a portion of the Outer Rim Territories during the early years of the New Republic. (TFNR)

Sector Performing Arts Center

known as a SecPAC, these edifices were one of the few used by Imperial officials for the performing arts. Located on the various sector capital worlds throughout the Empire, the SecPACs were often Old Republic arts centers reused for their intended purposes. (TA)

Sector Plexus

the central point of flow for all information moving through Imperial Intelligence, Sector Plexus maintained a huge database of all Intelligence officers, their aliases, and the connections implied by those aliases. (ISB)

Sector Ranger Database

this database was maintained by the Sector Rangers of the Old Republic, in an effort to track the activities of known criminals and suspected criminal agents. (SON)

Sector Rangers

a loose association of local system police forces which filled the gaps in the galactic law enforcement system, the Sector Rangers were created by the planetary governors of the Old Republic. The Senate authorized the formation of the Sector Rangers in an effort to bring law enforcement to newly colonized worlds quickly and efficiently. The Jedi Knights couldn't be everywhere, so the Sector Rangers held sway in their own systems. When the Empire overthrew the Old Republic, many of the larger forces were usurped into the Imperial machine as the Imperial Sector Rangers. Others simply fell through the cracks, and remained separate enforcement agencies. After the Battle of Endor, the Sector Rangers continued to bring Imperial law to the worlds of the Outer Rim. The motto of the Sector Rangers read, "What others abandon, we protect." (DESB, GG11)

Sector Squadron

a fleet of six Imperial-I class Star Destroyers. (SWSB)

Sector Trade Permit

this Imperial document was one of a number of documents required from any spacer who plied the spacelanes during the New Order. The procedures for obtaining the certification were documented in the Spacer's Information Manual. Known as an STP, this document proved that a spacer had been permitted to transport goods and provide travel services across interstellar distances. (SWJ9)

Sector Zero

see Imperial Center Oversector (CCW)

Secura

this was one of the most powerful Twi'lek clans, native to the planet Ryloth. The name meant "skilled" in the Twi'leki language. (ROP, GCG)

Secure A-3

see Secure-A3 (AEG)

Secure Blue

this was the Imperial code phrase which indicated a change in the modulation of communications equipment, especially after equipment was stolen or captured. Secure Blue indicated a heightened level of encryption, in order to prevent the enemy from using stormtrooper helmets to intercept transmissions. (TG)

Secure-A3

this was a top-of-the-line military comlink, produced by Naboo Technologies during the last decades of the Old Republic. The rod-shaped Secure-A3 had a large grip which housed the primary electronics and power cell, with a thin microphone extending from the top. (AEG)

SecuriCo

based in the Indellian System, this manufacturer produced security systems to major installations. They were best known for creating the seven security locks which protected the computer core of Cloud City. (CCC)

SecuriDex

this massive datafile contained information on those beings who were deemed to be working "against the interests and/or benefit of Alliance operations and/or security." (AIR)

SecuriTech

manufacturers of certain Corporate Sector Authority patrol vehicles, such as the Espo Walker. (CSA)

Security Acts

this was the generic term used to describe the various amendments to the Constitution of the Old Republic that were ratified during the Clone Wars. Ostensibly, all the Security Acts were meant to achieve was the consolidation of certain powers in the office of the Supreme Chancellor, and only for the duration of the war, in order to ensure the safety of the Republic and its citizens. The Core Worlds Security Act was the first of these actions, and was followed by a steady stream of amendments that many Loyalists feared were giving Chancellor Palpatine too much power. They also - correctly - feared that Palpatine would not relinquish these new powers once the war was over. (E3N)

Security and Enforcement Act

this was one of many pieces of legislation that were promoted during the height of the Clone Wars, and ultimately supported by Chancellor Palpatine. The Security and Enforcement Act was created to provide the Chancellor with the ability to restructure military forces to ensure the protection of those individuals deemed vital to the survival of the Republic, including the Chancellor himself. The Senate initially voted to table any discussion on the Act during the Battle of Jabiim, but a pirate attack on Bail Organa's transport ship prompted Chancellor Palpatine to restart negotiation on the Act. Organa vowed to fight against it, but found himself powerless to do so. The Act was eventually passed in the wake of the destruction of the Star of Iskin and the death of Finis Valorum, providing Palpatine with even more control. However, once it was enacted, the Security and Enforcement Act only served to embolden the pirates who had grown more prevalent. Because the Act allowed for the utter destruction of pirates and other criminals, it also gave these criminals the right and opportunity to fight back. Many Jedi Knights died in skirmishes with pirates who believed that they had every right to defend themselves. (RDE)

Security Case

a small, hard case that is attached to its holder's clothing, the security case cannot be forcefully removed without administering a neuromuscular charge to the individual trying to steal it. The case attaches to the clothing by a thin wire and a small clip. If the wire is broken or if special contacts in the clip are activated by its removal, the case delivers its neuromuscular charge. The case is also equipped with a locking mechanism, in case the felon is able to withstand the charge. The case also has a hidden safety mechanism that can be activated by its owner, disabling the charge. (HSR)

Security Collar

although ostensibly manufactured to police forces as a way to restrain prisoners, this Thalassian device was sold to slavers and other criminal organizations. It was similar in virtually every respect to a standard slaving collar, and was formed from a durasteel collar which was attached to a heavy chain and a magnalock. (AEG)

Security Council

this Senatorial council was one of the many branches of the New Republic government formed after the dissolution of the Provisional Council. (SOL)

Security Decryption Interface

this was the standard droid security-breaking system available during the decades leading up to the Great Sith War, until Toshan Gant began producing superior technology for the Old Republic. The use of the decryption interface required additional programming, and allowed a droid to bypass most security systems. (KOTOR)

Security Domination Interface

this device was developed by Toshan Gant as a superior replacement for the Security Decryption Interface that was available some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. Like its predecessor, the Security Domination Interface required a droid with additional programming to work, and allowed the droid to break into computer-based security systems. (KOTOR)

Security Field

a defensive energy field used to enclose and protect an area from fire, or to limit the flight path of a starship. (COTF)

Security Guard

this division of the Royal Naboo Security Force was charged with protecting the citizens of Naboo. The 6,000 men and women of the Security Guard all had experience offplanet, and were sometimes charged with training members of the royal family and the Naboo government. (SON)

Security Guides

this branch of the Keganite Enforcement Guides was charged with maintaining civilian order in the Teaching Circle. (FFT)

Security I

this was one of three Nebulon-B escort frigates assigned by the Empire to protect the replenishment fleet which contained the Black Ice. (BI)

Security Interface Tool

this specialized computer interface device was developed for the Old Republic by Toshan Gant, more than 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. When attached to a droid with special programming, the interface tool provided a way to bypass security systems of all kinds. (KOTOR)

Security Management Control

this was the name of the guardian force established by Roy Teda to protect his dictatorship on the planet Romin, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (JQ8)

Security Officer Corps

this branch of the Royal Naboo Security Force was made up of the only full-time soldiers in the Naboo military. Roughly 1,000 men and women made up the Security Officer Corps, and they were responsible commanding the various soldiers and members of the military. (SON)

Security Police

the long arm of the law within the Corporate Sector, these police (Espo, for short) have no set laws to uphold, just the edicts of the Corporate Sector Authority. They wear distinctive brown uniforms, and act with impunity. (HSE)

Security Spike

this was a specialized tool used to defeat security systems. When connected to a locking mechanism or other security measure, the security spike created electronic interference in the lock. This interference essentially shorted the system, unlocking the system and allowing access. (KOTOR)

Security Tower

a detention area on Cloud City. (ESB)

Sedan Anang

this being was a Professor of xenobiology at the University of Sanbra, during the years elading up to the Clone Wars. Professor Anang was one of the first beings to witness an 80-meter-long space slug, living in the Borkeen Asteroid Belt. Professor Anang was working with Rogar Farnoster at the time, while Farnoster was researching his novel, The Slug Named Grendel. (HNN5, SWSB)

Sedesia

this harsh, tundra-covered world was located in the Mid Rim. Sedesia was noted for its 45-degree axial tilt, which caused wild weather patterns to sweep across its surface. Its heavy gravity prohibited the use of repulsorlift ground vehicles. The humans that inhabit the planet are tough and reclusive, but were not resistant to the Imperial-engineered plague that was led loose on the planet. There are rumors that the Empire poisoned the world to quell its pro-Alliance stance. Following the plague, the remaining humans swore their allegiance to the Alliance and openly defied the Empire. The average day on Sedesia lasts 20 standard hours. Its year lasts 220 local days. (SWJ6)

Sedeya, Reye

this young man was a native of the planet Stassia, during the height of the New Order. Known as a smalltime scam artist, Sedeya was targeted for investigation after a string of winning bets on the Ringer tournaments. Reye's mother died when he was a child, and his father plunged himself into his farming work, so Reye was raised by a nanny droid. He found that he had a gift for picking the winning bet in most gambling games, which was based on a level of Force sensitivity and helped him make a meager living. During one of the Sweepstakes Riner tournaments, Reye was followed by Zeck Tambell, who had a feeling that Reye was innocent, but wanted to link the young man to Aalia- Duu-lang. After Reye refused to help the crimelord out, she was arrested by Tambell. (SWJ6)

Sedi Fisk

one of the original settlers of the planet Tatooine, he used to live in a manor in the desert. He abandoned it sometime prior to the Battle of Hoth, and a pack of womp rats took up residence in his absence. (TM)

Sedratis City

this city was home base of the gladiator walker team known as Demelza's Destructors. (GFT)

Sedrellium

a valuable ore often found in the shells of Andoan mineral-fish. (COG)

Sedri

a planet which is home to the communal organism known as the Golden Sun, Sedri is completely covered by shallow oceans. It is also home to the Sedrian race, who have built wonderful underwater cities. The Empire researched gravity well projectors on this world, after an Imperial scout ship lost its hyperdrive inhibitor in the vicinity of the planet. The ship's systems were merely shorted out by the presence of the Golden Sun, and the scout limped home and recorded the existence of the planet. Shortly afterward, the Alliance managed to steal the plans and work on them with the Sedrians. The Golden Sun's glow filled the oceans with a soft glow, and the planet had a golden glow when viewed from space. The combination of the glow and the gravity anomalies caused by the Golden Sun force many shipboard navigation computers to register Sedri as a small star, forcing ships out of hyperspace in its vicinity. (GG4, DESB, BGS)

Sedrian

natives of the planet Sedri, the Sedrians are a race of sleek, aquatic mammals who worship the Golden

Sun. They are 3-meter long creatures with seal-like features, including a thick coat of slick fur. They appear humanoid from the torso up, but have the lower body and tail flukes of a seal. They prefer to live in the water, but must breathe air to survive. While they have gills, Sedrians also have lungs, and scientists aren't sure why one method of breathing hasn't been lost over the generations. They have constructed several underwater cities, like Fitsay, and appoint a high priest to guard the entrance to the cave of the Golden Sun. Very little is known about the Sedrians history or biology, because the energy shadow given off by the Golden Sun makes hyperspatial travel difficult near Sedri, so most ships simply don't get too near it. Their language is filled with barks and clicks, although they can master the Basic tongue with minimal problems. Their voices are quite loud, making it easy for Sedrians to hear each other underwater. (GG4, BGS)

SedriMotors Limited

a Sedrian company which manufactured various aquatic transports. They aligned themselves with the Alliance after Alliance agents saved the Sedrian race from extinction. They adopted the current technologies, and began creating their own designs. SedriMotors has since developed some of their own new technologies, such as water-driven drives and hover propulsion systems. (DESB, EGV)

Sedriss

Sedriss was an enhanced human who studied the Dark Side of the Force under Emperor Palpatine, and was later appointed one of the reborn Emperor's Executors. Before turning to the Dark Side, Sedriss had been recruited by the Imperial military but turned down because of his insolence and lack of respect for authority. Palpatine, however, sensed the innate evil in Sedriss, and gave Sedriss the chance to kill him if he could. Sedriss failed utterly, but Palpatine demanded his complete loyalty or else he would be killed. Sedriss agreed to become Palpatine's agent, realizing that the Emperor was a true superior. He was a massive human with spiked hair, and was unfailingly loyal to Palpatine. Even after the Emperor's death at Endor, Sedriss journeyed to Byss to await his master's return. His loyalty was rewarded years later when he became the first Executor, and the leader of the Dark Side Elite. In this capacity, Sedriss was the primary force behind restoring the Empire via Operation Shadow Hand. He gave the orders that launched the operation following the reborn Emperor's death. When Palpatine ordered him to detain Luke Skywalker on Ossus, Sedriss and Vill Goir both flew there in the Imperial Hunter Scourge One. Unfortunately for Sedriss, the ancient Jedi Master Ood Bnar captured him and reduced Sedriss to microscopic bits in an explosion of colliding Force energies. (DE2, DSSB, NEGC)

Seducer Plant

a carnivorous plant native to the planet F'tral, they use a sweet-smelling nectar to attract small animals to their location. A mass of vines and stems, the seducer plant waits until the animal is entangled before using the vines to strangle the animal. The seducer plant then draws the animal into its center and slowly digests it. (GG4)

See

this was a species of scalefish found in the waters of the planet Naboo. These fish were distinguished by their binocular vision, having both eyes located on the front of their blunt heads. Their long, thin bodies were dominated by their stomachs, which could distend to accommodate several large prey. Males and females of the species were distinguished by their unique coloration, with the males having darker yellows and greens while the females were lighter. (IG1, WSW)

Seebo Sauce

this was a favored food sauce of Corpo the Hutt. (T7)

Seed Machees

this male Gran was one of the many dealers of death stick who worked for Sebolto during the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo. A bounty was issued for his capture by the Coruscant police force, in connection with the rise in death stick distribution that occurred on the planet during the years following the Battle of Naboo. The bounty was claimed by Jango Fett, when the bounty hunter traveled to Malastare to meet with Sebolto. (BH)

Seed Pistol
