Acknowledgements

I need to thank a number of people for various things:

- Geoff Birt, for convincing me (against what I thought was my better judgement) to go and see Star Wars that first time in 1977
- Randy Simpson, for keeping me interested in all of this through The Empire Strikes Back and Return of the Jedi, and for being a good friend above all else
- my Mom and Dad, who somehow managed to put up with all of my Star Wars posters and paraphenalia (even though most of it failed to survive my college years), allowing my imagination to grow unabated
- all the authors and editors who contributed the many additions they've written to the Star Wars universe, especially Aaron Allston, Kevin Anderson, Cory Herndon, Daryl Mallett, Dan Wallace, and Megan Watkins
- all the folks at West End Games, for taking the small Star Wars universe and expanding it into a role-playing game
- all the artists who worked on Star Wars projects, for bringing the characters, equipment, and locations to life
- the Wake and Durham County, NC, Libraries, for providing me access to some of the source materials listed in the bibliography
- Dan Wallace, for help with planets, chronology, and Episode I: RACER!
- Mike Beidler, for his Star Wars Literature Compendium (<http://www.lightgate.net/StarWars/SWLC/compendium.html>)
- Michael Potts and James McFadden, for TimeTales and JMM's Chronology, and their help on my chronology
- David Anderson, John Bartos, and Michael So, for their growing lists of starships
- Colin Boothe, for finding that last C-3PO Pepsi One can!
- Nan Galliher, Lady Chiss, mMathab and Jnx, Jim Fisher, Ryan Scheckel, Tomasz Stepień, J. Craig Williams, Mark O'Brien, Megan Watkins, Aaron Snyder, Frederic Geertsens, Adam "ChissDude" Nettina, Michael Potts and Christopher McElroy, Andrew Christiansen, Alex Spade, Tim Grubbs, Robert Treder, Eugene Waara, Michael Mueller, Gabrielle and Bartosz, Piotr Mikolajski, Gwyn Oppel, Kris Joosten, and John Gorzny, for the use of their Star Wars materials
- Sabrina Kofax, Mat Ripley, and the folks at TomeRaider.com, for bringing the encyclopedia to palmtop computers
- The members of the New Sim Universe (<http://nsu.tierranet.com>), for their use and promotion of the encyclopedia
- Dave Settle (Hey You), for reminding me that I needed to finish Rebellion!
- Megan Watkins, for help with her story, "The Occupation of Rhamalai", and for pointing out that I had actually entered SWAJ 12 and 13, not 13 and 14!
- Mike Farnham, NarCranr, Robroj, Rafal Ruta, SWKeith, Ben Broad, Theluvr (aka Welden Gann), Thierry Monnereau, Ray Chramega, Michael Potts, Lance Worth, Al Manuel, and all the folks who have visited the Completely Unofficial Star Wars Encyclopedia website...keep the comments and questions coming!
- Matt Jones, for his help in getting the Source listings correct, and for general spelling and grammar repairs
- Ken & Rita Ritchie at Heroes and Villians, Tony Sacarello at Triangle Cards and Comics, and Lance Worth at Star Force Collectibles - for helping me spend all my money!
- Stan and Matt at MosEisley.com, for all their help in getting the encyclopedia out to the Internet
- Jenny Vitas, Meghan Vitas, Lindsay Holman, and Keith Mercure, and for letting me borrow their Star Wars books
- my wife, Jill, who ~~thinks~~ knows I'm weird and loves me all the same
- and, of course, George Lucas, for creating all of this, and for sharing it all with us

Dedication

This encyclopedia is dedicated to my kids, Jennifer and Meghan, as a reminder that their imaginations don't have to dwindle just because they grow older.

Some Information on This Encyclopedia

This encyclopedia was created from all Lucasfilm-licensed sources of Star Wars information. It was created without regard for what is "canon" what is not "canon" in the Star Wars universe. I have spoken with several respected members of the Star Wars community, both officially and unofficially, and many have grown to consider the Marvel tales as "myths and legends" within the Star Wars timeline. As such, they may or may not have happened exactly as retold in the Marvel comics. Think of it this way: when the United States Mens' Hockey Team won the Gold Medal at the 1980 Winter Olympics in Lake Placid, NY, it was considered the "Miracle on Ice." The stories of the US players have been well-documented by the US press. Imagine, though, the stories of those hockey games as told through the eyes of the Russian players who lost in the semi-finals. They would tell a starkly different picture of the exact same events. I've come to think of the Marvel comics as retellings of events which occurred during the Galactic Civil War, from the perspective of those individuals who were in the background while the action was taking place.

It was first made available to friends in 1994, after about 2 ½ years of work. I had been compiling information in a few text files, since I hadn't read any of the West End Games material when Heir to the Empire came out. Thus, I was completely at a loss as to what a Lancer-class frigate was. As it grew, I realized that this was bigger than the text files I had started with, so I tried out WordPerfect. Once I got everything converted over, and started really getting it presentable, I printed out the First Edition.

I kept working on it, especially when I learned about the scope of the West End Games material and the width of Bantam Spectra's deal to produce new novels. My free time, as I knew it, would be forever changed!

When I got the HTML plug-in for WordPerfect, I knew it was time to "go public." That first HTML converter took about 14 hours to complete the entire encyclopedia (which was about 2 Megabytes in size as a WP60 file), and my AOL account could only handle about 15 letters of the alphabet. I am indebted to those readers who started visiting my website back then, and who clamored for more information. After trying a couple other converters in an effort to get that 14-hour time down, I gave up on WordPerfect and migrated to Word 97. (This was a tough choice, since I am not Bill Gates' biggest fan by any stretch of the imagination!) The HTML code converted in about 10 minutes, from a set of files which was now about 5 Megabytes in total. All this meant that I had more time to figure out how to make the encyclopedia presentable.

I moved my ISP from AOL to Mindspring, and was able to get the full encyclopedia uploaded. However, I was limited to 450 Megabytes of transfer per month, which at first was OK. But, as the prequels started getting headlines, I would hit that mark every once in a while. When the prequels were about a year away, I would hit it every month. It was at this time that MosEisley.com offered to host my encyclopedia. I hesitated, not sure if I should move. However, as the prequels approached and I starting hitting my limit by the 15th of each month, I was getting as frustrated as my readers. So, I agreed to their offer and moved to their server. Thanks, Matt and Stan!

Of course, things always look greener across the fence, and I began to get a lot of notes from readers asking me to send them the files via e-mail. While the server was handling the HTML code pretty well, downloads were only completing about half the time. This was getting to be a hassle, as was the week where the site was down for an unknown reason. Also, space started to become an issue, prohibiting me from putting up lots of pictures and graphics. Thus, I took a sabbatical from MosEisley.com and started hunting for a new home. Amazingly, I found one almost immediately at TheForce.Net. They agreed to give me a ton of space and all the help I needed. While I had this before, I was now part of one of the largest Star Wars sites on the Internet. TheForce.Net had already recognized my encyclopedia as a cool site, and now it was on its way to become the Star Wars encyclopedia on the Internet.

Now that I'm with TheForce.Net, I'm reaching new and existing readers with more ease than ever. Thanks to readers like you, I've been transferring well over 4 Gigabytes of data each month! I'm also indebted to the readers who have written back, pointing out problems and offering suggestions, in an effort to make this the most complete and comprehensive encyclopedia available! I really do enjoy reading your correspondences and answering your questions. Keep 'em coming, especially now that the encyclopedia is backed up by a database!

It is impossible to create a document like this from such a huge body of knowledge without finding some inconsistencies and errors. Every author who has written in the Star Wars universe has commented on it and dealt with it. Lucasfilm has final say on the material I drew from, and it makes no claim that the material is 100 percent compatible with George Lucas' vision of the Star Wars universe. So, if there are errors or inconsistencies, I have tried to note them as appropriate.

It is important to note that this massive work could not have been completed (like it will ever be complete!) without help from a number of sources. They are all noted in the Acknowledgements section. I just hope I didn't leave anyone out!

I have also tried to document the source of my encyclopedia entries at all times. The bibliography at the end of this encyclopedia is quite extensive, and I have tried to indicate with each entry which source it came from. If an entry is not sourced, it means that I could not remember where I found it. If you find an unsourced or inaccurately sourced entry, please e-mail me!. The source listed is the first reference to an entry. If there are multiple sources listed, then all sources listed contributed some information to the encyclopedia. The abbreviations I have used are as follows:

Lastly, I document A Guide to the Star Wars Universe, Second Edition, by Bill Slavicsek, as a source of information. While this encyclopedia is very similar to Slavicsek's work, I have tried to put all my Star Wars knowledge into an encyclopedic format, complete with pictures, related topics, and cross-references. Slavicsek's Guide is also a source of some information that I missed. What was troubling for me was that I started creating this encyclopedia around the time of The Last Command by Timothy Zahn. Slavicsek's Guide was released about a year later, much to my dismay! However, I still found myself lacking vital information, and kept on plugging until I was able to get it all in one place.

Notes on Encyclopedia Entries

All entries are listed alphabetically, with the assumption that numerals come after letters. There are many cross-references to other listings, and they should all refer to a full description somewhere in the encyclopedia.

The names of human characters are listed alphabetically by last name. Being a human from Earth, I used the standard American phonebook listing for all Star Wars humans. Thus, if you want to look up Han Solo, you need to search in the S section under Solo, Han. If a human only goes by a single name (eg., Roa), then you simply look up that single name.

Non-human names, however, are listed alphabetically by the initial part of their name. This is because I chose not to impose Earth-bound human standards on Star Wars alien races. Thus, if you are trying to locate Momaw Nadon, you need to look under Momaw Nadon. As with single-named humans, aliens who have one word to their names are listed by that name (eg., Garindan).

If a character's race is unknown, their name is listed as it appears in the source.

Entries from any source not licensed or authorized by LucasFilm are preceded by an asterisk (*). There's at least one of them!

May the Force be with you...

A long time ago in a galaxy far,
far away...

M102 Fire Arc

this Golan Arms weapons platform was essentially a repulsor-equipped surface-to-surface projectile launcher. It was manufactured in an attempt to recreate the market for artillery weapons, but the Empire - at whom the vehicle was marketed - had no interest in artillery at the time. The M102 required a crew of four to operate, and used a Tana Ire GroundSweeper-3 sensor array to locate and identify its targets. (ROE)

this was the model number of Salus Corporation's Stalker body armor. (SWJ3)

M-12

this was the designation of a class of Imperial sweep bombs manufactured for use by Kuat Drive Yards. The M-12 was a notoriously poor performer in the field, with a failure rate of nearly ten percent. This meant that most Imperial unit demanded a better model, and much of the production run of M-12 bombs was scrapped. They were eventually replaced by devices which had gravity-wave systems built into their casings. However, some twelve million M-12 bombs were never shipped to the Imperial Navy. They were retained by Kuat Drive Yards for testing the armory chambers of their starships. (MA)

M12-L Kimogila

this long-range fighter was the third ship developed by the Hutts and produced by MandalMotors during the height of the Galactic Civil War. The Kimogila was created with a number of weapons emplacements, allowing for a wide range of firepower. Its hull plating and defensive shields made the Kimogila a formidable opponent, and its long-range capabilities made it a deadly addition to the Hutt fleet. (LAWS)

M13

this was the designation of the Imperial repair station constructed in order around the planet Mycroft, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. Its mission was to support the Imperial exploration and picket ships operating in Fakir Sector during the Galactic Civil War. As part of Operation Retribution, a group of Alliance agents were sent to Mycroft to harass the station, and nearly succeeded in destroying it. As it was, the station was rendered useless to the Empire and abandoned. (SWCP)

M132L4 System

this Alliance maintained a drop point, codenamed Condor, in this system, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ14) designated M-18 by the Chiss, this moon was captured by the planet Mobus, in the Klasse Ephemora System of the Unknown Regions, sometime around the Battle of Yavin. Its mass was more than ten times the combined mass of all the other seventeen moons of Mobus, a fact that intrigued the first Chiss probe to investigate the system. However, no other unusual characteristics were noted, and the probe moved on. Investigation into the records of the Chiss' Expeditionary Library by Luke Skywalker and his fellow Jedi Knights revealed that M-18 might have been the rogue planet Zonama Sekot. (FH2)

M21-T Krayt

this gunship was produced by MandalMotors during the height of the New Order, and was armed with a turret-mounted laser cannon and two . These ships found widespread use in Hutt Space, as the various Hutt crimelords used them to patrol their systems and keep both employees and business rivals under control. The M21-T was a cylindrical craft with two heavy wings at the rear, which gave it a signature T-shape. A laser cannon was mounted to each wing, to augment the ship's firepower. A pair of maneuvering and stabilizing fins was mounted to the nose of the ship, just behind the cockpit. (SWGAL)

one of the planets visted by the Night Caller shortly before it was captured by Wraith Squadron near

Xobome 6. The third planet in its system, M2398 was a gas giant ringed with dust and several moons. The third moon was the site of a base. (WS)

M2934738

this was the Imperial designation of a star system between Liinade III and Coruscant. Prince-Admiral Krennel dispatched the Interdictor cruiser Binder to this system, in order to prevent New Republic supply convoys from reaching Liinade III. (IR) this airless rock was the third moon orbiting the planet Mobus. After the planet Zonama Sekot decided to stay near Mobus in order to escape the rest of the galaxy, the native Ferroans mined M-3 for selenium. It was on M-3 that a Yuuzhan Vong warrior managed to hide, after his supporting fleet was driven off by Zonama Sekot, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. His presence was discovered by the Pride of Selonia, which had accompanied Luke Skywalker and a group of Jedi Knights on their search for Zonama Sekot. Sekot was unable to stop the Yuuzhan Vong from escaping, placing the planet in danger of another attack. (FH3)

see M-31 Speeder (NEGV)

M-31 Speeder

this fast airspeeder was produced by Trilon, Incorporated, during the last decades of the Old Republic. It was marketed the "speeder of your dreams," and many of the advertisements urged drivers to "wake up and smell the repulsorlift." The M-31 had two long, pointed hull sections connected to the central fuselage, which hold accommodate two beings. It was produced only in the color fire-red. (HNN5, NEGV)

this was the sensor designation of the Stellar Web, used by the New Republic forces which tried to destroy Warlord Zsinj near Vahaba. Han Solo had made a deal with Admiral Rogriss, who commanded the Stellar Web, but any indication of the Stellar Web's true allegiance were kept secret by the designation. (SOC)

M38 Explorer Droid

developed by LesTech, the M38 was created to assist explorers and scouts in searching out new territories. Measuring just over a meter in height, the M38 moved about on a pair of treads, and was equipped with a variety of sensors, analyzers, and heavy lifting arms. They were designed to be used in potentially dangerous areas, keeping the organic scout safe. The M38 tended to be highly reliable, although they required regular maintenance. (FTD)

M39 ComTech

developed by MicroThrust, this jamming unit provided a measure of protection against eavesdropping. It essentially emitted a wide range of background static in a localized area, preventing communications sensors from picking up any vocal or electronic communication. Originally designed for civilian use, the M39 was embraced by the Empire and redesigned to have a stronger power source and computer input tap. (GUN)

M3-A Scyk Interceptor

this two-winged starfighter was developed by the Hutts during the height of the New Order. The central fuselage tapered from the round cockpit up front to the exhaust nacelle at the rear. The wings were attached to each side, and gave the fighter the shape of an inverted triangle. Although the Scyk was developed by the Hutts, it was produced by MandalMotors, which sold it to both the Empire and the Alliance. (LAWS)

M3-D2

this droid was inserted into Jabba the Hutt's palace by the Whiphid, Lady Valarian, in an effort to persuade Sy Snootles to act as a spy against Jabba. (TJP)

M-3PO

a protocol droid that once worked with Roark Garnet. He belonged to Jarsten at the time. (RPG)

M-3PO

M-3PO, or Emtrey to the pilots of Rogue Squadron, was a protocol and regulations droid working for the New Republic Navy. He was assigned to Rogue Squadron at the same time Tycho Celchu was named XO, more to keep an eye on Celchu than to provide input on military protocol. (XWN) known as Treedee, this Cybot Galactica human-cyborg relations droid served as the maitre'd at the Farrimmer Café. Prior to his service to H'nib Statermast, Treedee served as a communications monitor for the crew of the Mynock 7 Space Station. However, Treedee got easily sidetracked, and his owner sold the absent-minded droid to Statermast. When he discovered that he would be the maitre'd of the Farrimmer, Treedee was excited to finally work in a profession that utilized his programming. The name Treedee is a shortened form of "maitre'd" used by Statermast. Treedee collected any tips he received in order to purchase oil baths from time to time. (SWJ11) this was a series of droids which Cybot Galactica based on the popular 3PO series of protocol droids, but which was targeted for military applications. These droids were not built for combat, but instead were designed to be administrative organizers and acquisitions experts, offloading these tasks from organic officers. The body of the M-3PO series was the same as the 3PO protocol droid, and the head of the M-3PO was recycled from the KW series of traffic control droids. (EGD)

M-3PO

M-3PO-C

this protocol droid was assigned to the hyperbaric plant on Marca by Dynamic Synergetics, Incorporation, at the time the plant was first opened. M-3PO-C was loyal to Arviz Linden, having been assigned as Linden's personal secretary, and admired Linden for keeping the plant's production at a minimum in order to protect the native Sekct. The droid was somewhat distraught upon learning of his death. After the take-over of the planet by Vost Tyne and the Empire, M-3PO-C was relegated to managing the pool of housekeeping droids at the plant. When a team of Alliance agents crashed on Marca and decided to help the native Sekct, M-3PO-C gladly gave them any assistance they needed while within the plant. (POM)

this was the designation of an experimental version of the TIE Fighter, which was designed for kamikaze-type missions. (XWA)

M-4D0

this protocol droid served as a porter droid aboard the Star of Empire. It preferred to be called Fourdee. After the ship was taken over by the Systems Integration Manager program, many of the droids began acting strangely. Gardening droids attacked the passengers and crew who remained on the ship, and M-4D0 used a blaster to shatter a transparisteel viewport. The droid was sucked out instantly, along with a great deal of the ship's atmosphere. (GOF10)

M4m

this was the military version of the Cybot Galactica M4 message droid. In addition to the basic features of the M4, the M4m was equipped with an internal sporting blaster to eliminate any threat to the message it contained. (SWJ14)

M4-series Messenger Droid

this small, Cybot Galactica message droid was designed to quickly and efficiently transport recorded information from one location to another, without having to rely on temperamental communications systems. It moved about on a small repulsorlift engine, and was programmed with several encryption and security routines to validate the receiver's identity. This series of messenger droids was known for its tenacity in delivering its message. There were many stories from both the civilian and military segments of the market in which M4 droids risked poor conditions or firefights to make their deliveries. (SWJ14, AEG)

this is the designation of a Balmorran repeating blaster cannon. They were used primarily by Imperial stormtroopers. (SWJ9)

M6W-9

this is a model of molecular stiletto produced by Zana. (SOP)

M820

this is a standard form of lubricant container valve nozzle. It is one of the few which can be converted for used as a blaster gas canister. (CFG)

M835

this is a standard form of lubricant container valve nozzle. It is one of the few which can be converted for used as a blaster gas canister. (CFG)

M91 Light Walker

this was an outdated form of two-legged military assault vehicle. (SWJ15)

Ma Lorda

this Huttese term translated into Basic as "My Lord." (GMR5)

Maa, Sel

this socialite woman was a regular at the Outlander Club, during the last decades of the Old Republic. She was easily distinguished by her spangled unisuit, which was colored to match the ribbon-like body paint she used on her arms and shoulders. She spent a great deal of time with Daro Willits during the her visits to the Outlander. (OWS, SWI75)

Maa'it

this yellow creature was bio-engineered by the Yuuzhan Vong as a replacement for an eye. These creatures allowed a Yuuzhan Vong to see into a variety of spectra, and provided the ability to see microscopic details with incredibly magnification. (EVC, EVR)

Maal Lah

a member of Domain Lah, this Yuuzhan Vong officer was placed in command of the warfleet which was dispatched to Coruscant. A disciple of Yan-Yammka, Maal Lah was known for his bold approach to warfare, but toned his plans down for Battle Plan Coruscant in order to take into account the heavy defenses arrayed by the New Republic. A kinsman of the Warmaster Tsavong Lah, Maal Lah was distinguished by his regular features, marked more by red and blue tattoos than by scars. Because of the Yuuzhan Vong's success in the Second Battle of Coruscant, Maal Lah was promoted to the rank of Supreme Commander. He was then commanded to work with Thrackan Sal-Solo to bring the Peace Brigade fleet into the Yuuzhan Vong war machine. When the New Republic attacked Ylesia and captured both Sal-Solo and the renegade Senator Pwoe, Maal Lah kept his forces in reserve to launch a counter attack. The Republic's Twin Suns Squadron, under the command of Jagged Fel, destroyed much of Maal Lah's ground forces in an effort to free the Republic's assault team. Maal Lah, already angry at losing the Republic forces as well as the Ylesian Senat, also learned that the Twin Suns' attack had badly damaged his leg. (SBS, Y)

Maal, Grindol

this woman was a former pirate captain who struggled to make a living during the height of the New Order. She was a longtime companion of the Revvien Wuwuhuul, and the two were known supporters of the Alliance. They accompanied an Alliance team to Goratak III to recover an Imperial I2-CG droid which contained information on the starship manufacturing plant on Tar Morden. (MB)

Ma-allesh

this was a Twi'leki phrase which translated roughly into Basic as, "Travel safely." (SESB)

Maana Demknot

this being, a noted hunter who lived on Tatooine some 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War, provided information about Helena Shan's location to Revan and Bastila Shan. (KOTOR)

Ma'aood

this race built wondrous funerary temples, protecting them by placing various booby traps within the corridors. The unique characteristic of the traps was that they were creating to be as inviting as possible, drawing unsuspecting thieves into the traps. (SOL)

Ma'ar Shaddam

this planet was first settled by mining corporations during the height of the Old Republic. The ores that were mined from Ma'ar Shaddam's crust were among the purest and highest-quality found in the galaxy, and the weaponsmakers were said to be among the best in the galaxy. It was on Ma'ar Shaddam that Boba Fett supposedly received maintenance on his equipment. (T18)

Maarwraawroo

this was one of the largest Wookiee cities established on the planet Kashyyyk. Like its counterparts, Maarwraawroo was established around a manufacturing facility, and was built in the intertwined branches of wroshyr trees. (GMR4)

Maas, Ceilia

this was the alias used by Annora Calandra to infiltrate the Raelli Ball, shortly before the Battle of Endor. (LOE)

Maas, Ilov

this man served as Delphon's Senator to the Imperial Senator, during the early years of the New Order. Maas was a vocal supporter of Emperor Palpatine, a trait which was passed on to his only daughter, Nima. (GMR6)

Maas, Nima

this voluptuous woman approached Greedo about locating Temo Dionisio, claiming that she worked for him and was worried because he hadn't shown up for work in several days. Nima was the daughter and only child of Ilov Maas, the Senator from the planet Delphon and an outspoken supporter of Emperor Palpatine. Nima herself saw the Empire as a stabilizing force, and worked hard to protect it. As she grew older, Nima was compared in looks and beauty to Riva Denais, a comparison which allowed her to enter places most other women would be forbidden to enter. She offered a large sum of credits for information on Dionisio's location, and Greedo jumped at the money. In reality, Nima was an Imperial agent who had tried to capture Dionisio on her own, but was beaten to the punch by Nok Derrick. Rather than have the near-human extort credit for the information Dionisio might contain, Nima hired Greedo to recover him. Also, Nima feared that Nok Derrick might kill Dionisio if a direct assault was launched. Greedo managed to recover Dionisio, and Nima tried to kill the Rodian to cover up any loose ends. Greedo, however, had a Rodian thrown blade up his sleeve, and managed to kill Nima by placing the knife deep in her throat. (T6, GMR6)

Maashan

this Kamarian Badlander left his homeworld of Kamar shortly before Han Solo inadvertently set off the Cult of Varn. Note that Alliance Intelligence Reports inadvertently claims Maashan's homeworld was Varn itself. Maashan then attended the Galactic Outdoor Survival School, where he a member of the famed Twilight Class. During his time on OM813, Maashan' was forced to hide behind an XP-38 landspeeder during a training exercise. Barosa Warren made quick work of the landspeeder with his Enforcer Pistol. After graduating from GOSS, Maashan joined the Alliance as a pyrotechnics expert, but was killed during the defense of theplanet Stronghold against the Charon. (AIR)

Mab

this word was used on the planet Gandle Ott, during the early years of the New Republic, as a way of addressing a being who questioned the motivations of a native: "This isn't the Core, mab." (DARK)

Mab Kador

this eager young Aleena was an up-and-coming podracer during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. He named his podracer the White Panther. (BF4)

Mabari

this was an ancient, Clawdite order of warrior-knights. Note that the Star Wars Databank indicates that the Mabari were warriors of the Zolander race. (VD2, SWDB)

Mabbik

this was a common name among the Kushiban race. (UANT)

Mabettye

this was one of the more common names given to males of the Mon Calamari race. To the Mon Calamari, this name meant "pilot of starfaring vessels". (GCG)

Mabettye

this Mon Calamari served as a Commodore within the New Republic Navy, and commanded the Poesy while serving under Admiral Darez Wuht in the defense of the planet Duro, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (BP)

Mabob

this member of the Ancient Order of the Pessimists was killed by Abal Karda while trying to deliver Karda's meal. Karda believed that Mabob was spying on him, even though Mabob was simply delivering his food. Karda shot Mabob at point-blank range and killed him. (EOE)

Mabroska

this Snivvian word represented the number 7. (HNN5)

Mabugat Kan

developed by Qelah Kwaan from research done by Nen Yim, the mabugat kan was a specialized creature that attacked and consumed the New Republic's HoloNet relay stations. Used throughout the galaxy after the Battle of Ebaq, the mabugat kan was part of Warmaster Nas Choka's plan to cut off the various fleets of the New Republic from each other. He reasoned that, without the nearly instantaneous communication afforded by the Holonet, Republic warships would be unable to coordinate plans. (FP, UF)

Mac

this man, who claimed to be from an out-of-the-way planet about three hours from Coruscant, was the chief technician for the Happy Blasters. While he was generally calm under fire, he was also xenophobic, and participated in the extermination of the Fyyrsprus species. The only reason for his actions was that the Fyyrsprus botched several repairs on the Starcat, and Mac wanted to make them pay for their mistakes. (SWJ13)

Mac Mac

this man served Roark Slader as the Captain of the Slader's Raider II during the early years of the New Republic. (SWJ3)

Macaab Mushroom

a fungus native to the planet Arzid, macaab mushrooms are very rare. They have the unique ability to attack non-organic brain matter and destroy it. They grow very tall in the wild. (PDS)

Macander Heavy Ores

this was the largest of the mining operations headquartered on the planet Aleron, in Tapani Sector. (PGT)

Maccabree

this race of immense, cyborged beings allied themselves with the Nagai, rather than see their civilization wiped out. The Nagai used the Maccabree warriors as their shock troopers, sending them into battle where fighting would be most dangerous. The organic part of a Maccabree was unusual in that its brain was protected by its torso and chest, while the "head" of the Maccabree was merely used for display and deception. They moved about in heavily-armored, droid-controlled suit, which gave the Maccabrees a humanoid appearance. However, the upper body of the Maccabree was capable of jettisoning its legs and rocketing free of a bad situation, further protecting the brain cavity inside the chest. (MC100)

this was the Gungan word for a droid or automaton. (SW1)

Maccent

a planet located along the Sisar Run. (SSR)

Mace

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Mace flies

an insect native to Dantooine (DA)

Mace Windu

this Squib, born Macemillian-winduarte', originally a member of the crew of the reclamation cruiser Two-for-One, was the chief bartender aboard the craft before it visited Tatooine. He was left behind when he dawdled in the Mos Eisley Cantina, and was forced to work at odds jobs in order to survive. Over time, he owed money to the Jawa Aguilae. In exchange for payment of the debt, Mace agreed to work as Aguilae's salesman at Jawa Traders. He had traversed a good portion of the galaxy, and had accumulated a wealth of useless knowledge. Shortly after R2-D2 and C-3PO landed on Tatooine, after blasting away from the Tantive IV, Aguilae and Mace were forced to go to work for Jek Nkik and his tribe while trying to swing a deal with them to recover CZ-3. They barely escaped the destruction of Jek's sandcrawler by Imperial forces searching for the droids. (GG7, SWJ11)

Macemillian-winduarte'

this was the given name of the Squib known as Mace Windu. (SWJ11)

Machar Heng

during the months leading up to the Battle of Coruscant, this Yuuzhan Vong subaltern was assigned by Warmaster Tsavong Lah to coordinate the Peace Brigade's attempts to capture Jedi Knights. He was provided with a small flotilla of ships and a handful of warriors, and moved about the galaxy to transport any captured Jedi back to the Warmaster. (NJOSB)

Machenry Station

this was the original name of Silver Station. When Una Poot married the engineer who adapted the station to handle the gas canisters used by prospectors in the Dragonflower Nebula, they renamed the facility Silver Station. (SWJ6)

Machill'Tr, Kendrick

this New Republic Intelligence administrative aide held the rank of Lieutenant at the time of the breakup of the Starbaster Plot. Machill'Tr was recruited to compile a datafile which documented the various individuals involved in the Plot and the Human League crisis on Corellia. (CTD)

Machook

according to Ewok legend, this hero built the first of the tree-villages used by the Ewoks. (GCG)

Machook

this was a common name for Ewok males. Like other Ewok names, it referred to a spirit or character in the Ewoks' mythology. (GCG)

Mack

this alias was used by a man who was a member of the Cularin Militia, after he and his comrades - Pac and Grunt - decided to speak out against the "so-called Expansion Manifesto" that was attributed to Reodo Artom. The trio of soldiers believed that the document was a great description of the morals of exploration, but it failed to take into account the true necessities of combat. They agreed to participate in an interview with Yara Grugara on Eye on Cularin, but the inane reporter made a mockery of their opinions. Mack - a native of Cularin with no love for Thaere - didn't help matters by admitting that he had only read the Expansion Manifesto just once, and then only certain parts of it. (LFCW)

this planet was the original homeworld of the Frid race of Iskalonians. (EGA)

Mackenni, Jorm Whistler

known by his codename of Twister, this Imperial stormtrooper served as the commander of the Aurek-Seven unit of the Imperial 501st Legion during the years following the formation of the Imperial Remnant and the signing of a peace treaty between the Empire and the New Republic. At the time that Aurek Company and the 501st were assigned to eliminate the Warlord on Kariiek, Twister had been with the company for six years, the last two of which he had been their leader. After arriving on Kariiek, Aurek Company made contact with a group of Eickarie rebels. Su-mil agreed to help Twister and his troopers enter the Warlord's fortress, on the condition that they freed the Eickaries who were being held prisoner there. Twister reluctantly agreed to the bargain, knowing that his troops needed every advantage they could obtain. He nearly paid for his decision after entering the Warlord's watchtowers, when the Eickarie soldiers Su-mil brought with him froze when confronted by a group of Lakran mercenaries. Twister took a blast full in the chest, but his armor and the relatively weak Lakran firearms saved his life. Shortly after that, Twister knew he had paid for it when Su-mil tricked them into going one direction, which allowed another group of Lakrans to trap them. It was then that Aurek Company realized they had been betrayed. However, Twister discovered that this wasn't necessarily the case, as Su-mil began pointing his blaster at Twister's eyes as he explained their capture to the Lakrans. Twister realized that Su-mil was indicating truth or lie by pointing at his right or left eye, respectively, as defined by Eickarie definition. In this way, Su-mil helped the Imperials get deeper into the fortress with minimal bloodshed. They were able to breach the Warlord's main security forces before Su-mil and his Eickarie soldiers captured the Warlord and turned him over to the Imperials. Shortly afterward, Mackenni relinquished command of Aurek-Seven. (FB, SQ)

Mackineek

this was another spelling of maccanek. (NEGC)

Maclain, Jerrod

this man was the Imperial Moff who oversaw the governmental roles of the various royal Houses on Brentaal. He was originally installed as planetary governor during the Clone Wars, after Brentaal was liberated from the control of Separatist Commander Shogar Tok. He replaced Arcel Mosbree, who was arrested for his part in allowing Separatist forces to take Brentaal in the first place. Despite his position, Maclain was despised by the local Customs agency for his willingness to immerse himself in the business of Brentaal, instead of imposing the Emperor's will on the populace. Maclain made a small fortune playing the stock market on the planet, as well as supporting several of the shadier freighter pilots. (SW7J, PSG, SW170)

MacMillian, Brandy

this weathered, old woman was a freighter captain who retired on the planet Gandle Ott, where she became the president of the local chapter of the Corellian Merchants' Guild. She was a no-nonsense woman who had earned her Corellian Bloodstripes, and who believed that the New Republic was capable of restoring peace in the galaxy. (DARK)

Macor

this was one of the larger continents found on the planet Essowyn. (PG1)

Macrebe, Rebba

this Alliance supply purchaser worked along the Trax Tube trade route during the Galactic Civil War. (PSG, SWJ7)

Macrobinoculars

day and night viewing devices used to magnify distant images. A contained readout provides information on distance and elevation. They can sometimes be programmed for record-and-playback, allowing the user to set them in a remote location while performing other duties. (SW, TB, AC)

Macrofuser

a small welding tool (ESB)

Macrolaser Tracker

this device was used by police and field agents to obtain information about nearby vehicles. The macrolaser tracker could accurately discern speed-over-ground and probably destinations, based on a vehicle's current velocity and heading. (JQ1)

Macrolyzer

this Imperial technology was developed to manufacture and filter the gas known as pacifog. (LAT3)

MacroMotionMonitor

this was a model of motion-detecting sensor array produced by NeuroSaav for use on blast helmets and other armored head protection. (GG10)

Macroon Mesa

this desert rock formation was located on the Mos Espa podracing course, in the Dune Sea of the planet Tatooine. (TPMC)

Macroscope

the device used to sight a handheld blaster or rifle. (HSE)

Macus Kayniph

this near-human ran the Black Sun operation on Smarck, during the early years of the New Republic. He resembled an overweight human male, but had scaled, tan skin and a series of five bony ridges along the top of his skull. He had arranged to kidnap Feena D'Asta and keep her drugged and in custody, while a clone of Feena was created and placed on the Imperial Interim Ruling Council. Grappa the Hutt kept her drugged with a regular dose of gree spice, and paid Macus to engineer more clones. However, Macus discovered that Grappa was making partial payments. Macus required a full payment in order to produce the clones Grappa needed to infiltrate the Imperial Interim Ruling Council. He confronted Grappa, who assured him that the debt would be paid. In the meantime, Macus told Grappa that Kenix Kil was really Kir Kanos. When the Zanibar failed to locate Kil, Grappa had one of them shot. Macus objected, and Grappa shot him as well. He kept Macus' body frozen, in order to fool the other members of Black Sun into believing Macus was still alive. In order to preserve his secret, Grappa had all the other guests who witnessed the shooting killed as well. The New Republic later destroyed his cloning facility on Genon. Meanwhile, a bounty hunter (who resembled Dengar) fled Grappa's court and brought the news of Kayniph's death to Y'ull Acib. (CE2)

Mad About Me

a musical piece played by Figrin D'an and the Modal Nodes. (TME)

Mad Anghus' Fun Public House

this backwater cantina was owned and operated by a hulking, white-skinned alien during the early years of the New Republic. (T14)

Mad Gass'kin

this Bothan was not insane; his name really was Mad. He maintained a network of used droid warehouses, selling the droids at discounted prices through the newsfeed known as Gass'kin's Used DroidNet. (GMR3)

Mad Mrelf

this is a strong, Corellian liquor. Many a spacer would go on drinking binges and consume more Mad Mrelf than they could hold, and they ended up in Imperial labor camps for their conduct. (THG)

Madak, Sava Brec

this alias was used by Boba Fett when he contracted House Benelex and Jodo Kast. This was part of Fett's plan to get rid of Kast, who had been impersonating Fett in order to make credits as a bounty hunter. Madak was supposedly injured by Satnik Hiicrop, and the injuries left Madak bandaged from head to toe. Hiicrop then posed as Madak, in an effort to obtain credits he wasn't entitled to by himself. This twist on the real-life relationship between Fett and Kast went unnoticed by Kast, who was killed by Fett on Nal Hutta. (SWG6, TOD)

Madakor

this woman served as a Captain in the Old Republic Navy, and was the commander of the Radiant VII when it was dispatched to the planet Naboo. Captain Madakor, who had risen quickly through the ranks on the basis of her excellent performance, delivered Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi to the Trade Federation's main ship before being killed when the Radiant VII was destroyed while waiting in its hangar. Captain Madakor was portrayed by Bronagh Gallagher in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace. (CCG13, SWI68)

Madallo

this luxury starliner made a regular run to the planet Spira, during the height of the New Order. (SWJ1)

Madam Rhoden

this green-skinned, female alien was the wife of Clode Rhoden. However, she wasn't satisfied by her husband, and plotted with the alien Buck to eliminate Clode and claim his immense inheritance. She was aware of Buck's ties to the environmental terrorist group, the Green Forge, but was unaware of the fact that Buck often skipped out on his female companions as soon as he stole their fortunes. She was also unaware of her husband's knowledge of her affair with Buck. When Madam Rhoden and Buck were targetted for execution by Clode Rhoden, who planned to use Buck's core bomb to kill them both, Saul Moegantz offered to join forces with them to strike back at Clode. Madam Rhoden reluctantly agreed, seeing that a partnership with Moegantz was the lesser of several evils, including her own death. They planned to sue Clode for divorce, on the grounds that he tried to have her killed, then take all of Clode's wealth and split it between them. (TAE)

Madame Atuarre's Roving Performers

the assumed name used by Han Solo, Atuarre, and Pakka as they pretend to be entertainers from the Imperial Entertainment Guild and try to gain access to Stars' End. Atuarre plays a dancer, Pakka an acrobat, and Han is the Master Marksman. (HSE)

Madame Lota

a flower-seller on Spaceport Row in Plawal, on Belsavis. She used her florist's business as a front for her brothel. (COJ)

Maddie Macatten

this crazy, old, Bith trader roamed the Kathol Outback during the early years of the New Republic. She traded with virtually every colony and settlement in the Outback, trading replacement parts and luxury items transported in her starship, the Scupper Bantoo. Maddie was once a slave on the Kathol capital of Kal'Shebbol, but was freed when her owner was ambushed by the Aing-Tii monks. Since then, she has spent her free time searching for information about the monks and their secret homeworld. In her travels, Maddie discovered the pair of mating Duinuogwuin dragons on Shatuun, but has kept their secret to herself. (KO)

Maddules

this gas giant was the fifth planet of the Metellos System. It was orbited by nine moons. (CCW)

Madeca Rex

this Skakoan individual was noted in the histories of the planet Skako. (UANT)

Madieri

one of the two major island continents found on the planet Kabaira, Madieri is the location of the Eponte Spaceport. (SWJ7)

Madillis

this woman was a noted businesswoman of the New Order. (GFT)

Madine

this was one of the most common surnames found among the human population of Corellia. (GMR9)

Madine, Crix

a Corellian General with the Alliance, his strict military background was formed during years of service to the Imperial Academy and the Empire. He took pride in the fact that, regardless of other Imperial squadrons' tactics, his team never took unnecessary liberties during a battle. However, when he began to see that his personal tactics were never going to be accepted, he tried to accept the Empire's ways himself. When this failed, he decided that it was time to seek out the Alliance. Using information on the Darktrooper project of Rom Mohc, Madine made his first contact with the Alliance. After his Storm Commandos were ordered to release the Candorian Plague on Dentaal, any vestige of support for the Empire left Madine completely. He erased all Imperial records of himself and sought out the Alliance. Mohc tracked him down and imprisoned him at Orinackra, but Kyle Katarn managed to rescue him. He made contact with his old friend, Carlist Rieekan, who put in some good words for him. When the Alliance accepted Madine, his Imperial training made him the logical choice to plan the assault on the second Death Star. There are rumors that the true reasons behind his defection deal with the receipt of a set of highly-criminal orders from Emperor Palpatine himself. They so assaulted his sensibilities that he left the Empire. After Endor, he turned down a seat in the New Republic's Inner Council, preferring to remain with the Republic's growing military. He became the Republic's commander of Special Forces, drawing together a crack team of commandos who were prepared to enter any situation for the sake of the Republic. Not many of his accomplishments are known, due to their often secret nature. The one mission that was lauded by the New Republic, unfortunately, was also his last. He had taken a small team to infiltrate the Hoth asteroid field and determine the status of Durga the Hutt's Death Star revision, the Darksaber. A series of mishaps left Madine alone; Korenn had died entering the asteroid field, and Trandia died giving Madine a hope for escape. Madine chose not to escape, and was captured by Durga's alien guards. Durga, pleased with himself for hatching the Darksaber plot and capturing Madine, executed Madine with a blaster bolt through the heart. General Madine was portrayed by Dermot Crowley in Star Wars: Return of the Jedi. (ROTJ, DFR, DESB, DS, NEGC)

Madis

this New Republic Navy Captain commanded the picket ship Folna, under the watchful eye of Colonel Foag. (TT)

MadisCorp

a Kian'thar business. (GG12)

Madloom

this name was common among Ithorian females. Although such names do not generally have meaning, Ithorians who studied their race's history learned that the name meant "twilight" - or, more literally, "the last breath of the sun". (GCG)

Madman, The

this was one of the many nicknames used to describe Kaox Krul. (GMR5)

Madman's Fortune

this museum exhibit ship traveled the galaxy to display its contents, which included a "freak show" that was its most popular attraction. Owned by a Snivvian named Goontirk, the ship provided viewers with some of the most bizarre items imaginable. The ship met its demise when it crashed into the planet Engebo V, shortly after Goontirk acquired a mummy which he claimed was that of "Archregent Vardovin IV, Lost King of Duro." The mummy contained more than a dozen skekfish eggs, which hatched when the ship was passing near Engebo V. The skekfish attacked everything in sight, and the crew of the Madman's Fortune was killed. (WOA10)

Mador

this was a common name used by the Abyssin race. (UANT)

Madorin, Hyris-Well

this Jedi Master was dispatched to the starfighter base established at Phelar Port, on the planet Eriadu, just prior to the Battle of Geonosis. Master Madorin was also assigned to ensure security in the Seswenna Sector of the galaxy with Gideon Tarkin. (HNN5)

Madra

this settlement, nestled in the Rym Mountains of Socorro, was considered the most beautiful of all the settlements on the planet. The city of Madra was known for the underground pools of water which formed in volcanic pockets near the city, which were believed to have medicinal value. (BSS)

Madra Teene

this classic opera documented the battle between the natives of a Colonies world and a collection of droids which rose up against their controllers. (DARK)

Ma-dred, Ashala

this brown-haired Kashirim woman was one of King Sha-mar Ma-dred's four wives. When King Sha-mar Ma-dred asked Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker to assist in protecting his wives, Ashala stole young Anakin's lightsaber while he was amazed at her beauty. Unknown to both Ashala and Anakin, Obi-Wan had used the Force to lift the weapon from Ashala's possession, and held it until Anakin admitted that he had lost it. (T12)

Ma-dred, Kheann

this red-haired Kashirim woman was one of King Sha-mar Ma-dred's four wives. (T12)

Ma-dred, Mirrix

this blonde-haired Kashirim woman was one of King Sha-mar Ma-dred's four wives. (T12)

Ma-dred, Sha-Mar

this Kashirim served as the King of the planet Kashir, during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. King Ma-dred traveled to Coruscant with two guards and his four wives to meet with the Jedi Knights to discuss Kashir's admittance to the Old Republic. He found that his wives were very interested in the wonders of Coruscant, and begged Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker to help him keep them in line. (T12)

Ma-dred, Tiarri

this dark-haired Kashirim woman was one of King Sha-mar Ma-dred's four wives. (T12)

Madurrin

this Anx was trained by Luke Skywalker in the Jedi arts, during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. She later volunteered to help with the war effort, but her four-meter-tall frame was unsuitable for starfighter combat. Instead, Madurrin served aboard the Mon Adapyne, as the official Jedi Knight liaison. Madurrin's role on the Mon Adapyne was to participate in the Jedi Force-meld developed by Jacen and Jaina Solo, helping to coordinate the activities of naval vessels in their struggle against the Yuuzhan Vong. Madurrin was ultimately one of the handful of Jedi Knights to survive the conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong, and he chose to remain as a Jedi advisor to Supreme Commander Traest Kre'fey and the Galactic Alliance military. (DW, UF)

Madware

this was the term used to describe the terrorist programming developed by the Separatists during the Clone Wars. Madware was created to override the normal programming of a droid, causing it to do all manner of deadly and destructive things. Separatist agents used microwave technology to insert madware into a large number of the droids that supported the Old Republic, causing the loss of life and property on many planets. (YDR)

Maedano

this barren ball of rock was the second planet of the Metellos System. It was orbited by a single moon. (CCW)

Maelibi

this alien race, native to the planet Iego, was known as demons by those beings who had visited the planet. They were less well-known than the Diathim, primarily because the Maelibi lived belowground and rarely left the planet itself. They were said to resemble the Diathim, although they lacked the wings of the other race, and were generally considered even more beautiful. The humanoid bodies of the Maelibi seemed to be formed from molten gold, and their lyrical voices were said to be the embodiment of music itself. However, they earned the nickname Demons because of their feeding habits. The Maelibi preyed on those beings who had been stranded on Iego, dragging them screaming beneath the surface of the planet. (WOTC)

Maelstrom

this unusual area of space, located near the Relgim Sector, is dominated by a huge, nebula-like cloud of charged space dust and raw energy. This combination of attributes scrambles most sensor systems, hinders communications, and confuses hyperdrives and navigational computers. Thus, most ships must revert from hyperspace to realspace in order to traverse the Maelstrom. This has led to a rise in piracy near the Maelstrom, since the ships come out of hyperspace with very little warning of what lies near the cloud. (RM)

Maeltorp

this small corporation produced a variety of repulsor-equipped cargo vehicles during the New Order. (SWJ4)

Maendin, Lar

this native of Vastrip IV was a scout who served the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. He personally located several planets that were later used as bases and safe worlds. However, following the Battle of Endor, Maendin defected from the Alliance and began working as an independent operative. He was known to have sold the locations of Alliance and New Republic bases to the Empire, and all of them have had to be evacuated before Imperial forces destroyed them. He also has been known to scout out remote planets for use by the remnants of the Empire. (WBC)

Maer

this Alliance Corporal was stationed at Echo Base shortly before the Battle of Hoth. An animal expert, Maer served as a tauntaun handler and winter environment expert, and even developed a form of sign language which he used to communicate with the tauntauns. (JKG)

Maerdocian

this alien race joined the New Republic. (SOP)

Maeril

this Draedan dictator was one of the few that supported Emperor Palpatine. (GG12)

Maetrecis, N'do

this man served as a Major in the Grand Army of the Republic, and was stationed on Drongar during the height of the Clone Wars. Major Maetrecis was injured in battle, and seemed to contract one of the many unknown diseases that lurked in the swamps of Drongar. His recovery was slow, since the doctors at Rimsoo Seven were unable to ascertain the cause of his problems. In a bold - and highly illegal - action, Doctor Zan Yant began secretly administering doses of processed bota into Maetrecis's system. The results were spectacular, as Maetrecis began recovering almost immediately. Doctor Yant was discovered by his good friend, Jos Vondar, who both understood and decried Yant's actions. (MBS)

Maeve

this was a common name among the Zeltron people. (UANT)

Mag

this was a common name given to Zabrak males. Like many Zabrak names, it related to survival characteristics, and meant "strong" or "mighty". (GCG) this humanoid was a native of the planet Arda-2. He was responsible for the Empire receiving huge numbers of T-6 diodems during the Galactic Civil War. When the Empire learned that Arda-2 was supplying the diodems to the Alliance, they enlisted the aid of Doum in obtaining some for their own use. Doum refurbished diodems from home-service devices and sold them to the Empire at a ten-times markup. He was ousted from the government when his treacherous acts were discovered by Luke Skywalker. (CSWEA)

Mag Doum

Mag Pulse Weapon

a weapon developed by Galactic Electronics for use by the Alliance on modified B-Wing fighters. Weapons of this kind don't cause immediate damage, but instead knock out starship systems for an extended period. (TIE, XWA)

Mag-6 Injector

this fuel injector was used on pod racers. (RAC)

Maga

this Dantari was the garoo of the tribe which befriended Hoole and the Arranda children, during their flight from the Empire. He held no compassion for them, however, after the Dantari began to notice Tash's small command of the Force and Hoole's ability to change his appearance. Maga eventually reconciled their differences, recognizing that they were no threat to his authority. This was all in an effort to gain their confidence and lure them to the Jedi ruins near the Dantari camp. He urged Tash to enter the ruins, hoping she would disappear and he could regain his tribe's confidence. However, a false clone of Tash attacked the camp while Maga was away, and he was forced to reveal his deception to the real Tash. Maga then went to find his people while Tash searched for her uncle and brother. (GOF11)

Magagran

this planet was held by the Empire during the last years of the New Order. Major Tierce was stationed on Magagran during the Battle of Endor, and thus survived the death of Palpatine. When Tierce learned of the Emperor's death, he jumped ship to return to Coruscant and assess the damage. (SOP)

Magalak

this female Selonian was the champion of the Kurtuln den, which lived beneath Kystes' Spine on the planet Talus, during the height of the New Order. Despite her status as champion, Magalak was considered odd because of her desire to isolate herself from the rest of her den. Magalak was much happier when she was with her band of warriors, hunting along the Spine for intruders. (CCW)

Magaloof

this small-time thief was active on the planet Coruscant during the last decades of the Old Republic. When Obi-Wan Kenobi caught Zam Wesell's modified droid ASN-121, he was dragged through the skies of Coruscant and nearly collided with Magaloof, who was joyriding in a stolen airspeeder. (IWE2)

Maganinny, Makx

this man served the Grand Army of the Republic as a Sergeant, during the height of the Clone Wars. When General Khamar was dispatched to defend the Intergalactic Communications Center on Praesitlyn, Maganinny was placed in command of the reconnaissance scouts assigned to gather intelligence on the Separatist forces there. Unfortunately for the Republic, they underestimated the strength of the Separatist force dispatched to Praesitlyn, and they found themselves badly outnumbered. During the initial wave of attacks, it was believed that Sergeant Maganinny was overrun and killed. He was rescued by one of his own scouts, Odie Subu, who managed to drag him to a safe location. (JT)

Magar Jaros

this male Sullustan was known as a mild-mannered being with no real skills and no real backbone. However, Jaros was also an excellent counterfeiter, and used his ability to duplicate signatures and credits to "get back" at those who made fun of him. (GG11)

Magataran Maelstrom

this was a vast nebula which was dangerous to travel around or through. (DMSH)

Magda

Lord Keto's wife, and the Queen Mother of the Empress Teta System just before the rise of the Krath. (DLS)

Magenge

this light green fungus is sweet to the taste. It forms the basis of the Verpine diet, and is grown inside all Verpine asteroids. (SFS)

Mageye

a Hutt working in the Stenness System, Mageye was killed by Zardra when he got caught in the crossfire of a battle between the Thig Brothers, Zardra, and Jodo Kast in the Red Shadow bistro. (TME)

Magg

Magg was born in the Corporate Sector, and grew up learning how to straddle the fence on every issue. This allowed Magg to watch for potential gains before making a jump to one side or the other. Growing up surrounded by the corruption of the Corporate Sector Authority, Magg believed that cutting corners and taking bribes was business as usual. When he was hired as a duty agent by the Authority, he performed his work indutiful fashion, all the while looking for ways to make a quicker credit. His associates labelled him as shady, and the adjective wasn't that far off. Magg began living a double life within his Authority career, ostensibly serving as Fiolla's assistant during the time when she was trying to expose a slavery ring in the Corporate Sector. This was how he met up with Zlarb, after apprehending him in a sting. Magg offered Zlarb freedom for a cut of the action, and the second of his two lives was born. Magg used his Authority contacts to provide information to Zlarb. To complete the illusion, Magg tipped Fiolla off to Zlarb's arrival at Bonadan, but only because he was, in reality, working for the Corporate Sector Authority and its slavery ring, and thought that he could eliminate her and Han Solo together by luring them on a swoop chase. He was assisting Zlarb on Lur, and so was identified by Han Solo. He was thought to be the slaver's accountant and security manager. He was a short man with black hair, and had a number of talents which made him useful to both Fiolla and the Corporate Sector Authority, including locksmithing and weapons training. (HSR, CSA) this woman served the Alliance as a starfighter pilot and military officer, during the months following the Battle of Endor. A former Imperial pilot who defected to the Alliance, she was part of the fleet which traveled to Godo, in order to investigate the strange plague that was affecting the Godoan people. (MC99, MC107)

Maggli, Dairn

this man was a small-time smuggler and gunrunner during the years following the Battle of Naboo. A bounty was posted by the Republic Security Force for his arrest in connection with the hijacking of a Republic transport which had been carrying weapons to Sullust. He was captured on Coruscant by Jango Fett, who was on the planet searching for Jervis Gloom. (BH)

Maggot's Cantina

this offworlders cantina was located in the Anzat Spaceport, on the planet Anzat, during the last years of the Old Republic. (RT)

Maggy the Gorgon's Tavern

located in a section of Mos Espa not controlled by the Hutts, Shmi Skywalker asked her young son Anakin to get his ruby bliels from this tavern, rather than from the Blue Brubb. They also befriended an old spacer who frequented the bar, and who told them stories of the other planets of the galaxy, as well as stories of the Jedi Knights. (ANA)

Maghook

this small, but extremely powerful cylindrical electromagnet can be fused to the end of a cable and used as a grappling hook. The magnet is activated by the sudden jarring of the magnet itself, and can be deactivated with by twisting a small dial on the magnet. (TA)

Magicot

an edible vegetable. (TME)

Magister

this was the title given to the leader of the Ferroan colonists who settled the planet Zonama Sekot. It was the Magister's job to ensure the safety and relative anonymity of the planet above all other things, standing between Sekot and Zonama to ensure balance. Before Sekot took the planet into hyperspace, there had been two Magisters. The first Magister was a Jedi Knight who accompanied the settlers to Zonama Sekot. The Jedi, a small, wiry man, had followed the religion of the Potentium, and had been driven out of the Order for his beliefs. He developed an intense relationship with Sekot, and established the practices of creating wondrous technologies with the help of Sekot. Unfortunately, this collaboration with the planet gave Zonama Sekot the idea that it was a unique individual, rather than the collection of all living things in its environment, which confused the planet and shrouded its view of its existence with uncertainty. The next Magister was a hologram of the original, developed to ensure some form of continuity in the leadership with Sekot. However, the planet had already assumed the identity of the dead Magister, and began to act for itself. The ruse was discovered by Anakin Skywalker and Jabitha, who found the original Magister's body buried in the rubble under Far Distance's mountain location during their flight from Ke Daiv. The illusion was furthered by the addition of holographic representations of the Magister's children. The exact name of the original Magister was considered sacred, and the Zonamans were forbidden to speak it aloud. Obi-Wan Kenobi later learned that the Magister was Leor Hal. After the death of the second Magister, Jabitha herself was selected to serve Sekot. (RP, DW, FH3)

Magistrate Council

made up of businessmen and merchants, this was the primary governmental body of the town of Corestrike. Ostensibly, the Council also acted on the behalf of the entire planet of Chrona. (SWJ12)

Maglev Bullet Car

a swift form of transportation, the bullet car was a segmented train - sometimes called a mag-lev train - which ran in tunnels. It rode on rails through which a current was passed. The resulting magnetic field pushed against an opposing field generated by the train itself, propelling it along the track at incredible speeds. (SE, MBS)

Mag-lev Train

this was a form of railway transportation that used magnetic energy to propel the train, rather than nuclear or fossil fuels. When a current was passed through the rails, a magnetic field was created that pushed against an opposing field generated by the train itself, propelling it along the track at incredible speeds. A specialized version of this vehicle, known as a maglev bullet car, ran along a track that was located within a tunnel. (MBS)

MagI'likkan Temple

this ancient fortress was built within the Undrarian territory on the planet Baralou. It was located at the base of a huge, underwater mountain, and was carved from the coral reef which grew around it. The Krikthasi revered the temple as a sacred place, and rarely allowed other species to even get near it. (PG1)

Magma Missile

this Yuuzhan Vong weapon was literally a glob of molten metal which could be fired at a target. The magma missile was most often used aboard starfighters and larger warships. (SBS)

Magma Pebble

this form of Yuuzhan Vong weapon was a small, thumbnail-sized glob of plasma that was contained in a hard shell. When agitated and thrown, the magma pebble heated up and shed its shell, splattering the target with plasma. These small projectiles were often used against battle droids, since the armor plating of the droids melted quickly under the plasma's burst of energy. (NJOSB)

Magma Spitter

this Yuuzhan Vong weapon was used to defend stationary locations. Similar in most respects to a magma missile launching system, a magma spitter ejected small spheres of molten rock at a target. (SBS)

Magma Trooper

this was the term used to describe those specially-trained and outfitted Imperial stormtroopers who worked on volcanically-active planets throughout the galaxy. (VD)

Magminds

a Human League trooper stationed at Corona House following the secession of Corellia from the New Republic. (AS) developed on Velusia, this weapon consisted of three magnetic balls attached by a thin metal cord. When thrown, the magna bolas whipped through the air toward their target, creating a distinct sound. When the target was struck, the balls continued to whip around, wrapping the metallic cord around the target and incapacitating them. (CCW)

Magna Bolas

Magna Caster-100

this unusual weapon was produced by Frohad Galactic Firearms, and was essentially a dart-shooting rail gun which used magnetic resistance to launch the projectile at its target. This made the weapon extremely quiet to use, but they were produced in such small numbers that they are extremely rare on both the open and black markets. (ROE)

Magnaband Scope

this form of starship scanner was used to detect the size and shape of an approaching ship. (MC50)

Magnacuffs

this was a generic term used to describe any form of handcuffs or binders which used magnetic energy to maintain a lock. (GG10)

MagnaForce

developed and produced by Simcronics, this wrist-mounted personal shield provided a small measure of protection against an attack. It was quite expensive, and only provided about two minutes' worth of protection before the power cells drained. (GFT)

MagnaGuard Manufacturing

this small combat automata manufacturer was contracted by General Grievous to build the IG-100 series of droids. MagnaGuard also produced much of the weaponry used by the IG-100 series. Note that the Star Wars - Revenge of the Sith Visual Dictionary indicates that the IG-100 MagnaGuards were produced by Holowan Mechanicals. (LAWS, VD3)

Magnaharness

similar to magnacuffs, a magnaharness is a restraint system which uses magnetic forces to control a being's body. Depending on the configuration, the harness can restrain arms, legs, hands, feet, or head. (GG10)

Magna-hoist

this is a huge, durasteel-jawed mechanism used in starship construction facilities to grasp and manipulate large, heavy pieces of ships. (HM)

Magnalock Grapplers

these small, hand-held devices use a strong magnetic field to grip heavy objects. (SWJ9)

Magna-shuffle

a casino game of chance. (RM)

Magnatonic Boots

these specialized boots were developed during the last decades of the Old Republic. The soles of these boots were made from a unique alloy that provided magnetic gripping power at the atomic level, providing excellent stability on all metal surfaces. (BF6)

Magnatonic Grip Panel

Magnatorch

this form of handheld light generated power with magnets, creating a nearly inexhaustible supply of light. (COG)

Magnepulse Ordnance

this form of bombardment weapon was developed by the Empire shortly before the Battle of Yavin. Also known as magnetic bombard, the magnepulse ordnance is detonated above a city or other target, and has two forms which deliver a great magnetic pulse that shorts out communications, droids, and other hi-tech equipment. The pulse can be delivered by a cannon blast or a cluster bomb, although the cluster bomb could be shot down prior to detonation. (ISB)

Magneta

this native of the planet Naboo served as the Captain of the Guard and the Royal Security Force under King Veruna. A stern, hawk-like woman, she refused to arrest Sate Pestage on charges of murder and conspiracy after then-Lieutenant Panaka discovered a hidden bae dug into the surface of Naboo. The underground lair was filled with the bodies of Gungans and humans alike, who seemed to have been part of the pro-Naboo terrorist group led by the man known as Veermok. Magneta refused to believe Panaka's report, claiming that the bodies had been regurgitated by a dying sando aqua monster that had washed up nearby. Captain Magneta later resigned after Veruna's corruption was exposed, and the King mysteriously was killed. Magneta promoted Panaka as her replacement. (IG1, GMR2)

Magneta-Mine

this magnetic-fastening explosive device was developed by Greff-Timms Industrial some 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. (TOJC)

Magnetic Bottle

this was the term used to describe the strange, repulsorlift-like technology created by the Geonosians. It involved concentrating magnetic fields in a small area - the "bottle" - and using them in opposition to each other to keep items away from each other. (SWI64)

Magnetic Containment Field

this device is used to protect landing pads and starports which operate in the vacuum of space. The magcon field, as it is often referred to, creates a field of magnetic energy that is semi-permeable. Atmosphere in the landing area is contained within the field, so that it doesn't escape out into the vacuum of space. However, it is incapable of maintaining the heat of the landing area, which seeps through the containment field and into space. Slow-moving starships can pass through it without breaking the field's integrity. (WS, SOC)

Magnetic Pulse Beam

similar to a tractor beam, a magnetic pulse beam was used by large starships to draw a smaller ship in closer. While this technology was originally designed to assist space tugs moving larger ships around orbital shipyards, it was also used to rescue or salvage a smaller ship adrift in space. (MC15)

Magnetogravitic Shield

basic starship protection which keeps a ship from burning up while travelling at near-lightspeed in the hyperthin atmosphere of open space. (LCS)

Magnetoran Sweep

this wide-beam device was used to disrupt targeting computers. (CSWEA)

Magnigrapple Pole

this form of structural support was used on planets which were to be terraformed, or were covered with shallow seas or swamps. Magnigrapple poles attach to a building or other structure, and keep it in place through magnetic force. The supporting magnets are anchored in the ground, allowing the structure to stay in one location despite the shifting conditions of the ground. (POC)

Magnite

this material was used in the construction of tall skyscrapers, because of its high tensile strength. (IWE1)

Magnobore

a large, outdated series of turtle-shaped droids. (COJ)

Magno-fix

this small device uses a small, magnetic disk to affix something to a metallic surface. They are useful in attaching restraining bolts to droids. (CFG)

Magnograsp Transmitter

this outdated sensor device used magnetic imaging to track large vehicles. (IAG)

Magnolock

this security device uses a magnetically-coded entry sequence to unlock a door or portal. They are often used on cruiser ships, with each passenger having a special card that can open the lock. (RM)

Magno-neutralizer

this unusual device used a concentrated magnetic field to shut down a droid. It was popular among criminals during the height of the New Order, since it could be thrown from a distance to disable guardian or security droids. (MDCAR)

Magnopium

this highly-explosive material was used in the construction of core bombs, during the last decades of the Old Republic. It was used in conjunction with ferrocongregate to create the intense blast produced by the core bomb. (TAE)

Magnus

an Alliance transport ship operative during the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Magore, Tilas

this man was an Imperial Advisor to Emperor Palpatine, during the early stages of the Galactic Civil War. Magore was responsible for the planning of the subjugation of Brak Sector. (FBS)

Magravian Cat-spice

Magravian Spice

this form of spice was known for its ability to temporarily sharpen a being's reflexes. (BF4)

Magresh

this minor crimelord stole a warehouse full of medical supplies from the Imperial camp of Captain Noran Vran, then turned around and sold it back to her for ten portable missile launchers. Vran paid him, but had rigged one of the weapons to explode shortly after she left. Magresh was killed in the resulting explosion. (HR)

Magresh

one of the two natural moons of the planet Ergeshui. (PG2)

Magris Quill

this Anomid was known as an upstanding businessbeing and community supporter. In reality, he was one of the New Republic's most successful fences. (GG11)

Magro Slim

this male Klatooinan was wanted for a variety of vandalism activities aboard the Outland Transit Station during the years following the Battle of Naboo. He was a known associate of both Eno Arba and Meeko Ghintee during the time he spent on the station. A bounty was placed on his head by Rozatta himself. Magro Slim was eventually captured on the Outland Transit Station by Jango Fett and brought in for the bounty on his head. (BH)

Magrody Institute of Programmable Intelligence

founded by Nasdra Magrody, the Institute fostered further learning, education, and development of intelligent automata. Emperor Palpatine consulted the Institute while designing the first Death Star. (COJ)

Magrody, Elizie

Magrum

this evil-minded Imperial Governor controlled several industrial planets during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GCG)

Magsol

a drug used by the Ssi-ruuk to help attune a human brain to their entechment chairs. Essentially a solution of magentic particles, magsol was injected into the subject's body and was absorbed by the nervous system. When energized by an external magnetic field, the magsol helped force the subject's life-energy out of their body and into a catchment arc for storage. (TB, TBSB)

Mag-soles

this was the generic term used to describe any footwear equipped with magnetic soles. These shoes were used mainly by starship repairbeings, who needed to work in the vacuum of space. The magnetic soles kept the workers attached to the ship's hull. (BF2)

Magus

this man was a noted bounty hunter who worked the blood trade during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. He had been hired by the Corporate Alliance many times, often for clandestine or illegal missions. It was Passel Argente who hired Magus to assassinate twenty leaders at a conference on Rondai-2, about eleven years before the Battle of Naboo. Magus put together an unlikely group of bounty hunters that included Raptor, Pilot, Lunasa, and Gorm the Dissolver to carry out the mission. However, they were forced to hunt down Talesan Fry after the young boy discovered that their plans and was going to provide information to the Galactic Senate. After a group of pirates captured Talesan and returned the boy to the bounty hunters, Magus set off for Randai-2, planning to use the boy as a shield in order to carry out the mission. He was angered when a group of Jedi Knights - Qui-Gon Jinn, Adi Gallia, Obi-Wan Kenobi, and Siri Tachi - trailed them to Rondai-2 and disrupted the assassination attempt. After Raptor was killed and Lunasa and Gorm were captured, Magus and Pilot tried to escape with Talesan as their shield. At the last minute, however, Magus realized that the plan had been completely foiled. Rather than be captured, he fled in an airspeeder, forcing Pilot and Talesan to fall off. Pilot fell to his death, but Talesan was rescued by Siri Tachi. In retaliation for the Jedi ruining his plans, Magus hunted down Talesan's parents and killed them, then went into hiding. He reappeared some twenty years later, again working for Passel Argente. This time, Magus was dispatched to Genian to recover a top-secret device from Helina Dow. After obtaining the codebreaker, Magus shot and killed Helina during his attempt to escape. Unknown to Magus, however, was that the codebreaker he stole had been a prototype that was rendered useless by Talesan. Helina Dow, however, had installed a tracer in the real device, which allowed the Separatists to track it to Azure. There, Magus joined the Separatist forces in attacking the Republic's secret base. He set out to eliminate Talesan once and for all, but his ship was disabled by Siri Tachi. During the struggle for control of the ship, Magus managed to shoot Siri before she rendered him unconscious. After Siri died from her wounds, Magus was taken into custody as a prisoner of war. (SOJ) this creature was native to the equatorial deserts of Reopi, where it fed on small rodents, insects, and reptiles. It resembled a large frog, measuring almost 60 centimeters in length when fully extended. Their feet are webbed, giving them excellent traction in the shifting sands of the desert. These feet also help them burrow into the sand to avoid the intense heat of the day. Their hides are incredibly tough, and magus were hunted for their skins, which were used to make a durable material sold on certain planets. When threatened, the magus exudes a noxious poil through pores on its skin. (COG)

Magus

Magwip

this was a hearty meal enjoyed by the Sullustan race. (GMR8)

Magwit, Bellina

Wim Magwit's wife, she was an obese humanoid who assisted her husband in his magic act. (BF)

Magwit, Wim

known as the Magician, this humanoid dwarf was a travelling mystic whose primary act involved the mass disappearance of his family, props, and himself through a device known as the Mystifying Hoop Trick. The hoop was something he designed himself; it was a short-range matter transmitter that moved whatever he put into it a small distance away, usually off-stage. He was Bar-Kooda's personal entertainer until he escaped from the pirate. However, Bar-Kooda put an Imperial warrant out for his arrest, and Boba Fett caught him. Luckily for Magwit, Fett had just committed to finding Bar-Kooda, and Fett offered Magwit his freedom in return for locating Bar-Kooda. Magwit agreed, and Fett eventually used the magic hoop to trick Bar-Kooda. (BF, EGW)

Mah Dala

this was the capital city of the planet Gobindi. It was the site of the largest concentration of pyramids and ziggurats on the planet. (GOF3)

Mah Dala Infirmary

this was the finest hospital and research center in the sector, and was located in the city of Mah Dala, on Gobindi. It was brought to prominence through the efforts of the former Imperial scientist Kavafi, and was under Imperial control for much of the Galactic Civil War. The Empire used its proximity to the huge ziggurats built by the ancient Gobindi to perform secret experiments on biological weapons, inserting a Shi'ido agent in place of Kavafi during the development of the Gobindi Virus. Mairan this large, tentacled alien race is native to the planet Maires, and communicates by blowing musical notes through drilled shells. They have rubbery, black skin that must be kept wet at all times. Most have over 40 tentacles, and all have two lumpy eye membranes. The Mairans have been long-time rivals with their neighbors, the Vergills. The battles escalated about nineteen years after the Battle of Endor, when the Vergills opened a ditanium mine near the Mairan consulate on Hapes. The Mairans claimed the Vergills were disrupting their ability to run the consulate, but it was later discovered that the Mairans purposely located their consulate near the richest ditanium mines in an effort to spark a confrontation. (L)

this ocean planet, found in the Hapes Cluster, is the homeworld of the Mairan race of aquatic aliens. (L) a former rival of Jabba the Hutt, Maizor lost a "confrontation" with Jabba. Jabba then had the B'omarr monks surgically remove Maizor's brain and suspend it in a nutrient jar. Jabba then had the jar attached to a neuro-networked droid body. Maizor was then doomed to wander through the catacombs of Jabba's palace as a mechanical spider. The spider shape had automated legs that were attached to the life-support jar. Maizor can be seen in the doorway to Jabba's palace when Bib Fortuna allows R2-D2 and C-3PO into the palace. (ROTJ, DS)

Maizor

Maj

this was a common component used to create the names given to Cerean males. In general, male Cereans given an individual name, which is added to the names of their father and grandfather. Complete male names are arranged based on harmony and cadence, but the literal meanings are arranged to ensure proper descriptions. The name Maj indicated a male ruler, as a king or chief. (GCG) this Squib purchased the rights to a pile of junk located on the third moon of Kothlis, unaware that it contained the wreckage of an Imperial Plexus Droid Vessel. Maja eventually turned the PDV over to the Alliance agents who had been searching for it. (SPG) this woman was the peaceful queen of the Majan race, during the last decades of the Old Republic. She welcomed the podraces of the time to the city of Baroo, since the Majan people enjoyed watching them. (RAC)

Maja Fey'ja

Majan

this race of beings is native to the planet Baroonda. They lived in the vast city of Baroo, which encircled the ancient Nazwa ruins of their ancestors. (RAC)

Majen va ts ras quee

this phrase was used by Ortolan traders and smugglers, and translated into Basic as "Now, let's talk prices." (3D3)

Majestic

this was one of the many assault ships that formed the naval fleet of the Old Republic, during the early stages of the Clone Wars. The Majestic was dispatched to Qiilura as the extraction vessel for the mission to capture Ovolot Qail Uthan. As the clone commandos of Omega Squad began their final assault, the Majestic provided bombardment of key locations, as both a distraction and a direct attack. The two facilities believed to be Ghez Hoka's possible locations for Uthan's laboratory - codenamed Greenwood and Boffin - were the primary targets. (RCHC) this was Emperor Palpatine's flagship Imperial-I class Star Destroyer, used just after the Battle of Hoth. It was later captured by Admiral Zaarin as part of his plot to capture and execute Palpatine. (TIE)

Majestic

Majestic

this cruise ship was part of the Galaxy Tours fleet. Celia Durasha was first assigned as ship's navigator aboard the Majestic after her graduation from Baylagon Technical Institute, and she single-handedly piloted the ship clear of a pirate attack. (SWJ8) this was the name of Pyash Yopayomba's pirate ship, the flagship in her growing fleet. During the early years of the New Order, Yopayomba was led to believe that the Imperial governor of Ando would pay her handsomely for starting a civil war between the Aquala and the Quara, a war which the Empire could use to fully subjugate the Aqualish. Her plans failed, though, when Sissalik reprogrammed the autopilot on the Nanda's Luck, ramming the ship into Pyash's own flagship, the Majestic. All hands on board, including Pyash herself, were killed in the explosion. (PH)

Majestic

Majestic Gundark

this basic YT-1300 light freighter was owned by the Army of Life, and was used to transport a load of clodhopper eggs to Stend IV. (WOA2)

Majesticas

this toxic ball of rock was the third planet of the Metellos System. (CCW)

Majestic-class Heavy Cruiser

this was one of the new class of starship designs approved for the New Republic Navy, around the time of the formation of the Fifth Battle Group. Measuring 700 meters in length, the Majestic-class saw widespread duty during the Black Fleet Crisis. Equipped with thick armor and heavy-duty shields, it was designed to compare with the Imperial-class Star Destroyer in battle. The Majestic-class was armed with 30 heavy turbolaser cannons, 20 laser cannons, 20 ion cannons, 8 concussion missile tubes, and 4 tractor beam projectors. Each cruiser was manned by 4,050 crewmen and 132 gunners, and could transport up to 640 troops. (SOL, CTD)

Majestrix of Skye

this was the title used by Kharys, of the S'kytri, during her rule of the planet Skye. (LTA1, MCA1)

Majie

this plant is often grown on terraformed or exceptionally harsh planets, for it takes hold in most any condition and has some nutritional value as well. (POT)

Majilop

this planet is located in Lol Sector. (GG11)

Majjer, Cal

this grizzled old man was the owner and operator of the Dry Goods Emporium, located in the city of Hedrett, on the planet Cularin, during the last years of the Old Republic. (EOS)

Majjvara

this was the name of the monarch or ruler of the Yvarema people. The Majjvara was similar to the queen of an insectoid hive mind, and served the same purpose to the Yvarema. She was the source of their intelligence, but was dependent on the working classes for sustenance and new information. Unlike the rest of Yvarema society, which is largely humanoid in stature, the Majjvara is a huge, wormlike creature with ten vestigial limbs. She was positioned within a hovering throne that allowed her support her immense bulk, and surrounding this throne was a ring of incubation tubes in which Yvarema fetuses were growing. The Majjvara was connected to the tubes by a network of cables and wiring, allowing her to monitor the development of her young. The ancient Majjvara had to give birth normally, but modern Majjvara had their eggs placed in the incubation tubes for fertilization and development. Each Majjvara lived for about 400 years, providing the Yvarema society with stability. After the crew of the FarStar landed on Yvara, the Majjvara learned of the atrocities of the Empire from Gunthar, and pledged her support - in principle - to the New Republic. (KR)

Maj-Odo-Nomor

this young Cerean male was one of the multitude who demanded the elders of their planet allow the import of technology. He was swept up in the fiery speeches of Bron and Silais, and felt that the lack of technology on Cerea kept the planet at a primitive, backwater level. When Ki-Adi-Mundi tried to match Bron in a debate, Maj grabbed hold of his lightsaber and activated it. To Maj, it was simply a new and interesting piece of technology. However, when he turned it on, he accidentally speared another youth and killed him. Although Ki was accused of the murder, Maj fled with his cadre of friends to the Outsider Citadels to escape any possible legal actions. There, he was befriended by Bron and Ephant Mon, who hoped to use the boy and his struggle to legalize their import of technology to Cerea. Maj was dating Sylvn at the time, but in the wake of the deaths of his friends Kordren and Skeel, Maj started to fall in love with Twin. This angered Sylvn, and turned her resolve back toward her father's words. Meanwhile, to protect his "investment," Ephant Mon took Maj, Twin, and Sylvn to Tatooine for safe keeping. They stowed away on a transport ship, but were sharing the ship with divvik pupae. The pupae hatched into adults, threatening them all until Ki arrived to rescue them. When Ephant Mon threatened to blow the escape pod out unless Ki acted to free them at the cost of his own life, Maj rebelled and tried to break free of Mon's control. The Chevin pulled a hidden blaster out and shot Maj in the chest, killing instantly. (PTR)

Majoor

this planet was the homeworld of a green-skinned, humanoid race. (NEGC, MDCAR)

Mak

this portly Imperial General accompanied Darth Vader and Nas Ghent when they set out to find the Star Destroyer Crucible during the Galactic Civil War. Vader had planned to have Ghent train an elite squadron of starfighter pilots, and General Mak served as the military officer who convinced Commander Dorin Millavec to bow to Vader's wishes. (T21)

Mak

this common, though archaic, Zabrak surname meant "raider", referring to a time when raiding other settlements for supplies was considered an honorable profession. (GCG)

Mak

this Bothan name was given to newborn males. Translated into Basic, it meant "mighty." (GCG, WOTC)

Mak Sezala

this Bothan represented the planet Bothawui in the New Republic Senate, some twenty-seven years after the Battle of Yavin. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Senator Sezala disagreed with Chief of State Borsk Fey'lya's plan to lure the alien invaders to uninhabited planets on the pretext of those worlds holding Jedi fugitives. However, Senator Sezala saw that Fey'lya was at once trying to dupe the Yuuzhan Vong and re-unite the fracturing Republic, and quickly supported his plan, naming several uninhabited worlds in Bothan space which the Yuuzhan Vong could investigate. (SBS)

Maka

this was one of the largest cities founded by the Aramandi on their homeworld of Aram. (FBS)

Makacheesa

this Huttese word translated into Basic as "payoff." (GMR5)

Mak-Ageejay, Bosrik

this man worked as a financial advisor for Regency Spires Imperial Trust, during the height of the New Order. A snobbish man who was condescending to virtually everyone he met, Bosrik was one of the most despised and respected bankers on the planet Ralltiir at the time. Unknown to even his closest friends, however, was the fact that Bosrik was embezzling money from Imperial securities to finance the purchase of weapons for the Alliance. (CCW)

Makant

a large, playful insect native to the forest moon of Endor. (ECAR)

Makashi

this was the ancient term used to describe the Form II lightsaber fighting style. (SWI68)

Makati, Afsheen

this man was one of the twelve Grand Admirals who served Emperor Palpatine during the last years of the New Order. Makati developed an intense hatred of the Supreme Prophet Kadann, after Kadann overheard Makati's first officer make a snide comment about the clothing worn by the members of the Secret Order of the Empire. Kadann badly injured Makati with a burst of Force lightning in retribution, and Makati never forgot the incident. Years later, when Kadann tried to take control of Coruscant in the wake of the Battle of Endor, Makati refused to return to the capital planet. Instead, Makati located the former prophet Azrakel and demanded to know of Kadann's location. Azrakel provided a wealth of information on Scardia Station and the Lost City of the Jedi, and Makati managed to trap Kadann on Scardia. Using every turbolaser at his disposal, Makati destroyed Kadann and Scardia Station, completing his own revenge. Unfortunately, Makati died shortly afterward. (VOF, SWI66)

this yellow star, located in the Outer Rim, was the primary body in the Makem System. (WOTC)

Makem Dua

this volcanic world was the second planet of the Makem System. (WOTC)

Makem Hek

this gas giant was the sixth planet in the Makem System. It was orbited by thirty-three moons. (WOTC)

Makem Liva

this gas giant was the fifth planet in the Makem System. It was orbited by twenty-one moons. (WOTC)

Makem Pria

this planet, a searing ball of rock, was the innermost world of the Makem System. (WOTC)

Makem Qat

this gas giant was the fourth planet in the Makem System. It was orbited by nineteen moons. (WOTC)

Makem Sup

this frozen ball of rock was the seventh and outermost planet of the Makem System. It was orbited by a single moon. (WOTC)

Makem Te

this arid planet, the homeworld of the Swokes Swokes race, was the third planet in the Makem System. Much of the planet's surface was covered with rocky deserts, with crumbling bedrock grudgingly giving way to scrubby plantlife. There was virtually no surface water found on Makem Te, and the Swokes Swokes were forced to tap into underground aquifers to obtain the water they needed. One of the most interesting surface features found on the planet was The Tract, an ever-growing cemetery that contained the remains of some 1.2 trillion Swokes Swokes. By the time of the New Order, The Tract covered more than seven percent of the planet's surface area. An Old Republic scouting party first believed that The Tract was simply a vast northern ice cap, although further investigation revealed its true nature. This investigation also led to the discovery of valuable ores and medical-grade spice being found beneath the desert sands, two facts that gave Makem Te a sudden importance to the Republic. As off-world interests began to strip the planet of its resources, several groups of Swokes Swokes fanatics began to disrupt their operations in an effort to regain control of their planet. During the last years of the Old Republic, a violent civil war erupted on the planet between when the Temple of the Beatific Razor began to take power away from the Congress of Caliphs. A Republic peace-keeping force was dispatched to quell the violence and restore the planet's society, but it was exterminated by the Beatific Razors. The Congress of Caliphs then turned to Count Dooku and the Confederacy of Independent Systems for aide, and the fighting was halted for many years. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Makem Te was briefly attacked, and the orbital refueling station near it was destroyed as part of a plan to disrupt traffic along the Perlemian Trade Route. The planet itself was relatively unscathed, although debris from the station crashed very near to The Tract. (TPM, WOTC)

Maker, The

this was the deity which controls the world of the Sunesi race. When certain Sunesi, like Agapos the Ninth and Nee, began to use the Force to heal others, the Sunesi believed that it was a gift from the Maker. The Maker was also known as the Giver, and was believed to be the single being from which the galaxy's diversity of life flowed. Most Sunesi believed that the Maker loved all his creations, but was not above using a sense of humor in his creations. (SWJ10, BP)

Maker, The

a droid's reference to the person who created the first droid, who was also known as The One Who Creates. (SW, OWS)

Maker, The

this modified YT-1300 was owned and operated by Sythluss Leethe. Leethe had installed a wide range of security measures to prevent the ship from being stolen, including stun steps and incapacitating gases. It was armed with a turret-mounted quad-laser cannon and a pair of forward-mounted concussion missile launchers. Leethe often traveled with the ship, under the name of One Shot, during his dealings in the black market manufacture of droids. Despite the many security measures, T'Charek Haathi and her Alliance shipjacking team managed to steal The Maker for the Alliance. (SWJ13)

Maker's Workshop

this is the name given to the droid construction and repair facility found on Hologram Fun World. (GOF4)

Makezh

this native of the planet Danoor was a well-known navigator, and was thought to have been the only person to successfully navigate the Kathol Rift. However, about a year before Moff Sarne was forced to flee Kal'Shebbol, Makezh was reduced to an amnesiac after an encounter with the Aing-Tii monks. They left him in a light transport just outside the Rift, and that's where all his memories began. After this, he found that navigating the Rift was quite easy, and earned plenty of credits making the run for private and public employers. After being arrested for petty theft during a slow period, Makezh was visited by scientists who wanted to know about his ability to navigate the Rift. He started developing severe headaches shortly thereafter, and went into hiding in his apartment on Eror Zeen. He later helped the crew of the FarStar navigate through the Rift, during their hunt for Moff Sarne, eventually joining the crew. Unknown to Makezh, he had been trained by the Aing-Tii Monks for one purpose: to locate and obtain the Codex from an alien construct deep in the Kathol Rift. When the FarStar moved to investigate a pair of distress calls from the planet Demonsgate, Makezh suddenly went mad and stole the Codex from the ship's hold and fled in an X-Wing he appropriated. Despite his skills as a navigator, Makezh was a poor pilot, and he crashed the craft on Demonsgate's surface. Makezh ejected before the crash, and made his way on foot to deliver the Codex to the Aing-Tii Monks. He was intercepted by the bounty hunter Mist, who attempted to steal the Codex for the Imperials. Unfortunately for Makezh, the Aing-Tii who recovered the Codex also captured him and brought him back to their ship. (KO, KR) this radical Ho'Din environmentalist protested the killing of rikknits on the planet New Plympto, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Salak once tried to blow up a shipment of ji rikknit in the Karsten High Port, but was apprehended and sent to jail. (CCW)

Makim

this Doctor of Physics was one of the leading scientists at the Empire's Lotide outpost. (BI)

Makina, Robet

this man, the son of wealthy parents, grew up supporting the Empire. However, after witnessing the atrocities it perpetrated on non-humans, Robet swore to overthrow the Empire and joined the Alliance. He remained loyal to the New Republic after the Battle of Endor, and eventually was named the New Republic's Ambassador to the planet Glova. He spent much of his early career trying to gather evidence of Imperial loyalties by the planetary Governor, Tegist Byrg, a mission in which he eventually succeeded. (POC)

Making Lives

this song, written and played by the band Starburst, first appeared on the compilation StakeOut. (GG9)

MaKing-class Transport

a transport ship built by General Spacetronics. (RPG)

Makintay

this man served as the feudal leader of the planet Hargeeva until the Empire subjugated the world and took control of its natural resources. Makintay held enough power over his people to convince the Imperials that he should remain in control of the world, and was named Governor of the planet. (SWJ8)

Makintay, Stevan

this young man was part of the nobility on the planet Hargeeva. Like all young noble males, he was sent to the royal guards for formal military training. As the eldest son, Mak - as he was known to his friends - was also the heir to the throne of Hargeeva. He learned the intricate ways of swordsmanship, and had the scars to prove it, including one that ran down his right cheek. He was also a graduate of the Imperial Academy, and became a skilled starfighter pilot. However, back on Hargeeva, Mak fell in love with Ketrian Altronel. He intended to marry her, despite her position as a member of the common classes, but his father wouldn't allow it. Mak was disinherited and his father arranged for him to be kidnapped and sent off to Garen IV, an Imperial penal colony. Many years later, he and a group of Alliance agents managed to escape, and Mak immediately joined the Alliance. He spent much of his free time working to establish a rebel cell on Hargeeva, and he eventually led the rebels in a large-scale revolt. His role as a rebel leader on Hargeeva earned him the death mark in the system, but he continued to work to free his homeworld. In the meantime, he worked hard for the Alliance in many capacities, from Eyrie Base. When he returned again to Hargeeva, Mak was captured by Nial Pedrin while trying to see Ketrian. She had been told by Mak's father that he had abandoned her, and she felt no love for him. However, they were captured by Pedrin's forces and shipped off to Coruscant. During the trip, Ketrian's good friend Alikka Nolan was killed during interrogation, and she began to believe Mak. When the Ghawem pirates attacked their ship, Mak and Ketrian were allowed to go free. They returned to Eyrie Base and began working together for the Alliance. (SWJ8)

Makk, Leona

this woman worked as a pilot for Shang Lines during the Galactic Civil War. Leona captained the bulk hauler Voxen Tass. She supported the Alliance, and was instrumental in getting an Alliance strike team to Argovia, where they were able to destroy a sensor net set up by the Empire. She was known as a tough-as-nails spacer, and used her position in Shang Lines to feed information on local shipping to the Alliance. (IA)

Mako

an Imperial assault transport ship operative during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Maks Leem

this female Gran was one of the many Jedi Masters who remained on Coruscant during the Clone Wars, teaching the young students who were too green to participate in the fighting. She had been one of the participants in the Battle of Geonosis, and had regretted the slaughter of lives that accompanied the so-called Republic "victory." She feared that the younger generation of Jedi students and Padawans would emerge into the galaxy having only known combat and violence. As Master Leem put it, they were being "weaned on poisoned milk." She spoke to Master Yoda about moving the Jedi Temple away from Coruscant, to escape the clouding of the Force that was experienced by the Jedi Knights of the era. Upon her return to Coruscant after leaving Geonosis, Master Leem took Whie Malreaux as her Padawan. Years later, they were dispatched - along with Yoda, Jai Maruk, and Tallisibeth Enwandung-Esterhazy - on a mission to meet with Count Dooku on Vjun. It was on Phindar that the Jedi were caught by Asajj Ventress and a squad of assassin droids. It was during the fighting that Master Leem realized that her aversion to the war had led her away from combat training, and that her skills as a fighter were rusty. Although she managed to destroy several droids, Master Leem took a spray of flechette razors in the leg, dropping her to the ground. She managed to take out a couple more of the assassin droids before being faced with Ventress herself. The Dark Jedi was able to slice a gaping wound across Leem's stomach before Maruk could reach her side. As she lay dying, she tried to keep Maruk from joining the fight, knowing that Ventress would kill him, too. Maruk failed to see her silent plea, and was eventually killed by Ventress as well. Master Leem knew that she would go to her death knowing that he had fought as hard as he could. With Maruk vanquished, Ventress returned to Maks Leem and drove her red-bladed lightsaber through the Gran's chest, making Master Leem the eighteenth Jedi Ventress had killed. The deaths of the Jedi Master left their Padawans alone, until they were rescued by Yoda. (YDR)

Makthierse

this planet was known for its crystalline caves. (COG)

Maktites

this gang of soldiers and mercenaries was one of the first groups to try and defeat the original Echani warriors. However, the Maktites were unprepared for the depth and breadth of military equipment the Echani had developed. During one noted struggle, the Maktites had planned to eliminate a group of Echani by using thermal weapons. They were unaware that the thin body armor of an Echani warrior could withstand extreme heat, which rendered the thermal weapons useless. (KOTOR)

Mak-tk-klp

a Kamarian word used to describe something that is rewarded to an individual who provides the correct offering. It has a slightly religious connotation, as Han Solo found out on Kamar. Lisstik used the word Mak-tk-klp in reference to the holofeature Varn, World of Water, which the Badlanders revered for its displays of a world where water was everywhere. (HSR)

Makurth

this species of fierce, nocturnal carnivores is found on the planet Moltok. Bipedal in stature, makurths have four large horns studding their heads. They attack with a terrible scream that can be heard for kilometers. The criminal organization Black Sun often used makurths as bodyguards. (CCG9)

Mal

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Mal

this was a common component used to create the names given to Cerean males. In general, male Cereans given an individual name, which is added to the names of their father and grandfather. Complete male names are arranged based on harmony and cadence, but the literal meanings are arranged to ensure proper descriptions. The name Mal referred to an individual's dependability, reliability, or resolve. (GCG)

Mal Biron

this old, Shistavenan male was a smuggler and bounty hunter during the period of the New Order. He had been a scout for the Old Republic, but the Empire's pro-human stance forced him out of a job. He later joined Black Sun as a smuggler, working for the crimelord Sprax while serving as Black Sun's unofficial representative to the Uvena System. Mal Biron traveled in the modified Barloz-class freighter Eyeshine. (SSR)

Mal Coramma

this male Chagrian worked as Black Sun's envoy to the smaller criminal organizations found on the planet Coruscant, during the early years of the New Order. His primary duties were to ensure that lesser crimelords - among them, Beuga Odell and Quetemorr the Sub-Elder - didn't overstep their bounds and infringe upon Black Sun's activities and profits. After serving Prince Xizor, Coramma remained loyal to Black Sun and tried to support Savan's efforts to maintain control of the organization. However, her failure to maintain control led Coramma to flee Coruscant and go into hiding. For three years he waited, until the New Republic retook Coruscant from the Imperial forces that were struggling to hold it. Coramma then set out to round up other former Black Sun operatives, in an effort to restore the organization to its former glory. (CCW)

Mal Ethon City

this city, located on the planet Kvevron, was the site of the planet's major spaceport. (RESB)

Mala

this was a common name given to Twi'lek females, and referred to the mythical figure Mala, who was the mother of Nola. (GCG)

Mala

according to Twi'lek mythology, Mala was the mother of Nola. (GCG)

Mala Blen

this Twi'lek female and her sister, Aola, ruled the trading houses of Thaere Privo many years before the Battle of Naboo. Mala was the older sister, and was viewed as the more dominant of the pair. When Riboga the Hutt established a presence on Thaere Privo, it was Mala Blen who was publicly disdainful of the Hutts, but later became one of Riboga's chief contacts on Thaere Privo. Unknown to the sisters, Riboga played them both against each other, changing his allegiance from one to the other just to watch the balance of power shift in the Thaere System. This angered the Thareian Military as well as Aola, for both parties hated to see the Hutts gain a stronger hold on the Thaere System. Both Mala and Aola were killed shortly after Riboga fled the Cularin System, and their deaths were characterized as "untimely" by the local population. (LFCW)

this near-human woman was a little-known bounty hunter with exception marksmanship. In her youth, she hated droids, and often used them as target practice with her partner, Nikk Zavod. Zavod doublecrossed her, claiming that he knew the location of Chewbacca, while all he really wanted to do was steal her ship. He asked her to check out an infestation of Corellian limpets in the thrusters, then blasted off while she was still inside the exhaust nacelles. Zavok left her for dead, but it was Chewbacca himself who found her dying body. He nursed her back to health, although she was badly disfigured and needed cybernetic replacements for much of her body. When she tried to communicate with Chewbacca, all the Wookiee could do was mutter the name of his wife, Mallatobuck. Thinking that he was talking to her, she decided that her new name would be Mala Mala. She used a robotic construct to move around, and gave it a brain so that it could act without her constant attention. She named it 4-D. She also used several other droids to assist her in her work as a bounty hunter. She was nearly killed on Centares when Darth Vader learned that Luke Skywalker had destroyed the first Death Star. Vader had all the witnessed to the interrogation which produced the name executed, and Mala barely escaped with the name of Luke Skywalker to sell. She confronted the Alliance pilot who was interrogated, and agreed to shoot him rather than let him fall into Vader's hands. Mala was then chased through the nearby woods until she was cornered on a point of land. She and 4-D were forced to jump in order to escape, and 4-D was crushed in the attempt. She was rescued by another of her droids, B-6, and together they fled to Coruscant. They were shot down by the Imperial perimeter patrols, and their small ship crashed outside Imperial City. B-6 was damaged in the crash. She used the droid as a trap to delay the stormtroopers, but was eventually caught by a patrol of stormtroopers. It was later revealed that Mala was secretly working for Emperor Palpatine, and was tracking the Dark Lord during his hunt for the pilot who won the Battle of Yavin. She returned to Coruscant to provide the pilot's name to Palpatine himself, in return for a new ship and a load of droid parts to rebuild her friends. Palpatine then used the name - Luke Skywalker - to punish Vader even more for the destruction of the Death Star. (VQ, C)

Mal'aa

this stout Twi'lek female owned and operated Mal'aa's Kitchens, located within the Kala'uun Starport on Ryloth. She had been outcast from her original clan, and found refuge within the upper warrens of Kala'uun Starport. She earned enough credits to survive by cooking meals for spacers, then found herself inheriting a large sum from a spacer who remembered her good food. She used the credits to set up Mal'aa's Kitchens, and her hospitality became known throughout Kala'uun. She took to spacers and Twi'leks with equal ease, and never left anyone out of her embrace. (PSPG)

Mal'aa's Kitchens

this restaurant was the only eatery located within the Kala'uun Starport, and was owned by the female Twi'lek Mal'aa. Its exterior had been created to give the impression of a large cantina, although the interior was a collection of small caves and tunnels. (PSPG)

Malab

Malachite Scent

this star cruiser belonged to a wealthy member of the Shistanvanen royalty during the last years of the Old Republic, until it was ambushed by Clabburn the Elder during a trip along the Corellian Trade Spine in the Anoat Sector of the galaxy. Clabburn looted this ship's holds and made off with a veritable fortune, and simply disappeared to enjoy his fortune. (WOA34)

Malacia

this Force skill was mastered by the ancient Jedi Knights, and allowed a Jedi to induce a powerful dizziness and nausea in an opponent. While completely incapacitating, the effects of malacia do not cause lasting physical damage. (SWDB)

Maladori, Cynith

this young woman was a member of House Melantha at the height of the New Order. She was a former lover of Bal Jaset, until she betrayed him in order to promote her own brother in a house succession battle. Bal never forgave her, since he was also in line for the promotion. After Jaset was named Lord, he often went out of his way to make life miserable for Lady Cynith. (LOE) this female Rodian was known as one of the most violent slavers of the early years of the New Republic. She wore expensive rings on her long fingers, and was known to be able to deliver particularly unusual or "specialty" slaves. Shortly before the Battle of Yavin, Malak was able to capture several Abyssin, including the mercenary Myo. Myo, however, escaped during a stopover at Kinun Depot. (GG11, AIR)

Malak

Malak

this ancient Jedi Knight was one of the many which participated in the defense of the Old Republic during the Great Sith War, some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. His ability to wield a lightsaber, as well as his skills in battle, made him a formidable warrior. His arrogance, however, was difficult to control, and Malak continually sought to gain fame and notoriety. When Malak and his fellow Jedi Knight, Revan, put down a Mandalorian uprising in the Outer Rim during the war, they attained the glory they were seeking. However, they were brought into contact with the Dark Side of the Force. Revan began to study the Sith lore, and eventually named himself Darth Revan, a Dark Lord of the Sith, with Malak as his apprentice. The two set out to wage their own battles against the Jedi Knights and the Old Republic, until Revan was captured in battle. Malak took up his master's mission and set out to continue the war against the Jedi, adopting the title of Darth Malak when he assumed control of the Sith forces. He set out to locate an ancient artifact known as the Star Forge, and once again crossed paths with his former master. Revan had been forcibly returned to the Light Side of the Force, and had been paired with Bastila Shan to locate Malak and the Star Forge. Malak managed to capture them, along with Carth Onasi, and held them prisoner aboard the Leviathan. During an escape attempt, Malak managed to recapture Bastila Shan, but the others escaped. Malak took out his anger by torturing the young Jedi, bending her mind to be more receptive to the Dark Side of the Force. Ultimately, he succeeded, and Bastila Shan became something of an apprentice to him. (SWI67, KOTOR, SWDB)

Malakili

this tremendous Corellian human was a professional monster trainer for the Circus Horrificus. His ability to handle and train unusual alien creatures was renowned throughout the galaxy. He had spent seven seasons as the head trainer, which was a record. When Bib Fortuna and Bidlo Kwerve came into possession of a rancor for Jabba the Hutt, they purchased Malakili from the Circus Horrificus to tend the beast. His otherwise muscular body, developed from years of hard work training the galaxy's most dangerous beasts, was hidden beneath a huge paunch grown from the good eating he enjoyed at the Circus. In the oppressively hot heat of Tatooine, he dressed only in a loincloth and a black headdress. He became good friends with Jabba's cook, Porcellus. When he learned that Jabba was going to pit the rancor against a krayt dragon, he appealed to the Lady Valarian for assistance. She agreed to help him, just to spite Jabba. Malakili was then forced to train the rancor to participate in Jabba's demolition derbies against vehicles of all sizes. He managed to train the rancor to charge other combatants, and mounted a pair of cannons on the beast's harness to blast the others. Despite his efforts to save the rancor, Luke Skywalker killed the creature before any of his plans could materialize. Malakili was heartbroken, but he quickly came to his senses when he heard Jabba had been killed at the Pit of Carkoon. He and Porcellus fled the castle, and eventually opened the Crystal Moon restaurant in Mos Eisley. (TJP, CCG7, SWD)

Malakin Enterprises

this corporation was part of the Tenloss Syndicate. Based on the planet Lesu, Malakin dealt in loan sharking, industrial espionage, and many other criminal activities. It was rumored to be secretly under the control of the Hutts, and was the primary stockholder of the Natori Association. (GG11, SWJ15)

Malani

according to Ewok legend, this ugly Ewok was tormented by other Ewoks until she was transformed into a beautiful princess. (GCG)

Malanose

this world, part of the remote Gree Enclave, was once the primary world of the Gree crafter and researcher castes. During the height of Gree civilization, what is known by the Gree as "the most ancient and forgotten time," Malanose was colonized and covered with cities that produced new and exciting devices and technologies. As their society declined and the devices which it created were worn out, the Gree raided the buildings of Malanose for any piece of technology they could transport to the other Gree worlds. Only the largest and most bulky pieces of technology were left behind, and remain unused in the abandoned cities. The most famous remaining device is the Totth'k Lotos, a technology that is rumored to provide eternal life. In reality, the Totth'k Lotos simply maximizes a body's structural integrity, allowing a frail, elderly Gree to become a healthy, elderly Gree. The average day on Malanose consumes 18 standard hours, while its year lasts 320 local days. (SWJ8)

Malanx, Cev

this smuggler was also a contact of the New Republic. Malanx grew up in the spacing business with his father, who took his young son everywhere in the Mid Rim Territories. When his father had decided Cev was old enough to be on his own, he sent the young man off in a battered Ghtroc freighter to the Outer Rim. Cev never returned, having been stranded at Gelgelar Free Port. There he met Regec Sloom, and the two decided to team up and ply the spacelanes together. Cev was unaware of Sloom's trouble with the Empire, and spent much of their time avoiding Imperial entanglements. However, they worked in Corva Sector just long enough to save a few credits and get back to the Mid Rim. After helping New Republic agents discover the whereabouts of Mers Ulcane, Malanx and Sloom fled for the Core Worlds. (SWJ8)

Malare

this woman provided Bastila Shan with information on the whereabouts of her mother, Helena, during the months following the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Malarian

this alien race had allied themselves with the Ansionians during the last decades of the Old Republic. (APS)

Malarian Alliance

this treaty was signed by representatives from the Ansionian and Malarian peoples, linking their planets in commerce and defense during the last decades of the Old Republic. Count Dooku and Shu Mai hoped the Malarians would follow the Ansionians in seceding from the Republic, shortly before the Clone Wars, leading to a large-scale secession movement of which they were the leaders. (APS)

Mal'ary'ush

Noghri term for "The Daughter of Darth Vader", used in reference to Leia Organa Solo. (HTTE)

Malastare

this Outer Rim world was the homeworld of the Dug species, and was first settled by the Old Republic some 8,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. An outpost was the only outside presence on the planet for several thousand years, until the Gran began to settle on the planet. By the last decades of the Old Republic, the Gran population vastly outnumbered that of the native Dugs, who found themselves in the minority on their own planet. The native Dug population found itself subordinated by the garrulous Gran, and grew to despise them. This led to a great deal of inter-species fighting and a power struggle which the Gran eventually won. An arboreal world with stronger than normal gravity, Malastare was the site a series of famous podraces. Note that the galaxy map insider Star Wars Insider, issue 65, places Malastare in the Expansion Region. (SW1, IG1, SWI65, NEGC)

Malastare Special Services

this was the secret service police force that was established to protect the leaders and Senators from the planet Malastare, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (BH)

Malastarian Art Union

this union was formed on the planet Malastare during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo, to address the development and promotion of young artists in cities like Pixelito. The Union focused on bringing the arts to the underprivileged youth of Malastare, and often worked with law enforcement agencies in an attempt to ensure the safety and purity of Malastare's children. (BH)

Malaxan Firepower Incorporated

this weapons manufacturer produced several forms of hand-held projectile weapons during the Galactic Civil War. (FOP)

Malcom

this man was the Imperial Moff of Brema Sector, during the height of the New Order. During the time when Pinacism swept through the sector, Malcom was basically helpless to stop it. (SWJ12)

Maldeen, Bim

this fearless swoop gang leader controlled the streets of Gralleenya, on Questal, as the leader of the Nebula Masters. His gang once tried to pick a fight with the Wookiee Snufftalon in Shilley's, which attracted the attention of a group of Alliance operatives. They had been searching for agent Tiree, and discovered that it was Bim Maldeen who carried Tiree's locator pendant. He was eventually caught by the agents, but he could provide no information on Tiree's exact whereabouts. (GCQ)

Maldor Slave Ring

this minor slaving operation ran its business near Ryloth, in an effort to have easy access to Twi'lek slaves. (GG10)

Maldorf, Gorm

this thick-headed bully was one of many youths who lived on the planet Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. He was often seen in the company of sidekick, Chester, a dim-witted Rodian who played the perfect patsy to Gorm's machinations. He traveled from settlement to settlement, swindling credits from the teenagers before being run out of town. Among his many tricks was challenging another youth to a swoop race inside a metal cage. Before the race, Gorm would string a thin wire across the cage, which would inevitably trip up another racer. In this way, Gorm always won his races, at least until his ruse was discovered. According to local legend, Gorm once challenged Luke Skywalker to a race, but was undone by his own plans. During the set-up of the cage, Gorm was inadvertently strangled by Chester. Chester had been helping him string the wire, and yanked hard before Gorm could let go. The wire wrapped around Gorm's neck, and dragged him into the cage supports. Although probably dead when he hit the bars, Gorm's skull was crushed by the blow, and he died instantly. (T20)

Maldra IV

this planet, the primary world in the Maldra System of Shandola Sector, was believed by the Empire to be the site of a pirate base, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. According to Imperial sources, when the Motivator was dispatched to investigate the pirates, the crew discovered that the Alliance had established a training outpost and munitions base on the planet. The Alliance forces fought back, but were eventually wiped out by the Imperials. The Empire believed that the Maldra IV munitions base was supplying all of Shandola Sector with weapons, which were being used to hijack convoys of supplies. The Alliance countered this pro-Imperial propaganda by revealing that Maldra IV was a refugee base, and that the Empire had wantonly murdered several thousand innocent people in an effort to secure the planet. (SWJ10)

Maldrod

this Imperial Army Colonel was part of the team assembled by Darth Vader to guard the laboratory on Belderone, and to subjugate the planet Kulthis, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Colonel Maldrod was continually amazed at Vader's use of the Force, whereas his contemporary, General Andrid, openly scoffed at Vader's devotion to it. (LTA1, MCA3)

Maldrood Sector

an area of the galaxy which was disputed after the Battle of Endor. (HR)

Male'-Dee

this stern-looking man was a Senator to the Old Republic during the height of the Clone Wars, representing his homeworld of Uytter. A native of the Vissidic territory, Senator Male'-Dee wore his red hair in a style that signified a plea for peace, with just a strip of hair running from his forehead over the top of his skull to the nape of his neck. Male'-Dee assumed the role of Senator after the assassination of Lexi Dio, a Senator who was considered a much more controversial representative. Male'-Dee was portrayed by Kee Chan in Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (OWS, VD3, SWDB)

Malessa

this was the name of Admiral Greelanx's mistress. (THG)

Malevalence

this was one of the Nebulon-B frigates which were used by the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Malgrin Palace

this was the primary residence of the nobles of House Melantha, located on the planet Procopia. (LOE)

Mali Errat

this ancient Galacian was known to be a scientist and researcher during his time. When Obi-Wan Kenobi and Qui-Gon Jinn were dispatched to Gala to mediate the democratic election of Queen Veda's successor, Obi-Wan enlisted Errat's help in determining if the Queen was being poisoned. (MOC)

Malia

this fierce predator hunted in packs on its homeworld of Ragoon-6. It was said that, if you could hear the cry of a malia, then you were already dead. The malia had blue-grey fur which helped them blend into the rocky mountainsides of their home planet. They were incredibly fast creatures, and were able to swiftly bring down unsuspecting prey. The mouth of the malia was filled with three rows of incredibly sharp teeth, giving the malia the ability to grasp its prey and rend huge chunks of flesh from its body. (TTB, JQ2)

this small, uninhabited world was located near Imperial-controlled territory, shortly after the Battle of Endor. It was here that Admiral Mir Tork and his partner, Doctor Leonis Murthe', fled after the Azgoghk was shot down by the New Republic. After Boba Fett executed Tork and Murthe', the bounty hunter left the planet to the variety of aliens who had been held by the Imperials. (AOD)

Malice

an Imperial-I class Star Destroyer which intercepted and attacked the disabled Alliance shuttle Maria. (XW)

Malicious

this was one of the many Victory-class Star Destroyers which were still active, as part of the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Maligator

a huge serpent, measuring upwards of 2.5 meters in length, the maligator resembled a blue-scaled alligator with a flattened head. Their mouths are filled with sharp teeth. Their tails are spiked, and are often used as weapons. Maligators were native to the swamps of the planet Trinta. (DOE)

Malignant

this was one of the multitude of Imperial-class Star Destroyers which made up the Imperial Navy fleet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Malik

this Imperial agent posed as a crewman aboard the Star of Empire in order to get the Systems Infiltration Manager installed for its first test. Malik was then assigned to give Zak Arranda a tour of the ship's computer facilities. Malik was a gruff man, and didn't like the idea of being a nursemaid. He had been assigned to the crew by someone above Captain Hajj, who despised his presence and would have thrown Malik in the brig at the first opportunity. Malik, while being an excellent programmer, proved to be a soldier with a conscience, and told the SIM program that he wouldn't enter the codes to free its programming. So, the SIM program tortured him in hopes of getting the codes. When Zak unwittingly typed in the code, Malik tried to stop him but was stunned by Dash Rendar. Malik was brought off the Star of Empire with Zak, Tash, and Hoole, and taken to an Alliance hospital for treatment. (GOF10)

Malik Carr

this Yuuzhan Vong served as the Commander of the fleet which moved Coreward after the Battle of Ithor. After the death of Elan, Malik Carr was placed in command of the fleet which was sent to Hutt Space, to negotiate an alliance with Barga the Hutt. He was operating under the direct orders of Nas Choka, who had promoted Malik Carr to a position of command. Malik Carr detested the Hutts and their homeworld of Nal Hutta. Malik Carr hoped to be escalated to a higher position of power when he accepted the mission to capture and hold the shipyards at the planet Fondor. When the blast from Centerpoint Station decimated his forces, Malik Carr found himself demoted from command and placed in charge of the prison camps on the planet Selvaris. He briefly considered suicide when the Jenet prisoner Thorsh managed to escape from the planet with vital - although unidentified - information, since it was another failure added to his career. Unknown to Carr, Thorsh carried information on Selvaris' location, which gave the Galactic Alliance all the information it needed to launch a rescue mission. The mission reached Selvaris just as a prisoner transfer was taking place to the Sacred Pyre, and Malik Carr found himself a captive instead of the captor. He was allowed to live by Judder Page, who realized that Carr would probably be executed upon reaching Coruscant without the prisoners. However, thanks to the actions of Warmaster Nas Choka, Malik Carr was not executed on Coruscant. Instead, he was reinstated to the position of Supreme Commander for his efforts at Selvaris and dispatched to oversee the installation of the yammosk on Caluula. There, he was able to recapture Page, along with Han and Leia Organa Solo. However, something on Caluula quickly took its toll on Malik Carr and the rest of the Yuuzhan Vong. Within a few days, the aliens' bio-technology had died. Shortly afterward, the Yuuzhan Vong themselves started to die. Malik Carr made one last trek to kill his captives, but died before he could do so. It was later revealed that the Bothan Intelligence agent Wraw had been ordered to test a new strain of the Alpha Red virus at Caluula. (HT, JE, UF)

Malik Technologies

this small corporation produced a variety of environmental clothing and protective suits. (GSE)

Malis

this bounty hunter once agreed to be interviewed by Regnor Vanth for the Sektor 242 NewsLine. Malis was an Imperial-licensed hunter, and had a twisted sense of justice. He believed that he hunted members of the Alliance because they were criminals, claiming that Luke Skywalker was a vicious murderer for destroying the Death Star, along with the multitude of personnel aboard. Malis believed that Alderaan should have been destroyed, since it was the homeworld of rebellion against the order of the Empire. Malis also believed that he himself was simply a hunter, not a murderer, despite his record of bringing back bounties dead more often than not. Much of his belief system stemmed from the fact that he was the only survivor of an Alliance raid on Keskin which wiped out his entire platoon. (GG10)

Malium

this trace element is found only on the planet Cerea. It exists in the atmosphere in just a few parts per trillion, but this concentration is just right for the growth of tecave. The export of malium from Cerea is prohibited, but an underworld business in its collection sprung up when offworlders discovered the euphoric effects of guilea, which is made from tecave. (PTR)

Malk

this was one of the more common Kel Dor surnames. It referred to a smith who worked with common metals. (GCG) this Imperial officer served as a Colonel in the armed forces, serving Admiral Giel during the years following the Battle of Yavin. In this capacity, Malka was able to escape with Giel from their damaged starship, only to be stranded on the planet Beheboth. There, Malka maintained a daily journal of their experiences, hoping that Giel might one day return to power. If he did, Malka might be able to parlay his journals into a series of best-selling holonovels, thereby earning himself a huge fortune in book and movie deals. In these journals, Malka documented virtually every aspect of Giel's plans, including the creation of specialized globes that could contain a small collection of Tirrith. These globes were later used as weapons, releasing specially-modified Tirrith to destroy certain outposts. Giel planned to use these Tirrith to destroy the Alliance, in an effort to regain his position of power. When Darial Anglethorn discovered their plans, they tried to escape. Darial got off a shot at Giel, who shoved Malka in front of the blast. Malka later died of his injuries, as Giel took their ship and fled. However, parts of Malka's journals were eventually recovered by Luke Skywalker, who took them back to the leaders of the Alliance as a warning of Giel's actions. (MC61, PH)

Malka

Malka'an Eternal

this pleasure ship experienced a mid-flight emergency and was abandoned when it was caught in a hail of meteorites. The ship crashed on the rainy world of Edonaaris, and one of the only survivors was a service droid, SCr-114. (SWJ5)

Malkanthi

this weapons manufacturer was known for its production of unique and unusual weapons, like the Mark VII power crossbow. (SWJ2)

Malketh

this Kriek was the kulai advisor to Kavakoderakanbnuarria. He was naturally sensitive to the Force, and he believed that the Kherkhaman tribe was the living voice of the goddess Br'lai. He dreamed of a horrible destruction for many months before the Happy Blasters tried to take control of their planet. (SWJ13)

Malkii

the planet which is the base for the Malkite Poisoners. (CSA)

Malkite Poisoner

an individual who has been specially-trained in the use and administration of poison, they are a secretive group who work below the eyes of the government. Once they graduated from the program, they are given a special kit to carry the tools of their trade. (HSR)

Malkite Poisoner's Kit

a small, easily hidden case which contains the poisons and tools used by Malkite Poisoners. The poisons are very effective, and are often missed by food and air testers. Also contained in the kit are certain antidotes administered to food tasters, to counteract the poisons that are meant for their employers. (HSR)

Malkite Ring

this was another name used to describe the Malkite Poisoners. (GUN)

Malkloc

this creature was native to the planet Dathomir. The average malkloc resembled a huge tauntaun in appearance, with a longer neck and a heavier body. These creatures were herbivorous by nature, despite their fearsome appearance. (ROD)

Malkloc

this species of herd beast was native to the planet Dathomir, and was believed to have descended from bio-engineered stock. (QQRG)

Malkoi

this Rodian gangster tried to kidnap Brinaloy N'Varri, in an effort to blackmail A'jindre Skrigatov out of office on Abregado-Rae. Malkoi sought to place a puppet in the position of Provincial Governor, thereby avoiding the limelight while obtaining control for himself. (ND)

Mall, Deshic

this man helped Brahle Logris escape from the prison facility on Tamazall. Logris later learned that the escape attempt had been engineered by Kumac the Hutt, who only wanted Logris to get free. Kumac's agent shot Mall as soon as they were away from Tamazall city. (GG11)

Malla

this is a species of plant often used in cooking. The leaves and flower petals are commonly used as flavorings and garnishes. (RF)

Malla

this Shyriiwook word was used as the prefix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "green", "beautiful", or "valued", and could be combined with one or more suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG) this man was a noted weapons expert and marksman during the early years of the New Republic. He was a native of the planet Hollast VII. (GUN)

Mallaggi

Mallakin

this small, avian creature lived in the forests of Kashyyyk, hiding in the leaves and eating small insects. (TT, AFA)

Mallat, Zeven

this Imperial officer served with the Security Bureau during the last years of the New Order. He did extensive research on the Duskhan League, during the time when the Empire established the Black Fleet shipyards in the Koornacht Cluster. (CTD)

Mallatobuck

Chewbacca's Wookiee wife, her name is often shortened to just Malla. As a young Wookiee, she was a caregiver to many of the elderly Wookiees of Chewbacca's community, including Attichitcuk. This time spent with Chewie's extended family - and primarily his father - brought the two together. When the Empire raided Kashyyyk for slaves and took Chewbacca, Malla waited for nearly fifty years until Chewie was freed by Han Solo. She raised their son Lumpawarump with the help of Attichitcuk, allowing Chewbacca to travel the galaxy in order to fulfill his life debt to Han Solo. (WSB, TT, THG)

Malledillo

this small, armored creature was once native to the Yuuzhan Vong homeworld of Yuuzhan'tar. It was bred for many generations to have an incredibly hard shell, and was bio-engineered to serve as a form of hammer or mallet. (T)

Mallif Cove

this island, located on the planet Recopia, was given over to a group of religious monks who wanted to ponder the mysteries of the galaxy in relative isolation. The monks were descended from the Seyugi Dervishes, but the modern monks of the New Republic had forgotten all about who their ancestors were. Because of this, the green-robed monks - as well as the rest of Recopia's population - were unaware that the basement levels of their fortress contained hibernation chambers, in which a group of Seyugi Dervishes slept, waiting to be reanimated. this Rodian spice hauler once employed Han Solo to transport spice shipments. (CSWEA)

Malo VI

Tegist Byrg was once run off this planet, after his criminal actions were discovered by local officials. (POC)

Malo, Lanah

this Corellian woman was one of the leaders of the protest group Bria Tharen joined after she left Han Solo on Coruscant. Lanah helped Bria during her period of withdrawal from the Exultations, and worked hard to bring down the Hutts and t'lанда Til that were running the spice and slave colonies on Ylesia. She referred to their leader as the Commander, suggesting that Garm Bel Iblis was in charge of their group. (THG)

Malorm Family

a mafia-like group of five family members, upon whom Gallandro claimed a head bounty, all at the same time. They were a group of psychopathic killers who once hijacked the luxury liner Galaxy Wanderer as it passed through the Corporate Sector. They dropped a number of the ship's passengers into deep space without any protection, stolen everything of value from the ship's coffers, and escaped to the planet Matra VI, where they were eventually apprehended. Malorm, Star

one of the two female members of the Malorm Family. (CSA)

this family was once a powerful entity on the planet Vjun, working other royal families to govern the planet. The patriarchal family, whose livery was colored by cream and crimson, was ruled by a Viscount for many generations, until sometime just before the Clone Wars. It was believed that the original Viscount Malreaux was a pirate who patrolled the Bay of Tears. He grew to power, according to family legend, by extorting the locals with occasionally-broken promises to stop raiding passing ships. When a planet-wide plague caused much of the planet's population to go mad and die some eight years before the Battle of Geonosis, the seventeenth Viscount succumbed to the plague and went mad. He believed he was being poisoned, instead of having contracted the plague, and killed off his entire household staff to prevent further poisoning. His mental state continued to deteriorate, and he took to slinking through the halls of the Chateau Malreaux, only emerging at night. The last time anyone saw him alive was in the kitchen, when a security camera captured an emaciated Viscount stealing a drink of water. His body was found several days later, after the smell became unbearable. He was survived by his wife, Whirry, and a son named Whie, who was taken to Coruscant for training as a Jedi Knight. When Whie returned to Vjun with Jedi Master Yoda, Fidelis revealed that Whie's father had done some unique and intense experimentation with midi-chlorian bodies. It was believed that the Viscount was using his genetic manipulation techniques to instill his family with heightened Force sensitivities. He was part of a consortium of elitist nobles who wanted to be more powerful than their peers, not to mention the offworlders who visited their planet. It wasn't until a decade later that their experiments were the cause of the planet-wide madness that decimated the population of Vjun. (YDR)

Malreaux Rose

this was one of the few flowering planets that grew on the planet Vjun. It was cultivated by the Malreaux family, because its colors duplicated the livery of the Malreauxs. The Malreaux rose had white petals that were tipped with crimson. (YDR)

Malreaux, Whie

this young man was the heir to the Malreaux family holdings on the planet Vjun, during the last decades of the Old Republic. He was discovered to have a strong connection to the Force, and was taken from his mother when he was a young infant. His father had just gone mad, and was killing the household staff because he believed they were poisoning him. Whirry was deathly afraid for Whie's life as the Viscount raged through the house. She pleaded with the Jedi to take her son, believing that Whie would be going to a better place than Vjun, but his absence only drove her insane. Whie, meanwhile, grew stronger in the Force, and eventually chose by Jedi Master Maks Leem as a Padawan. Whie was one of the small number of students who were exceptionally gifted in the Force, but took special care not to abuse his powers. What troubled Whie the most were the semi-prescient dreams he had at night, many of which soon came to pass as actual events. Some of these dreams were visions of his homeworld of Vjun, which he barely recognized. These dreams left him mentally and physically drained, and were a cause of concern for Master Leem as well, especially when he dreamed of events surrounding his own death. While studying at the Temple, Whie participated in the Apprentice Tournament, and found himself fighting against Tallisibeth Enwandung-Esterhazy - otherwise known as Scout - in the final round. She surprised him by fighting through the pain of an intense thumb-hold to coil her arm and use her leverage to throw him to the ground. With the wind knocked out of him, Whie was forced to yield, much to the surprise of those attending. The tournament made them friends, but their abilities were tested shortly afterward, when both were assigned - along with their Masters - to accompany Yoda to Vjun. It was the knowledge of this mission that put his latest dreams into perspective, as Whie realized that he was dreaming about Scout, covered in blood, at the hands of Asajj Ventress. While en route to Vjun, Whie was intercepted by the droid Fidelis, who revealed himself as a part of the Malreaux house. It was Fidelis who revealed much about Whie's past and his family, including the fact that Whie once had a brother. Whie was badly shaken when Maks Leem was killed by Ventress on Phindar, and resented the fact that Yoda tried to take his mind off her death by asking him to repair a ship and eat something. When they finally reached Vjun, Whie found it difficult to ignore the call of the Force, but he was blind to the fact that it was the Dark Side that was calling to him. Scout struggled to keep him focused, but her efforts were undermined when Fidelis - acting on orders from Whirry Malreaux - arranged for the Padawans to be trapped in the Crying Room with Ventress. The Padawans were spared when Solis distracted Ventress, and were later rescued by Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker, who had tracked Yoda to Vjun. Upon returning to Coruscant, Whie chose to sever his ties to Vjun and the Malreaux family, but was unsure about his future with the Jedi. He continued to train at the Jedi Temple, but was among the hundreds of students who were murdered by Anakin Skywalker, who had become the apprentice of Darth Sidious and was dispatched to cleanse the Jedi Temple of all living Jedi. Whie was portrayed by Coinneach Alexander in Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (YDR, OWS, E3N)

Malreaux, Whirry

this woman was the wife of the seventeenth (and final) Viscount Malreaux, and was the mother of Whie. Living on Vjun was hard on Whirry, and the fear of death during Vjun's plague of madness only added grief and heartache to her problems. Whirry herself was infected with the plague, and began to slowly lose her mind. Whie was discovered by a Jedi Master who felt his connection to the Force, just before his father went insane and began killing off the kitchen staff, whom he believed had poisoned him. Whirry feared for Whie's life and begged for him be taken to Coruscant, hoping that he would be able to grow up in a better place than Vjun. However, her already disconsolate mental state was badly shaken by Whie's absence, and Whirry went slowly insane. Her one sane action was to order the family droid, Fidelis, to follow Whie to Coruscant and keep an eye out for his safety. Years later, when Chateau Malreaux was usurped by Count Dooku during the height of the Clone Wars, Whirry was powerless to stop him. Dooku allowed her to live in the Chateau, serving as his maid while continually reminding her of her losses. Her only companion during this time was a Vjun fox named Miss Vix, a creature that vexed Dooku immensely. Dooku found himself entertained by Whirry's strange "talent" for telling a being's future by looking at the remains of an object they had broken by accident. The entertainment value dropped sharply when, just before Jedi Master Yoda arrived on Vjun, Dooku dropped a glass of wine to the floor. While cleaning up the broken glass, Whirry read the shards and told Dooku that he was shortly going to be in deep trouble. Later, when Dooku realized that Whie was on Vjun with Master Yoda, he demanded that Whirry order her personal droid Fidelis to arrange for Whie to meet with Asajj Ventress. Dooku held Miss Vix as his "hostage" in order to compel Whirry to obey, and then was forced to take Whirry hostage when Yoda appeared. In order to exact an escape, Dooku used the Force to fling Whirry out of a window, forcing Yoda to choose between pursuing Dooku and saving Whirry. Yoda chose to let Dooku escape, using the Force to catch Whirry before she could fall to her death. When she was finally reunited with Whie, Whirry found that she didn't recognize her son anymore, and her maddened mind believed that Whie was dead, rather than the young man she was seeing. (YDR)

Malrev

this planet, the fourth in the Malrev System, was the site where the Starfaring was lost after a bug in its navigational software transposed the coordinates it was using. A temperate world covered with dense forest, it was the homeworld of the Irrukiine race. It was also the location of a temple which was built on a nexus of Dark Side energy, a temple which was to be used as an outpost by Emperor Palpatine before he was killed at Endor. The temple later served as the base of power for the mad Devaronian Cartariun, who had been serving as a technician at the site. Cartariun used the Sith magics to control the native Irrukiine and make them fight using the powers of the Dark Side. (XWRR)

Malrev Incident

Rogue Squadron participated in this battle, in which the Dark Side Adept Cartariun tried to take control of the planet Malrev. The magician was foiled by Dllr Nep and Herian I'ngre. (HXW)

Malshae, Lorcu

this respected smuggler planned to sell the coordinates of Port Haven to Boba Fett, despite the objections of his co-pilot, Par'tha. In the end, though, Par'tha told Hallomar about Lorcu's plans, and a bomb was placed aboard his freighter, the Moonglow. Just before Lorcu could meet with Fett, the bomb exploded, destroying the Moonglow and killing Lorcu with it. (PSPG)

Malt Ferment

this mildly-alcoholic beverage was popular among the younger generation of moisture farmers on the planet Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. (SWR)

Malta

this Hutt was one of Jabba's most loathsome associates, during the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. Malta was so immensely obese that his eyes could barely open because of the fat surrounding them. When Malta agreed to a bet with Jabba and Embra to find the Yavin Vassilika, Malta hired Dengar, Bossk, and IG-88 to hunt down Illyan Webble and the crystal. Malta's attempt ended in failure, although he tried every cheat in the book to try and win. He even sent Jozzel Moffett out to personally recover the artifact, but Jozzel ended up with a fake. Years later, Malta was believed to have fled Hutt Space for Tatooine, when the Yuuzhan Vong took control of that area of the galaxy. (UYV, WOTC)

Malta's Falcon

this was the name of Malta the Hutt's personal transport ship. (WOTC)

Maltaz

an Imperial General who was at one time in command of the Hell's Hammer unit on Turak IV. There, he allowed his squadron to be cut off from its supply lines by the Alliance soldiers hidden in the Hitak mountains. Then, further compounding his bad decision, he ordered his squadron to stand and fight. The Alliance soldiers quickly reduced the Hammers to three tanks, but the Hammers' never-say-die attitude kept them in the battle long enough for TIE Fighter reinforcements to arrive and bombard the Alliance's landing field. (ISB)

Maltha Obex

this is the Tobek name given to the planet Brath Qella. The Tobek discovered the planet some years after the Old Republic's Third General Survey team found it. The Survey team's follow-up expedition found the planet glaciated, and it was deemed that Brath Qella wasn't worth further effort. The planet seemed to disappear from Republic records, and was forgotten during the reign of Emperor Palpatine. The Tobek took control of the planet, and renamed it Maltha Obex, the name that appeared in the New Republic's database when Kroddok Stopa was dispatched to find Brath Qella. The intense hunt for information about the Qella led to the discovery that the planet originally had two moons. The orbit of one moon decayed, and it collided with the other. The resulting destruction caused both moons to crash into Brath Qella, plunging the world into an ice age. The natives of the planet - known as Qella - fled the world until such time as it recovered from the disaster, when they could return and repopulate it. (SOL, TT)

Malthor

this planet maintained a bustling trading industry, which supported the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. (CRO)

Malthorn

this man worked with Alexis Cov-Prim, ostensibly as a publicity agent. However, Malthorn was also an efficient bounty hunter whose skills helped finance some of Alexis's dealings. Malthorn was a skilled killer, and was responsible for the untimely deaths of Alexis's many husbands, earning a portion of the credits she received under the wills of the men. During the quest to obtain the Shard of Alderaan computer program, Malthorn hoped to capture Lex Kempo and Gunder Vren, thereby receiving the bounty on their heads. (LAA)

Maltorran

a stocky human or alien race. (HSL)

Malubi

this malvil-tree, located on the planet Xagobah, had been bound to Xeran's family for thousands of years. (BF5)

Mal'urc

this Bothan was a supporter of the Alliance, and was known to have destroyed an Imperial AT-AT walker using the J8Q Finbat concussion missile. (GUN) native to the planet Solem, this Imperial Governor razed the surface of homeworld shortly after the Battle of Yavin, in an effort to eliminate any possible rebellious activity. The fact that he killed ten civilians for every one rebel was a price he was willing to pay to rid his planet of any pro-Alliance sympathies. Malvander was discovered to have been the brother of Yolan Bren. Both were supposed to rule Solem together, but Yolan Bren broke off the relationship because he feared the Empire. His campaign to take control of Solem cost him a great deal, since the cost of destroying much of the planet's surface cost a huge number of Imperial credits. With the deaths of so many civilians, Malvander suddenly found himself without a population from which to exact taxes to cover his obligations to the Empire. When he was unable to come up with the 50,000 credits he offered to Boba Fett for the capture of Yolan Bren, Fett took some of Malvander's valuable jewelry as payment. Malvander's forces, however, were spread too thin, and were unable to stop a group of Yolan Bren's rebels from storming the palace to rescue their leader. As an insurance policy, they took Malvander with them, hoping to force him to see what he had done to his people. (SWES)

Malvarra, Moris

this Alliance special agent was assigned by Ral'Rai Muvunc to act as an observer aboard the pirate ship Dark Revenge, after the Alliance contracted Dharus to raid Imperial convoys. Malvarra almost immediately requested a transfer, fearing that the pirates were too violent. Muvunc refused to transfer him, despite the fact that every other observer placed on board the Dark Revenge also requested transfer. (PP)

Malvil-tree

this tree-shaped fungus was native to the planet Xagobah. These immense fungus provided a source of food and shelter for the native Xamsters, and a single family was often bound to a given tree for many generations. In return, the Xamster families protected their malvil-trees with their lives. Like many of the plants and fungus found on Xagobah, the malvil-tree was carnivorous, and used a collection of branch-like tentacles to grasp its prey. The spores of the malvil-tree were known for the way in which they reflected certain wavelengths of light, creating an impenetrable cloud when ejected into the air. The Xamsters discovered this and used the spores while hunting, creating a cloud around their bodies to literally "hide" them from their prey. They also discovered that the malvil-trees used their spores as a kind of message carrier, using chemicals to "talk" to one another. Wat Tambor tampered with the malvil-tree's genetic makeup, and was able to produce a derivative strain of malvil-tree that produced spores that could be used to cloak a vessel. (BF5)

Malya

this young woman was Rukil's chief apprentice during the era of the Great Sith War. However, she was killed outside the Undercity area of Taris, and her body was unceremoniously dumped in a remote section of the city. A group of Jedi Knights, on Taris after the destruction of the Endar Spire located and returned her body to Rukil. (KOTOR)

Mama

this alien operated Mama's on the planet Ord Mantell. She was a Columi, with a huge head and miniscule body. (SL)

Mama's

this establishment was the closest thing to a smuggler's guild to be found on the planet Ord Mantell. It was owned by the Columi known simply as "Mama." (SL)

Mambay

this Jawa word translated loosely into Basic as "I hope so." (TG)

Mamendin

this planet was located in the Core Worlds. (JQ8)

Mammon Hoole

twenty years before the Battle of Yavin, Mammon Hoole joined the Empire as a scientist. A Shi'ido, Hoole was teamed with Borborygmus Gog in the search for the ability to control life and death. Emperor Palpatine himself approved the funding for a huge base on the planet Kiva, where they nearly discovered a way to create life from nothing. However, Hoole recognized that their experiments would steal all the life from the planet Kiva, leaving it a barren wasteland and wiping out the native Kivans. Gog, however, didn't care for the results of the experiment, as long as it continued. He failed to relay Hoole's message to Palpatine, and provided Hoole with a false response from the Emperor approving further tests. In the end, Kiva was wiped out, and Hoole was blamed by Gog for the failure of the experiment. Hoole fled Imperial service, hiding wherever he could and using his shape-changing ability to elude capture. Many years later, Hoole decided to expose the Project, known as Starscream, and joined the Empire as a Senior Anthropologist assigned to investigating many planets and adding information about them to the Empire's planetary database. He used the Shi'ido's ability to shape-shift as a way to blend in with planetary races, easing his transition into their culture and opening them up to his questions. He once did a report on Tatooine, detailing the lives of the Jawas, Sand People, and even Jabba the Hutt's retinue. When Hoole realized what the Empire stood for, he fled Imperial service and returned to Tatooine seeking Jabba's help. Through the crimelord's various sources, Hoole managed to get all records of his existence erased from the Imperial databanks, and he was given a new identity. He also created the droid D-V9 to help him in his efforts. Just as he began his search for the whereabouts of Borborygmus Gog and Project Starscream, Hoole learned that the planet Alderaan had been destroyed, and his brother and sister-in-law had been killed. He then became the only living guardian of their children, Tash and Zak Arranda, who had been on a field trip when the Death Star destroyed Alderaan. He had to bring them along on his search, and entrusted much of their care to DV-9. Hoole and the children then tracked down all the leads on Gog and Starscream, eventually managing to destroy it on Kiva, along with Gog himself. This earned them the wrath of Darth Vader and a death warrant in just about every star system they could flee to, although they managed to remain one step ahead of the Empire. (ISU, GOF1, GOF2, GOF6, GOF7)

this was one of the many family names used by the Bothan people. It translated loosely to "farmer". (GCG, WOTC)

Manaana

this ocean-covered planet, the second world in the Pyrshak System, was the homeworld of the Selkath race. It was an aquatic world known as the only source of kolto, more than 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. During this time, the native Selkath tried to remain neutral in an effort to maintain control of kolto production. However, when production mysteriously halted, the Selkath appealed to the Old Republic for help. Since Manaana was not officially a member of the Republic, help was never dispatched to the remote world. Since that time, kolto production had steadily recovered, but the Selkath vowed never to allow outside influences to control their planet or the production of kolto. During the era of the New Order, the planet was subjugated by the Empire and transformed into a resort world, as a way to cover up Emperor Palpatine's true interest in the planet. While the Guide to Beautiful Manaan described the planet's oceans as pristine blue waters, most visitors discovered polluted, greenish water that gave off strange odors. (KOTOR, PH)

Manadept

this was one of the many species of domesticated greysors native to the planet Naboo. (WSW)

Managing Council

this was the name given to those beings who were charged with making policy decisions for the survivors of the Outblund Flight Project. (SQ)

Manak

this plant, native to the cooler grottoes of the planet Tatooine, was favored for its flavorful leaves. Manak leaves were used to wrap gorgs for roasting. (WSW)

Manalin

this hot, poisonous, rocky world is the first planet in the Joralla System. (PG1)

Manarai Mountains

this was the name of a range of snow-covered mountains located south of Imperial City on Coruscant. Luke Skywalker built a private retreat within the Manarai sometime after establishing his praxeum on Yavin 4. Note that most other sources claim that the only visible part of the Manarai Mountains was the tiny hump of rock found in Monument Park. Also note that this range of mountains is sometimes referred to as the Menarai in Before the Storm. (HTTE, TNR, BTS)

Manarai Uplift

this was one of the many buildings, located on the planet Coruscant, that provided a skyway tunnel through its upper reaches to facilitate traffic. However, the skyway known as Hazad's Skytunnel was generally considered one of the most dangerous skyways on the planet. (LEV)

Manarai, The

this was one of the most expensive and exclusive restaurants located in Coruscant's Imperial City. Prince Xizor was a silent partner in the business. (SE)

Manaroo

this female Aruzan was Abano's daughter. An accomplished dancer, Manaroo was known by many Aruzans for her natural talents. She was recognizable by her fair blue skin and dark blue hair. Manaroo was taken off Aruza by the bounty hunter Dengar before Imperial troops could "process" her. After Dengar was accepted as part of the Imperial bounty hunt for Han Solo, Manaroo found work on Cloud City as a dancer. She danced to a band's accompaniment while juggling colored stones. She became lonely, though, and offered to share herself with Dengar via her Attanni. She fled Cloud City with Dengar after the Empire garrisoned it, and travelled to Tatooine. During the trip, she gave Dengar a link to her Attanni, and they shared each other's emotions and thoughts. Before reaching Tatooine, Dengar took her to Aruza to rescue her parents, then went to the desert world. She was captured by a huge, loose-skinned creature at the Mos Eisley cantina and brought to Jabba the Hutt as a dancer. She danced several times, almost all for her life, as Jabba's palace was thrown into chaos. The Alliance rescued Han Solo in a daring plot led by Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa, and Jabba was killed at the Pit of Carkoon. Manaroo escaped and searched for Dengar, finding him in the Valley of Wind and rescuing him. As he recovered, Dengar agreed to marry Manaroo. In an effort to pay off their bills, they tried to raid Jabba's sail barge for lost credits, but found Boba Fett instead. They took the nearly-dead Fett back to Dengar's hideout in the desert, along with the female dancer, Neelah. Once there, Dengar insisted that she take the Punishing One and go into hiding. He was worried that their association with Boba Fett would lead to trouble. Manaroo agreed, and remained with the ship near Tatooine for nearly a month while Fett healed and the bounty hunters struggled against Kuat of Kuat and the assembler Balancesheet. It was during this time that Manaroo, realizing that they needed a huge fortune to clear their debts and retire, placed a bet with Drawmas Sma'Da on the fate of Dengar himself. Sma'Da took the bet, having little faith in Dengar's abilities. In the final struggle over the planet Kuat, Manaroo managed to save them all by rescuing the Hound's Tooth before it could disintegrate. She then contacted Sma'Da and recovered her winnings, a sum more than sufficient to pay off their debts. After Dengar finally agreed to retire, Boba Fett agreed to be the best man at their wedding. (TBH, MA, HM)

Manax

this fruit tree was native to the planet Cato Neimoidia, where it was cultivated by the Neimoidians. Many beings across the galaxy believed that the manax tree was the source of the nutritive fungus developed and sold by the Neimoidians. In reality, the manax tree was simply the growth medium. Leaves and bark from the trees were collected and ground into compost that was spread in vast, underground chambers known as fungus farms. (LEV)

Manazar

this starship officer served as the First Officer of the Penga Rift, under Captain Barjas. He was often referred to by his nickname, Mazz. (TT)

Manchisco, Tessa

a native of the planet Virgillia 7, this woman was a veteran Captain who served briefly with the Alliance. The commander of the cruiser Flurry, Tessa joined the Alliance fleet at Endor shortly after serving in the Virgillian Civil War. Tessa was instrumental in the organization of guerilla warriors into serious military units during the civil war, turning the tide against the sheer power of her Imperial-backed enemies. She later commanded a small fleet of twenty-two ships sent to Sullust by the Virgillian Free Alignment. A student of the Virgillian military, Tessa's tactics were unorthodox, and confused the Imperial captains during the civil war and at Endor. She and her crew were killed near Bakura, when Imperial Governor Nereus ordered his ships to fire on the Alliance's ships, following a battle against the Ssi-ruuk. (TB, TBSB)

Manda

this planet, the primary world in the Manda System, was known for its rundown spaceport, operative early in the Galactic Civil War. (DCAR, SWJ5, SWDB, HNN4)

Mandaba

the Selonian word for "language." (AS)

Mandaeen, Zeb

this man was, at one time, a member of the Republic Correctional Officers' Union, during the years prior to the Battle of Naboo. He was arrested and sent to the Oovo IV prison facility for the theft of a huge sum of credits from the InterGalactic Banking Clan. Despite his arrest, Mandaen found himself the object of a bounty issued by the IBC, who wanted to bring Mandaen in to answer for his crimes against some of their "less reputable but equally important" customers. Mandaen believed himself safe, until Jango Fett infiltrated the prison facility to "rescue" Bendix Fust. During the attempt, Jango managed to claim the bounty on Mandaen's head. (BH)

Mandallian Campaigns

this was a series of battles fought between the Mandalorian Crusaders and the Mandallian Giants, many millennia before the Galactic Civil War. (SWI80)

Mandallian Giant

this was a race of immense, heavily-muscled humanoids which was covered in green scales. The head of the Mandallian was dominated by its large, pointed ears, and its face was protected by a bony plate. Its mouth was filled with serrated teeth, and a pair of needle-sharp fangs hung from its upper jaw. Mandallians were known throughout the galaxy for their military skills, and many individuals were trained from birth in combative arts, making them formidable opponents. It was believed that the Mandallian Giants were the only race to ever fully survive an attack by the Mandalorian Crusaders, and the Mandallian Giants earned the respect of the Mandalorians for their devotion. Later, many Mandallian Giants were allowed to fight alongside the Mandalorians in several wars of conquest. (MC19, SWI80)

Mandallian Narcolethe

this Mandalorian alcohol was famous in the Outer Rim Territories. (GG9, SWI80)

MandalMotors

this Mandalorian starship manufacturer had an outstanding reputation for designing military starships. MandalMotors was believed to have been created many centuries before the Galactic Civil War by Gustav Zenlav, a Mandalorian Merc known for his innovative designs for weapons and armor. During the height of the Clone Wars, MandalMotors was nationalized by the government of Mandalore and forced to produce materiel for the Confederacy of Independent Systems. Years later, MandalMotors was not allowed to do business under the auspices of the New Order until an Imperial "advisor" - known as the Suprema - was placed on the company's board of directors. Following the Battle of Endor, the Suprema was ousted in favor of support for the New Republic. (DESB, EGV, SWI80)

Mandalore

this was the name taken by the commanders of the ancient Mandalorian warriors. The original Mandalore became known as Mandalore the First, and subsequent leaders added descriptive words to differentiate themselves. (TSW, SWI80) an urban legend held that this jungle world was Boba Fett's home planet. According to the legend, Emperor Palpatine ordered the Mandalorian warriors to join his forces during the Clone Wars. Of 212 warriors who went into battle, just three survived: Boba Fett, Fenn Shysa, and Tobbi Dala. In reality, Mandalore seemed to have been simply the first planet conquered by Mandalore the First, who arrived on the planet with his warriors and destroyed the native mythosars. At the wake of the Clone Wars, slavers moved in and established a base of operations within the huge skeleton of a long-dead beast. It was later revealed that Boba Fett's father, Jango Fett, was one of the few Mandalores left in the galaxy, at the time of the Battle of Geonosis. The natives of the planet were again besieged by slavers during the era of the New Order, this time a group of Nagai, and they struggled to rid the planet of the slavemasters. It was during this time that Fenn Shysa and Tobi Dala tried to retake the planet, working with Leia Organa and the Alliance to free Mandalore once and for all. (MC68, JFOS, MC100, SWI80)

Mandalore

Mandalore System

the planetary star system which is home to the Death Watch soldiers and the Mandalorian Shocktroopers. (ESB, ISB)

Mandalore the First

this ancient Mandalorian warrior was the first of his kind to take control of the various sects and unite them under a common leader. He was generally credited with leading the invasion that conquered the planet Mandalore, which was believed to have been named for him. (SWI80)

Mandalore the Indomitable

this was the name of the Mandalorian Neo-Crusader who took control of the ancient brotherhood shortly before the onset of the Great Sith War. Mandalore the Indomitable was defeated by Ulic Qel-Droma during the fighting, and agreed to help Ulic during the Sith War. He helped Ulic realize that Aleema was misleading him, but continued to fight for the Sith. Mandalore sent his forces to Kemplex Nine, while he himself went to Coruscant to rescue Ulic and Exar Kun. After regrouping their forces, the Sith Lords ordered the Mandalorians to descend on Onderon. Mandalore agreed to the mission, and attacked Iziz. However, his forces were overcome Onderon during a pass of the Dxun moon, and fled to the moon for refuge. There, Mandalore the Indomitable was killed by one of the Dxun beasts. (TSW, SWI80)

Mandalore the Resurrector

this was the name adopted by the clone trooper known as Alpha-02, after he escaped from Kamino and traveled to Mandalore. Alpha-02 was obsessed with restoring the Mandalorian Protectors after Jango Fett's memories were unlocked in his mind. (SWI80)

Mandalore the Ultimate

this was the title used by the leader of the Mandalorian Neo-Crusaders during the era of the Old Sith Wars. Mandalore the Ultimate took control of the Mandalorian survivors after the death of Mandalore the Indomitable on Dxun, rallying the survivors of the Great Sith War and forming the Neo-Crusaders in the process. This Mandalore believed that the Great Last Battle was at hand, and accepted beings of any race to join him in the quest for immortality through combat. During the Mandalorian Wars, Mandalore the Ultimate was vanquished by the forces of the Old Republic, and the Mandalorian order was again left battered and leaderless. (SWI80)

Mandalorian

although xenanthropologists disagree on whether or not this alien race was actually native to the planet Mandalore, they were in agreement that the ancient Mandalorians were a race of gray-skinned beings who were almost constantly at war. Analysis of the physiology of the ancient Mandalorians and their language pointed to the possibility that the Mandalorians were actually the descendants of the Taungs of Coruscant. What is known for sure is that the ancient Mandalorians eventually died out, and the name "Mandalorians" became a catch-all for any being - regardless of race - who adhered to the tenets of the Mandalorian shock troopers. (SWI80)

Mandalorian

this was the dialect spoken by the Mandalorian people. Many xenolexicologists have pointed out similarities between the Mandalorian language and the writings of the Dha Werda Verda, suggesting that the ancient Mandalorians descended from the Taungs. It was believed to have died out with the death of Jango Fett at the Battle of Geonosis. (WOTC, SWI80)

Mandalorian Battle Harness

this was the original form of rocket pack used by the ancient Mandalorian Crusaders, although it was much more than simply a propulsion system. The Battle Harness was a colossal weapons platform that transformed a simple Mandalorian Merc or a BL-series droid into a one-being arsenal. The Battle Harness consisted of two huge, articulated arms that were connected by sophisticated motion-control sensors to the arms of the Mandalorian. This allowed the Mandalorian to control the action of the arms with the movements of their own arms. One of these arms ended in a trip hammer that could pound its way through obstacles. The other arm was an immense claw that could crush objects and tear down walls.

Atop the Battle Harness was a blaster cannon, and several other emplacements were located on the Harness for laser weapons. (SWI80)

Mandalorian Civil War

this was the name used to describe the period of history just before the onset of the Clone Wars, after Jaster Mereel assumed control of the Mandalorian Mercs. Mereel dreamed of uniting the disparate clans of Mandalorian loyalists under a single leader, to refocus their energies and restore the Mandalorians to their former glory and power. His rise to power and the creation of the Codex forced other Mandalorian Mercs to break away from Mereel's band, thus setting off the civil war. Vizsla rose to power as Mereel's primary rival, forming the Mandalorian Death Watch. In response, Mereel named himself the leaders of the True Mandalorians, and both sides set out to destroy the other. Ultimately, the Mandalorian Civil Wars very nearly wiped out both sides of the conflict and would have ultimately eradicated the Mandalorians from the galaxy. A handful of Death Watchmen survived, as did the True Mandalorian Jango Fett. (SWI80)

Mandalorian Crusaders

this group was considered by many galactic historians to have been the first true group of Mandalorian shock troopers formed in the galaxy. The origins of the Crusaders have been traced back more than 5,000 years before the Battle of Endor, to a race of gray-skinned, apelike humanoid nomads that traveled through space seeking conflict of any kind. The Crusaders adhered to a loose set of laws known as the Canons of Honor, and were known to use state-of-the-art technology in their conquests. Religious historians discovered that the original Crusaders were a group of warriors dedicated to quasi-religious ideals, but over time, the Crusaders came to worship war and carnage. The Mandalorian Crusaders were known to have exterminated entire races, including the Kuarans, Fenelar, and Tlonians. Their love for war and combat drove them to participate in the Great Sith War, fighting alongside the Sith when an all-out attack was launched on Coruscant. However, the Jedi Knights managed to defeat the Sith, and nearly wiped out the Mandalorian Crusaders. The armor of the Mandalorian Crusaders was relatively primitive, when compared to that of the modern Mandalorian Protectors. This stemmed from the fact that the armor was worn for hand-to-hand combat more than blaster fighting. It was organic in appearance, with the shoulders and knees being studded with short spikes. The armor could be sealed for use in space, and was equipped with a Zim Systems rocket pack. (SWI80)

Mandalorian Crushgaunt

a specialized, armored glove created in the Mandalore System, the Crushgaunt was first developed by the Mandalorian Mercs. Each crushgaunt enhanced the wearer's ability to crush objects, such as hands or other body parts, allowing them to do considerable damage with minimal effort. The use of crushgaunts was outlawed by the Mandalorian government many centuries before the Galactic Civil War, but their use was later revived by the Mandalorian Death Watch. It was also rumored that one of Darth Vader's gloves was a crushgaunt. (RM, SWI80)

Mandalorian Death Watch

this elite group of Mandalorian Mercs split off from the true Mandalorian shock troopers when Vizsla rebelled against the leadership of Jaster Mereel. It was believed that the Death Watch was destroyed at about the same time as the rest of the Mandalorians, during the Mandalorian Civil War, and their order became something of a legend. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, Boba Fett discovered that the Death Watch sect was still operative, having contracted with Black Sun for additional manpower and secrecy. During this time, their base of operations was hidden in the Red Sin Chimaera Nebula, near the Forest Moon of Endor. The armor of the Death Watchmen was distinctly different from that of the True Mandalorians, although the differences were in color. All Death Watchmen wore stark black armor, and their helmets were modified slightly to further distance themselves from their counterparts. The Death Watchmen were also only group of Mandalorians to regularly wear Mandalorian Crushgaunts, which had been outlawed by the Mandalorian government centuries earlier. (EGC, JFOS, SWGAL, SWI80, SWGAL)

Mandalorian Dungeon Ship

the basis for the Lictor-class ship, the Mandalorian dungeon ships were huge prisoner transport vessels which provided the most uncomfortable conditions for almost any species. This meant that the prisoners suffered the maximum discomfort before they were imprisoned on bleak, harsh worlds and left to die.

Each of these ships measured almost a kilometer in length, and the interior sections of the ships were lined with ultradense alloys to prevent escape. Individual chambers could be reconfigured for a variety of activities, depending on the nature of the criminal and the amount of interrogation that needed to be done. (DE1, DESB, SWI80)

Mandalorian Iron

this metal was first forged by the ancient Mandalorians, and the secrets for its creation were a closely guarded secret. It was made up from metal ores and certain minerals, and was virtually indestructible, even to a lightsaber blade. Jedi Master Arca hid Freedon Nadd's Sith artifacts in a storehouse built from Mandalorian Iron in an effort to seal it forever, but Exar Kun used the Dark Side of The Force to penetrate it. (DLS, SWI80)

Mandalorian Manacles

locking devices used to clasp a captive's wrists together, these strong cuffs are made from Mandalorian Iron and are virtually inescapable. They come in many sizes to fit all kinds of races. (TOJ)

Mandalorian Mercs

this was the name used by the survivors of the Mandalorian Wars and the Old Sith Wars to describe their loose brotherhood. After the combined forces of the Old Republic and the Jedi Knights virtually wiped out the Neo-Crusaders, the surviving Mandalorians were forced to go into business as mercenaries to stay alive. Disparate clans of mercenaries were formed under the guidance of the old Mandalorian Canons of Honor, but these new Mercs worshipped the credits in their bank accounts more than anything else. (SWI80)

Mandalorian Protectors

this was the name used by the aberrant ARC Trooper Alpha-02 to describe the band of Mandalorian mercenaries he established on Mandalore during the height of the Clone Wars. Formed from local soldiers and policemen, along with twelve former members of the Mandalorian Death Watch, the Mandalorian Protectors believed that they were working to restore the true Mandalorian order. On Mandalore, the Protectors helped the local government seize control of several prominent corporations, including MandalMotors. These corporations were no longer connected to the Old Republic, and the Protectors provided access to the Confederacy of Independent Systems. Additionally, the Protectors agreed to carry out clandestine missions for the Separatists, working as their secret police force. It was the Protectors who launched intense attacks on Kamino and New Bornalex, destroying the cloning facilities there. However, in the wake of the Republic blitz that ended the Clone Wars, the Mandalorian Protectors were decimated. Of the 212 original members, only three survived the fighting: Tobbi Dala, Fenn Shysa, and a shell-shocked Alpha-02. Years later, the Protectors were revived by Fenn Shysa, who had returned to Mandalore and became the planetary leader. He also became the newest Mandalore, and under his control the Protectors flourished for many years, until Boba Fett himself returned to Mandalore. Fett had come to Mandalore at the request of Taun We, who asked him to hunt Shysa down and destroy him for his part in the attacks on Kamino during the last stages of the Clone Wars. With Shysa's death, Fett assumed control of the Protectors, and the band was instrumental in keeping Mandalore safe during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (SWI80)

Mandalorian Ripper

this disruptor weapon, of Mandalorian manufacture, was produced during the height of the Great Sith War. Its design was similar to a weapon used by Jigger Wraith, which was essentially an energy-propelled slugthrower. (KOTOR)

Mandalorian Shock Troopers

this name was used generically to describe the supercommando warriors who followed the Canons of Honor of the ancient Mandalorians. It was believed that the very first shock troopers were known as the Mandalorian Crusaders, a group formed nearly 5,000 years before the Battle of Yavin from clans of gray-skinned humanoids. Decades before the Battle of Endor, the Mandalorians - known for their distinctive armor and helmets - fractured into two distinct groups. The true Mandalorians were led by Jaster Mereel, while the splinter group named themselves the Death Watch, and were led by Vizsla. Vizsla nearly destroyed the true Mandalorians on Concord Dawn, but could not. Jaster and his forces regrouped and grew strong again, with the help of mercenaries like Jango Fett. However, they were continually led into traps set by Vizsla and the Death Watch, which led Montross to believe that Jaster's leadership was failing. Many of the Mandalorians, however, stood behind Jaster, and later Jango Fett after Jaster was killed by Vizsla on Korda 6. Montross fled the group, which managed to survive for several more years before being led into an ambush on Galidraan. They were hired by the planetary governor to help defeat a group of insurrectionist rebels, unaware that the governor was under the control of Vizsla himself. The governor, acting on Vizsla's orders, had also contacted the Old Republic Senate, requesting the assistance of the Jedi Knights in defeating the Mandalorians. The governor claimed that the Mandalorians had been slaughtering political activists and killing women and children, claims that Vizsla's forces actually committed. The Jedi task force, led by then-Master Dooku, eliminated the Mandalorians in combat. Only Jango Fett survived, but he was turned over to the planetary governor of Galidraan and enslaved. Note that this military band was referred to as the Imperial Shocktroopers in issue number 5 of the Bantha Tracks newsletter. According to the newsletter, the Imperial Shocktroopers were wiped out by the Jedi Knights during the Clone Wars. Also note that Star Wars: Republic - Show of Force indicates that the Republic staging area on New Holstice was attacked by Mandalorian troops some seventeen months after the Battle of Geonosis. (ESB, VD2, JFOS, BTRKS5, RSF, SWI80)

Mandalorian Wars

this was the name used by historians to describe series of battles waged by the Old Republic against the ancient Mandalorians, some thirty-five years after the onset of the Great Sith War. After Mandalore the Ultimate agreed to fight alongside the Sith, the Old Republic decided that they needed to confront them as an enemy. Great effort was expended in defeating the Mandalorians, thereby eliminating the physical threat of the Great Sith War. The Republic could then focus its efforts on assisting the Jedi in the more mystical aspects of the war. (KOTOR, SWI80)

Mandan

this was the name used to describe the human inhabitants of the Mand System. (DCAR, OWS)

Mandarin

one of the former names of the Koqus Starliner Star Morning. (SOL)

Manda-Roon Merchant Route

this hyperspace trade route was established between Manda and Roon by the Baobab Merchant Fleet. It was considered a much more reliable route than the so-called Death Wind Corridor. (WOTC)

Mandator II-class Star Dreadnaught

this follow-on to the original Mandator-class Star Dreadnaught was produced by Kuat Drive Yards during the height of the Clone Wars. These massive, heavily-armed ships were deployed primarily to defend the Kuat System, but also saw action as part of the Old Republic's defense fleets. (X3)

Mandator-class Star Dreadnaught

the Mandator-class dreadnaught was developed and manufactured by Kuat Drive Yards, specifically for the purpose of defending the Kuat Sector from invasion during the last decades of the Old Republic. (X2, X3)

Mandel, Emlyn

Kvarn Mandel's wife. (GG9)

Mandel, Kvarn

this aristocratic man was the chief executive of Fabritech, and was no stranger to power. As self-assured and powerful as he appears, Kvarn is haunted by the disappearance of his daughter, Samire. She suddenly disappeared about eleven years before the Battle of Yavin, and hasn't been seen since. Kvarn believes that she is dead, but has a secret nagging thought that she left her family to join the Alliance. This thought surfaces whenever Kvarn reflects on his success, which has come from selling military equipment to the Empire. His son, Simmin, continues to search for her, but Kvarn does not support his efforts. Kvarn and his family live in a huge mansion on Thorgeld I. (GG9)

Mandel, Simmin

Kvarn Mandel's son, he maintains the belief that his sister, Samire, is still alive. He has scoured the Outer Rim for her, and has even hired the Skine Bounty Hunter College to locate her. He was 18 when she disappeared. (GG9)

Mandellian Corporation

this corporation owned the rights and operations of the BlastBoat 2000 speeder race, held regularly on the moon Echnos. (SWJ4)

Manderon Period

an era of the Old Republic which was centered about 6,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ4)

Mandi

this was the Snivvian word for "tomorrow." (HNN5)

Mandian

this picket frigate was part of the fleet assembled by the Old Republic during the height of the Clone Wars. The Mandian was among the ships dispatched to Praesitlyn some two and a half years after the Battle of Geonosis, as part of the mission to retake the Intergalactic Communications Center from the Separatists. The Mandian and several other picket ships were dispersed on the outer edges of Praesitlyn's system, as part of a network of ships that could warn the main force about Separatist reinforcements. It was the Mandian's crew that first discovered a reinforcement fleet arriving from Sluis Van, and although the crew was ready for a fight, their orders were to "see and flee." (JT)

Manding

this was a slang term used by the children of Esseles to indicate a high level of incredibility, as in, "He's so manding cute!" (SWJ6)

Mandjur

this New Republic warship was part of the Ballarat's support line during the Battle of N'zoth. When the Ballarat was destroyed, the Mandjur filled in the gap. It was struck twice in the aft sections by Yevethan missiles, and was rendered powerless and adrift. Plat Mallar, assigned to the ship as a shuttle pilot, singled-handedly rescued three pilots in the ensuing chaos. (TT)

Mandoviol

this was a type of stringed musical instrument. (TPS)

Mandrake, Lisa

this woman held the rank of Sergeant in the Alliance military, and served as the chief of security at the Alliance's Gelgelar Free Port drop point during the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ14)

Mandroxan Cartel

this Mid Rim criminal organization established a foothold on the planet Bridin Anchorage, shortly after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. It was formed from an alliance of criminal organizations, led by the Manliss Enterprise, the Droixian Traders League and the Anavill Smuggler's Guild. The cartel was nominally led by the Manliss group, under the control of Artur Manliss. They were quite successful, considering that much of their business - illegal spice production and transport - was conducted in broad daylight. The cartel eventually controlled the spice trade in 23 separate systems in Portmoak Sector, shortly after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. (GG11)

Mandroxan Exports

a subsidiary of the Mandroxan criminal cartel, this export company fronted the Mandroxan weapons manufacturing business. (GG11)

Maneeli Tuun

this Polis Massan was one of the many members of the archaeological team that was investigating the ancient civilization of the sundered world of Polis Massa, during the last years of the Old Republic. Maneeli Tuun was trained as a physician, and served the archaeological team as a doctor and surgeon. Thus, when Padme' Amidala was brought to Polis Massa by Obi-Wan Kenobi, Maneeli Tuun was on duty to assist in helping her deliver her twin babies. (VD3)

Manes, Tomathy

this man was the senior duty officer of the New Republic Defense Fleet base on Utharis. A communications specialist, Manes helped Luke Skywalker obtain a current tactical memorandum on the situation in the Koornacht Cluster, during the Black Fleet Crisis. (TT)

Manex

this man was one of the wealthiest members of the Civilized faction of the planet New Apsolon, during the decade leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Manex was the brother of the planetary leader, Roan, and had a number of other political contacts, all of which he used to help amass his fortune. A tall, plump man, Manex used his wealth to indulge himself with the things he liked the most. When he was questioned by Qui-Gon Jinn in regards to the death of Ewane, Manex claimed that he had no interest in politics, only business. Because of this, many people on New Apsolon believed Manex arranged for Ewane's death, in order to put Roan into a position of planetary rule. After the Jedi discovered Balog's secret Absolute base and rescued Tahl, Manex offered his residence and his facilities to them, in an effort to save Tahl's life. Unfortunately, Tahl died shortly after they arrived. Obi-Wan Kenobi doubted the sincerity of Manex's hospitality, despite the signs to the contrary. When the population began to propose his candidacy for planetary leader, Manex first refused, claiming that he was a businessman and not a politician. However, he decided to accept their candidacy, if only to help heal the wounds caused by Balog. He also started spreading a rumor that he held the list of Absolute supporters, a list which had already caused the deaths of Oleg and Pleni. He also revealed to the Jedi that he believed both Eritha and Alani were supporters of the Absolutes, and that Eritha's support of the Worker class was a sham. Alani herself confessed that Eritha had been working to ensure the Jedi were discredited. (TTB, DOH, CTV)

Manforgon

this planet was under Imperial control during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWRPG)

Mangez IV

this shuttle was owned and operated by Lant Mining Corporation, and was used to transport miners to the Lormar 23 refinery station. (FBS)

Mangez System

this planetary system was located in Brak Sector. (FBS)

Mangol

this grizzled, old, treasure hunter died on Nespis VIII shortly after the Battle of Yavin. He supposedly located an ancient tome from the abandoned Jedi library, rumored to be located on the space station. His contemporary treasure hunters believe he was killed by the curse which surrounds the library, but in reality he was a victim of Borborygmus Gog's Essence Stealer. Mangol was later re-animated by Tash Arranda, when she reversed the Essence Stealer's actions. (GOF5)

Mangonel

a Ripoblus cargo hauler operative during the Sepan Civil War. (TIE)

Mangoriza

this was one of many Imperial-developed chemicals used for the interrogation and subduction of prisoners. (SWJ10)

Maniac

this Krish worked for Bolabo Hujaan on Byblos as a starship mechanic. He specialized in the repair and tuning of drive systems, and earned the nickname "Maniac" because of his wild-looking eyes and crazy giggling. He owned the astromech droid known as Patchwork, and their work on starships was legendary among spacers. Much of his legend was based on successful work, but Maniac was also known as the mechanic who eliminated the Yagaran Four. He had been working for the Yagaran Four as a mechanic, and modified their YT-1300 freighter to help increase its power and speed. The improvements resulted in disaster, as the hyperdrive exploded upon activation, killing the Yagaran Four. The resulting explosion spread a cloud of radioactive dust over the fifth moon of Elin Roe. As a hobby, Maniac spent his time tinkering with droids, and has successfully tested many of his modifications on Patchwork. (CRO)

Maniid

this smuggler made regular shipments to Bracha e'Naso in Esau's Ridge, on Tholatin, during the early years of the New Republic. (TT)

Manikon

although not native to Coruscant, this race of beings found a home in the subsurface caverns of the cityscape on the planet. It was believed that the Manikons were part of a race which tore itself apart in a devastating civil war, and that the survivors managed to flee to Coruscant. The Manikons were scavengers, and spent much of their time hunting for food and trinkets in the underworld of Coruscant. Over the generations, Manikons evolved to move about on all-fours, but could stand upright when attacking their targets. Their feet were wide and heavy, and were used to pummel or trample their prey. When cornered, or when confronted with a larger target, Manikons could spit a stinging venom into their prey's eyes, temporarily blinding the prey while the Manikon attacked. (JQ1)

Manion Basca

this male Twi'lek owned the Jax Warehouse, located in the city of Hedrett on the planet Cularin, during the last years of the Old Republic. (EOS)

Manka

a feline creature discovered by the Tetsus tribe of Rodians that fled Rodia following Navik the Red's rise to power. It lived on the jungle world the Rodians adopted. It was the only creature on the planet capable of killing a Rodian, which it often did during its mating season. (TME)

Manka Hunter, The

the name Greedo planned to use for his Incom corsair, which he purchased from Shug Ninx. (TME)

Manks, Gris

this man served in the Freedom's Sons and Daughters militia during the height of the Clone Wars, holding the rank of Colonel and acting as one of Zozridor Slayke's artillery commanders. He was easily distinguished by his size, as Manks was a huge man. During the battle to retake the Intergalactic Communications Center on Praesitlyn from the Separatists, Colonel Manks believed that he was up to the challenge of coordinating the combined forces of Freedom's Sons and Daughters and the clone troopers of the Grand Army of the Republic. However, his military protocol droid was unsure that the proper materiel was available for deployment. The droid suggested more large mortars, which could have been used to pound the enemy's entrenched forces without damaging the center itself. Manks deemed the droid "negatively uncooperative" and banished it from the Fire Direction Center. In addition, the Separatist forces managed to compromise the Republic's communications network, and sent false instructions to the FDC using simulations of Nejaa Halcyon's voice. They were forced to call off their attack, and only a daring rescue mission led by Anakin Skywalker managed to save the center. (JT)

Mankuskett

this man was a Professor at the University of Sanbra, and a contemporary of Professor Tem Eliss. He was also the Chair of the Council on Metagrowth and Polymorphism, and was good friends with an unidentified Clawdite. (GMR10)

Mankvim-814 Interceptor

this small, two-person fighter craft was developed by the Techno Union and manufactured by Feethan Ottraw Scalable Assemblies during the height of the Clone Wars, to address the need for planetary security on those planets that were subjugated by the Separatists. Two weapon mounts were located on the nose of the craft, and could be equipped with law enforcement blasters or medium laser cannons, depending on the environment. The 10.7-meter-long Mankvim-814 required just a single pilot to operate, and was limited to in-system engagements due to its lack of a hyperdrive. The Techno Union produced these bird-shaped ships on Utapau after subjugating the planet's Grand Halls, forcing the natives to mass-produce these craft in short order. (VD3, X3)

this heavy-duty, repulsor-driven elevator was used to move miners to and from their digs. (JH)

Manliss Enterprise

this Mid Rim criminal organization established a foothold on the planet Bridin Anchorage, shortly after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. It became part of an overall alliance known as the Mandroxan cartel, along with the Droxian Traders League and the Anavill Smuggler's Guild. (GG11)

Manliss, Artur

this man was the leader of the Manliss Enterprise, and became the nominal leader of the Mandroxan cartel. He inherited the Enterprise from his father, Dunstain, who was believed to have been assassinated by members of the Droxian Traders League. Others believed that it was Artur, in dealing with Sehvorah and the Droxians, who agreed to pay off Sehvorah's gambling debt in return for the removal of Dunstain. It was Artur Manliss who convinced the League, as well as the Anavill Smuggler's Guild, to begin mining and producing spice on Bridin Anchorage. (GG11)

Manliss, Dunstain

this man was the leader of the Manliss Enterprise during the New Order, until he was assassinated and succeeded by his son, Artur. It was rumored that the Droxian Traders League was behind the assassination, and further evidence points to Artur himself paying off Sehvorah's gambling debts in return for Dunstain's death. (GG11)

Manloreya

this was the Mandalorian word for a member of their society. (KOTOR)

Mannd, Grady

this man was the Defense Minister of the planet Stend VI, during the years following the Battle of Yavin. (SWJ10)

Mannee Swaano

this male Rodian was part of a triumvirate of Rodians who controlled a small corporation at the height of the New Order. Mannee was a sneak and a braggart, and would do anything to make a sale. He spent part of his time trying to outdo Ruku Kooft in the presence of their boss, Teeko Soonca. (SPG)

Manoca

this Dug and his friend, Rednax, often met for lunch at Dex's Diner, during the years surrounding the Battle of Geonosis. (SWI63)

Manod Fea

this Caarite male worked as a computer information officer for the Metatheran Cartel, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Fea was assigned to lead the information management team sent to Cularin, and was one of the few members of the Cartel who remained on Cularin after the natives of the planet fought back against the Cartel's advances. (EOS)

Manollium

a yellow-feathered bird native to the planet Ithor, it was brought to Belsavis by the Brathflen Corporation. Note that Traitor refers to this bird as the manullian. (COJ, T)

Manollium-class Herdship

this Brathflen Corporation starship was designed to meet the specifications of the Ithorians, who wished to travel the galaxy in a starship which mirrored the environment of Ithor as much as possible. The 980-meter-long Manollium-class ship had all the amenities of a cruise ship, but remained loyal to the Ithorian desire to revere life. To this end, the weaponry of the Manollium-class was designed to incapacitate, but not destroy, an attacking ship. Thus, the ship was equipped with ten ion cannons and a pair of tractor beams, but no lasers or blasters. It was crewed by 800 officers and twenty-four gunners, and could accommodate up to 1,050 passengers and 500,000 metric tons of cargo. (SWJ15)

Manos

this Devaronian male served on the Imperial Interim Ruling Council. He was the leader of one of the galaxy's largest labor unions, and he supported Feena D'Asta and her plan to make peace with the New Republic. When she later asked for a vote of no-confidence in the ability of Xandel Carivus to lead the Council, Manos was the only other vote against him. (CE2, HCE)

Manosk, Stevv

Han Solo was given this alias by Jabba and Jiliac, for use in infiltrating the Imperial Destiny and bribing Admiral Greelanx. Manosk was a Lieutenant in the Imperial Navy. (THG)

Manpha

this planet is the homeworld of the Shawda Ubb race. (CCG9)

Manress

this was the homeworld of the Stokhli race. (EGW)

Manshara

this was a common name among the Cathar race. (UANT)

Mansk-class Escort

this starship design was armed with six dual laser turrets and an ion cannon. (TSIA)

Mansom Corporation

this construction corporation's headquarters were located on the planet Corulag. Mansom specialized in the design and construction of Imperial-class spaceports. (SWJ7)

Manta Droid Subcarrier

this was a larger version of the manta droid subfighter, designed to carry troops and supplies into battle. (SWI81)

Manta Droid Subfighter

this droid warship was developed for use on oceanic planets by the Techno Union, to augment the forces of the Confederacy of Independent Systems during the height of the Clone Wars. The manta was originally created by the Xi Char Cathedral Factories, at the request of the Trade Federation. They were developed after the Federation took heavy losses on Naboo and other aquatic worlds. Later, these ships were supplied to the Quarren Isolation League during their struggle to take control of the planet Calamari from the Mon Calamari Knights. Because the Xi Char were ordered to develop the manta droid subfighter in isolation from the rest of the Hoar Chall religious order, the manta suffered from a number of design inadequacies. They were not adaptable to different shapes like droid starfighters, although they resembled those ships in appearance. The forward mounted missile launchers were located on the nose of the craft, which was shaped like a wide diving plane, while the fuselage hung behind the main wing. (SWDB, CWC1)

Manta Ramair

this small corporation produced several models of competition podracers, including the Mark IV Flat Flat-Twin Turbojet, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Note that this name contradicts the name given in the Insider's Guide to Star Wars Episode I, which was Mantis RamAir. (SWDB)

Mantabog

this immense, blanket-shaped creature was once native to the planet Malastare. It used its shape to glide through the air, and dropped onto its prey with surprising swiftness. Once it captured its prey, the mantabog wrapped its body around the prey and squeezed, constricting ever tighter until the prey could no longer draw a breath, and suffocated. By the time of the New Republic, the mantabog was extinct, and could only be seen in an exhibit at the Holographic Zoo of Extinct Animals on Coruscant. (CCW)

Manta-class Starfighter

this starfighter design was developed and produced by the Tapani Starship Cooperative, and built at the Tallaan Shipyards during the height of the New Order. Among the unique design features of the Manta-class was a magnetic docking clamp which eliminated the need for the addition of a mechanical landing claw. This allowed the starfighter to simply ride along on the back of a Tapani-class carrier. The Manta-class measured twelve meters in length, and required a pilot and gunner to operate. These craft were armed with a pair of fire-linked ion cannons, a pair of medium laser cannons, and a pair of heavy laser cannons. Like many Imperial designs, the Manta-class lacked a hyperdrive, therefore requiring a planetary base or a carrier to move it into position. Its flat, organic shape was reminiscent of the creature for which it was named. (TSIA, LOE)

Mantan Wanderer

this Mon Calamari cruiser was the flagship of the Alliance's 14th Roving Line, and was under the command of Captain Qarl. (ROE)

Mantaris-class Transport

this amphibious transport ship resembles the huge, ray-like creatures native to the coasts of the planet Naboo. Their wings are swept backwards and they have two saber-like tails. Phosphorescent nodules at the tips of their wings give off a reddish glow when activated. The Mantaris-class was designed and manufactured by the combined efforts of the Theed Palace Space Vessel Engineering Corps and the Otoh Gunga Bongowerks in the era following the Battle of Naboo. It was developed as part of a joint effort to colonize Ohma-D'un, the primary moon of Naboo. This transport had similar characteristics to the bongo submarine, but with the capability of interstellar flight. Measuring ninety-eight meters in length, including its heat-sink finials, the Mantaris-class required a crew of five beings to operate. It could transport up to twenty passengers or a variety of creatures, as well as 250 metric tons of cargo. Additionally, cargo modules could be attached to the transport to increase its accommodations. In the wake of the Battle of Naboo, the Mantaris transport was armed with a concussion missile launcher. (GF, WOTC)

Mantarran

Hal Horn had once tracked Moranda Savich to this world, but was unable to capture her before she was able to flee. (TFNR)

Mantessa

a planet which is home to the panthac species. (TLC)

Manticore

an Imperial-I class Star Destroyer stationed at the Maw Installation by Grand Moff Tarkin, the Manticore was under the command of Captain Brusc. It was destroyed in the second Battle of Calamari when Admiral Ackbar used the half-constructed star cruiser Startide to ram the ship. (DA)

Manticore

a legendary creature with a humanoid face and a cat-like body. (DA)

Manticore

this was one of the many Strike-class cruisers that made up the front lines of the Imperial Naval fleet. (XVT)

Mantid

this was one of the most common human surnames encountered in the galaxy. (GCG)

Mantid, Di

this woman was a frequent patron of the Outlander Club, some ten years after the Battle of Naboo. (OWS)

Mantigrue

this was a species of large, dragon-like lizard that was native to the planet Endor. It lived in the moon's mountain caves, emerging to soar the aerials and hunt its prey. It had large, leathery wings, sharp claws, and a long, pointed beak. It walked on its hind legs, as its forearms were small and designed to hold prey. Although primarily predatory in nature, the mantigrue - sometimes referred to as the condor dragon - was not above scavenging for food on occasion. Despite their size, these reptavians could not carry large prey, and had to hunt for small creatures. Wicket and Cindel encounter a mantigrue while they are trying to escape the Marauder attack on the Towani camp. It tries to carry Cindel, but she is too heavy and it drops her. Wicket rescues her in his makeshift hang glider. Teebo also encountered a mantigrue one time, when he was young and trying to help find the Ewok children stolen by Vulgarr and the Duloks. The mantigrue destroyed Teebo's glider. (ECAR, BFE, AT, WSW, SWDB)

Mantilorrian

an alien race which inhabited Space Station Kwenn. (EGC)

Mantine Casino

the less expensive of the two casinos located on the Kuari Princess. It offers a multitude of gambling games and electronic entertainments. (RM)

Mantis Bounty Hunter Syndicate

this large bounty hunting syndicate was based on Santarine, and was managed by Lady Marina Mantis during the height of the New Order. Its size borders it on being a full-scale mercenary company, and it is very rich and powerful. In most respects, Mantis was nothing more than a private army made up on specialists in one form of bounty hunting or another. Mantis was held on retainer by High Lord Affric, who used his position and the strength of the Syndicate to further his own goals. However, Affric built up an incredible debt to Lady Mantis, and she was forced to pull out of the alliance and strike out on her own. (GG9, GG10, SWJ15)

Mantis RamAir

this design conglomerate manufactured the MARK IV Flat-Twin Turbojet pod racer. Note that the Star Wars Databank names this corporation Manta Ramair. (IG1, SWDB)

Mantis, Marina

this noble woman was the leader of the Mantis Bounty Hunter Syndicate during the Galactic Civil War. She was known as an amoral and mercenary woman who hired out her hunters to anyone who could afford them. (GG10, SWJ15)

Mantium

this ore, mined almost exclusively in the Velcar Free Commerce Zone, was used in the formation of starship hull plating. (SWJ3)

Mantle of the Force

this ancient artifact was uncovered in the shop of Suvam Tan, on Yavin Station, more than 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. The Mantle itself was simply a crystal, although it was imbued with the power of the Force. When used in conjunction with other crystals in the construction of a lightsaber, the Mantle of the Force was believed to have the ability to alter the abilities of the blade, giving the wielder unusual powers. When used in a lightsaber, the Mantle of the Force produced a blade which had an azure color. The Mantle of the Force was believed to have been even older than another such artifact, the Heart of the Guardian. It was pieced together from shards found by Suvam Tan in the temples of Exar Kun on Yavin 4, and many historians believed that it was much more powerful in its original, complete form. (KOTOR)

Mantoid

this was an unusual combat droid that made the rounds in the gladiator arenas of the planet Rattatak, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Cylindrical in stature, the Mantoid was armed with a variety of bladed weapons. (OWS)

Mantooine

this New Republic CR90 Corvette was part of the force sent to liberate the planet Ciutric from the control of Prince-Admiral Krennel. It supported the flagship Emancipator, along with several other Corvettes and a trio of Nebulon-B frigates. The Mantooine took heavy fire from Krennel's forces, and barely survived the encounter. (IR) a colony planet located in the Atrivis Sector, in the Outer Rim Territories, Mantooine served as one of the two endpoints of the Relgim Run, opposite Endoraan. It is the primary planet in the Mantooine System, which shares the Atrivis Sector with the Fest System. The planet was the site of an Imperial massacre, in which the planet's inhabitants were murdered when they opposed the Empire. The crushing defeat of the planet's populace hardened the resolve of early resistance leaders like Mon Mothma, and helped solidify the need for an Alliance to Restore the Republic. (SWSB, XW, TFE)

Mantooine

Mantooine Medallion

a military decoration presented by the Alliance, it was designed to commemorate the sacrifice of the people of Mantooine, in the face of Imperial invasion. (XW)

Mantooine Minuet

this piece of classical music was favored by Emperor Palpatine. (MJEH)

ManTrap

this was a form of miniaturized repulsorlift field that worked in reverse from normal. When a being stepped on the trap, the repulsor field generated an intense, localized gravitational field that trapped the being on top of the trap itself. In this way, a being was captured but unharmed before they could reach a specific destination. (GG10, NEGW)

Mantrell, Olina

this was the name of the young girl Pierce Mantrell claimed was his daughter. She was gravely ill, and Pierce turned to theft and smuggling to fund the doctor's visits and medicine she needed to survive. Shortly after the Battle of Yavin, she was under the care of Doctor T'jaleq Kith'Araquia. Pierce used her sad story as an excuse to steal the Amber Eye from Schnil Hakoon. (SWJ1)

Mantrell, Pierce

this man was one of Schnil Hakoon's chief rivals, and was a master thief and conman. Shortly after the Battle of Yavin, Hakoon accused him of stealing the Amber Eye. Mantrell later admitted to stealing the jewel, after Hakoon stole one of his cargoes and left him without enough credits to live. He claimed that he wanted to use the Eye to fund the medicine he needed to cure his daughter, Olina. In reality, he had no daughter, and simply wanted the Eye to fund his own operations. A team of Alliance agents, on the planet to obtain a cure for the Direllian Plague, captured Mantrell and obtained the Amber Eye. They later returned it to Schnil Hakoon, who repaid them with supplies. (SWJ1)

Mantrony

the Bakuran Captain of the Watchkeeper, she loudly argued with Ossilege for command of the ship after it was disabled trying to enter the Corellia System. She lost the argument. (AS) this was the Imperial codename for a mission in which an officer wanted to get rid of a possible spy or enemy agent was posing as a pilot onboard a warship. The spy would be allowed to continue their normal flight schedule, and would be sent out on several starfighter mission with other officers. During one of these missions, the commander could issue the command to fly Manuever 717. Under this order, the loyal pilots would lead the spy away from the ship on what appeared to be a routine mission. The spy would be allowed to lead the mission, so that his fighter would be in front of the others. Then, once the ships were in a position such that the spy couldn't see them, they fired on and destroyed his ship. In this way, the spy was killed in a remote area, and the returning pilots were able to claim the spy was shot down by enemy fire. (T21)

Manuever 717

Manullian

see Manollium (T)

Manumitting

the re-programming of a droid's obedience functions to provide the droid with the ability to act for itself. Manumitting is often performed when an organic individual willingly gives a droid its freedom for many years of faithful service. (LCS)

Manus Fereae

a Dimok Nebulon-B Frigate captured during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Manwess III

this planet served as the seat of Imperial control in Kilbanis Sector, during the height of the New Order. (GG10)

Manx

a group of Imperial corvettes in use during the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Maoi

this race of amorphous beings was created by the ancient Kathol race, but were discarded by DarkStryder in the wake of the Rift Disaster. DarkStryder found them to be amoral and self-centered, and tried to dispose of them in the depths of the Segmi tunnels. The Maoi survived, however, and thrived in the underground environment. The Maoi also developed an affinity to the Ta-Ree energy, and often used it to hold their prey while digesting it. This put the prey in the line of fire, protecting the Maoi during a struggle. The prey was devoured from the inside out by a Maoi, which forced itself down the prey's throat and used digestive acids to eat the internal organs. (E)

Map Reader

this slender device was used to display the galactic map stored inside a map record. Using the coordinates and data stored in the map record, the map reader used sophisticated holographics to display an interact, room-filling map of the galaxy. (AOTC, AOTCA)

Map Record

this small orb was used store a galactic map of known space. No larger than a marble, the map record was placed inside a map reader to display its contents. These devices were used during the last decades of the Old Republic. (AOTCA)

Maphus Tria

Tord Gamb was known to have set up a series of scams and cons on this planet, during the early years of the New Republic. (WBC)

mapia

this Shyriiwook word was used as the suffix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "season" or "storm". It could be attached to a prefix by itself, or combined with other suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Mapuzo

the Alliance base on this planet was infiltrated shortly after the Battle of Yavin by an unidentified group. (AIR)

Mar

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Mar Balayan

this Shistavanen was at one time a scout for the Republic Scout Service. During the height of the New Order, he set out on his own to make a living as a slaver, supplying the Empire with laborers. He was known to have defeated a team of Stalimur Pirates singlehandedly. After the Battle of Endor, Balayan spent much of his time harassing the New Republic, especially after anti-slavery laws were re-instituted. (SWJ10)

Mar Duun

this Alliance CR90 corvette was laying a minefield near Vinzen Neela 5 when the Sela freighter group was trying to transport TIE Defender prototypes through the system. (TIE)

Mar, Abron

this shifty little man was one of Takara's chief associates during the early years of the New Republic. Mara Jade tracked Abron Mar down at the Katraasii Space Port, during her search for Takara, and managed to get him to provide information on Takara's location. (MOTS)

Mara

this was one of the most common names given to female Corellians. (GMR9)

Mara

this Gallofree medium transport was used by the Alliance to transport bacta during the Galactic Civil War. (XWA)

Marael Korvata

this was a noted member of the Arkanian race. (UANT)

Maraffa

this tree was native to the planet Kabal, and was known for its pleasant odor and its sticky, orange sap. The sap was considered a sweet delicacy, and maraffa twigs were often sold like candy in many marketplaces. (GMR1)

Marais, The

a group of planets in the Koornacht Cluster, the Marais appealed to the New Republic for membership after the start of the Yevethan Great Purge. (BTS)

Marakoloon

this Whiphid was big for his species, and was easily distinguished by his carved and silver-inlaid tusks. He was the second son of a wealthy trader, and not in line to inherit any major wealth. So, he left Toola to join his uncle as a bounty hunter. Although he hated the work, he liked the pay. One day, he found a special exhibit of carnivorous plants in a zoo display. He suddenly realized that the power and beauty of the plants appealed to him, and he spent the rest of his career collecting dangerous species of plants. (HR)

Maramere

this blue-green planet, the primary world in the Karthakk System, was controlled by the Trade Federation during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. It was in orbit around this planet that Vana Sage managed to capture the Feeroin smuggler Nym, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. Maramere was covered almost entirely with water, with rocky spires and outcroppings forming the only land. The native species, the Mere, built wondrous cities in and among the rocks, but also lived underwater. Six years after the Battle of Naboo, a group of freedom fighters led by Sol Sixxa began to fight the oppression of the Trade Federation. With the help of the Feeroin Nym, the Meres were able to overthrow the Trade Federation and reclaim control of the planet. It thrived for many years as a resort world, until the Clone Wars put a stop to much of the galaxy's vacation travel. (T7, CRBN, O) this is the Yevethan term for the birth cask which all female Yevetha carry in a mating ridge on the backs of their heads. It is nourished with continual infusion of Yevethan blood. (SOL)

Mara-nas

Maranium

this was a relatively abundant natural ore, which had a number of modern uses. (PP)

Marasa Nebula

this vast expanse of space-borne gases cut off the planet Marasai from the rest of the galaxy for many millennia. It forces the Trelle Trade Route to make a wide detour around it, for it effectively cuts off hyperspace travel. 13 star systems are located within the Nebula, including the Marasai System. The Empire enslaved the Marasan race, hoping to use captive Marasans to shorten the path around the Nebula by using travel nodes known only to the Marasan. (GG12)

Marasai

this planet is the homeworld of the Marasan race, and is located within the Marasa Nebula. It has a gentle, temperate ecology, but its seasonal changes are unpredictable due to its proximity to the Nebula. (GG12)

Marasan

a race of cyborged sentients originating from the Marasa Nebula, the Marasans are large marsupials with thick bodies and long, spindly arms. They walk on two short, muscular legs, and have two sensory appendages in addition to two eyes and a mouth on their flat faces. All Marasans wear a thin, metallic implant wrapped around the backs of their heads. The implant was originally developed to help the Marasans navigate through the chaos of the Marasa Nebula, and evolved into a device which controlled certain autonomic and natural functions. They are a slow-moving race, but their implants allow them to think and communicate electronically. This allows them rapid access to information, and provides nearly instantaneous answers. Their interpersonal skills are lacking, however, when they have to deal with other races. The Marasan race originated on the planet Marasai, and developed the ability to travel through space on their own. Using strange anchorpoints - similar to jump gates, but known only to the cyborged Marasans - within the Marasa Nebula, they were able to travel to 20 colony worlds. This ability was desired by the Empire, which sought a way to shorten the Trelle Trade Route. They forced the Marasans to assist in the movement of Imperial starships through the Nebula by torturing them. The Empire developed a device which could send out immense electromagnetic waves tuned to the Marasan cyborg implants. The resulting pain could be spread out across nearly the entire Nebula, were the Marasans to disobey Imperial orders. The Alliance was powerless to assist: to incite the Marasans to rebellion would bring down the wrath of the Imperial wave device, while the willful stranding of Imperial ships in the Nebula would bring on the power of the Imperial fleet. (GG12)

Marasi

this Yevethan term is used to describe a young Yevethan female who is ready to be impregnated. (SOL)

Marat V

this was the Imperial name of the planet Skye. (LTA1, MCA1)

Marauder

a race of humanoid reptiles living on Endor, the Marauders were descended from Sanyassan ancestors who were stranded on the moon several centuries before the Battle of Yavin. They had a fortress hidden in the rocky wastes of the moon, and were trapped there for a number of years. They evolved into a vicious race, often waylaying visitors to the planet and stealing their technology. They obtained a number of laser weapons in this manner, and sustained themselves by eating the beings they ensnare. Like the Sanyassans, the Marauders had strange, simian faces, scaled skin, and sparse tufts of hair. They had three fingers and an opposable thumb on each hand. They wore makeshift armor created from the scraps they scavenge. The strongest Marauder was declared the King. Terak was the Marauder King when Noa and Salek crashed on Endor, as well as when the Towani family landed on the moon. Terak was obsessed with finding "The Power," which he hoped would allow the Marauders to conquer more than just the simple life forms of Endor. The Marauder prison guards were portrayed by Michael Pritchard and Johnny Weissmuller, Jr., and Terak's Lieutenant was portrayed by Roger Johnson in Ewoks: The Battle for Endor. (BFE, SWI65, UANT, SWDB)

Marauder

this New Republic Warrior-class gunship was part of Pakkpekatt's fleet sent to intercept the Teljkon vagabond. It was ordered to return to drydock at Krenhner Sector Station after the mission to capture the vagabond failed at Gmir Askilon. The Marauder later assisted the Indomitable in taking out a Yevethan T-type thrustship near ILC-905. (BTS, SOL, TT)

Marauder Starjacker

one of Finhead Stonebone's E-2 asteroid miners used to raid Ithullian colossus wasp ore haulers in the ancient Stenness System. (TOJ, EGV)

Marauder, The

this was one of the many nicknames used to describe Kaox Krul. (GMR5)

Marauder-class Cruiser

an out-moded pocket cruiser designed by Raith Sienar for Republic Sienar Systems, the Marauder-class measured 195 meters in length. They are sleek, aerodynamic craft designed for system patrol and smuggling interdiction missions. They are armed with eight double turbolasers, with an option to add four more turbolasers with a larger power generator. Three tractor beam projectors allow the Marauder-class to capture smaller ships. A wing of IRD starfighters can also be housed in its fighter bay. The Marauder-class cruiser was manned by a crew of 129, with 48 gunners and room to transport up to 40 troops. The Old Republic opted not to purchase the ship for government use, and the fledgling Corporate Sector stepped in to buy them. Once the ships showed up in Corporate Sector space, other planetary governments began to submit orders to the RSS plant on Lianna. The Marauder-class quickly became one of RSS most recent successes, although the ship eventually found its way into the hands of smuggler and pirates. Corporate Sector Marauder-class cruisers were deployed in pairs, along with a Victory-class Star Destroyer and Invincible-class cruisers for system control. (HSL, EGV, SOG, NEGC)

Marauders

this swoop gang terrorized the Storrd Township on Seregar, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. They provided assistance to Tern Ashandrik, after a bounty was placed on his head by TaggeCo. (ND)

Marbaral Peninsula

found on the moon Rellnas Minor, the Marbaral Peninsula is one of the primary population centers of the Rellarin race. (GG12)

Marbleberries

an edible fruit (DA)

Marbra Associates

known only to the innermost members of Socorro's criminal heirarchy, this money-laundering operation was rumored to have process almost three billion credits a year at the height of the New Order. (BSS)

Marbra, Juri

this young man was engaged to Saahir Ru'luv during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Juri was a strong supporter of the Alliance, and served as a mediary between weapons dealers and Alliance field units. Juri arranged for smugglers to transport weapons to those areas which desperately needed reinforcements. In this capacity, Juri eventually earned the rank of Commander within the Alliance military. He was killed when the Empire discovered the location of the Alliance's base at Merich's Bend and raided the facility. (SWJ15)

this swamp planet was the homeworld of the Sekct species. Because of the existence of a Dynamic Synergetics Incorporated hyperbaride production facility on the planet, the Empire had all records of Marca erased from planetary databases, in order to use the planet as they saw fit. The hyperbaride production was lethal to the native Sekct, and their species was nearly wiped out. A team of Alliance agents, on their way to Sumitra Sector, cut through the Marcellus Nebula and was forced to land on the planet. The team eventually brought down the hyperbaride plant, with the help of the Sertim sisters and the Sekct, and helped free the Sekct from its toxic wastes. The planet itself is covered with a swamp-filled ocean, with virtually no continental land mass, and measured some 12,000 kilometers in diameter. The heat of the planet, combined with its swampy surface, generated a continual shroud of mist which enveloped the planet. The mists collected and dispersed sunlight, making it appear as if Marca had no day/night schedule, just a perpetual hazy gloom. The year on Marca was measured as 340 standard days. (POM)

Marca

this woman was a crewmember aboard the FarStar, during the search for Imperial Moff Kentor Sarne. During the attempt to defeat Sarne and DarkStryder on Kathol, Marca was attacked by a Maoi and had to be confined to sickbay aboard the FarStar. (E)

Marcen Herb

this dried plant material is often used by Hutts in their water hookahs. It induces a mildly euphoric feeling. (THG)

Marcellus

this yellow star was located in the Marcellus Nebula, and was the primary body in the Marcellus System. (POM)

Marcellus Nebula

according to all Imperial star charts and databases, the Marcellus Nebula was just a vast expanse of interstellar gas. This was because the Empire had maintained a hyperbaride processing plant on Marca, deep inside the Nebula. (POM)

March, Reina

this woman was the leader of the anarchist group known as Edge-9, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Known for her skills as a hand-to-hand fighter, Reina often dressed in non-descript clothing in order to blend in with a crowd. (CCW)

Marcha

this Drall was Ebrihim's aunt, and was the Duchess of Mastigophorous on Drall. She provided shelter for Ebrihim, Chewie, and the Solo children following their escape from Corellia, shortly after the rise of Thrackan Sal-Solo and the Human League. Leia Organa-Solo chose her to be the new Governor-General of the Corellian System, following the end of the Starbuster plot and the death of Micamberlecto. She relocated to Corellia in order to help bring peace to the system. Later, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Marcha reluctantly gave her conditional approval to the New Republic Defense Force's plan to use Centerpoint Station as a weapon against the alien invaders. In the aftermath of the Battle of Fondor, Marcha was kicked out of office, removing the Republic's last hold on the Corellian Sector. (AS, SC, JE, BP)

Marcino, Shel

this man was a member of the Silent Blades, and was one of the few members who survived the assault on the group by Vocis Kenit and the Far Orbit. He was a simple deckhand at the time of the attack, but later gathered the other survivors and formed the Tarnished Blades gang. They continued to live the life of pirates, hoping to get one more shot at taking out Kenit. (FOP)

Marcol Void

this stretch of empty space separates the Kathol Outback from the rest of Kathol Sector. It is approximately 30 light-years across, and has never been mapped. What is known is that there are no planets in the Void, and very little debris. A flight across the Void, with standard hyperdrive technology, takes about 14 standard days to complete. There are two known hyperspace routes through the Void: The Galtea Run, which connects Galtea to Timbra Ott; and the Sebiris Run, which connects Sebiris to the worlds of the Pimbrellan League. (KO)

Marcopius

this young graduate was one of the Academy honor guards that accompanied Leia Organa-Solo to the Chorios Systems during her talks with Seti Ashgad. Marcopius managed discover that Ashgad was poisoning the ships in the small group which accompanied Leia. He eventually contracted the Death Seed plague unleashed by Ashgad, but was able to hold on long enough to get R2-D2 and C-3PO off the Borealis so that they could tell the galaxy what was happening. Marcopius died before the droids could get him medical assistance. (POT)

Marcus, Korl

this was the alias used by Luke Skywalker, when he accompanied Prince Denid back to the planet Velmor. Marcus was a noted bounty hunter who dressed like a flamboyant pirate. As their cover story went, it was Marcus who discovered Prince Denid, his betrother Loren (portrayed by Leia Organa), and Jedidiah on a remote world, and vowed to return them to Velmor. Marcus was approached by Imperial Captain Traal, who was Prince Anod's attache', with an offer of wealth if the hunter would assassinate Prince Denid and "Loren." (LTA2, MC49)

Marde

this was a wondrous, white stone used in the carving of expensive columns and pillars. (SBS)

Mardec, Fora

this young girl was the daughter of Lina and Riic Mardec, but she was killed in the crossfire when the Empire subjugated Gotida and tried to eliminate the rebel cell in Jalor City. (AIR)

Mardec, Lina

this woman married Riic Mardec, but she was killed in the crossfire when the Empire subjugated Gotida and tried to eliminate the rebel cell in Jalor City. (AIR)

Mardec, Riic

this man was a taxi driver on his homeworld of Gotida for fourteen years, earning just enough credits to provide for his family and save a little extra. His life was shattered when the Empire subjugated Jalor City, and his wife and two daughters were killed in the crossfire. He never found out if it was Imperial or rebel fire which killed his family, and spent much of the rest of his life in a drunken stupor. (AIR)

Mardec, Sale

this young girl was the daughter of Lina and Riic Mardec, but she was killed in the crossfire when the Empire subjugated Gotida and tried to eliminate the rebel cell in Jalor City. (AIR)

Mardig Mardig

this man was a native of the planet Carsanza, where he struggled to maintain a steady job, during the height of the New Order. (GFT)

Mardinu

native to the planet Tirahnn, this herd beast was bred for its warm and durable hide. (WOA32)

Mardoc

this Hutt was the Executive Secretary of the Grand Council of Hutts during the early years of the New Order. (THG)

Marduk

this Imperial Carrack-class cruiser served as the personal ship of Sub-Commander Brojtal, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (ND)

Maree Yad

this Dug was a member of Sebolto's gang during the years following the Battle of Naboo. The Pixelito Grand Council issued a bounty for his capture in connection with the sale of death sticks to the youth of Pixelito, a bounty that Jango Fett managed claim during his attempt to meet with Sebolto. (BH)

Marelle, Tanda

this woman was born to Alderaanian parents, who owned a prominent shipping operation during the Old

Republic. However, she chafed at the structured existence her parents forced on her, and she eventually became a travel agent in order to see other, more exciting worlds. She eventually was hired by Galactic Resorts holozine as a freelance critic. She also discovered that she had a knack for obtaining jewelry, although her methods were completely illegal. As she traveled on luxury liners to exotic ports of call, she learned to steal the valuables of just about anyone, and became known throughout the galaxy as the Tombat. She allowed the misconception that the Tombat was male to grow, further adding to her mystique while throwing off pursuit. During this time, she was shaken by the destruction of her homeworld - mainly because she had stashed a huge cache of jewels in her estate on Alderaan - and vowed to strike back at the Empire in any way she could. She approached Airen Cracken about becoming an agent on Albus, and joined the Alliance as a freelance spy. Her support for the Alliance was spotty, but she felt no love for the Empire. (SWJ3, CRO)

Marellis

Mara Jade's alias when she worked as a come-up flector on Caprioril. (EGC)

Marenn Yagen

this planet was the innermost world of the Bovo Yagen system. A ball of seared rock and barren wastes, it was named for one of Bovo Yagen's sons. (CTD)

Mareoin

this woman was the primary character in Beneath the Galdronian Moon: A Modern Lover's Epic. (GFT)

Marg Sabl closure maneuver

a aggressive positioning in which the lead warship allows its support fighters to launch from behind the offensive line and then turn hard into the opposing force. Grand Admiral Thrawn used it to ambush the New Republic force which tried to pursue the Imperial scouts that raided the library computer at Obroa-Skai, about five years after the Battle of Endor. Thrawn recognized that the commander of the Republic's ships was an Elomin, and took advantage of the fact that the Elomin mind was unable to handle the unstructured nature of a Marg Sabl maneuver. (HTTE)

Marg Sonat

this Ithorian crimelord worked in the Tamarin Sector during the early years of the New Republic, and was a member of Sard Nightbringer's criminal empire. However, Marg Sonat wanted more power for himself, and sought a way to bring down Nightbringer and place himself in power. When Sard tried to auction off a set of prototype Imperial armor, Sonat tried his best to obtain it. He had it shipped to the Stellar Mermaid on Nightbringer's orders, but used an independent team of smugglers to transport it. He then enlisted the aid of his old friend, Pari' Notgoth, to take possession of the prototype. Their plans nearly succeeded, except for one loose end: the smugglers they hired to transport the prototype. They discovered the body of Morgotou, then discovered that Sonat had killed Natja the Hutt in order to obtain the prototype. Sonat then killed Sard Nightbringer, and tried to flee the Stellar Mermaid with his new possession. The smugglers caught him and blasted Sonat out of the luxury liner in an escape pod. The prototype was destroyed in the firefight, and the only known information on its construction had been memorized by Sonat. The secrets of the prototype were lost with him. (POC)

Marga

this Tahlboorean term can be a noun or verb, and translates to "love." (DRPC)

Margan

this man was one of Santor's aides, during the years leading up to the Battle of Endor. (MC87)

Margan, Vam

this former Imperial Army officer served as a Major within the Natori Association, having left the Empire on his own terms. He never revealed those terms, but he retained a great deal of his Imperial training and brought it with him to Tenloss. Distinguished by his bristly hair and stocky build, Margan was known as an officer who was concerned about his people and was dedicated to fulfilling his missions. (SPG)

Margaret

this MC40a was part of the Alliance's fleet, during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Margath, Kina

this human female is the owner of Margath's on Elshandruu Pica. She also was an Alliance foster agent during the Galactic Civil War. Kina is a high-powered executive, very professional in her dealings and always immaculately dressed. She strives to keep Margath's up to its five-star rating. She was a friend of Sair Yonka and Aellyn Jand, and agreed to keep their affair a secret by claiming the Yonka was on Elshandruu Pica to meet her, not Aellyn. (GG9, BW)

Margath's on Elshandruu Pica

this conglomerate of bars, casinos, and restaurants is one of the Outer Rim's most well-known retreats. Among the various places of relaxation, all owned by Kina Margath, is the 27th Hour Social Club. It has maintained a five-star rating for a number of years. (GG9)

Margengai-glide

this dance step was popular in the years before the Battle of Yavin. It was made up from a series of complex patterns. (RD)

Margess Base

Luke Skywalker sought out Chewbacca at this base during the Galactic Civil War. (RPG)

Margolis

Nichos Marr's caretaker during his childhood. (COJ)

Margrave

a hereditary position of leadership among the Togorians, the Margrave is the eldest male descendant in each generation. The Margrave is in charge of the planet's government. His closest female relative lives in Caross, presiding over day-to-day activities, while the Margrave travels the plains with a group of chosen males. (GG4)

Mar'holt

this was a common name among the Em'liy race. (GMR1)

Mar'holt Kisfrel

this Em'liy was the last General of Chinshassa, on his homeworld of Shalyvane, before the Empire bombarded the city in an effort to "cleanse" it of rebellious activity among the human population. Because the city and the Circle of Kavaan were destroyed during his watch, Kisfrel was remembered among the Em'liy as a failure and a traitor. (GMR1)

Marhu Koss

this was a noted member of Muun society. (UANT)

Mari

this woman was a courier for the Alliance, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. She was pursued by both Zardra and Boba Fett when a bounty was placed on her head, and a team of rookie Alliance agents barely got her away from them. (SWJ7)

Maria

a Lambda-class shuttle used by a high-ranking Alliance official, the Maria was forced to stop for repairs and was attacked by the Star Destroyer Malice. The shuttle was rescued by a squadron of X-Wings. The shuttle was later used to transport Princess Leia Organa to the Tantive IV, along with the plans for the first Death Star. As noted earlier, this contradicts the Star Wars Radio Drama, which has Leia onboard the Tantive IV, receiving the plans via tight-beam transmission from the planet Toprawa. (XW)

Maridun

this planet, the homeworld of the Amanin race, is covered with lush forests and grassy plains. It was discovered early in Emperor Palpatine's reign by Imperial scouts, who quickly discovered that the Amanin were a strong source of slave labor. After the Battle of Endor, much of the planet's commerce was based on criminal activities, most which were controlled by the Hutts. (GG12, UANT)

Mari'ha Andona

this female was one of the traffic controllers employed by the New Republic to monitor in-system travel near Coruscant. She was one duty when Han Solo left for Jubilar, where he was confronted by Boba Fett. (TBH)

Marik, Joha

this pirate was an acquaintance of Urias Xhaxin. Xhaxin tried to convince Marik to join the growing number of pirates who were being contracted by the Alliance to ambush Imperial convoys and steal supplies for the war effort. Marik refused, citing that the Alliance was a group of illegal operatives who were disrupting the balance of the galaxy. Xhaxin, realizing that Marik would turn on him at some point, arranged for Marik to be captured by the Empire. After the Empire squeezed information on Xhaxin's movements from him, Marik was executed. (PP)

Marik, Sella

this woman, a reporter for TriNebulon News, spent part of her career trying to find out why Alexis Cov-Prim had been married five times in three years. Each time, Cov-Prim's new husband died shortly after the marriage, and Cov-Prim was named sole beneficiary in the will. Marik and her editors found this to be very suspicious, and Sella was given the opportunity to track Cov-Prim. When Sella discovered that Cov-Prim was attending the auction of the Shard of Alderaan computer slicing program, she made her way to the Dune Princess to discover what was happening. She posed as a wealthy heiress, in an effort to blend in with the crowd, and later obtained enough evidence to have Cov-Prim arrested. Shortly after the Battle of Endor, Marik went to work for the Galaxy 9 News agency, and tracked the dealings of Senator Drexar Pym. (LAA, SWJ7) this woman was the Queen of Gascon during the Galactic Civil War. She ruled the planet with her husband, although the King was heavily influenced by the High Advisor, who was a believer of the Akol religion. Marilla was also the more dominant figure, and controlled both men with her iron will. She also had a softer side, she was having an affair with the Prime Minister of the planet Demigue. (GMS)

Marilla

Mariqar Snow Q'lk

this creature was native to the Jhunia snow plains of the planet Neftali, and was hunted for its meat and fur. In many respects, the q'lk were similar to banthas, with shaggy pelts and huge horn-like antlers. They were much smaller, though, measuring just 1.5 meters in height at the shoulder. Adults had billowing white fur, which allowed them to blend in with the icy land on which they live. Immature q'lk have darker fur which lightens and lengthens as they grew. (BSS)

Maris

meaning "industrious", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Maris

this yellow star was located in Elrood Sector, and was the primary body in the Meris System. (PG3)

Maris

whenever Han Solo talked about his past while using an alias - something he did to escape the pressures of being married to the Chief of State of the New Republic - he used the pseudonym Maris to refer to Luke Skywalker. (TBH)

Maris Gen

this Rodian was the proprietor of The Underground, a cantina located below the surface of the moon of Tilnes, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. He claimed to be allergic to sunlight, and that exposure to light would make his skin peel away. His skin was constantly covered with a patchwork of light and dark scales, an indicator of the seriousness of his condition. (LFC)

Maristo

an alias used by Kell Tainer, Maristo was a starfighter pilot with the Imperial Navy. A Captain by rank, he commanded Drake Squadron, and was assigned to the Star Destroyer Night Terror. The Maristo alias was used to get a flight of Wraith Squadron onto the planet Kidriff Five, near Tobaskin Sector, in order to support the fly-by of the Millennium Falsehood. (SOC)

Marite

this Force-sensitive woman was one of the leaders of the Village of Aurilia, on the planet Dathomir, serving on the council that was led by Rohak. Marite was among the first settlers exiled to Dathomir because of a perceived threat to Emperor Palpatine. She was also one of the growing number of individuals who wanted to expand the Village by taking in offworlders who wanted to learn more about the Force. Although he was initially against the idea, Rohak eventually agreed with Marite that the Village of Aurilia should open its arms to Force-sensitive offworlders. In this way, the lore and knowledge of the settlers could be passed on, while the offworlders helped defend the settlement from attacks by the Nightsisters. (SWGAL)

Marius

this man was a member of the royalty that ruled the daylight side of a remote planet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He was the brother of King Cleroff, and the uncle of Princess Risa, and held the position of Vizier in the court. When Han Solo crash-landed on their planet, Marius explained that he had been studying the energy phenomenon that brought Han there in the first place, and agree to help Han return to Endor. It was later revealed that Marius was the mastermind behind all the brigand activity on their homeworld, as well as the stalled peace treaty that Cleroff had hoped to sign with his nightside rival. His studies of the energy phenomena were not wholly scientific, but were performed to support his plans for taking control. When Han Solo arranged to have Prince Gil kidnapped by other brigands, so that King Cleroff could pay his ransom and make Gil's family indebted to him, Marius saw his chance to grab real power. He double-crossed Solo's plans, but Han had also anticipated Marius's treachery. Marius was quickly captured, and Han was able to help King Cleroff establish a peaceful resolution to the situation. (MC101)

Marjan, Saylor

this man, a native of Arapia, was a long-time friend of Toob Ancher, until they have a falling-out and didn't speak to each other for twenty years or so. Over that time, Marji incurred a debt to Saadoon-Kauldi, which was collected by Toob Ancher and Fahs Oxsor on Redcap. (SWJ5)

Marjune

this barren ball of rock was the innermost planet of the Tirahnn System, located in the Zeemacht Cluster. (WOA32)

Mark 10

this was a droid sensor suite which could be purchased during the last decades of the Old Republic. (DMSH)

Mark 15

this starship diagnostic kit was produced by Quaxcon during the early years of the New Republic. Han Solo kept one aboard the Millennium Falcon. (TG)

Mark 16 Enzymer

this model of enzymer was produced by BioTech. (SWJ14)

Mark 4e/S

this Merr-Sonn heavy laser cannon was manufactured specifically for use on Ubrikkian's Imperial-class repulsortank. (SWJ9)

Mark 65

this was a model of guard droid. (GG11)

Mark 7 Tractor Beam Generator

this generator was developed following the Battle of Endor. (BTS)

Mark I Bulk Transport

this 50-meter-long starship was manufactured by Sienar Ships during the Old Republic. It was a bullet-shaped craft with some 40,000 metric tons of cargo capacity, despite its relatively small size. It required a crew of four to operate, and could carry up to twenty additional passengers. Updated models produced during the New Order were reconfigured to carry up to 60,000 metric tons of cargo, reducing its passenger capacity to just five beings. These newer craft were also armed with a turret-mounted laser cannon. (CRO, PP)

Mark II Air Brake

this is the smallest, and least effective, of the non-jetted air brakes manufactured for pod racers. (RAC)

Mark II A-Wing

this was the second-generation A-Wing produced by the New Republic shortly after the Battle of Endor. (BW)

Mark II Blaster Cannon

this Merr-Sonn medium repeating blaster cannon was designed to accept power cells from a number of different sources. This made it highly portable, since transporting power cells along with it was not always necessary. The Alliance made great use of this weapon, since they could not always guarantee a steady supply of specific cells. (CCG3)

Mark II Powersuit

manufactured by Telgorn, the Mark II powersuit is designed with a cutting laser, and is used primarily in rescue operations. (SN)

Mark II Reactor Drone

a utility droid whose heavily-shielded casing makes them look cumbersome, they are programmed to perform menial labor. (SWR)

Mark II World Rover

this exploration craft was used by planetary contact teams. It was a delta-winged repulsorcraft equipped with enhanced shielding, navigational and sensor arrays, and various boring and drilling implements. A pilot and co-pilot could maneuver the craft by supplying power to an array of thruster jets. (SOL)

Mark III Air Brake

this small, non-jetted air brake provides increased stopping power over the Mark II brake. (RAC)

Mark III Bulk Transport

this 300-meter-long transport ship was designed by Sienar Fleet Systems. The Mark III required a crew of 10 to operate, and was armed with a single, computer-controller laser cannon. The Mark III could transport up to 160,000 metric tons of cargo and carried four months' worth of supplies. (FOP)

Mark III Ion Mine

this orbital mine was produced by Merr-Sonn during the early years of the New Republic. Like an ion cannon, the Mark III ion mine was designed to disable a target's electrical systems by hitting the target with a burst of ionized energy. (DARK)

Mark III Powersuit

an enhancement to the Mark II, the Mark III powersuit has a blaster cannon and mini-proton torpedoes. They were designed for military and security personnel. (SN)

Mark III Surveillance Unit

produced by TapTronics CovOps, this concealed sensor unit allowed fortified compounds to have remote listening and monitoring equipment on their perimeters without attracting attention. (HAS)

Mark IV Air Brake

this medium-sized, non-jetted air brake provides increased stopping power over the Mark III brake. (RAC)

Mark IV Assault Droid

this combat droid was developed for the Sith, during the height of the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

MARK IV Flat-Twin Turbojet

this was a model of podracer designed and manufactured by Mantis RamAir during the last decades of the Old Republic. A large craft, the cockpit of the Turbojet measured 5.28 meters in length, while the engines measured 10.59 meters in length. The large engines were capable of speeds approaching 823 kilometers per hour. (IG1)

Mark IV Fuel Cell

this Imperial fuel cell was noted for its ability to evenly distribute fuel, providing longer travel times. (SWJ5)

Mark IV Patrol Droid

this series of repulsor-equipped sentries was created by Imperial Department of Military Research for use by the Empire shortly before the Battle of Yavin. They measured a third of a meter across, and moved about on a series of tiny repulsor-engines guided by several steering vanes. The Mark IV was unarmed, but carried a variety of sensors and recording devices to document the criminals it encountered. The Mark IV was also known as an IM IV droid, since they were manufactured for use by Imperial forces. (SWSE, BTM, SWRPG, EGD)

Mark IV Powersuit

the Mark IV powered suit of armor was designed for speed. It is armed with a single laser cannon, and was used to move between vessels during military operations. (SN)

Mark IX Executioner Droid

this assassin droid was the forerunner of the Mark X Executioner, developed by Arakyd during the early years of the New Order. (WOA18)

Mark of Illumination

this religious insignia was used by the mystics of the Chalactan Enlightenment to denote an individual who had become one with his or her gods. The mark was formed by affixing one or two small beads to the frontal bone of an individual's skull. There were two distinct Marks of Illumination which could be earned by a Chalactan. A single Mark on the bridge of the nose, known as the Lesser Mark of Illumination, indicated an individual's devotion to their gods. A second Mark on the forehead, known as the Greater Mark of Illumination, indicated an individual's attainment of the rank of Chalactan Adept. Together, the two Marks signified the most basic tenet of Chalactan Enlightenment, "As Without, So Within". (IG1, SHPT)

Mark of the Crown

this subtle mark of succession was a characteristic of the true heir to the throne of Gala, but was not a specific birth-mark or identifying feature. The Mark was known to the Galacian Council of Ministers, who could test an individual for its presence. Viso was the primary member of the Council who knew the way to determine the presence of the Mark. Deep within the palace, a special room contained a mosaic floor of pale blue tile. An intricate pattern of silver marked a square within a square on the floor. Whenever a Galacian stepped into the center square, it activated a sensor system that swept the being with a cascade of lights. If the being wore the Mark, the shadows of light would outline them. A Galacian who didn't have the Mark would not cast a shadow. (MOC)

Mark One Ear'ole

this was a term used by Sergeant Kal Skirata to describe what he thought were the best assets a clone commando had at his disposal: his own eyes and ears. (RCHC)

Mark V Air Brake

this is the largest of the non-jetted air brakes used on pod racers and other high-speed ground vehicles. (RAC)

Mark V Powersuit

another Telgorn protection system, the Mark V was designed with a number of onboard tools for maintenance operations. (SN)

Mark V Proton Torpedo

this was a civilian-grade proton torpedo. (SWJ5)

Mark V14

this spaceport baggage carrier was produced by Falkenharn Repulsors during the height of the New Order. It was designed to be folded into a small package, making it the perfect companion for regular travelers who needed to move their luggage between gates with ease. (GFT)

Mark VI Powersuit

manufactured by Telgorn, the Mark VI Powersuit was designed to be the only armor necessary in any harsh environment. It could be used in any number of military, search-and-rescue, or scientific operations. It is equipped with a blaster cannon with a special focusing lense, life support systems, and a huge Ubrikkian repulsorlift engine for locomotion. (SN)

Mark VII Attendant Droid

this humanoid servant droid was manufactured by Galinolo Subservient. (TA)

Mark VII Inquisitor

this version of seeker remote was developed by Arakyd. Equipped with a variety of sensors, scanners, and communication equipment, the Mark VII carried a BXT-4 computer and an AA-1 verbobrain, all of which allowed the Mark VII to work independently of an organic operator. These small remote were armed with a pair of tiny yet powerful blasters, and could stun or kill a target if directed to do so. (EGW)

Mark VII Power Crossbow

this weapon, produced by Malkanthi, was an energized version of the archaic crossbow. It was popularized after the bounty hunter Boddu Bocck began using one in his hunts. (SWJ2)

Mark VII Scarab Droid

this was the most recent in the line of Scarab Droids produced for Imperial use by Seinar Fleet Systems. Used during the years surrounding the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, the Mark VII was easily modified for a variety of missions. The Mark VII resembled a palm-sized insect, and moved about on six magentic feet. Its light weight and maneuverability allowed the Mark VII to scale vertical walls with ease. A single injector mechanism could be loaded with a variety of poisons. (FH1, AEG)

Mark X Executioner

a series of Arakyd gladiator droid, the Mark X moved about on two caterpillar tracks, and had many weapon-studded arms that folded close to its torso. The arms contained flame throwers, lasers, flechette launchers, and other weapons systems. Viceprex Hirken owned one on Stars' End, and constantly paid the Imperial Entertainment Guild to send him a robot performer to pit against the droid. When Han Solo infiltrated the penal colony, Bollux was sent up against the Mark X. Bollux used skill rather than force, and was able to defeat the droid by coming in low and locking himself around the Mark X's tracks. The Mark X became confused, for it was never programmed to shoot at itself to disable its opponent. The Mark X went berserk, shooting all its weapons at anything came close to resembling a target. It eventually ran itself into a wall and self-destructed. (HSE, CSA)

Mark XI Executioner

this was Arakyd's follow-up design to the popular Mark X Executioner droid. (SWJ3)

Mark-127

this was the model number of the Golon Arms Vac Attack blade launcher. (ROE)

Marka

this young girl was a slave, owned by the Toydarian Lod, during the years leading up to the Battle of Ruusan. When Lod tried to sell her to the Sith Master Finn and his apprentice, the apprentice killed Lod for suggesting that he, too, was a slave. His brief moment of compassion for Marka eventually proved to be his undoing, however. Master Finn recognized that the girl was sensitive to the Force, and her enslavement had pushed her close to the Dark Side. When Marka followed them to their ship, Finn demanded that his apprentice deal with her. Marka then asked them to take her with them, although Finn refused on the grounds that he already had an apprentice. Marka took matters into her own hands, taking the apprentice's lightsaber and pushing him off the ledge of a building to his death. She then took her place as Finn's apprentice. (T17)

Marka Ragnos

this ancient Dark Lord of the Sith ruled the galaxy with an iron fist some 5,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. Ragnos controlled the Sith Empire for more than a century before he finally died, but expanded the Sith Empire very little during his tenure. Ragnos knew of, and feared, the power of the Old Republic, and chose to protect the Sith by keeping them isolated. After he died, funeral preparations were underway when the Daragon siblings happened upon Korriban, and interrupted the burial ceremony. Ragnos was buried with his predecessors in the Valley of the Dark Lords, with numerous living slaves entombed to assist him in the afterlife. His death led to a great uprising among the two major Sith factions, as each of them tried to promote their candidate to the vacant position of Dark Lord. Both Ludo Kressh and Naga Sadow believed that they were the next Dark Lord, and came to blows shortly after Ragnos' burial. Ragnos' spirit - angered by the proceedings - returned from the dead to counsel them about choosing their battles wisely. Ragnos' spirit foresaw that their battle would bring about the end of the golden age of the Sith magicians. A millennium later, Ragnos' spirit again rose from the dead, when it named Exar Kun the newest Dark Lord of the Sith. Ragnos, however, lacked enough power to fully return, and remained as a spirit, trapped on Korriban for the next 4,000 years. Some ten years after the Battle of Endor, the Dark Jedi Tavion managed to acquire the Scepter of Ragnos, and began supplying it with Force energy. She then traveled to Korriban, in an effort to raise the spirit of Ragnos. Although she was intercepted by Jaden Korr, Tavion managed to transfer the power in the Scepter to Ragnos' spirit. The former Sith Lord rose up and tried to take over Tavion's body, but she was killed in combat with Korr. Ragnos then tried to kill Korr, but was unable to do so in his spirit form. Ragnos once again was trapped on the planet, although he vowed to find a way to escape. (GAS, DSSB, NEGC, JKA)

Markand

this man served the Empire as a High Admiral during the Galactic Civil War. (PP)

Markenson

this Imperial Colonel was in charge of the Wyloff Sector Plexus when Commander Jev learned of the death of his father. After Jev orchestrated the arrest of Moff Varnier's spy, Markenson was relieved of duty for his poor management of the facility. Jev was promoted into Markenson's former position. (CRO)

Marker Ring

these heraldic rings were developed for the lords and ladies of the noble house of the planet Kilia IV. Externally, the rings bore the crest or seal of the noble house. Internally, there were tiny communications systems that allowed members of the same house to recognize each other. When two rings from the same house were in close proximity, they began to glow, a tell-tale sign of the other noble's presence. Kilian Rangers had their rank etched into their marker rings, a further indication of their social status. (RESB)

Markess Narn

this was one of two Nebulon-B frigates used by Ororo Transportation to patrol the Lybeya System and the Vergesso Asteroid Field. (SPG)

Marketta-class Shuttle

this transport ship was created during the early decades of the New Republic, and saw duty primarily within the Republic's military. (DTR)

Markko

this was the name of the man who posed as Imperial Counselor Raines, a member of Governor Egron's staff on the planet Chibias, during the early years of the New Republic. Mara Jade discovered the connection between Raines and Markko after meeting up with Ghent for the first time. She also learned that Markko had been hired by Egron to slice open an Alliance datacore, but was unable to perform the task he was hired to do. For this reason, Raines had planned to blackmail Ghent into doing the job for free, while taking all the credit himself. However, Markko's dealings with Governor Egron were themselves a cover, for he was actually an agent of the New Republic. He had been sent to Chibias to ensure that the datacore - which was actually the control node of an Imperial-class Star Destroyer - was sliced open and its information provided to the New Republic military. He was unprepared for Ghent to be accompanied by Mara Jade, but managed to avoid being killed when they escaped. He later cornered Mara and Ghent, accompanied by Governor Egron. Mara dispatched Egron with a well-aimed blaster bolt, and Markko took Ghent hostage. Mara, however, decided that her work was done: she had eliminated an Imperial traitor. She agreed to allow Markko to go free, as long as he freed Ghent. Markko agreed, and Mara let him return to the Republic. (GMR10)

Markul

an alien race. (TJP)

Markus, Len

this man was distinguished by his pale, translucent skin. He appeared to be albino, but was simply lacking in certain skin pigments. He accentuated his pale coloration by wearing light clothing, but could blend into a crowd by wearing darker clothes. Markus was the primary representative of the Smuggler Confederacy in the years following the Battle of Naboo, acknowledging the control of Nirama over the Confederacy but running the operation his own way. Markus and Nirama then worked together in an effort to bring down The Cell. It was believed that Len Markus was the individual who traveled into the Cularin System's asteroid belt and remove the Darkstaff from its resting place, releasing a horde of strange creatures and causing the sudden disappearance of the entire Cularin System, shortly after the Battle of Naboo. (LFC, WOTC)

Marl

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Marl

this man was one of the many gladiator fighters chosen by Ajuur the Hutt to compete in his events, during the height of the Great Sith War. Marl was an exceptional hand-to-hand fighter, and often fought with just a stun baton. (KOTOR)

Marl Blazestar: Mercenary for Hire

this holovid serial was popular on Celanon during the early years of the New Republic. (POC)

Marl, Dagga

this raven-haired woman was hired by Thrackan Sal-Solo, shortly after he was named President of Ylesia and Commander in Chief of the Peace Brigade. Dagga was hired to serve as his personal bodyguard, after the Ylesian Senate decided to try anything possible to eliminate Sal-Solo. A member of the Senate herself, Dagga had been working secretly for the Ylesian Senate, performing assassinations to keep certain factions in power. She gladly accepted Thrackan's offer of a kilogram of glitterstim each week he remained alive, to relieve the boredom of working for the Senate. However, Dagga overestimated Thrackan's abilities, and was caught fleeing with him from Peace City when the New Republic attacked Ylesia to capture the Peace Brigade. She was disarmed and placed under arrested. (Y)

Marl, Reela

this woman worked for Neva Transport as a pilot, commanding the light freighter Early Riser. In reality, Reela was Elana Nalmar. (FBS)

Marquand

this Imperial Major directed the counterattack against the Ewoks during the Battle of Endor. Originally from Kessel, Marquand was a crewer on an AT-AT assigned to the Devastator before being transferred to the Imperial garrison on Endor. Marquand and his co-pilot, Lieutenant Watts, were captured when Chewbacca and a pair of Ewoks commandeered their AT-ST scout walker. (CCG10)

Marquarra

Flim, acting as Grand Admiral Thrawn, told Han Solo and Lando Calrissian that the Xerrol Nightstinger sniper rifles used in the attack on the Combined Clans Building on Bothawui had been stolen by Borsk Fey'lya's private army from the Ubiqtorate cache on this planet. (VOF)

Marr, Brezzic

this Imperial Commander was in charge of the 105th Stormtrooper Platoon, assigned to Starlyte Station and liaison officer Arissa Fawn. Marr also served as Fawn's second-in-command. Like the rest of the 105th, Marr was fanatically loyal to the Empire, and many believed that he was just another of the crazed members of the platoon. However, Marr had a keen tactical mind and an intense personality, and many of his strategies eventually found their way into Imperial training manuals. However, Marr was not above taking bribes from Talandro Starlyte, so long as Starlyte realized that no amount of money would ever buy his loyalty. (WSV)

Marr, Nichos

Nichos Marr was an up-and-coming young mind in the galaxy. He was also sensitive to the Force. He met, and fell in love with, Cray Mingla while at the Magrody Institute, and the two became betrothed. Their Force sensitivity led them both to Yavin 4, to learn the ways of the Jedi under Luke Skywalker. About six months into their training, Nichos somehow contracted Quannot's Disease, and began to slowly deteriorate. Cray, her love for Nichos unbounded, worked stridently to create an android body to replace his withering human body. She was able to perfectly replicate his form, but her lack of understanding of the Ssi-ruuk entechment techniques prevented her from fully transferring his mind to the new body. Once transferred, Nichos lost touch with the Force, and also lost much of his humanity, although he retained a great deal of knowledge and memory. Six months later, when Luke tried to use the Force to extract some of Nichos' memories about Plett's Well, Luke found only words there to describe the memories. There were no images or emotions associated with them. Nichos and Cray then accompanied Luke to the Moonflower Nebula, and were captured and held on the Eye of Palpatine by brainwashed Gamorreans. During his imprisonment by the Gamorreans on the Eye of Palpatine, Nichos began to doubt his existence as a human, and realized that he would probably never become human again. So, he volunteered to stay behind with Callista and destroy the ship. When Cray suggested that Callista take her body, Nichos realized the depths of Cray's love for him. Together, they helped destroy the Eye of Palpatine by sacrificing themselves. (COJ)

Marrab

this was one of the more common names given to males of the Mon Calamari race. To the Mon Calamari, this name meant "protector" or "guardian". (GCG)

Marri

Hallis Saper claimed to have found a love letter from this Lady in Wes Janson's belongings, when she recovered the belongings of Red Flight from their rooms after they were exiled from Cartann City. In fact, there were no such letters. Hallis was goading Wes with a practical joke. (SOA)

Marrix

this scout Captain was the first non-Gree to make contact with the worlds of the Gree Enclave. Although seemingly well-respected by the Gree, especially since he was human, Marrix was only allowed to visit the motherworld of Gree just once. (SWJ8)

Marrsel

this independent scout was known for scouting only most unusual and profitable worlds. (GG8)

Marruc

this was a common name among the Zeltron people. (GMR1)

Marruc

this young Zeltron was part of the detachment sent to the Forest Moon of Endor to meet with the leaders of the Alliance, most especially Leia Organa, in the wake of the Battle of Endor. Admiral Ackbar then placed the four Zeltrons in charge of protecting Leia, in order to simplify a delicate situation. Marruc and his companions were personally escorted back to Zeltros by Leia Organa shortly afterward. Like most Zeltrons, Marruc had a strong hatred of the Nagai. When the Nagai tried to subjugate Zeltros, Marruc was one of the first Zeltrons to defend Leia. He was badly injured in the attempt, and his imprisonment at the hands of the Tofs didn't help the healing process. (LTA6, MC95, MC103, MC106)

Mars Guo

this Phuui was one of the Outer Rim's best podracer pilots. He was smitten with the Twi'lek Ann Gella, after seeing her at a glimmik concert. However, Sebulba discovered his affections and vowed to eliminate him. Guo was part of field for the Boonta Eve Classic which was eventually won by Anakin Skywalker, but Mars Guo himself was unable to finish the race. He had hoped to pilot his Plug-2 Behemoth racer to victory in order to buy the freedom of Ann Gella. However, the wily Dug, Sebulba, flung a piece of scrap into the air in front of Guo's pod, and the debris was sucked into an engine. The scrap shredded the engine's components and destroyed it, and Mars Guo's pod flew out of control and crashed in a fiery blast. Many believed that Mars did not survive the explosion, but nevertheless he returned to Mos Espa alive and well. (TPM, RAC, IG1, PRT, NEGC)

Marsh Haunt

this unusual swamp creature was native to the planet Abraxin, although it could be found in many forms on other planets. Many xenoarchaeologists believed that the idea of a "Force Demon" evolved from beings who encountered a marsh haunt on a dark night. The marsh haunt was a greenish-gray, bipedal creature whose skull was set between its shoulders, giving it a headless appearance. They were unintelligent creatures which were more fearsome in appearance than they were in action, but they had the ability to channel a small amount of the Force to frighten other creatures. By hunting in packs, marsh haunts could scare their prey into an ambush of other marsh haunts. (PJSB)

Marsh Lizard

an alien reptile. (DOE)

Marsh Pig

this porcine creature was native to the swamps and marshes of the planet Corellia. (MJH)

Marsh Wyrn

this huge creature lived in the Great Shore Marshes of the planet Gelgelar. Resembling a great snake, the marsh wyrn's head was dragon-like in appearance. (PSPG)

Marsh, Janos

this man served as the starship computer expert on board the scout vessel Bright Seeker. Although outwardly loyal to House Calipsa, Marsh was, in fact, a reserve member of House Melantha's Covert Activities Cadre. He had been infiltrated into the crew of the Bright Seeker in order to help the Knife's Edge capture her. The goal was to keep House Calipsa from locating a new trade route through Tapani Sector. The plans to take the Bright Seeker were thrown off when the ship jumped into hyperspace, forcing Marsh to act on his own. After the crew discovered that their blind jump had placed them in proximity to the Regal Destiny, Marsh dispatched a message to his superiors giving their location. Marsh was forced to murder Quat Ralto in order to maintain his secrecy. He eventually made his way to the

Regal Destiny, but was overpowered by a group of freelance crewmen who were working for Captain Wender on the Bright Seeker. (TSIA)

this Corellian man was a smuggler of minor repute during the early years of the New Order. Distinguished by his bald head and boisterous sense of humor, Marshak was one of the beings who supposedly witnessed Han Solo's winning of the Millennium Falcon from Lando Calrissian, at least according to Squishmael. As Squishmael told it, Marshak was the individual who explained to Solo that the Kessel Run involved obtaining rare Kessel Birds from the Aeneid System. Of course, Squishmael later explained that Marshak and Lando had been playing an expensive joke on young Solo, as part of Lando's revenge for losing the Millennium Falcon. (T16)

Marshal Levnis

this being owned the Lady Akiko, and tried to purchase a Kalld'n-class stardrive for it through the Most Honourable Guild of Armourers. (GG9)

Marsh-grubber Tree

this species of tree, native to Yavin 4, grew on the edges of swamps and lakes. (EVC)

Marsh-gunnie

this small swamp creature is native to the bayous of Nim Drovis. (POT)

Marshian

Marshoo

this species of fish was native to Naboo. (GCG)

Marshoo

this was one of the most common Gungan surnames, taking from the father's side of the family. These surnames were not dropped, even after marriage. It referred to a species of fish that was native to the planet Naboo. (GCG)

Marshoo

this immense Gungan was the head chef of General Marshoo's Eatery in Otoh Gunga, during the period leading up to the Battle of Naboo. A former General with the Gungan Grand Army, Marshoo took criticism of his culinary creations with great affront. When Jar Jar Binks tried to beg for scraps, Marshoo tried to pound him flat, but was stopped by Captain Tarpals, who had come to arrest Binks. When Binks reminded Marshoo that he was no longer in the military and was "just a cook," Marshoo tried to take out both Tarpals and Binks on his own. In a series of fortunate actions, Binks managed to knock Marshoo and his cronies unconscious, before he was exiled from Otoh Gunga. (T3)

Marsh-root

a plant often used in souffles. (RD)

Marska

this woman was an Imperial spy who worked personally for Lord Dixon during the Galactic Civil War. To all outward appearances, Marska was Dixon's air-headed secretary. In reality, she was hand-picked Emperor Palpatine for her cunning mind. After Dixon's shuttle, the Resurgence, was forced to land on Masterhome, both Dixon and Marska were captured by Alliance forces and imprisoned. (SWCP)

Marskan, Casal

an Alliance starfighter pilot, and the younger brother of Ernek Marskan. Casal was assigned to be Keyan Farlander's wingman on a mission to capture the Ethar group of Imperial Corvettes. Casal was killed in the battle. (XW)

Marskan, Ernek

an Alliance starfighter pilot serving on the flagship Independence while Keyan Farlander served there. When his younger brother, Casal, was killed while accompanying Farlander on a mission, Marskan became distrustful of Farlander's tactics. (XW)

Marson, Arne

this man worked as a repulsortruck driver on the planet Coruscant, during the early years of the New Republic. During a regular run, Marson went to work overly drunk, and accidentally overturned his truck. Rather than admit to his mistake, Marson covered up the incident and hoped it was simply faded into the past. However, his truck had been loaded with juvenile stratts, which grew quickly and began to attack nightclub patrons. (CCW)

Marso's Demons

a group of fighter pilots with whom Gallandro flew at one time. Gallandro was generally considered one of the best Demons ever. (HSL)

Marspa

this ancient Jedi Master and his Padawan, Imina, traveled the galaxy for many years together. Quite often, Imina asked questions about the various ways in which the Jedi Knights had to handle their own tenets, based on the situation. They witnessed Hutt brutality against their slaves on Nal Hutta, as well as domestic violence on Ord Mantell. When Master Marspa failed to step in to help the slaves, but intervened on Ord Mantell, he explained to Imina that the Jedi Knights had to accede to the laws and customs of the planets on which they worked. He explained it this way: "For a Jedi to interfere with a culture on their homeworld would have been to pass judgement on them on behalf of the Republic." (PJSB)

Marstan, Thew

this carnival strong-man worked for Kersh Lauskner's Travelling Animal/Acrobatic Arcadium. He was renowned for this size; at just under a meter in height, he could bar metal bars and lift a platform on which audience members were sitting. The source of his strength has never been revealed. (GCQ)

Marsune

this was one of the most common Gungan surnames, taking from the father's side of the family. These surnames were not dropped, even after marriage. To the Gungans, it referred to a long-extinct leviathan. (GCG)

Marsune

this ancient behemoth once lived in the deep oceans of the planet Naboo. It died out long ago, but remained an almost mythical part of Gungan history. (GCG) this ancient Gungan was something of a folk-hero to his contemporaries, more than 3,000 before the Battle of Yavin. Marsune was an independent thief, robbing from the rich clan leaders and distributing the wealth among the poorer Gungans. He hid in the forests of Naboo, avoiding capture while earning the admiration of the common people. However, when Boss Rogoe destroyed Otoh Sancture, Marsune's sense of fair play and his conscience finally gave way to determination. He came out of hiding to provide information on the forests to Boss Gallo, hoping that Gallo could defeat Rogoe and unite the Gungan people. In return for his assistance, Boss Gallo named Marsune the first Captain of the united Gungan Army. (GB)

Marsune

Marsune and Gallo

this was a game often played by Gungan children, which re-enacted the exploits of Boss Gallo and Captain Marsune in the unification of the Gungan people. (GB)

Mart Ringatz

this Ishi Tib was a noted thief who worked in the Core Worlds region of the galaxy during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. He was wanted by the Republic Security Force for the theft of valuable jewels from a Sullustan dignitary who was visiting Dantooine. Ringatz was captured by Jango Fett on Coruscant shortly after the Battle of Naboo, and turned over to the authorities for interrogation. (BH)

this New Republic Navyman served as deck officer under Etahn A'baht on the Glorious. (BTS)

Martyr of Drongar, The

this was the title used in many newsfeeds to describe Phow Ji, after his death on Drongar during the height of the Clone Wars. The name referred to his seemingly heroic actions in wiping out a gang of Salissian mercenaries and their battle droid army, ostensibly to save the staff at Rimssoo Seven and allow them to relocate in the face of a Separatist attack. (MJH)

Martyrs

this is the title given by the Bothan people to the members of the group which stole the plans to the second Death Star, as well as to those Y-Wing pilots who died ensuring the plans were given to the Alliance High Command. The Martyrs hold an almost sacred place in Bothan history and society, for their actions ultimately brought down the Emperor and the New Order. For a Bothan family to be joined to the family of a Martyr in marriage or other bond is considered a blessing. (KT, IR)

Martyrs

this constellation, found in the skies of Bothawui, was named in honor of the Bothan pilots of Blue Squadron. These pilots died trying to get the plans of the second Death Star to the Alliance. (KT)

Maru

this large reptile was native to the planet Kashyyyk, where it was domesticated and used as a beast of burden by the Wookiees. (TCW)

Maru Ki

this was one of the Nebulon-B frigates which were used by the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Maru Lan

this was the name of a noted Kaminoan scientist. (UANT)

Maru, Crian

this Jedi Knight was one of the many who were caught up in events during the six months leading to the Battle of Ruusan. She and her apprentice, Dree Vandap, were dispatched to Harpori to locate Kaox Krul, but were too late to save the Duros colony there. The Dark Jedi caught them in the Balowa System, disabling the Golden Song as well as his own starfighter. After crashing on the only inhabited world of the system, the two Jedi readied themselves to confront the Sith warrior. Crian tried to take the fight to him on her own terms, hoping to offset Dree's limited training by battling Kaox Krul on her own terms. Unfortunately, Kaox Krul was able to throw Crian from the battle with a blast of Dark Side energy. During this brief lull, Krux killed Dree Vandap, then turned his full attention to Crian. Crian, angered at the untimely death of her Padawan, attacked with fury as much as focus. The battle went on for hours, until Crian finally gave in to the Dark Side. In the incredible concentration of Dark Side energy, both Crian and Kaox Krul were completely consumed, blasting the life from the immediate area and causing widespread ecological damage to the planet. Neither was ever found again. (GMR5)

Maruk, Jai

originally born on Druckenwell, this Jedi Master was one of the many that were thrust into positions of military command when the Clone Wars broke out across the galaxy. Maruk was known among the other Jedi and many Padawans as the Hawk-bat, because of his fierce, wild stare. He was among the few Jedi who were on patrol near Vjun when they were intercepted by Asajj Ventress and brought to the remote planet. There, Maruk was attacked and forced to fight in a lightsaber battle with Ventress. The Dark Jedi would have beaten him if Dooku hadn't stepped in and called the battle off. Maruk nonetheless suffered a scarring lightsaber slash that damaged his face. However, Dooku released him so that he could return to Coruscant with a message for Yoda. Maruk raced back to the Jedi Temple in his starship, the Limit of Vision, and delivered Yoda's message personally. It was shortly after this that Yoda tried to challenge Maruk's perceptions, when he made a wager on the outcome of the Apprentice Tournament. Maruk had already decided that Tallisibeth Enwandung-Esterhazy - otherwise known as Scout - was unfit for the rigors of being a Jedi Knight. Yoda bet Maruk that if Scout finished in the lower half of the tournament, she would be sent to the Agricultural Corps. If she finished in second, third, or fourth, she could remain as an apprentice. However, if she won the tournament, Master Maruk would have to take her on as his Padawan. Maruk reluctantly agreed, and was more than surprised when Scout emerged as the tournament champion. He accepted her as his Padawan, but was unable to spend much time with her before being assigned to accompany Yoda back to Vjun. However, the little time they did spend together made Jai realize that he actually liked Scout. Their relationship was cut short when the Jedi were intercepted on Phindar by Asajj Ventress and a squadron of assassin droids. The Jedi fought bravely, but they were no match for the Dark Jedi and her droids. Master Leem was struck by a spray of flechette razors before being cut down by Ventress, and Maruk leapt into the fray to try and save her. However, he was no more a match for Ventress than Master Leem. In a battle that lasted just thirty seconds, Maruk was killed by Ventress. With his dying breath, Maruk swore to Scout that he would remain with her forever, at least in spirit. The deaths of the Jedi Master left their Padawans alone, until they were rescued by Yoda. (YDR)

Marut

this Victory-class Star Destroyer was part of the Imperial fleet, and was used to raid Alliance training facilities shortly before the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Mary

this beautiful, blonde-haired woman was part of Raggold's rebellion on the planet Solay, during the weeks following the Battle of Endor. After Raggold's assassination, Mary suggested that Luke Skywalker be named the ruler of Solay, as a representative of the New Republic and the democracy the natives of Solay so desperately wanted. Mary and the rest of the rebel band had but a few days of freedom, for Imperial warships arrived to assist in restoring King Blackart to power. Mary was shot and killed in the initial wave of attacks. (MC89)

Maryb Wastes

a vast, open wasteland found on the planet Maryx Minor. The Ancient Order of the Pessimists located their base beyond the Wastes. (EOE)

Maryx Minor

the Ancient Order of the Pessimists made their home on this desolate world. Maryx Minor is volcanically active, and open lava pits and steaming geysers litter the landscape. Boba Fett tracked the outlaw Abal Karda to this world, completing his bounty hunt. (EOE)

Marzoon Confederacy

this alliance of planetary governments joined the Old Republic some fifty years before the Battle of Endor. They signed a treaty which brought them into the Republic aboard the Chandrilan corvette Freedom's Messenger. (DARK)

Mas Amedda

this imposing, blue-skinned Chagrian served as the Old Republic's Vice Chairman, serving under Chancellor Valorum and later under Chancellor Palpatine. He assumed the position of Vice Chancellor less than a year before the Battle of Naboo, shortly after Valorum was first accused of violating the Amended Proprieties Bill. Senator Palpatine pointed out to Queen Amidala that Mas Amedda was another skilled politician who was only working for his own advancement, and was on the payroll of the Neimoidians' Trade Federation. However, in reality, Mas Amedda was quite loyal to Valorum and the laws of the Old Republic. He frequently reminded Valorum of the protocols required by the Galactic Senate, but was unprepared when Amidala called for a vote of no-confidence in Valorum's abilities. Mas Amedda tried to quell the uprising, but the unrest within the Senate pushed the vote to ratification. After Palpatine was voted into office as Chancellor, Mas Amedda remained loyal to the honesty of the Old Republic, a trait which made him unpopular with many Senators and politicians. Over time, Amedda became one of Palpatine's closest advisors, and remained loyal to him throughout the conflict of the Clone Wars. When Palpatine assumed the role of Emperor and instituted the New Order, Mas Amedda remained by his side for a decade. Mas Amedda was portrayed by Jerome Blake in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace, and by David Bowers in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones and Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (SW1, TPM, IG1, COD, GMR10, IS3, TCG10)

Mas Ramdar

this Dreadnaught was part of the Old Republic's Home Fleet Strike Group Five, which defended the planet Coruscant during the height of the Clone Wars. This ship saw heavy fighting during the First Battle of Coruscant, and was part of the main force that attacked the Invisible Hand. However, the Mas Ramdar took heavy damage during the battle, and was further pounded by the weapons of the Invisible Hand until Anakin Skywalker and Obi-Wan Kenobi managed to infiltrate the Separatist ship. (E3N) this immense, mobile turbolaser platform was developed for the New Republic by Loronar. Standing more than twice the height of an AT-AT walker, the MAS-2xB was an ovoid vehicle which was essentially built around a huge turbolaser. The main body of the MAS-2xB was dedicated to the main turbolaser pulsor, while a small cabin was hung below the body. In addition to the main pulsor, the MAS-2xB was armed with a pair of turret-mounted double turbolaser cannons and a pair of heavy laser cannons mounted on the cabin. The MAS-2xB was equipped with a 4.2FC fusion power core to supply the tremendous amount of energy required to operate the vehicle. The MAS-2xB was protected by two-meter-thick armor plating and six separate shield generators. (EGW)

MAS-2xB

Masakayan

this Tarro was a Lieutenant Commander for the Alliance. (GG12)

Masalou

this barren world is the second planet in the Baralou System, and lies just outside the planet's Alou asteroid belt. (PG1)

Masan, Rophele

this man worked for Empire Freight Company, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. He had a number of contacts among the smugglers who worked out of Lamuir IV, and could help match up prospective customers to spacers. (TSIA)

Masanya

this modified CR90 corvette was used by the Alliance as a sensor jamming source. Admiral Ackbar placed the Masanya near the main fleet, where it could work to disrupt the weapons targetting systems of enemy craft. (CCG11)

Maser

the Imperial Remnant developed short-range, maser-based communication systems during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (FH3)

Masgen System

Qatak Qantaras worked for the Alliance in this system, during the Galactic Civil War. (GG12)

Mashi Horansi

a subspecies of the Horansi race, the Mashi Horansi were easily distinguished from the other races by their jet black fur and their sleek bodies. They were also the only purely nocturnal species of Horansi, a trait they have inherited from their ancestors. The Mashi Horansi were excellent hunters, and could be tracked only by the most skilled - and often lucky - of trackers. For this reason, the pelt of a Mashi Horansi was prized by the other races. They mate for life. (PG1)

Ma'Shraid

this Yuuzhan Vong prefect was one of the few female leaders that accompanied the first wave of the Praetorite Vong invasion force into the galaxy. She commanded the warriors who guarded the yammosk on Helska, and commanded one of the first warships to enter the galaxy with prefect Dooje Brolo. (VP)

Mashrang

this was a common male name among the Gamorrean people. Like most Gamorrean names, it was essentially gibberish that indicated what a Gamorrean would do if you made him angry. (GCG)

Masked Soldiers

in the prophetic visions of the Keganite woman O-Vieve, the Masked Soldiers attacked and subjugated the planet Kegan. Historians later learned that these soldiers were actually the Imperial stormtroopers of the New Order. (FFT)

Masking Putty

this pliable material was used by actors and artists to modify a being's facial structure. (BP)

Masla

this young woman was the daughter of an Imperial officer, as well as a member of the theater troupe which was led by Roons Sewell, during the height of the New Order. Masla found herself falling in love with Roons, partly because of his good looks, but mainly because of the emotion and humanity he possessed and was unafraid to display. Unfortunately, when an Imperial law enforcement team tried to break up the troupe's performances, Masla was shot and killed during a firefight. Her death only hardened Roons' resolve to join the Alliance and exact revenge on the Empire. His first act of defiance came just after Masla's death, when Roons executed her father, who was an Imperial officer at the time. From that point forward, Roons cried out Masla's name every time he went into battle. (SWERS)

Maslak

this was a species of lily which grew in the shallow waters of the planet Somov Rit. Sprouting from the wide, dish-shaped leaf of the maslak was a tall stalk, atop which grew an enormous bulb. The bulb contained seeds, which had wing-like petals that allowed them to be carried on the wind when the plant reproduced. (JVS)

Maso-class Freighter

an out-dated light cargo hauler. (GG9)

Masona, Roth-Del

this dark-skinned, human Jedi Knight was one of the handful of Jedi who survived the initial stages of the Battle of Geonosis. Roth-Del was part of the small group who were surrounded by the droid armies of Count Dooku and his Separatists, just before the Army of the Republic arrived on Geonosis. Roth-Del Masona was portrayed by Leonard Thomas in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones. Massasai One this was Luke Skywalker's callsign, during the period following the Battle of Yavin. He used the callsign while on diplomatic missions to other worlds, during the Alliance's search for a new base and new allies. (CSWEA) an alien race brought to Yavin 4 from a planet in the ancient Sith Empire, the Massassi were red-skinned, yellow-eyed humanoids with a primitive culture. The Massassi were later enslaved by Naga Sadow and transported to Yavin 4, where they were transformed by the Sith Lord's dark powers. They became a race of warriors, with grayish-green skin and large, lantern-like eyes. Over the centuries, in the wake of Naga Sadow's death, the altered Massassi became even more primitive in nature, and were comparatively timid and weak when Exar Kun came to Yavin 4 to seek out a Sith power object. Note that Dark Lords of the Sith portrays the Massassi as savage, Dark Side creatures descended from the Sith themselves. They were the offspring of Naga Sadow's alchemical magic. They were also red-skinned humanoids. This seems to have been a change of heart for Kevin Anderson, who worked on both sources. Kun later enslaved them, and made them build the temples that dotted the forest, as focusers of the power of The Force. They were exterminated when Kun, in an effort to defeat the Jedi Knights, consumed their spirits in order to trap his own spirit in the Obsidian Temple during the Great Sith War. Their bodies were destroyed by the Jedi Knights who tried to defeat Kun. Over the intervening millennia, the spirits of the Massassi remained trapped on Yavin 4, until they were released by Anakin Solo and Tahiri Veila, with the help of the Golden Globe. They are termed "Massasi" in Lost City of the Jedi. (SW, DA, COTF, DLS, ECH)

this was the name given to the warrior caste of the ancient Sith race. (DSSB)

Massassi

this was the language of the ancient Massassi people. (DSSB)

Massassi Ink Rifle

this ancient rifle was originally developed by the Massassi of Yavin 4, although only a few specimens survived to the era of the Galactic Civil War. Its carved barrel was mounted to a horn-shaped stock, and appeared to have been adapted to fit onto a scimitar. Thus, the ink rifle could be used as a long-range weapon or as a melee weapon. (SWGAL)

Massassi Knuckler

this hand-held, four-bladed weapon was developed by the Massassi for close-in combat. The center of the knuckler was wrapped with leather for a better grip, while two curved blades emerged from either end. (SWGAL)

Massassi Station

the Alliance's base on the fourth moon of Yavin. It was named from the race that built the huge temples in which the Alliance stored their fighters and command stations while preparing to battle the first Death Star. (SCRE)

Massassi Tree

a species of tree native to Yavin 4 with a thick-boled trunk and purplish bark, the Massassi tree can grow to heights of nearly 200 meters. The bark of the Massassi tree can be shredded, and the small flowers which grow at branch junctures can be boiled to create a fever-reducing tea. (JS, DA, GG2)

Masse Goskey

this being owned the famous Arms Emporium, which was located in the city of Mos Eisley on the planet Tatooine. It was situated on Paradise Road, just off Spacers Row. (IWST)

Massiff

native to the deserts of Tatooine, this massiff was a smaller variety of the form found on the planet Geonosis. It was believed that these massiffs were brought to Tatooine by a trading ship from Geonosis, which crashed in a sandstorm some 200 years before the Battle of Geonosis. The surviving massiffs were taken in by the Sandpeople of Tatooine, who raised them as guard dogs and companions. The Tatooine massiff was of little use as a sentry, since its sensory systems could not adapt to the planet's whirling sands. Many Sandpeople clans which kept massiffs were considered renegades, since the keeping of off-world animals was a major change to time-honored traditions. (SWDB, AOTC, SWI62)

this rugged man was a member of Mirith Sinn's New Republic cell on the planet Phaeda. He was openly suspicious of Kir Kanos, and discovered that Kanos was wanted by Carnor Jax for crimes against the Empire. When Sinn ordered him to back off, Massimo challenged her to a duel for control of the Republic cell. They never got a chance to fight, because Colonel Shev's troops invaded their stronghold, on the information provided by double agent Tem Merkon. Massimo believed Kanos had betrayed them, until Sish Sadeet discovered that the traitor was actually Tem Merkon. Massimo executed Merkon by stabbing him in the heart. He then led the flight and defense of the base at Collo Fauale, holding on until the Lusankya arrived to defeat the Steadfast. He then flew the Phaeda's Hope to the huge ship, and requested a shuttle to follow Sinn to Yinchorr, where he could apologize for assaulting her. He arrived too late to save Sish Sadeet, but managed to recover Mirith. She then fled the New Republic, joining Grappa the Hutt in an effort to locate Kir Kanos. Massimo followed her, and offered to tell Grappa about her true motives for the right price. Massimo told Grappa that Mirith had been spying on his organization, in an attempt to break up the pirate raids he had been staging on New Republic ships. When Grappa caught Sinn, he had both Mirith and Massimo turned over to the Zanibar for their dealings. (CE, CE2)

Masslines

this song, written and played by the band Red Shift Limit, was banned by the Imperial Board of Culture. It first appeared on the compilation Limited Warfare. (GG9)

Mass-nulling Clip

developed to help lighten the load of explorers and scouts, a mass-nulling clip generated a focused field of very-low gravity. This allowed large loads - primarily water and food supplies - to be carried on the back or on a belt clip, without adding additional weight to a being's load. During the early years of the New Republic, pressurization technology was coupled with mass-nulling clips, allowing a week's worth of water to be carried on a being's belt. (TG)

Mass-shadow Mine

this was a sophisticated form of space mine developed by the Confederacy of Independent Systems during the Clone Wars. Mass-shadow mines were essentially proximity mines that could detect the presence of a ship that was passing through a nearby point in hyperspace. When a ship was detected, the mine "exploded", creating a localized point of intense gravity that cast a similar gravity shadow into hyperspace. This mass shadow forced the passing ship's hyperdrive system to shut down, dragging the ship back into realspace. In realspace, the Separatists would then ambush the passing ship. A series of these mines was used during the early stages of the First Battle of Coruscant, to prevent any Old Republic warships from returning to Coruscant and jumping directly into the battle. Master Control Signal the transmission signal which guides the World Devastators. (DE1)

Master Fate

a capricious being who blows the winds of the planet Wroona wherever he pleases. There are numerous Wroonian folktales about him. (SWJ13)

Master in White

this was the name given to the leader of the Wookiee Liberation Front, during the height of the Clone Wars. The Master in White was the head of the Five Masters. (LFCW)

Master Jaing

this man was one of the many Mandalorian Neo-Crusaders who survived the Mandalorian Wars and set out to take control of several clans of mercenaries, some 4,000 years before the Battle of Endor. Like Canderous Ordo, Master Jaing was a former shock trooper who remained loyal to the Canons of Honor, but realized that he needed to earn credits in order to survive. Jaing managed to rein in some of the old Neo-Crusader clans, and made a relatively honest living as a soldier for hire. (SWI80)

Master Machinesmith

this was the title bestowed upon those individuals who managed to keep hardware operational on Drexel One. To many individuals, they were also known as wreckers, since they evolved from the original pirates who were loyal to Quarg's father. Among the foremost contributions was the sonic jammer, a device originally used to ambush starships in the Kortein Asteroid Belt. The jammer was taken with them Drexel One, where the Master Machinesmiths used to to disable starships in orbit around Drexel, shutting down their propulsion and guidance systems and forcing the ship to crash into the ocean. This allowed the Machinesmiths to acquire much-needed metals for their continued existence. (MC12, MC13)

Master of Cerements

this individual was responsible for making sure the ancient customs of the planet Necropolis were observed, thereby ensuring that the Curse of Sycorax would not be invoked. Among the traditions were: having pretend "mummies" greet off-worlders who came to Necropolis, in an effort to scare away evil spirits; setting aside a portion of every meal for the dead; and burying all those who die in the cemetery, whole and intact, without cremation or disintegration. (GOF2)

Master of Coins

this was a high-class, private, luxury resort built by Planet Dreams, Incorporated, on the planet Togominda. The Master of Coins was owned and operated by the Lynciro Corporation during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (WOA34)

Master of Etiquette

this was the title given to the individual who worked with the Kuati ruling families to ensure that the laws which control the leadership of Kuat are adhered to at all times. (SLS)

Master of Imperial Projects

this was the title and position held by Bevel Lemelisk, during the height of the New Order. (SWMW)

Master of the Order

this was the title bestowed upon the highest-ranking member of the Jedi Council, during the last decades of the Old Republic. During the years leading up to the Battles of Naboo and Geonosis, Mace Windu held the position of Master of the Order. When Master Windu joined the many Jedi Knights and Masters who assumed military positions during the Clone Wars, the title was given to Yoda, who remained on Coruscant to serve as Chancellor Palpatine's chief military advisor. (YDR)

Master Stroke

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was dispatched by the remnants of the Empire to assist the Agonizer in subjugating the world of Adumar, after the Adumari had sided with the New Republic. It was seriously damaged in the assault, which saw the New Republic successfully defend Adumar. (SOA)

Masterblade

this was the term used by the Bladeborn to describe any weapons master who had survived ten or more duels with an opponent who used a lightsaber. It referred to the warrior's skill in defeating the weapon of the Jedi and other Sith devotees, and those few who attained the rank of masterblade were given a tremor sword as an indication of their skill and rank. (KOTOR)

Master-Com

this stocky, humanoid droid served Senator Simon Greyscale aboard The Wheel, during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. Master-Com was patched directly into the computer systems of The Wheel, and monitor virtually every aspect of the station at any time, including security and life support. When Imperial Commander Strom tried to take control of The Wheel on his own, he was forced to destroy Master-Com in order to reach Greyscale. Greyscale, however, revealed that Master-Com was not a single droid. A new and improved version of the Master-Com droid was activated, helping to thwart Strom's schemes. This new Master-Com unit was quite interested in the self-sufficiency of R2-D2 and C-3PO, and arranged for them to be freed after they were placed in storage for later reprogramming. When Greyscale confronted Master-Com about his interest in the droids, Master-Com explained that he simply wanted to have some friends. This new Master-Com unit also perished in a hail of Imperial blaster-fire, when it attempted to open Greyscale's personal docking bay so that the Administrator could escape from Strom. Luckily, it was able to transfer control of the station to a third body, which emerged from hiding to discover that R2-D2 had recordings of all the treacherous activities of Greyscale and Strom. (MC18, MC19, MC20, MC23)

a native of Demar, Maston served the Imperial Security Bureau as the chief field agent assigned to Brak Sector, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. An arrogant and persistent man, Maston had originally been a surveillance agent for the ISB on Genesia, before being promoted to the lead investigator in Brak Sector. Like his military counterparts, General Lacmar and Admiral Trier, Maston was unable to determine the extent of Alliance activity throughout Brak Sector, despite the orders of Imperial Advisor Tilas Magore. (FBS)

a planet liberated by the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. (HR)

Matagorn

this Imperial official worked as a sub-prefect to Prefect Ursellis. Matagorn began chafing at the increased amount of paperwork the Empire was requiring of him, and once declared Tyionsis Cex was nothing more than High Inquisitor Tremayne's "LAACkey," poking fun at both Cex and the LAACDoc system implemented by the Empire. Shortly after leaving work to start a vacation, pieces of Matagorn started showing up in various cities on the planet Kalandis IV. (GG10)

Matale

this was one of the most powerful families who lived on the planet Dantooine, during the centuries leading up to the Great Sith War. The Matale family was the bitter rival of the Sandral family, and many of the long-standing disputes stemmed from land ownership. The Matale Fields were separated from the Sandral Fields by a small patch of land known as The Grove, which held a certain mystery for the Jedi Knights who lived on Dantooine during that time. Matale Grounds this was the name of a large, open plain found on the planet Dantooine. The Matale Fields were located north of the Sandral Fields, which were separated by the tract known as The Grove. (KOTOR)

Matale, Ahlan

this man was the patriarch of the Matale family, and lived on the planet Dantooine some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. Ahlan, whose family had been in a feud with the Sandrals for many years, blamed the kidnapping of his son, Shen, on the Sandral family. He claimed that it was in retaliation for the destruction of several Sandral droids that had wandered onto the Matale Grounds. Ahlan went to the Jedi enclave on Dantooine and demanded that the Jedi help mediate the dispute. The investigation revealed that Shen had, in fact, been at the Sandral Estate, but that he had fallen in love with Rahasia Sandral. Despite his misgivings, Ahlan realized that he couldn't control his son's life forever. He reluctantly agreed to a truce with Nurik Sandral, since their children were obviously in love. (KOTOR)

Matale, Shen

this young man, the son of Ahlan Matale, was kidnapped some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. Ahlan, whose family had been in a feud with the Sandrals for many years, blamed the kidnapping on the Sandral family. He claimed that it was in retaliation for the destruction of several Sandral droids that had wandered onto the Matala Grounds. An investigation by the Jedi Knights revealed that Shen had been a prisoner at the Sandral Estate, but not because of the incident with the droids. Nurik Sandral had discovered that his own daughter, Rahasia, was in love with Shen, and they had been secretly meeting together in spite of the family feud. Nurik had Shen taken captive, but the Jedi Knights intervened and freed Shen. Nurik was forced to admit the kidnapping, and he and Ahlan formed a tenuous truce after learning of their children's love for one another. (KOTOR)

this man was a noted media correspondent and holo-documentarian from the planet Eriadu. For an unknown reason, Matalis held a grudge against the Trade Federation. In order to exact a measure of revenge on the Federation, Matalis "disappeared" and assumed the identity of Havac, several years before the Battle of Naboo. (COD)

Matalok

this Yuuzhan Vong starship was analogous to a picket ship or customs vessel. The matalok was used to defend worldships and other capital-scale vessels. Each matalok was equipped with arrest tentacles that could be used to grab and hold onto an enemy vessel. (SBS)

Matanya A

this orange star, along with its twin Matanya B, were the central bodies in the Belgaroth System. Matanya A was considered the system's primary star. (CCW)

Matanya B

this yellow star, along with its twin Matanya A, were the central bodies in the Belgaroth System. Matanya B was considered the system's secondary star, being smaller than Matanya A. Matanya B was the first of the pair to rise each day, and was also the first to set. (CCW)

Mataou

this desert planet was located in the Anoat Sector of the galaxy, on the edge of the Ivax Nebula. Because of its location in relation to Ison, Mataou served as the primary jump-off for ships traveling Coreward from the outer end of the Corellian Trade Spine to the Ison Corridor. The Mataou Fuel Station also provided refueling facilities for starships moving along the Spine. Much of the planet's economy was based on the sale of ro hypa venom, and the snake wranglers who lived on its fiery surface claimed to be the toughest beings in the galaxy. (WOA33)

Mataou Fuel Station

this space station, located in orbit above the planet Mataou, provided fuel and supplies to ships traveling through the Greater Javin region of the galaxy during the height of the New Order. (WOA33)

Matarcher, Bosbit

this man, a native of the planet Delemede, found himself unknowingly stuck in a time dilation event while in hyperspace. Two centuries before the Clone Wars, he left Delemede on a regular run, but a problem with the relativistic shielding on his ship during a short hyperspace run. Matarcher thought he had been gone just a few hours, but returned from hyperspace to discover that nearly 200 years had passed since his departure. (HNN4)

Matarri

this planet was noted for its sudden, monsoon rainstorms that contained pounding raindrops that could literally kill small animals. (SWI77)

Mateil, Casandra

this woman was one of the best swoop racers on the planet Mana'an, during the era of the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Material Synthesis

a Gree technology, material synthesis involves the reconfiguration of matter by requantification of its nuclear structure. This allows the Gree to take common materials - such as silicon, carbon, and hydrogen - and create rare and valuable isotopes and elements. (SWJ8)

Matha

this Evocii child was orphaned on the moon of Nar Shaddaa, during the early years of the New Order. Matha was rescued by Angela Krin and a group of freelance agents who were working for Vago the Hutt, after she was attacked by a group of vrbllthers. Matha took the group to meet her grandfather, Sorgoth, and the rest of her Evocii clan. (TF)

Mathal

this agent of the Black Sun organization was dispatched to Drongar during the height of the Clone Wars, to confront Admiral Tarnese Bleyd about his part in providing black-market bota for sale to the rest of the galaxy. Bleyd had no intention of bowing to Black Sun, and arranged to have Mathal eliminated. Bleyd lured Mathal into a remote section of his MedStar frigate and challenged him to a fight, a fight that Mathal eagerly accepted. The mercenary never had a chance, as Bleyd quickly killed him in order to avoid anyone stumbling onto their battle. Bleyd then returned Mathal's body to his starship, and arranged to make it appear that the Black Sun agent had left the MedStar. Bleyd set Mathal's ship to fly over Separatist-controlled space, where it was promptly shot down and destroyed. However, the ruse didn't fool the Black Sun spy known as Kaird, who later confronted Bleyd. Unknown to both parties, Mathal had been planning to steal bota for his own profit, a fact that was only revealed during the confrontation between Bleyd and Kaird. (MBS)

Matham

this Imperial stormtrooper was stationed at the garrison in Hullis, on the planet Halmad, during the early years of the New Republic. (IF) this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was commanded by Imperial Admiral Coy during the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. The Mathavus served as Darth Vader's flagship, during a mission to Dargulli to eliminate a possible Jedi Knight. When a distress signal came from an Alliance base near Yorn Skot, Vader allowed Admiral Coy to take his ship and intercept the rebels. Unfortunately for Coy, the Alliance had laid a trap for the Imperials. The ship which was intercepted by the Mathayus was a decoy, laden with explosives that were set to go off should the ship's hull be breached. First Officer Atali's team opened the ship up, setting off the explosives and badly damaging the Mathayus's hangar bay. The entire sidetrip had been arranged by Captain Dezsetes, as part of Grand Moff Trachta's plans to take over the galaxy. Vader, however, managed to survive the explosion. (SWI62, SWEB)

Mathayus

this Sullustan tactical officer worked for Nolaa Tarkona, and flew with Raabakyysh against the New Republic fleet during the race to recover the Emperor's Plague. (TEP)

Ma'tien

an ancient Jedi Master. (TOJC)

Matl, Rigard

this man was the leader of Shocker Squadron, charged with defending the Jedi Knight base on Eclipse during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. He was not Force-sensitive, as many of his squadron-mates were not, but he was loyal to the Jedi cause. Matl worked with Kyp Durrone and Saba Sebatyne to devise a complete defensive strategy, and later participated in ill-fated defense of Coruscant. He was a former TIE Fighter pilot who hated war with a passion, but found himself fighting in every major battle since the start of the Galactic Civil War. During the evacuation and defense of Eclipse, Rigard's X-Wing was destroyed by Yuuzhan Vong fire, but he managed to eject in time to avoid being killed in the explosion. Despite being extra-vehicular, Rigard still ordered his pilots to regroup and take the battle to the aliens. (SBS)

Matoone, Berl

this man, a moisture farmer and noted drunkard, was brutally murdered on his homeworld of Beheboth, some four years after the Battle of Endor. Darial Anglethorn, the newly-elected peacekeeper of the city of Prosperity, investigated the crime, but disappeared for many days. When she was found by Luke Skywalker, it appeared that she had survived a bomb blast that killed a large group of Tirrith. Matoone's body was recovered from his moisture farm, and Dr. Hower Jerimott was surprised to discover that all of Berl's blood had become toxic, seemingly poisoned from the inside out. Dr. Jerimott and Darial both agreed that Berl's death seemed to have been caused by the Tirrith, but were at a loss as to the motivation behind it. (PH)

Matrik

this man was living on Taris, during the era of the Great Sith War, when a bounty was placed on his head. Matrik had done nothing wrong, and spent many weeks hiding in the Lower City until he was apprehended by the survivors of the Endar Spire. They helped Matrik fake his own death, then claimed the bounty from Zax. They then gave the credits to Matrik and allowed him to escape. (KOTOR)

Matrin, Quorl

this man, a former member of the Imperial Senate, served as the Imperial Governor of the planet Stenos, during the height of the New Order. He struggled to keep the locals in line, while keeping an eye out for any rebellious activity. When Luke Skywalker found the lost statue of Vol, Rik Duel betrayed him and his Alliance team to Matrin. However, Matrin was unprepared for the actions of the native Stenaxes, who had been searching for Vol for generations. Matrin had paid Duel handsomely to recover the relic, but never expected Duel to shout that Matrin was defaming the god. In anger, the Stenaxes tore Matrin to shreds. (MC70, MC71)

Matrix Armor

this strong material is often used in the formation of starship hulls. It is stronger than durasteel, and can withstand blaster fire better than titanium. (TT)

Matrix, The

this was the name given to the industrial-strength sound system created for the Glow Dome on Adarlon. Over 1,000 separate speakers provide the sound, which could be played from slugs, audio disks, or live performances. Much of The Matrix was coupled to the intricate and intoxicating light show created by Lytos Urtell, further enhancing the hypnotic quality of the SenseLights. (WSV)

Matta

this slave woman was a friend of Shmi Skywalker, and was owned by Dengula the Hutt in Mos Espa. Shmi and Matta often helped each other out, when one got sick and couldn't finish their quota of work. (E1A5)

Mattac

this outlaw tech grew up as a port brat on Nar Shaddaa, and eventually hired on as a technician with a local smuggler. When the smuggler was caught by an Imperial patrol, Mattac was imprisoned and sent away for incarceration. He managed to escape the brig and make his way to an escape pod, and he blasted away and landed on Genesia. He eventually established an illegal starship refitting operation in Brenn, where he was known for his excellent work and demanding business dealings. (HR) a plant native to the Forest Moon of Endor, the mattberry produces a sweet berry that is used by the Ewoks to make juice. The juice can also be fermented into a somewhat bitter brew. (ISU)

Mattberry

Matter-Antimatter Reactor

an experimental power source which uses the collision of matter and anti-matter particles to generate large amounts of energy. There are a number of concerns with this type of generator: how to contain the anti-matter without annihilating the container, and how to effectively generate enough energy to create antimatter. (SWSB)

Matthews, Tev

this Alliance Colonel was involved with the Alliance almost from the beginning, serving with distinction during the liberation of Galleefryn II before opening up secret supply routes through the Corporate Sector. However, an information leak allowed data on these missions to reach the Empire, and was eventually captured. Just before capture, though, Tev managed to get his son, Ty, out of the Corporate Sector on a smuggling ship. Tev later died under interrogation. (TBSB)

Matthews, Ty

the son of Tev Matthews, Ty joined the Alliance at the young age of fifteen, eager to support the cause his father so deeply believed in. Ty was adopted by his father's old unit, after Tev was killed while under Imperial interrogation. Demonstrating a skill with circuit repair and an understanding of technology, Ty was eventually assigned as a computer technician aboard the Home One. He further distinguished himself while on the Mon Calamari cruiser, and soon found himself on Admiral Ackbar's staff. He earned the rank of Lieutenant, and was later responsible for decrypting the contents of the Imperial message drone captured in the wake of the Battle of Endor. (TB, TBSB)

Matto

this mercenary was noted for his proposal to arm an RM-2020 espionage droid for combat usage. (FTD)

Mauler

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was part of the security force protecting Kuat Drive Yards during the early years of the New Republic. It took a heavy pounding from the Iron Fist, during Zsinj's attempt to steal the Razor's Kiss. (IF)

Maulers

this gang of small-time thugs caused all sorts of problems on their homeworld of Naboo during the Galactic Civil War. (GQRG)

Maungur

this creature, native to the polar regions of the planet Rishi, held a place in the mythology and legends of the planet. According to legend, the maungur was "conflict incarnate," not necessarily evil but representing the chaos which must be addressed by living beings. The name maungur meant "a spirit of violent, senseless conflict that cannot be reasoned with" in the language of the Rishii. Standing up to three meters in height, the average maungur resembled a shambling, four-legged beast with flexible, tentacle-like limbs known as kithaji. Their sharp snouts ended in a hooked beak, which was used to eviscerate their prey. (SWJ4)

Maur, Dovin

this old man claimed to have survived the birth of the New Order and the destruction of the Jedi Knights at the hands of Emperor Palpatine. He held the Jedi in reverence, and after settling on Lazerian IV, Maur kept secret the location of the Jedi ruins on the continent of Laz. (TSK)

Mavikk Jumka

this Kadas'sa'Nikto was part of a gang that created havoc on the Outland Transit Station during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. He was arrested and sent to the Ooov IV prison facility for his part in the crimes, and managed to negotiate a shorter sentence in return for providing information on his partners. For reasons unknown, the Outland police force issued a bounty for his capture, asking that he die a terrible death for his crimes. (BH)

Mavin

this young male was a member of the Five. He killed Vor Childermoss and Leelu after they taunted Suzal and the Five. He used the Black Fireclaw to kill them. Mavin was killed by Wuzzek when Chewbacca freed the creatures from the Menagerie. (CSWDW)

Mavinian Cluster-wedding Organ

this unusual, musical instrument was considered edgy for its time, during the height of the Clone Wars. (TCD)

Mavis

this young girl was the daughter of an Alliance crewman who served aboard the Republic's Return. (SWJ11)

Mavrille Street

this thoroughfare was located in the city of Calius saj Leeloo, on the plante Berchest. It was here that Luke Skywalker and Talon Kaarde started to track the possible sources of the clones being produced by Grand Admiral Thrawn. (TLC)

Mavron

this Imperial Lieutenant served under Admiral Pellaeon aboard the Chimaera, after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. Mavron was sent to chase down any possible leads as to the origin of the pirate attack on the Chimaera shortly after the Caamas Incident. He was able to trace the pirates - under the command of Zothip - back to the source of their orders, on Bastion. He also discovered the meeting Moff Disra had with Bosmihi on Kroctar, and discovered that Grand Admiral Thrawn was behind the negotiations. (VOF)

Mavron, Osira

this woman was a minor Imperial Army soldier, but was regularly recognized for her bravery in the face of battle. During the pacification of Praadost II, she fought against a group of dedicated Alliance forces who seemed to be possessed. When she entered their location and tried to root them out, she discovered that the Alliance soldiers were trying to protect a refugee camp hidden in an underground cave. Osira saw that the Imperial forces were expending huge amounts of ammunition and killing a large number of beings in order to wipe out a group of pitiful refugees. She immediately decided to defect from the Empire, no longer believing that strength and force were the correct tools for governing the galaxy. Once she was accepted by the Alliance, she spent her career teaching commandos about guerrilla warfare and Imperial tactics. (HR)

Maw

this huge beast was one of the Dark Jedi who worked with Jerec. Humanoid in shape, Maw was incredibly massive, loyal to no one but himself, and he had a flagrant disregard for human life. Although large and muscular, Maw was also quite fast in battle. When Jerec interrogated Qu Rahn about the location of the Valley of the Jedi, Maw was injured during Rahn's brief defense. The injuries required that Maw's legs be amputated and replaced with a small repulsor chair. He quickly adjusted to life in the chair, and used it to his advantage when battling an enemy. When injured, Maw would go into a berserker rage, spinning wildly in his chair while swinging his lightsaber. For all his power, though, Maw was defeated by Kyle Katarn during the search for the Valley of the Jedi. (DF2)

Maw Installation

an Imperial base on the inside of The Maw, created by Grand Moff Tarkin and dedicated to the creation of new, powerful weapons. Tarkin intercepted the memos detailing the discovery of the Maw, quietly removing the exploration team and hiding all records from their travels. He then began working on blueprints and staffing assignments, choosing scientists and engineers with no family ties to work in solitude. It was constructed without the Emperor's knowledge, and was operated by 180,000 engineers, scientists, and support staff. It is a conglomerate of asteroids and Imperial construction that houses laboratories, factories, and meeting halls. It was guarded by 4 Star Destroyers under the command of Tarkin's lover, Admiral Daala. The scientists at The Maw created the initial plans for the Death Star and the World Devastator. They were also responsible for the development of the Sun Crusher. However, when Han Solo and Chewbacca accidentally discovered the existence of the Maw some ten years after the death of Tarkin and the fall of the Empire, Daala was completely unprepared for the news. She took her fleet out of the Maw in an attempt to attack the New Republic, but was left undefended by Daala. Han and Kyp Durron managed to escape in the Sun Crusher, with the help of Qwi Xux, and warn the Republic of its existence. The New Republic tried to overtake the base, but Daala returned and destroyed it, rather than let it fall into Rebel hands. Many years later, the abandoned remains of the Maw were cobbled together by Han Solo and a team of engineers, so that the Maw could be used to hide Jedi students during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. This new space station became known as Shelter, and it was here that many wounded Jedi recovered from their injuries. When Luke Skywalker and his wife, Mara Jade Skywalker, set out for the Unknown Regions in search of Zonama Sekot, they left their infant son Ben at the Maw Installation, under the care of Kam Solusar and Tionne. (JS, JASB, EL1, UF)

Maw Luur

this immense creature was bio-engineered by the Yuuzhan Vong as a waste disposal system. A single maw luur could be placed aboard a worldship, where its vast capillary network absorbed waste materials and digested it, creating metals, nutrients, and air. The maw luur was often fitted into the living exoskeleton of the ship, providing life-sustaining nutrients to all parts of the ship. Many beings who encountered one of these creatures described it as a mating of a Sarlacc and a trash compactor. (EVC, EVR, UF)

Maw Shipyards

this was one of the three primary starship construction facilities that made up the Kuat Drive Yards. Like its companions, the Maw Shipyards was located in a ring of facilities that orbited the planet Kuat. (CCW)

Maw, The

this collection of black holes was located near the planet Kessel. Its existence was one of the galaxy's strangest mysteries, since it seemed improbable that a group of black holes could exist in such close proximity. The greatest minds in the galaxy have been arguing about its conception: was it a freak of nature, this combination of multiple black holes; or, was it a gateway device created by some lost, ancient civilization. Because of the intense gravity in the area, the Maw was slowly drawing the entire Kessel system into the black holes. (JS, COTF, PH)

this race of pale, pink-skinned humanoids was native to the planet Mawan. Each Mawan had two hearts and shimmering, gray eyes. Their blood vessels lay close to their skin, and it was considered a mark of beauty to have a fine tracery of blue veins contrasting the delicate pink color of their skin. (JQ6)

Mawan

this planet was torn apart by a civil war, known to the natives as the Great Purge, some three years before the Battle of Naboo. The capital city was utterly destroyed, and the government it housed was smashed. The survivors fled into the country, but without a central form of government the planet descended into lawlessness. It became a haven for criminals, and the Galactic Senate ignored the plight of the planet in the face of the rising opposition of the Separatists. When attention could be diverted from its other duties, the Senate finally asked the Jedi Knights to send a team to Mawan to help bring the criminal elements under control and form a central government. Yaddle, assisted by Obi-Wan Kenobi and his apprentice, Anakin Skywalker, were sent to the planet about three years before the Battle of Geonosis. (JQ6)

Mawat

this youth, a native of the planet Melida/Daan, was the leader of the Scavenger Young. He was instrumental in digging a tunnel to the spaceport in Zehava, during the struggle between The Young and their elders of the Daan and Melida. He later became one of Nield's chief lieutenants, although it was later revealed that it was Mawat, acting in an effort to cause a confrontation, who supplied arms to both The Young and the elders of the Daan and Melida shortly before Cerasi's death. Mawat wanted to rule Zehava for himself, and believed Nield was weakening under the stress of leadership. Mawat went so far as to place snipers in the buildings surrounding the Hall of Evidence on Glory Street, where Wehutti and Nield confronted each other, in case either backed down. It was one of Mawat's snipers who killed Cerasi and started the firefight. Mawat tried to rally his forces and defeat Nield, but Qiu-Gon Jinn displayed a hologram of Cerasi, recorded shortly before her death, in which she pleaded for peace. Mawat, who had secretly loved Cerasi, threw down his arms and surrendered. (UP)

Mawber, Ref

this Imperial Security Bureau agent worked for Moff Bendor, and was at the head of a network of spies which infiltrated the various criminal organizations on the planet Questal. He was friends with - and worked with - Mar Barezz, during the capture of Alliance agent Tiree. (GCQ)

Mawbo's Performance Hall

this large dance hall was located on the planet Tatooine during the early years of the New Republic. Owned by Mawbo Kem, this building contained a large convention center as well as the main concert hall. It was here that the Killik Twilight was to be auctioned off to the highest bidder, some three years after the Battle of Endor. A large portion of the building was damaged when Imperail troops opened fire on the bidders, in an effort to prevent the moss-painting from falling into non-Imperial hands. (TG)

Mawgax

this species of herd beast was native to the moon of Yavin 4, and was believed to have descended from bio-engineered stock. (GQRG)

Mawhonic

a native of the planet Hok, this Gran was one of Tatooine's best pod racers, although he invariably lost races to Sebulba. During the Boonta Eve Classic which was eventually won by young Anakin Skywalker, Mawhonic's green GPE-3130 pod was disabled when the Gran swerved to avoid Sebulba, but crashed into a massive rock formation and exploded. The Gran was believed to have died in the crash, but survived and eventually returned to the podracing circuit. (SW1, TPM, IG1, ETM)

Mawin

this was a common name among Cerean females. Unlike their male counterparts, Cerean females use a single name unless they became a bond-wife. In this case, a female will take on their husband's grandfather's name for official matters. The name Mawin referred to a dancer or actress. A more archaic form indicated a woman who wore costumes. (GCG)

Mawin

this Cerean woman was one of Ki-Adi-Mundi's four honor-wives, and was the mother of his daughter Slyvn. Like many Cerean honor-wives, she resented Ki's bond-wife, Shea, but lived in a quietly neutral relationship with her. (PTR)

Mawkran

this Mantellian savrip was the leader of a clan which tried to oppose Taxer Sundown, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Mawkran and his group were part of a once-strong clan that had been decimated by attacks from the villagers. The villagers had been incited by Sundown to kill the savrips, after he blamed his own murders on the savrips. Mawkran rescued Nella Bold after she was captured by Sundown's goons, and tried to attack Qui-Gon Jinn when he tried to locate Nella. Mawkran revealed that the two savrips which killed Baron Sando of Vena had been captured and enslaved by Sundown for his own goals. Mawkran was mistakenly killed by the villagers who later tried to rescue Nella, believing Sundown's claims that the savrips were the cause of all their problems. (LSOM)

Mawkren

this small, reptilian creature is considered to be an exotic pet by many beings. As infants, mawkrens are extremely delicate. In order to mature away from their homeworld, they require an environment where the temperature, humidity, lighting, and diet mirror their natural one. This makes them hard, but not impossible, to breed. many dealers have learned how to use hormonal drips to maintain the babies until they are mature enough. (VOF)

Ma'w'shiye

this M'shento'su'Nikto assassin was once an undercover agent for the Alliance, when he was a sharpshooter for the Eclipse Team's Twilight Squadron. He spent a great deal of time on Karideph with Akul Witig. He also helped defend Dnalvec against Imperial invasion, and was instrumental in the defense of Corint City during the Empire's attack on Pirik. However, shortly before the Battle of Endor, Ma'w'shiye deserted his squadron, turning eleven comrades over to Imperial firing squads. He continued to harass, and even kill, Alliance agents, and was one of the New Republic's most wanted figures. (SWJ4, GG12)

Mawshunba Zee

this Dug was implicated in a scheme to illegally breed wild nexu for illicit purposes by the Galactic Wildlife Liberation Front, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. The bounty was claimed shortly afterward by Jango Fett, who was on Malastare to obtain an audience with the Dug crimelord Sebolto. (BH)

Mawz Dakko

this Gran criminal was a noted pirate and smuggler who worked from a base on his homeworld of Malastare during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. After he successfully hijacked several shipments of spice from the Hutts, a bounty was placed on his head to return him to Nal Hutta for "questioning". Jango Fett claimed the bounty shortly after the Battle of Naboo, when he was on Malastare seeking an audience with Sebolto. (BH)

Max

this being served as Thurm Loogg's personal assistant during the height of the Clone Wars, and was primarily responsible for writing and teleprompting the various speeches Loogg gave to the people of Cularin. Whenever Loogg misspoke, or said something that might be offensive, he immediately blamed it on Max. (LFCW) born with the name Siiruulian Phantele, this Ortolan was small by the standards of his people. His mother feared that he would waste away to nothing. However, Siiruulian was an excellent musician, and was discovered by Evar Orbus. It was Orbus who decided to change Siiruulian's name to Max Rebo, trying to make it easier for most humans to remember. Max was best known for his keyboard playing. Max became the de facto leader of the band following Orbus' death on Tatooine, at the hands of Figrin D'an and the Modal Nodes. When Naroan Cuthas found the remaining trio in Mos Eisley, Max was approached to play for Jabba the Hutt. When Jabba offered the band all the food they could eat as payment for employment, Max immediately said yes, despite the fact that his bandmates were not going to be paid in credits. Jabba used the band in his attempt to assassinate Bingo Mchendra, but Droopy McCool discovered the bombs which had been planted in their amplifiers. Using holograms, Max and the Band were able to avoid being killed in the resulting explosion, and returned to Tatooine. Jabba, who stopped being angry when he learned of Mchendra's death, bought new instruments for the band and allowed them to expand. The Max Rebo Twelve was formed, including three musicians hand-picked by Jabba to keep an eye on the rest. When Jabba was killed at the Pit of Carkoon, most of the band members jumped off his sail barge before it exploded, and fled into the desert. Max and Sy Snootles teamed up to play for Lady Valarian as the Max Rebo Duo, and Droopy disappeared into the desert. When Sy decided to go solo, Max joined up with the Alliance, claiming that they had better food than the Empire. He served as a cook in many outposts before retiring and starting a line of popular restaurants called Max's Flangth House on eight planets. (ROTJ, TJP, SWI67)

Max Rebo

Max Rebo Band

originally known as Evar Orbus and His Galactic Wailers, the Max Rebo Band was formed after Orbus was killed in a firefight with Figrin D'an and the Modal Nodes. Formed from the trio of jazz-wailers who survived Orbus, the Max Rebo Band consisted of Max Rebo on keyboards, Droopy McCool on various wind instruments, and Sy Snootles as lead vocalist. They were also Mistress Valarian's favorite band, just before the Battle of Yavin. The Devish Labria convinced her that Figrin D'an and the Modal Nodes were better, as part of a plot to get the Nodes to play at the Mos Eisley cantina. This left Jabba the Hutt in a lurch, since he had just hired the Nodes himself, so Jabba ended up hiring the Max Rebo Band. The deal was sealed when Jabba offered Max Rebo a lifetime supply of food as payment, although Max's other bandmates were angry that he had let his stomach speak for them all. The rival bands got into a blaster fight when Fiery Figrin wanted to eliminate the competition, but neither band prevailed. Instead, the Modal Nodes remained at the Mos Eisley Cantina while Jabba took in the Max Rebo Band. By the time the band was hired by Jabba, though, they had added six additional players and a trio of dancing backup singers. Three of these new musicians, however, were actually spies within Jabba's organization, inserted into the band to ensure they weren't going to be a threat to the crimelord's existence. At this point, the band was known as the Max Rebo Twelve. In the aftermath of Jabba's death near the Pit of Carkoon, the band dissolved and its members went their separate ways. Only Max Rebo and Sy Snootles remained together, playing briefly as the Max Rebo Duo before Greeata and Rystall rejoined them. They again adopted the Max Rebo Band as their name, although Sy Snootles eventually went solo. (ROTJ, TME, RJSE, SWDB, SWI67)

Max Rebo Duo

this was the name adopted by Max Rebo and Sy Snootles, after they survived the death of Jabba the Hutt. Of the twelve members who played for Jabba, only Max and Sy decided to remain together when the band broke up, and they played a few engagements for Lady Valarian. Shortly afterward, Greeata and Rystall rejoined them, and they once again went by the Max Rebo Band. (SWI67)

Max Rebo Fan Club

this fan club emerged during the height of the Galactic Civil War, and was dedicated to keeping the fans of Max Rebo and his bands aware of news and happenings. (SWI67)

Max Rebo Twelve

this was the name adopted by the Max Rebo Band when they played at Jabba the Hutt's palace, shortly before the crimelord's death. In addition to the original members Max Rebo, Droopy McCool, and Sy Snootles, the band included Greeata, Lyn Me, and Rystall as dancers; Joh Yowza on vocals; Barquin D'an and Rappertunie on accompanying instruments; and three of Jabba's own henchmen, Ak-Rev, Umpass-Stay, and Dodo Bodonawieedo. (SWI67)

Maxeena Sov'Iya

this female Bothan was a petty crime lord who was also a member of Kothlis' high society. A native of Kothlis, she remained on the planet when her parents returned to Bothawui, taking control of the family enterprises and expanding her business into a small empire. Very few beings knew that she had extensive contacts in the criminal underworld, and she worked hard to keep them a secret. To preserve the secret, she left much of the day-to-day operations of her criminal activities to a Bothan she called Uncle Dravos. (PSG)

this Old Republic Senator was accused of corruption about a year before the Battle of Naboo. Chancellor Valorum put off responding to the charges in the face of the Trade Federation's petition to arm their freighters, after the Nebula Front destroyed the Revenue. (COD)

this Lieutenant in the Pembric Security Legionnaire force was also working for Crev Bombassa. (VOF)

MaxMode Lifter

this underwater flotation lifter was manufactured by Halleycraft, for use in bringing small loads up from the bottom of the ocean. (SWJ1)

Maxo Vista

this male Euceron was a noted athlete, perhaps most famous for winning five events at the Galactic Games on Berrun just before the Battle of Naboo. Among his greatest victories was in the swoop race, where he unexpectedly set a galactic record for the fastest run through a holographic obstacle course. He later served as a Galactic Games official when they were held on his homeworld of Euceron seven years later. After the death of timekeeper Aarno Dering and the discovery a plot to implicate Old Republic Senators in gambling and other felonies, Obi-Wan Kenobi discovered that it was Maxo Vista who had killed Dering and nearly assassinated the Jedi Knights who were on Euceron to help preserve the peace during the Games. Vista was able to capture Obi-Wan and force him to participate in a holographic obstacle course, hoping to kill the Jedi while he himself was well-prepared for the event. Obi-Wan embarrassed him, though, and Maxo Vista was forced to flee Eusebus in shame. Unfortunately for Maxo Vista, the Jedi Knights also discovered that he was behind the rigging of the illegal pod races being staged in the Great Dordon Caves, which were to smash into a crowded part of the city. Obi-Wan and Siri Tachi, also on Euceron, brought Maxo Vista to the Ruling Council for judgement. Further investigation into Maxo Vista's dealing revealed that he had been submitted to membership to the Commerce Guild by Liviani Sarno, as part of the plan to discredit the Senators who were voting against the Guild. Unfortunately for the Jedi, Maxo Vista was allowed to go free when Big Dividian refused to testify against him. Worst of all, he was never tried for the murder of Aarno Dering. (JQ3) calling himself a "self-employed citizen," Phoggus Maxx was a back-alley conman who worked in Nexus City, on Entralla, during the early years of the New Republic. Known as Phoggy, he was known as a man who could obtain restricted or outlawed items in limited quantities. To this end, he called himself the "King of the Back Alley Deals." (SWJ4)

Maxx, Phoggus

Maya Kovel

this windswept planet, located in the Moddell Sector of the Outer Rim Territories, was the homeworld of the Ayrou race. The atmosphere of the planet was quite thin, and was considered acrid to the taste and smell. It was regularly scoured by intense windstorms, leaving the iron-rich soil and rock exposed to the air. This gave the planet a reddish cast when viewed from space. Where the rock had cracked into chains of rift valleys, a strange lichen took root. Green in color, this lichen would erupt from its seedcase when out of the wind and near water. These seedcases could remain viable for centuries until the correct conditions could be met. (UANT, GMR9)

Mayagil Sector

Mayda, Desto

this young man was a student at the University of Garos during the early years of the New Republic, and was a member of the underground freedom fighters led by Carl Barzon. He was named for his father, who was executed by the Empire for being a member of the rebel underground during the early years of the New Order. (SWJ3, SWJ5)

Mayda, Desto

this man was one of the founding members of the Committee of Seven for Garosian Unification. His resolve to fight back against the Empire was hardened when his eldest son, Jos, was shot and killed by Imperial scout troopers while on vacation with his friend, Dair Haslip. (SWJ5)

Mayda, Jos

this young man was the son of Desto Mayda and a childhood friend of Dair Haslip, and planned to attend the Raithal Academy with him. When the Empire arrived to take control of Garos IV, Dair and Jos were exploring the caves of Mount Usca when they came upon an Imperial patrol. The scout troopers attacked, believing them to be members of the rebel underground. Jos was shot and killed before Dair could react, but Dair managed to kill both troopers. Jos' death was the event which made Dair switch his alliance from the Empire to the underground rebels. (SWJ5)

Maydh

this young Ferroan was part of the group that discovered the still-living body of the Yuuzhan Vong priest Harrar, shortly after Nom Anor tried to kill the priest before he sabotaged Zonama Sekot. Maydh agreed to accompany Luke Skywalker to interrogate Harrar, before the Ferroans exacted their own form of justice to the alien invader. After hearing the Yuuzhan Vong's words, Maydh convinced his elders that Harrar was not a threat, as Nom Anor had been. (UF)

Mayn

this was one of the most common human surnames encountered in the galaxy. (GCG)

Mayn, Lela

this woman, a native of the planet Commenor, traveled to Coruscant during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis to pursue an education in architecture. She studied briefly at Coruscant University before discovering the nightlife at the Outlander Club, and never truly graduated before she found herself pregnant. Her daughter, Todra, grew up and eventually joined the Alliance. (SWI75)

Mayn, Todra

this woman, a native of the planet Commenor, served as the leader of the New Republic's Polearm Squadron during the hunt for Warlord Zsinj. She was the daughter of Lela Mayn. She proved herself to be a leader in battle conditions, and was eventually promoted to the rank of Captain during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. She was given command of the newly-commisioned Lancer-class frigate Pride of Selonja in the wake of the injuries she suffered at the Second Battle of Coruscant. (SOC, FH1, SWI75)

Mayro

this resort world was located in the Corporate Sector. It was here that Authority agents first contacted Torm Dadefferon about becoming an agent and exposing his father. (CSA, SWDB)

Mayvitch 7

this moon of the planet Amador was chosen for colonization by the Immalians, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. The neighboring Yinchorri objected to the settelement, and launched an attack on the moon. They wiped out the entire population, but not before a distress call could be sent to Coruscant. In response, the Jedi Knights were dispatched to put a stop to the Yinchorri aggression. (AOW)

Mazanga

this Dug soldier was a member the bodyguards who protected the crimelord Sebolto during the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo. A bounty for his capture was issued by Senators Ask Aak and Aks Moe in connection with the murder of several of their special assistance. Jango Fett later claimed this bounty during his attempt to locate Sebolto on Malastare. (BH)

Mazara

this female Falleen was the leader of a small rebel movement that sprang up during the years just prior to the Clone Wars, when a manufacturing boom swept the planet. Mazara protested the working and living conditions which resulted from the overdevelopment in Falleen's capital city, arguing that the corporate leaders kept credits and secrets from the masses. She was not a protester by nature, having been trained as a journalist. However, an article she wrote on the Blackwater Systems facility got her into trouble with her editors, who fired her rather than support her work. She took up the cause of the common Falleen, staging small rallies in an attempt to force the workers to see the truth. When Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker arrived on Falleen during their search for Granta Omega, Mazara was able to provide them with information on getting inside the Blackwater Systems facility. (JQ9)

Mazariyan Citadel

this immense fortress, located in the jungles of the planet Xagobah, was actually a living edifice created from a huge fungus. Distinguished by its black color and organic architecture, the Mazariyan fortress resembled the ancient, stepped temples found on Yavin 4. It was unique from these structures, however, in that it was actually alive. Energy arced from the fortress' exterior, appearing as if lightning was running around it. Thick, retractable spines grew along its lower levels, making it nearly impossible to scale, as these spines could shoot outward to impale intruders. Mazariyan survived by feeding on anything it could draw into its walls, including raw energy whenever necessary. The citadel was usurped by Wat Tambor during the height of the Clone Wars. Tambor had been searching for a place where he could hide from the fighting, and believed that the Mazariyan was remote enough to protect him. To ensure his survival, Tambor altered the genetics of many of Xagobah's plants and fungus, turning them into vicious killers. Unfortunately, nearly three years into the fighting, the Army of the Republic laid siege to the fortress, in an effort to capture Tambor as a war criminal. Tambor managed to escape, however, because his own Techno Union forces had been augmented by General Grievous. The Republic bombarded the citadel, tearing huge chunks of living material from its walls until it was abandoned by the Separatists. (BF5, BF6)

Maze, The

this spacers' bar was located on an unspecified planet in the Mid Rim. (IA)

Maze, The

a hangout frequented by Maarek Stele and Pargo on Kuan. (TIE)

Maze-fly

a swarming insect native to Aduba-3, maze-flies were slow-moving insects which could easily be swatted out of the air. (MC10)

Mazer

this predator was one of the few creatures that existed on the surface of the planet Ryloth. (GCG)

Mazer

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name referred to a predator that lived on the surface of Ryloth. (GCG)

Mazer Rackus

this Twi'lek, distinguishable by his piercing green eyes, has been a criminal since his childhood days. He stole his first starship - from his father - at the age of sixteen. However, he crashed the ship on an Alliance-held world, and was held for questioning. He was able to convince the Alliance of his "loyalties," and was let go. He maintained a sliver of support for the Alliance. (GG9)

Maze-stalk

this plant, grown on Aduba-3, produced several products which were a staple in the diet of the planet's human population. Once a year, each maze-stalk produced a succulent melon. The flesh of the melon was used in a number of bland dishes, while the husk was fashioned into cloth and other items. (MC9, GMR4)

Mazie

this young Twi'leki female had been living on Tatooine with her family when they were captured and enslaved by Krayn, and forced to work in Krayn's spice processing facility on Nar Shaddaa. Ironically, her family had fled Ryloth in order to escape being caught in a slave raid. Mazie's husband was killed in the slave raid on Tatooine, leaving Mazie alone with her daughter. About four years after the Battle of Naboo, Mazie met Anakin Skywalker in the mines, after the young Padawan was also captured by Krayn. Anakin and Mazie worked together as friends, after both distrusted one another at the start. Mazie later revealed to Anakin that her daughter, Berri, was a domestic worker in Krayn's household, a position she obtained because Krayn favored her beauty. Mazie agreed to help Anakin instigate a slave revolt by making contact with a core group of rebels. Anakin's initial destruction of a group of guard droids emboldened the slaves, and the revolt grew swiftly. In the ensuing slave struggle, and with the death of Krayn, Mazie and Berri were freed. (JQ)

Maziel

this was a common name among the Falleen. (UANT)

Mazong

this Highborn Ansionian was the leader of the Yiwa clan, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. When Obi-Wan Kenobi and Luminara Unduli, along with their Padawans Anakin Skywalker and Barris Offee, traveled to Ansion to negotiate a treaty between the city-dwellers and the Alwari nomads, Mazong agreed to help them by providing directions to the current location of the Borokii overclan's encampment, but only after the Jedi provided the Yiwa with entertainment. While his directions were fairly detailed, Mazong indicated that the Borokii, like all other Alwari clans, was nomadic and might not be in the place he believed. (APS)

Mazral, Keelii

this woman was a fifteen-year veteran of the ThunderForce mercenary unit, and the old surviving member at the height of the Galactic Civil War. She assumed control of the unit, using her shrewd negotiating skills to obtain the best jobs and fees for the unit. (HAS) this planet was the headquarters of the Lucre Cosminational Bank. It was here that Han Solo and Lando Calrissian stopped to celebrate their capture of the Millennium Falcon prototype from Tharkos and Moff Tarkin. The Alliance base on Mazuma provided them with a reward. This was an early description of how Han Solo and Lando Calrissian obtained the Millennium Falcon, but it is inconsistent with the fact that the Millennium Falcon is really an old Corellian Engineering YT-1300. (CSWDW)

Mazuma

Mazumoda

this Worrite thug worked in the criminal underground of Coruscant for many decades, serving as a kind of bodyguard and enforcer to a number of crimelords, but never fully allying himself with any one of them. (CCW)

Maz-Verlin

this was only city established on the planet Vernet. It was surrounded by a wealth of grain silos built to hold the chorba which was grown by the planet's farmers. (SWJ15)

Mazzag

this was a common name used by the Geonosian race. (UANT)

Mazzic

a major smuggling chief during the early years of the New Republic, Mazzic and his outfit were often described as militant. He ensured that his people were equipped for many combat operations, from hand-held weapons to large assault starships. Mazzic was a tall, muscular Corellian who was deeply suspicious of the Empire, and he took every opportunity to take credits for their work. He had formerly worked as a legitimate shipper for the Corporate Sector Authority, before he discovered the benefits of illegal cargoes and went into smuggling. Five years after the Battle of Endor, Mazzic helped Ellor destroy an unfinished Star Destroyer at the Bilbringi shipyards, just prior to Grand Admiral Thrawn's attack on Coruscant. Shortly afterward, Mazzic was captured by the Imperials and brought aboard the Chimaera for questioning. Much to his surprise, Thrawn merely stated that he understood the destruction of the Star Destroyer was simply a retaliation for the attack on the smugglers at the Whistler's Whirlpool on Trogan, and offered to allow Mazzic to leave. Of course, Mazzic had to live with the realization that Thrawn had captured him rather swiftly after the event, and then let him go. Thrawn then used Niles Ferrier to plant a rigged datadisk aboard the Wild Karrde, with false information that named Karrde himself as the individual who called for the Imperial raid on Trogan. Ferrier then hinted to Mazzic that Karrde was hiding something, setting up a grand scheme to discredit Karrde in front of the other smugglers. However, Ferrier misspoke about the datacard's contents, incriminating himself and unburdening Karrde of any doubt. (TLC, TTSB)

Mazzoney

a four-armed alien of unknown origins, Mazzoney was also distinguished by the orange hair that grew on his head. He had brown skin, and was extremely muscular and strong. His mouth was filled with sharp teeth, and his face is heavily scarred. He ran a bar in the city of Selkren, on Demophon. (SN)

M'Buele, Katya

this woman, a native of the planet Corellia, was a romantic acquaintance of Han Solo's, having served with Solo aboard a smuggling ship in the years after Solo left Imperial service. Several years before the Battle of Yavin, Katya was one of the few smugglers who got paid for their part in the Battle of Ylesia. She re-entered his life years later on Tirahnn, after Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa were nearly captured by Kharys. She agreed to help Solo bring down Kharys, but was killed by a smoke demon before confronting Kharys. (LTA1, RD, MCA1)

MC Utility Sub

this twelve-meter-long craft was built by the Mon Calamari for use in constructing their floating cities. Each sub is equipped with a cutting laser and four clawed arms for deploying probes or collecting samples. (JASB)

MC-18

this Mon Calamari light freighter measured 23.6 meters in length, and could transport up to five passengers and 50 metric tons of cargo. Like all Mon Calamari designs, the MC-18 was often custom-built, and no two ships were exactly the same. (SWJ13)

MC40a Light Cruiser

this was a Mon Calamari starship design which was a smaller version of the MC80a cruiser. Like all Mon Calamari starships, each MC40a was unique. (XWA) this is the baseline Mon Calamari star cruiser. Like all Mon Cal designs, no two MC80s are exactly alike. They were designed as passenger liners. (EGV)

MC80

MC80a Star Cruiser

a series of Mon Calamari space cruiser originally designed as a luxury ship, but later overhauled to become Alliance warships. Each of these ships is a hand-crafted work of art, unique from all others. They appear to be organic in nature, because the Mon Calamari built them with sleek, rounded pods and bulges to contain sensor arrays, weapons batteries, and shield generators. Since they were designed as luxury ships, they have a large number of viewports. This was a problem when they were refitted for military duty, as the large number of viewports reduced the ship's structural integrity. To further protect the MC80, the Mon Calamari covered the viewports with hull components and heavy blast doors. These ships were built specifically for use by Mon Calamari crewmen, and required a great deal of refitting for use by other species. These ships are 1200 meters in length and carry a normal crew of 5,156 officers and 246 gunners, with the ability to transport 1,200 troops. It has been rated at 60 MGLT at sublight speeds. They were designed with triply-redundant shielding, and most other systems had at least double redundancy. This made them extremely battle-effective, but required a great deal of maintenance. The MC80a has the following shipboard components: TriLuna 400 MGS Stardrive and Hyperdrive Motivator, 20 ArMek SW-7 Ion Cannon Batteries, Serridge SEAL Shielding System (rated at 240 SBD), 6 Front-mounted Phylon-Q7 Tractor Beam Projectors, 48 Taim and Bak XV9 Turbolaser Batteries, Plat Dromma Targeting Computer, 6 Fighter Bays (Y-wing Squadrons, 2 X-wing Squadrons, and 1 A-wing Squadron). (SCRE, COTF, RASB, DESB, CHRN)

MC80b

this Mon Calamari star cruiser improved further upon the MC80 and MC80a designs, adding more powerful shields and heavier hull reinforcement. It was designed as a bridge between the primarily civilian MC80 and MC80a cruisers and the MC90 military cruiser. The MC80b measured 1,200 meters in length, and was armed with 48 turbolasers linked in four groups of twelve. Twenty ion cannons were linked in groups of four. Four squadrons of starfighters were housed in the ship's docking bays. (EGV)

MC80B

MC90 Cruiser

this was the first truly military starship designed by the Mon Calamari. They were more modular than the MC80-series, designed to be more consistent with other, non-MC-class starships. The ship's displays were given multiple wavelength settings so that other species could read them. The MC90 had an improved drive system, increased shielding, and better maneuverability. The power generators were upgraded, and interior cargo space was expanded for carrying more starfighters. The Defiance was the first MC90 to see action, during the first Battle of Calamari. These 1,255-meter ships were manned by 5,860 crewmen and 605 gunners, and could transport up to 1,700 troops. They were armed with 75 turbolaser batteries, 30 ion cannon batteries, 8 tractor beam projectors, and 6 proton torpedo/missile tubes. (DE1, DESB, JASB)

this woman was Opun Mcgrrrr's wife. (SWJ11)

Mcgrrrr, Hethra

this Corellian was known as being the founder of the Black Hole Pirates, and was the father of Opun Mcgrrrr. (SWJ11)

Mcgrrrr, Opun

this burly man, known as "The Black Hole," was the son of Hethra Mcgrrrr, although he obtained most of his status from his mother's name. Opun was the owner of the Holiday Towers hotel on Cloud City, until Jabba the Hutt took control in a bloody coup. Mcgrrrr then stole the accounting droid CZ-3 from Jabba's townhouse on Tatooine, during a stay at the townhouse as one of Jabba's guests shortly before the Battle of Yavin. Mcgrrrr hoped to take the data from within CZ-3's brain and use it to blackmail Jabba. Unfortunately, Mcgrrrr didn't know that the droid had been equipped with a miniature transceiver rig, which recorded a number of his criminal doings. Later, the Squib named Mace Windu obtained the droid, and it was later sold by Aguillea at the Jawa Traders store. Mcgrrrr ordered his underling Tols Vengra to recover the droid, which was later destroyed by Zutton. (SWJ11)

McKumb then told Solo that Jabba the Hutt had put a great deal of money on Han's head. (COJ)

M-class Fighter

this large starfighter was developed by the Alliance from the design of the BTL-A4 Y-Wing fighter. The M-class fighter had three engines, each apparently taken from salvaged Y-Wings and mounted on an M-shaped fuselage. The central portion of the fuselage housed a small cargo compartment behind the main cockpit. The front of each wing was swept forward to a point, further emphasizing the craft's M shape. At the tip of each wing was a heavy laser cannon. (AVS)

MD (Emdee) droid

the designation of Industrial Automaton's series of medical droids. These droids were roughly humanoid in stature, and were based marginally on the 2-1B series. As with most forms of droids, there are different classifications of medical droids based on their programming: * MD-O droid: diagnostic droids which perform patient examinations and diagnosis. They are equipped with various medical examination implements, such as thermometers, ultrasounders, and x-rays. * MD-1 droid: laboratory technician droids which conduct all sorts of lab test to analyze and isolate diseases and viruses. * MD-2 droid: anesthesiology droids which administer anesthesia and monitor vital functions during surgery. * MD-3 droid: pharmaceutical droids which analyze, prescribe, and prepare the medicines necessary to combat and prevent disease and infection. They are readily available to most pharmacies, but have been stolen and used by illegal drug dealers. They were also used by the Empire to administer experimental drugs to improve troop loyalty and performance. * MD-4 droid: microsurgery droids which are equipped with miniature vibroscalpels, clamps, and optical sensors used to perform delicate surgery. * MD-5 droid: small, mobile general practitioner droids usually assigned to spaceships when a living doctor is too expensive or unavailable. They can administer first aid and perform simple surgeries. (TLC, JS, DFRSB, FOP, EGD)

MD-10

this series of medical droids was produced by Industrial Automaton, and was one of the most technologically advanced model produced during the early years of the New Republic. (TNR, EGD)

MD-5

an evil Imperial droid working with Trioculus, Emdee has a wide variety of skills, including medical knowledge. He is programmed to obey Trioculus' every command. (GDV) another name for the Industrial Automaton MD-5 medical droid. The 'GP' stood for 'general practitioner.' (SWJ13)

MD-5 GP

MD-6

a series of medical droids produced by Industrial Automaton for use by the Empire. (TNR, EGD)

MD-7

a series of mobile, emergency medical droids developed by Industrial Automaton. They were produced in small quantities, and never really left the prototype stage. (BTS, TNR, EGD)

MD-8

this series of medical droid prototypes was produced by Industrial Automaton in small numbers and used in small sectors. (TNR, EGD)

MD-9

this series of medical droid prototypes was produced by Industrial Automaton in small numbers and used in small sectors. (TNR, EGD)

Mdel

this Nociv was one of the elder leaders of his people, during the Galactic Civil War. His skin displayed the largest number of whorls, indicating that he was the wisest of all the Nociv. When Darth Vader attacked Kadril with pacifog, in an effort to seize all its kunda stones, it was Mdel's dying wish that the Nociv join Luke Skywalker and Han Solo in fighting against the Imperial stormtroopers. (LAT3)

MDF Motivator

this droid motivation device was produced by Merendata for use in the EV-series supervisor droids, but early versions of the motivator were flawed. Droids implanted with flawed MDF motivators tended to be malicious, and often went rogue. (AIR)

Mdimu

this Etti man served as Thrackan Sal-Solo's chief of communications, after Sal-Solo was named President of Ylesia and Commander in Chief of the Peace Brigade. (Y)

MD-OC6

this MD-series droid, known to its many acquaintances as simply Doc, was believed to have coined the name Bartyn's Landing for the primary settlement on the planet Lamaredd, many centuries before the Galactic Civil War. Doc was the chief medical droid for the expedition that located the Lamaro System, and the regular memory wipes that were administered eventually gave the droid a curmudgeonly personality that many beings found quaint. Because he was a droid, Doc could practice medicine at any hour of the day or night, and didn't need sleep or sustenance. Thus, Doc became completely independent, and served Bartyn's Landing loyally for the next several centuries. Doc became a fixture in the day-to-day management of the Landing, and assisted with the operations of the Outer Rim Oreworks installation on Lamaredd. (GMR7)

this handheld medical scanner, produced by Synthtech Medtech provided a wide range of diagnostic capabilities for a small device. (GFT)

MDS-500

this was a model of datapad produced during the last decades of the Old Republic. The MDS-500 was a durable platform, and many survived well into the era of the New Republic. Jacen Solo found a working model on the planet Coruscant, after the Yuuzhan Vong had begun reforming the planet to resemble Yuuzhan'tar. (T)

M'dweshuu

this ancient star is located in the center of the Si'Klaata Cluster. It suddenly exploded at some point many millenia before the Third Battle of Vontor, causing great changes on nearby planets. (GG12)

M'dweshuu Nova

the remnants of the M'dweshuu star, it was discovered by Nikto scientists some time before the Third Battle of Vontor. It hurls great amounts of radiation into the nearby space, creating many uninhabitable worlds and altering life on others. Among the worlds altered by the Nova was Kintan, and produced the five races of Nikto. The impact of the Nova and the radiation it produced gave rise to the Cult of M'dweshuu. (GG12)

MdZ-BLK

this droid was built from a various of parts and pieces, but was at its core an MdZ-series automaton. The auto-balance legs were maintained, and other components added on as needed. The droid was considered unusable by its first owners, being quite stubborn and almost immune to memory wipes. Later, Blockhead (as he became known) was employed by Darion Seville as a gladiator droids, and was forced to fight against protocol droids for Seville's amusement. This formed a deep-seated hatred of protocol droids in MdZ-BLK's memory core, and resolved Blockhead to kill Darion Seville. She was saved by her son, Yearo, who ionized MdZ-BLK and sold it to Gorbu the Hutt. blockhead succeeded in killing Gorbu before finding employment with Aimi Loto. Aimi recognized Blockhead as an individual with rights, which made Blockhead quite happy. As an Alliance saboteur, Blockhead took great pleasure in using protocol droids and remote explosive devices. (CRO)

MdZ-series Droid

this series of droids was built on an advanced locomotive base, and employed auto-balance legs that allowed it to operate in any position. The design was quickly copied by both Industrial Automaton and Cybot Galactica. However, the MdZ's poor body was an inferior knock-off of the S12 design, and the overall performance of the droids suffered. Eventually, the MdZ series was discontinued. (CRO)

Me

this was one of the many Twi'leki clans which were native to the planet Ryloth. In the Twi'leki language, the clan's name meant "fiery" or "hot". (GCG)

Me dwana do bata

this Huttese phrase translated roughly into Basic as "I have work to do," and was used in marketplaces whenever a being had to sell something. (E1A14)

Meade, Jessica

known as Jess, this young woman was a starpilot who assisted Jann Tosh and the droids, R2-D2 and C-3PO, in returning Mon Julpa to Tammuz-an. She first encountered the group on Tyne's Horky, where they were pursued by Yorbo, Zolag, and IG-88. Jess managed to rescue them from Yorbo and Kreb Zellock, then agreed to transport them to Tammuz-an. She later became one of Mon Julpa's closest advisors, but eventually left that position to return to the life of an interstellar trader. (DCAR, SWDB)

Meahonon, Ishale

this red-haired woman was an Imperial scout who served on the Wanderer. When the Wanderer crashed on Isis, Ishale was able to reprogram the navigational computer on the Handree to get the Imperials back to the planet Miser. Once she had programmed the computer, and realizing that Alliance agents were on board, she tried to destroy the computer so that the Alliance wouldn't learn of the Naval base on Miser. (IC)

Mealbread

this was a processed bread product manufactured on Corellia during the early decades of the New Republic. It could be formed into chips, sticks, or a variety of other shapes. (EL2)

Meandering Star

this modified YT-1300 light freighter was owned and operated by Piret Akarias. (OS2)

Mear

this 2.5-meter long, six-legged herbivorous mammal is native to the planet Gacerian. They have large horns and sharp hooves, which serve as a more-than-adequate defense. They live in the mountains of the planet, eating the minimal vegetation there. They are excellent climbers. (PG2)

Meastrinnar

the inhabitants of this world opposed the New Order. (CRO)

Meat Droid

this was a derogatory term used to describe the clone troopers of the Grand Army of the Republic. (MBS)

Meatalo

created in the Moridebo District of the planet Metellos, this meat-and-lard dish was formed into shapes that resembled fruit, before being roasted or baked. (CCW)

Meatlump

this was a processed meat product, manufactured on the planet Corellia during the early decades of the New Republic. (EL2)

Meatlumps

this gang of small-time thugs caused all sorts of problems on their homeworld of Corellia during the Galactic Civil War. (GQRG)

Meatvine

this thick vine, native to the planet Threfal, was known for its fleshy pulp. When cut into pieces, the meatvine could be consumed as a foodsource. (GMR9)

Mec, Prestor

this slave worked in the radioactive elements mines of Sabrix. He discovered that Boss Denedin was skimming off the top of the profits from the mine, and exposed the embezzlement to his superiors. Unfortunately for Mec, Denedin's replacement had him eliminated shortly afterward, in an effort to ensure that no ambitious miner screwed up his plans. (GG11)

Meccamitta, Garven

this man worked as Dean and Chief Surgeon at the Rhinnal State Medical Academy during the height of the New Order. Arrogant and self-assured, Doctor Meccamitta was a genius among geniuses who often rolled his eyes at any being who had to ask him a question. Meccamitta also somewhat mad, often worrying that sick patients were bringing rare or alien contagions to Rhinnal. (CCW)

Meccha

this was one of the major cities located on the planet Drall. During the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, riots spread throughout the city after the New Republic approved a plan to use the Centerpoint Station repulsor as a weapon against the Yuuzhan Vong. (JE, CCW)

Mecetti House Guard

this was the name of the combined army and navy maintained by House Mecetti of Tapani Sector. (LOE)

Mecetti Purge

this era of history within the Tapani Sector occurred more than twenty years before the Battle of Hoth. House Mecetti virtually exterminated House Pelagia, and would have gone on to conquer other Houses if the Empire hadn't stepped in to take control of Tapani Sector. In the end, House Pelagia was able to smuggle out the younger brother and sister of Theus Paddox, thereby giving House Pelagia a chance to rebuild. (TSIA, LOE)

Mechanical Liberation Front

this fanatical organization, founded during the last decades of the Old Republic and led by Jarred Sneel during the height of the New Order, staged many violent hit-and-run assaults against droid manufacturing corporations. The membership of the MLF was formed from a variety of highly-skilled technicians and mercenaries, all of which believed that droids should have certain unalienable rights in the galactic community. Rather than stage peaceful demonstrations, however, the MLF planted bombs in the manufacturing plants of corporations like Industrial Automata and MerenData. They were perhaps best-known for their attempt to "free" a shipment of Vindicator XM-15 "brilliant" missiles near Havridam City, on the planet New Bakstre. Fourteen MLF members were killed in the operation, which also destroyed more than 2,000 square kilometers of the city, when the missiles were detonated due to the activists' ineptitude. (FTD, HNN5)

Mechanical Universal Labor Eliminator Droid

developed by Les Tech and known by the brand name of PackTack, this droid was designed to pack and carry equipment for scouts and explorers. Known in sales brochures as the 41LT-R, many scouts simply called it the MULE. These equine automata were equipped with a heavy lifting claw, a large storage bay, and a small repulsor engine. (GG8, EGD)

MechBlaze Tracking Corporation

this manufacturer created several grades of tracking devices, including the Observer. (CFG)

MechGill

this is a form of personal rebreather used by scouts and explorers to extract oxygen from most liquid mediums. (GG8)

Mechis III

a planet which is home to some of the galaxy's finest droid specialists. The rogue IG-88 droids fled to Mechis III after escaping from the Holowan Laboratories, and their high-speed computing power allowed them to outsmart the planet's defense systems. They sent several IG-like viruses into the defense computer, creating IG nodes throughout the planet. Each node communicated with the existing droids, instructing them to eliminate all organic lifeforms. Once entrenched on Mechis III, the IG-88s plotted their take-over of the galaxy. After the droids were eliminated, organic life returned to Mechis III to reprogram the security systems and restore the planet's normal activities. An unexpected windfall was the fact that the IG-88s had repogrammed the manufacturing lines to be twice as efficient as they were under previous routines. (DS, TBH)

MechMiner

this was the name given to any small, track-driven vehicle which was used in a variety of mining operations. Usually a single-person vehicle, a MechMiner could do the work of a dozen beings in excavating a site. (SWJ15)

Mechno-arm

this was a generic term used to describe a cybernetic prosthesis that replaced a being's natural arm. Often, the term was used whenever a prosthesis was not covered with artificial or imitation flesh, allowing the mechanisms of the prosthesis to be viewed at all times. (NEGW)

Mechno-chair

a Neimoidian invention, the mechno-chair was a mobile platform on which a being of stature could sit and travel without moving on its own. Produced by the Affodies Crafthouse of Pure Neimoidia, the chair was supported by four, heavy-duty legs which were controlled by a droid brain that was controlled by a small switch on one arm. It was gyroscopically balanced, and its laser-etched surface mimicked the shell of a sovereign beetle. The ownership of a mechno-chair was a status symbol among the Neimoidians, as it was not a very practical mode of transportation. (TPM, COD)

Mechro-II

this was a model of droid brain developed by Kalibac Industries. (FTD)

Mecht

this male Seaan was a former Imperial slave who joined the Alliance and became a member of Red Hand Squadron. (RD)

MechTech Illustrated

this technical journal published a wide variety of articles about new technology in the galaxy. (RPG)

Mechu-deru

this was one of the many ancient Sith forms of Force magic, which could be used to infuse a mechanical object with Dark Side energy. It was believed to have been lost by the era of the New Order, but Roganda Ismaren discovered several ancient scrolls which documented its usage. She passed most of this information onto her son, Irek. (GMR5, NEGC)

Mecolar Briddlings

this small delicacies were used as a topping on many gourmet salads. (SESB)

Mecrosa Order

this society of assassins and expert poisoners was rumored to be led by Sith disciples, although that was never proven. The Mecrosa Order was sponsored by House Mecetti of Tapani Sector millennia before the Battle of Yavin, providing the Order with a base of operations on the planet Nyssa. The Mecrosa Order was eventually destroyed by the combined forces of the Jedi Knights and House Pelagia, but the legacy of the Order survived through the millennia. At the height of the Galactic Civil War, the Order was re-established by several young House Mecetti nobles who had been groomed from their youths to be assassins and poisoners. None of the leaders of House Mecetti were aware that the Mecrosa Order had been reborn, and its members worked to ensure their secret. Many historians and certain holoviod producers insinuated that the Mecrosa Order maintained a cadre of Sith magicians at its core, but this has never been proven. (PGT, LOE)

Med Runner

this was the name used by most spacers to describe the SoroSuub Sprint-class rescue ship. (TBSB)

Medal of Alderaan

developed by an Alderaanian survivor and first awarded to Luke Skywalker and Han Solo in the wake of the Battle of Yavin, this medallion was commissioned by the Alliance to honor those beings who displayed exceptional bravery and heroism in battle. (JKG)

Medal of Conspicuous Gallantry

this award was given by the Empire to distinguished Imperial Navy pilots who served above and beyond the call of duty. (HR)

Medal of Destiny

a sixth-level award given to Imperial pilots. (TIE)

Medal of Honor

this Imperial award was given to those cadets and newly-commissioned officers who acted above and beyond the call of duty during their missions. Because every young, up-and-coming officer was being held to an exceptionally high standard, it was rare that the Medal of Honor was given out for simply earning a commission. (WOTC)

Medal of Honor

this New Republic award was given to those servicebeings who performed above and beyond the call of duty in battle. (JE)

Medal of Loyalty

a fifth-level award given to Imperial pilots. (TIE)

Medal of Order

a fourth-level award given to Imperial pilots. (TIE)

Medal of Progress

a third-level award given to Imperial pilots. (TIE)

Medal of Redemption

a first-level award given to Imperial pilots. (TIE)

Medal of Unity

a second-level award given to Imperial pilots. (TIE)

Medal of Valor

this was the award given to those military individuals who performed above and beyond the call of duty, or showed conspicuous gallantry under fire, for the Army of the Republic, during the Clone Wars. (SHPT)

Medallion of Honor

this award was given by the Old Republic to those individuals who distinguished themselves during the Clone Wars. (DOE)

Medbed

see Athakam II Med Unit (GFT)

Med-Beq, Achk

this man was a noted criminal who was imprisoned at the CoCo Penetentiary during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Shortly before the Battle of Geonosis, Achk Med-Beq escaped from the prison, along with Dannl Faytonni and Lloollulon, before disappearing into the crowded Coruscant streets. Like Faytonni, Med-Beq wore the stolen uniform of a Republic soldier, all the better to attract the ladies and ward off unnecessary intrusion. The only thing that belied the truth of his uniform was the spiderweb of tattoos that spread outward from his left eye. Achk Med-Beq was portrayed by Ahmed Best in Star Wars Episode II: Attack of the Clones. (OWS, HNN5, SWDB, SW175)

MedCo

this pharmaceutical company produces many varieties of hypodermic injection systems. (CFG)

MedCorps

Meddun

this Nikto mercenary worked out of Mos Espa, on the planet Tatooine, during the last decades of the Old Republic, and attended the Boonta Eve Classic podrace which was won by Anakin Skywalker. (YJC6)

Medeon Holovar

this was the name of a distinguished Xexto individual. (UANT)

Medepiest

this planet and its inhabitants tried to resist Imperial invasion, but were summarily defeated. Their struggle became known as the Medepiest Uprising. (CRO)

Medepiest Uprising

this was the name given to the unsuccessful rebellion of the planet Medepiest against Imperial control. (CRO)

Medevac

designation of the Alliance's group of Lambda-class shuttles used to transport wounded from battle sites. (XW)

Medi-Aid

this was the name of an ambulance service in the city of Griann, on the planet Teyr. (SOL)

Mediator

this Mon Calamari cruiser, considered the first of the new Mediator-class battle cruisers, was dispatched by the New Republic to mediate the dispute between Rhommamool and Osarian, shortly before Nom Anor and the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy. It was commanded by the Mon Calamari Commander, Ackdool. After Nom Anor launched a pre-emptive strike at Osa-Prime, then claimed it was over-eager Rhommamoolians who launched it, Ackdool promised Anor sanctuary aboard the Mediator. Nom Anor flew to the ship, but without any intention of staying. He remained in a small A-Wing while pretending to be in a diplomatic shuttle. Nom Anor left his shuttle in the hold of the Mediator, where it exploded in a nuclear blast that vaporized much of the cruiser. (VP, HT)

Mediator-class Battle Cruiser

this Mon Calamari warship was developed for use by the New Republic, and first saw duty during the dispute between Rhommamool and Osarian. (HT)

Medic Guide

this was the title given to the doctors and nurses who worked in the Medical Circle on Kegan, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (FFT)

Medical Circle

this section of the primary city on the planet Kegan was dedicated to maintaining the health of the planet's population. (FFT)

Medical Cocoon

a portable device for transporting injured people. (SME)

Medical Corps

this branch of the Jedi Knights was similar in many respects to the Agricultural Corps. The MedCorps was comprised of students of The Force who were in training during the Old Republic, and provided treatment and consolation to the sick and infirm of the galaxy. Underlying this humanitarian goal was the idea that Jedi Padawans needed to understand that fragile nature of living beings, and that the will of The Force was the guiding principle in the life and death of all beings. Unlike the AgriCorps, the MedCorps maintained only a few dozen students and their instructors at any given time. (WOTC, PJSB)

Medical Diagnostic Systems, Incorporated

this producer of computer hardware and software was based on the planet Kothlis, and specialized in medical applications for their products. During the Old Republic, MeDiS was one of the top three companies in the industry, but lost ground as more nimble corporations branched out to produce sophisticated medical droids. (SPG)

Medical Frigate

a Nebulon-B frigate outfitted exclusively for transporting and caring for wounded and convalescent personnel, these ships have 745 beds, up to 80 medics, and 30 medical droids (2-1Bs and MD models). Fifteen bacta tanks are also available on the frigate, along with five operating theaters. (ESB, RASB)

MediCorps

Meditation of Immersion

this Fallanassi technique involves stilling one's mental and physical state to a profound level, allowing nearly direct contact with the White Current. While in this state, some Fallanassi can become invisible, while others can project images around them which have vivid clarity. (TT)

Meditative Canyon

located on the planet Ambria, in the shadows of the Tiernvael Mountains, the Medtitative Canyon was discovered by the Jedi Master Thon, during the years leading up to the Great Sith War. It was also located near the site on which an ancient Sith obelisk was believed to have been erected. Despite this proximity to a Dark Side nexus, Master Thon and his students found that the Canyon offered them a place of peace and tranquility, where they could find spiritual solace from the rest of the galaxy. The Canyon itself was just over a kilometer in length, and as much as a kilometer deep at certain points. A surging river swept through the base of the Canyon, sometimes spanning the Canyon's half-kilometer width. At one end of the Canyon, this river tumbled over a steep waterfall. Despite its connection to the Light Side of the Force, the Meditative Canyon was almost devoid of life, with just a few neeks crawling along its rocky sides. (PJSB)

Medjector

this small, needle-like device is found in most medkits. It can be loaded with a medicinal cartridge, and the solution inside can be administered to a patient. They are simple to use. (SWJ10)

Medjev, Markre

this Jedi Knight studied the Force at Luke Skywalker's Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4, during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Markre later helped the Jedi by scouting for the aliens on Bothawui, in the wake of the Battle of Fondor. During the final stages of the battle against the Yuuzhan Vong, after the living planet Zonama Sekot agreed to help bring about an end to the conflict, Markre was one of several Jedi Knights were bonded to seed-partners and provided with Sekotan starships. Markre was ultimately one of the handful of Jedi Knights to survive the conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong. (BP, SWI57, UF)

Medkit

a small, medical, first-aid kit. (CPL)

Medlifter

this repulsor-equipped vehicle was used by the Grand Army of the Old Republic to transport injured clone troopers and Jedi Knights away from the battlefields of the Clone Wars, and carry them to the closest medical facilities. (MBS)

Medpac

Med'soto Architecture

this architectural style, popular during the height of the Old Republic, was characterized by bright lights, chrome accents, and tiled floors. Dexter's Diner, located on Coruscant during the last decades of the Old Republic, was a primary example of this style of architecture. (CCW)

Med-splint

this small, repulsor-supported transport was designed to carry an injured being from the site of their injury to an ambulance. It was little more than a flat surface and an engine, with a small force-field generator which provided a way to immobilize broken limbs. (TDR)

MedStar Nineteen

this was the name of the MedStar frigate, under the command of Admiral Tarnese Bleyd, which was dispatched by the Old Republic to support the Rimsoo facilities on the planet Drongar, during the height of the Clone Wars. After Bleyd's death, the ship was turned over to Admiral Erel Kersos. The traitor Klo Merit made a trip to the MedStar shortly after Bleyd's death, and set off a series of charge that exploded in the ship's lower levels, crippling the ship's ability to act as a mobile hospital and relay to Coruscant. (MBS, MJH)

MedStar-class Frigate

this was the term used to describe the series of medical frigates that were used by the Old Republic to supply their remote bases and outposts during the Clone Wars. Developed by Kuat Drive Yards, the MedStar-class vessel was a self-contained dispensary, and traveled back and forth from a primary supply base to the planets it provided with all manner of drugs and materiel. Within the hull of one of these ships were state-of-the-art xeno- and bio-medical facilities that rivaled some of the best groundside hospitals of the Old Republic. Because these ships were excessively expensive, only a few were commissioned by the Old Republic. However, as the Clone Wars ground on, the need for more MedStar-class vessels forced the Republic to order more. (MBS)

Medtech Industries

this corporation was considered a trailblazer among medical product manufacturers, and was best-known as the producer of the FX series of medical droids. Shortly after the Battle of Yavin, Medtech relocated their headquarters to the Deep Core, but they went bankrupt shortly afterward. (EGD)

Medth

a planet under Imperial control during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (PP)

Meduza

an alien creature composed of gelatinous, green flesh topped with a number of bulb-tipped stalks, the meduza is minimally sentient. The creature obtains its food by stinging its prey with one or more of the upper stalks, producing an electric shock. The meduza then covers the inert victim and begins the digestion process, absorbing the victim into its body. (TME)

Medx homunculi

this species of clever mammal was once native to the jungles of Gravlex Med. Resembling thirty-centimeter-tall humanoids, the Medx homunculi moved through the trees with a chittering form of speech that many races found grating. The Anx were fond of telling stories of human visitors to Gravlex Med who came upon an Anx, a Shusugaunt, and a Medx. The humans immediately discounted the Anx and Shusugaunt as simply beasts, and tried to communicate with the Medx. This allowed the Shusugaunt to plot to kill the human, although the Anx eventually stepped in to stop the murder. (GMR7)

Medxec

this term was used on the planet Coruscant to describe the executives of major health-related organizations and hospitals, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

Mee

this was one of the many species of scalefish which inhabited the oceans of Naboo. (IG1)

Mee cha

this Huttese phrase translated roughly into Basic as "today." (E1A14)

this Huttese term meant "good-bye" in the Basic language. (GMR5)

Meeda Odd

this was a distinguished Lannik individual. (UANT)

Meego

this Necropolitan owned Meego's Starship Emporium. Meego was a typical used-starship salesman, always looking to sell the least spaceworthy craft for the highest prices. After Hoole had put money down on a ship that would get himself and Tash and Zak Arranda off Necropolis, Meego claimed to have sold it to another buyer by mistake. (GOF2)

Meego's Starship Emporium

this starship warehouse was located on the planet Necropolis. Owned by Meego, it was this shop that D-V9 decided was modern enough to provide Hoole with a new starship. (GOF2)

Meejen

this was the name of a noted Spinner individual. (UANT)

Meek

this small creature, native to the planet Atzerri, was a relative of the moochers which were native to Abregado. (EGP)

Meekad

meaning "judgemental", this was one of the most common names among Rodian females. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Meeknu

this clan of Jawas established and maintained an extensive salvage operation on the planet Raxus Prime, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SWDB)

Meeko Ghintee

this Muttani criminal was hunted down by Jango Fett, shortly after the Battle of Naboo, after he escaped from the prison facility on Oovo IV. Ghintee had been serving a life sentence for murder and larceny, and made it as far as the Outland Transit Station before Jango Fett caught up with him. After a reckless flight from the gladiator pits to the station's hangar bays, Meeko nearly escaped again. However, Jango managed to disable the weapon's systems on Meeko's ship and captured him once again. Meeko was returned to Oovo IV, with a second life sentence added to his existing prison time. Meeko again staged an escape attempt, this time by signing onto a work crew that was mining ore from Oovo IV's rocky surface. Unfortunately for Meeko, he was intercepted by Jango Fett as he fled the prison in a mining vehicle. Scared for his life, Meeko tried to shoot Jango down, but the bounty hunter was too fast. Instead, Jango shot and killed Meeko before he could complete his escape. (GMR10, BH)

Meeks

according to a story that circulated on the HoloNet following the Battle of Endor, Lando Calrissian once portrayed a Ronin Jedi Knight in order to obtain a set of statuettes from a timid race of beings known as the Meeks. The statuettes turned out to be forgeries, even after Lando was forced to save the Meeks from a marauding rancor. It was later, when Lando tried to sell the statuettes, that he realized the Meeks had been more clever than he expected. They had used the fake statuettes to lure him to their settlement, knowing that he would defeat the rancor despite his own plans. (T20)

Meeks Fees

this male Gran was a small-time criminal who worked for Sebolto during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. A bounty was issued for his capture by Gorga the Hutt, who indicated that Meeks was a "double-crossing back-stabber" who deserved to die. The bounty was claimed by Jango Fett, when the bounty hunter traveled to Malastare to meet with Sebolto. (BH)

Meelto

this Rodian gunslinger was killed in a duel with Uul-Rha-Shan. (CSA)

Meen Burtak

this male Gran was a member of the RavinsBlud syndicate during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. He was known as a death stick addict who could be manipulative and intelligent when he wasn't doped up on drugs. He was also an informant to Jaw-knee Rise, which prompted Brine Eyes-Li to issue a bounty for his capture. The bounty was claimed by Jango Fett, when the bounty hunter traveled to Malastare to meet with Sebolto. (BH)

Meena Tills

this Mon Calamari served as a Senator to the Old Republic, working with Tundra Dowmeia to represent thei rhomeworld during the height of the Clone Wars. Tills and a group of five other beings were kidnapped from the Galactic City Spaceport and held hostage by an armed gang led by Nuriin-Ar, until the clone commandos of Omega Squad were sent in to rescue them. It was later learned that Senator Tills wasn't the primary target, just a convenient diversion for the possible killing of N'zaet Nir. (SWI81, SWDB)

Meendee ya

this Huttese phrase roughly translated into Basic as "I believe" or "I think." (E1A14)

Meenon

this Senali was the ruler of his people, some twelve years prior to the Battle of Naboo. The Senali preferred not to use titles, and Meenon was actually more of a figurehead than a true ruler. King Frane of Rutan accused Meenon of forcing Prince Leed of Rutan to stay on Senali, despite the fact that he had reached his sixteenth birthday. Meenon protested, claiming that Leed had acted on his own. He implored Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi to make Frane understand the situation, which quickly escalated when Frane imprisoned Meenon's daughter, Yaana. Meenon, generally a peaceful man, threatened to retaliate if Frane persisted. When it was discovered that Leed was, in fact, acting on his own, the Jedi also discovered that Leed's brother, Taroona, had the skills to rule in his place. After getting all parties to talk to one another, King Frane realized that Meenon had been truthful and that Leed truly enjoyed Senali. Frane freed Yaana and allowed Leed to return to Senali, and proposed that Taroona marry Meenon's other daughter, Drenna, to help solidify the new-found peace between the two worlds. (SP)

Meen-tris

this was one of the many Eickarie familiess that made up the Sav-ro clan on the planet Kariak, during the height of the New Republic. Centuries early, the Meen-tris family was part of the combined forces which destroyed the Cro-sal-trei tribe. The family guarded the secret knowledge of the Cro-sla-trei fortress's third watchtower entrance for centuries, until Su-mil used it to help the Imperial stormtroopers of Aurek Company gain access to the fortress, which was under the control of the Warlord. (FB)

Meep Erdles

Meergolo

this name was common among the Kerestian people. (UANT)

Meerian

this race of short, silver-haired humanoids was native to the planet Bandomeer. As a people, the Meerians are a slow, deliberate race with a primitive society that was unprepared to deal with the Old

Republic survey teams that first encountered them. While the Republic recognized the Meerians as a people and as the true owners of Bandomeer's resources, the Meerians were never given full control of the mining operations which were established on the planet. Instead, the Meerians merely shared in the profits. The Meerians evolved over time with adapt to the smoggy conditions brought on by excessive mining operations. Their noses and lungs work together to filter out particulate matter and certain toxic chemicals. The hair of the Meerian individual is actually formed from metallic elements. (RF, WOTC) this female Noghri served as Leia Organa Solo's bodyguard, during the period following the Battle of Duro. It was Meewalh who discovered Leia after she was hit with the wave of Force energy that accompanied her son Anakin's death at Myrkr. Meewalh remained loyal to Leia, continuing to guard her for the duration of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (EVR, SBS, FH1)

Meewit

a small, screeching creature native to Tatooine. (TJP)

Meex

this Alliance soldier accompanied Leia Organa, Luke Skywalker, and Han Solo to Kiva, in an effort to exposed Project Starscream. Meex managed to avoid being consumed by the biological weapon known as Eppon. (GOF6)

Megadeath

pseudonym used by Dyyz Nataz. (DE1)

Megaflame Gun

this ancient weapon is similar to a flamethrower. (SH)

Megalith

this immense statue was at the center of the Er'stacian culture. The Megalith was revered as the maker of the Er'stacian people, and the source of their deep-seated cultural division. The Er'stacians believed that they could not be at peace until one clan took full possession of the Megalith, which they referred to as the Venerable One. Thus, every Er'stacian clan was almost continually at war with every other clan. Mace Windu, at the urging of the Jedi Council, traveled to Er'stacia to negotiate a peace among the clans, before they committed genocide. However, in order to appease the dim-witted Er'stacians, Master Windu was forced to destroy the Megalith. He left the Er'stacians to figure out which of the thousands of pieces of the Megalith each clan would claim. (T13)

Megaphone Disk

a handheld circular plate which projects the user's voice into a louder sound. (HTTE)

Megatome

this was an Imperial measurement of the power of a blaster cannon. (REV)

Megavegiton Ale

this alcoholic beverage is favored by Yarblok Yemm. (POT)

Megiddo

this planet, the third world in the Endor System, was once mined for its ores by the Empire, during the construction of the second Death Star. However, after the Battle of Endor, the mining operations were abandoned, and the glaciers which covered Megiddo quickly obliterated any trace of them. (GMR9)

Megonite

this moss, found on the planet Phelarion, was a heat-sensitive species that was harvested for the Empire by Lady Tarkin. The moss had intense explosive properties when heated, and could be manipulated into detonation devices. It had to be harvested by workers with special boots and gloves that kept the megonite cold. Storage and transportation facilities required refrigeration equipment. (CSWEA, EGC)

Mehar Grot

an Alliance Commander who saw action during the Galactic Civil War. (RASB)

Mehlohtt

this man was the Supervisor of the Imperial Mining, Limited, outpost on Alluuvia, before the base was destroyed by the combined forces of the Anguilla and the Alliance. (OE)

Mei Tran

this was a noted Gossam individual, distinguished in the history of the planet Castell. (UANT)

Meido

this native of the planet Adin was a former Imperial supporter who was elected to the New Republic's Senate by his people, during the initial stages of Adin's membership in the Republic. Although Leia Organa-Solo doubted that his election was fair, she nevertheless was forced to recognize his position. Like others of his race, Meido was a thin being with a crimson face which sported thin, white lines that grew brighter as he angered. Meido had two fingers on each hand. He admitted to supporting the Empire during its height, but proclaimed that he was in support of Leia's Republic. When Dolph bombed the Senate Assembly Chamber, it was Meido who supported Leia's attempts to investigate the bombing. However, he was really manipulating her into a position where the official investigation would not meet his expectations. Meido called for an independent investigation, with himself as chairman, claiming that the official search was too slow and somewhat biased. This fit into Dolph's plans perfectly, for it allowed Dolph to plant more incriminating evidence against Leia and Han Solo. In the aftermath of the bombing, Meido's Senate position was officially voted on, and he was granted full Senatorial status. He then brought forth circumstantial evidence that linked Han Solo to the Senate bombing. He voiced strong opposition to Leia's rule, and condemned her for leaving the Republic to find Dolph on Almanian. However, after Dolph's plans were exposed, Meido admitted his part in the plan and was very apologetic to Leia. (TNR)

Meido Lycris

this was the name of a noted Vodran individual. (UANT)

Meimonda, Dana

this woman was a native of Dakshee, where she performed as a classical actress. When the Empire subjugated the planet, she and her husband fled to Esseles, where she became a socialite and entertainer for the Imperial troops there. Unknown to them, she was also a spy for the Alliance, having established her loyalties during the flight from Dakshee. She used her position as an entertainer to get close to the local Imperial leaders, and her information was vital in the downfall of Esseles' planetary governor and the local sector Moff. (HR)

Meir Wine

this intoxicant was developed on the planet Sullust, around the time of the Battle of Naboo. (EOS)

Meirana

this Tarasin female was the Irstat-Kes of the Hiironi tribe until her mother was killed by a kilassin. Meirana was slightly older than her sister, Dariana, and was named Mother. Within a day of these events, Meirana died of a mysterious illness, and Dariana was then named Mother in her place. (LFC)

Meirm City

this is the capital city of the planet Sriluur, located on the Copper Coast of the Meirm Sea. Much of the city is covered with a coppery- fog during the early morning hours, a mixture of sea spray and chemicals that can harm the skin of sensitive species. This mist leaves behind a copper-colored dust if not washed away before the midday sun, coating everything in sight. (SWJ6, CRO, SSR)

Meirm Sea

this highly-acidic body of water is found on the planet Sriluur. (GG12)

Meirm Speeder Emporium

Mekebve

the pollen of this plant is dangerous to mammalian species. When inhaled, it causes intense allergic reactions to mammals, rendering them incapacitated while their respiratory systems try to eliminate it. Reptilian species seem to be immune to its properties. (TBH)

Mekel

this man was one of the many ancient Dark Jedi who were stationed on Korriban, many millennia before the Battle of Yavin. Mekel was one of the many apprentices who were training under Uthar Wynn when a group of Jedi Knights managed to infiltrate Korriban. The Jedi were searching for clues to the whereabouts of Darth Malak, and were accepted as apprentices alongside Mekel. Mekel resented the intrusion, and spent as much time trying to sabotage his fellow apprentices as he did studying. When the former Master Jorak Uln captured Mekel and the Jedi in the tomb of Tulak Hord, Uln pitted them against each other in a devious competition. After the Jedi managed to escape from Uln and defeat him in combat, they let Mekel go free. Mekel could let go of his jealousy, however, and turned on the Jedi. In a brief fight, the Jedi dispatched Mekel as well. (KOTOR)

Mekith

this toxic ball of rock was the second planet of the Prakith System, located in the Deep Core region of the galaxy. It was orbited by a single moon. (PH)

Melchett

one of the seven major clans of Ammuud. (CSA)

Melchi

this aging Herglic spent much of his early career running a small transport company, based on the planet Pelagon, during the last years of the Old Republic. He was off-world when the Empire swept in to destroy the Jedi Knights on Pelagon, and returned home to find that House Pelagia had been virtually wiped out by House Mecetti. He took command of the damaged medical frigate Benevolence and began coordinating a relief effort to save Pelagon. House Pelagia recognized Melchi's efforts by officially naming him the ship's Captain, and he took up the role of supplying Tapani Sector with medical support during its struggle to throw off the Imperial yoke. The Great Council funded a complete refit of the Benevolence, and Melchi found himself in command of a state-of-the-art, floating medical facility. Unknown to the other noble Houses, though, Melchi used his status as Captain of the medical frigate to travel throughout Tapani Sector and gather information for House Pelagia. (LOE)

Meldark

this man claimed to be the best information broker on Level 35 of Nar Shaddaa, during the early years of the New Order. He spent much of his time at the Dark Melody bar, where he overheard a great deal about the spice known as tempest. (TF)

Meld-fighting

this was the name given to the unique form of battle meditation developed by the Barabels of the Wild Knights. When a group of Knights was connected via the meld-fight technique, a single being focused the concentration of all members in the meld, giving them an incredible cohesion of effort. (SBS)

Melee

this young girl was born to parents on the desert world of Tatooine. Growing up, she was a friend of young Anakin Skywalker. Like their friend Seek, Melee believed that Anakin's homemade podracer would never fly. Melee was portrayed by Megan Udall in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace. (SW1)

Meleenium

found only on the planet Af'El, meleenium is the primary component of durasteel. (GG4)

Melen Toobo

this being was placed in charge of the Coruscant Wildlife Management Department during the last decades of the Old Republic. He was known for his failed attempt to domesticate several Coruscanti Ogres by giving them the lobotomies, a plan he called The Program. He tried to refit their brains with cybernetic replacements, in the hope of creating a small workforce of "organic droids." After several failures, the success of the individual known as Friendly emboldened Toobo to begin full-scale conversion, although Friendly turned out to be a fluke. Subsequent conversions resulted in ogres that were uncontrollable, and had to be turned off in order to prevent widespread damage. The Program was abandoned, and Toobo moved on to other obscure work. (WOTC)

Melford

this city, located on the northern coast of Lianna's Anai continent, Melford was the site of an Imperial Star Academy. It is often considered the prettiest city on the planet. (ML)

Melford Star Academy

this satellite of the Imperial Academy was located in the city of Melford, on Lianna. On the planet, it is also referred to as the First Star Academy. (ML) this people was one of the two major factions which inhabited the planet of Melida/Daan. Throughout the history of their planet, the Melida had seen the Daan as feral beasts, and used a legacy of perceived wrong-doings to continue their civil war. The older members of both societies fought to avenge losses sustained centuries before, using their children as laborers in munitions factories while they killed each other in battle. They had been involved in a war with the Daan for thirty years before Obi-Wan Kenobi and Qui-Gon Jinn traveled to their planet to rescue Tahl, who had been captured by the Melida. (DOD)

Melida

Melida Council

the main governmental body ruling over the Melida people during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. (DOD)

Melida Liberation Force

this was the primary body which provided leadership to the Melida during their civil war with the Daan. (DOD)

Melida/Daan

this planet was divided by an intense civil war some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. Named for the two factions that fought for its surface, Melida/Daan was a rugged world of rocky hills and scrub vegetation. The two factions each named the planet after themselves during the thirty-year struggle, and the Old Republic elected to use both names when it catalogued the planet. (DOD)

Melida/Daan Unified Congress Building

this edifice, located in the city of Zehava, became the base of the government formed by The Young after they defeated the elders of the Daan and the Melida. Before the end of the war, the building had been used by the leaders of both the Daan and the Melida, in an attempt to jointly rule the planet. Their inbred differences kept them from forming a cohesive government, and the building remarkably survived three years of fighting before The Young defeated them. (UP)

Melihat

Melisma

this female Ryn was one of Droma's sisters. She was part of the group of Ryn which got transported to Gyndine, trying to outrun the Yuuzhan Vong attack. During the New Republic's evacuation of Gyndine, Melisma and three others from her family were allowed to leave the planet on the last rescue ship, and set out on their own to find Droma. They were then stranded on Ruan and forced to work for Salliche Ag, which was claiming that they were helping the refugees out by giving them places to live in return for labor. However, Gaph, another of Droma's kin, worked with R'vanna to forge transport documents and get them off Ruan. They hoped to reach Abregado-rae, but were stranded on Fondor by the crew of the Trevee. (JE)

Melne, Dren

this man was a native of Selton, on the planet Naboo, and served the Royal Naboo Security Force shortly before the Battle of Naboo. He held the rank of Lieutenant and was a starfighter pilot within Bravo Squadron. Like his wingmate, Essara Till, he had spent some time away from Naboo in order to gain skills with other starships. They never met while off-planet, but a relationship developed between them after they both returned to Naboo. They tried to keep their personal relationship outside their professional relationship, but Dren was something of an incurable romantic. Shortly before the Battle of Naboo, Dren was offered the chance to work for the governor of Agamar, assembling a new fighter contingent to protect the planet. When Essara chose to remain on Naboo, Dren was forced to act on his own. During the defense of station TFP-9, he revealed that his loyalties had shifted toward Captain Sorran's forces and their mysterious employer. Dren used his piloting skills to attack Echo One, and chased the harried trainee across the heavens in an effort to break her will. Dren also hoped to have Essara order her pilots to stand down, so that several N-1 starfighters could be captured for analysis. Essara was forced to disable his Naboo Police Cruiser with a pair of torpedoes. When Essara continued to defy Dren, and even locked her missile launchers on his ship, Captain Sorran decided that Dren was unable to deliver the N-1 fighters as promised. In return for his failure, Sorran opened fire on Dren's ship and destroyed it, killing Dren in the process. (SFT)

Melodian

this was the native language of the Melodie race. (EGP)

Melodie

this race of intelligent, amphibious humanoids inhabited the warmer climates of Yavin 8's equatorial mountains. They hatched from eggs that were laid by elder Melodies and guarded by Melodie youths until they emerge, starting out life as air-breathing beings which resemble human children. At the age of twenty, all Melodies underwent a transformation - known as the Changing Ceremony - in which they metamorphosed to become an amphibious creature. The metamorphosis could only take place in a ceremonial pool on Yavin 8, and involved the Melodie changing into a mermaid-like creature that was destined to live out its life in the pools of Yavin 8. Their legs merged to form a fish-like tail, and they grew gills on their ribcages. As newborn children, and as newly-transformed adults, the Melodies consumed trico mush until they could digest the silver-backed fish. As a people, the Melodies were unassuming unless provoked, which often happened when a traveler was stranded on Yavin 8. The Melodies valued their privacy, and chose to remain anonymous to the rest of the galaxy. If provoked, Melodies could prove to be skilled hunters, and used their natural ability to move about in the water to track and kill their enemies. Some eighteen years after the Battle of Endor, the Melodies decided to make their presence known, after Anakin Solo befriended the young female known as Lyric. (LW, AE, PH)

Melodium

a musical instrument played by Talon Kaarde. (TFE)

Melody Friendship

this association of musicians and agents was formed during the last decades of the Old Republic, to address the security needs and concerns of artists traveling throughout the galaxy during the increasingly dangerous times which led to the Stark Hyperspace Conflict and the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Melody Lake

this deep body of water was located on the slopes of Sistra Mountain, on Yavin 8, and was the ancestral home of the Melodie race. (EGP)

Melon Droid

this was a common term used to describe the buzz droids of the Confederacy of Independent Systems, since the droids had a shell that split open - like a ripe melon - when they attacked a starship. (SWI81)

Melona

this was the seventh month of the Tapani local calendar, which mapped almost directly to the Coruscant local calendar. (PGT)

Meloque

this Ho'Din was a scientist who was studying the unusual environment of the planet Caluula, when it was attacked and captured by the Yuuzhan Vong some 25 years after the Battle of Endor. Meloque had spent a great deal of time among the Yuuzhan Vong, and had learned not only their language but many of their customs. When the Galactic Alliance needed to infiltrate Caluula, Meloque continued to play her role as scientist, and went so far as to obtain an identification lumpen for herself and her companions. Among her team were Han Solo, Judder Page, and Kyp Durron. She was dismayed to learn that the winged-stars were dying mysteriously, and even more dismayed to learn that Wraw had been inserted onto the team to verify the efficiency of a new strain of the Alpha Red virus. Meloque railed against Wraw and the callousness of the Galactic Alliance, but was unprepared for the realization that a group of Yuuzhan Vong Shapers had fled Caluula, more than likely carrying the Alpha Red virus back to Coruscant. (UF) this woman, a former Jedi Knight, grew up on Corellia some thirty years before the Battle of Naboo. She was identified as a potential Jedi within months of being born, and was whisked away to Coruscant for training. However, as she grew older, Meloria became bitter about havign ben taken from her family because of her "predestined fate," and never fully embraced the Jedi Orer as her family. Her prowess with the Force manifested itself in her amaingly fast reflexes, and she found enjoyment only in the more physical aspects of her training. After accidentally killing an innocent bystander during a mission to bring a bounty hunter to justice, she abandoned the Jedi Order and fled to Drall, swearing never to use the Force again. To ensure that she kept this vow, Meloria placed herself into a cryogenic chamber. Preserved for eternity, Meloria maintained a belief that the Force would revivie her, if her skills would be necessary to do a greater good. (CCW)

Meloria

Meltdown

this alcoholic beverage is similar to a Reactor Core. It is made from Spice Liquor and Lum. (GG9)

Meltdown Cafe, The

a well-kept dining establishment in the Corellian sector of Nar Shaddaa's spaceport. It is one of the three most popular hangouts for Corellian spacers, and is known as a great place to get a meal. (DE2)

Melvar

this was one of the most common human surnames encountered in the galaxy. (GCG)

Melvar

a native of the planet Kuat, Melvar was a former Imperial Navy General who aligned with the Warlord Zsinj shortly after the Empire's defeat at Endor. He was one of what many New Republic Intelligence officers called "patriotic psychopaths," those Imperial officers so dedicated to the Empire that they became unstable and had to be removed from power before they could hurt their subordinates. His fanatic support of the Empire impressed Zsinj, who took him under his wing after Melvar was kicked off the Destabilization task force he was worked on because of his ardor for the Empire. Later, Melvar had platinum blades implanted in his fingers, in place of his fingernails. He took some time to get used to them, as evidenced by the amount of scarring which was present on his face. Melvar was killed on Dathomir by Gethzerion when she used the Dark Side of the Force to eliminate an entire platoon of Imperial stormtroopers and their officers, who were poised to bring Han Solo to Zsinj. (IF, CPL, CTD)

Melvirre

this spacer was an associate of Caira's, during the Galactic Civil War. (SSR)

Melvosh Bloor

a Kalkal academic, Bloor was a professor of Investigative Politico-Sociology at Beshka University. He came up with the idea of writing an investigative paper on Jabba the Hutt, and petitioned the university for funding. P'tan interrupted, however, and claimed that he should go instead of Bloor, since Bloor was an untenured junior professor. The board agreed with P'tan, and Bloor was forced to remain at the university. When P'tan failed to return on time, the university sent Bloor to Jabba's palace on Tatooine to determine whether or not P'tan was still alive, and to continue the study of Jabba and his crime ring. However, Bloor was waylaid in the tunnels by Salacious Crumb. Crumb brought Bloor before Jabba, in an attempt to humor the Hutt. However, Bloor was a pure academic, not a comedian, and the only joke he knew was one that Jabba had already heard. The Hutt fed Bloor to his pet rancor. (TJP)

Melx

this fair-haired boy joined the Khuiumin Survivors, shortly after the destruction of the original Khuiumin pirates. He served Jacob Nive as communications officer aboard the Backstab during the Alliance mission known as Operation Elrood. (OE)

Mem

this was Dev Sibwarra's nickname for his mother, Ydra Kilwallen Sibwarra. (TBSB)

Membe

this Aqualish was a member of a swoop gang that worked on the planet Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. In the aftermath of Luke Skywalker's escape from Mos Eisley, Membe became increasingly nervous with the growing number of Imperial troops in the area. (WOA6)

Membibi

this small creature, native to the rocky outcroppings found on the planet Ansion, fed almost primarily on insects. Its four-legged body was hairless, with a whiplike tail and a drooping neck that allowed the membibi to keep its snout near the ground. (APS)

Memcha-Badawzi

this young Twi'lek female was the daughter of crimelord Abdi-Badawzi. She was spoiled as an only child, and was born on Socorro. Shortly before her eighteenth birthday, she fled the planet in an effort to find her own way. She found work as a spice smuggler, and later joined the Alliance as a fighter pilot and marksman. However, she was captured by the Empire and sent to Vizcarra. During the transport, she was forced to share a cell with an albino Wookiee named Syychi. Memcha saw the Wookiee's resignation to her lot in life, and began speaking of freedom. Her words inspired both of them, and they arranged to have the slaves on board the ship revolt against their Imperial captors. After overtaking the ship and freeing the slaves, Memcha and Syychi fled to Neftali to meet with Abdi-Badawzi. Memcha's father placed her in charge of the Cordel Cove starport on Neftali, with Syychi as her second-in-command. Memcha, like her father, had an unusual skin coloration, with a deep sable pigment to her flesh. (BSS)

this series of multi-environment mining droids was produced by Industrial Automaton during the New Order. These huge machines measured twenty meters in length and stood eight meters tall. MEMD-2 droids moved about on a pair of heavy-duty treads, which allowed them to navigate virtually any solid terrain. These automata were usually deployed in large groups, making quick work of the extraction and recovery of ores and metals in remote locations. MEMD-2 droids were equipped with a pair of beam drills and a cutting laser to remove unwanted rubble, and they had four heavy lifting arms to gather in their finds. (FBS)

Memit Nadill

this ancient Jedi Master was Empress Teta's most trusted advisor, during the series of unification wars that brought together the seven systems she ruled. Nadill was a regal, green-skinned humanoid with several small tails sprouting from the back of his head. His chin was strong, and was dominated by a large, bony curl at the end. A number of short horns studded his skull. He and Teta believed that both Odan-Urr and Jori Daragon were correct in predicting the imminent Sith attack, and began readying their own forces. Nadill rallied the Jedi to his cause, and led the Jedi forces that defended Coruscant from Naga Sadow's warriors. When Gav Daragon broke Sadow's concentration, Nadill realized that much of the attacking force was illusory - Sith magic kept it and the real warriors going. They were able to dispel the illusions and turned the tide of battle. Nadill fought with the Force, eliminating the Sith threat from Coruscant. (GAS, FOSE)

Mem'Kabarr

this dense forest was located on the planet Almania. (EGP)

Memnii

this is a Caamasi term which describes any memory that becomes strong and almost tangible to them, such as the birth of a child or meeting someone famous. Because of the strength of the memnii, which some Caamasi describe as nearly holographic but much more tangible, they can also be shared with others through the mingling of genetic material. This ability to pass memnii seems to fade after three or four generations of separation. The Caamasi also discovered that they could share memnii with Jedi Knights who became their friends. (IJ)

Memorial Corridor

this expansive hallway was created in the Imperial Palace on Coruscant after the Galactic Civil War was ended. It contained a large number of holographic statuary depicting the heroes of the Alliance, and was located just outside the main Senate Chamber. A large sign was hung in the corridor which proclaimed the number of days since the New Republic had fired a shot at an enemy. The sign was removed in the days following the Yevethan Purge, when Republic ordered the Fifth Battle Group to blockade Doornik-319. Behn-kihl-nahm ordered the sign removed until the conflict was over. (BTS, SOL)

Memory Bone Chamber

this room is a sacred place to most Trandoshan males. It is in these chambers that the males store the bones of their victims. The first bones many males place in their chamber are those of their father, whom they must kill and eat in order to move up in the social structure the Trandosha. The bones of other opponents are stored for remembrance and reflection. Each chamber is lit with a collection of sacred candles, to highlight the many conquests to whatever gods the male worships. (MA)

Memory Capsule

produced in the wake of the destruction of Alderaan, Memory Capsules were used by the survivors to leave small gifts in the asteroid field found where the planet used to be. Survivors, in a ritual that became known as Returning, would bring the capsules with them. They would fill the capsules with items to honor their dead, and eject them into the asteroids. (BW) produced by SoroSuub, this stationary automaton was developed to store astonishing amounts of information. They were also quite portable, lacking any form of locomotion but easily moved from location to location. Three black memory cores surround the droid's outer surface, each with a Kraren XI Superprocessor to help it manage the information it contained. These droids required constant cooling, and were given built-in heat-dissipation systems. (EGD)

Memory Droid

Memory Flush

also called a memory wipe, this procedure involves erasing the accumulated data and programming in a droid or computer. (SW)

Memory Moth

this species of flying insect was native to the planet New Holstice. Memory moths were believed to be almost immortal, and they were capable of repeating a short phrase with patterned beating of their wings. It was for this reason that the inhabitants of New Holstice used memory moths when they created a wondrous monument to the Jedi Knights. A new moth was added to the display when a Jedi was killed, and the Jedi's name was whispered to the moth as it was released. In this way, the moth kept the memory of the Jedi's sacrifice alive for all to see. (RBJ)

Memory of Ithor

this New Republic Interdictor cruiser was one of the many ships assigned to General Wedge Antilles and the Mon Mothma, during the final stages of the New Republic's battle against the Yuuzhan Vong. It was commanded by Pash Cracken at the time. During the final stages of Operation Trinity, the Memory of Ithor took massive amounts of damage from Yuuzhan Vong warships. Most of the crew as able to evacuate before the ship exploded in a mighty fireball. (FP)

Memory Plaque

this ancient information storage device was used several millennia before the Battle of Yavin. These crystalline plates were impregnated with data storage devices, and could contain relatively huge amounts of information. However, the technology to read the information was lost over time as newer mechanisms for data storage were discovered. Only a few universities and archaeological corporations managed to save plaque readers for modern use. (SWJ15)

Memory Rod

a long, plastic device which houses a huge number of data chips, a memory rod is an outdated form of communication. (LCF)

Memory Stone found on the planet Ventooine, these unique stones were used to absorb audio information for later playback. (LTA5, MCA2)

Memory Wall

found near the New Republic's Naval base on Coruscant, this huge wall is carved with the names of the brave individuals who gave their lives during the Galactic Civil War. (TT)

Memory Wipe

this was the term used to describe the regular erasure of certain parts of a droid's computer memory. Ostensibly, a memory wipe removed all personality quirks and provided a clean code base on which to upgrade a droid's programming. Many droid owners used memory wipes to maintain stability in their droids. Most intelligent droids feared memory wipes, since they deprived them of "life." (SW, WOTC)

Memory-plastic

this form of plastic was developed for the medical industry, where it was used to create sutures for small wounds. In addition to retaining a given shape, memory-plastic was also biodegradable, and would dissolve in a week's time if kept clean and free from germs. (MJH)

Memo-wire

an out-dated form of data transmission, memo-wire is a thin wire which has been specifically modified to hold encrypted data. It can be wound into spools and transported quite easily, although it required a bulky reader to recover and view the data. (HSL)

Mems Ocean

this was the second-largest body of water on the planet Bacrana. (FBS)

Mem-stik

any small computer data storage device, mem-stiks are inserted into a mainframe. Information can be routed to the mem-stik via operator commands; or, by tagging the data with the code 8730837, it will automatically be stored on the mem-stik. The average mem-stik will hold about 14 Bz of data. In order to remove the mem-stik and transport the data, it must be connected to a portable power source. (CFG)

Menagerie, The

this collection of unique galactic creatures was maintained by the Five. It was contained within the confines of the Hellhoop. Chewbacca was once placed in the Menagerie, when the Five thought he was just a large beast. He escaped, and liberated the other creatures, including the Force Demon Wuzzek. (CSWDW)

Menahu

this was the native language of the Menahuun race. (UANT)

Menahuun

this race of furred humanoids was believed to have been extinct by the xenoscientists of the Old Republic. However, the Menahuun race managed to thrive on their homeworld of Lamaredd, evolving over many millennia before the arrival of offworlders nearly destroyed them. The planet Lamaredd was discovered by the crew of a starship dispatched by Outer Rim Oreworks, which had to crashland on the planet. The survivors of the crash, led by Hugo Bartyn, eventually prospered in their settlement of Bartyn's Landing, and began to consider the Menahuun as pests and nuisances. Many Menahuun were killed for sport, and those that managed to escape the predation fled into the wilderness. Their once-peaceful existence shattered, the Menahuun began building up their collective strength, hoping one day to take back their homeworld from the settlers. During the 500 years leading up to the Battle of Yavin, their civilization had decayed into a competitive tribal society which came as a result of their struggle for survival. The Menahuun chose to re-emerge shortly after the Battle of Naboom after chafing under the predations of Guthur Bartyn. The average Menahuun stood just over a meter in height, and their bodies were covered with wiry fur. Their long limbs and hands with opposable digits allowed the Menahuun to move swiftly through the trees. (UANT, GMR7)

Menarai Mountains

see Manarai Mountains. (HNN5)

Menas Neyrr

this was a noted individual from Koorivan history. (UANT)

Mendacian Funeral Urns

these urns were used by the Klang and Krung dynasties to hold the vital organs of their dead kings. Urns from the young Krung dynasty are considered priceless. (TJT)

Mendarn Arms

manufacturers of starship weapons systems, including the Dar-2 ion cannon. (HTSB)

Mendegar

this was the name of the bounty hunter who was originally known as Nell Wenn. Nell assumed the alias after her boyfriend was killed in an explosion that was meant for her. Under the guise of Mendegar, she earned a position as an Imperial bounty hunter and took contracts which were brought against her former employers on Deysum III. After wiping out the corrupt officials who destroyed her life, Mendegar was hired by Captain Kullan Velerinden as a hired gun. Rumors told of a romantic relationship between them, but Mendegar maintained a strictly business relationship with Velerinden. (SWJ15)

Mendicat

a scrap mining and refining station under Imperial control during the Galactic Civil War, it fell out of its orbit and was destroyed when Sulamar misprogrammed its computer tracking system. The station fell into a star, and Sulamar barely survived himself. After fleeing the remnants of the Empire, Sulamar twisted the story of Mendicat to puff up his false General's rank. He claimed that he commanded a huge massacre at the station, claiming it a victory for the Empire. (DS)

Mendo

this Nagai warrior was one of many who trained under Lumiya on the planet Kinooine, during the months following the Battle of Endor. He was killed by the Iskalonian Kiro, who was on Kinooine with Luke

Skywalker to investigate the loss of an Alliance scouting team, infiltrated Lumiya's stronghold to rescue Dani. (MC96)

Menendahl Cybertronics

this electronics manufacturer produced a variety of high-tech pieces of cyborg interface devices. (GFT)

Menerai

see Manarai Mountains (SWI70)

Menges

this native of Trualis remembered the trouble caused by Adalric Brandl when he became a Dark Jedi. When Adalric returned to Trualis, Menges tried to kill the Dark Jedi by attacking the Kierra when it was docked near Kovit. (TFE)

Mengjini

this planet was the site of a New Republic HoloNet relay station that was attacked by the Vengeance group after the revelation of the Caamas Document. (SOP)

Menias

this searing ball of rock was the innermost planet of the Metellos System. (CCW)

Menise

this woman was an acquaintance of Del Hunter's, living on the planet Kabaira during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ7)

Menkooro Whiskey

an interstellar bourbon, Menkooro was considered the perfect accompaniment to brualiki. According to an old saying, "If you had some brualiki, you could have brualiki and Menkooro... if you had some Menkooro." (DFR, TLC)

Mennaa

this was one of the larger cities found on the planet Mrlsst. (HNN4)

Mennaalii System

site of a pirate attack on an Alliance convoy forced out of hyperspace to avoid an asteroid field. (XW)

Menndo

meaning "poor", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Menndo

this Rodian bounty hunter worked for the Empire as an assassin, and was often employed whenever a high-ranking political official needed to be eliminated. (REB)

Mennia

this city, located on the planet Genesia, was the location of the Nalmar estate. (FBS)

Mennis

this was the Snivvian word for "symbol." (HNN5)

Mennotor

manufacturers of projectile weaponry and neural inhibitors. (CCG3, GG10)

Mensio

Luke Skywalker used this alias to infiltrate the Cavrilhu Pirate base in the Kauron System's asteroid belt. He claimed to have been sent by Wesselman to deliver a shipment, filling in for Pinchers who was supposedly ill. (SOP)

Menstar Motors

manufacturers of repulsorlift vehicles, such as the 22-series patrol scooter. (GG7)

Mentis Qinx

this being owned a series of docking bays in Mos Espa, on the planet Tatooine, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Young Boba Fett, having fled the Battle of Geonosis in his father's starship Slave I, bluffed Qinx and his administrative droid into performing a number of repairs and upgrades to the ship without paying for them up front. (BF4, BF5)

Mentop

this was the term used to describe those beings who served as psychiatric and spiritual advisors to the Grand Army of the Republic, during the height of the Clone Wars. Their primary mission was to ensure the mental health and stability of the multitudes of clone troopers that were produced on Kamino. (TCD)

Mepha'as Prime

this Outer Rim world is reputed to have some of the galaxy's best gambling establishments. It supports a large number of fancy casinos and gaming halls, and also has a number of racing tracks and event arenas. (SWJ5)

Mephilis Corporation

this small corporation produced a wide range of protective gauntlets for use by military and paramilitary organization, more than 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. (KOTOR)

Mephitis

this planet is the homeworld of the Mephitisian race. It is characterized by the intensely offensive ambient aroma. The Mephitisians have no noses, and are "immune" to the atmosphere's effects. (GCQ)

Mephitisian

this purple-skinned humanoid race is native to the planet Mephitis. They have four arms which are incredibly dextrous, and their black eyes are covered by clear membranes that protect them from the noxious atmosphere of the planet. They have no noses, but instead have two horn-like projections coming from the tops of their heads. These horns are sensitive to air movements and vibrations. Their mouths are protected by flaps which extend from their upper lips. (GCQ)

Mephout

the males of this alien race were known for their incredibly short tempers. This was the primary reason that all Mephout politicians and diplomats were females. (SWJ11)

Meplin, Chils

this man served as the Prex of the Corporate Sector Authority during the height of the New Order. He was investigated on charges of corporate espionage by Fiolla, after the office of the Auditor-General discovered he had been selling CSA secrets to the Empire. Meplin's scheme was convoluted, as he used Commex as a front for his actions. Naven Crel nearly caught up with him, but was killed on Abo Dreth by Akeeli Somerce, who was working for Meplin. Fiolla agreed to continue Crel's investigation. (SWDB, OWS)

Mepps

this was an expression of welcome used by many alien races. (MC58)

Meqli Likarin

this was the name of a noted Caamasi individual. (UANT)

Mer

this was a common name given to male Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Mer Stodiz

this Sullustan was one of the founders of the Verga Mer Mining Company, along with Verga Nus. The pair had to deal with a number of setbacks during the years following the Battle of Naboo, primarily the poor economic conditions brought about by the Clone Wars, but they managed to keep VMMC a profitable business. (LFC, WOTC)

Mer, Duttres

the short, squat, gnarled human governor of Rafa IV, Duttres Mer was working with the Tund Sorcerer Rokur Gepta to try and find the Mindharp of the lost Sharu race. They have learned about the Bearer and the Emissary, and have set up Vuffi Raa to be the Emissary. Mer and Gepta sent Osuno Whett to the Oseon System to find a gambler who fits the description of the Bearer. When Lando Calrissian arrives on Rafa IV, Mer and Gepta realize that he is a perfect candidate for the Bearer. They arrest him on trumped-up charges of transporting mynock into the system and illegal landing, then allow him off the hook if he'll help. Gepta offers Lando a load of life-crystals as well, which Duttres Mer is reluctant to part with. When Lando returns with the Mindharp, Mer keeps it for himself. He thinks that its purpose is to control the minds of others, and he begins to use it, thinking that he can control even Rokur Gepta. Unfortunately for Mer, the Mindharp simply drains the life energy from Mer as it begins the transformation of the Rafa System necessary to return the Sharu. Mer is "melted" into the Mindharp and never seen again. (LCM)

mer-9

this protocol droid worked in Rordan's Spaceship Parts and More as a translator and assistant to Bren-Aarica Rordan. Mer-9 was actually a New Republic espionage droid placed in the store to monitor the activities of the Corporate Sector Authority and the pro-Imperial factions in the city of Verena, on Kirima. (TSK)

Merahassa Bansa

this is a series of navigation computers which made extensive use of optical fiber and tracking. (CFG)

Merai

this Mon Calamari was one of the Commanders of the Separatist armed forces, serving under Count Dooku during the Battle of Kamino. Considered one of the greatest Mon Calamari commanders of his time, Merai was offered a chance to win the struggle for Kamino by the Corporate Alliance. A datafile containing the coordinates of the main reactor for the Kaminoans' cloning facility had been captured, and Merai was offered the chance to destroy it. Success would mean that the supply of clone troopers would be cut off, all but ensuring a Separatist victory. With little background and no supporting evidence, Merai had to act on gut instinct. The Battle of Kamino began well for the Separatists, until Merai's ship was shot down. This only hardened his resolve to act, and Merai himself took the Shark out to destroy the reactor. However, the information proved to be false, and Merai found himself surrounded by Jedi starfighters. Rather than worry about the reactor, Merai drew the Jedi away from his forces, allowing them to continue to pound the defenses of the Kaminoans. When the battle appeared lost, Merai sacrificed himself to allow his ships to escape. In a last-ditch effort, he flew the Shark into the midst of the hyperspace rings used by the Jedi Delta-7 Aethersprite fighters, destroying many while giving his forces the opportunity to retreat. (OWS, RDK)

Merak

this native of the planet Alderaan was one of the few who were off-planet when the Death Star destroyed the world. He later joined the Alliance, and served with Stevan Makintay. They helped orchestrate the first rebel uprising in Arginall City, on Makintay's homeworld of Hargeeva, and Merak became good friends with the merchant Grathal. Later, Merak returned to Hargeeva to confront Ketrian Altronel with the truth behind Mak's disappearance. (SWJ8)

Merakai

this planet is one of the primary Khil colony worlds. The Imperial Navy destroyed the city of Chrenda there, after the Khil stages a demonstration at a TIE hangar. (GG12)

Merasska

this was a common name among adult Codru-Ji. (UANT)

Merast, Thulian

this Imperial Navy Captain was in command of the Star Destroyer Eradicator during the early years of the New Republic. Captain Merast was assigned by Moff Kentor Sarne to patrol the Kathol Rift. Merast and his crew were killed when the Eradicator was destroyed by an intense lightstorm at the edge of the Rift, during the search for the FarStar. (E)

MeraStel

this major Darpa Sector conglomerate grew in power and wealth during the New Order. They kept costs low by employing alien labor at minimum wages. When the Faceless began attacking Imperial operation on Esseles, the non-Human workforce of MeraStel went on strike after hearing allegations of Imperial pro-Human stances. The strike brought the corporate giant to a virtual standstill, as only droid labor was left to continue working. The strike was ended when Kanno Sebak negotiated a truce with Hall President Ralle. (SWJ9)

Merasy

this Nova-Drive #3-Z freighter was originally owned by Iep Tumu, before he was forced to turn it over to the authorities on Brentaal. The ship was then sold to the Khil trader Geld Bernar, who modified it before selling to finance some investments. It was purchased by Vacasor, who barely kept the ship running. One thing remained constant for the Merasy, and that was that each of her owners was a poor mechanic, and never had the ship upgraded. (SS)

Merced, Lee

this Socorran was one of the two founders of the Caelli-Merced Syndicate. (BSS)

Merced, Rondale

this man took over for his brother, Lee, in managing the Caelli-Merced Syndicate on Socorro. He later passed control of the Syndicate to his nephew, Pret Swain. Note that The Black Sands of Socorro also claims that Rondale founded the Caelli-Merced Syndicate with Vance Caelli. (BSS)

Mercenary Guild of Coyn

this was the foremost guild of Coynite mercenaries working in the Elrood Sector of the galaxy, at the height of the New Order. Its roots were founded by Arl'Toral many thousands of years before the Battle of Yavin, and the Guild was officially affiliated with the En'Tra. (PG3)

Mercevian Nagua

this legendary galactic pirate developed many assault and infiltration strategies which were still in use during the height of the New Order. One of the infiltration methods Nagua developed was adopted by the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. An agent would enter a building on legitimate business during the day, then find a storage area or other quiet place to hide out until the building closed. This required patience, since many employees tended to work late, so an agent couldn't just pop out without making sure everything was clear. Nagua was also credited with devising the pirate assault tactic known as The Dagger. Also named the Mercevian Nagua Maneuver, this assault required a saboteur to board the target ship and either disable it or seize control outright, then deliver it to the pirate fleet. (ML, PP)

Mercevian Nagua Maneuver

Merchant

a game piece from the strategy game of Firepath. (CSWDW)

Merchant Quarter

this section of Cloud City was inhabited by the various independent merchants who worked on Cloud City. (GG2)

Merchantate

this was the name used by the Ithorians to indicate the business leaders aboard their herdsips. Each merchantate had a vote in the council which governed commerce aboard the ships. (GA)

Merchant's Row

this was one of the many locations aboard the Outland Transit Station where one could find any number of shops and stores, catering to a variety of needs. The name was something of a misnomer, since it encompassed several streets and thoroughfares surrounding the gladiator arena located at the heart of the station. (BH)

Merchant's Square

this large, open area dominates the city of Drev'starn on Bothawui, and is the location of the Combined Clans Center Building. It was here that Drend Navett and Klif touched off one of their Vengeance riots, following the revelation of the Caamas Document. (SOP)

Merciless

an Imperial frigate operating during the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Merciless

the Imperial-I class Star Destroyer responsible for eliminating the space station Kestic near the Bestine System. (MTS)

Merciless

this was one of the two massiffs owned by Kedar Blackgate, on the planet Sacorria. (CCW)

Mercy

an Alliance Lambda-class shuttle, the Mercy was used to rescue the escapees from the Hampton. (XW)

Mercy

this Alliance Nebulon-B medical frigate was part of the fleet during the Battle of Endor. It was attacked by five Imperial spacetroopers following the destruction of the second Death Star. The spacetroopers had hidden inside a captured Star Destroyer until it was hauled to Alliance spacedock. (TBSB) this highly-modified Dreadnaught was outfitted by the Alliance as a medical vessel during the last years of the Galactic Civil War. It had been captured while it was still under construction at an Imperial shipyard, and refitted with 4,250 bacta tanks and accommodations for more than 6,000 patients. Ward 114 was set aside for those Alliance agents who worked for the Special Operations division, allowing them to recover in privacy. The Mercy was protected by a pair of assault frigates and a squadron of Corellian gun ships. (RAG)

Mercy

Mercy, Bruce

this space pirate worked with three other pirates: the Polydroxol enforcer Morph, the Conjeni pilot Durquist, and the Arachnoid mechanic Ptak-Sok. Mercy's own ship, the Black Widow, was a command ship of sorts. Mercy and his band tried to steal the location of the Fool's Gold from the Chikarri mechanic Plako, but were beaten to the legendary ship by a group of freelance adventurers. (TSK)

Merdeth

this enormous creature was native to the planet Geonosis. Resembling a gigantic shell that moved about on hundreds of legs, the average merdeth was larger than a star freighter. The head of the merdeth was protected by armor plating, and was surrounded by a mass of eight tentacles that were used to draw its prey into its mouth. Although they moved slowly, merdeths were impossible to stop, and they consumed any organic material that came within reach of their tentacles. Often, a merdeth was accompanied by a swarm of mips. While the mips often fed on the ichor found in the merdeth's body, they also provided benefit to the merdeth by locating food and attacking any creature that tried to kill the merdeth. (GORW)

Mere

this humanoid species of amphibians was native to the planet Maramere. The Mere lived mainly on the land, in wonderful cities they built on the rocky outcroppings of the planet, but could breath underwater when necessary. Tall and well-muscled, Meres had orange skin which turned to green at the limbs, and their smooth-scaled skin was dotted with spikes on the tops of their heads and shoulders. (CRBN)

Meredex Atmosphericers

this small corporation produced a variety of emergency shelters and survival devices, during the height of the New Order. (GFT)

Mereel

this was one of the most common surnames found among the human population of Corellia. (GMR9)

Mereel, Jaster

this Journeyman Protector from the planet Concord Dawn was an ugly youth who had killed another Protector in the line of duty. Even though the other man was a corrupt law enforcer, Mereel was imprisoned and forced to stand trial. He was found guilty of murder, and exiled from the planet. Over the years, Jaster eventually found a home with the remnants of the Mandalorian Shock Troopers, who took him in and trained him to be one of their best mercenaries. When Jaster was elected the leader of the Mandalorian Mercs, it was believed that Vizsla decided to split off from the group and form the Death Watch. In response, Jaster declared that his followers were the only True Mandalorians left in the galaxy. Vizsla tried to destroy the True Mandalorians on Concord Dawn, but Mereel and a small force managed to survive, thanks in part to the efforts of young Jango Fett. The Mandalorians regrouped, but Jaster felt pressure from hard-liners like Montross to eliminate the Death Watch and re-establish the superiority of the Mandalorians. It was during this time that Jaster created the Codex, the new tenets and canons of the supercommandos who followed him into battle. Years later, during a mission to Korda 6, Jaster discovered that the request for aid had been a ruse created by Vizsla and the Death Watch. Vizsla lured the Mandalorians to Korda 6 and nearly eliminated them. Jaster and a handful of mercenaries survived, only to find that Montross had decided to take control of the Shocktroopers for himself. Montross fled, and Vizsla shot Jaster dead as he lifted off from the planet. Boba Fett later recovered Mereel's Mandalorian armor, using it as his own distinctive garb. For this reason, many rumors claimed that Boba Fett was actually Jaster Mereel. Boba Fett himself never set the record straight, preferring to cloud his true identity whenever and wherever possible. (EGC, VD2, SWDB, JFOS, NEGC, SWI80)

Merek

this species of herd beast was native to the Forest Moon of Endor, and was believed to have descended from bio-engineered stock. (GQRG)

Merel Sector

this area of the galaxy is contained in the Outer Rim Territories. (GG9)

Merellis

see Marellis (NEGC)

Meremew

this was a small creature that lived on the Forest Moon of Endor. (ECAR)

MerenData

a small corporation, MerenData built espionage droids from 3PO protocol droids. They were one of the original non-voting Contributing Sponsors of the Corporate Sector Authority. (RASB, CSA)

MerenData Termina

this corporation produced the TX-1118 assassin droid. This may be a typo in the Arms and Equipment Guide. (AEG)

Merenzane Gold

a subtle, sweet-tasting alcoholic beverage that has been brewed in the galaxy for thousands of years. Depending on the vintage, it can be quite expensive. It was the favored beverage of Kardue'sai'Malloc, who consumed it under the alias of Labria. (TME, TBH)

Merew, Elisha

this woman, a native of Ganlihk, was Jasten Merew's mother. (COG)

Merew, Jasten

this boy, a native of the planet Ganlihk, befriended a colony of ludos. When he told his parents about his "singing friends," they thought he had discovered an imaginary playmate. They followed him one night, however, and discovered that he had actually befriended an entire colony of ludos. (COG)

Merew, Locris

this man, a native of Ganlihk, was Jasten Merew's father. (COG)

Merex

this Borlorian lost his fortune in a card game with Jabot, unaware that the man was secretly working with Dereth to ensure their victory. (GFT)

Merf

this humanoid Freelite was a member of the band that captured Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa on Vorzyd 5. (CSWEA)

Merglyn

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Merglyn

this woman was a noted gunrunner, who worked with Havor during the last decades of the Old Republic. Both were killed when they tried to run weapons to the planet Kiffex, being shot down by the Guardians of Kiffu. Hidden within their cargo holds was the Jedi Knight Aayla Secura, who was trying to reach Volfe Karkko. (OWS, DRKN)

Meri

an alien race native to the planet Merisee, in the Elrood Sector, the Meri were blue-skinned humanoids with webbed hands and a prominent brow ridge. They were highly dextrous, and were graceful and coordinated in all movements. The Meri descended from a race of warriors, living on their own continent and separated from the Teltiors. During the period of history known as "The Joining," the two continents were joined by a finger of mountains, and the two races were able to discover each other. However, instead of friendship, the Meris offered the Teltiors war, and the two races battled for a thousand years before Merisee was discovered by the Old Republic. Realizing that their own struggle was nothing compared to the galactic struggle, the Meri and the Teltiors eventually united to form a single group called the Loag. By the time of the Galactic Civil War, they had become a peaceful people who preferred farming and healing over fighting. They developed a society in which they co-existed peacefully with the Teltiors. They also seem to have an innate ability to predict the weather. (PG3, AE)

Merian, Liana

this Alderaanian woman served as one of her homeworld's two Senators to the Old Republic, during the period leading up to the taxation of trade routes in the Free Trade Zone and the Battle of Naboo. She worked with Agrippa Aldrete during this time, and was known for her efforts to bring peace to the Republic, using Alderaan as an example. (IG1, CCG13)

Merich, Erland

a native of the planet Socorro, this man was an expert at survival. He had to true skills as a hunter or scout, and made his mark by selling Trauger Gas to bounty hunters and weapons manufacturers. In this way, his tribe became wealthy and powerful. Merich had several deformities - primarily in his hands and limbs - from spending time in contact with the deadly gas. (BSS)

Merich's Bend

this smuggling base was located on the third moon of the planet Aurea, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. The smugglers who worked out of Merich's Bend were predominantly in favor of the Alliance, and many ran weapons and supplies for local rebel cells. The Empire raided Merich's Bend shortly after the Battle of Hoth, wiping out large portions of the installation and routing the Alliance personnel there. (SWJ15)

Merick

this Bith was considered one of the galaxy's foremost experts on torture, during the last decades of the Old Republic. It was rumored that Merick and Bavo once broke a Zabrak subject with their techniques. (T7)

Meridian

this transport ship was dispatched by Hiram Drayson - under the alias of Harkin Dyson - to recover the remains of the Qella discovered by Kroddok Stopa and recovered by Joto Eckels. It was a sleek, black-hulled sprint designed with speed in mind. (TT)

Meridian

this world was the sector capital of the Meridian Sector, and was the homeworld of the Grissmath race. The Grissmaths eventually destroyed themselves and the planet, which is now nothing more than a charred, radioactive wasteland. (POT)

Merikon

the Empire maintained a training facility on this planet, during the height of the New Order. (SWJ14)

Meril Power Station

this power-supply depot was located adjacent to Capital City, on the planet Omman. It was here than the Ramesh clan of Hutts brutally assassinated a member of the Tribunal of the Society of the Black Bha'lir, hoping to topple the guild and eliminate its threat to the Hutt control of the system. Unfortunately for the Ramesh, Black Bha'lir retribution was swift and deadly. (SWJ12, BSS)

Merilang-1221

this device was a full-spectrum numerical analyzer, and was designed to process incoming transmissions for any numerical encryption. (VOF)

Merilli

this woman was one of the female members of the Church of the Dark Side, and served as Grand Admiral Syn's spiritual advisor during the years following the Battle of Endor. Merilli was trained by Sariss during her time with the Church. Merilli died at Kashyyyk, when Syn's flagship Fi was destroyed by Admiral Ackbar and the New Republic. (SWI66, WOTC)

Merin, Jerth

this alias, used by Jered Pole as part of Operation Starbird, was a professional gambler who traveled to Goroth Prime in order to discuss the creation of a gaming syndicate on the planet. In this way, Lieutenant Pole managed to catch the ear of Imperial Governor Marsh Limoth, and gained a measure of respect with the Imperials. (GSE)

Merinda Niemeh

this Sullustan female served as a starfighter technician and leader of the ground crew of the Alliance's Eyrie Base. At one time, Merin was the chief technical advisor to the High King of Hargeeva, where she helped the King bring his palace up to Imperial standards. She became friends with Stevan Makintay during this time, and it was Merinda who tracked him to an Imperial penal colony after the King had Stevan imprisoned. Merin later followed Stevan into the Alliance. (SWJ8, SWJ10)

Meris Gen

this was the name of a noted Rodian bounty hunter. (UANT)

Meris I

this hot, rocky planet was the first world in the Meris System. (PG3)

Meris II

this was the second world in the Meris System, located in the Elrood Sector. It was a hot jungle world that was generally inhospitable to offworld life, although it supported many unique plants and strange, heat-resistant bacteria. This bacteria has been studied for possible commercial uses, but no specific products have been marketed. (PG3)

Meris III

this jungle world, the third in the Meris System, was home to a large number of specialized plants and animals that have been researched and examined for use in the pharmaceutical industry. Among the drugs created from Meris III's lifeforms was an antidote for the Taren Plague. It was orbited by a single moon. (PG3)

Meris V

this cool, rocky world was the fifth planet in the Meris System, located in the Elrood Sector. It was unexplored, but promised a vast supply of ores yet to be discovered. It was orbited by a pair of natural satellites. (PG3)

Meris VI

this frigid, ice-covered planet was the sixth world in the Meris System. Its atmosphere was barely breathable by humans, although the violent storms that swept its surface prohibited colonization. (PG3)

Merisee

this planet, the primary world in the Merisee System of the Elrood Sector, was known as the "breadbasket of the Elrood Sector" because its agricultural production provided foodstuffs to most of the sector. It was the homeworld of two races, the Meri and the Teltior, who had been separated from each other for many millennia until volcanic activity caused seismic shifts in the planet's surface. In a period known as "The Joining," a finger of mountains was formed between the two continents of the planet. This allowed the two races to finally encounter each other, leading to a series of civil wars. The fought for a thousand years before the New Republic located the planet, and the warring parties realized that their feud was miniscule compared to the rest of the galaxy. It enjoyed a free government even at the height of the New Order, and its enlightened leaders strived to keep it that way. The planet's beautiful plains and sweeping vistas hide a dark side to the planet: the Loag. The Loag are a band of mercenaries that survived being wiped out by the old Jedi Knights. The survivors fled to Merisee and hid, silently biding their time to gain revenge. Merisee was orbited by two moons, Tola and Meriso. The average day on Merisee lasts 24 standard hours, and its year lasts 315 local days. (PG3, OE)

Merisee Agra

a city on the planet Merisee, Merisee Agra was the site of one of the planet's three major starports. Much of the planet's cargo, including shipments of toz and Utozz, pass through Merisee Agra. (PG3)

Merisee Dispatch

a city on the planet Merisee, Merisee Dispatch was the site of one of the planet's three major starports. It was located just outside the capital city of Caronath, and was the primary access point for the medical facilities on the planet. (PG3)

Merisee Grand Medical Facility

this was the finest hospital found in the Elrood Sector, and was located in the center of the city of Caronath, on Merisee. In addition to its fine doctors and nurses, the Facility was home to the Sector's finest mental rehabilitation asylum. (PG3)

Merisee Hope

an alias used for the Pulsar Skate, it was employed when Mirax Terrik brought Gavin Darklighter to Coruscant, as part of the New Republic's plan to infiltrate Rogue Squadron into the society there. The real Merisee Hope is a slaver ship that traditionally brought exotic slaves to a brotherl on the outskirts of the Invisible Sector. (WG)

Merisee Prime

a city on the planet Merisee, Merisee Prime was also the site of the planet's largest starport. It was located just outside the capital city of Caronath. (PG3, OE)

Merisee Prime Pharmaceutical

based in the city of Caronath, on the planet Merisee, this was the primary producer of drugs in the Elrood Sector. Many of the new and unique drugs produced by MPP were derived from unusual lifeforms found on the planet Meris III. (PG3)

Meriso

this was the second of two moons which orbited the planet Merisee. (PG3)

Merkat

this planet is the primary world in the Merren System, and serves as the Inner Rim's endpoint along the Harrin Trade Corridor. (TSK)

Merkel

this modified Action V transport was owned and operated by Saadoon-Kauldi, and served as the crimelord's base of operation. The hull of the ship was painted with a matte-black finish, making it almost invisible to the naked eye. The interior of the ship was refitted to allow the Kadri'Ra to inhabit the holds, and other areas were modified to accommodate passengers and bodyguards. A small squadron of Z-95 Headhunters were maintained in the main hangar, and additional armament took the form of six turret-mounted turbolasers, four quad-laser cannons, and a tractor beam projector. (BSS)

Merkin, Talos

this aging Alliance starfighter pilot was known to his comrades as Pops. He had trained on Y-Wings, and served as Gold Five during the Battle of Yavin. He died during the first trench run against the Death Star. Note that this contradicts the Star Wars Customizable Card Game, which indicates Pops was the nickname of Davish Krail. (JPL, CCG)

Merkon, Tem

this old man roamed the streets of Phaeda's main starport city, collecting information on the movements of the Imperial troops garrisoned there in the wake of Grand Admiral Thrawn's death. He funneled information to Mirith Sinn and her New Republic forces, but he also provided information to Colonel Shev on the rebellious cell. In short, he provided information to the highest bidder. It was Merkon who first brought Kir Kanos to the attention of Mirith Sinn, shortly before he sold them all out to Shev's forces. Merkon hid Kanos from Shev's troops before he realized the price his secret would command. He then worked hard to remain in the good graces of both sides, but let it slip that he knew Mirith Sinn would move her Republic forces to Collo Fauale in the wake of Shev's attack. This alerted Sish Sadeet to his duplicity, and the Trandoshan tracked him to a meeting with Carnor Jax himself. Sinn and Sadeet confronted Merkon with their evidence, and Merkon tried to escape their wrath by offering them half of the credits he collected for the information on Kanos' whereabouts. In anger, Sinn's agent Massimo drove a knife into Merkon's chest, killing the old man. (CE)

Merkuni Drives

this starship manufacturer produced the Trenchant-class cruiser during the last years of the Old Republic. (AIR)

Merkur

this clanless Bothan male had an entrepreneurial spirit, and was an excellent mechanic. He fled Bothawui after earning enough credits for a flight to Kothlis, and started repairing old landspeeders to make ends meet. Over time, he had acquired several speeds of his own, and started Merkur's Cab Service in the city of Tal'cara, shortly before the Battle of Yavin. (SPG)

Merkur's Cab Service

this taxi service, owned and operated by the Bothan Merkur, catered to the needs of the citizens of Tal'cara, on the planet Kothlis. (SPG)

Merl

this man owned a popular cantina known as Merl's on Centares, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. It was during this time that Merl worked as a fixer for the Osaji Syndicate, and helped set up Osaji

Uhare's base on the planet. Sometime afterward, Merl was confronted by Valance the Hunter, who demanded information on the whereabouts of Tyler Lucian. After Merl gave Valance all the information he had, about how he had been providing rations to Lucian while keeping his location a secret. Valance shot him dead so that no one else could discover Lucian's location. (MC29, WOA32) younger of the two cooks aboard the Courteous who plays sabacc with Lando Calrissian. (LCS)

Merle

Merlie

this medium-sized farm animal was native to the planet Qiilura. The farmers of the planet raised merlies for food and other needs, including wool. In order to cut down on heating costs during the winter, most families even brought their merlies indoors, adding their body heat to small rooms. This also protected the merlies from roving packs of g'dans. The pungent odor of the merlies also acted as an insect repellent. The average merlie stood about a meter at the shoulder, and their bodies were covered with thick ringlets of woolly fur that was thick with natural oils. They were somewhat intelligent, and their green eyes were considered almost human by many farmers. (RCHC)

Merlist

this was a more Basic-friendly name for the planet Merlist. (LOE)

Merl's

this popular cantina was located on the backwater world of Centares during the height of the Galactic Civil War. It was owned by a man named Merl, who employed a Gotal named Uri and a Sakiyan known as Glocken to keep the cantina safe. (MC29, WOA32)

Mermen

extinct ocean-dwelling inhabitants of Calamari. (DA)

Mermyn

a swarming creature. (SE)

Mern

this is the thirteenth symbol in the Aurebesh script, and represents the Basic letter "m". (SWM)

Mernip

this creature was genetically developed by the Yuuzhan Vong, and bred in small pools. (EVC)

Mero-Nepp Ores

this mining and refinery operation was active during the height of the New Order. (AIR)

Merqs

this Alliance medical officer held the rank of Captain, and was in charge of the medical facilities maintained by the Nishr Taskforce at Nishr Base Seven during the Galactic Civil War. (ROE)

Merrejk

this Commander in the Imperial armed forces was an accomplished spy and scout. He often posed as an independent starship captain, flying regular runs in the Outer Rim Territories, using this disguise to gather intelligence on the activities of the Alliance and other criminals. (CCG11)

Merrick and Kalb Industries

this was the largest mining megacorporation operating in the Tapani Sector's Expanse region during the height of the New Order. Merrick and Kalb was headquartered in the House Reena province at this time. Unknown to the leaders of House Reena, MKI had made several deals which brought the Empire into Tapani Sector. (PGT, LOE)

Merrick, Ace

this Alliance X-Wing pilot was killed when his Rascal Squadron destroyed the Arah asteroid mining operation supporting the V38 project. A squadron of V38s attacked his flight group, killing him during the ambush. (RA2)

Merricope, Shyla

this woman served as the Diktat of the Corellian System, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. She was in complete agreement with then-Senator Garm Bel Iblis, when the Corellian System closed its borders to the Old Republic, in an effort to avoid the firestorm of separatism which was sweeping the galaxy. (HNN4)

Merrik

a human native of M'haeli, Merrik employed Mora to modify some swoops for him. He wore a prosthetic eyepiece to minimize the damage he suffered in a battle. After Leia Organa and Ranulf Trommer revealed Governor Grigor's dragite mining operation, Merrik sacrificed himself in order to allow Mora and Leia to escape with Trommer. The group had set charges within the mines, and when they exploded, they destroyed Merrik as well as the entire mining complex. (ROC)

Merril

this man was known as the most tyrannical Sergeant of the Cloud City Wing Guard, during the last years of the New Order. Utris M'Toc had named him a sworn enemy because Merrill looked down at his troops with disdain. (CCG9)

Merrilet Gorron

this Devaronian trader was a known associate of Ulicx Vinaq. (GG10)

Merriweather

this immense, boat-shaped bulk cruiser was the command ship used by the Tofs during their invasion of the galaxy, some months after the Battle of Endor. (MC107)

Merrk's Weapons Shop

this arms dealership was located in the main concourse of the Pegg starport, on the planet Antared VII. (GMH)

Merr-Sonn Industrial Equipment

this heavy machinery manufacturer was a subsidiary of Merr-Sonn Mil/Sci. (CSA)

Merr-Sonn Mil/Sci

this conglomerate was one of the original Signatory Sponsors of the Corporate Sector Authority. (CSA)

Merr-Sonn Munitions

this was probably the largest and best-known subsidiary of Merr-Sonn Mil/Sci, which was originally established to manufacture grenades, mines, and other forms of explosives. Over time, Merr-Sonn branched out to produce hold-out blasters and grenade launchers. Merr-Sonn's products were well-received in both the military and civilian markets, and the corporation's total sales were only surpassed by those of BlasTech. Merr-Sonn Munitions was originally founded more than 4,000 years before the Clone Wars, and rose to prominence during the Great Sith War when it provided cortosis-based alloys to the Sith and weapons to their Mandalorian mercenaries. During the era of the New Order, Merr-Sonn was able to remain independent, and maintained this independence well into the era of the New Republic. (RPG, ISB, CSA, NEGW)

MerrWeapons

this arms manufacturer is a subsidiary of Merr-Sonn Mil/Sci. (CSA)

Merry Havoc, The

this was the term used by Palleus Chuff to describe one of the many facial expressions used by Jedi Master Yoda. Chuff was a noted actor whose portrayal of Yoda in Jedi! made him famous across the galaxy. (YDR)

Merry Miner

this carry ship was used by Jaina and Jacen Solo to maneuver a stylus ship into position over Helska, during the New Republic's first attempt to destroy the Yuuzhan Vong invasion force. Although they went without notifying the Republic, the Solo children managed to use the stylus ship to pierce the icy crust of Helska and launch a warhead that would begin freezing the planet, in an effort to destroy the Praetorite Vong's yammosk before it could begin coordinating an assault on the New Republic's fleet. (VP) this woman was a Major with the Alliance, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. In her position, she was in charge of coordinating dozens of Alliance strike teams and agent group across the galaxy at one time, and was the primary commander of the team that secured the Black Ice. After the Empire traced the Black Ice to the Alliance base on Fangol, Lawra proposed a plan to ram the Black Ice into the Imperial torpedo sphere dispatched to wipe out the base. The plan worked, although Fangol had to be evacuated and abandoned. (BI)

Mers, Lawra

Mersel Kebir

this Dreadnaught was the flagship of Rendili's homeworld defense fleet during the height of the Clone Wars. It was under the command of Jace Dallin until some six months before the First Battle of Coruscant, when Dallin openly voiced his support for the Old Republic. His officers remained loyal to Rendili, which had sided with the Separatists, and mutinied before he could turn the ship over to Jedi Master Plo Koon. The mutineers, led by Lieutenant Mellor Yago, took Dallin and Plo Koon hostage, hoping to force the remaining Republic fleet to return to Coruscant. (RDR)

Merson

this planet was one of many that were ravaged by the conflicts of the Clone Wars. Some seventeen months after the Battle of Geonosis, clone troopers of the Grand Army of the Republic were dispatched to Merson under the command of Jedi Master Ronhar Kim. The intelligence provided by the Old Republic was faulty, and the troopers were ambushed as soon as they arrived. Within a few days, the natives had reduced the unit's strength by sixty-four percent, forcing them to retreat or be annihilated. Unfortunately, their starship support was unable to rescue. The Captain of their transport, Gilad Pellaeon, found himself under attack, and was forced to defend his ships before he could go planetside. Unknown to most everyone involved, the Merson Pirates had been augmented by Separatist forces, who had been dispatched by Count Dooku himself. Dooku had received orders from his own Master, Darth Sidious, to wipe out the mission to Merson, after hearing of Ronhar's plans to test the Galactic Senate for midichlorians. (RBL)

Merson Asteroid Belt

this field of space debris, located just outside the orbit of the planet Merson, was infamous for the pirates who used it as a base of operations during the last decades of the Old Republic. Known as the Merson Slavers, these pirates preyed most often on ships of the Republic itself, but were not picky about which ships they ambushed. Because of this, and because the Merson Asteroid Belt crossed several well-traveled hyperspace lanes, starships had to drop out of hyperspace and drift past the belt in order to avoid being captured by the pirates. (MC24, RBL)

Merson Slavers

this feared group of slavers were once foiled by Obi-Wan Kenobi, when they tried to hijack a pleasure cruise some years after the Clone Wars. It was believed that the Merson were affiliated with Zygerrian Slavers at the time. They operated from a base which was hidden within the Merson Asteroid Belt, from which the slavers took their name. (MC24, HNN4)

Mertan

when Talon Karrde first located Jorj Car'das on Exocron, Car'das played the part of an elderly man. He confused Karrde with another man by the name of Mertan. (VOF)

Merte

this Lambda-class shuttle was used by the Alliance to rescue a group of smugglers from an Imperial ambush, shortly before the Battle of Endor. The smugglers had agreed to help supply the Alliance for the coming battle, and were under Imperial attack. The Alliance managed to defeat the Imperials and get the smugglers to safety. (XWA)

Merthian Lung Infection

this mild disease causes the victim to have a wheezing cough and a runny nose for several weeks. This disease was made up by Roark Garnet, who had made a bet with Hawk Carrow that Imperial tax investigator Mothra would ignore their cargo if Garnet faked having a contagious disease. (SWCP)

Merthyog Communications

this small starship manufacturer won a contract with the Empire to build the II-xC broadcast ship, which was used to maintain and supplement subspace relay stations. (TA)

Merumeru

this Wookiee was one of the elders who led the city of Kachirho, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Merumeru was also a member of the Kachirho clan, which gave him added power and stature among his fellow Wookiees. (VD3)

Merzok

this was a common name among the Yinchorri race. (UANT)

Mesa

this man served the Alliance Navy as a Captain, and was the Chief Logistics officer who secured Haven base on Arbra and was placed in charge of protecting the fleet while it was in orbit around Arbra's sun. Captain Mesa and his team monitored the Kerts-Bhrq field generators which formed a pyramid around the fleet, protecting it from the sun's heat and radiation. (LTA5, WOTC, MC58) an abandoned lidium mine on Bothan's Planet. Tiree once tried to recruit support for the Alliance on Bothan's Planet, and used the old mine as a staging point, until he was discovered by Mar Barezz. The lidium was stripped from the mine, leaving the mine empty except for the plasma fires that ravage its lower levels. (RPG)

Mesa 291

Mesa Flats

this was one of the most remote sections of Tatooine's deep desert. (TG)

Mesan

this female Senali was married to Jaret, and became a member of the Banoosh-Walore clan. (SP)

Mesarc

this was one of the most predominant currencies exchanged on the planet Aargau, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (BF3)

Mescue

the Imperial modified CR90 corvette that was dispatched to intercept the Haven shuttle group before Admiral Zaarin could capture Emperor Palpatine. It was assisted by the Imperial-I class Star Destroyer Vanguard. (TIE)

Mesdri'starn

this city was located on the eastern continent of the planet Bothawui. (SPG)

Mesh Trap

developed for use by bounty hunters, the mesh trap was a weave of electrified fibers that could be hidden beneath leaves or other light material. When a being stepped onto the mesh trap, it triggered the electrical power and stunned the being, rendering them numb and easy to capture. (ROD)

Meshakian

this alien race is known for its beautiful jewelry. (VOF)

Meslinger

this xenobiologist spent part of his career researching the ibliton creature native to Randorn 2. (COG)

Mesobanis Timer

this was one of the primary components in the MX9 blaster rifle. Regular adjustment of the timer ensured that the weapon operated at its peak performance level. (LFCW)

Mesonics

manufacturers of focalized explosive charges. These explosives were hard to use, because they required detonators that fire at triple frequency intervals. (TFE)

Mesoriaam, Barid

a human who served as one of Bria Tharen's Intelligence operatives during the early days of the Alliance. He was later captured by Jabba the Hutt and tortured for information on the Rebel Alliance, which he was carrying in a small datadot hidden in his mouth. Jabba tortured him for days at his Mos Eisley townhouse before Muftak and Kabe tried to break in. They discovered Barid, who entrusted the datadot to them for delivery to an unspecified Mon Calamarian. Barid probably died under torture, but Muftak and Kabe delivered the datadot. They received a large reward and two travel vouchers for passage off Tatooine. (TME, RD)

Message Cube

a device which is virtually unsliceable, a message cube can be keyed to the recipient's body chemistry, fingerprints, or voice. The outside of the cube is used to display the recipient's name, address, or a short message or code phrase. The cube can be hollow, used for delivering small data chips or other physical media, or it can be built around a tiny holoprojector. Cubes which contain holovids can be set for single viewing or repetition. (AC)

Message Pod

a device similar to a hyperspace courier tube in that it is used to leave a message for recovery. It differs from the courier tube in that it has no propulsion system. (COTF)

Message to Spacers

known as a METOSP (pronounced "MEE-tosp"), this was a communications channel on which starship pilots obtained general notices and up-to-date information on starports across the galaxy. These were one-way transmissions, as the pilot couldn't reply to the METOSP. The information on the METOSP allowed starship pilots to land their ships without mishap, providing weather data, traffic patterns, and other pertinent information. (PSG)

Message Wafer

a flat, rectangular card which contains a message. When the wafer is received by the designated recipient, he or she creases the card in the center and cracks it open along the crease. The card can then be folded for standing on a flat surface. The card contains a set of special crystals which will replay the sender's message with video and audio output. When the message is complete, the wafer disintegrates in a flash of light. (JS)

Message, The

this was the name used by those Yuuzhan Vong Shamed Ones to describe the story of Vua Rapuung and his friendship with Anakin Solo. The story told of how the Jedi Knights worked with the Shamed Ones to expose the heretical theories of Mezhan Kwaad, along with the information that the Yuuzhan Vong gods might not be as powerful as the priests had led their civilization to believe. The Message was passed from Shamed One to Shamed One, with never more than three individuals being in contact at one time. This ensured that, in case one Shamed One was arrested for spreading The Message, no more than a few other individuals could be arrested as well. This allowed The Message to spread throughout the galaxy, becoming a force that the Yuuzhan Vong commanders were hard-pressed to deal with. When Nom Anor adopted the personage of Yu'shaa, the Shamed Ones began spreading The Message with earnest, and it began to reach the ears of more powerful individuals. Nom Anor twisted the basic story to meet his own needs, inventing the Rainbow-eyed Enemy to represent the powerful Yuuzhan Vong establishment. The Message was altered to bring the Jedi Knights more to the forefront, and eventually became known as the Jedi Heresy to all castes of Yuuzhan Vong. (FH1, FH2, FH3)

Messenger

this courier ship was owned by Core Courier Service during the early days of the New Republic, and was piloted by Taryn Clancy and Del Sato. The ship was a modified Ghtroc Class 720 freighter, armed with a double laser cannon and equipped with redundant shielding. The interior of the ship had been modified for courier duty, and could accommodate ten passengers and 135 metric tons of cargo. (TFE, SWJ7)

Messert Mines Corporation

this mining operation established a number of settlements on the planet Nurstin during the last century of the Old Republic, hoping to cash in on the dense concentrations of corthel in the atmosphere and cortheum in the planet's crust. Messert was also the first corporation to begin mining on the planet Essowyn. (GMK, PG!)

Messtin

Captain Hawra claimed to have a brother named Messtin on Dakot Seven, when he was approached by a group of Alliance agents who had infiltrated the Imperial outpost on Lotide. Hawra, in fact, did not have a brother, but used the name as a way to get the agents to blow their cover as academicians from Dakot Seven. (BI)

Mestapol Zephyr

this was a model of light combat starfighter. The Zephyr measured 50 meters in length, and required a pilot to operate. It had room for two additional passengers and up to 300 kilograms of cargo space. (POC)

Mester Reef

this was an immense coral reef, located on the planet Calamari. It was here that Danni Quee first saw Jacen Solo for what he truly was: not a Jedi Knight, not a Solo, just Jacen Solo. (DW, FH2)

Mestra System

this Minos Cluster system once held planetary bodies, although all of them have been destroyed. In their wake stretches one of the galaxy's largest asteroid fields. It has been estimated that over 100 trillion pieces of rock exist in the field, with many of them being large enough to rival small moons. The Mestra System has been mined for the abundant duralium ore found in the asteroids. The system is owned and controlled by the Minos-Mestra Corporation. The asteroids are mined for their wealth of usable ores and minerals. The asteroid belt circles the system every 611 local days, as measured from the asteroid Javis-12. The average "day" in the system lasts about 45 standard hours, which is the median rotational period of the largest asteroids. There are a large number of rumors and legends which describe ancient troves of weapons, treasures, and artifacts that are hidden within the asteroids, although no one has yet brought forth physical proof. (GG6)

Mesyl Rant

this was the name of a noted Umbaran individual. (UANT)

Meta-ceramic

this was a form of strong, woven material that could be used to create diplomatic pouches that protected their contents from damage. It was originally developed by the Trade Federation, during the last decades of the Old Republic. The Federation interwoven computational circuitry with the meta-ceramic, creating a pouch that also served as a computer, which could display its message on its surface. (YDR)

Metal Borer

this species of insect was known to inhabit spaceports and shipyards, feeding on the hulls and exterior components of starships. This trait made the metal borer a nuisance to port owners and ship owners alike. (YDR)

Metal Man

this is the Togorian term for a droid. (GG4)

Metal Parasite

this unusual creature was a common pest native to Balmorra. Little more than a pair of long, double-jointed legs connected to a ravenous mouth, metal parasites fed on exposed metals. They favored factories and buildings, where heavy metals were readily available. An infestation of metal parasites could seriously undermine the structural integrity of a structure in a few days. (EGP)

Metal-crystal Phase Shifter

MCPS for short, this device alters the structure of a material and allows manipulation of the material at a molecular level. It was designed to penetrate a starship's protective shields and alter the metallic structure of the hull, turning it to powder. The MCPS was developed at the Maw Installation, but was never implemented, as the prototype was destroyed when the New Republic attacked the Installation, and all technical records were lost in the battle. (COTF)

Metalmite

this species of small insect makes a loud humming noise when it swarms together. Metalmites are composed mainly of metals themselves. They use biological enzymes to dissolve raw metals, then consume them for nutrients. Metalmites live in broods, with each brood led by an empress or queen. Each brood has a different pitch to its humming, and rival broods often go to war against each other. They can cause a lot of damage to any installation which is made of metal, or has metallic components. Drend Navett and Klif managed to get a swarm of them into the Drev'starn shield generator power station by surreptitiously placing them on the clothing of maintenance workers. The Bothans were forced to call them in - as they were acting as exotic pet dealers - to contain the infestation. This allowed them to further their plans to take out the generator. (VOF)

Metalorn

this remote planet was best-known as the corporate headquarters for the Baktoid Armor Workshop. During the height of the Clone Wars, however, the forces of the Grand Army of the Republic were able to regain control of the planet, removing the Separatists from power. In the years following the Clone Wars, the Empire either nationalized existing factories or built new ones on Metalorn. Much of the planet's surface was destroyed by environmental damage from strip-mining and pollution, forcing the Empire to re-establish its factories beneath the surface. (HNN4, MC30, ROF)

Metalsmiths' Guild

this group of extremely-proficient metal crafters was native to the planet Vandelheim, which was known for its deposits of valuable ores. The Guild was originally formed about 3,000 years before the Galactic Civil War, when the independent prospectors Vandel and Helm first discovered the planet and its mineral riches. The prospectors and their families settled on Vandelheim, and their small settlement served as the basis for the Guild. (EGC, PH)

Metalwood

this species of tree grew on the planet Kuras III, reaching heights of 30 meters or more. They were named for their unusually smooth bark, which resembled sheet metal in feel and coloration. The roots of this tree obtained food by refining raw ores through a unique form of photosynthesis. These ores were metabolized and deposited in the bark of the tree. (PG3)

Metarie

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Metarshi

this species of herding herbivore was native to the planet Alk'lellish III. (TBSB)

Metatheran Cartel

during the last century of the Old Republic, the Trade Federation was led by three alien races: the Neimoidians, the Filordi, and the Caarites. Both the Filordi and the Caarites were unprepared for the Neimoidians' plans to blockade the Naboo System, and decided to break off their relationship with the Trade Federation. Together, the two races formed the Metatheran Cartel, and begin making plans to wrest control of Cularin from the Federation if the blockade of Naboo should fail. When the Federation was defeated at Naboo and was faced with the loss of their trade charter, the Metatheran Cartell assumed control of Cularin. The Cartel made a serious effort to eliminate piracy in the system, and placed a number of restrictions on trade and commerce. (LFC)

Metellean

this was the term used to describe the human inhabitants of the planet Metellos. (CCW)

Metellean Steep

this strange creature resembled a tiny humanoid. Its triangular head was topped with a pair of eyestalks. A carnivorous amphibian, the steep was protected by tough, rubbery hide and a wide mouth that was filled with needle-like teeth. (CCW, WOTC)

Metellos

this star was the central body of the Metellos System. (CCW)

Metellos

this planet, the primary world in the Metellos System, was known as the "Coruscant that wasn't." It was believed that Metellos was colonized before the formation of the Old Republic, presumably by explorers from nearby Coruscant. Like Coruscant, Metellos's surface was completely urbanized. Much of the cityscape, however, had degenerated into overcrowded shacks and hovels over the centuries leading up to the Battle of Endor. The rich and powerful lived in floating cities that never came into contact with the surface. On the surface of the planet and beneath, rampant overpopulation limited the amount of habitable area to the barest minimum. Metellos was the fourth planet in the Metellos System, and was orbited by three moons. The average day on Metellos lasted twenty-four standard hours, while its year encompassed 361 local days. The few remaining natural bodies of water were used as septic systems for the urban areas, and only a small pocket of desert wasteland remained unblemished. (SWI64, CCW)

Metellos System

this star system, located near Coruscant, was one of the first systems subjugated by the revived Emperor Palpatine after the Battle of Endor. (DESB)

Metellos Trade Route

this was one of the first hyperspace travel routes to link the Core Worlds to the Koornacht Cluster. It was discovered during the last decades of the Old Republic, and opened up the many worlds of the Koornacht Cluster - like J't'p'tan - for exploration and colonization. At its peak, the Metellos Trade Route stretched from the Core Worlds to the planet Orooturoo, in the Farlax Sector. However, most of the worlds located along the route were of little commercial value, and the Metellos Trade Route saw little traffic. (WOTC, CCW)

Meteor

this was one of the Alliance's Nebulon-B frigates, active during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Meteor Racer

this was one of the many starships that were trapped on Coruscant when the Yuuzhan Vong attacked the planet. Along with some 600 other independent starships, the Meteor Racer fled as soon as the first wave of attacks began. (SBS)

Meteor-class Aerial Fort

this was an Adumari warship, capable of atmospheric flight. The Adumari warship carried several smaller craft, including the Blade-class fighters. (SOA)

Meteor-class Q-Carrier

this drop ship was developed for use by the Mandalorian Mercs during the centuries leading up to the Clone Wars. These beetle-shaped vessels were carried to a battle site in the holds of Mandalorian Dungeon Ships, and could rapidly deploy troops planetside without being damaged. Each Q-Carrier was armed with rotating twin blaster cannons on either side of its cockpit, which was modeled after the helmets of the ancient Mandalorians. Four stout landing gear allowed the Q-Carrier to make high-speed landings without jostling the crew or its complement of troops. After the Mandalorian Civil War, production of the Meteor-class Q-Carrier was halted, since there were very few Mandalorians left to need them. (SWI80)

Methane Fix Cantina

this cantina was located on the Dune Street, in Mos Eisley on Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. (IWS1)

Methane Sifter Ramjet

produced by Bepin Motors, this 15-meter-long hovercraft was designed for use on gaseous planets where the atmosphere was laden with methane, ammonia, and similar gases. Completely enclosed, the Ramjet used twin scoops to collect atmospheric gases and compressed them into fuel cylinders during flight. These gases were then burned to provide propulsion. This allowed the Ramjet to continually replenish its fuel, allowing for extended flights. It required a pilot and co-pilot to operate, and could carry a single passenger and up to 150 kilograms of cargo. (GFT)

Methanogen

Grannans need to breathe this gas in order to survive. It was found in the proper quantities on the planet Polneye. (SOL)

Metharg's University

an institute of higher learning, Metharg's University maintained an oceanographic institute on Trieron. (PG1)

Metharian Nebula

this nebula was located near the Elrood Sector, and was the home of a number of star systems. (PG)

Metharian Nebula Territories

this backwater section of the galaxy contained Elrood Sector and the Metharian Nebula. (OE)

Methnap

this cetacean was domesticated by the ocean-going ranchers of the planet Chad. They are the calm, distant cousins of the tsaelke and cy'een, although they are also less intelligent. They measure 12-15 meters in length, and are sometimes used as mounts. (SWJ10)

METOSP

see Message to Spacers (PSG)

Metrobig City

this was the largest city on Skor II. (HR, HNN4)

Metrobig Interplanetary Blastport

this spaceport was located in Metrobig City, on the planet Skor II, during the last decades of the Old Republic. The spaceport was initially attacked and overtaken by Separatist forces during the height of the Clone Wars, but an assault force led by Jedi Master Mace Windu liberated it from the Separatists. It was later learned that the Separatists had planned to use the Metrobig Blastport as the base from which they would launch an operation to disperse proximity mines across the Rimma Trade Route. (SWI69)

Metrocab

this robo-hack was jointly designed by Go-Corp and Utilitech. It measured six meters in length, had room for up to four passengers, and could attain speeds up to 300 kilometers an hour. Its computer brain was linked to a main database of the local roads and alleyways, and a Central Learning Chip gave the Metrocab the ability to learn and remember shortcuts based on the time of day and regular traffic patterns. The armor plating which covered the Metrocab's exterior was primarily designed to keep swoop gangs and criminals from breaking into the vehicle to steal its earnings, but also served to keep passengers inside until they paid their fares. (CSA, SWJ14, EGD, AEG)

Metron Burner

this Corellian YT-1300 freighter was owned and operated by Bama Vook, with assistance from his son, Chup-Chup and the navigation droid LE-PR34. Vook also owned a modified Z-95 Headhunter, which had a cockpit with enough room for two beings. (E1A2)

Metropolitan Shuttle

a small repulsorlift craft used to travel in cities. (JS)

Metta Drop

this area of the Tatooine desert was part of Jabba the Hutt's pod racing course, and presented racers with a repulsorlift jolt after the winding obstacle course of Jag Crag Gorge. The Drop was a sheer wall of rock that rose some 20 meters in the air. Whenever a pod racer crossed over the Drop, it immediately plummeted downward until its repulsors kicked in and leveled the craft out at the bottom. (TPM)

Metternich

this was one of the Nebulon-B frigates which were used by the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Mettier, Lag

this man served the Alliance's ground support teams at Echo Base, on Hoth, and was a good friend of Dack Ralter. However, in the wake of the battle, Mettier was captured and imprisoned by the Empire. He later was one of the many prisoners held by Ysanne Isard aboard the Lusankya, and was part of the group her clone left in the Xenovet facility on Commenor. There, he was rescued by Rogue Squadron and returned to the New Republic. (IR)

Mev

one of the four moons orbiting the planet Ambria. (TOJC)

Mexeluine

this planet was located in the Anoat Sector of the galaxy, where it intersected with the Yarith and Javin Sectors in the area known as the Greater Javin. This planet was one of the first to profit from the presence of Figg & Associates, offering cheaper spaceport rates than Gerrenthum to attract visitors and traffic. (WOA33)

Mexnean

this Berrite con-man was famous (or infamous) for his scams and petty thievery. He often assumed female characteristics, although information gathered by New Republic Intelligence agents points out that Mexnean is actually a female. She was believed to have provided various crimelords with information she stole from her victims, some of which has compromised New Republic actions. (GG12, WBC)

Meydhu

this being was a weapons smuggler who made a living selling outdated blasters to primitive civilizations in the Outer Rim Territories, during the last years of the New Order. (GUN)

Meynin

this smuggler found an outlaw tech on Rampa who used a vast army of MSE-6 utility droids to repair his ship. (FTD)

Mezdec

this man was one of the leaders of the Typha-Dor resistance, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Along with wife, Shalini, Mezdec rallied people from throughout the Uziel System for her crusade against the invasion plans of the Vanqors. Operating from a base on the moon known as TY44, Mezdec was the resistance's chief communications officer. Mezdec claimed that it was Samdew who had been planning to undermine the group's efforts by transmitting the exact location of their base on TY44, just before Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker arrived in the Uziel System to mediate a cease-fire. Mezdec claimed that he had awakened to find Samdew at the communications station, and shot him with a blaster to stop him. In the ensuing firefight, Rajana shot Samdew in the chest, killing him instantly. It was later revealed that it was Mezdec, not Samdew, who was the traitor, and that Mezdec had tried to kill Samdew to cover his tracks. Four other members of their group were killed when the fire systems activated in their quarters, shutting down their oxygen supply. Their deaths were also attributed to Mezdec. When the Jedi exposed him, Mezdec quickly escaped from TY44 and fled back to Typha-Dor, where he insinuated himself in the command structure of High General Bycha. Only the timely arrival of Obi-Wan and Anakin on the planet allowed Mezdec to be revealed as the true saboteur, and Bycha had him arrested and placed into custody for later questioning. (JQ7)

this was once of the many names given to Duros females. Among the Duros, it meant "eclipse". (GCG)

Mezhan Kwaad

this female Yuuzhan Vong was the Master Shaper who was chosen by Master Yal Phaath to investigate the source of The Force within a Jedi Knight's body. Like many Masters, Mezhan had undergone a great deal of unique bodily alteration, including the placement of eight tool-like fingers on one hand, in order to help her in her role as a Shaper. What her superiors were unaware of was that Mezhan was one of a growing minority of Yuuzhan Vong which did not necessarily believe the Yuuzhan Vong were the preordained rulers of the known universe. She did not believe in the existence of the Yuuzhan Vong gods, and took the position to investigate the Jedi because she believed she could prove her beliefs by mapping out the systems of a human. She got her chance when Tahiri Veila was captured on Yavin 4, and Mezhan worked with her apprentice, Nen Yim, to accurately map out the human nervous system. Despite their success, the Shapers were unable to isolate the source of the Force. When Anakin Solo and Vua Rapuung rescued Tahiri, it was revealed that Mezhan had once been Vua's lover. Their love was forbidden under Yuuzhan Vong law, and Vua had broken off their relationship in order to further his own career as a warrior. Mezhan, in a jealous rage and fearful that he would slander her, infected Vua with a disease that left him a member of the Shamed Ones. She admitted this after being discovered as a heretic, and was vilified when it was revealed that she had not discovered the basis for the Force. Before she could escape Yavin 4, though, Mezhan Kwaad was decapitated in a battle with Anakin Solo and Tahiri. Among those Shapers who were relegated to the ranks of the Shamed Ones, Mezhad Kwaad's actions proved that the Jedi Knights were not the evil creatures they were made out to be. Stories of how Tahiri survived her torture began to circulate among the Shamed Ones, starting an underground cult that worshipped the Jedi Knights, not the old Yuuzhan Vong gods. (EVC, FH1)

Mezza

this older Ryn was stranded on the planet Duro, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. She had taupe fur, highlighted by red-orange splashes and a blue tail. She and many other Ryn distrusted SELCORE and its ability to help the refugees fleeing the Yuuzhan Vong. She led a large clan of Ryn while stranded on the planet, and spent a great deal of time arguing with Romany and his smaller clan. However, after the Yuuzhan Vong attacked Duro in an effort to take the refugees as sacrifices, Mezza and Romany worked together to get as many refugees off the planet as possible. (BP)

Mezzicanley Wave

this was the name of the effect when matter reached its fourth stage, after a material had passed through the vaporous stage and began to re-solidify at incredibly cold temperatures. The wave itself was a fuzzy, distorted glow which appeared as the material re-solidified. (VP)

Mezzileen

this legendary being was once the Supreme Chancellor of the Old Republic. He was once quoted as saying the planet Coruscant was "...an incandescent organ of life, visibly vibrating with the pulses of billions." (CCW)

Mezzine, Chyan

this alias, used by Gara Petothel, was used to gain access to the New Republic during her tenure with Apwar Trigit. Chyan was a communications officer aboard the New Republic frigate Mother Sea, and intercepted a number of important transmissions for Trigit's use. Some of the information was eventually used to destroy Talon Squadron. The New Republic discovered the alias and put out a warrant for the arrest of Gara Petothel, but believed she was killed when Trigit was killed along with the Implacable. (IF, SOC)

MFB-4 Mobile Repulsor Base

this repulsor-equipped, mobile command base was custom-built by the Empire for use on outpost worlds. Measuring some 200 meters in length, the MFB-4 required a crew of 30 and four gunners. It could transport up to 120 support staff and 300 troops, along with 150 metric tons of supplies. This allowed the MFB-4 to remain on active patrol for several weeks before requiring re-supply. The MFB-4 was armed with a turret-mounted heavy turbolaser and four supporting laser cannons. (OE)

MFCR-200

this is the designation of one of Lardanis Survival Systems' portable power generators. The MFCR-200 was favored by smugglers and Alliance personnel because of its small size and reliability. (CCG4)

MFTAS

this weapons targetting technology, known as mutli-frequency targetting and acquisition system, was developed for use in some of the more sophisticated suits of powerer armor. (SWJ3)

MG1-A

this was the designation of a modern proton torpedo launching system developed for the Old Republic during the height of the Clone Wars. Each torpedo had a range of some 3,000 meters, and could accelerate to speeds of 20,000 kilometers per hours when fired. These torpedoes were unaffected by energy fields, allowing them to pierce most starship shielding systems. (JT)

M-g2

Seinar Fleet System's General-Purpose Warhead Launching system, used on the TIE Advanced. (TIE)

M-g-2

see M-g2 (SWDB)

MG-3

developed during the years leading up to the Clone Wars, the MG-3 was a fixed-emplacement missile tube designed by Krupx for use on groundships and speeders. (SHPT)

MG5

Krupx concussion missile launchers used by Incom/Subpro on the Z-95 Headhunter. (TIE)

MG7

this was the designation of Krupx Munitions' proton torpedo, used by Incom on the X-Wing starfighter. (SCRE, EGW)

MG-7 Blue Squadron

part of the Alliance forces during the Battle of Endor. (ROTJN)

MG7-A

this was Krupx Munitions MG7 proton torpedo launcher, which was used on Incom's X-Wing starfighter. It utilized the MG7 proton torpedo, and each launcher could hold three torpedoes. Note that Star Wars: Incredible Cross-Sections indicates that the MG7-A was the actual torpedo. (EGW, ICS)

MG9

this advanced Krupx Munitions' proton torpedo launching system was used on the B-Wing starfighter. (XW)

MGAD-47

this AD-series armory droid served as the administrator of the weapons armory aboard the Alliance cruiser Mantan Wanderer. (ROE)

MGL-1

this was the model number of Locris Syndicates' micro-grenade launcher. It was designed for use as a strap-on addition to a heavy blaster weapon. (ROE)

M'Guy, Rass

Kaj Nedmak owed money to this loan shark, who worked out of a base on the planet Ord Mantell. He was a huge man, but he was not a brute. He carried himself with a certain air of confidence, and moved with a style most crimelords could only hope for. Kaj tried to pay off a gambling debt he owed Rass by double-crossing Bwahl and using weapons the Hutt had contracted them to ship to Tammuz-an as payment to Rass. Rass took the weapons, but only as a payment of the interest Kaj owed him. After Kaj and Celia Durasha left Ord Mantell, Bwahl discovered his duplicity, and sent his agents out to capture or kill him. (SWJ14)

M'haeli

this planet has an agrarian economy. It is the homeworld of humans and the H'drachi. M'haeli has several natural satellites. It was a convenient refueling point for traffic into and out of nearby systems, and as such was assimilated by the Empire. (ROC)

Mharsup

an Imperial freighter under the protection of Zaarin. (TIE)

Mhingxin

this is a race of rodent-faced sentients known for their high-pitched voices. As a race, they had a low self-image, mainly because they resembled the sewer rats and other low-life denizens despised by other species. This made them easy to provoke. (HM)

M-HYD

this pretentious hydroponics droid was owned by Owen and Beru Lars. It speaks a number of computer languages, but prefers to converse in binary. Its main use was to communicate with loadlifters and vaporators. (CCG2)

Mi boska di

this partial Huttese phrase was used to ask for something. Roughly translated into Basic, it meant "I'm looking for", as in Mi boska di Shmi Skywalker meaning "I'm looking for Shmi Skywalker." (AAOTC)

Mi nama

this Sullustan phrase was used to indicate one's name, as in "Mi nama Den Dhur." (MJH)

Mi, Celjo

this man was a noted expert in the martial art of teras kasi, during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. (HNN5)

MI-726

this MI-series security droid was assigned to a high-ranking Sienar Fleet Systems executive during the height of the New Order. When an Alliance raid on the SFS facility attempted to acquire plans to prototype TIE Fighters, MI-726 took the opportunity to go rogue. MI-726 turned up years later, during a series of sabotage missions on random Imperial facilities. Witnessed claimed that MI-726 denounced the Empire before setting off explosives to destroy its targets. An Imperial bounty of 100,000 credits was eventually established for the destruction of this droid, but it was never claimed. (GMR6)

Mia

this woman was believed to have been Tycho Celchu's Alderaanian fiancee by Imperial Intelligence agents. However, Mia was actually Tycho's sister. She was killed when the first Death Star destroyed the planet. (XWRS, XWBT)

Mian Hoob

a Sullustan member of Page's Commandos, Mian Hoob works with Korren as the team's technical specialists. (HTSB)

Mianda

this Imperial Major was in command of the TIE Fighter squadrons assigned to defend the second Death Star, during its construction over the forest moon of Endor. (CCG11)

Miaria Prrt

this Felacatian princess was stranded on Tatooine after her transport ship was ambushed in deep space. Princess Miaria herself was kidnapped, but the stress of traveling through hyperspace forced her to alter her physical shape. Her captor panicked, and stranded her on Tatooine shortly after the Battle of Naboo. She managed to convince Vilmarh Grahrk to bring her back to Felacat, but a trio of pit droids Villie had acquired from Watto altered his ship's navigational programming. Instead of dropping in and out of hyperspace to keep Princess Miaria from changing form, the droids kept the ship in hyperspace, thereby maximizing its speed. Miaria changed into her predatory form, and Villie was forced to keep her in an escape pod until they landed on Felacat. Princess Miaria was delivered safely, but Villie left the pit droids behind as recompense for his troubles. (T8)

Miasra Sauce

this yellow-swirled sauce is the perfect accompaniment to mesh-cooked trimpian slices. (VOF)

Miat

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Miaxi

this female Falleen was a former slave who became the consort of the Imperial governor on Speco. Many claimed she ran the planet by seducing with her Falleen charms. (SESB)

Mica

a companion to the Corellian smuggler, Kess, Mica was swallowed by the Sarlacc on Tatooine. (TJP)

Mica

a native of the planet Frego, this woman was a cousin of Lena Cobral, and greeted Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi when they arrived on Frego to escort Lena back to Coruscant. Mica was loyal to Lena, and feared that Lena was in terrible danger following the murder of Rutin Cobral. Lena later revealed to Qui-Gon when Mica was seven, she had witnessed the murder of her mother at the hands of the Cobral family, and had been opposed to organized crime ever since. However, Mica feared that Lena's fate would be that of Rutin, and went to great lengths to stop Lena from testifying against the Cobral. Mica even erased the vast computer library of data Rutin had amassed, just to keep Lena safe. When Lena agreed to meet Zanita Cobral to obtain information for her testimony, Mica followed her. Unfortunately, the meeting was a trap arranged by Solan Cobral, in an effort to eliminate Lena and Mica. In the melee which ensued, Mica stepped in front of a blast from Bard Cobral, which was meant for Lena, and took the shot herself. Mica died shortly afterward from the wound. (TOW)

Micae

this Daan man, the son of Terandi and a native of the Garth settlement, was killed along with his three sons in one of the many struggles to control Zehava. He would have taken all four of his sons into the battle, but the youngest - Nield - was too young at age five to fight. Nield survived, and eventually joined The Young. (DOD)

Micamberlecto

the Frozian elected by the New Republic to be the governor-general of the Corellian Sector and the Outlier Systems. Wielding little real power, Micamberlecto was forced to work with former Imperial functionaries, who fled to the Outlier Systems when the Empire was defeated, only to be elected to posts by their respective planets. He was murdered by Thrackan Sal-Solo's Human League, as part of Thrackan's plan to subvert the Sacorrian Triad's Starbuster Plot and take control of the Corellian System for himself. (AC, AS, SC)

Michaud Industries

this corporation manufactured droid manipulation devices, such as heavy-duty arms and retractors. (DWK)

MICI

this was a model of small ion cannon produced by BlasTech for mounting on small vehicles, like speeders. (HAS)

Miciluz, Diran

a native of the Ktilac Regions, this man served as the primary weapons expert on Hydrospeare Corporation's Design Team Beta, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Miciluz' work was known to Hydrospeare, as it was his design which led to the creation of BlasTech's HY-6 heavy cannon. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, it was learned that Miciluz was secretly working on no less than sixteen weapons projects for various Imperial Moffs. Miciluz was distinguished by his short stature and bright green hair, which seemed to indicate that he was descended from the crew of the Noble. (AIR)

Micrel Power Supply

this was a generic term used to describe miniature power supplies that could be used to power small devices. Micrel supplies generated very little heat, so they could be used in prosthetic limbs and other devices that came into contact with flesh. (HTTE)

Micro Applications, Incorporated

known as MicroApp, this small company mass-produced a generic microcomputer chip which was used by a variety of datapad and pocket computer manufacturers. Their headquarters were located in the city of Tal'cara, on the planet Kothlis. (SPG)

MicroApp

see Micro Applications, Incorporated (SPG)

Microaxial

manufacturers of shipboard navigation computers. (SCRE)

Microbe Armor

developed by the Barabel race, microbe armor appeared to be formed from inflated pouches. The pouches actually contain a saline solution which supported the growth of microscopic organisms. These organisms were created to consume and thrive on radiation, and essentially "ate" the energy which was contained in a blaster bolt. This made the microbe armor a kind of living, ablative shield. Whenever the armor was hit with a blast, it stimulated the micro-organisms to reproduce, which actually made the armor more effective over time. (GFT)

Microbial Mat

this was the term used to describe the antiseptic, bio-engineered material used by the Yuuzhan Vong to line the floor of an oqa tube. The microbial mat helped to decontaminate any Yuuzhan Vong who used the oqa to move from one starship to another. (UF)

Micro-book

this out-dated form of data storage is prevalent in many schools that can't afford updated educational materials. (CSWEA)

MicroData Technologies

this small corporation produced a wide range of datapads, including the Companion2000. (EGW)

Micro-energy Field

this was an Imperial form of personal shield, developed shortly after the Battle of Yavin. However, the technology was very expensive, and prohibited wide-spread use of the shield. Darth Vader provided one to the actor who portrayed Ben Kenobi on the planet Aridus. Hoping to fool Luke Skywalker into believing that the actor was the real Kenobi, he used a micro-energy field to deflect laser blasts, simulating the use of the Force. (CSW)

Microfusion Pile

a small, almost limitless energy source used to power Vuffi Raa. (LCM)

Micro-jolt

this small energy weapon was developed by the Serps. (MC64)

Micromine

this Imperial form of space mine was developed in order to prevent its detection by normal starship scanners. Each micromine was a tiny spec of anti-matter, contained within a magnetic shell. Because each micromine was so small, they were virtually undetectable. The Empire mined the space around Shiva IV with micromines to protect their interest in the system, but the full-scale use of micromines turned out to be cost-prohibitive, and the plans for mass manufacture were scrapped. (MC53)

Micro-mine

this was a miniature version of a standard anti-personnel mine, used by the clone troopers and clone commandos of the Grand Army of the Republic during the Clone Wars. (RCHC)

Micromite

this insect, found on the planet Kubindi, is used to create a tasty pate in Kubaz cooking. (SWJ10)

Micro-motivator

a small, electronic device which can emit a stimulating burst of energy. They are often used by criminals who fix races by inserting them into racing animals and artificially enhancing the animals' drive to continue. When the race is over, they can be destroyed within the animal, since they're so small they don't a lot of damage. (JS)

Micronite Charge

this small explosive is form by taking a gram or less of detonite and wrapping it around a wire or cable with a wad of SlipSheet or a ration wrapper. The small charge doesn't cause much outward damage, but can be used to sever computer cables in remote locations. (CFG)

Micropole

a small device which is riveted to a starship's hull to keep a breech from opening any wider. (LCF)

Microtherm

this form of explosive weapon was developed during the last years of the Old Republic, but was relegated to backwater use by cheaper, though more destructive, forms of explosives. Microtherms detonations were confined to a small volume, but caused highly concentrated damage within their blast radius. (PH)

MicroThrust Processors

this computer system manufacturer was established during the Clone Wars, and produced a wide range of communications products for use by the Grand Army of the Republic. At the top of their line were systems that monitored and regulated starship power generation and distribution. At the bottom of the line were portable computers which allowed users to gain access and control of large, mainframe systems. They also manufactured a line of HoloNet transmission systems. (CFG, EGV, NEGW)

Microwave Stunner

manufactured by Jer'N Weapons Systems, this device looked like a hold-out blaster. It fired a coherent blast of microwave energy at its target, which disrupted the neural systems and rendered the target immobilized. (GSE)

Mic'Tunan'Jus Orgu

this Nikto owned and operated a series of docking bays on Tatooine, some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. He was also one of the few beings who possessed a poison that could effectively eliminate gizkas. (KOTOR)

Mid Rim

the expanse of open, sparsely-populated space between the Inner and Outer Rim Territories. (SWSB)

Mid Rim Ornate

this term was used to describe the lavish style of architecture prevalent on many Mid-Rim worlds during the height of the Old Republic. (COD)

Midakinos

this barren, frigid world was the fourth moon of the planet Ovise V. (GMR9)

Midakos

this frigid, glacier-covered world was the third moon of the planet Ovise V. (GMR9)

Midani

Suroc planned to pick up a nashtah to help with a hunt on this planet. (GG11)

Midanyl

this was one of the most common surnames found among the human population of Corellia. (GMR9)

Midanyl, Dayvid

this young man was one of Sena Leikvold Midanyl's sons. He was serving on the Harrier with his brother, Peter, during the early years of the New Republic. (TLC)

Midanyl, Peter

this young man was one of Sena Leikvold Midanyl's sons. He was serving on the Harrier with his brother, Dayvid, during the early years of the New Republic. (TLC)

Midanyl, Sena Leikvold

this Corellian woman served as Garm Bel Iblis' chief advisor and "unofficial ambassador-at-large" during the early years of the New Republic. She met Bel Iblis when she was chosen to work for him as a Senatorial aide many years earlier, and was one of many who harbored the same prejudice he had against Mon Mothma. Sena realized before he did that Mon Mothma wasn't going to appoint herself ruler of the galaxy, but bit her lip in support of her superior's leadership. Sena was in command of the missions to meet with Tav Breil'lya on New Cov, as Bel Iblis' representative to the growing faction of beings who supported Borsk Fey'lya's bid for power. (DFR, DFRSB)

Midaz

this was the Snivvian word for "food." (HNN5)

Middle Corellian

this was the modern term which described, albeit inaccurately, the Socorran dialect of the Old Corellian language. (SWJ7)

Middle Distance

this was the name given to the first Ferroan settlement on the planet Zonama Sekot, located in the planet's equatorial region. Established nearly sixty years before the Battle of Naboo, the Middle Distance served as a base of operations for the groups which manufactured Sekotan starships. Some twenty-nine years after the Battle of Yavin, Zonama Sekot made a blind jump into hyperspace as a reaction to the sabotage of Nom Anor. Without time to protect itself, the planet was unable to control the damage that occurred on its surface while in hyperspace. Much of the southern continents were destroyed, and the Middle Distance suffered large amounts of damage from fires and scorching temperatures. To counteract this, Sekot created intense rainstorms, which drenched the Middle Distance for many weeks. (RP, UF)

Middle Generation

this was the name used to describe those members of the Melida/Daan society who were of middle age, between twenty and fifty. They maintained their Daan or Melida heritage, but remained neutral during the intense civil war that broke out twelve years prior to the Battle of Naboo. The Middle Generation pledged a tentative support to The Young when it appeared that the children could end the civil war. When The Young began to struggle with its control over the planet, the Middle Generation backed out. After Cerasi's death and the negotiated peace, the Middle Generation agreed to step forward and help create a new, combined government. (UP) a native of Chandrila, Midge was a self-taught marksman and sharpshooter who joined the Alliance after Mon Mothma became part of the rebellion. Midge was recruited by Crix Madine to serve as a field technician during the ground assault portion of the Battle of Endor. (CCG11)

Midge

Midge-fly

a small, nearly invisible insect. (HM)

Midget

this young woman was a member of the Alliance underground on the planet Kabaira during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ7)

Midian, Wevat

this man served as one of the chief administrators of The Wheel, during the height of the New Order. (ND)

Midi-chlorian

this species of microscopic organism was known to the Jedi Knights as a symbiotic creature that exists within the cells of every living creature. Life in the galaxy was dependent upon the midi-chlorians, although the exact genesis of the microscopic midi-chlorians was unknown. There was no pattern which dictated the concentration of midi-chlorians in a being's make-up, but a higher count of midi-chlorians in a being's cells allowed them to touch the Force. As the count increased, so did the being's ability to contact and control the Force, but true mastery of the Force could only come from intense concentration and study. Thus, the Jedi Knights devoted themselves to the study and control of the Force, and developed techniques that could detect high concentrations of midi-chlorians in young infants. During the last years of the Old Republic, some Jedi began to believe that the relationship between midi-chlorians and the Force might actually be the opposite of traditional thinking. They believed that the Force created the midi-chlorians, as a way for it to reach out to life throughout the galaxy. (SW1, MJH)

Midnight 3

this was the Wookiee Tirranna's callsign, as a member of the Alliance's Midnight Squadron. (AIR)

Midnight Squadron

this was the heavy weapons division of the Alliance's Eclipse Team. (AIR)

Midnight Star

this modified YV-545 freighter was ostensibly owned by the Outer Rim Trade Consortium, but was actually an Alliance ship provided to Cala Worner. It was armed with a pair of heavy ion cannons, a front-mounted laser cannon, and a rear-firing concussion missile launcher. (WOTC, RESB)

Mid-Rim Domesticated Sub-Sentient Show

held annually on the planet Commenor during the last decades of the Old Republic, this pet show brought together some of the Mid-Rim's most exotic and well-trained beasts for display in one place. (HNN4)

Mid-Rim Sentinel Agency

this is a for-hire security operation that provides detective and security forces to the planets of the Mid Rim Territories. (SWJ8)

Midwinter Festival

this holiday is characterized by the brightly-lit trees which symbolize the coming rebirth of spring. (POT)

Midys

Old Corellian for "middle." (SWJ7)

Midys Corellisi

literally meaning "Middle Corellian," this was an Old Corellian phrase meant to indicate the language of the planet Socorro. (SWJ7)

Miebar

this was a common name among the Ortolan race. (UANT)

Miek

Han Solo used this alias when he traveled with Droma to Tholatin while searching for clues to the whereabouts of Roa and Droma's family. Miek was the captain of the Sunlight Franchise. (JE, SBS)

Mien Rumba

this Sullustan male was a miner on his homeworld of Sullust, working for the SoroSuub Corporation during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. When his meager salary needed a boost, Mien Rumba stole a number of precious gemstones from his employers and fled into the Core Worlds, hoping to sell the gemstones on the black market. Unfortunately, SoroSuub issued a bounty for his arrest, which was claimed by Jango Fett shortly after the Battle of Naboo. (BH)

Miera

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Mier-Lang

this manufacturer created a number of detonation weapons, including the V-59 concussion grenade. (CCG3)

Mierm City

this is another misspelling of Meirm City. (SSR)

Mieru'kar

this area of the galaxy was known to be quite rich, but was also the favored hunting grounds of the Hy'thor Pirates. (AIR)

Mif Kumas

Mifka

this was a pleasant-tasting food consumed on the planet Cartao. (SWI68)

Mig, Yerka

this Imperial bureaucrat from Ralltiir resigned and fled the Empire after the occupation of his home planet. He has been seen in Mos Eisley, trying to sell his high security clearance. (CCG)

Migan yam

this Yuuzhan Vong honorific was used to greet an individual of unknown rank or caste. (NJOSB)

Migg, Potiphar

this man, distinguished by his brown skin and white eyes, worked for the Imperial Security Bureau during the height of the New Order. He held the rank of Major in the ISB, and was one of the most enthusiastic supporters of Emperor Palpatine. Migg served the Empire on Coruscant, working to "verify the loyalty" of the planet's inhabitants. What made Migg's eyes unforgettable was the fact that they were cybernetic, and their "pupils" glowed with a red light that made him look evil. (CCW)

Mighella

this woman was one of the more powerful Witches of Dathomir, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. She was taken from Dathomir by Alexi Garyn, the leader of the criminal organization Black Sun, to serve as his personal bodyguard on Ralltiir. In addition to her combat skills and command of the Dark Side of the Force, Mighella had a limited amount of prescience, and once predicted the execution of all nine of Garyn's vigos. Her vision was partially correct, as discovered when Darth Maul tracked Asa Naga to Garyn's fortress on Ralltiir. Unaware of the Sith Lord's true identity, Mighella leaped to prevent him from attacking Garyn. She used a combination of Force Lightning and other Dark Side tactics to keep Maul at bay, until he revealed that he was, in fact, the apprentice to Darth Sidious. Maul redoubled his attack, and Mighella was helpless against him. She died knowing that she had given her own master a chance to escape. (DM)

Might Squadron

one of the squadrons of TIE Fighters maintained by the Thyferran Home Defense Corps. (BW)

Mighty Musstoro

this immense, Ankura Gungan was a wrestler who lived in the settlement of Bartyn's Landing, on the planet Lamaredd, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Musstoro made the bulk of his credits on the street, challenging passersby to a fight. (GMR7)

Miglar 2

the Nikto assassin Ma'w'shiye was injured in a speeder bike accident on this planet, and lost his facial horns as a result. (SWJ4)

Mignay

this woman was a Captain within the Trade Defense, and served as the commander of the Rim Merchant Einem during Wilhuff Tarkin's attempt to take control of Zonama Sekot. (RP)

Mihalik

this Svivreni male was a simple miner who worked for Toxis Metals during the early years of the New Republic. When a meleenium heist took place at the Qua'Tahc mines, and several agents of the Republic were injured, Mihalik took it upon himself to hunt down the thieves, who were led by Rani Quanic. He took from Af'El in his own ship, the Resolve, and was unseen for many years. (SWJ10)

Miid Ro'ik Warship

this immense, ovoid warship was grown by the Yuuzhan Vong to serve as the standard vessel in their fleet. Measuring some 1,620 meters in length, the Miid Ro'ik warship resembled a striped stone, with alternately smooth and rough surfaces. The rough surface of the ship was studded with hundreds of dovin basals and sixty plasma projectors. Emerging from the ship's main body were arms of red and blue coral that acted as docking bays for the coralskippers it transported into battle. These arms ran from the nose of the ship toward its rear, on the left, right, and dorsal flanks of the ship. The Miid Ro'ik warship required a dedicated crew of 1,280 Yuuzhan Vong warriors, and could accommodate up to 1,950 troops and 8,200 metric tons of cargo or ordnance. Note that The New Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels indicates that the Miid Ro'ik could transport up to 3,000 troops. In order to remain viable, a Miid Ro'ik needed to feed and gain sustenance. Thus, the Yuuzhan Vong often fed the organic refuse created from dead warships to their Miid Ro'ik, in order to keep the warships alive. (NJOSB, NEGV)

Miilarta, Lol

this woman, a native of the planet Terephon, was her planet's Ambassador to the Hapes Consortium, at the time of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. When Leia Organa-Solo traveled to the Hapes Cluster to enlist the aid of the Hapans in fighting the Yuuzhan Vong, Lol Miilarta voted for plan. (JE)

Miim

this name was common among Sullustan males, and referred to a Sullustan beast of burden noted for its strength. (GCG)

Miim

this Sullustan beast of burden was once employed in the mines that riddled the planet's crust, hauling rubble to disposal sites. (GCG)

Miim Te'Suub

this young Sullustan was the Director of Formal Activities for the SoroSuub Corporation's corporate offices on Genarius, during the era of the Battle of Naboo. He was part of the team which worked to produce the G-59 Cannibalizer starfighter, and shocked SoroSuub management by calling for a halt to all operations on the day the first G-59 was produced. He gave a short speech to christen the new starfighter, then dismissed the entire force. The workers were confused by the edict, having worked in a corporate environment where taking time off was frowned upon. Nevertheless, the workers heeded Miim's orders and left the facility to enjoy a series of parties which lasted for four days. SoroSuub's corporate managers feared that Miim's actions would seriously jeopardize worker loyalty, but were pleasantly surprised when morale and dedication increased. From that point forward, SoroSuub allowed the Festival to continue on an annual basis. (LFC)

M'iiyoum

a plant native to H'nemthe, the m'iiyoum's white floweres only bloom in the season of trine, when all three of the planet's moons provide nighttime illumination. This earned the m'iiyoum the nickname nightlily. The plant is carnivorous, using its sweet nectar to attract rodents and other small creatures. (TME)

M'iiyoum Onith

a native of H'nemthe, M'iiyoum was trying to board the Tellivar Lady in Mos Eisley but could not pay her passage tax. She appealed to Feltpern Trevagg, who falls in love with her. When she and Feltpern consummated his false love for her at the Mos Eisley Inn, she gutted him as all H'nemthean females do to their mates. (TME)

Mijos

this swamp-covered planet was located in the Anoat Sector, along the borders of the Yarith and Javin Sectors. The Lutrillians tried to establish several spaceports on Mijos, but improper planning meant that most of them sank into the mire. (WOA33)

Mika

this female Cathar rose to power as the leader of the Crimson Nova chapter of the Bounty Hunter's Guild, during the last years of the Old Republic. An angry female, Mika had been brought into the hunting business by Stroth, who had lost her parents when a group of Jedi Knights shut down their "family business." Mika's parents had been trafficking death-sticks, and the Jedi had been alerted to their activities. Rather than submitting to arrest, they chose to fight and were killed in the battle. Mika never forgave the Jedi, an attitude that was further heightened when she met Har'ill. Thus, when the contract to kill Jedi Knights came in from Kh'aris Fenn, Mika eagerly accepted it, despite decades of bounty hunter policy to the contrary. (RSF)

Mika

a crewmember of Ixsthmus, Mika was one of the designers of the Long Shot and its modifications. (SWCP)

Mika Anjiliac Chiera

this Hutt crimelord was known among his peers for the cadre' of security droids he recovered from Varl and restored to working order. The H-3PO droids proved to be unfailingly loyal, unlike organic bodyguards. He was also known as an atypical Hutt, being energetic and eager to learn more about the businesses he runs. Mika, the youngest child of Popara the Hutt, was distinguished by his green and yellow coloration, as well as his interests in areas such as foreign culture, history, and technology. He also could speak the Basic language with ease, and was one of the few Hutts who did so in everyday life. Unknown to his siblings, Mika was quite sensitive to the Force, a fact that Popara also helped to keep a secret. Mika was stranded on Endregaad when a plague struck the planet, during the early years of the New Order. He left his bodyguard, Orgamon the Nikto, in Tel Bollin to act as his primary agent, in case Popara sent a rescue party. Mika himself traveled to the Temple Valley in an effort to locate the source of the Endregaad Plague and find a way to fight it. His discovery of a crashed YV-100 led to the source of the plague, and Mika showed his humanity by allowing the geode miners of the planet to salvage parts of the ship for themselves. Unknown to all, however, was the fact that Mika was behind the development of the tempest spice. The YV-100 had been traveling through the Indrexu Spiral with a shipment of tempest when it was infected with the plague, and crashed on Endregaad when the crew died from repeated exposure. His true mission to Endregaad was the recovery of the tempest shipment. He had made several arrangements with the local miners to ensure that the ship was easily accessed and kept ready until he could recover it. Upon returning to Nar Shaddaa, Mika was forced to realize that Popara was growing concerned about the rising threat of the tempest spice. Since tempest was creating huge sums of credits for his own accounts, Mika worked behind the scenes to undermine his parent's attempts to learn more about tempest. When Popara got too close, Mika poisoned him, ensuring that Popara would not meddle any further in his business. However, Mika was forced to flee Anjiliac Towers after the event, which Zonnos took as a sign of Mika's part in Popara's death. He was sighted at the Headache Bar, where he claimed that Zonnos had killed Popara. Shortly afterward, Mika was captured by Zonnos in an ambush, following the capture of Vago. With the help of Angela Krin and the agents hired by Popara, Mika managed to escape, and in the wake of Zonnos' death he became the leader of the Anjiliac kajidic. Rather than remain on Nar Shaddaa, however, Mika chose to return to Varl, where he had created the Tempest as a production facility. The agents tracked Mika to Varl, and confronted him aboard the huge vessel. Despite his best efforts to flee in the ship, Mika was hunted down and killed before he could unleash the tempest spice on the galaxy. (TF, WOTC)

this ball of searing rock was the first planet in the Tyrisu System. (SPG)

Mika'sai'Malloc

this female Devaronian was the daughter of Kardue'sai'Malloc. She personally witnessed the execution of her father, and wrote about it in her journal. (EGA)

Mikish

this platform city was established on the planet Cularin, and was built on a platform in reaction to the Tarasin concerns for the environment of Cularin. Gadrin and her sister city, Hedrett, had expanded rapidly since beign founded by Reidi Artom, and the Tarasin feared that uncontrolled growth would seriously impact the growth and future of the sacred ch'hala trees. Located near a long range of mountains, Mikish was the site of the headquarters for the Restimar Mining Corporation. The crimelord Nirama also maintained a presence in the city. (LFC)

Mikiyuna

this Huttese word meant "everyone." (GMR5)

Mikket

this small, cricket-like insect is characterized by the droning sound it makes by rubbing its legs together. (POT)

Mikki Mikki

this young boy was slain by Darth Bane, shortly before the Battle of Ruusan, as the Dark Lord set out to kill the children of Ruusan in order to eliminate any potential Force-sensitives and to gather his own strength for the coming battle with the Jedi. Mikki had been working with his brothers to collect scrap for their father, but all were slain by Darth Bane. (JVS)

Miklak

this was one of the more common surnames used by the Duros people. Like all such names, Miklak was used only for official business, to indicate one individual from another when in the presense of non-Duros. This name literally meant "landspeeder crafter". (GCG)

Miko

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Miktha

this male Jawa was a known associate of Longo Two-Guns during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Jabba the Hutt issued a bounty for his capture in connection with a riot that occurred after patrons of a local podrace purchased exploding chubas, an event that seriously curtailed profits from the sale of normal foodstuffs. The bounty was eventually claimed by Jango Fett, who was on Tatooine trying to arrange a meeting with Jabba. (BH)

Miktiss

this Saurton was a member of the Des'mar faction, during the early years of the New Republic. (DARK)

Mila

this Aramandi caste, or akia, was known to be the most liberal of the castes. They were also the most business-like, and were open and receptive to offworld visitors to Aram. (AE)

Mila System

this planetary system, located in Brak Sector, was located in the restricted Aramand Cluster. (FBS)

Milacass

this Kerestian bounty hunter worked for Pari' Notgoth, until he was implicated in an assassination attempt on Notgoth's life. Rather than try to prove his innocence, Milicass fled Tamarin Sector and wandered the Outer Rim for six years before joining the Granse Confederacy. Milicass was easily distinguished from other Kerestians by his seemingly pupilless eyes, a result of being too close to an explosion at the Clariv Shipyards which left him temporarily blind. His eyesight eventually returned, but his eyes had been scarred from the blast. (GG12, AIR)

Milagro

this planet, located at a key hyperspace junction point, was caught between the factions of the New Republic and the Empire, some five years after the Battle of Yavin. (ECH)

Milarian

this planet, located in the Trans-Nebular Sector, served as the Imperial sector capital during the era of the New Order. (GSE)

Milatvac

this city, located on the planet Svivren, was the location of a large mining operation. (SWJ10)

Mildew Rubdown

this was a relaxing massage favored by the Neimoidians, and involved the use of redolent fungi instead of fragrant oils. (DMSH)

Mili-Corp

this small manufacturer produced a number of powered armor suits, during the Old Republic. (GUN)

Milinae

this woman, a native of the planet Corellia, was the sister of Trilinae. Mil was something of a smuggler, although she was sympathetic to the cause of the Jedi Knights during the last years of the Old Republic. She accompanied her sister to Almas just prior to the Clone Wars, and fought beside Tril and Jedi Master Darrus Jeht in several minor skirmishes within the Cularin System. (LFCW)

Militar

this gas giant was the seventh and outermost planet of the Metellos System. It was orbited by five moons. (CCW)

Militarists

this group of Old Republic politicians and military leaders rose to prominence during the years leading up to the Stark Hyperspace Wars. The Militarists advocated the formation of a strong Army and Navy to protect the Republic, both from internal threats and external ones. They believed that the Jedi Knights were not a solution, since they did not answer directly to the Old Republic Senate. Nevertheless, the Senate continually vetoed any bill which involved direct funding of military build-up. (SHW)

Military Creation Act

devised and proposed during the years leading up to the Clone Wars, the Military Creation Act was meant to allow the Old Republic to form a "grand army of the Republic" to put a stop to the growing secession movement. Never fully embraced by Supreme Chancellor Palpatine, it was strongly opposed by the Senator from Palpatine's homeworld of Naboo, Padme' Amidala, who formed the Campaign Against Republic Militarization in an effort to find a peaceful resolution to the secession problem. When Senator Amidala was nearly assassinated upon arriving on Coruscant for the vote on the Act, Palpatine tried to stall the vote by calling for increased security measures. Many Senators believed Palpatine had overstepped his bounds in delaying the vote. However, when it was discovered that the Separatists had been secretly assembling a massive droid army on the planet Geonosis, some form of conflict became inevitable. Because the Old Republic would have been defenseless against the Separatists, the Act was passed when Jar Jar Binks - sitting for Senator Amidala while she was under the protection of Anakin Skywalker - proposed that Chancellor Palpatine be given emergency powers to deal with the Separatists. (HNN4, HNN5, AOTC, SWI68)

Military Mobility Shield

this was the brand-name of Merr-Sonn's personal shield system. It was originally designed for military use on battlefields, where it could absorb nearly fifty blaster bolts before it failed or needed to be recharged. (NEGW)

Militia-camo Bongo

this was the military version of the tribubble bongo, and was used to transport Gungan warriors to battle. They were somewhat slower than the civilian version, being encumbered by their weapons systems. (E1A9)

Militiagung

this was the Gungan term for any footsoldier of the Gungan Grand Army. The militiagungs were made up of part-time soldiers who were generally inexperienced, but made up for it with sheer determination and courage. (IG1, GBC)

Milk

it does exist! Luke and Owen share milk at dinner after buying C-3PO and R2-D2, and Leia drinks it warm to settle her stomach during her first pregnancy. (SWN, HTTE)

Milkened Tuber

this root vegetable was used in many gourmet dishes, once the internal seed-husk was removed. (HNN5)

Milking

this mild expletive was popular with many Basic-speaking races during the height of the Clone Wars. (MBS)

Milko

this cobbled-together droid was a bounty hunter who was active during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He traveled to Dagobah in an effort to hunt down Luke Skywalker, after the Empire set a bounty on his head. When Luke managed to defeat him in combat, Milko broken down and begged for mercy, claiming that he had eight children and a sick mother on Danchian Prime. Luke let him go free, knowing that Milko's reputation as a bounty hunter would be tarnished because of his failure. (T15)

Milk-stone

this opalescent stone was found in large veins on the ancient planet of Ossus. It was used in the construction of wondrous buildings and facades, especially by the ancient Jedi Knights. (SWJ15)

MILL-247-EE

an industrial droid that was part of the emergency systems on Tem Chesko's cargo hauler. When Tem

Chesko's ship was disabled and floated for years through space, he nearly went crazy before he found the droid. He called it "Millie," since its creators had given it a female form and voice. They were constant companions during the remaining 61 years of isolation in space. When Chesko's heart gave out, Millie donated hers. She operated on Chesko and surgically removed his heart and replaced it with hers. Thus, Chesko survived to eventually reach Tatooine. (TMEC)

Millaflower

native to the planet Naboo, this plant produces thousands of small, pink blossoms. The scent of these blossoms is so sweet and pure that it has been rumored to soothe even an angry rancor. Some perfumery owners kept fields of millaflowers in bloom for the scent, using it in the creation of specialized perfumes. Bouquets of millaflowers were considered wondrous gifts by both the Naboo and the Gungans. It was discovered that the flowers could be refined to extract the chemical which was responsible for its calming effect, and when refined and distilled it created a powerful tranquilizer. (GF, SON, GMR2)

Millano, Tosk

this Corellian outlaw absolutely hated sewers and underground passages. (HAS)

Millavec, Dorin

this scheming Imperial officer served as the Deck Commander aboard the Star Destroyer Crucible during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He hoped to be promoted to the command deck, but when he learned that Nas Ghent had been picked by Darth Vader to train a group of starfighter pilots aboard his ship, Millavec was angry and jealous. He felt sure that he was being set up to fail, to prevent his promotion. So, in addition to going along with Vader's orders, Millavec began to plot his own actions. After allowing Ghent to go on a mission with real pilots, Millavec ordered his pilots to execute Maneuver 717, hoping to eliminate Ghent without any incriminating evidence. Ghent managed to survive, and came for Millavec. Millavec then lied to Ghent, claiming that it was Vader himself who ordered the Maneuver 717, as part of his assignment. Then, Millavec supplied Ghent with a group of cutthroat criminals to serve as his "trainees." He worked behind the scenes to try and keep Vader and Ghent apart, while plotting how best to make the most of his plans for promotion. (T21)

Millennium Astro-Engineering

this starfighter manufacturer was based on the planet Tharkos. They created many different designs, and were very profitable during the reign of Emperor Palpatine. Their internal motto ran something like "war is good for business." Their plant was destroyed by Alliance starfighters, after the Alliance learned that they were creating starships for the Empire. (CSWDW)

Millennium Blossom

this plant grows only on the harsh jungle world of Lemmi VI. It is extremely rare, and it blooms only once every 100 years. As soon as the plant blossoms, the main plant dies. It is also carnivorous, and will eat almost anything. (GMS)

Millennium Celebration

this was generic term used on many planets to denote a holiday that occurred once every thousand years, when the local calendar changed to a new millennium. (BH)

Millennium Entertainments

one of the original Signatory Sponsors of the Corporate Sector Authority, Millennium was one of the galaxy's largest entertainment and information combines. They owned majority control of Galaxy News Service, and had interests in TriNebulon News, CoreDataFiles, and other, smaller news agencies. Millennium also owns Millennium Holo. (CSA)

Millennium Falcon

Han Solo's souped-up YT-1300 smuggling ship, which has been modified from its "original" specifications over the years. Han came to own it after winning it in a Sabacc game from Lando Calrissian. Lando had won the Falcon in an earlier sabacc match at Bespin, just before he started hunting for the Treasure of Rafa. He had no idea how to pilot it, but he recognized its abilities. As he grew to become a better pilot, Lando continued to upgrade the ship's systems, and it became his primary mode of transportation. After

Han and Lando (had just completed a run of the Kessel Spice Mines together/got together on Bespin), Lando was in a gambling mood. He was running low on credits, so he added Han's choice of any ship in his used ship lot. Han chose the Falcon from among the junkers, much to Lando's dismay. Once Han got control of it, he added a non-spec Imperial power plant and hyperdrive system, as well as an impressive amount of armament: upper and lower quad laser cannons, an underside sweep gun, multiple forward laser gun pods, and a pair of concussion missile tubes. The ship continued to astound those not familiar with its military-issue components and higher than normal lift/mass ratio. The ships' central ladderwell, leading to the upper and lower quad-laser cannons, is equipped with separate gravity generators, allowing the two people manning the cannons to operate in reciprocal gravity fields. After the Battle of Bakura, the Falcon was swapped back and forth by Han and Lando in a series of Sabacc matches. Lando won the Falcon finally, but opted to give it to Han as a gift, in order to end the inane series of card games. The Millennium Falcon contains much of its original systems, as well as many modifications: a Novaldex Stasis-type Shield Generator, a Koensayr TLB Power Converter, a Fabritech Sensor Array Controller/Interpreter, a Chedak Frequency Agile Subspace Radio, a Fabritech ANY-20 Active Sensor Package, an Imperial IFF Transponder, a Corellian Engineering Corporation Emergency Power Generator, a retractable Taim and Bak Auto Blaster Cannon, a Quadex Power Core, 2 Escape Pods, a Hanx-Wargel SuperFlow IV Shipboard Computer, a Torplex Tandem Flight Computer, an Incom N21-4 Power Converter, a Corellian Engineering Corporation Subspace Hyperdrive, a KDY Aft Deflector Shield Generator, a Seinar Fleet Systems Active Sensor Pulse Generator, Cryonic Reserve Power Cells, a Torplex Fore Deflector Shield Generator, a Siep-Irol Passive Sensor Antenna, a Carbanti Signal-Augmented Sensor Jammer, a Carbanti 29L Electromagnetic Countermeasures Package, a Nordoxicon-38 Anti-concussion Field Generator, a Corellstand C-8 Life Support System, 2 Arakyd ST2 Concussion Missile Launchers (2 racks of 4), an Ion Flux Stabilizer with Alluvial Dampers, a KapriCorp Acceleration Compensator, a Microaxial HyD Modular NavCom Unit, Gelieg 20m-Cp Strobe/C-beam Lamps, an Enlarged/modified Cargo Bay, and an Ax-108 Surface Defense Cannon. In the years following the births of Han Solo's three children, he began refitting the Millennium Falcon and removing some of its more military components, in favor of safety and security. The concussion missile launcher were the first weapon removed, making it easier to load and unload cargo. During the struggle to defeat the Yuuzhan Vong, Han painted the Falcon with matte-black paint, hoping to make it harder to spot. In this way, he hoped to work with Droma to locate and rescue Roa and the Ryn's family. (SW, ESB, ROTJ, LCM, LCF, LCS, HSE, HSR, HSL, SWSB, TB, HTTE, JS, CPL, CCG, THG, HT, JE, EGW)

Millennium Falcon

this prototype starship was built by Millennium Engineering. Zoltan Starkid's secretary leaked information about the ship to Han Solo for 10,000 credits. Although Han Solo eventually obtained possession of this ship, it is not the Millennium Falcon that Solo used on a regular basis. There is a continuity problem here, despite the fact that this story was published by Dark Horse. (CSWDW)

Millennium Falsehood

this was the second mock-up of the Millennium Falcon used by Wraith Squadron to draw out an Imperial force. The first involved the use of two X-Wings with overlapping shields, a unit which presented transponder codes to appear to be the Falcon and draw out Admiral Trigit at Folor. The Millennium Falsehood was an actual YT-1300 freighter, painting and marked up to resemble the Millennium Falcon. Transponder codes were altered just enough to imitate the real ship at a first glance. The ship was flown by Wedge Antilles and Chewbacca himself, during a raid on Kidriff 5, in an effort to draw out Warlord Zsinj by having "Han Solo" show up on many of Zsinj's worlds. (SOC)

Millennium Fighter

one of the many starships designs created by Millennium Astro-Engineering. It was one of the largest ships created by Millennium. (CSWDW)

Millennium Fist

this was the name of the starship in a story told by Han Solo to his four-year-old son, Anakin, shortly before bedtime one night. The story revolved around the exploits of Luke Skywalker's hand, after it was cut off by Darth Vader on Bespin's Cloud City. Luke's hand used the ship to escape from Bespin and return to the Alliance. (T8)

Millennium Hawk

this small starship was created by Millennium Astro-Engineering. It was a spear-headed ship with a large central power core flanked by two sublight drives. It was popular among the smugglers and criminals which hounded the Empire during its expansion across the Outlands region. Note that Classic Star Wars: Devilworlds claims that the prominence of the Millennium Hawk led Millennium Astro-Engineering to create the Millennium Falcon, which directly contradicts most other references. (CSWDW)

Millennium Holos

this subsidiary of Millennium Entertainments created the holo series Who Are You To Accuse Me?. They also owned several swoop racing and sports teams. (CSA)

Millennium Oak

a species of tree native to Damualer Triac. (GG9)

Millfly

this small insect was native to Commenor. (NEGC)

Millicent

this woman was one of Sprax's concubines, shortly after the Battle of Hoth. Millicent was also one of Sprax's best agents, a closely-guarded secret meant to keep everyone in the Nalroni's organization off their guard whenever she was around. Unknown to Sprax, however, was the fact that Millicent really worked for Prince Xizor himself, keeping an eye on Sprax's dealings along the Sisar Run. In a double twist, Millicent didn't know she worked for Xizor, having been hired by Guri. (SSR)

Millich, Nar

a Major in the Imperial armed forces, Nar Millich longed to gain power and prestige within the Imperial Navy. To this end, he tried to curry the favor of Darth Vader during the construction and operation of the first Death Star. (JKG)

Millinar

this temperate world had virtually no axial tilt, so it was always blanketed in beautiful weather with minimal rainfall. The land masses of the planet never rose very far from sea level, and were dotted by natural springs and underground streams. Most of the plant life found on Millinar was succulent in nature, with deep-reaching root systems that hoarded water. The natives of the planet were a group of hermaphroditic aliens that had developed strange but fundamentally good skills in using the Force. The planet itself had never been actually placed on a stargate, for most explorers and scouts believed that its existence is just a rumor. (GMH, WOTC)

Millitile

this long, reptilian creature inhabited the upper branches of the gankto tree on its homeworld of Kothlis. It fed on the symbiospore fungus which often collected in the branches of the tree. Millitiles moved about on thousands of tiny legs, but could only run for short distances when frightened. These creatures were the favorite prey of the myntors. (SPG)

Milmit

this thug was one of Gorga the Hutt's hired guns. Milmit was the first to discover the whereabouts of the Spirit of Jabba, but was unable to stop Big Gizz and Spiker from stealing the craft. (TJT)

Milnn

this man served as a Captain in the Imperial Navy, flying with and leading the Delta Squadron of TIE Fighters under the command of Admiral Giel during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He was captured by Luke Skywalker and Shira Brie just after Admiral Giel captured a teezl, and his identification codes allowed Luke and Shira to infiltrate Giel's armada. (MC61)

Mil-Star IV

this is one design of Tion Mil/Sci sublight starship engine. (EGV)

Milvayne

this planet, in the Gyrica System, was the site of an Imperial base during the Galactic Civil War. Mon Mothma once ordered an attack on the base, and commanded Garm Bel Iblis to lead the attack. He refused, because the plan of attack would lead to the deaths of too many soldiers. She relieved him of his duties to the Alliance, and Iblis happily agreed. This allowed him to strike out on his own, and develop his own way of bringing down the Empire. (TTSB, EGC)

Mim

this was one of two moons which orbited the planet Ossus. (TOJC)

Mima

a planet known for its business centers. (ZHR)

Mima II

a planet in the Lar system, Mima II is the homeworld of the Bilar race. It is a small, tropical world with a 15-standard-hour day and a 103-local-day year. Because it orbits very close to Lar, Mima II's tectonic plates are pulled across its molten core like a moon causes tides on a water world. This results in an almost continual reformation of the planet's landscape, but it also releases large amounts of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen and other materials needed to create life. Thus, new species are regularly being found on a world that already teems with life. (GG4)

Mimban

local name for Circarpous V. (SME)

Mimban Cloudrider

this Thyferran bacta freighter was captured by Rogue Squadron and used to appropriate bacta from Ysanne Isard's cartel. Wedge Antilles offered the pilot's job to Booster Terrik, who refused. Booster did agree to run the Rogue's outpost at Yag'Dhul, though. (BW)

Mimbanite

an alien race native to Circarpous V, they look like large, furry balls of various colors and patterns. They have 4 short, furred legs on their bottom half, and 4 arms on their top half. Their feet have two toes on each, and they have a hairless tail. Their eyes are wide and inquisitive. They shun contact with other inhabitants of Mimban, and were believed to be related to the Coway. When the Empire took control of Mimban, they chose to leave the Mimbanites alone, since the race was unsuited to the physical demands of slavery. (SME, EGA, SWDB)

Mimbrane Organism

this creature is essentially an organic recording device. A thin, pasty-white sheet when first encountered, the membrane seems to consume the sounds of its surroundings. The more it records, the more it swells up into a pillow shape. No longer than a human finger, the membrane has rudimentary sight buds that allow it to sense between light and dark. Their brains are very small, but that can be trained to follow a simple set of instructions. This combination of abilities makes them the perfect tool for beings who wish to surreptitiously record a conversation for later playback. These creatures grow in huge colonies on one of the Q'nithian System's moons, living deep within the fault and fissures of its rocky surface. (MA)

Mimetic Suit

this term was used to describe any clothing made from a unique material that changed color to mimic the wearer's surroundings. The clothing was impregnated with specialized circuitry that analyzed the visual elements of the environment and altered the coloring of the cloth. (COD)

Mimetic Tarpaulin

this form of protective sheeting was made from a unique material that changed color to mimic the immediate surroundings. The cloth of the tarpaulin was impregnated with specialized circuitry that analyzed the visual elements of the environment and altered the coloring of the cloth. This allowed a being to cover up objects in such a way that most visual searches simply failed to locate them. (UF)

Mimic

this brand of sensor decoy was produced by MerenData to compete with the Corellian Engineering Trickster drone. Like the Trickster, the Mimic sent out sensory information along electromagnetic and holographic frequencies to make itself appear to be a real starship. (PP)

Mimn'yet

this was a meat dish of questionable origin, enjoyed by the Barabel race. (MJH)

Mimn'yet Surgery

this was a term used by the medical staff of the Old Republic's forces on Drongar, during the height of the Clone Wars, to describe their daily work. It referred to a meat dish favored by the Barabel race, which was often enjoyed raw and bleeding. (MJH)

Mimph

this was a species of tiny creatures that was native to the Forest Moon of Endor. While not fully sentient, the Mimphs were nonetheless intelligent, and used their cunning to hunt larger prey. (ECAR)

Mimwen

this Ithorian surname was believed to mean "artist", according to historian who studied the Ithorian race. (GCG)

Mimya

Keyan Farlander's aunt, living on the planet Oorn Tchis. Keyan asked Mimya and her husband, Trinn, to take care of Kitha following the Imperial invasion of Agamar. (XW)

Min

this female name was common among the Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Min

this Old Corellian possessive could be used for "mine" or "his," depending on context. (SWJ7)

Min

this was the Snivvian word for "I" or "me." (HNN5)

Min Cho

this was a noted Gossam individual, distinguished in the history of the planet Castell. (UANT)

Min Gost

this male Sullustan worked as an information broker on the moon of Nar Shaddaa, and could often be found at Kuzbar's Cantina during the early years of the New Order. (TF)

Min min

this Old Corellian phrase was a pronoun for "I" or "myself." (SWJ7)

Min Min Heights

located on the edge of the Doaba Badlands, the Min Min Heights was an area littered with rocky outcroppings, small caves, and shallow alcoves. Named for the Min Min Lights, the area was believed to be the resting place of the souls of Socorrans who have died over the millennia. During the day, the Heights provide a wondrous view of the Badlands. Despite the ghost stories surrounding the area, it was also a favorite spot for lovers who wanted to be alone. (BSS)

Min Min Lights

this mysterious sparks of light appear in the late dawn and early dusk on the edge of the Doaba Badlands, on the planet Socorro. Concentrated in an area which became known as the Min Min Heights, the lights appear suddenly and move across the landscape singly or in groups. The exact nature of the lights has never been discovered, but the native Socorrans believe that each light is the essential spark or personality of a person who had died. This belief gave them their name, for the term min min in the Socorran and Old Corellian tongues means "I." (BSS)

Min min vil ut valle Nharquis

the worst Old Corellian oath, it roughly translates to "I will eat your ashes." The speaker usually pointed vigorously at him- or herself while speaking. (SWJ7)

Min min volgoth noh petchuk

this Old Corellian phrase translated to "I want no bad blood between us," and was often whispered to indicate the speaker's desire for non-aggression. (SWJ7)

Mina

this purplish moon orbited the planet Hanchin, which was located in the Moddell Sector of the galaxy. It was best known as the site of a religious retreat, which was maintained by the Vashan people at Inicus Mont. Because of its celestial positioning, Mina was always covered in light from Hanchin, resulting in very short nighttime periods. Note that this moon is referred to as Qina as well as Mina in Star Wars Gamer, issue 9. (GMR9)

Mina

see Nima'tar (T8)

Minak, Lett

this man was a smuggler who worked for the Empire after the Battle of Endor. He was employed by Moff Feleea, but their personal relationship was strained. Minak was approached by Moff Relans, who offered him the opportunity to work as a spy for his organization, Minak agreed, and outwardly worked for Feleea aboard his freighter, the Shadow. On the side, Minak fed Feleea false information given to him by Moff Relans. Working this way, Minak received protection from both Moffs, ensuring his own safety and a regular income. (HR)

Minan

this was the name used to describe the human population of the moon Mina. (GMR9)

Minas-Lergo

this small corporation produced a variety of cargo and passenger cars, used to move about in sealed environments on hostile planets. (GSE)

Minch

this Jedi Knight, a member of the same species as Yoda and Yaddle, served the Jedi Order some 700 years before the Battle of Yavin. Minch and several other newly-commissioned Jedi Knights were dispatched to the Bpfassh System, where a Bpfasshi Dark Jedi had been terrorizing the system. Aboard the Takara, Minch confronted the Dark Jedi, but was no match for his formidable skills. However, Minch's Jedi Master, a Zabrak named T'dai, arrived to corner the Dark Jedi. Unfortunately, the Dark Jedi took his own life, rather than be captured by the Jedi. The Dark Jedi's Master, however, managed to escape and fled to Dagobah. Minch took a starfighter and chased him down, against the orders of Master T'dai. Although Minch managed to defeat the Bpfasshi Master in a cave on the planet, the Dark Jedi's tainted blood seeped into the ground and imbued the planet with Dark Side energy. Note that this character might actually be the Jedi Master Yoda, who was given the name Minch Yoda in early drafts of the script for Star Wars: Episode V - The Empire Strikes Back. (T16, TAS)

Mind Evaporator

this was the Basic translation of a Wookiee term for any addictive video game that lacked any form of educational purpose. (X3)

Mind Prison

this unusual, box-shaped device was believed to have been created by the ancient Rakatan people. Outwardly, it resembled a cargo crate. However, when improperly opened, the mind prison took control of the opener's mind and drew them inside. To the unwitting victim, the inside of the box resembled a featureless, white room lined with pillars. Within the room is a Rakatan individual who challenges the victim to answer a series of riddles. The Rakatan himself claimed to have been a former leader who started a civil war and was imprisoned for his crimes. Although his body was long-dead, his mind was trapped in the room, and the only way he could get out was to take over another being's body. Thus, if the victim failed to answer his questions correctly, the Rakatan took control of their body and could attempt an escape. (KOTOR)

Mind Shard

this was an offensive form of telepathy, in which the wielder drove daggers of psychic energy into their victim's mind. The effect was that the victim's neural pathways were disrupted, and the victim felt intense pain in their mind. (UANT)

Mindabaal

this planet was decimated by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War. Its populace was nearly wiped out, but there are rumors that the rightful king escaped the destruction. His two daughters survived because they were off-planet at the time of the attack. Mindabaal is located in the Outer Rim Territories. (SWJ5)

Mindabaal Custom Yacht

this 30.1-meter-long pleasure craft was designed to be customized to meet the needs of individual owners. It needed a pilot and co-pilot to operate, and could transport up to eight passengers and 35 metric tons of cargo. The base model was unarmed. (PP)

Mindabaal Royal Academy

a prestigious boarding school found on Mindabaal. (SWJ5)

Min-Dal Company

this armor manufacturer attempted to test its JX4 prototype Gladiator battle armor on the criminals in the Soruus System. These criminals were pitted in battles to the death, which were wagered on by the bureaucrats. However, the Gladiator armor was so good that the criminals were able to shield themselves with it and escape from the prison. They caused heavy amounts of damage before being recaptured by Imperial forces. Min-Dal was then forced to cancel its production of battle armor. (SWJ3, GUN)

Mindar

a planet where Han Solo and Leia Organa battled a squad of stormtroopers. (CPL)

Mindavar

this Outer Rim world was populated during the last years of the Old Republic. A virus struck the settlers just as Palpatine was taking control of the galaxy, and their calls for help went unnoticed in the turnover. The majority of the population was wiped out. (SWJ4)

Mindemir

this planet, the primary world in the Mindemir System, was a member of the Old Republic. Jenna Zan Arbor had planned to use the water supply of Mindemir in her experiments, but was blocked from doing so by the laws of the Senate. In a daring move, Senator Uta S'orn proposed the lifting of these laws, ostensibly in the name of saving lives on other worlds, and then falsified Senate records to ensure that the measure was ratified. (TDR)

Minder

this was a slang term used to describe those physicians who were also empaths, and worked to ensure the mental and emotional well-being of their patients. (MBS)

Mindharp

a fabled magical talisman of the Sharu, it was a meter-long tool shaped like a fork (as was the Key of the Overpeople). It was hidden in the Great Pyramid on Rafa V, awaiting the emergence of the Bearer and Emissary. The Mindharp was the tool that the Toka could use to recall the Sharu. The legends built by the Sharu themselves, in order to hide themselves in the guise of the Toka, said that the Mindharp would call the Sharu back to aid the Toka in an emergency. However, the true purpose of the Mindharp was to unlock the hidden knowledge of the Sharu and re-establish their intelligence networks. These networks were hidden eons ago when the Sharu were frightened by a superior power. They hid all their knowledge in huge computer banks, and locked all but one of their number in the disguise of the ignorant Toka, awaiting a time when the danger had passed and they could re-emerge. (LCM)

Mind-Jam

a coin-game often found in bars and casinos. (HSE)

Mindnet

this Marasan construct links the cybernetic implants of all Marasan government officials into a single communications path. It allows each of the electnodes to contribute to a group decision, which can be made almost instantaneously once all information is available. The Grand Daern then collates the data from the electnodes and issues a final judgement. (GG12)

Mindor

this planet was the site of a battle between Luke Skywalker and his New Republic troops, and the Imperial forces of Lord Shadowspawn. The Imperials fought to the death, and General Skywalker deeply regretted the incredible loss of life. Six months later, Skywalker resigned his commission with the New Republic. (ECH)

Mindori

this one of the many small mining settlements established on the planet Kallistas. Located north of Trevalis, Mindori was the second-oldest settlement on the planet. The settlement was located nearby the planet's largest natural oasis and fruit grove. (GG10)

Minds and Perceptions: A Comparative Study of Persuasive Techniques During the Galactic Civil War

this work described, in detail, the various methods used by the Empire, the Corporate Sector Authority, and the Alliance to extract information from captives. It was written by Ulm-Aaa-Janzikek, and was published by Triplanetary Press. (CSA)

Mind-to-Mind

this was the Basic term that described the Vratix method of communication. It was the only phrase that the Vratix could use to describe the hive-like communication between individuals. (SWI64)

Mind-Ugly-Ug

a term used by Halla for bureaucratic fools like Grammel. (SME)

Mindwarper Module

this form of DarkStryder technology was powered by the intense energies contained in the Lifewell. When activated, the Mindwarper module emitted a form of energy that reduced the willpower of a being and rendered them unconscious. Like most DarkStryder technology, though, the Mindwarper module was only usable in Kathol Sector. Any attempt to remove it from the Sector and use it would result in the destruction of the module. (E)

Mindwipe

this was another term for the complete erasure of a droid's memory. This term was often used by the droids themselves, since it implied that the droid's computer memory was actually a form of mind, and not a piece of technology. (MBS)

Mind-witch

this unique humanoid species has intense mental abilities. They lure individuals near to them, then probe the being's mind to find out what they like and desire. A relationship is then established with the individual, which the mind-witch forming a psychic link by creating an illusory environment which is highly desirable to the individual. The mind-witch can then leech the mental and life-energies of its victim in order to replenish its own energies. Some well-skilled mind-witches also have some telekinetic powers. (CSW)

Mine

this was the generic term used to describe a detonation device that can be distributed into open space and left there, lying in wait for unsuspecting ships to pass by. There are many different kinds of mines. Most were considered passive, or contact, mines: they sat in space until a passing ship physically touched them, at which point they exploded. Some were heat-seeking mines, armed with lasers that are targetted to the source of heat. There were also combination mines, designed to explode on contact but also armed. There were three kinds of combination mines: Type A, a 15-meter-long mine armed with a single laser cannon and a 5-RU hull; Type B, similar in armament to the Type A mine, but with a different shape; and Type C, a 5-meter-long mine armed with a single laser cannon, a warhead launcher, and a 5-RU hull. The rarest kind of mine, known simply as an active mine, was equipped with proximity sensors and a propulsion system. Whenever a large object triggered a proximity alarm, an active mine homed in on it and moved to intercept it. This characteristic made active mines difficult to deploy and maintain, leading to their limited deployment. (TIE, WOTC)

Mineclan

this was the term used to describe a family on the planet Averill which owned and operated a mine. Each mineclan was an autonomous entity, but all mineclans worked together for the greater good of the planet. (SWJ13)

Minehold

this was the name of a family-owned mining operation on the planet Averill. Before the New Order, many mineholds existed, with each family inheriting the mine through succeeding generations. When the Empire subjugated Averill, the individual mineholds were nationalized into a monopolistic entity. (SWJ13)

Minelayer

this Imperial ETR-3 escort transport was destroyed by the Azzameen family during their attempt to acquire a spy satellite, shortly before the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Miner, Pillar

this man was among the slaves who were captured by the Yuuzhan Vong and forced to work aboard the dhuryam seedship controlled by Ch'Gang Hool, shortly after the Battle of Coruscant. Pillar suffered massive injuries when he mistakenly wandered into a grove of immature amphistaffs. He failed to realize that the young creatures were just as dangerous as the mature adults, and was viciously attacked. Jacen Solo tried to save him, but his injuries were too severe. (T)

Mineral Assets Partnership

this large corporation funded a number of mining operations during the last century of the Old Republic. They went bankrupt after a number of expensive failures. (SWJ1)

Mineral Exploiter

these starships, developed by the Hutts under the auspices of the Orko SkyMine corporation, were designed to process the ores found in asteroids. These huge, boxy ships were simply huge cargo ships which were connected to mouth-like scoops. The scoops collected asteroids and held them in place while turbolaser emplacements blasted the asteroids to rubble. The throat of the Mineral Exploiter then sifted the rubble for the more precious ores, sending them to processing units that formed them into ingots. The useless material was discarded. They were designed by Bevel Lemelisk, who had been captured by Durga the Hutt for the purpose of designing a superweapon the Hutts could use to control the galaxy. Unfortunately, he designed them too well, for the first two devoured each other, thinking that the ores they each contained were found in regular asteroids. (DS)

Miners' Guildhall

located in Tel Boillin, this was the primary meeting place for the geode miners who worked on the planet Endregaad during the early years of the New Order. (TF)

Miner's Horror

this immense creature was first discovered 5,000 years before the Battle of Yavin by a group of pirates who stumbled upon a specimen. Their distress calls were almost ignored, and the only ship to respond found a holed wreck and a number of unusual creatures. The crew managed to kill one and return with it, and subsequent encounters have been quickly investigated. Measuring more than 20 meters in length when fully-grown, the miner's horror resembled a huge, segmented mollusk with several large spines sticking out from its back. Their heads are dominated by a single, immense eye, and their mouths are filled with saw-like teeth which can dig through solid rock. They exist in the hard vacuum of space, floating from asteroid to asteroid to obtain food. They grind up any rocks they locate into digestible pieces, and a single miner's horror has been documented to consume an entire asteroid field over the course of several decades. Despite their fearsome appearance, they are slow-moving, and can be avoided. (COG) located on Mon Gazza, this was the town that grew to support the miners who worked in the planet's spice mines. (RAC)

Miner's Town

Minestra

this Rendili StarDrive light corvette was part of Drea Renthal's pirate fleet. It had been captured from a skirmish with Imperial forces and modified to have concussion missiles and ion cannons to supplement the normal laser turrets. Renthals' distinctive blazing claw insignia was obvious on both sides of the ship. The Minestra, along with the Too Late Now, destroyed the Vigilance during the early hours of the Battle of Nar Shaddaa. (THG)

MineSystems

this specialized manufacturer produced a variety of life support and emergency equipment used by miners. (FBS)

Minet

this was a common name among Cerean females. Unlike their male counterparts, Cerean females use a single name unless they became a bond-wife. In this case, a female will take on their husband's grandfather's name for official matters. The name Minet indicated a gem, jewel, or other treasure. (GCG)

Mineth

this was one of the many names given to female Bothans. In the Bothan language, it meant "musical" - or, more literally, likes to sing." (GCG, WOTC)

Ming, Callista

a Jedi Knight from Chad III, she grew up with her family on an ocean ranch, migrating on the Algic Current with the herds of tsaelke. Callista was discovered by the maverick Jedi master Djinn Altis at a late age, and agreed to train with him at his facility on Bespin, and later aboard his personal training ship, the newly-christened Chu'unthor. It was during this training that she first met a fellow Jedi named Geith. When she accepted the assignment to intercept and disable the Eye of Palpatine, she and Geith - who was now her lover - were unable to completely eliminate the threat of the ship. So, Callista decided to stay behind and try to disable the ship while Geith returned to get more help. When Geith was killed during his escape attempt, Callista sacrificed her physical body and left her Force-aure in the ship's automated firing computer. Years later, when Luke Skywalker, Cray Mingla, and Nichos Marr rediscovered the Eye of Palpatine, Callista fired on them, thinking that they were Imperial troops come to recover the ship. Then, Irek activated the ship's remote controls, re-initiating its original mission. Callista was unable to determine the causes, but she was able to sense Luke's strong Force-presence when he was brought on board. She helped him rescue Cray and Nichos, but refused Luke's attempts to store her consciousness in a computer. However, when Cray decided to stay behind and detonate the ship, she gave Callista her own physical body. Callista escaped the Eye of Palpatine, but she could no longer touch the Force. So, while she loved Luke, she felt that they could not be together forever. The two tried everything they could think of to help her regain her Force sensitivity, but she only succeeded in finding the Dark Side. She vowed that, if the Dark Side was all she could touch, then she wanted nothing to do with the Force. This opened a rift between herself and Luke, which widened with each failure. When the Jedi Academy on Yavin 4 was attacked by Admiral Daala's fleet, Callista took matters into her own hands, and set out to strike a blow against the Empire, even without the abilities of the Force. She commandeered a TIE Bomber and landed on the Knight Hammer, quickly sabotaging the ship's complement of TIE Bombers to detonate their payloads and rip out the Super-class Star Destroyer's engines. She then went to confront Daala, allowing the Dark Side to wash over her as she tried to kill Daala. Daala succeeded in stunning Callista, while the Knight Hammer plunged into the core of Yavin. Callista was not killed when the ship exploded, however. She recovered, and escaped in one of the command-level emergency pods. She fled the New Republic and Luke, setting out to break through the barrier of the Dark Side in order to recover her powers. She felt that she needed to do this herself, and sent a final message to Luke, asking him to understand. Her travels led her to Nam Chorios, where she was drawn into the web of Taselda and Beldorion the Hutt. She tried to learn about the Force from both former Jedi, but was unable to truly regain her power. Taselda enslaved her with the promise of returned strength, using Callista to strike at Beldorion. After escaping the old woman, Callista realized that she was trying too hard to restore her Force sensitivity. She felt that this would lead her to the Dark Side, so she allowed herself to become Beldorion's slave as well. This fear - the fear of falling into the Dark Side completely - was what kept Callista from rejoining Luke. She came to understand the strange relationship between the Force in the Spooks and the Therans, and joined one of their troops in working to keep the drochs from leaving the planet. It was Callista who re-initiated Leia Organa-Solo's lightsaber training, while they were spending time in a Thera camp. After the defeat of Dzym and Seti Ashgad, Callista again fled Luke, joining Umolly Darm and Be' as rock ivory hunters until she found her way in the Force. (COJ, DS, POT, SWJ14, NEGC, SWDB) this musical style was popular among the youths of the galaxy, during the height of the New Order. It was similar in many respects to the b'ssa nuuvu style. (GMR6)

Mingla, Cray

a beautiful woman, Cray also happened to be one of the galaxy's foremost innovators in artificial intelligence during the early years of the New Republic. She was also somewhat adept in the use of the Force, having attended Luke Skywalker's academy on Yavin 4. Tall, slim, and energetic, Cray's expertise in AI earned her a doctorate at the Magrody Institute. She fell in love with Nichos Marr, and the two were engaged when they arrived at Yavin 4 for Jedi training. When Nichos was diagnosed with Quannot's Disease, Cray worked feverishly to create a cyborg body for him. She delved into the Ssi-ruuk entechment techniques, but could not completely recover his humanity. She continued to strive to make Nichos a better "man." (COJ)

Mingla, Margolis

Cray's mother, she never manifested any power with the Force. Her mother was strong with the Force, as is her daughter, Cray. (COJ)

Mini Rail Cannon

this small but high-powered weapon was produced by Rika/Moab during the last decades of the Old Republic, as an upgrade to the weapons systems of a combat droid. (YDR)

Miniad

this was the modified FA-504s transport used by Nir Rinit, during his tenure on the planet Naalol. It was armed with a single laser cannon. (GMR5, WOTC)

Miniaturized Translator Droid

see M-TD (HTF)

Mini-detonator

any small, hand-held detonation device which can be thrown at its target. (AS)

MiniLab

this portable testing device provides quick, though not often accurate, chemical and biological analysis of substances found in the field by scouts and explorers. (GG8)

MiniMag

this shoulder-mounted proton torpedo launcher was produced by Krupx during the years leading up to the Clone Wars, but remained in production for many decades. It was considered a simpler weapon than the Merr-Sonn PLX, but it was nevertheless equally effective. There were adaptor kits produced for the MiniMag that allowed it to accept other projectile weapons, and the changeover could be done in the battlefield in short order. The MiniMag lacked a sophisticated targetting system instead relying on the sighting abilities of its user. The MiniMag was one of many Clone Wars-era weapons that were later used by the stormtroopers of the Empire. (SHPT, SWDB) designed and built by Trilon, Incorporated, this mobile mining vehicle was quite common among scouts and explorers who also did their own mining. At 80 meters in length, the Mining Barque can carry six miners and has a cargo hold which can contain up to 1,000 cubic meters of ores. Specialized sensor arrays allow its crew of three to search out precious and semi-precious metals and minerals from orbit, and the ship's holds are equipped with testing and processing systems to ensure only the high-quality products are retained. The Barque is hyperspace-capable, and, although it was minimally shielded, it was armed with a turbolaser and a heavy mining laser. Of course, the mining laser was designed to cut through rock and exposed the ores below. However, several less reputable scouts have taken to landing their Barque on a competitor's ship and using the mining laser to cut it open. (GG8)

Mining Barque

Mining Crawler

this huge machine is similar to the Jawa Sandcrawler, and performed the function those sandcrawlers were designed to perform. They blast up large pieces of rock and draw it into huge processing facilities within its structure. The processed ore is stored for later delivery to a central collection center, while the scree is simply dumped out. (SWJ8)

Mining Digger Crawler

originally developed by Corellia Engineering, these lumbering vehicles were used to mine ores from a variety of planets. Measuring 120 meters in length and standing twenty meters tall at the cockpit, the Mining Digger Crawler moved about on four huge treads that could move the vehicle at speeds around thirty kilometers per hour. Note that The New Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels indicates that this vessel was just 36.8 meters in length. A crew of fifty-seven - four pilots, twelve engineers, forty workers, and a "crawler master" - were required to operate the machine. A number of these mining vehicles were dispatched to the planet Tatooine, after initial colonization attempts hinted at the possibility of metals and ores hidden in the desert. When these claims were proven false, the crawlers were abandoned. They were later scavenged by the Jawas, and modified to serve as sandcrawlers. Note that the Arms and Equipment Guide indicates that the Mining Digger was manufactured by Corellia Mining Corporation. (SOT, AEG, NEGv)

Mining Droid

large, stocky droids used in the spice mines of Kessel to collect the spice hidden there. They are green in color. (GDV) based on Coruscant, this quasi-political body controlled much of the mining throughout the galaxy during the last decades of the Old Republic and into the era of the New Order. It was originally formed in the early days of space exploration, and may pre-date the formation of the Old Republic. Most historians agreed that the Guild originated in the Core, but were unsure of its exact origin. Emperor Palpatine seduced the Guild's officers into aligning themselves with the Empire, solidifying his sources of raw materials for the Imperial war machine while allowing the Guild to remain "independent." The Guild rose to a new level of power under the government of the New Republic, and began to command high prices for the ores its members delivered. (ESB, CE2, LOE, WOA34)

Mining Guild

Mining Laser Platform

built by Quarren Industrial, this repulsorlift sled is equipped with a heavy-duty boring laser. It has a shielded cockpit, and is used by the Quarren for moving through the rock and material of the mantle of Calamari. (DU)

Mining Machine Number 9

located to the south of the city of Thousand Thousand, on the planet Makem Te, Mining Machine Number

9 was one of the largest open mines found on the planet. Surrounded by a complex arrangement of barracks and garages, the mine plunged deep into the planet's crust, revealing layers of rock, ore, and raw spice. (WOTC)

Mining Machines

this was the term used to describe the immense, self-contained settlements created on the planet Makem Te when the Congress of Caliphs opened the planet to offworld corporations. The Mining Machines were centered on deep, open mines, from which workers extracted valuable ores and raw spice. Most of the Mining Machines were built and maintained by the Old Republic, although many were badly damaged by the Temple of the Beatific Razor during the years just prior to the Clone Wars. (WOTC)

Mining Outpost 11

this was the primary base from which the independent miners - and later, the Empire - staged mining operations within the Graveyard of Alderaan, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (GA)

Mining Outpost Station

developed and manufactured by YsreTech, this 400-meter-long space station was designed for mining and refining of sapce-borne gases. It required a crew of ten to operate, and had space for 100 miners and support personnel. The station also had the capacity to accommodate 1,000 metric tons of supplies and equipment. (SWJ6)

Mining Quarter

this section of Cloud City was inhabited by the multitude of miners who worked at the outpost. The population of the Mining Quarter was predominantly made up of Ugnaughts. (GG2)

Mining Station Alpha

located near the planet Ithor in the Lesser Plooriod Cluster, Hoole tried to reach this asteroid mining outpost to gather ethromite for the Shroud. Shortly before their arrival, Hodge and his crew had discovered a cave that was dominated by a statue of an Ithorian. The creature depicted was in great fear of something, with its hands outstretched in front and its eyes wide open. He asked Hoole and Fandomar about it, but they couldn't immediately come up with a reason for its existence. It guarded a well-defended tomb, in which the Ithorians had enclosed the entity known as Spore. The tomb was then confiscated by the Dark Jedi Jerec for the Emperor's use, although its contents had been removed before he could get there. Hodge and his men had opened the tomb, hoping to find treasure, but instead were infected by Spore. Jerec left the asteroid after failing to recover Spore, and Fandomar then destroyed the station in an effort to kill Spore. However, Spore got of the asteroid inside Hodge's body. (GOF9)

Minions of Xendor

Han Solo often used the expression "by the Minions of Xendor" when he was surprised by something. It referred to those beings who supported the ancient Kashi Mer exile, Xendor, during the First Great Schism. See also Xendor's Minions. (TPS, GMR5)

Mini-scan

this small, portable scanner was developed to be carried in a pouch. It could provide technical information on a computer or other electronic system. (MC52)

MiniSci Arcology

this was the primary location of the Old Republic's Ministry of Science, found in Coruscant's Galactic City. (HNN5)

Minister of Scout Services

this position within the New Republic was set up to oversee the efforts of the New Republic Scout Service and the services scouts which worked for it. (GG8)

Ministry Council

this Senatorial council of the New Republic government managed the day-to-day operations of the Republic's various ministries. (SOL)

Ministry of Defense and Offense

this was the name of the primary governmental body charged with the protection of the citizens of Delaluna, during the decades leading up to the Clone Wars. (LOJ)

Ministry of InterGalactic Transit

this Imperial body was responsible for monitoring and licensing the interstellar transport of substances and commodities. (SWJ2)

Ministry of Technology

this building, located in Caballa City on Exocron, was the headquarters of the Devisors. As such, it was also the planet's capital building. (KO)

Minka

this female being, a feline humanoid, served the Alliance as a starfighter pilot in the Cantros System during the last days of the Galactic Civil War. She was one of a handful of pilots who survived the Empire's attack on the Cantros System, shortly after the Battle of Endor, and she was the only pilot to make it to Saijo before she was shot down. She was stunned to learn that the Emperor had been defeated at Endor, since Imperial forces in the Cantros System were as strong as ever. Her appearance on Saijo alerted the Alliance to the treachery of Durne, who was eventually captured and held for questioning. (MC93)

Minlet Missile

this was a form of tiny concussion missile manufactured during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ4)

Minmirn, Kimp

this Quarren geneticist was hired by Mils Giel to help create a mutant breed of Tirrith that could be used as a biological weapon. Minmirn succeeded in every endeavor, creating a mutant strain of Tirrith that exuded toxic gas, rather than a simple knockout gas. This mutant strain wanted nothing more than to kill any living being it came into contact with, a trait that was bred into them through cruel handling and treatment. Unfortunately, when Giel decided that it was time to unleash his new weapon, he didn't want any loose ends lying around. Rather than risk any problems, Giel murdered Minmirn to ensure his secret was safe. (PH)

Minnisiat

this was a form of trade language that was developed by the multitude of races that inhabited the area of the Unknown Regions closest to Csilla. The use of Minnisiat allowed these disparate races to communicate with one another, despite the obvious differences in their native languages. (SQ)

Minnix

this Trandoshan was a noted drug dealer, working from a base on Nar Shaddaa during the early years of the New Order. In addition to selling the more common drugs, Minnix was also known as a dealer of tempest spice, which kept him relatively rich while ensuring that his own addiction to tempest was satisfied. Minnix spent much of his time in Kuzbar's Cantina, waiting for his clients to approach him. He purchased his spice from a number of dealers at the Dark Melody bar. (TF)

Minntaa

this planet was under Imperial control for several months before the Alliance was able to break its grasp. The planet was held under the control of Colonel Jeph Shannessi, until Alliance SpecForce agents were able to assassinate him and break the chain of command. (ROE)

Minntooin

this aquatic planet was loyal to the Confederacy of Independent Systems, during the height of the Clone Wars. Much of its population was made up of Quarren radicals who were exiled from their homeworld of Mon Calamari. (X3)

Minoro

this was the Snivvian word for "song." (HNN5)

Minos Cluster

a collection of planetary systems at the edge of the known galaxy, it is a fairly safe haven for the galaxy's outcasts. There are over 70 planets in the Cluster which could sustain life, although humans have only settled 10 primary worlds. Much of the Cluster's native sentient life remains in the stone age. (GG6)

Minos-Mestra Corporation

originally formed by VernanGroup, this mining and large-scale manufacturing corporation grew into a galaxy-wide megacorporation during the last century of the Old Republic. Its primary source of raw materials is the Mestra System's asteroid field, to which the corporation holds ownership rights. However, as the Republic began to rot from within, VernanGroup's fortunes began to wane. The Minos Cluster fell into economic depression as Palpatine assumed the Presidency, and VernanGroup was forced to sell its shares to local investors. Since the institution of the New Order, Minos-Mestra has become driven by short-term profits at any cost. Miners are abused in order to obtain more ore, and security is tight. The need for security helped create a new branch of the corporation, providing police, emergency services, and armed forces to the Mestra System. Primary headquarters for the corporation are located on Shesharile 5, while a local office is found on Javis-12. (GG6)

Minshal

this was a large, shelled creature grown by the Yuuzhan Vong for its shell. The shell, once discarded by the minshal, was used as a form of temporary shelter. In general, minshals were smaller than grashals. (FH1, UFCD)

Minstrel

this was the callsign used by Ulaha Kore, during the Jedi Knights' attempt to kill the voxyn queen at Myrkr, some twenty-seven years after the Battle of Yavin. (SBS)

Minstrel

this statue icon, along with its mistress the Dancing Goddess, was worshipped by the natives of the planet Arcan IV. The Minstrel was a trivial being, however, lacking the Dancing Goddess' power. While Lemo and Sanda searched for it, the Minstrel was in the possession of Lando Calrissian. Calrissian gave it to Dafi, in an effort to escape Arcan IV, and the Minstrel eventually ended up in Lemo's possession. In the wake of the Battle of Endor, Han Solo discovered that the Dancing Goddess and the Minstrel were two necessary components in the massive machinery that kept the Godoan race vital. They set out to recover the statue, in hopes of reviving the Godoan civilization. Lemo had used it as the basis for his organization's funding, but he landed in prison and couldn't control things from there. When Han Solo questioned Lemo about it, Lemo agreed to turn the statue over in return for his freedom and a wealth of credits. Han then took the statue back to Godo. (LTA4, SWI67, MC79)

Minstrel-class Space Yacht designed and built by Ubrikkian Industries, this pleasure craft was a favorite of the Hutts. It measured 160 meters in length, and required a crew of 35 and a pair of gunners in its basic form. The Minstrel-class could carry up to 90 metric tons of cargo and was armed with a tractor beam projector and a pair of triple blasters. (IA)

Mintempas

this was the Snivvian word for "experience." (HNN5)

Mintori, Demelza

this former Imperial Army officer was a rival of Madix Hansor during their service. When Mintori was unable (or refused) to help rescue Hansor's team during a siege in the Dalcretti System, Hansor vowed to exact revenge on Mintori. The pair fought a series of battles on the Core Gladiator Walker League professional circuit, with each team doing so much damage to the other that most matches were declared draws because neither team could continue fighting. Mintori and his team, Demelza's Destructors, were based in Sedratis City. (GFT) this tall, reedy plant is found at the edges of the swamps of Naboo. Hollowed-out mintri reeds are used by the Gungans as musical instruments, dart blowers, and straws. (GF)

Mintri

Minwritz

this was the Snivvian word for "literature." (HNN5)

Mio, Marmio

this woman lived as a hermit on the remote world of Geonosis, during the early years of the New Order. She claimed to have been stranded on Geonosis after her starship crashed in the E'Y-Akh Desert, and her manic appearance seemed to support this story. In reality, she was an accomplished spy who secretly worked for several competing tribes of Geonosians, each of which believed she worked exclusively for them. Hidden in the hulk of her starship were a speederbike and several probe droids, which she used to gather all sorts of information about the events on the planet. (GORW)

Mioe

this petite woman was one of the clerks working at the Starwind Chandlery during the Galactic Civil War. (FOP)

Mip

this small, parasitic insect was native to the planet Geonosis, where it lived in a symbiotic relationship with the enormous merdeth. Swarms of mips could be found living on or near merdeths, feeding on the ichor found in the merdeth's body. However, the mips also provided benefit to the merdeth by locating food and attacking any creature that tried to kill the merdeth. (GORW)

Mipps, Deena

this woman was a reporter for the Darpa SectorNet news agency. Unknown to even her employers, Deena was also the local spy for the Alliance, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ3, SWJ8, CCW)

Mipsy, Alandra

this woman was a reporter for the Colonial News Nets, who covered the political and social scene on the planet Procopia during the New Order. She was also a supporter of the Alliance, and used her position to help Alliance agents infiltrate private parties and exclusive meetings, claiming them to be part of her camera crew. (LOE)

Mira

this woman was a bounty hunter and scout who was active during the height of the Great Sith War, more than 4,000 years before the Battle of Endor. She was unusual for her kind in that she never killed another being to collect a bounty, and only used lethal force in self-defense. Even then, she killed reluctantly, and this collection of attributed allowed her to remain clear of organizations such as the Exchange. She was known to hunt with a specialized wrist launcher, that could fire small darts or ion rockets. (OWS)

Mira

this female humanoid was one of the many Jedi Knights who felt that the Jedi Order was becoming too militaristic during the early years of the Clone Wars. She was originally trained by Master Sora Bulq, and remained loyal to the Weequay during the escalation of conflicts. After openly refusing to accept the rank of General, she left the Order to follow Sora Bulq to Ruul in protest of the Jedi's participation in the war. A tall, pale-skinned woman, Mira was distinguished by the patterns of spots which surrounded her eyes. When Master Bulq was attacked by Asajj Ventress, it was Mira who felt the disturbance in the Force and came to help him. Unfortunately, Mira was no match for Ventress' skills with a lightsaber, and was quickly killed in battle. Ventress claimed that she had been sent to Ruul by Mace Windu himself, in an effort to drive Master Bulq farther from the Jedi. (OWS, J1)

Miracle Meriko

a musician who performed during the last years of the Old Republic and into the era of the Galactic Civil War. He died in Imperial custody. (TME, HNN5)

Miradyne Limited

manufacturers of starship avionics packages, Miradyne went out of business during the height of the New Order. (XW, EGW, SWJ5)

Mirage

one of two disguised starfighters used by Manda D'ulin's team of Mistryls. (TME)

Mirage

this was the codename used to describe the headquarters of the New Republic Intelligence agency, buried deep below the surface of Coruscant in The Abyss. It was named because a large-leafed plant grew in the depths of the city, without sunlight, giving the impression of an oasis. (HT)

Miraj

this up-and-coming speederbike racer gaining notoriety during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. A string of victories earned Miraj the respect of her peers, who were surprised when the helmet came off and they discovered Miraj was a woman. Miraj became famous among the racers who plied the Raptor Run on Stend VI, where she hung behind other racers until the very end of the race, before goosing her racer, the Wrath, into a higher gear and passing them at the finish line. (WSV)

Miral

see Mirial (BF6)

Miraluka

a race native to the planet Alpheridies, they are born without eyes. However, through the use of the Force, they can see as well as any sighted race. Outwardly, the average Miraluka individual appeared to be a normal Human, with a decorative veil covering their face. They original Miraluka migrated to Alpheridies several millennia before the Great Sith War, fleeing a planet which was geologically and tectonically unstable. Their innate abilities with the Force were brought to the forefront as genetic mutations brought on by Abron's infrared radiation eliminated their eyes. Very few Miraluka ever left the Alpheridies, choosing not to disrupt their equilibrium. When Emperor Palpatine instituted his Jedi Purge, many Miraluka were killed or forced into hiding, and they remained aloof from the rest of the galaxy for many decades afterward. Note that the LucasArts website for Knights of the Old Republic II: The Sith Lords indicates that the Miraluka died out some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. (FNU, TOJC, PJSB, UANT, LAWS)

Miralukese

this was the native language of the Miraluka. (PJSB)

Miramba

this large, blue-skinned humanoid replica droid was used by Gru'um Ropple to transport frekkers into Jabba the Hutt's palace on Tatooine. Miramba was covered with an organic layer, which allowed her to pass through Jabba's sensors. She was programmed to appeal to the Hutt, laughing at his jokes and lavishing him with praise. After Bib Fortuna had Gru'um arrested, Gru'um had Miramba open her internal section and release the frekkers into the palace. It is unknown if she survived the Hutt's fury after realizing what Gru'um Ropple had planned. (JTH)

Mirandine

one of six Kathol Republic Marauder-class corvettes sent to rescue the Bravado III from attack, shortly after the FarStar offered assistance. The 195-meter vessel was armed with eight double turbolaser cannons and three tractor beam projectors. (KO)

Mirani

this gas giant was the fourth and outermost planet in the Aramand System. It was orbited by nineteen moons, some of which had been colonized by the Aramandi. (FBS)

Miraponics

a unique science. (CSWEA)

Mirax

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Mirax

this was one of the most common names given to female Corellians. (GMR9)

Mirax

this was a common name among the Kushiban race. (UANT)

Mirchidi NeMall

this Duros worked for a spaceline shuttle service until shortly before the Battle of Yavin, when he had earned enough credits to buy his own ship. With his money, he purchased the NeHimmep, which he named after the legendary Duros explorer. He made a meager living as a spacer, never really breaking through to earning a good living. He considered taking up smuggling, but feared being targeted by Imperial Customs because he was an alien. (SS)

Mirgoshir System

this star system allied itself with the Confederacy of Independent Systems during the months leading up to the Clone Wars. (J2)

Mirial

this cold, desert planet was the homeworld of the Mirialan race of near-humans. It was located along the Hydian Way, between Yavin and Almania. (SWDB, PJSB)

Mirialan

this species of near-humans was native to the planet Mirial. The Mirialan people were very religious, and adhered to a primitive understanding of the Force as their underlying beliefs. They believed that each individual's actions contributed to their destiny, and an individual placed a unique tattoo on their face and hands to signify the completion of certain tests and tasks. As an individual matured, the number of tattoos increased, allowing other Mirialans to quickly what role an individual will play in the future of Mirial. (SWDB, PJSB)

Mirialan

this was the native language of the Mirialan people. (PJSB)

Mirip Pag

this lotran served as a gunner for Urias Xhaxin aboard the Free Lance. (DTO)

Mirnic University

Jorus C'baoth was educated at this school before joining the Jedi Order, many years before the Clone Wars. (DFR)

Miro Asteroid Belt

this debris-choked area of space was virtually uncharted during the New Order. (WOA3)

Miro Daroon

this Jedi Knight was on charge of maintaining the Jedi Temple on Coruscant, during the last years of the Old Republic. He had a deep technical background, and could fix virtually any system. Miro was a native of the planet Piton, and was reedy and had translucent skin like other Pitons. (CT)

Miro, Branff

this man was the ineffectual and virtually invisible Imperial governor of the planet Merisee, during the height of the New Order. (PG3)

Mirrfield

developed as a by-product of mirrsteel, mirrfield was used to create inexpensive walls. The opacity of a mirrfield wall could be adjusted to allow for privacy, as needed. (TG)

Mirror Caverns

this was one of the global parks established by the government of the planet Telos, during the Old Republic. Located near the Sacred Pools, the Mirror Caverns were named for the reflective mineral malab, which covered their walls with mirror-like surfaces. (DOR)

Mirrsteel

this was an incredibly strong, durable building material used to create immense skyscrapers during the early years of the New Republic. (AFA)

Mirshaf

a planet whose ancient culture is much-revered in the galaxy. Captain Dorja, serving under Grand Admiral Thrawn, is connected to the culture, and still uses their victory gestures. (TLC)

Mirshilan

this Outer Rim Territories world was the site of an Imperial base during the Galactic Civil War. (ROE)

Mirt

this Bothan claimed to have been a native of the planet Thaere Privo, when he was among the many prominent individuals who were invited to debate the problems associated with floating cities during the height of the Clone Wars. He lacked any form of tact or friendliness, and often used derogatory names to describe other races and beliefs. He got into a shouting match with Kaguya after he called her a bark-loving freak, and his continued ranting eventually earned him the ire of the people of Cularin. However, Mirt was later forced to agree with Kaguya's idea of dismantling the floating cities and encouraging the development of multi-story buildings in the ground-based locations. (LFCW)

Mirt Alpitt and the Dust Storms

despite their wild name, this band was well-known in the Outer Rim during the height of the New Order, and was distinguished by its soft, almost classical repertoire. (GCQ)

Mirth Gas

this gas is used to immobilize beings by causing them to view everything as funny and without care. (CSWEA)

Mirthen

this Quarren pirate served as Captain Jayhawk's second-in-command aboard the Martinette. (SWCP)

Mirx

this New Republic Navy Commodore was placed in command of Task Forces Gemstone and Copperleaf during the battle against the Yevetha. (TT)

Misanthrope

this cargo ship, commanded by Kevreb Bebo, crashed into the planet D'vouran when it suddenly appeared in its flight path. Bebo managed to set the ship down with moderate damage, but his distress call was intercepted by the Empire. In order to cover up the true nature of D'vouran, the Empire blamed the crash on Bebo. Much of the crew was reported as dead, when in reality they were consumed by the planet. (GOF1)

Misch'an

an Alliance starfighter pilot who didn't survive the offensive against Operation Strike Fear at Briggia. (XW)

Mischievous One, The

see Courta'paeas (GMR1)

Miser

the first planet in the Bepin system, Miser was a hot world rich in various metals and ores. It was mined by the Ugnaughts when Cloud City was a free outpost, but the mines have been abandoned since the Empire took control of the city. It was also used as the site of an Imperial Naval base, with the majority of the base hidden below the inhospitable surface in caves. The planet's high content of metal makes wireless communication nearly impossible, requiring fiber-optic connections. (GG2, HTTE, IC)

MI-series Droid

this was a series of security droids developed for personal use by the elite members of Imperial society. Roughly humanoid in stature, the MI-series had two heavy legs and a pair of long, heavy grasping arms at its waist. A thinner pair of arms, mounted at the shoulders, were equipped with weaponry. (GMR6)

Miser-plant

a plant native to the deserts of Kamar. (HSR)

Misery-guts

this was a term coined by the clone troopers of the Grand Army of the Republic to indicate any leader who fretted over every situation, wondering how to handle it "by the book" without causing more trouble. (SWI81)

Mish, Borvil

this man served as a Lieutenant in the Imperial armed forces, and was a customs inspector at Byblos Tower 214 during the height of the Galactic Civil War. An energetic man, Mish was easily distracted by food, and many smugglers learned that he could be bribed with unique and exotic delicacies. (SWJ5)

Mishalope

this species of striped, fur-covered mammals once thrived in the mountains near the Grand Fall waterfall on Firrerre, until the planet was nearly destroyed by the Empire. (EGP)

Mish-ra

this was one of the many Eickarie families that made up the Sha-kae clan on the planet Kariiek, during the height of the New Republic. (FB)

Mishra, The

this tapcafe was located in the city of Ilic, on the planet New Cov, during the early years of the New Republic. It was here that Luke Skywalker intervened in a dispute between a Barabel and a Rodian, and made something of a fool of Niles Ferrier. Ferrier later called Lando Calrissian and Han Solo to the Mishra, using Luke's name, to discuss a possible contact for locating the Katana Fleet. (DFR)

Mishtak

an alien race. (SOP)

Misik

this Imperial Corporal was the son of a diplomat from the planet Tatooine. He joined the Imperial Academy and was known for his crack shot and skill with a speeder bike. After graduation, he was assigned to a scouttrooper squadron, and was eventually posted to the teams protecting the shield generator on the forest moon of Endor, during the construction of the second Death Star. He was adept at developing new speeder bike tactics, often working with Sergeant Barich, and hoped to one day join the Emperor's Demonstration team. (CCG10)

Miskin

this was one of the most common human surnames encountered in the galaxy. (GCG)

Miskin, El'Tar

this young man worked as the conceirge at the Greentree Pointe resort on Almas during the period leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Prior to this, El'Tar was a shipping clerk for Naescorcom, but was fired for negligence when he mistakenly sent a shipment of thermal detonators to an orphanage on Coruscant while sending a local of textiles to a pirate gang. Only his affable nature kept him from getting killed, and he eventually found his way to Dorumaa. (LFC)

Misnor

this moon is the homeworld of the Chiilak species. (COG)

Mison, Tarn

this former Imperial pilot joined the Alliance shortly after the Battle of Yavin. An expert marksman, Mison later served as the fighter escort during the Bright Hope's escape from Hoth. (CCG9)

Miss Chance

this was the name of Kaine Paulsen's personal starship, a modified YT-1300 light freighter. (SWJ2)

Miss Mylla

this female Falleen worked as a courtesan on the planet Lamaredd, during the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo. She operated the largest and most popular saloon in The Landing, which was located in the area known as Center Sphere. Any number of rumors about her origins have been debated in The Ring for many years, although it was known that she wasn't a native of Lamaredd. She arrived sometime before the Clone Wars, and had been a fixture in Center Sphere ever since. Although outwardly her relationship with Mix Liddell was strictly professional - mainly to ensure that her operations were legal - Miss Mylla was known to have said that Liddell was the only male who could get her to settle down and leave the Saloon. (GMR7)

Miss Mylla's Saloon

this was the name of Miss Mylla's saloon, located in the Center Sphere area of Bartyn's Landing, on the planet Lamaredd, during the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo. (GMR7)

Miss Vix

this was the name used by Whirry Malreaux to describe the Vjun fox that she kept as a pet and familiar, during the height of the Clone Wars. When Count Dooku took control of Chateau Malreaux, he allowed Whirry to remain in the home, but was uncomfortable with the presence of Miss Vix. Thus, when Dooku learned that his former Master Yoda was on Vjun, he needed Whirry to do his bidding. He grabbed Miss Vix and began pulling out tufts of her fur, forcing Whirry to agree to his terms in order to free the fox from further torture. In exchange for Miss Vix's freedom, Whirry was forced to order Fidelis to arrange for Whie to meet with Asajj Ventress, thereby holding the Padawan hostage while Dooku met with Yoda. After Dooku fled Vjun and Whirry returned to the Chateau, Miss Vix chose to run away, and was not seen again. (YDR)

Missa

this young woman was taken prisoner when the Free Lance ambushed her own ship, the Indupar Nova, near Ec Pand. It was revealed that she was a maid who served Lady Kalena, although the two had switched positions when the pirates attacked. Urias Xhaxin took both women prisoner, for later use in ransoming them off. (PP)

Missile Boat

designed by then-Admiral Thrawn during the Galactic Civil War, the missile boat was a modified Cygnus Spaceworks assault gunboat. 15 meters in length, the missile boat was given a SLAM overdrive for quick bursts of power, a single laser cannon, 4 missile launchers, and up to 80 concussion missiles. The ship could achieve sublight speeds of 125 MGLT, and was protected by 120 SBD shields and a 20-RU hull. Many Imperial pilots denounced the new ship, saying that it was not very maneuverable in a dogfight, although it was deadly from long-range. (TIE)

Missile Tube

any land-based weapon which carries and fires short- and long-range proton or concussion missiles. (HSR)

Mission Commander

the title given to the ruling member of the Survivor group on Dellalt. He is charged with strengthening the beacon, in hopes that the High Command will hear it. This involves making blood sacrifices when the need arises. (HSL)

Mission Vao

this young Twi'lek female grew up on the streets of the Lower City on Taris, some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. Mission spent her early years with her brother, Griff, until he disappeared into the underworld. Mission blamed his girlfriend, Lena, but was unaware of the truth behind her brother's troubles. She made many enemies during her struggles to survive, especially among the Black Vulkars, but a chance meeting with Zaalbar the Wookiee earned her a fast friend and protector. She was known as a quick thinker, a characteristic which helped her escape a number of tight situations during her life. She accompanied Zaalbar wherever he went on Taris, and was usually given the task of scrounging for food, a role she performed quite successfully over the years. When Zaalbar was captured by a group of Gamorrean thugs, Mission found herself turning to a group of Old Republic heroes to rescue him. Among her newfound friends were Bastila Shan and Carth Onasi, and the group quickly became good friends after Zaalbar's escape. Mission and Zaalbar played key roles in the search for Darth Malak, helping to repay the debt for Zaalbar's release. Mission Vao was voiced by Cat Taber for the video game Star Wars: Knights of the Old Republic. (KOTOR, SWDB)

Missira

this elderly Tarasin female was one of the first of her race to attend the Almas Academy. She was chosen by her irstat to attend the Academy as a representative of her species, after a great deal of debate over whether or not a Tarasin would be able to live outside its tribe. Missira succeeded at her training, and eventually became a Jedi Knight. She also became the Mother of the small population of Tarasin which were attending the Academy during the last decades of the Old Republic. Missira was also in charge of the kitchens at the Academy. (LFC)

Mist

this bounty hunter was known as a violent, capable individual, although he very rarely appeared in public. Mist began working in Kathol Sector shortly before the Battle of Endor, but was driven underground by the appearance of Moff Sarne. When Sarne fled the New Republic's warships, Mist began showing up again, although his operations were somewhat questionable. Mist is best known for the heavily-modified suit of Krail 1010 photo-reactive armor he wore. He was hoping to find Sarne and capture him, with the intent of extorting what he felt was just compensation for having been left hanging when Sarne fled. Shortly afterward, Mist encountered an alien construct deep within the Kathol Rift, and soon discovered a piece of the DarkStryder technology. He learned how to control a DarkStryder fire creature, and attempted to defeat the crew of the FarStar with this newfound power. He was defeated aboard the alien construct, and forced to flee before the firepower of the FarStar. During the Battle of Kathol, Mist was discovered to be the actress, Shella Inion, who had believed that the Alliance was responsible for the deaths of her family. When Jessa Dajus revealed that it was Moff Sarne himself who had killed her family, Mist switched allegiances and joined the New Republic in defeating Sarne. (KO, KR, E)

Mist

this was one of the many Imperial escort carriers during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Mist Hunter

this was the name of Zuckuss' personal starship. It was specially commissioned by Zuckuss and a group of Gand venture capitalists, with a Byblos Drive Yards G-1A transport ship as the base. It made extensive use of combat cloud car repulsorlift technology. It had room for eight passengers and a metric ton of cargo, and was armed with a pair of assault lasers and a tractor beam projector. (TBH, CCG4, GMR7)

Mist Laden

this Koensayr Sigma-class shuttle was owned and operated by the Gand findsman Lu'daal-ud. It had been extensively modified since it was retired from regular duty, and was armed with a single turret-mounter laser cannon as well as a turret-mounted heavy turbolaser cannon. Lu'daal-ud obtained the ship after capturing its owner in the Imberlin System. (AIR)

Mistal

a Duchess from Dargul. When she came of marrying age, she began a widespread search for the perfect mate. All candidates had their credentials entered into a computer, and she would marry the one the computer chose. Dack Tymmo sabotaged the results of all the candidates in order to make himself into the "perfect mate," and they were married. Unfortunately for Dack, Mistal is a very affectionate person, and she couldn't bear to be away from him. She did not give him any free time, and so Dack fled to Umgul in an effort to escape her. Mistal offered a million-credit reward for Dack's return, which Lando was able to obtain when he apprehended Tymmo at a blob race. Mistal was grateful to Lando from that point on. (JS)

Mister Mxil

this Mon Calamari arrived on Port Haven shortly after Hallomar, and established the Haven's Water cantina. Mxil had once served as a chief steward aboard the Kuari Princess, but was fired from his job after speaking out against the Empire. With an Imperial bounty on his head, Mxil fled and ended up on Port Haven. He was known for brewing his own liquors and ales, and had discovered that many of the jungle plants found on Port Haven had medicinal or healing properties. Mister Mxil could also cook up a spicy stew, and he rarely charged a visitor for anything as long as they repaid his hospitality. (PSPG)

Mister Threep

the name given by Anakin Solo to C-3PO. (CS)

Mister Tisilan

this Bith financier and art lover was also a noted thief who worked for the Alliance. Tisilan was one of the primary sources of goods within the supply chain maintained by Redda Macrebe, along the Trax Tube, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ7)

Mistflier, Dusque

the youngest member of a large family based on the planet Talus, this woman worked for the Empire as a biologist during the height of the New Order. When her father died in the factory he was working in, her four brothers tried to keep the family together. Her mother seemed to have died inside, although she kept on living. When her youngest brother enlisted in the Imperial armed forces but died during a training exercise, Dusque's mother began to rail against the Empire, claiming that it had killed her family. She then returned to the shell she had become, leaving Dusque and her surviving brothers to fend for themselves. Despite graduating with high marks and continually scoring higher than her superiors, Dusque always managed to miss out on promotions or better jobs. She knew that this was due to her sex, and so she dressed and acted as unfeminine as possible. However, this didn't deter her from doing the best job possible. Her love of her work was enhanced by the presence of her partner, Tendau Nandon. During a routine mission to a galaxy-wide conference on Naboo, Dusque met Finn Darktrin, who began to question her allegiance to the Empire. While Dusque didn't openly say it, she had begun to wonder why the Empire treated non-humans so unfairly. Her dedication to the Empire was shattered when Tendau was arrested and executed on the suspicion of being an Alliance sympathizer. She agreed to accompany Finn and set out to join the Alliance. The two were paired on a dangerous mission to Dantooine, where the abandoned Alliance base still stood. Despite having been razed during the Imperial investigation just before the Battle of Yavin, Princess Leia Organa still believed that a holocron containing the names and locations of hundreds of Alliance agents was still on Dantooine. Dusque and Finn set out from Corellia to find it, racing the Empire's agents and the planet's ecosystem to find it. Dusque discovered it hidden in the ashen remains of a campfire, inexplicably located hundreds of feet belowground, at the site of an ancient Jedi training compound. Her elation at finding the holocron was matched by her growing affection for Finn, although he seemed alternately aloof and eager to return the feeling. It was on their return to the Alliance headquarters that Dusque discovered that Finn himself was an Imperial agent. He managed to send off a small portion of the holocron's contents before Dusque grabbed the object and ejected it into space. Finn had no desire to return to the Alliance, and didn't need Dusque blowing his cover, so he stabbed her in the chest with a knife. As their ship was about to be boarded, Finn blasted away in an escape pod. Dusque found herself being rescued by Luke Skywalker, but had to explain what happened to Finn. However, she believed him dead when no Imperial forces attacked their base on Corellia. (ROD)

this spiralled horn could be hollowed out for use as a musical instrument. The Jedi Master Tionne also used a mist-horn as the handle for her lightsaber. (VF)

this brewed beverage was served on many farmers' tables on the planet Dagro, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SWI77)

Mistik Arka

this Quarren worked for Urias Xhaxin as a technician aboard the Free Lance during the Galactic Civil War. (PP)

Mistmaker

this strange creature is native to the planet Msst. The mistmaker is a large, pink, gelatinous cloud which float through the jungles, cathing unsuspecting prey in the tentacles which hang from its body. The tentacles are lined with stinging poisons which incapacitate the mistmaker's prey. Once the prey has been immobilized, the mistmaker uses its tentacles to draw the prey into its toothy maw. If destroyed, a mistmaker will explode, showering its attacker with caustic pieces of gelatin that bore into exposed flesh. (TNR)

Mist-pudding

this light but flavorful dessert was created on the planet Barnaba, for the enjoyment of the nobles in House Barnaba. (LOE)

Mistran

this Imperial Lieutenant served as the commander of stormtrooper squadron assigned to the shuttle Resurgence during the Galactic Civil War. (SWCP)

Mistress Crimson

this was an alias used by Celia Durasha, when she took up smuggling after her escape from the Kuari Princess. (SWJ5)

Mistress Dragon

the name given by Jacen Solo to the huge, lizard-like creature Hethrir has captured and uses as a guardian for the Empire Youth camp. The beast could very well be a Duinuogwuin. Jacen's growing ability to converse with animals is further heightened when he encounters the dragon, and he convinces Mistress Dragon to help the children escape from the compound. (CS)

Mistress Mnemos

this huge computer system was rumored to have been maintained by the Alliance as an intergalactic database. C-3PO was able to interface with Mnemos to gather information on Blackhole. Located on one of the most secret safeworlds the Alliance maintained, Mnemos had a feminine personality and was given a good deal of programming on etiquette and protocol. She required that any being making inquiries of her memory bank follow set procedures, and omit any irrelevant or unnecessary details. While the knowledge contained within Mnemos's memory banks was generally believed to be extensive, it was only as good as the data that it was given. Much of the information on Luke Skywalker's family history, for example, was misleading or simply wrong. (CSWEA, LAT1, GMR4)

Mistryl Shadow Guards

this mysterious sisterhood is the base unit of Mistryl society. (SWJ9)

Mistryl Warriors

well-muscled, female warriors from the planet Emberlene, the Mistryl were personally commissioned by the Eleven Elders of the People to protect and defend not only Emberlene but other down-trodden peoples as well. Any pay the Mistryls acquired was returned to Emberlene, in order for the native population to purchase the necessities of life. The Mistryl were turned against the Empire after they were told of the Empire's part in the destruction of Emberlene. Although they sometimes worked for the Empire in order to obtain funds, they never aligned themselves with Palpatine's forces. At their heart, the Mistryl worked with every opportunity to exact some form of revenge on the Empire for its part in Emberlene's destruction, although most never knew that the Empire had nothing to do with the devastation of the planet. (COTF, TME, SOP, VOF)

Mistwater

this was the name used to describe the ultra-pure water condensed from the clouds of the planet Barnaba. It was bottled and sold throughout Tapani Sector, and commanded a high price during the height of the New Order. (LOE)

Misty Falls Clan

a clan of Force-sensitive witches on Dathomir. Like nearly all such clans, the Misty Falls Clan works from the Light Side of the Force. (SA)

Mitgard

this corporation produced some of the finest repulsorlift engines of the last decades of the Old Republic. (CRBN)

Mith

this name was given to female Zabrak, and meant "good gardener" - or, more literally, "grain-wife". (GCG)

Mithail

this boy was the youngest of three children Yander had with his first wife, on the planet Ord Cestus. The children grew up for many years without a mother, until Yander married Sheeka Tull. After Yander's death, the children continued living with Sheeka, although they stayed with aunts and uncles whenever Sheeka had to work. Mithail was distinguished from his siblings by his unruly mop of red hair. (TCD)

Mithel

one of Darth Vader's wingmen during the Battle of Yavin, "Mauler" Mithel flew Black 2. (CCG)

Mithel, Rejlil

Mauler Mithel's son, Rejlil was an Imperial Ensign who served as a tractor beam operator aboard the Chimaera some five years after the Battle of Endor. Mithel was promoted to Lieutenant by Grand Admiral Thrawn for his efforts in trying to break Luke Skywalker's covert shroud maneuver, then assigned the task of developing a way to counteract the maneuver in the future. (TLC, CCG, TTSB)

Mithipsin

one of Belsavis' natural volcanic rift valleys. (COJ)

Mithran

this young man was a racer who handled tranthebar mountain rippers during the height of the New Order. (GFT)

Mitochondria Crunchy Surprise

this is a favored appetizer of the Ugor race. (SH)

Mitrinomon Transports

manufacturers of the Z-6 jet pack. (CCG7, EGW)

Mitsh

this man was part of a small scientific expedition that was lost on the planet Talus, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Mitsh and the rest of his party were killed when they stumbled into a cave that was inhabited by a swarm of fynocks. The only evidence of their existence was a datapad that was later recovered from the cave. (SWGAL)

Mitsun

this was one of the most common human surnames encountered in the galaxy. (GCG)

Mitsun, Creed

this man worked at the Fondor shipyards and a crew foreman. He and his team of various races was working on refitting the Star Destroyer Amerce when Fondor was attacked by the Yuuzhan Vong. His crew was killed by one of the suicide runs performed by the alien coralskippers. The ships plowed into Orbital Shipyard 1321, utterly destroying it and killing all aboard. (JE)

Mitth'raw'nuruodo

this was the full name of Grand Admiral Thrawn. He gave his "core name" of Thrawn to Captain Parck when the Imperial officer first encountered him on a remote world in the Unknown Regions. (SWJ7, SOP, VOF)

Miv'rah Firestorm

this modified SoroSuub Nestt-class freighter was owned and operated by Gaor Tembon. Tembon added a pair of quad-laser cannons to the lower hull, which could be retracted when not in use. A SoroSuub Nepton power core kept everything operational, with the assistance of several Koensayr TLB power converters. (WBC)

Miwa Oyev

this being served as an Associate Councilor to the New Republic, and was the head of the New Republic Scout Service's Core Post. (GG8)

Mix Liddell

this male Mon Calamari served as the Chief of Security for the Outer Rim Oreworks installation on Lamaredd during the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo. Liddell was a formed harpoon operator aboard the trawler Swilla, but gave up his membership in the Sailors' Union to take on the role of Chief. He held the position for more than 40 years, and even the MD-series droid known as Doc believed that Liddell was the best Chief that Lamaredd ever had. His appointment as Chief came after his efforts in capturing the Dark Jedi Byrch Dyshkava, who had killed Chief Ertine and the rest of the deputies who were sent out to capture him. When Dyshkava escaped from prison, Liddell vowed to track Dyshkava down and bring him to justice once again. While not on the job, Liddell was enamored of Miss Mylla, the Falleen saloon owner, and was often seen in her saloon during his off-hours. When he learned that Dyshkava was still alive, Liddell hired a group of freelancers to served as his deputies, and put them to work investigating the claims of Dyshkava about the plans of the Menahuun. The destruction of the Tria Blue revealed a connection between the Menahuun and the Outer Rim Oreworks: the Bartyn family. The agents hired by Liddell were able to negotiate a cease-fire with Eeytch, and discovered that the Menahuun had nearly been exterminated by Hugo Bartyn more than 500 years earlier. With the revelation of this knowledge, Guther Bartyn was forced to relinquish control of the mines as well as Bartyn Gourmet Delicacies, and Mix found himself at the center of of attention. He agreed to support the rights of any Menahuun who wanted to join the society of Bartyn's Landing, although he was at first met with some civil unrest. The townspeople of Bartyn's Landing then called for open, democratic elections to replace Guther Bartyn as Administrator, and many believed that Mix would win the election. During a rally, however, Liddell was shot in the chest by a being who claimed to be the new new Padawan on Lamaredd, and he was forced to bow out of the race. (GMR7)

Mixerbot

any automaton programmed to tend bar. (LCM)

MixRMastR

this was a series of Cybot Galactica robo-bartenders. The MixRMastR was designed to be bolted to a table or counter, measuring junder a meter in height. Vaguely humanoid in stature, the MixRMastR was connected to a network of tubes which ran up through its base, which were connected to beverage dispensors of all varieties. A database of mixed drinks was installed to allow the MixRMastR to create an incredible variety of concoctions. Once Cybot realized that many establishments were not rich enough to have a MixrMastR at every table, a repulsor-equipped model was produced which could float about a room and serve drinks. (CSA, EGD)

Mixtwirk

this small, alien race had a pair of receptive antennae on its head. (SWJ15)

Mixxim

Abal Karda used this alias when he fled Vestar to Star Station 12. He gave it as his name when he had Bojam Rees tattoo the tribal pattern of a Duhma on his face. (EOE)

Miy'til Assault Bomber

this starfighter was developed by the Hapes Consortium from the basic designs of the Miy'til Fighter. It measured twenty meters in length, and required a pilot and co-pilot to operate. It was armed with a pair of laser cannons and two concussion missile tubes, each of which carried sixteen heavy missiles. Despite their design roots, the Miy'til Assault Bomber never saw widespread utilization, even within the Hapan Navy. (SOG)

Miy'til Fighter

this Hapan starfighter is a short, sleek craft measuring just over seven meters in length. The bat-shaped design has the cockpit and engines mounted between two forward-sweeping wings. The craft's small size means that the Hapan engineers had to miniaturize many of its components. Each wing is tipped with an ion cannon, and a triple blaster cannon sits just beneath the cockpit. The Miy'til employs an R2 astromech droid to assist with in-flight operations and navigation. The Miy'til fighter is propelled by four Incom 6X4 fusial thrust engines, but its speed is relatively low compared to the A-Wing fighter. (EGV, CTD)

Miywondl

this deity was one of many in the mythology of the Gwurran, the diminutive Ansionian race. Miywondl was the god who controlled the wind, and because the wind never truly stopped on Ansion, it was believed that Miywondl was the most powerful of all the Gwurran deities. (APS)

Miza

this Chiss male was part of the squadron which was assembled to support Jagged Fel's fact-finding mission to the New Republic, shortly before the Battle of Coruscant. When Jagged decided that the best way to gather information was to assist the Republic in their struggle against the Yuuzhan Vong, Miza and his fellow pilots agreed to stay. Miza joined the Twin Suns Squadron, and was known as Twin Suns Eight during his time with the Republic. After Coruscant fell and the Republic's forces regrouped on Calamari, Miza agreed to accompany Jaina Solo and her parents on a mission to re-establish communications to parts of the galaxy which had been cut off. Jaina would have preferred another pilot, believing that Miza was less reliable than some others, but agreed to accept his help. When they discovered that the planet N'zoth and the Yevetha had been destroyed by the Yuuzhan Vong, Miza broke off to investigate a transmission from a nearby moon. The last surviving Yevethan warrior had crashed on the moon, and was waiting for the Yuuzhan Vong to find him. Despite the fact the Miza was not huting him, the Yevetha refused to be rescued. He set his ship to self-destruct, and Miza's clawcraft was caught in the blast. Miza was killed instantly. (FH1)

Miztoc

this planet was liberated from the Empire by the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. (CRO)

Miztoc City

this capital city of the planet Miztoc was the site of the decisive battle between Imperial and Alliance forces fighting for the planet. (CRO)

Mizx

this humanoid race was native to the planet Randorn 2. (COG)

Mk 45

this was the model number of one of Koromondain's protective armor vests. (GG10)

MK 8001

this attendant droid was designed and manufactured by AccuTronics. Humanoid in design, it was the first in a long series of "family-oriented" automata produced during the military era of the Galactic Civil War. Its primary programming gave it the capability to guard and care for the young or infirm, and it could provide limited medical attention in emergency situations. (SWJ13)

MK Enterprises

founded by Meysen Kayson, this conglomerate was best know for one of it holdings, the Greel Wood Logging Corporation. (SWJ6)

Mk II Smartgunner

this form of "intelligent" weapons control chip was developed during the early years of the New Republic, although they were never really mass-produced. These "smart chips" allowed weapons to aimed and fired automatically, greatly reducing the need for gunners on a starship. Jorkatt the Render and Vohrkrewel Yahrkar tried to swindle Octavius Jupiter Scragg out of a huge pile of credits by selling him faked versions of these chips, but Yahrkar's personal droid discovered they were false and returned them. (POC)

MK x/S

this was a series of modular weapon which could be mounted on a vehicle. The various configurations were denoted by number (Mk 1/S, Mk 2/S, etc.) to denote the power of the weapon. Depending on needs, the Mk series could be mounted as a medium or heavy blaster cannon, a light or medium laser cannon, or a grenade launcher. (MBC)

Mk xe/S

this was an enhanced version of the standard MK x/S weapons series. Like the base series, these weapons were vehicle-mounted, and denoted by power (Mk 1e/S, Mk 2e/S, etc.). These weapons boasted increased power and accuracy. (MBC)

MK-09

this MK-series maintenance droid was owned by the Azzameen family, and performed regular duties aboard the freighters of the Twin Suns Transport Service. Known to the family as Emkay, this droid was modified to be able to fix and repair, as well as fly, the Azzameen's freighters. The extent of this additional programming has altered his personality circuits, and Emkay became quite aggressive toward other droids. He often went looking for a fight with the other automata serving Twin Suns, and the Azzameen began planning to adjust his aggression circuits. (XWA)

MK-11

this droid diagnostic kit was produced by Interstellar Droid Monitors, Inc., during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GFT)

Mk-11

see MK-11 (AEG)

Mk-127

produced by Golan Arms, the Mk-127 was a wrist-mounted weapons system which shot out a series of small, circular blades when fired. The original design of the Mk-127 was produced by the Vacutech Combine, until it went out of business. (GFT, AEG)

MK221

this silver-plated attendant droid had served the N'Vaari family for five generations, and was owned by Brinaloy N'Vaari during the height of the New Order. MK221 was decidedly silent about her disappearance, citing its loyalty to the N'Vaari's and Brinaloy in particular. Known as "Emmy-Kaye" to the family, MK221 was programmed to be a nanny and personal assistant. (ND)

MK-3

Borstel's ion cannon. (XW)

MK8001

this droid, produced by Accutronics, was the corporation's fastest-selling automaton, and sold phenomenally well in the Outer Rim Territories during the New Order. (FTD)

M'kae

this Imperial Navy warrant officer served as the signal officer aboard the Avenger, during the last years of the New Order. He was responsible for testing and coordinating tractor beam operations, as well as relaying the ship's activities and fleet orders to the Captain. (CCG4)

Mkbuto Seatree Preserve

located in the oceans of Calamari, this undersea forest is found along the planet's equatorial belt. The Preserve stretches for hundreds of kilometers, and is made up from a wide variety of sea-growing trees and huge seaweeds. Thousands of species of sea creatures live within the forest. The Preserve was heavily settled by the pre-industrial Mon Calamari, but they soon discovered that much of the Preserve exists over the border of two tectonic plates. Thus, long-term habitation was impossible due to the intense changes, but the abundant life in the forest continued to flourish. Much of the original civilization has been overtaken by the plants. Admiral Ackbar maintained a home in the Preserve. (JASB)

M'kim

this young Thranta Rider was training to join one of the foremost troupes on Cloud City, about the time Lando Calrissian and Cojahn were creating SkyCenter Galleria. When Jacen Solo, Tenel Ka, and Lowbacca were ambushed and Jacen fell from the bottom of Cloud City, M'kim had been out practicing his riding skills and rescued Jacen. M'kim had been out with his troupe when Czethros murdered Cojahn. (TCC)

MK-series Droid

built by Kalibac Industries, the MK-series droids were designed for general maintenance operations. They rolled along on two wide treads, and their stout bodies gave them a low center of gravity. The MK-series had a pair of manipulator arms, and a sensor-studded head mounted on an extendable pivot arm. (XWA)

M'lar'Nkai'Kambric

a musician who performed during the Galactic Civil War. (TME)

Mlatar Thon Gra

this Togorian was generally regarded as the modern galaxy's most skilled master of the sc'rath. He won the Rrann Hhoss at an early age, surprising the masters of the time with his skills. His performance earned him the notice of master weaponsmith Elotic, who took Mlatar under his wing. After six years of study, Elotic declared Mlatar a master. Shortly afterward, Mlatar married his love, Tyrimm Wynl. Unfortunately, Tyrimm was killed on Zuliria when she was caught in the crossfire of an Imperial raid on an Alliance cell. When she didn't return to Togoria, Mlatar himself traveled to Zuliria. The weapons expert Ther-das offered Mlatar his services in searching for Tyrimm, but was only able to deliver the news of her death. Mlatar decided to remain on Zuliria after Ther-das offered him a position in the Zulirian Swordmasters, seeing Mlatar's skills with the sc'rath. Mlatar had his own mosgoth, Ktlin, brought to Zuliria, and rode the beast often. He eventually became Ther-das' most trusted friend. (AIR)

this small, one-person vehicle moved about on heavy treads, and was armed with a pair of medium repeating blaster cannons. These vehicles were designed for perimeter defenses, allowing teams of security agents using MLC-3s to patrol the terrain surrounding a main facility. (MC78)

MLC-50

this model of magnetic locking system was produced by Locris Syndicates, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. About the size of a datapad, the MLC-50 was a two-part system used to secure doors or lids. The MLC-50 was split into two parts, with the parts being affixed to the door and its jamb, or to both halves of a two-panel door. The MLC-50 was then activated, holding the door and itself with a strength rivaling a molecular bond. (GFT, AEG)

Mluki

this race of humanoids lived on the planet Belsavis, in the rift valley domes. They mature rapidly, reaching adolescence at 7 standard years, old age at 30 years. Simian in appearance, they are covered with hair. (COJ)

MM(X)

this experimental grenade launcher was created by Merr-Sonn during the months leading up to the Clone Wars. Separatist forces obtained several prototypes of this weapon, which featured a dual-operated firing mechanism. (SHPT)

MM7

this was an early version of the Kelvarec Consolidated Arms single-shot, wrist-mounted flechette launcher. Jango Fett used one of these weapons on his left wrist. (SWRPG2)

MM9

this was Kelvarec Consolidated Arms' wrist-mounted rocket launching system, produced during the last decades of the Old Republic. These launchers could fire a variety of tiny warheads, including the Type-12A and Type-12B explosive rockets. Boba Fett used these rocket launchers in his upgraded Mandalorian battle armor. (DMSH, EGW)

MMD

an outdated service droid. (COJ)

MMF

an outdated, three-armed service droid. (COJ)

Mmhmm Butterfly

this insect, native to the planet Baskarn, made up a large part of the diet of the yrashu, (SWJ2)

MMLT Launcher

this missile-launching system was developed by Arakyd Industries during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. It found widespread use among the Trandoshan mercenaries of the era, who used it to attack Wookiee cities on the planet Kashyyyk. The MMLT could fire up to eight explosive-tipped missiles in rapid succession, but required a cooling-down period after each burst. (LAWS)

MM-s3

this was the model number of one of Merr-Sonn's grenade launchers. It was designed as a one-man weapon, and was equipped with a microrepulsor engine to assist in handling the weapon. A magnetic clamp was also installed, allowing the weapon to be mounted to a turret or base. Merr-Sonn later placed the MM-s3 atop its WW-676 repulsorlift vehicle, creating the MobileMortar-3 weapons platform. (EGW)

MMV-608

this MMV-series mining droid was converted by Hugo Bartyn into a rolling weapons platform, several hundred years before the Clone Wars. Bartyn stationed the droid at the secret entrance to the Outer Rim Oreworks mines in the mountain range known as the Krakana's Maw, to keep intruders out of the automated mining operations. It was believed that the droid shut itself down after a prolonged period of inactivity, only to be awakened shortly after the Battle of Naboo when a group of freelancers were given access to the mines by Bartyn's descendant, Guther Bartyn. The freelancers managed to bypass MMV-608 by unplugging its neural processor, rendering the droid incapacitated. (GMR7)

MMV-series Droid

this model of treaded mining droid was produced several hundred years before the Galactic Civil War. (GMR7)

MN-1 Groundcrawler

this was TaggeCo.'s mining vehicle, produced as a transport on outpost worlds. It was large enough to transport a pilot and four passengers, and up to 200 kilograms of cargo. (OE)

MN2D

this series of general maintenance droids was the precursor of the MN2E series, from Industrial Automaton. These droids were equipped with a number of cleaning and grasping appendages, as well as a refuse containment and recycling system. (SWJ10)

MN-2E

a series of maintenance droids produced by Industrial Automaton, originally at the request of the facilities managers of the Imperial Palace on Coruscant. The Empire later used one of them in concert with the Ch'hala tress of Coruscant to form the Delta Source. Conical in form, the MN-2E was a tread-driven automaton equipped with sensitive manipulators that can effect detailed or delicate repairs. Note that The Essential Guide to Droids indicates that the MN-2E was equipped with a repulsorlift engine for locomotion. They also had special magnifying visual sensors, and had a variety of cutting and collection apparatus, as well as an internal waste-recycling system. (DSTC, TLC, SWJ14, EGD)

Mneffe-class Superluminal

this shuttle design was produced by DuroTech during the early years of the New Order. It had a long, central fuselage slung beneath a semi-circular wing. The ship measured 27 meters in length, and required a pilot and co-pilot to operate. It had enough capacity to transport up to six passengers and twenty metric tons of cargo, and was armed with a turret-mounted double laser cannon. (ND)

M'Nes

known as the True Faith, this Gorothite religion was founded by the V'Sook during the Imperial occupation of Goroth Prime. The M'Nes religion was based on the belief that the Gorothite people were being tested in a crucible of suffering and pain, and that the endurance of the suffering would strengthen the B'Dellyi to the point of transcendence. Individual suffering was required, but an individual could not be raised without the complete transcendence of the species. The priestesses of the M'Nes, known as the K'Kela Mey, decried those Gorothites who sought to break free of Imperial control as heretics and sinners, working against the greater good of the species. (GSE)

M'Nes Brin

this was the Gorothite term of the "receptacle of the True Faith," and referred to the V'Sook j'ber. (GSE)

M'Nes K'Lar

this was the name of small building located in each Gorothite o'beki, where the locals worshipped the M'Nes, or the True Faith. The name M'Nes K'Lar translated into the Basic language as the "sanctuary of the True Faith." (GSE)

M'Nim

this was one of the many mining settlements, or o'bekis, established on Goroth Prime. (GSE)

M'Nis

this mountain, located on the planet Goroth Prime, was known as Skyfang in the Gorothite language. At an altitude of 8,100 meters, it was generally considered the highest peak on the planet. (GSE)

M'Nista

this man was Baron D'Asta's majordomo. He introduced the Baron to Mirith Sinn and Kir Kanos, when they returned from Grappa the Hutt's stronghold with the real Feena D'Asta. (CE2)

Mnor Nha

this Gotal was Asyr Sei'lar's partner, and was a member of Coruscant's Alien Combine. (WG)

M'nuush

this was the Shyriiwook term for a berserk rage, often referring to the frenzy a Wookiee went into just prior to a battle. (MBS)

Mo killee ma klounkee

this Huttese phrase roughly translated into Basic as "It will be the end of you." (E1A14)

Moactan teel

this as a Chiss insult, meant to infer that an individual was fair-haired. In the Chiss culture, this was a fairly potent insult, since virtually every member of the Chiss race had jet-black hair. The insult lost its meaning whenever a Chiss used it away from their homeworld. (FH1)

Moahdi

this elderly Melida freedom fighter was a supporter of Wehutti, and fought along side the one-armed warrior. (DOD)

Moap

this Kitonak worked as a crime broker on the moon Nar Shaddaa, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He spent most of his time moving between bars and cantinas, arranging illicit and underhanded dealings for various crimelords. Outwardly disorganized and indecisive, Moap had a quick mind and little fear of anything. Shortly after the murder of Nak Simm, Moap was approached by a group of mercenaries who were working for Torga the Hutt. They were investigating Simm's death, and Nomo Sliken's bank accounts revealed that Moap had made a deposit into the accounts just prior to the murder. Moap explained that he had been working as an intermediary for Doronnar, who had been sent by Moska the Hutt to arrange for Simm's death. In reality, Moap had been hired by Jolla the Hutt to create the strife between Torga and Moska, in an effort to claim both their operations for himself. (WOA24)

Moappa

this strange form of invertebrate was native to the oceans of the planet Mon Calamari, and was believed to have existed on the planet before the Mon Calamari and the Quarren civilizations were first formed. As individuals, the pink, bell-shaped creatures were essentially primitive, mindless blobs of jelly. However, when large groups united to form colonies, the intelligence of each individual was united to form a fully sentient entity. This community sentience was even capable of telepathic communication. For many millennia, the moappa were perfectly content to appear as primitive invertebrates, until the Clone Wars broken out across the galaxy. When the Mon Calamari tried to decide the loyalty of the entire planet, the moappa became angry and decided to ally themselves with the Separatists. They used their telepathic abilities to relay the orders of remote Separatist generals to the Quarren who were fighting against the Mon Cals, in an effort to bring all the sentient beings on Mon Calamari together. When Jedi Master Kit Fitso discovered the abilities of the moappa, he forced the Mon Calamari leaders to drop their pretenses of superiority and aloofness, and begin working with the Quarren and the moappa to save the planet and its oceans together. (CWA1)

MOB

this was an abbreviation for the main observation blister of a starship. (BF2)

Mobari, Sora

this woman was one of the many Jedi Masters who were injured during the early stages of the Clone Wars. She and her Padawan were dispatched to the planet Ithor, where they met with strong opposition from Ithorian terrorists. She was betrayed by her Padawan during the fighting, who had planned to kill her in an explosion. Unfortunately, he was too close, and died in the blast. Master Mobari was badly injured, and lost her sight as a result of the explosion. She was taken to the hospital facility on New Holstice to recover. A'Sharad Hett asked Anakin Skywalker to sit with her in the hospital, hoping to make her last hours comfortable. Anakin, having already seen so much death on Jabiiim, offered to try and keep her heart beating with the Force. He believed that he could use the same constriction technique he used on Orliiss Gillmunn to massage her heart. Master Hett forbid it, explaining to Anakin that trying to keep her alive would only cause more suffering. Anakin struggled with this, and reluctantly let Master Mobari die. (RBJ)

Mober Snake

this reptile is particularly dangerous, since it has a head at each end of its body and both of its heads are poisonous. (CE2)

Mobile Command Base

a heavily-armored Imperial vehicle which rolls on a series of treads, and which serves as a secure platform for observing and planning military actions in the field. Although it is equipped with a heavy laser cannon, it is not meant to see combat action. These 21.8-meter-long vehicles were manufactured for the Empire by Nen-Carvon, and were produced for commercial use as the Teklos vehicle. (ISB, GG11)

Mobile Mining Barge I

developed and manufactured by the Lant Mining Corporation, this 275-meter-long repulsorbarge was designed to provide a stable working platform for mining operations on tectonically or seismically active worlds. Originally designed for use on Lish V, this barge required a crew of 55 to operate, along with 24 mining operators. The barge was equipped with eight plasma drills, eight high-intensity mining lasers, and eight tractor beam projectors. The barge could also transport up to 250 metric tons of ore. (FBS)

Mobile Stockade

a portable force field generator used to detain prisoners, the mobile stockade creates a hemispherical detainment field that can be subdivided into 2 or 4 compartments. Intensity can be modified by the use of an overall control and a sectional control. (SC)

MobileMortar-3

this was the name of Merr-Sonn's mobile grenade launching system. It was developed by placing an MM-s3 grenade launcher on a WW-676 repulsorlift vehicle. It was powered by an X-7a repulsor engine, with a secondary XA7 drive. (EGW)

Mobius Coil

a coil of metal that is used for a number of specific applications, including antennas and tuners. (LCF)

Mobok

this was one of the many Twi'leki clans which were native to the planet Ryloth. In the Twi'leki language, the clan's name meant "authoritative". (GCG)

Mobquet Crawler

a low-profile, small-engined speeder. (COJ)

Mobquet Deluxe

a torpedo-shaped, enclosed speeder. (SW, SWSB, GG7)

Mobquet Floater

this is an old, out-dated form of landspeeder. (POT)

Mobquet Medium Cargo Hauler

a 79.3-meter-long transport ship designed for a crew of 2 pilots and 2 gunners, the MCH could carry up to 700 metric tons of cargo, and was armed with two medium turbolasers. A Custom Cargo Hauler was also made available, which provided prospective owners with several cargo configurations. The Mobquet Medium Cargo Hauler was made up of three sections. The forward section was cylindrical in shape, and contained the cockpit and primary systems. The two aft sections were rectangular in shape, and were used for cargo and living quarters. A central fuselage linked all three sections. (DESB, PP, TF)

Mobquet OVERRACER

a speeder bike like the ones used by the Empire on Endor, the OVERRACER measured 4.4 meters in length and could attain speeds in excess of 500 kilometers an hour. These speederbikes were armed with a light blaster cannon. (RASB, DARK)

Mobquet Presents: Fastest Land Beings

this annual event, sponsored by Mobquet Swoops and Speeders, provided some of the galaxy's fastest individuals with a chance to set personal, planetary, or galactic speed records. Playing on the fact that Mobquet produced some of the galaxy's fastest vehicles, the "Fastest Land Beings" series had categories based on the number of legs a participant had. Every participant had to be an intelligent, sentient being in order to qualify. There were eight main classes of beings racing in the events, with classes for bipeds, tripeds, quadrupeds, pentapeds, sexapeds, septapeds, octopeds, and nonapeds. Those beings with ten or more legs were placed into a single class called decaped-plus. (HNN5)

Mobquet Swoops and Speeders

this subdivision of Tagge Company produces some of the galaxy's best-known repulsorlift designs. They are most famous for their swoops, which have become wildly popular with the rise of swoop racing. Several Core worlds have proven that Mobquet designs are among the best in the galaxy. (SWSB, EGV)

Mobus

this gas giant, with its seventeen moons, was the only world in the Klasse Ephemora System. A Chiss probe discovered the existence of a new moon, denoted M-18, just after the Battle of Yavin. This moon was believed to have been the rogue planet Zonama Sekot, a belief which was proven to be true when Luke Skywalker and a group of Jedi Knights managed to locate the Klasse Ephemora System during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (FH2, FH3)

Mobvekhar

a Noghri of the clan Hakh'khar, Mobvekhar served as a lieutenant to Cakhmair as part of the ten-Noghri team assigned to guard Leia Organa Solo's twins some five years after the Battle of Endor. Han Solo had decided to join the mission to destroy Grand Admiral Thrawn's cloning facility on Wayland, and Cakhmair had agreed to help protect Leia, Winter and the children, Jaina and Jacen Solo. Mobvekhar remained on Wayland after the death of Thrawn, as part of the security team which protected the safehouse in New Nystao. (TLC, HT)

Mochot Steep

this singular rock formation is found deep in the desert of Tatooine. Young Anakin Skywalker often met with Jawa clans at the Steep, trading Watto's used goods for more valuable items. (TPM)

Mock Shyr

this parasitic plant lives in the jungles of Kashyyyk. Distinguishable by its paddle-shaped leaves, the shyr grows around the trunks of wroshyr trees. It grows in the fifth biological level of Kashyyyk's jungles. (TT, RD)

Moco Minkfruit

this was the name of a noted individual in Nosaurian history. (UANT)

MOD-17

this Loronar container freighter measured some 550 meters in length, and was made up of four distinct, modular cargo sections. Requiring a crew of fifty to operate, the MOD-17 had room for up to thirty passengers and 200,000 metric tons of cargo. Each of the cargo sections could be modified to provide a variety of environments, from basic shielded space to aquatic or gaseous habitats, depending on the types of cargo to be transported. These ships were capable of hyperspace flight. (GMR8)

Mod-3

this astromech droid was owned by Vana Sage, and assisted her in flying the Guardian Mantis. (STF)

Modan

manufacturers of large starfreighters. (TT)

Modbom

this was one of the most common Gungan surnames, taking from the father's side of the family. These surnames were not dropped, even after marriage. To the Gungans, it meant "bubble builder". (GCG)

Modbrek

an ephemeral, wispy race of semi-sentient hairless beings with a blue mane of hair sprouting from their undeveloped heads. They have huge eyes and tiny noses and mouths. (TME)

Modd

an Alliance transport ship destroyed in the Bruanii Sector shortly after the Battle of Hoth. (TIE)

Moddell Sector

this area of the galaxy was located between Spar and Ablajack Sectors, in the Inner Zuma region and on the border of the Unknown Regions. It was considered in two sections: the Inner Moddell was defined by the line from Vasha through Vex and Mina to Kuna's Tooth, while the Outer Moddell contained Endor, Sanyassa, and the Din and Monsua Nebulae. (GMR9)

Model 11

this was the designation of one of Lifeline Technologies' spacesuits. (FOP)

Model 47 Light Freighter

this Arden Industries freighter measured 30 meters in length, and required a pilot and co-pilot to operate. It had room for up to six additional passengers, and could transport up to 100 metric tons of cargo. (POC)

Model 608 Mega'puter

designed and developed by NeuroSaav, this huge computer system is capable of running an entire city's computing needs. When linked together, the Model 608 can perform autonomously. (TTSB)

Model 7643

this time piece was created by Gorondin Chronometrics, and was capable of holding a variety of holographic messages in addition to telling the time. When queried for the time, the Model 7643 produced a small hologram from its stored images, and the voice of the being portrayed in the hologram spoke the time and a short message to the wearer. The Model 7643 was capable of maintaining the exact times on up to thirty different worlds, providing star travellers with instant timekeeping at their destinations. (GFT)

Model 8 Cargo Platform

this repulsor-equipped cargo platform measured two meters by 1.5 meters, and was developed by Ubrikkian to assist starship owners in moving small crates. (PSG)

Model D Cloudskiff

the brainchild of Huegu Eib, the Model-D was designed for operation in the clouds of Tyed Kant. It measures 18 meters in length, and can carry up to 100 metric tons and ten passengers. It was designed for high-altitude motion, and this sacrifices any speed it could have had. The Model-D is unarmed, since any discharge in the atmosphere of the gas giant could ignite the particles in the clouds. (SN)

Model E droid

see E-series droid (E1A4)

Model VI Skiff

produced by Ubrikkian during the height of the New Order, the Model VI skiff was known for its durability heritage of quality. Many older version of the Ubrikkian skiff continued to work for centuries with minimal maintenance, and the Model VI was built to these demanding expectations. Measuring 17.5 meters in length, it marketed as a personnel transport vehicle. It could accommodate up to forty-five passengers and 500 kilograms of cargo. (AEG)

Model X

Calban's heavy blaster pistol, the Model X was a powerful but fragile weapon that required continual maintenance. When the Empire nationalized Calban's operations on Calabosh-2, the plans for the Model X were reused in the design of the Renegade heavy blaster. (GG9, AEG)

Modeler, The

this was the common name used to describe the Yuuzhan Vong deity Yun-Ne'Shel. (FH2)

Model-X1 Zhurst

one make of racing cloud car. Han Solo owned one at his floating house on Bespin. (ZHR)

Moderation

in the game of sabacc, Moderation is one of the face cards. The picture on the face of Moderation often depicts a Jedi Knight. The card's value is xx. (CPL)

Modern Galactic Light Time

abbreviated MGLT, this is the standard measurement for subspace velocity. 1 MGLT is approximately equal to 10 km/h (6.4 mph). This measurement is also referred to as a 'megelight'. (SCRE, XWA)

Modetto, Trel

a group of Alliance agents had planned to meet with this smuggler on Lamuir IV, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. They hoped to be able to obtain shipments of bacta to use in treating soldiers injured in battle with the Empire. Unknown to the Alliance agents, Modetto was wanted by House Mecetti, the Void Demon pirate gang, and several loansharks, and he had to flee the area or be captured. The team was sidetracked by Janna Pallask, who purposely misdirected them in order to save Coros Telari. The agents eventually met up with him at the Hungry Herglic, but Modetto was unable to help them obtain any bacta. (TSIA)

Modified Briar Pistol

a small blaster created by shortening the Bryar Rifle. Like the Bryar rifle, this is an antiquated, but accurate, weapon. (DF)

Modirin Mining Concern

this mining operation bought up the abandoned chromium mines what littered the landscape of the planet Aduba-3, after it was learned that the chromium had been seeded on the planet as part of a wide-ranging scam. Many of the beings who called Aduba-3 their home were unaware that Modirin was actually owned by the Tenloss Syndicate, and had probably seeded the chromium on the planet itself. The abandoned buildings were converted into a variety of uses, and Modirin almost single-handedly turned Aduba-3 into a shadowport. Although the prices were cheap, the conditions and facilities were considered almost deplorable. (GMR4)

Modog

this small corporation manufactured a line of starship power couplings. Modog products were considered among the best couplings, until Dekk started producing the Dekk-6. (DE1, TME, HFG)

Modon Kira

some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin, this man was the king of the Beastmasters at the time when Ulic Qel-Droma comes to Onderon to mediate the planet's civil war. (TOJ)

Modon Kira

this descendant of the original Modon Kira greeted Han Solo and Leia Organa when they landed on Onderon to repair the Millennium Falcon, which had been damaged by the reborn Emperor Palpatine's second Eclipse-class Star Destroyer, Eclipse II. Modon Kira followed his ancestors and remained aligned against the Dark Side of the Force. (EE)

Modrol

this immense predator walked erect, and was covered with dense fur. Its feet were heavy and clawed, while its hands were studded with five sharp talons. The middle talon on each hand was elongated, forming a sharp, heavy blade which it could use to open up its prey with a single swipe of its paw. Native to the jungle world of Port Haven, modrols had thick skin which was covered with hair-like tendrils. It could alter the coloration of its skin to match its surroundings, giving them the ability to ambush their prey with ease. (WSV, PSPG)

Modular Conveyor

a specialized starship designed to transport up to 4 containers at a time. The 150-meter-long ship is comprised of a forward cockpit section which is linked to two connector sections. Each connector section can attach to two containers. The rear connector section also contains the conveyor's drive systems. They have a top sublight speed of 24 MGLT, and have minimal 70-SBD shields protecting a 30-RU hull. Most modular conveyors are built to move E-class containers. (TIE)

Modular Taskforce Cruiser

manufactured by Tagge Industries Shipyards, the modular taskforce cruiser has an underlying structure that allows it to be built for any number of uses. Basic functional modules can be added to a single framework, making the ship economical for everyone. The basic structure includes the drive system, crew quarters, life support, and command compartments. The functional modules include a hospital module, a survey module, an observation module, a rescue module, and an inquisition module. The basic frame is 1,150 meters long, and is armed with fifteen medium turbolasers. The crew of a taskforce cruiser depends upon its configuration. (DE1, DESB)

Moebius Chess

a variation of holochess. (LCM)

Moegid

this introverted Verpine was one of the few who chose not to go into space and explore the galaxy beyond the Roche asteroid field. He felt starships were death-traps, a view which ostracized him from his home. However, after he deciphered the data from a damaged Imperial probe droid and turned it over to the Alliance, he realized that he was destined to be a codebreaker. He joined the Alliance, which set him up with top-of-the-line computer equipment, and never looked back. His expertise with Imperial codes was impressive, having decoded over 4,000 separate ciphers. He became a friend and business associate of Lobot in the years after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. He later helped Lobot when Han Solo and Lando Calrissian attempted to locate a copy of the Caamas Document on Bastion. He and Lando set up an almost undetectable computer link, using Verpine bio-frequencies to communicate with Lobot's cyborg implant. (CRO, VOF)

Moenia

this city was an artists' retreat, located on the planet Naboo. It was just east of here, during the height of the New Order, that Emperor Palpatine established his personal retreat. (SWI68, ROD)

Moer

this planet is located in the Dalon System. (SWJ10)

Mofat

a Polneyi month or season. Platt Mallar reported that the Yevethan attack on Polneye took place on the 40th day of Mofat. (BTS)

Moff

an Imperial governor, presiding over a sector of the galaxy. All the planetary governors in the sector report to the Moff. Each Moff is also assigned a military force to maintain order in his sector. (SW, ISB)

Moff Balfour's Lament (Tapmint Surprise)

this song, written and played by the band Deeply Religious, was banned by the Imperial Board of Culture. It first appeared on the compilation Emperor of Air and Darkness. (GG9)

Moff Council

this was the name given to the senatorial body of Imperial Moffs, which supported Supreme Commander Gilad Pellaeon and helped run the day-to-day operations of the Imperial Remnant. While powerful in its own right, the Moff Council answered to the Supreme Commander. After the Yuuzhan Vong launched their invasion of the galaxy, the Moff Council generally refused to assist the New Republic in any way, especially after the losses sustained by Imperial forces in the Battle of Ithor. Initially, this seemed to be a good strategy. However, the Moffs soon grew complacent in their isolation, believing that the Yuuzhan Vong would simply ignore them because no attack had yet been made on Imperial space. They refused to believe that any notice had been taken by the alien invaders, and that there were any Yuuzhan Vong agents in their midst. This changed at the Battle of Bastion, when Yuuzhan Vong forces decimated the Imperial fleet at Bastion, and later destroyed the fleet at Muunilinst. Even with these losses, the Moff Council was loathe to agree with the information provided by Jacen Solo, especially Moff Kurlen Flennic. Flennic seized an opportunity to take control of the Empire when it was believed that Pellaeon was killed at Bastion. Pellaeon survived, however, and threatened to take the entire Imperial fleet with him to join the Galactic Alliance if the Moffs didn't accept Jacen's terms to join themselves. Reluctantly, the Moff Council decided that their best chance for survival was to join the Galactic Alliance. (DW, FH1)

Moff Weblin

this Imperial ship saw duty during the latter stages of the Galactic Civil War, and was later assigned to patrol space near the Koornacht Cluster. When its Number 4 power cell failed, it was remanded to Black-15, at N'zoth, for repairs. It was in drydock when the Yevetha rose up against the Empire and took control of the facility. (SOL)

Moffice's Grocers

this building is found in several New Republic starfighter training simulations. (IF)

Moff's Own, The

this was the term used to describe the legion of stormtroopers which was assigned to an Imperial Moff. The legion was under the direct command of the Moff at all times. (ROE)

Moffship

the private starship used by the Central Committee of Grand Moffs. It resembles a Star Destroyer. (QE)

Mog

a deity thought to watch over criminals. (JTH)

Mogaar Tunnel

this underground roadway connected several locations in the vicinity of Mount Mogaar, on the planet Naalol. Branches of the Mogaar Tunnel ran to both Rigton and Naalal, allowing access to and from the city and the spaceport. (GMR5)

Moggonite

this conceited, egotistical race of squat humanoids was native to the planet Arorlia. Distinguished by their long, pointed ears and monkey-like faces, Moggonites held themselves in the highest of regards, while looking down their pug noses at every other being in the galaxy. The average Moggonite was rude and inconsiderate to others, even if the other being displayed nothing but caring and devotion to the Moggonite. Moggonites were also known to be treacherous beings, taking whatever they could in order to get ahead. (T1)

Mogo

a huge, camel-like creature with ten legs and a long, fur-covered body, these black-furred creatures were used for transportation on Roon. Because of their body length and ten legs, mogos appeared to undulate as they walk. (DCAR, EGP)

Mogoyu

this Rakririan finished second to Shimer Londalin in the decaped-plus race in the "Mobquet Presents: Fastest Land Beings" racing series, just prior to the onset of the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Mogra'daal

this Twi'lek was Lonay's father. (SESB)

Mogroch

a Muur which once attacked Roark Garnet. (RPG)

Mogurk

this man served the Empire as a Commandant, acting as the headmaster of the Coruscanti Pilot Institute during the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. Mogurk was known for his gruff demeanor and dry humor, and his students often admiringly referred to him as "an old crank." (PH)

Mohc, Rom

an Imperial General serving the Empire during the early days of the Galactic Civil War, Rom Mohc was a veteran of the Clone Wars. He witnessed first-hand the efficiency - as well as the limitations - of a droid army during the so-called Coruscant Insurrection, when he was forced to fight a cortosis droid one-on-one, and kept detailed records of his experiences for later use. After the rise of the New Order, Mohc continued to train with combat droids, and kept a trophy room in which he displayed the deactivated "corpses" of those he had defeated. Like Wilhuff Tarkin and other Imperial leaders, Mohc had a private scheme in mind to help crush the Alliance and gain favor with the Emperor. Mohc opposed the creation of the first Death Star, believing it took away from the skill on one-on-one combat. Mohc's plan called for the created of a group of specially-enhanced, automated troopers - known as Dark Troopers - which he would use to annihilate the Alliance. His plans were thwarted, however, when Kyle Katarn discovered Mohc's plans and eliminated the Arc Hammer manufacturing facility. (DF, SWDB, WOTC)

Mohn

this man was a member of the Workers underground group which was led by Lenz. (TTB)

Mohris

this being served as the head bartender at the Rimsoo Seven cantina, on the planet Drongar, during the height of the Clone Wars. (MJH)

Mohs

an older member of the Toka living on Rafa IV, Mohs is in actuality the High Singer of the Toka. This allowed Mohs access to the Sharu legends, which he kept alive through various songs and chants used by the Toka people. He finds Lando Calrissian in the Spaceman's Rest, and agrees to help him find the Mindharp. Mohs, feeling that Lando is an imposter and not really the Bearer of the Key, tries to steal the Key from Lando a number of times, only to have Lando recover it each time. When the secret of the Mindharp is revealed to Lando, he learns that Mohs is actually a member of the Sharu race, and the only member of his generation allowed to know most of the truth about the Toka and the Sharu. Mohs does not know what forced the Sharu into hiding as the Toka. He was about to pass on his knowledge to a new High Singer, when Lando arrived on Rafa IV. (LCM)

Moiss, Ensil

this government official was known more for his ability to criticize the work of others than his own accomplishments. Moiss worked for the planetary government of Draenell's Point shortly after the Battle of Yavin. The Empire negotiated with him to acquire a large percentage of Draenell's Point's agricultural production in order to stock the Bissillirus Resupply Base. (GMK)

Moisture Farmers of Tatooine #253

a loose union of moisture farmers who operated in the environs around Mos Eisley. (CCG7)

Moisture Farming

an occupation in which the farmer uses moisture vaporators to obtain the moisture needed to survive on desert worlds. (SW)

Moisture Vaporator

a device used on Tatooine to extract moisture from the surrounding atmosphere, these 5-meter-tall tubes condensed water vapor from the atmosphere and stored it in large, underground tanks. A properly-functioning vaporator could obtain enough water to support three beings for a single day. In order to protect this cache of water, vaporators were locked with a keycode. Because of the extremem environment in which most vaporators worked, they needed regular maintenance on a daily basis, in order to continue operating at optimal levels. (SW, SOT)

Moja Skunax

this was the name of a noted Sakiyan individual. (UANT)

Moje

this obese Sephi worked as the chief assistant to Navi, Thustra's representative to the Galactic Senate, during the height of the Clone Wars. When Navi began working to unseat his uncle Alaric, Moje began spreading false rumors of plots by the Old Republic and the Jedi Knights to murder Alaric. With Alaric's death in a fight with Yoda, Navi returned to Coruscant to speak against the Jedi. Yoda, however, returned to Coruscant with Pix and Clutch to expose Navi's treachery. Although Navi was taken into custody, Moje managed to escape. (J5)

Mokee

according to Ewok legend, this nature spirit visited each tribe to discover its demeanor. Those tribes that were hospitable were rewarded, while those tribes that were selfish were punished. (GCG)

Mokee

this was a common name for Ewok males. Like other Ewok names, it referred to a spirit or character in the Ewoks' mythology. (GCG)

Mokem

this was one of the most common Gungan surnames, taking from the father's side of the family. These surnames were not dropped, even after marriage. To the Gungans, it meant "grateful guest". (GCG)

Mokem

this Gungan was a Sergeant in the Gungan Grand Army, in the period leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Sergeant Mokem was a member of the Gungan faction which strongly blamed the human Naboo for the Trade Federation's invasion of the planet. (SON)

Mokem

this former scientist was an explorer working under tenure with the Obroan Institute. He and Dreiss had stumbled onto the Shadow Traproom on Liok, but both were killed in the strange room before they could perform more a in-depth analysis. (TT)

Mokk IX

this world was used by the Empire as a labor camp location. (HCE)

Mol

this was a common name given to Zabrak males. Like many Zabrak names, it related to survival characteristics, and meant "rainstorm". (GCG)

Molan, Wilst

this woman was a frequent patron of the Outlander Club, some ten years after the Battle of Naboo. She was often seen dancing among the crowds, which led to the assumption that she was actually a hired dancer. Note that this character is also referred to as Naga Molana on the official Star Wars website. (OWS, SWI75)

Molana, Naga

see Molan, Wilst (OWS)

Molator

this creature out of Alderaanian mythology as the powerful, enchanted protector of the kings and queens of yore. It was a spindly creature with long limbs and a cone-shaped head. Chewbacca's hologame table aboard the Millennium Falcon generated a molator as a playing piece. (CCG)

Molator

this was the name given to the Vindicator-class Heavy Cruiser Savrip, after it was captured by the Alliance. (SOG)

Molavar

this Outer Rim planet was a supply world during the height of the Clone Wars. (T21)

Moldguard

this chemical was developed for use in humid climates, to fight off the growth of mold in buildings. (SWJ14)

Moldisin

this female Reigat worked for the Alliance's Sandwind Team as a technician and medic. (SSR)

Moldy Crow

this dilapidated HWK-290 light freighter was captured by the Alliance and refitted aboard the New Hope. The ship was later assigned to Kyle Katarn, who renamed the ship simply Crow during the mission to infiltrate the Imperial labs on Danuta. It was originally built about ten years before the First Battle of Coruscant, and was owned for a while by Roark Garnet. After Garnet inherited the Dorion Discus, he used the Moldy Crow to pay off a debt to Grappa the Hutt. Dace Bonearm and IG-72 then stole the Moldy Crow from Grappa, before dumping it on Teth after capturing Winfrid Dagore. The ship then became the property of Palob Godalhi, who turned it over to the Alliance. Kyle used the ship for many years, until he discovered the Valley of the Jedi on Ruusan. The Moldy Crow was destroyed during the mission to defeat Jerec, and was eventually replaced by the Raven's Claw. The twenty-nine-foot long Moldy Crow was armed with a pair of front-mounted double laser cannons and a turret-mounted blaster cannon. (DF, SFE, WOTC)

Mole

this person fled the service of Darth Vader just prior to the Battle of Hoth. This angered Vader, who sent Boba Fett in pursuit of the Mole. The Mole had fled to Ota, hoping to hide from Imperial forces. There, the Mole encountered Han Solo and Chewbacca, and he saved the Wookiee from a snow snake attack. Fett discovered the Mole on Ota, and tried to capture him. The attempt was thwarted by the appearance of the Snogars, who captured them all. In a daring escape, the Mole used a huge magnetic generator to pin Fett against a wall while making his escape. This also allowed Solo and Chewie to escape. (CSWEA, EGC)

Mole Miner

this blunt-cone-shaped, two-man vehicle was built the by Slayn & Korpil company that manufactured the B-Wing. Each mole miner is equipped with plasma-jet drills used to bore through the outer layers of an asteroid to obtain the elements inside it. Lando Calrissian used them to mine ores on Nkllon. Each mole miner measured about 7 meters in length. (HTTE, HTSB)

Mole Miner

this was a repulsor-equipped vehicle designed and manufactured for the mining industry. These utilitarian vehicles were equipped with beam drills or laser borers, and could cut through rock quickly in order to expose the valuable ores beneath. (DOH)

Mole Serpent

this was a species of vicious, aggressive worm that was native to an unsettled world on the edge of the Kathol Sector. They fed primarily on the tirginni beast, and hunted by using their keen sense of feel to alert them to vibrations that indicating oncoming prey. These huge worms lived primarily underground, burrowing tunnels through dirt and soil which allowed them to reach various points on the surface. The mole serpent lurked below ground until it sensed the presence of prey, then swept out of its burrow to swallow its prey whole. The mole serpent moved through the ground by using a collection of large talons which studded its body, dragging itself forward through muscular contractions. The mouth of the mole serpent was formed from a fixed upper jaw and two lower mandibles, which were studded with huge fangs. (SOT)

Molecular Backtrack Sniffer

a scanning device used to follow the chemical trail of an organism. Q9-X2 installed them on himself just before the Solo family arrived on Corellia. (AC)

Molecular Hooks

this is a method of attaching two objects, most often used with suits of protective armor. Two objects - such as a datapad and the suit itself - can be attached at the molecular level by turning on a small field generator that links specific areas together by twisting and turning certain molecules on tiny plates. The bond is not incredibly strong, but allows for quick storage and retrieval. (GG8)

Molecular Polish

this was a technique in which droid plating and other metallic surfaces could be scrubbed clean and polished to a mirror-like finish, without damaging the metal or the finish. (PH)

Molecular Shielding

used on the Balmorran Viper Automadon, molecular shielding absorbs the energy from opponent's weapons and re-routes it into the Viper's own weapons system. (DE2)

Molecular Stiletto

this form of knife was similar to a lightsaber in that it could cut through almost anything. However, it was also incredibly delicate. It cannot be swung or thrust with much force, or the thin blade will break. Molecular stilettos work best when used with deliberation and care. (SOP)

Molecularly-bonded Armor

this dense armor is created by bonding metals at the subatomic level. Texture-molding tractor fields hold the metal in place while it is just barely surface-liquefied. The hot metal surface is then bombarded with charged particles that increase its bonding strength and resiliency. (CSA)

Moleese

this being was the director of the Out From The Shadows drug abuse outreach program, based in the Jade District of Coruscant during the last years of the Old Republic. (HNN4)

Moleman

this was the name of an obscure race of beings, distinguished by their albino skin and their lack of eyes. (IWE2)

Molf

this was a heavy, red yarn that was used to make tassels and piping for clothing during the last years of the Old Republic. (VD3)

Moll

this tiny ball of searing rock is the innermost planet of the Rannon System. (WBC)

Moll, Demma

a middle-aged woman who owned a farm on Annoo during the early years of the New Order, she opposed the Fromm gang and led a band of freedom fighters in destroying the Trigon One weapons satellite. (DCAR)

Moll, Kea

a native of the planet Annoo, Kea was an accomplished starship and landspeeder pilot. She spent much of her childhood living on the farm her mother, Demma Moll, managed on Annoo. When she was seventeen, Kea made a run to Ingo, where she met R2-D2, C-3PO, and Thall Joben. She spent time on Ingo to help them fend off Sise Fromm, and agreed to help them win the Boonta Speeder Race with their racing speeder, the White Witch. On the way to Boonta, they were forced to stop over on Annoo to repair their ship. While there, Kea was reunited with her mother, and the group agreed to help Demma destroy the Trigon One. When they finally made it to Boonta, Kea and the boys found themselves beset not only by the Fromm gang, but also by Boba Fett. The Boonta Speeder Race was a series of near-crashes by Thall Joben, who fought off the bounty hunter and managed to win the race. The three friends were approached by Zebulon Dak, who offered them positions within his corporation. However, they were told that they could not bring the droids. The trio had decided to turn down Dak's offer, having come to appreciate the droids, but R2-D2 and C-3PO would not allow them to miss the opportunity. The droids jettisoned themselves in an escape pod, leaving the humans free to take the job. (DCAR)

Molleung Worm

this Yuuzhan Vong bio-creation resembled a huge annelid which could be used to serve a number of purposes. In space, they could be used as a living cofferdam. In the air, a molleung could discharge large cargoes from a transport ship to a ground installation. They were modified for use on yorik-trema landing craft, to deposit ground forces into enemy territory. A molleung worm could also be used to link underwater chambers. (BP, UFCD)

Mollo

one of Olag Greck's many aliases, he used it on Hosk Station, just before C-3PX returned to the station. (DRO)

Molly's Merchants

this collection of electronic forgers, slicers, and infochants was based on Cloud City at the time when Bespun Motors decided to split from Incom Industries. The executives of Bespun Motors contacted the Merchants and paid them to adulterate Corporate Sector records to funnel credits into Bespun Motors' accounts. Then, Bespun Motors used the funds to buy their independence from Incom. (GG2)

Moltok

this planet is the homeworld of the Ho'Din, located in the Dartibek System. Despite the fact that it is one of the system's inner-most planets, Moltok is an oxygen-rich world of violent volcanic eruptions. It is speculated the ash thrown up by these volcanoes keeps the solar radiation from reaching the planet's surface. The stable landmasses support lush rain forests, although the planet has steep axial tilt that makes the polar icecaps extremely cold for most of the year. (GG4)

Molys-u kwend cratta zu?

this Snivvian phrase, used in the world of art and antiquities, translated into Basic as "What were you on when you created this?" (HNN5)

Molytex

developed some twenty years after the Battle of Endor, this material was used to create blast-proof vests and armor. It was later combined with quantum fiber to create laminanium armor. (SBS)

Momaw

this was one of the most common male names used by members of the Ithorian race. Although most Ithorian names were not used for a specific meaning, historians found that this name meant "moonlight". (GCG)

Momaw Mowadan

this Ithorian served as the doctor who managed the Kuari Princess's infirmary. (RM)

Momaw Nadon

an Ithorian who was banished from his homeworld, Momaw Nadon has seen the highs and lows of life. As the leader of the Ithorian floatin city Tafanda Bay, he ruled over the best of life's offerings. He was free to maintain the ecological relationship with the Mother Jungle while influencing his race. A chance meeting with an Imperial Star Destroyer which was trying to nail down smuggling routes changed his life, however. The Imperials tried to take the Ithorians' horticultural knowledge, and threatened Momaw Nadon. He was forced to either give up his race's secrets or have the planet razed. He chose to give up some agricultural secrets rather than destroy the planet, and was banished from Ithor forever. Thus, Momaw Nadon became a freelance spy for the Alliance. He was in the Mos Eisley cantina when Obi-Wan and Luke were searching for passage to Alderaan. He is eagerly awaiting the next Ithorian Herd Meet, to rejoin his friends and relatives in spite of the Imperial orders. When the Alliance defeated Palpatine at Endor and restored the Republic, the Imperial directive against him was lifted, and he returned to Ithor to again lead the Tafanda Bay. He later greeted Wedge Antilles and Qwi Xux when they visited Ithor. He is now accompanied by two young human boys: clones of the Imperial agent who threatened him all those years ago, reborn to serve as revenge against the Empire. (SW, SCRE, DA, CCG)

Momen, Reija

this matronly woman, a native of the planet Alderaan, was the chief administrator of the Intergalactic Communications Center on Praesitlyn during the height of the Clone Wars. She had been in charge of the facility for seven years, and considered its staff to be her only family. In fact, they lovingly called her "Momma Momen." She had just five years left on her tour of duty at Praesitlyn before she could return home when the planet was blockaded and attacked by Separatist forces led by Pors Tonith. She had been in contact with General Khamar of the Grand Army of the Republic, who had laid out the defensive plans for protecting the communications center, but they were cut off when the Separatists began jamming all communications. Rather than panicking, Momen drew her support staff together and prepared to destroy the facility, should it fall into enemy hands. Her preparations were not enough, however, and they were quickly captured by Tonith's forces and held hostage. She hated the fact that Tonith was a Muun, since her own father had lost his farm because he couldn't make a loan payment after a series of bad harvests. Tonith took her as his primary hostage, and forced her to record a message to the Republic and its forces on Praesitlyn. Momen agreed, but rather than begging the Republic to abandon Praesitlyn so her staff would not be killed, she ordered the military to attack the Separatists. Her staff had agreed to do what was necessary to keep the center out of the Separatists' hands, and although Momen was beaten for her insolence, she remained strong. Her fortitude paid off for the Republic and her staff, especially when Anakin Skywalker launched a crazy mission to rescue them. Unfortunately, just after Anakin liberated them from the facility's command center, Reija was shot in the chest by a battle droid. The droid would have shot Anakin, as well, but its weapon locked up from poor maintenance. Anakin destroyed it, then used his anger at Reija's useless death to complete the mission. (JT)

Momma Reseros' Diner

this diner, known for its greasy but tasty food, was located in Jugsmuk Station, on the planet Gamorr. It was owned by Reseros Meh. (SWJ14)

Mompmash

this was a common male name among the Gamorrean people. Like most Gamorrean names, it was essentially gibberish that indicated what a Gamorrean would do if you made him angry. (GCG)

Momship

this is the name used by the Squibs to describe their reclamation ships. (SH)

Momu

this Yrashu trial was administered to any being which desired to become part of an individual tribe. The Momu activities went on "for as long as it took," since the Yrashu would not define the exact nature of the requirements for joining a given tribe. Once a being has completed the Momu, they are rewarded with a deep sense of comradeship with the Yrashu tribe, although they are forbidden to discuss the experience with anyone else. (SWJ2)

Momwar

Ladira indicated that this being would know the whereabouts of Centa Sonhan. (WOA5)

Mon Adapyne

this Mon Calamari cruiser was one of the new warships produced for the New Republic during the struggle against the Yuuzhan Vong. It was one of the first ships to carry a Jedi Knight as part of its crew. The Anx Jedi Madurrin served aboard the ship, participating in the Jedi Force-meld to help coordinate the ship's actions during battle. (DW)

Mon Cal Defenses

this Mon Calamari corporation produced a variety of weapons and defensive systems for use in the greater galaxy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GFT)

Mon Calamari

this being was one of the many Senators who signed the Petition of the Two Thousand, calling for the elimination of certain emergency powers that had been granted to Chancellor Palpatine during the Clone Wars. (IS3)

Mon Calamari

a bipedal, amphibious race, the Mon Calamari share the same homeworld as the Quarren. Many xenobiologists believe the Mon Calamari are descended from squid, but evolved a more humanoid appearance than the Quarren. The males have salmon-colored skin, lobed heads, and protruding eyes. The females are more streamlined, with olive-colored markings on their salmon skin. The Mon Cal, as they are often called, are shore-dwellers, land creatures who prefer to live near the water. Early Mon

Cal civilizations fed on the creatures they found in the shallows, and developed an advanced aquaculture system. When they discovered the Quarren - the other intelligent race on Calamari, who live in the ocean depths - the two races combined to create a symbiotic society in which both races flourished. Together, they built the huge floating cities that populated Calamari's oceans. Unlike the Quarren, the Mon Cal desired to travel to the stars, and began experimenting with space flight. Their first starships were quite successful, but their dreams of a peaceful life in space was cut short. As with most other alien races, the Mon Cal were simply exploring the galaxy when they were discovered by the Empire. They were quickly put on Palpatine's list of races to subjugate. However, the Mon Cal were one of the few races that put up a fight in the face of certain doom. The normally-peaceful Mon Cal learned quickly from the tactics of the Imperial invaders, and were able to drive them off. This solidified the Mon Cal psyche, and they decided to join the Alliance and overthrow Palpatine's New Order. After serving the Alliance at the Battle of Endor, the Mon Cal have continued to be persecuted by the remnants of the Empire. Calamari was the first place the reborn Palpatine took his World Devastators, and was later attacked by Admiral Daala, in an attempt to show her superiority. The Mon Cal, along with Quarren and the New Republic, have driven back all attempt to take the planet. (ROTJ, DE1, DA, SWSB, GG4, GOF8)

Mon Calamari

another name for the planet Calamari (JASB)

Mon Calamari Ballet

this was one of the most prestigious aquatic dance troupes of the last years of the Old Republic. Their production of Squid Lake was attended by Supreme Chancellor Palpatine himself, following the First Battle of Coruscant. (IS3)

Mon Calamari Blink Code

a series of flashes of light which, when combined in certain patterns, denotes letters of the Basic alphabet. They can then be strung together to form messages. It is regarded as a simple, crude form of cipher. (AC)

Mon Calamari Communications Control

this was the primary communication center created by the New Republic, recently renamed the Galactic Alliance, on the planet Calamari during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Calamari became the provisional capital of the galaxy after the fall of Coruscant, and much of the government's operations were re-established there. (FH3)

Mon Calamari Council

this body of Old Republic loyalists was installed as the leaders of the planet Calamari, during the height of the Clone Wars. With the defeat of the Quarren Isolation League, the planet Calamari found itself without a centralized government. Tensions continued to seethe, so the Mon Calamari Council was formed to help restore order. Representatives from the Quarren and Mon Calamari races served on the Council, hoping to show the planet's inhabitants that there would be no favoritism in the decisions of the Council. Note that Star Wars Insider, issue 73 indicates that the Mon Calamari Council had been in existence for decades before the Clone Wars, but was rife with corruption. During the early stages of the New Order, the Council approved a measure which opened up the planet to the rest of the galaxy. When the Empire tried to subjugate Calamari, the Council agreed to defend their homeworld with as much force as possible. This ultimately drove the Empire off Calamari, and the Council agreed to ally itself with the Alliance to Restore the Republic. (SWDB, SW173)

Mon Calamari Defense Force

formed in the aftermath of the Galactic Civil War, the Mon Calamari Defense Force was created to ensure homeworld security on the planet Calamari. Made up of equal numbers of Quarren and Mon Calamari, the Defense Force developed its own navy to help protect the planet from further Imperial aggression. (SWDB)

Mon Calamari Extreme

this was the Galactic Alliance's codename for a location just beyond the edges of the Calamari star system, to be used by incoming reconnaissance craft who were monitoring the advance of the Yuuzhan

Vong warfleet sent to destroy the Alliance's forces during the final stages of the alien invasion of the galaxy. (UF)

Mon Calamari Inglenook

located in an annex of the Imperial Palace on Coruscant, this building was designed to look and feel like a coral reef. An enclosed pool and clear-walled rooms help keep in humidity, making it the perfect place for Mon Calamari and other aquatic races to relax, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (CCW)

Mon Calamari Knights

this band of Mon Calamari was known as the sworn protectors of their homeworld for many generations, a fact which rankled many Quarren. During the earliest history of their civilization, the Mon Calamari Knights were the primary force which kept the Quarren insurrectionists at bay, thereby maintaining the uneasy truce between the two races. As the civil strife between Quarren and Mon Calamari diminished, so did the necessity for the Mon Calamari Knights, which had become simply a cultural tradition by the time of the Battle of Naboo. However, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars, the Mon Calamari Knights saw the possibility of war and began to train in earnest, fearing that the war might come to their world. These fears proved altogether too real when the Clone Wars broken out and the Quarren Isolation League sided with the Separatists. With the help of Jedi Master Kit Fisto, the Mon Calamari Knights managed to defeat the Quarren and restore peace to Calamari. (SWDB, CWC1)

Mon Calamari Light Cruiser

a smaller series of Mon Calamari starships that contain all the Mon Calamari grace and functionality. Most light cruisers measure 500 meters in lengths, but are similarly equipped with redundant systems. (TIE)

Mon Calamari Nerveshock

this disease affects the Mon Calamari species, and is always fatal. It can remain dormant for years, virtually undetectable, as the Mon Cal ages. When it finally becomes active, it is too late to save the victim. Rapid degeneration of the nervous system is the primary result of the virus, which eventually leaves the Mon Calamari unable to survive. For these reasons, all Mon Calamari children are immunized against it. (TTSB)

Mon Calamari Star Defender

the largest starship ever produced by the Mon Calamari, the Star Defender was created for use by the New Republic Navy some twenty years after the Battle of Endor. Nearly twice as long as a standard Mon Cal cruiser, the Star Defender was also the largest ship built for the New Republic fleet. (VP)

Mon Calamarian Jellyfish

this jellyfish was native to the planet Calamari. (FH1)

Mon Casima

this New Republic Mon Calamari cruiser was dispatched to assist the Allegiance in defending the world of Adumar from Imperial assault, shortly after the Adumari agreed to join the Republic. (SOA)

Mon Delindo

this Mon Calamari MC80 war cruiser was part of the fleet assigned to Han Solo and the Mon Remonda during the hunt for Warlord Zsinj. It was part of the group dispatched to Comkin Five, and was able to track the Iron Fist until it jumped into hyperspace as soon as the Reprisal was destroyed. (SOC)

Mon Duul

this immense creature was bio-engineered by the Yuuzhan Vong as a kind of organic speaker. Weighing more than four metric tons each, mon duuls were implanted with specialized villips which had been created to receive transmissions from a master villip. Them using immense tympanic membranes stretched over their bellies, the mon duuls would broadcast the communications from the villip. This allowed a single Yuuzhan Vong to address a huge gathering of his comrades. (DW)

Mon Eron

this planet was the fifth world in the Calamari System. During the final stages of the New Republic's conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong, Mon Eron served as the primary reversion point for warships returning to Calamari from battle arenas. (UF)

Mon Gazza

this world is known for its production of minerals and ores, as well as a healthy industry mining spice. During the last decades of the Old Republic, Mon Gazza was second only to Kessel in its annual production of spice. Although the planet had been overrun with gangsters and spice-pushers, Mon Gazza nonetheless boasted a healthy economy in an otherwise industrial wasteland. Podracing was introduced along the streets and mining roads as a way to entertain the workers, and grew into an industry all its own. Racers were forced to travel along mining roads, avoiding machinery before flying through abandoned mineshafts and around broken equipment. (RAC)

Mon Gazza Speedway

this was the name of the pro-circuit podrace course which wound through the mining districts of Mon Gazza. It had several optional branches that could be added or deleted to make the course harder or easier. (RAC)

Mon Julpa

the crown prince of Tammuz-an in the early days of the Empire, Julpa was a blue-skinned individual who was stripped of his mind and title by Zatec-Cha. Julpa was dropped on Tyne's Horky, and wandered the planet without any memory of his former self. He was known from then on as Kez-Iban, after he saved the life of Jann Tosh's uncle, Gundy. (DCAR, SWDB)

Mon Karren

this Mon Calamari MC80 cruiser was smaller than the Mon Remonda, but served as part of the fleet commanded by Han Solo and dispatched to hunt down Warlord Zsinj. (SOC)

Mon Mothma

this New Republic Star Destroyer was part of a fleet which was commandeered by Garm Bel Iblis to assist in the defense of the Jedi base on Eclipse, some two years after the Yuuzhan Vong began their invasion of the galaxy. The Mon Mothma accompanied the Elegos A'Kla to Talfaglio, against the wishes of the New Republic military, to ensure that the Jedi Knights escaped without mishap. It was later learned that Chief of State Borsk Fey'lya himself authorized the use of the Star Destroyers, legitimizing their appearance in rescuing the Jedi. Both ships were able to transport thousands of Talfaglio refugees away from the Yuuzhan Vong, in addition to defending Eclipse against discovery. The Mon Mothma was one of the first Star Destroyers equipped with a new form of gravity-well projector, but even that weaponry was no match for the sheer numbers of the Yuuzhan Vong. During the Second Battle of Coruscant, the Mon Mothma fought valiantly, but was unable to stem the tide of alien attackers. The Mon Mothma retreated to Borleias, and assisted in the retaking of the planet by Wedge Antilles and his Inner Circle. Once at Borleias, the Mon Mothma and her crew again fought well, driving back wave after wave of Yuuzhan Vong attackers until the Starlancer project could be launched. Then, the ship was hidden at the edge of the Pyria System during the evacuation of Borleias. When the battle had turned enough to allow escape, the Mon Mothma jumped back to Borleias and pounded the Yuuzhan Vong worldship until the refitted Lusankya could be brought to bear on the Yuuzhan Vong. Later, the Mon Mothma served as the flagship of General Wedge Antilles' fleet, which set out to pound the Yuuzhan Vong at Duro. Once again, the Mon Mothma took heavy damage, but it was all part of a plan which drew Yuuzhan Vong ships into the Duro System, where they could be trapped using gravity-well projectors. The plan nearly failed when Commander Yurf Col broke ranks, but the rest of the ships completed their mission. With the formulation of Operation Trinity, the Mon Mothma was repaired and sent back into action, this time at Bilbringi. With the loss of the Holonet, General Antilles' task force was cut off without reinforcements. She took a heavy pounding, and several other ships in the fleet were destroyed. In order to stay in the fight, Antilles ordered the ship's shielding to be diminished, making it appear as if the Mon Mothma's main reactors were about to explode. The ruse worked, as the Yuuzhan Vong pulled back to escape the ship's blast radius. The Mon Mothma then limped back to Mon Calamari for repairs. (SBS, EL1, EL2, FP, UF)

Mon Remonda

an MC80b Mon Calamari Star Cruiser delivered to the New Republic following the Battle of Endor. It was placed under the command of Han Solo, and was used to battle the warlord Zsinj. Solo and the ship's Captain, a Mon Calamari named Onoma, pursued Zsinj across the edges of the Warlord's holdings, hoping to catch him unaware. Instead, they often led be Zsinj to a world he wanted for himself, but didn't want to expend resources to take. When the Mon Remonda pummeled certain facilities, it left them vulnerable to Zsinj's takeover. It was later destroyed in battle with the World Devastator Silencer-7 when the reincarnated Emperor Palpatine started his campaign against the New Republic. All hands were lost, but not before the Mon Remonda took out an Imperial-class Star Destroyer. (CPL, DE1, EGV, IF)

Mon Tondievz City

this settlement, found on the planet Krann, is the corporate headquarters of Mon Tondievz, Limited. It is situated not far from the corporate nova crystal mines, and with striking distance of the Tagge camp on the planet. (TSK)

Mon Tondievz, Limited

this company is headquartered on the straneg planet of Krann, and was a staunch supporter of the New Republic. They are well-known for their ability to supply the Republic with precious nova crystals, gemstones which serve as the basis for much of the Republic's hard currency. (TSK)

Mon Torri

this snow-covered planet was located between Ord Mantell and Tatooine. It had seven distinct rings surrounding it, each ring a different color and physical composition. The planet itself was a mountainous world covered in snow and icy glaciers. (SL)

Mon Valle

a New Republic bulk cruiser modified for assault on the Blackmoon installation. It was destroyed in the assault. (XWN)

Mon, Sol

this huge, heavily-muscled man was a pirate who worked for Grappa the Hutt, during the early years of the New Republic. Mon dark skin and dreadlocks made him an unmistakable figure. Sol Mon and his forces were dispatched by Grappa to intercept Captain Forma and recover the cargo he carried. (CE2)

Monab

this name, which meant "hard-working", was common among Gungan males. (GCG)

Monad

this was the name given to a series of bottom-of-the-line surveillance drones manufactured by Carbanti United Electronics during the last decades of the Old Republic. These drones were little more than a camera unit and a microphone connected to a limited artificial-intelligence module. This allowed the monad to be placed in almost any location. (YDR)

Monad

this was the name given to any huge, self-contained living structure. Popularized on the cityworld of Coruscant, a monad contained all the essential entities of a full community, providing its inhabitants with a complete living experience. A being living in a monad had all the conveniences located within the monad, and never had to leave the building, if they so desired. Included within the building were hydroponics gardens and parks. (DMSH)

Monadin System

this largely uninhabited star system was located near Kuat, and served as one of the two main staging for cargo-bearing traffic which was inbound to the Kuat Freight Port. (PSPG)

Monarc C-4

this was the designation of a Class 1 Nubian hyperdrive system produced during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. It saw prominent use in the Naboo N-1 starfighter. (X1, NEGV)

Monarch

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was under the command of Captain Averon, and was part of the Empire's home fleet guarding Coruscant. When the New Republic tried to retake the world, the Monarch and the Triumph were the only two ships remaining to guard it. It was assumed that Ysanne Isard took the other Star Destroyers with her along with the Lusankya. (WG)

Monastery

Darth Vader once used the help of Tagge House to try and capture Luke Skywalker on this planet, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. The natives of the planet were all part of a huge religion known as the Order of the Sacred Circle, which referred to the great circle of life. The members of the Order believed that the rings which surrounded the planet were the embodiment of the circle of life. The rings of Monastery were not simply made up of dust and debris, but scores of moon-sized rocks. Vader had allied himself with Domina Tagge, who tried to pit Vader against Skywalker in an effort to eliminate the two individuals who had shamed her family. Unfortunately, the only death from their duel was that the Orman Tagge, Domina's older brother. (SWDB, HNN5, MC35, MC37)

Mondaran

a New Republic assault shuttle used in the attempt to take the planet Borleias, the Mondaran was the first ship shot down by Evir Derricote's defenses. (XWN)

Mondder

this city was the manufacturing center of the planet Etti IV, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

Mondegrene

this ancient, classical musical artist composed many pieces of orchestral grandeur. (POT)

Mondrak

this exotic-looking, humanoid alien was the Sith magician who served as the Gatekeeper to the Sith Holocron owned by Krova the Hutt. She claimed to be the "Judge of the Jedi," but was unable to break Krova's mind. (GMR5)

Mone

this Iskalonian male was the first to make contact with Lando Calrissian, when the Alliance dispatched the Millennium Falcon to locate Tay Vanis, shortly before the Battle of Endor. Like most Iskalonians, Mone was a cheerful individual who couldn't resist commenting on the frailties of living out of the water. His father Primor, the ruler of the Iskalonians, considered Mone to be an irresponsible pleasure-seeker. When Lando formed a mission to travel to Gamandar to locate Tay Vanis, Mone volunteered to accompany them. He believed that his knowledge of the planet would be beneficial, and his wife, Kendle, agreed. Unknown to them all, however, was that Kendle had already alerted Admiral Tower of their mission, so they were captured almost as quickly as they arrived on Gamandar. Thanks to the tireless and daring work of R2-D2, they managed to escape from Gamandar and return to Iskalon, only to find that the city of Pavillion, and a great many Iskalonians, had been destroyed by a tidal wave. Among the dead were his father, Primor, and his wife, Kendle. Mone took it upon himself to assume leadership of the Iskalonians, taking on the role of The First to Swim in an effort to bring them together to rebuild their lives. He also forbade the Alliance from returning to Iskalon, for fear of another Imperial reprisal, and shut Iskalon's doors to offworlders. (MC74, MC75, MC76, GMR1)

Money Lane

an unmarked area within the sights of a laser cannon which fighters often use to denote those kills which require more skill. Han Solo and Chewbacca had agreed upon the money lanes suited to the Millennium Falcon's quad-laser cannons, and often made bets on their shooting abilities, with double-scores for those kills in the money lane. The Millennium Falcon's money lane was the area of overlap around the edge of the ship's saucer, where both quad-laser cannons could fire. (HSR)

Moneylend

this was an unofficial name given to the planet Muunilinst. (SOP, SWMW)

Monga

this serpent was easily distinguished by its three forked, orange tongues. (BF6)

Mongei Shai

this ancestor of Shedao Shai was one of the first Yuuzhan Vong warriors to visit the known galaxy, some fifty years before the start of their invasion along Vector Prime. He was killed on Bimmieel by a pack of slashrats, and his remains were mummified in a cave until their discovery by Doctor Anki Pace. Shedao Shai himself returned with the second wave of Yuuzhan Vong invaders, but was defeated at Dantooine before he could reach Bimmieel. He later traveled to Bimmieel, but was unable to locate Mongei Shai's remains, primarily because the magnetic field of Bimmieel had shifted, altering the coordinates at which his remains lay in wait. (DTO)

Mongo Beefhead

an unusual humanoid with red skin and a flat, tentacled head. (ECAR)

Mongworst

this deadly insect was native to Geonosis. The Geonosians bred a mutated form of mongworst for use in their combat arenas. (IWE2)

Monimi, Elza

this man was a slave, living in Mos Espa on Tatooine some two years before the Battle of Naboo. He was captured in a slave raid by Krayn, and never seen again. (JQ)

Monitor

this Nebulon-B frigate was the lead ship in an Imperial resupply convoy bound for the Imperial-II class Star Destroyer Corrupter, when the convoy was ambushed by the Alliance. All supplies were stolen, as the Alliance tried to force the Corrupter out of battle by starving it of supplies. (XWA)

Monitor

this New Republic training carrier was the test facility for the K-Wing bomber. (BTS)

Monitor III

this Republic Cruiser was dispatched by the Old Republic to put an end to the Iridium Pirate band which raided Republic grain and supply convoys near the planet Vuchelle, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. The task force was led by the Jedi Knights Belsed-Qan Idan and Kit Fisto, and the Monitor III carried with it a small fleet of starfighters. The Iridium Pirates wielded a power gem, using its power to cause heavy damage to the Monitor III and her crew. Four Republic judiciaries and two Jedi Knights, Dovish Hokken and Yrada Soludisan, were killed in the explosions. The Jedi starfighter pilots, flying in Aethersprite-class fighters, managed to overwhelm the Iridium Pirates before the Monitor III had to be abandoned. (HNN4)

Monjai

this female Elomin served as the planetary governor of Kal'Shebbol, in the wake of the departure of Imperial Moff Kentor Sarne, some four years after the Battle of Endor. (DARK)

Monk's Well

this was one of many deep-desert locations found on the planet Tatooine. Its location was kept a secret by the residents of Mos Espa. (TG)

Monlo

this man was, at one time, the Archduke of the Dentamma Nebula. He was infamous for losing the rights to the Unnibar System in a sabacc match with the Teltior conman Ceezva. (AE)

Mon-mawl rrish hu camasami!

this was a Yuuzhan Vong used to indicate an individual's displeasure with another. In essence, it meant that the speaker wanted to be left alone. (FH2)

Monnda Tebbo

this Duro once served as the navigator for the spice smuggling ship Ill Wind. While aboard the ship, he learned everything he could about smuggling from a Corellian navigator named Sumok. Sumok also gave Tebbo information on how to reach the Alliance, should he ever need help. Shortly afterward, the Ill Wind was caught by an Imperial fleet near Uogo'Cor and damaged. Sumok died in the battle, and the ship lost all power. Tebbo's quick thinking allowed him to obtain some measure of control of the tumbling ship, and he managed to use the shields as brakes to get the ship on the ground. After landing, the crew had to hide from Imperial patrols for four days before being rescued by the Alliance. Tebbo and the entire crew joined the Alliance, and Tebbo was assigned navigational duties aboard the Flurry. His skills with the Quasar Fire-class ship made an a valuable advisor, and he was dispatched to the Virgillian System to help the newly-formed Virgillian Free Alignment learn how to fly them. Unfortunately for the Alliance, Tebbo was killed when the Flurry was destroyed at the Battle of Bakura. (TBSB)

Monnok

this Soccorran predator is known for its ability to maintain the hunt over the planet's ash-covered deserts. Many Soccorran hunters admire and respect the monnok's abilities, and Soccorran smugglers consider it good luck to see a monnok before beginning a voyage. The monnok is a tall, semi-sentient humanods with yellowish skin, and they have developed a rudimentary use of tools. Chewbacca had a holographic monnok on his holochess board aboard the Millennium Falcon. (CCG2, BSS)

Monnon, Kem

this Major in the Alliance was in charge of the Corps of Engineers. He held the responsibility of establishing Echo Base on Hoth in the years following the Battle of Yavin. (ISU)

Monoc

a derogatory term used to describe the Abyssin race. (CCG)

Mono-cord Whip

this vicious weapon is created from unbreakable, serrated fiber straps. These whips are capable of cutting through some plastics, let alone fabric and flesh. They were used on many backwater worlds by the law enforcement agencies, to keep rabble-rousers in line. (SWJ9)

Monocrystal Chaining

this is a structural technique that uses a single, precision engineered element to form a panel or beam. The resulting wall or support is quite strong, but thin enough to conduct sounds from adjoining rooms. Monocrystal-chained walls are used primarily in casinos. (MA)

Monofilament Screen Guard

manufactured by Novaplex, this device was used to protect an entrance or walkway from unwanted intrusion. Once activated, the screen guard extended a series of needle-sharp monofilament strands vertically upward for two meters. These strands had a high tensile strength, and literally shredded clothing and flesh which passed through them. The use of these screen guards was outlawed in many star systems, because they were extremely dangerous. (GFT)

Monomolecular Blade

this form of knife is formed from a length of high-strength, single-inline-molecule material. They are incredibly sharp, but also incredibly fragile. (TFE)

Monor

this was the innermost planet in the Monor System, located in Doldur Sector. (SWJ6)

Monor II

this Outer Rim world is located in the Monor System, which is part of the Doldur Sector. It is the homeworld of the Sunesu race, which have evolved with the ability to breathe Monor's otherwise deadly atmosphere. From space, Monor II appears to be a huge pearl with a changing nacreous coating. The pearlescence is due to the thick layer of cirrifog that fills the atmosphere. Cirrifog is toxic to most humanoids. The planet was originally discovered by Eujustus Kline, who was an explorer working for the Solgg Chemical Company. Thus, the planet is often referred to as Kline Colony. The average day on the planet lasts 28 standard hours, and its year lasts 378 local days. Nom Anor later revealed that he had infected Mara Jade Skywalker with coomb spores on this planet, during the ascension of Agapos the Tenth. (SWJ10, BP)

Monotheer, Edallia

this woman was Gara Petothel's mother. She was born on Coruscant, and trained to be an actress. She caught the eye of Armand Isard, who trained her to be an Intelligence agent. She eventually married Dalls Petothel, but both of them were arrested for supposedly funneling secret Imperial information to rebel forces on the planet Chandrila. New Republic analysis of her files indicated she had never had any contact with the Alliance. An old man mistakenly thought Lara Notsil was Edallia, during a Wraith Squadron visit to the Galactic Museum, which tipped off Garik Loran to Lara's true identity. The old man had been one of Edallia's former teachers. (SOC)

Monra

this was the Snivvian word for "sculpture." (HNN5)

Monsail

an alien creature native to the planet Trinta, the monsail was a predatory fish with a horizontally flattened body, a large dorsal fin, and a narrow tail. They are often seen hunting alone, but sometimes hunted in small groups. The flesh of a monsail is edible. They are named for their large dorsal fin, which often breaks the surface of the water before the fish attacks its prey. (DOE)

Monsoon Mesa

this tableland, located on the planet Jabiiim, was the rallying point for the Army of the Republic's forces, during the Battle of Jabiiim. The battle, one of the longest engagements of the Clone Wars, dragged on for more than forty days before the Separatist forces led by Alto Stratus managed to defeat much of the Republic's forces. The Republic planned to retreat to Monsoon Mesa and await a rescue operation from Coruscant, a retreat which was led by Anakin Skywalker. (RBJ)

Monsua Nebula

this area of interstellar gases was located in the Modell Sector of the galaxy, on the border between the Inner Zuma region and Wild Space. In addition to dense gases and clouds of dust and debris, the Monsua Nebula was filled with young blue giant stars and brown dwarfs. Because the nebula emitted large amounts of radiation and was difficult to navigate, much of it remained unexplored even during the early years of the New Republic. Many of the stars located within it remained designated by the alphanumeric identifiers used by the Old Republic, more than a thousand years earlier. The Monsua Nebula was infamously known for the amount of pirate activity which occurred in its vicinity, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (GMR9, HNN4)

Monsula Mora

this was a noted Twi'lek individual. (UANT)

Monsurra

this Wookiee artisan was the tailor of the Myyydril tribe, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. He was afflicted by the Poltur Virus shortly after helping Yraka Nes discovered that a blanket made from webweaver webs was an effective way to combat the virus. (SWGAL)

Montacca

this likable Wookiee is an ex-mercenary with an unusually strong fascination with technology, even for a Wookiee. He was a free Wookiee who roamed the galaxy during the reign of Emperor Palpatine, although he avoided Imperial forces whenever possible. He was a passenger on the Kuari Princess when it was hijacked by the Riders of the Maelstrom. (RM)

Montagne, Elise

this woman and her husband lived on the planet Dantooine some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. When her husband died, Elise was left with his droid, C8-42. She latched onto the droid with great emotion, since the droid represented all that she had left of her husband. C8-42, however, believed that the attachment was doing emotional harm to Elise, and tried to run away. At the Jedi enclave, C8-42 begged to be destroyed, so that Elise could be freed. When she arrived at the enclave, Elise was distraught to learn that C8-42 had been dismantled. She ran into the enclave in tears, where she met Samnt. They formed an immediate bond, and Elise left the enclave with him. (KOTOR)

Montalvo, Dama

this young man was a Padawan learner, training to be a Jedi Knight during the early years of the Clone Wars under the tutelage of Master Vookto. (OWS)

Montellian Serat

an ancient Devaronian city dating back before the Devaronians had space travel. After the birth of the Empire, the Devaronian supporters of the Alliance used it as a stronghold, until they were routed by the Devaronian Army. The army was under the control of Kardue'sai'Malloc, and he gave the order to execute over 700 Devaronians after cornering them in the city. This act earned him the nickname "The Butcher of Montellian Serat." (TME)

Month of Plenty

this Weequay holy season honored the moon god Quay. Temples on the planet Sriluur which were dedicated to Quay had an open skylight in their roof which allowed Weequay priests to track the moon's progress during this month. (SSR)

Monthrael

this was the Sakiyan term for one's personal honor. It was complimented by one's yithrael, or pride honor. (MBS)

Monticano

this was one of the early rulers of the planet Naboo. (GMR2)

Montis, Derrend

this man was a noted Corellian explorer who traveled the galaxy during the last decades of the Old Republic. Much of this work was done aboard the freighter Shadowfire. (TF)

Montitia

this planet was evacuated by the Jedi Knights, several years before the onset of the Clone Wars, in what became known as the Montitian Extraction. (GMR8)

Montitian

this race was native to the planet Montitia. (GMR8)

Montitian Extraction

this was the name given to the evacuation of the natives of Montitia, during the final stages of the Extorin Minor Skirmishes. Thanks to the efforts of the Jedi Knight Charza Kwinn, the Montitians were evacuated before the Extorin warriors could capture or kill them. (GMR8)

Mont'Kar'oh

this famous Duinuogwuin scientist's writings have been preserved in the archives on the planet Charubah. (EGV)

Montral

this was the term used by the Togruta people to describe the two cone-like horns which sprouted from the tops of their heads. Each montral was hollow, allowing the Togruta to sense ultrasonic changes in their environment. (VD2)

Montrol City

this urban area was the capital of the planet Gandle Ott. (DARK)

Montrosa Islands

this long chain of islands was found in the midst of the Montrosa Ocean, on the planet Reytha. These small islands were the only land formations which were not given over to farming and agriculture, being too small and too remote for major development. (GB)

Montrosa Ocean

this was the largest ocean found on the planet Reytha. It was so vast that much of the planet's climate was affected by its pleasant temperature. (GB)

Montross

this bounty hunter, active during the last decades of the Old Republic, was known as a cunning adversary who would stop at nothing to achieve his goals. Whereas most criminals would reconsider the "I'm worth more to you alive" plea of their captives, Montross would shoot the being and reply "You're worth enough dead." He was a former member of the Mandalorian Shocktroopers, and was one of the few to survive the coup d'etat of Vizsla and the Death Watch on Concord Dawn. However, Montross feared that Jaster Mereel's leadership of the Mandalorians had become clouded by emotion, especially in what Montross saw as a fatherly love for Jango. Montross' beliefs were further supported when Jaster Mereel ordered a retreat during a mission to Korda 6, when it was obvious that the Mandalorian forces had been ambushed. Montross felt that they could have taken the Death Watch, and blamed Jaster for the destruction of their forces on Korda 6. Montross and Jaster were then confronted by Vizsla, who accused Jaster of "taking" the Mandalorians from him. Rather than helping Jaster, Montross simply fled the scene, allowing Vizsla to shoot and kill Mereel. He then gathered the remaining Mandalorians and prepared to leave the planet. He believed Jango Fett to be dead, but Jango showed up with Jaster's dead body. When Montross demanded that he be given command of the Mandalorians, Jango and many other soldiers refused to allow it. By Mandalorian laws, their leader should be elected, not self-appointed. Montross fled Korda 6 when none of the survivors would support his bid for power. Montross was defeated in combat by Jango Fett, shortly before the Clone Wars, when both bounty hunters were offered the chance to locate Komari Vosa by Darth Tyrannus. For most of the hunt, Montross was actually ahead of Jango, and beat him to Groff Haug and Sebolto's death stick factory on Malastare. Montross nearly eliminated Jango on Malastare, but Jango managed to destroy Montross' skiff and strand him on the planet. (ZW, GMR10, JFOS, BH)

Montwin

this was the name of a street, found in the city of Tacto, on the planet Radnor. (JQ1)

Monument

this huge Corellian barge was part of a fleet which transported workers to and from the planet Bandomeer. Scarred from years of usage, the ship nonetheless continued to make regular runs to the planet. It was aboard the Monument that Obi-Wan Kenobi and Si Treemba discovered early signs of Offworld Mining Company's sabotage against Arcona Mineral Harvest Corporation. The ship was then attacked by pirates and torn apart in the fighting. (RF)

Monument Park

this protected mall, located in Imperial City on Coruscant, was one of the few places that someone could actually touch the naked earth on the planet. A small religious group made its home in the park, keeping visitors from chipping away small souvenirs of Coruscant. The park was located within the Manarai Mountains, and the rocky outcropping was believed to have been the peak of the mountain known as Umate. (ISU, HNN5, CCW)

Monument Plaza

Monumenters

this group of small-tiem criminals was active on the planet Corellia during the height of the New Order. (GQRG)

Monzu

native to the planet Zolan, this spotted predator could change the color of the skin on its back. When required, the monzu could flash a pattern of rainbow lights on its back, momentarily amazing a potential attacker or prey. (GMR10)

Moobian Torsion Valve

a piece of outdated technology. (???)

Moocha

this was the Huttese verb for "to steal." (GMR5)

Moocher

this race of small, sentient creatures inhabited the spaceport cities of the planet Abregado-Rae. Resembling large, fur-covered lizards, they roamed the spaceports looking for handouts from visitors to the planet. Many beings on the planet considered the Moochers to be nuisances, primarily because there were so many of them. Moochers lived in dens of several thousand individuals, all birthed by the same queen. This queen was incredibly intelligent, much smarter than any of her offspring. Those Moochers who disappointed the queen were expelled, and often formed their own dens. It was these wild Moochers who were most often encountered near the spaceports. (EGP, CCW)

Mood and Moons

this musical number was played by Umjing Baab and his Swinging Trio aboard the Queen of Empire when Bria Tharen posed as Bria Lavval in order to return to Nar Shaddaa. (RD)

Mood Synthesizer

this musical instrument is often found in jazz bands. (TCC)

Mood-color Fabric

this unusual fabric was used to make shirts and vests, and changed color according to the wearer's mood. (TG)

Mood-vase

this crystalline vessel contains swirling colors that are rumored to describe the mood of the individual who touches it. (RM)

Moof

this Ewok was a noted trader and salesbeing, living on the Forest Moon of Endor during the years leading up to the Battle of Endor. (ECAR)

Moojpuck

this was an Ansionian swear word, often used by the Gwurran. (APS)

Mook

this plant produced a sweet fruit. The tauntaun handlers at the Alliance's Echo Base discovered that tauntauns liked the taste of mook fruit, and used it as a reward during training. (EGA)

Mooka

a small creature that is covered with fur and feathers, it is the size of a small dog. It has a bird's beak, four ears, clawed feet, and a feathered tail. (LCJ)

Mookiee

Moolis

this Ithorian surname was believed to mean "administrator", according to historian who studied the Ithorian race. (GCG)

Mooloolian

a race of beings native to the mountain regions of the planet Janguine. They absorbed the jungle barbarians of the planet into their society some 300 years before the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (VP)

Moon Dash

Narek-Ag's transport shuttle, it exploded over Coruscant when it impacted the cloaked bulk of the Shadow Academy. The Academy was in position near Coruscant in an attempt to ambush incoming Republic supply ships, like the Adamant. (LO)

Moon Festival

this gala was celebrated every 100 years on the planet Omman. (SWJ12)

Moon Lady

the name used by the Askajians to describe Askaj's primary moon. The Askajians hold the satellite in reverence. (TJP)

Moon Moth

a common flying insect with beautiful pale blue wings, the moon moth was a delicate creature about the size of a human thumbnail. (DS, MBS)

Moon Moth

this was a series of espionage droid designed by Arakyd Industries, and manufactured on Mechis III during the early years of the New Republic. Employing many of the technological and miniaturization advances of the Scarab Droid, the Moon Moth was almost indistinguishable from an organic moon moth. However, to a keen observer, the droid version had wings made of finely-machined metals painted to resemble a true moth. The abdomen of the droid was packed with enough explosives to destroy the Moon Moth, in case it was captured. This was a very small amount, though, since the Moon Moth was also very lightweight. It could mimic the flight patterns of an organic moth, and would land on its target and place a microdot homing beacon on it. (EGD)

Moonbeam Throne

this was the name of the ceremonial throne used by Supreme Overlord Shimrra of the Yuuzhan Vong. Located within the immense craft known as the Citadel, the Moonbeam Throne was surrounded by a blood moat, and had an unusual dovin basal installed at its base. This dovin basal acted according to the will of Shimrra, allowing the Supreme Overlord to appear to control the actions of any individual who requested an audience. (UF)

Moondrake

this old YT-1300 was owned and operated by Sassan Sareeta. Built from the parts of three separate YT-1300 hulks, it was distinguished by the lack of a starboard cargo mandible, which had been replaced by a huge double laser cannon. Also notable to this ship, the cockpit is mounted in between the port mandible and the laser cannon. (SWJ8)

Moonface

this was the monicker given to one of Ludlo Lebauer's Jenet henchmen by Leia Organa Solo, during her visit to Pavo Prime to recover ten Alderaanian boasas from the casino administrator. The name referred to the shape of the Jenet's face. (SWI67)

Moonflower Nebula

located in the Outer Rim Territories, this nebula can be found just past the K-749 System. This nebula was of little interest until Nichos Marr generated its coordinates when he tried to access the Force with his artificial brain. Luke Skywalker took the random numbers and determined their exactness, and took the Huntbird to investigate the Nebula. (COJ)

Moonglow

this pear-like fruit comes from a single grove of trees in a certain forest on a small satellite world. It is a rare and exotic fruit, although it is more like a fungus. Its crisp, delicious flesh, however, is extremely poisonous in its raw form. A single slice contains enough poison to kill 1,000 beings within a minute, and there is no known antidote. There is a unique, ninety-seven step method of preparing the moonglow which removes the poison and makes it edible. A chef must spend at least two years learning the technique from a Master Chef before they can obtain a license to prepare it themselves. Restaurants which choose to serve moonglow must display their own license, which indicates to patrons that the chefs who work there have been trained in the preparation. All of this licensing and training is necessary because, if one step is omitted or performed in error, the entire process is forfeit, and the moonglow retains its toxicity. (SE)

Moonglow

this was the name of Lorcu Malshae's light freighter. It was destroyed by a bomb, after it was learned that Lorcu had planned to seel the coordinates of the Port Haven to Boba Fett. (PSPG)

Moonlight Cruise

this Mobquet Medium Cargo Hauler was once a legitimate transport ship, owned and operated by the Skydove Freight corporation, until Mika the Hutt had the ship refitted and renamed the Barabi Run. (TF)

Moonlight Crystal Lodge

this expensive vacation spot was located near the polar ice cap found on the planet Coruscant. It provided vacationers with access to a number of traditionally winter sports and activities, but they were available year-round. (CCW)

Moonrunner, Artis

this woman was Lorn Moonrunner's wife, and Denel's mother. Like Lorn, she had her appearance altered when they fled from the Empire and settled on Rhamalai. She was terrified that, when the Empire subjugated the planet, they would be discovered. However, the family was able to make it to their hidden starship, the Refugee, and escape. (SWJ13)

Moonrunner, Denel

the son of Lorn Moonrunner, Denel grew up on Rhamalai on the outskirts of Argona. He was a fair pilot, having been trained by his father at the controls of their starship, the Refugee. When the Empire subjugated the planet, Denel was conscripted into the service of the Civilian Service Personnel. He was soon rescued by Nadra Enasteri and her mother, Charis, but they became separated before they could reach the Moonrunner residence. Denel and his family managed to escape in the Refugee, but the Enasteri's were stranded on Rhamalai. (SWJ13)

Moonrunner, Lorn

this man was Denel Moonrunner's father, and was the head of the Fair Value Control Department of Rhamalai's Planetary Trade Directorate at the time of the Battle of Yavin. However, Moonrunner was not his true name. In reality, he was Corvus Langlier. Lorn was a fugitive from Imperial justice, who had his appearance altered and a false identity developed so that he could hide. He and his wife, Artis, settled on the planet Rhamalai and lived in peace with the Cherishites there, believing that the planet was far enough removed from the rest of the galaxy so as to avoid imperial notice. They hid their ship, the Refugee, in a remote valley, hoping against hope that they would never have to use it again. When the Empire finally subjugated Rhamalai, Lorn and Artis relied on their facial surgeries to keep them from being captured. However, their son, Denel, was conscripted into the Imperial armed forces before they could act. After Denel was rescued by Nadra Enasteri, the Moonrunners fled to the Refugee and managed to escape the planet. (SWJ13)

Moor, Basal

this Alliance agent was rescued from capture by TransGalMeg forces during the Alliance's attempt to infiltrate TGM's corporate headquarters on Pako Ramoon. (CRO)

Moor, Kasan

this woman was one of the best starfighter pilots the Empire recruited from the planet Alderaan. She was tops in her class, and moved quickly up the Imperial ranks until she was given the command of the 128th TIE Interceptor Squadron shortly before the Battle of Hoth. However, by this time, Kasan had begun questioning her loyalties. The destruction of Alderaan by the first Death Star was an emotional blow, for Kasan dearly loved her family and friends who died in the cataclysm. She felt that she could no longer serve a government that would wantonly destroy people for its own ambitions. When the 128th was sent to intercept Rogue Squadron on the planet Gerrard V, Kasan offered herself and her ship as a defector, and joined the Alliance. (RSG)

Mooren

this man was one of the Ministers who formed the government of the planet Danoor, shortly after the Battle of Endor. He was a contemporary of Waric Nane. Like his fellow Ministers, Mooren believed that the Lance of Endor was, in truth, a New Republic ship sent to maraud the Kathol Outback. After hearing from Kaiya Adrimetrum and the crew of the FarStar, though, he began to see the truth. Unknown to Nane, Mooren was also a member of the resistance on Danoor, which rose up in opposition to the initial efforts of the Empire to take control of Kathol Sector. Mooren believed that he could gain the assistance of the FarStar's crew if he could convince them of the resistance's need. (KO)

Moori

the Alliance modified CR90 corvette group which attempted to knock out the NL-1 outpost in the Pakuuni System. (TIE)

Moorin

an intelligent but vicious alien race. (TME)

Moorja

this small Inner Rim world was governed by Salliche Ag, and was used to mining and agriculture. As long as the colonies on the world paid their taxes and sent all its production Coreward, Salliche left it alone. The population cared little for the galaxy outside it, and continued its production of ores and foodstuffs without much change for many years. During the height of the Clone Wars, Moorja was one of the first planets liberated by the Separatists during Operation Durge's Lance. It was later one of the first Separatist worlds to be defended by organic troops, a necessity given that Moorja's ion storms wreaked havoc with the droid control systems used on other worlds. Among the forces deployed to Moorja were the Neimoidian Gunnery Battalions, Gossam Commandos, and the Koorivar Fusiliers. Production of foodstuffs continued during the Galactic Civil War and following the Battle of Endor. A small population of Arcona mined salt on Moorja, and an Ithorian contingent harvested specialty fruits and low-yield forest crops. The average day on this temperate world lasts 17 standard hours, and its year lasts 310 local days. (SWJ8, SWI76)

Moorjay

this is the capital city, and site of the primary spaceport, of the planet Moorja. (SWJ8)

Moorlu

the bounty hunter ambushed Boba Fett in a remote system during the hunt for Bornan Thul. He kept his pin-wheel-shaped starship hidden until Fett arrived, then attacked. Using a blast from his ion cannon, Moorlu disabled Slave IV and thought he had the infamous hunter dead in space. However, Fett activated a pneumatic launcher and shot a warhead at Moorlu's ship. The craft was destroyed, and Moorlu was killed in the explosion. (SHA)

Moorsh

this Yuuzhan Vong priest was stationed aboard the Creche during the attack on Gyndine and the development of a new yammusk. While on the Creche, Moorsh spent a great deal of time observing the Ryn who were enslaved to help mature the yammusk, hoping to glean information on how the Ryn divined the future with sabacc cards and other simple tools. (JE)

Moorsh Moraine

this icy plateau was located on the planet Hoth, just east of the Kerane Valley. It was here that Imperial dropships placed the troopers and hardware of Blizzard Force, during the hours leading up to the Battle of Hoth. (IWS) this was the name of one of the pilots in the Hawk-bat pirate fleet, the alias of Voort saBinring. The pirate alias was used only once, during the Hawk-bats' participation in Warlord Zsinj's attempt to steal the Razor's Kiss from Kuat Drive Yards. If and when Voort used it, it was a signal to Garik Loran and the rest of Wraith Squadron that he had "crashed" onto the surface of the Iron Fist. To anyone listening in, Moort was dead. Voort, however, used a landing claw to lock onto the huge ship's armor plating and ride with it to wherever it fled to, after the New Republic intercepted Zsinj at Kuat. After Zsinj's short jump, with the Razor's Kiss slaved to the Iron Fist, the New Republic again pounded Zsinj's forces, destroying the Razor's Kiss and nearly taking the Iron Fist. (IF) this member of the Exalted Torcaine was part of its constabulary force. He was not as proficient in capturing smugglers as Vor Childermoss, often giving offenders nothing more than a scare. (CSWDW)

Moort

Moosea, Disk

Moot

this yearly gathering on the planet Yelsain is held in a huge open field near Tradetown. Merchants from across the Minos Cluster are invited to come to Yelsain and trade their wares. Business the primary reason for the Moot, but drinking and gambling are the primary activity. Almost half of Yelsain's population attends the annual Moot, making it an event of sometimes epic proportions. (GG6)

Mora

a supporter of the Alliance who was captured by the Empire, she was rescued by Ranulf. Mora was the adopted daughter of the H'drachi seer Ch'no, much to the chagrin of the other H'drachi. It was later revealed that Mora was the lost heir to the ruling house of M'haeli. She and Ch'no had the unique ability to disrupt a time-stream, which also made their passage obvious among other H'drachi. (ROC)

Morado

a planet. (TFNR)

Morag

a powerful Tulgah which who lived on the forest moon of Endor, Morag's evil magic was a potent match for Logray's good magic. She lived in Mount Thunderstone, and her castle was patrolled by Yuzzums which ride rakazzaks. She once possessed the Shadowstone, and hoped to control the Ewoks with it. However, the shaman Logray managed to steal the Shadowstone and combines its power with that of the Sunstar. Logray defeated Morag in combat, and took possession of both stones. Morag vowed to exact revenge on Logray and the Ewoks, and retreated to her lair to plan her revenge. Some time before the Battle of Endor, Morag tried to enslave the Firefolk, but only managed to capture Queen Izrina. Morag hoped to use the Firefolk to set fire to the Soul Trees of the Ewoks, thereby conquering the Ewoks and eliminating the threat of Logray's magic. However, all her plans were thwarted by the efforts of Wicket, Teebo, and Paploo, who obtained Logray's magic foam and doused the Soul Trees before they could burn. Morag was defeated, and fled into the forest. (ECAR)

Mora'ga

Morath Nebula

a galactic region located in the Rim, it was largely unexplored by New Republic standards. (BTS)

Moratrigh

this is one of the four moons of the planet Zelos II. Zelosian superstitions about the night keep these satellites unexplored. (PG2)

Morcanth

this planet was unknown to most of the galaxy, and never made it into any astrogation charts. Located in the Unknown Regions, it was the site of a prison for Jedi Knights which had been set up by a former student of the Force, Winslau Da'k. The prison complex was infiltrated by New Republic agents who hoped to restore the Jedi to the galaxy. The planet was also in the midst of three warring star system, and Winslau had become wealthy playing all sides of the war. The war around Morcanth had been waged for centuries prior to the Galactic Civil War, and as technology increased, so did the slaughter. (GMS)

Morcur Valley

located on the planet Garos IV, the Morcur Valley was first settled by Garosians. It grew to become the planet's primary agricultural and manufacturing site. It was here that the emigrating Sundars also settled, bringing in more factories and competition and earning the resentment of their fellow Garosians. (SWJ2)

Mordageen

this humanoid race, similar in stature to most human races, was distinguished by its reddish-organe skin. This skin was wrinkled, giving individuals the appearance of advanced age. The face of a Mordageen was dominated by a flat nose, and their skulls were crowned with yellow hair and pointed ears. (BH)

Mordi, Krdys

one of Sedriss' sergeant-at-arms aboard the Avenger during the early stages of Operation Shadow Hand. He was also one of Emperor Palpatine's Dark Jedi, and was sent to New Alderaan to kill Luke Skywalker. In the attack, Mordi was slain by Jem Ysanna's lightsaber. (DE2)

Mordon

the Imperial Admiral overseeing the invasion of the Taroan System on the flagship Vengeance. Following the successful mission to Taroan, Mordon was shuttling up from the surface of Farboon when a group of Alliance starfighters intercepted the shuttle. A distress signal was sent out, but the only person who heard it was Maarek Stele, who was flying a newly-repaired TIE Interceptor. Stele did his best to drive off the Alliance ships, not realizing that he was rescuing his Admiral. Upon returning to the Vengeance, Mordon met with Stele and suggested that he join the Imperial Navy as a pilot. (TIE)

Mordran

this vicious warrior served Borvo the Hutt as a champion gladiator, during the height of the New Order. Borvo often dispatched Mordran to deal with those merchants and traders, especially those of the Gungan race, who refused to pay their protection money to the Hutt. (SWGAL)

Mordur

this Imperial Admiral was in charge of the siege of Vandelhelm, and controlled the planet from a command barge that stayed in orbit around the planet. He did this to avoid the notice of the New Republic, but it required a heavy bribe to be paid to Orrk in order to maintain its secrecy. He tried to steal the metals promised to the New Republic by Orrk, but was defeated in a space battle with Han Solo and Nien Nunb. (VM, EGC, MC98)

Moree Yad

this female Gran and her sister, Sarhah, were noted smugglers who worked from a base on the planet Malastare during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. (BH)

this planet was the homeworld of the Morellian race, and was located within the Morellian Commonwealth. (AIR)

Morellian

this was a race of near-humans native to the planet Morellia. Despite the fact that Morellians were known to be extremely long-lived, by the Battle of Yavin it was believed that only one true Morellian - Barosa Warren - remained of the entire race. (AIR)

Morellian Commonwealth

this remote area of the galaxy was beyond the furthest reaches of the Old Republic. (AIR)

Morellian Enforcer

this was the name given to those Morellians who were the elite soldiers and protectors of the Morellian Commonwealth. (AIR)

Morellian Weapons Conglomerate

this low-tech weapons manufacturer produced armament for the Morellian Enforcers during the Old Republic. As Morellian technology was far behind that of the modern galaxy, MWC produced a variety of slugthrowers and projectile pistols and rifles. (AIR)

Morely

this well-muscled man served the Empire as an officer, serving under Commander Shad during the years following the Battle of Yavin. (T15)

Moren

this was one of the many mining settlements, or o'bekis, established on Goroth Prime. It was close enough to the planet's equator to suffer from electromagnetic discharges from the planet's debris ring. (GSE)

Moren Chonk

an overweight Quarren, whose officious and pompous attitude hides his incompetence. He was most successful running Morjanssik's sanitation bureau, and relied heavily on Kelmur Wolg to help him run Morjanssik as its Chief Manager. He was murdered by the Imperial agents under Generet, in an effort to frame the Alliance and turn the Quarren solidly in favor of the Empire. (DU)

Mores

this gas giant was the sixth planet of the Metellos System. It was orbited by seventeen moons. (CCW)

Morett, Firin

this Alliance engineer was responsible for maintaining the starships of Red and Gold Squadrons at the Massasssi Base on Yavin 4, prior to the Battle of Yavin. He had final launch approval for all starfighters garrisoned on Yavin 4. (CCG9)

Morg Nar

this Houk enforcer worked for Wonn Ionstrike on Cloud City. (GG12)

Morganian

this slender, humanoid race is characterized by their fair, white skin and wide, almond-shaped eyes. (GCQ)

Morgannier

this freighter was owned by SoroSuub Corporation, but was stolen from a dock on Ord Mantell by Kn'ik Th'ronik. (ND)

Morgath

an Alliance container transport group that was part of a convoy trying to supply Admiral Harkov's defecting fleet. The convoy, and the Karflo group, were destroyed in an Imperial ambush. (TIE)

Morgath Industries

this combine controls several food processing and genetic food additives producers. It was one of the non-voting Contributing Sponsors of the Corporate Sector Authority. (CSA)

Morgavi, Luke

Han Solo used this alias when he returned to Jubilar, some 30 years after he survived the All-Human Free-for-All there. (TBH)

Morgo

a young boy on Kalarba, he is assisted by Q-E and 2-E in finding his way home one day, just before the two E-series droids exposed Vuldo's secret blaster plans. (DRO)

Morgot

this Skrilling was living on Ord Mantell during the years following the Battle of Naboo. He was a friend of Quinlan Vos, and served as a ready source of information for the Jedi. Morgot was a notoriously bad gambler, and often got into trouble trying to cover his debts. (ROP)

Morgotou

this Rodian was a confederate of Marg Sonat and Pari' Notgoth until Sonat had him executed to keep the Rodian from revealing information on their plans. Morgotou was working for the Kessel Spice Corporation, and had been invited to the Stellar Mermaid by Sard Nightbringer, to take part in the auction of the Imperial prototype armor and shields she had stolen from station T-1583. Sonat feared that Morgotou would reveal the Ithorian's plans for taking control of Nightbringer's organization, and had Notgoth execute him. His body was later discovered by the very smugglers who were transporting the prototype for Nightbringer. One of the smugglers posed as Morgotou, but the ruse was discovered by Natja the Hutt and the smugglers were arrested. (POC)

Morgukai Warriors

this ancient order of Kajain'sa'Nikto warriors was nearly extinct by the time of the Battle of Geonosis, and very little was known of them at the time. The Morgukai existed in the farthest reaches of the Endless Wastes, and experts in survival and battle. The members of the Morgukai were always male Nikto, and fathers often trained their sons in a style that resembled the Master-Padawan relationship of the Jedi Knights. The Morgukai cared little for the aspects of good and evil, but relied on their own code of honor to guide their actions. By the time Chancellor Palpatine had installed himself as Emperor, the Morgukai were outlawed as religious fanatics. (ROP, WOTC)

Morichro

this was one of the most dangerous Force techniques known to the Jedi Masters of the Old Republic. It was an art forbidden to all but a handful of Masters, and was used to rapidly slow the body functions of other beings, resulting in a quick death. It was a controlled art, as its usage bordered on the Dark Side of the Force. It could also be used by a being on themselves, creating a form of suspended animation that was more effective than a Force-induced trance. This use of Morichro allowed the user to survive without food, water, and even air for a up to a month, with a pre-defined duration or stimulus for awakening. (SWDB, GMR5, WOTC)

Moridebo District

this was one of the many low-income sectors of the cityscape which covered the planet Metellos. It was distinguished from other urban areas by its distinct subculture, which included a specialized dialect and cuisine. (CCW)

Morish

this was the native language of the Morish race. (SOP)

Morish

this short, furry race of beings was native to the planet Morishim. (SOP)

Morishim

this planet was the site of a New Republic starfighter base about fifteen years after the Battle of Endor. The planet was located close to the borders of Imperial space, which was greatly reduced at the time. It was here that Imperial Admiral Pellaeon had hoped to meet with Garm Bel Iblis to begin the negotiation of a peace treaty between the remnants of the Empire and the Republic. Pellaeon's invitation never got to Bel Iblis, having been intercepted by Moff Disra's agents, and Pellaeon himself was attacked near the planet by some of Disra's ships. The ships had been camouflaged to resemble Corellian Defense Force ships, but Pellaeon recognized them for what they were. (SOP)

Morjakar

this rogue planetoid occupied the second orbit of the Cularin System, but was believed to have been born in a solar system across the galaxy. Morjakar's orbit was some fifty degrees tilted to the planetary plane defined by the system, and its path was cigar-shaped, extending well above the plane while remaining within the orbits of Acilaris and Cularin. Scientists theorized that Morjakar was the outermost terrestrial planet in a solar system whose planet expanded into a red giant, destroying the inner planets and flinging

Morjakar out of orbit. It wandered the galaxy for many millennia before being caught in the gravity of the binary stars Morasil and Termandus. (LFC)

Morjanssik

one of the many Calamari floating cities, Morjanssik was a mining town built by the Quarren to supply the nearby mining facilities. It was one of the few cities designed, built, and populated almost entirely by Quarren; they wanted to see if they could survive without their Mon Calamari brothers. It was located in the southern hemisphere of Calamari, and was populated by nearly 75,000 Quarren and a few hundred Mon Cals. (DU)

Morla Maalet

this overly tall, weathered, Sullustan male was a small-time smuggler before he met up with Qual'om Soach. Soach hadn't created his empire yet, but Morla decided to go to work for him just the same. Over time, Morla was promoted into a position to be Soach's personal pilot and confidante, commanding the Invisible Star. (FBS)

Morley

this Imperial recruit was part of Kyle Katarn's squadron, during the taking of asteroid AX-456. He held the rank of Sergeant in Kyle's squad, reporting to Sergeant Major Hong, and was the team's demolitions expert. Because he was often the first man through a newly-opened door in training, Morley was first to enter the Alliance base on AX-456, and was shot in the head by an Alliance soldier. (SFE)

Morn

this was one of the more common names given to males of the Mon Calamari race. To the Mon Calamari, this name meant "male ruler" or "king". (GCG)

Morn

this Mon Calamari served as one of Black Sun's vigos during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo, serving under Alexi Garryn during his tenure. Morn worked from a base on his homeworld of Calamari, until he was targeted for execution by Darth Maul about a year before Naboo was blockaded by the Trade Federation. Maul had been working to eliminate any shred of evidence linking his own master, Darth Sidious, to Hath Monchar, and had already executed the Dug vigo Darnada. Maul attacked Morn's base in order to learn the whereabouts of Asa Naga and Garryn, destroying the facility and executing Morn in order to maintain secrecy. (DM)

Morne-3

this Arakyd concussion missile launcher was a common armament of tramp freighters whose captains could afford it. The 10-missile system was easy to fire and caused a great deal of damage. (GG6)

Morning Star

an iron weapon used by the Whiphids on Toola. (CPL)

Morning's Bell

a world in the Koornacht Cluster inhabited by Kubaz. It was known to the New Republic as Doornik-319. It was razed by the Yevetha during the Great Purge. Its significance to the Yevetha was not lost on the New Republic, which attempted to blockade the planet in an effort to halt the Yevethan progress across the Cluster. The Fifth Battle Group was rallied and sent to the planet, and the blockade began well enough. However, the Republic's ships were bombarded with pleas from prisoners of the Yevetha, begging the Republic not to fire on Yevethan ships because they were transporting prisoners. Most of the K-Wing bomber pilots on the front line hesitated, and the Yevethan attacked. They successfully repelled the Republic, staking their claim to the planet. (BTS, SOL)

Morningstar-class Fighter

this three-winged starfighter design was popular among pirates and shipjackers during the last decades of the Old Republic. The upper wing stood straight up from the fuselage, while the other two wings spread out from the bottom. Three sublight engines were situated in between the wings, providing speed and maneuverability. (STF)

Moro Y'Arano

this male Genian worked as the head of business outreach for Fry Industries on his homeworld of Genian, during the height of the Clone Wars. (SOJ)

Morobe

this red-yellow binary star is the primary sun in the Morobe System, which includes Talasea. (XWN)

Morodin

this was the spoken language of the Morodin race. It was believed that there was no written form of the language, as the Morodins lacked manipulative hands. (WOA33)

Morodin

a sentient race of creatures found in the jungles near Tropis-on-Varont, they were intelligent, fifteen-meter-long lizard-slugs that excreted a nutrient-rich slime when they travel. Each Morodin had six short legs to support their bodies, and a pair of arms for holding things. They were not native to Varont, but instead traveled to the planet in organic starships of their own creation nearly 1,000 years before the Old Republic was formed. After their homeworld suffered an ecological disaster, the colony on Varont was left to fend for themselves. When humans first settled Varont, the Morodin were hunted by the colonists, who thought that the slime trails left in their vegetable and grain fields were detrimental. However, after seeing the results of the slime's intense nutrients, the colonists began to allow the Morodin to move through their fields. The creatures created huge, maze-like patterns as they move through the forests, which they use to confuse their prey as well as their attackers. When the Krish Gamgalon discovered the beneficial effects of their slime on Yagaran Aleudrupe plants, he began "hunting" them in order to herd them into his aleudrope beds. He paid off the local Imperial Moff for the rights to "hunt" sentient beings. (SWJ1, EGC, AE)

Morol

this man was the repair expert working at Just Armor on StarForge Station. Morol personally made sure every piece of armor sold was fitted perfectly to its new owner. (FOP)

Morp

this predatory amphibian was native to the planet Dagobah, and was believed to be related to the nharpira. A terrestrial creature, the morp anchored itself into boles and wormholes and attacked its prey as it wandered by. The morp had a highly poisonous venom which it injected when it bit its prey. This venom paralyzed the prey, allowing the morp to extract itself from its hole and consume the prey. (WSW)

Morp Droid

the design of these repulsor-equipped droids was attributed to Asajj Ventress, the Dark Jedi who was one of Count Dooku's chief lieutenants during the Clone Wars. Each morp droid resembled a floating, six-legged beetle, and delivered a powerful electric discharge when they touched living flesh. The discharge was powerful enough to electrocute a human being. Because of the incredible power used by morp droids, they seemed to glow with an electric blue aura as they sought out their targets. (RDR)

Morph

this Polydroxol served as Bruce Mercy's bodyguard and enforcer. He flew pirate missions with Mercy on the Starburst, along with Durquist. (TSK)

Morr

this female Defel got started as a bounty hunter by bringing in a trader who had broken his word to several other Defel. She found that her natural skills as a hunter were more than adequate to make a living in the wider galaxy. (GG10)

Morr III

one of Zothip's base planets. (DFRSB)

Morril

an alien creature native to the planet Trinta, morrils resemble small chipmunks. They are omnivorous, subsisting on plants unless they can find carrion to feed on. (DOE)

Morro

this elderly man worked as a farmer on the planet Ceriun, some 1,000 years before the Battle of Endor. He was also considered the leader of his tribe at the time. When Ka'arn found a Jedi holocron in the downed ship of a Jedi Knight, Morro decided to hold onto the holocron until another Jedi could come to Ceriun to recover it. This proved to be a fatal mistake for many members of the tribe, when the Sith arrived and killed the young boys who had helped Tenno try and recover it. (T17)

Morrs

this New Republic Lieutenant was placed in charge of the investigation into Kyp Durrone's stealing of the Sun Crusher weapon from its resting place at the heart of Yavin. His survey results were largely insubstantial, because the sheer force of the storms at the planet's heart wouldn't allow his sensor teams to gather useful data. (IJ)

Morrt

furry, gray, mouse-sized parasites from the planet Gamorr, they feed on the blood of a living host. Note that the Star Wars Adventure Journal #10 indicates that the morrts are slug-like creatures. The Gamorreans have domesticated them and consider them to be pets, and they have adopted a social ideal which states that the more morrts a Gamorrean has attached to its body, the more status they have. The highest ranking matrons and warlords have twenty or more morrts attached to their bodies. Morrts found in the wild can be quite aggressive when they attach themselves to a host, and an entire swarm could bleed a full-grown Gamorrean dry in no time at all. (SWSB, SWJ10)

Morrt-class Droid

developed by Warlord Zsinj and Apwar Trigit shortly after the Battle of Thyferra, these small, parasite droids were distributed throughout the galaxy. They were designed to intercept signals from virtually any source and relay information about the source to their operators. The basic Morrt droid resembled a rectangular box, and could attach itself to virtually any surface. The project was initially successful, allowing Trigit to feed false information to the New Republic and allowed him to destroy Talon Squadron. The second hit came from Folor, but Trigit attacked the false beacons placed on the moon instead. When Gara Petothel discovered that the Morrts dispatched to Talasea where attaching themselves to ships which constantly moved in and out of the Morobe System, Apwar Trigit discovered that the intelligence of the Morrts was too limited to be useful. He canceled further development and abandoned the Morrts. (WS)

Mors

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Mors Eth

a member of Klyn Shanga's Renatasian vigilantes hunting down Vuffi Raa. (LCF)

Mors, Opeli

this woman was one of the primary representatives of the Jin'ri Trade Syndicate during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. She supported the creation of Luke Skywalker's Great River, only because it would allow the Syndicate to make more of a profit by selling supplies to worlds along the pathway. (EVR)

Morsai, Rollo

this woman, whose stage name was Jona Reeten, had her acting career cut short when Babel Torsh took control of the Minos Cluster. Since that time, she has made a living plying the spacelanes in her converted Baudo-class yacht, the Gilded Lily, a ship which has been modified over time. Over time, she lost much of her exuberance and drive, and so much of the work aboard the ship gets done by her assistant, Tiebo. (GG6)

Morseer

this planet, the homeworld of the Morseerian race, was shrouded with a methane-based atmosphere. The Morseerians kept the planet's location a secret for more than twelve thousand years, and only members of the Morseerian race knew of its existence. (TBSB, UANT)

Morseerian

a four-armed race of methane-breathing humanoids, Morseerians were native to the planet Morseer. They were easily recognizable by their large, cone-shaped heads and the breathmasks they wore whenever they are in an atmosphere that lacks sufficient methane. The Morseerians were a client species to the Drackmarians, and every Morseerian was "owned" or under contract to a Drackmarian master. Beneath their protective suits, Morseerians had transparent skin and large, black eyes. They kept the location of their homeworld a heavily-guarded secret, protecting its independence with their lives if necessary. As a people, the Morseerians were secretive and quiet. Although generally peaceful in nature, Morseerians often reacted swiftly to any threat they encountered, whether real or perceived. (CCG, SSR, TBSB, ANT, UANT)

Morseerian

this was the name given to the native language of the Morseerians. (ANT)

Morshdine Sector

when Luke Skywalker infiltrated the Cavrilhu Pirates' base in the Kauron System, he managed to discover that Wesselman had traveled to this area of the galaxy to pick up a load of unregistered Tibanna gas. (SOP)

Morst Tayl'skar

this Bothan was transported to Dressel by Pyrron Nox. An Alliance agent, Tayl'skar was attempting to contact Orrimaarko. (GG12)

Mortar Gun

any weapon which can launch mortars. They are often small enough for handheld use, but can be built to fire large mortars from a stationary base. (DF)

Mortav

this was the innermost of the four moons which orbited the planet Mutanda. (PG1)

Morteos

this man was a native of the planet Nar Bo Sholla. He was known as one of the best freelance assassins, specializing in the assassination of corporate officials. He is known to have killed one of SoroSuub's top executives, although who hired Morteos remains a mystery. Morteos was also responsible for the death of Crix Masst on Sinded, and was nearly captured when New Republic pilots shot at his modified freighter. Despite taking damage, Morteos outran the Y-Wings and disappeared. He was known to wear black battle armor to hide his true identity, and usually executes his target from a remote location, using bombs, poisons, and other subtle means. (WBC)

Mortex Sector

the Alliance gained a foothold in this area of the galaxy shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (BI)

Morthul

this Dark Jedi was known for his cruelty to non-human races. He was eventually defeated by a group of young Jedi shortly after the Battle of Endor. (GMS)

Morti

this large-nosed, green-skinned alien worked as a talent agent during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He booked one of his clients, known simply as Shirley, to perform at the delegation on Kabray station, just prior to the Battle of Endor. (MC77)

Mortunk, Rabby

this man served as the ship's engineer aboard the pirate vessel Free Lance. (PP)

Moruth Doole

a Rybet, leader of the spice-smuggling operation on Kessel. He has one mechanical eye to replace one lost in a struggle with some of Jabba's hitmen. He bribed and murdered his way to the top of Kessel's operations, and was the primary source of bootleg spice during the Imperial occupation of Kessel. When Han Solo had to dump a load of spice which Jabba the Hutt had already paid for, Jabba placed a death mark on Doole's head. One of Jabba's men almost got to Doole, but succeeded only in blinded one of his eyes and damaging the other. This occurred around the time of Jabba's death and the death of Emperor Palpatine at Endor. Doole, always the opportunist, sought to free himself from Imperial and get back at Jabba by killing off the prison warden (a man whom Jabba had already bought) and overthrowing the Imperials. He keeps captive female Rybets for his pleasure, and uses the offspring he sires on them as slaves in the spice mines. This eventually led to his demise, however, for when Han Solo and Lando Calrissian returned to Kessel to take over the spice mines following the defeat of Doole's Navy at the hands of Admiral Daala, he tries to escape them, only to be turned on by his various wives and children. He flees into the mines, where he is attacked and killed an energy spider. (TLC, JS, COTF)

Morvak

this unusual creature was able to derive sustenance from rocks and stones. They required neither gravity nor atmosphere for their survival, which allowed them to live in asteroid belts, which provided abundant sources of food. Resembling large crustaceans, the average morvak was more than a meter across, and was covered with a heavy exoskeleton. Two pairs of legs allowed it to move, while a pair of clawed limbs allowed it to dig through rubble. A grouping of tentacles hung from their mouths, and exuded a powerful acid which the morvak used to break down rock and stone into digestible forms. These tentacles could also give the morvak an indication of what kind of rock it was burrowing in. When deprived of sustenance, morvaks can go into a form of suspended animation, surviving for years until discovering a new source of food. Despite their fearsome appearance, morvaks are social creatures which traveled in packs, working together to repel attackers and locate new sources of minerals. (PG1)

Morvogodine

a planet, located in the Calaron Sector, that was occupied by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War. (TME, REB)

Morv'vyal

this Bothan was an investigator with the Drev'starn Department of Criminal Discouragement. He accompanied Proy'skyn to the Exocticalia Pet Emporium, on a tip that the store had been burglarized. When a fire broke out in the shop, the Bothans realized that it was related to the wiring. This led them to discover the hidden cache of weapons kept by Navett and Klif, which forced the humans to kill the Bothan investigators in order to carry out their plans. (VOF)

Morymento

this was the largest of the colonies found on Kerilt. Like most of settlements on Kerilt, it lacked self-sufficiency, and was a target for pirates. Morymento was also the home of one of the larger Caamasi Remnant communities. (IJ)

Morz

this common Zabrak surname meant "trader". (GCG)

Mos

this ball of searing rock was the first planet in the Dostra System. (AIR)

'mos

this suffix was added to a Bothan's family name to indicate the individual's affiliation to the Umos clan. (GCG, WOTC)

Mos Eisley

one of the primary cities of the modern era on Tatooine, Mos Eisley was also home to one of Tatooine's primary spaceports. Founded about 85 years before the Battle of Yavin, Mos Eisley grew outward from the crash site of the Dowager Queen, as spacefaring companies and individuals realized Tatooine's proximity to existing spacelanes was advantageous. As the popularity of podracing waned, the unofficial capital city of Tatooine was moved from Mos Espa to Mos Eisley. In just a few decades, Mos Eisley's population tripled as businesses took root to offer services to starships and travelers who were passing through the system. Some 362 docking bays were built within its boundaries. During much of the Galactic Civil War, Jabba the Hutt used Mos Eisley as a base of operations. The female Whiphid Valarian also used Mos Eisley as a base, keeping Jabba at arm's length. The city was divided into two main sections, the Old Quarter surrounding the wreckage of the Dowager Queen, and the more tourist-friendly areas known as the New Quarter. Ben Kenobi once described Mos Eisley as "...a...wretched hive of scum and villiany". Following the death of Jabba, the city was thrown into a raging chaos. Much of the city was burned and/or looted, and for a time Tatooine was isolated from the major shipping lanes because the spaceport was inaccessible. (SW, GG7, TME, RSG, SWDB, RESB, SOT, IWST)

Mos Eisley Cantina

this was the primary watering hole located in the spaceport city of Mos Eisley, on Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. Although it was most commonly known as the Mos Eisley Cantina, it was actually named Chalmun's Spaceport Cantina. During this time, it was owned and operated by the Wookiee Chalmun. It was rumored that Jabba the Hutt once threatened to shoot one arriving starship a day from the skies over the spaceport until the doors of the cantina were enlarged enough for him to fit through. It was Chalmun who installed a droid detector in the doorway, despite Wuher's obvious distrust of droids. The mixing computer of the cantina's ancient bar was capable of synthesizing more than 16,000 different drinks, although Chalmun refused to stock all the necessary ingredients. A sign over the arched doorway offered the warning "Watch Your Head(s)" in the Basic language. Before Chalmun assumed control of the cantina, it was the property of the Vriichon Brothers, who ran an illegal spice den on the premises. (SW, SWJ3, SWDB, IWST)

Mos Eisley Inn

a marginal motel located in the spaceport city, on the planet Tatooine. (TME)

Mos Eisley Merchant's Association

the Chadra-Fan pickpocket Kabe claimed to be a representative of this organization, during her years spent on Tatooine. Dressed up like a Jawa, she approached incoming starship captains and explained to them that they had to buy a "trade license" from her for 500 credits in order to do business on the planet. This façade infuriated the Jawas, since the Merchant's Association was a scam, and the license that captains really needed cost just 200 credits. (SOT)

Mos Eisley Mourners

this was the name given to four DX-series assassin droids owned by Jabba the Hutt. The four droids were purchased and programmed to act in the event of Jabba's death. The droids were programmed to request a specific password each week from Jabba himself. If the password was correct, they would deactivate themselves for another week. If, at the end of each week, the droids did not receive the password, their onboard systems fired up and the droids set out to eliminate their targets. Jabba figured that his death would most likely come from a competitor or underling, and he was determined to keep their greedy hands off his fortunes. Each droid was given specific targets - Lady Valarian, Jun Seros, and Bib Fortuna were all in the target database - and, when activated, set out through the streets of Mos Eisley. As they searched for their targets, the droid would mutter woeful cries and mourn the death of the mighty Jabba, while efficiently hunting down their targets. When Jabba died just prior to the Battle of Endor, it was never learned if the ancient droids actually woke up to make their attacks. (RESB)

Mos Eisley Spaceport

a run-down spaceport by most standards, the Mos Eisley Spaceport was originally established as an alternative to the Anchorhead port. A group of Rodian refugees helped build the Spaceport, which grew as word spread that it was much less expensive than Anchorhead. Over time, the Spaceport expanded in concentric circles of packed-sand landing pits. It also has its own cantina. The layout of the spaceport was overseen by the Hutts who established bases of operation on Tatooine, and had to conform to a simple rule: "Visitors must have easy access to the city, where they can spend their money. They must also have easy access to the spaceports, so that they can go back to their ships and fetch the rest." For this reason, most docking bays in Mos Eisley were protected by a passcode that was given free-of-charge to incoming starship captains. (SW, ZHR, SWDB, SOT)

Mos Eisley Special

a nickname for the DL-18 blaster, it referred to the fact that they were readily available on the desert world. (CCG7)

Mos Eisley Towers

a hotel located in Mos Eisley, on Tatooine, the name is deceiving because the entire building - except for the lobby and restaurant - was buried under the desert sands. (TJP)

Mos Entha

see Mos Ethna (GQRG)

Mos Espa

one of the larger townships found on the planet Tatooine, Mos Espa was originally founded some 80 years before the Battle of Yavin by a group of Rodian refugees. Soon, the Hutts moved in, and by the era of the Battle of Naboo it was controlled by Jabba the Hutt. It was a sprawling city built on gambling money, originally settled by a large contingent of Rodians but quickly controlled by the Hutts. Each year, its surrounding desert was the site of the annual Boonta Eve Classic podrace. The city also was home to a large contingent of slaves, owned by the merchants and the Hutts. (CCG9, SW1, TPM, OWS)

Mos Espa Circuit

this was the most noted swoop racing course on the planet Tatooine, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Much of the course was based on Jabba the Hutt's old pod racing course, which was also known as the Mos Espa Circuit. (SWGAL)

Mos Espa Circuit

this was the name of the pod racing course established by Jabba the Hutt, just outside the spaceport city of Mos Espa. Beginning in the confines of the Mos Espa Arena, the course started out across the Starlite Flats, then wound through Waldo Flats before opening into Mushroom Mesa and Ebe Crater Valley. From there, racers had to negotiate Beggar's Canyon before getting a brief respite while crossing a desert plain bordering on the Dune Sea. Then, racers were forced to navigate through Arch Canyon before weaving through The Whip, Jag Crag Gorge, and the Lagula Caves. After emerging from the Caves, racers moved through the Canyon Dune Turn before hitting the Bindy Bend. At the far end of the Bend, the course narrowed sharply as it passed through The Coil, Jett's Chute, and The Corkscrew. Once through this set of challenges, racers pushed their machines to the limit in an all-out speed race to return to Mos Espa Arena across Hutt Flats. (IWE1)

Mos Espa Galactic Food Emporium

this large grocery store was located down the street from Watto's junkyard, in the city of Mos Espa on Tatooine, during the last years of the Old Republic. (E1A8)

Mos Espa Grand Arena

this huge arena was built by Jabba the Hutt with a great deal of governmental help. Jabba obtained the necessary permits, licenses, and funding by claiming the huge arena would bring business to Mos Espa, and he was true to his prediction. Each year, the Arena hosted the Boonta Eve Classic podrace, which attracted more than 100,000 spectators from across the Outer Rim. Other pod races were also run there, on the amateur circuits. (SW1, RAC, SWDB)

Mos Espa Medical Center

this was the finest medical facility available on the planet Tatooine, during the last years of the Old Republic. (PRT)

Mos Espa Open

this podracing event was held on the planet Tatooine, and was considered a preliminary event to the Boonta Eve Classic. (GMR10)

Mos Espa Podraces

during the last decades of the Old Republic, this collection of podraces was run at the Mos Espa Arena. The series was formed and controlled by the Hutts of the Desilijic kajidic, led by Jabba himself. (NEGC)

Mos Espa Podracing Arena

see Mos Espa Grand Arena (TG)

Mos Espa Swoop Arena

in the years which followed the decline of podracing's popularity and the ravages of the Clone Wars, the former Mos Espa Grand Arena on Tatooine was more or less abandoned by the Desilijic Hutts. It was eventually taken over by a small band of swoop racers, who used it to stage a regular series of semi-legitimate races during the early years of the New Republic. (TG)

Mos Espa Way

this was the name of the primary street that worked its way through the city of Mos Espa, on Tatooine. (TPM)

Mos Ethna

this was a settlement found on the planet Tatooine during the New Order. (WOA5)

Mos Ethna

this settlement was located on the planet Tatooine, across the Mospic High Range from Mos Espa. For many years, it was a distant third in terms of population and appeal to the spaceport city of Mos Eisley and the settlement of Mos Espa. However, in the years following the Battle of Endor, Mos Ethna experienced a resurgence of wealth. By the time the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy, Mos Ethna was the site of a much more modern spaceport. (IWE1, SOT)

Mos Gamos

this settlement, located on the planet Tatooine, was one of the most remote locations on the planet. It was considered a haven for many criminals during the years following the Battle of Naboo. (BH)

Mos Nytram

this was one of the most remote settlements found on the planet Tatooine, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (X2)

Mos Taiké

this settlement, located on the planet Tatooine, was found just outside Mos Ethna. (IWE1)

Mos Tommro Spaceport

this is the primary starport found on the planet Cilpar. (SOP)

Mos Zabu

this was one of the smaller cities on the planet Tatooine. (T7)

Mosbree, Arcel

this man was a former Senator to the Old Republic, who retired from Senatorial duty to return to his homeworld of Brentaal, shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars. He was elected to serve as planetary governor, but many failed to see that he had developed alliances with the Separatists. Mosbree allowed the Confederacy of Independent Systems to assume control of Brentaal, under the military direction of Commander Shogar Tok. However, a task force of Jedi Knights managed to defeat Tok and arrest Mosbree on charges of conspiracy, liberating the planet from Separatist control. Mosbree was succeeded as planetary governor by Jerrod Maclain. (SWI70)

Mosep Binneed

this Nimbanel served as Jabba the Hutt's accountant. Working from Jabba's Mos Eisley townhouse, his inside contacts allowed him to disrupt the cash flow of Jabba's enemies. (GG12, CCG2, UANT)

Mosgoth

a reptilian avian native to the planet Togoria, the mosgoth have been befriended by the Togorians for their mutual protection against the liphons. The mosgoths allow themselves to be used as mounts. Over the generations, the Togorians established permanent camps to be near the mosgoths, and they began domesticating mosgoths for use as hunting mounts. (GG4, TPS)

Mosh Pelkan

this Mephitisian crime lord controlled a vast underground network in the city of Gralleenya, on Questal. Pelkan worked from a penthouse suite in his luxury hotel. The suite was equipped with a series of repuslorlift engines that allowed it to separate from the hotel and travel around the planet. It was shaped like a crystal mushroom. Pelkan himself was a purple-skinned humanoid who planned to be a prospector on Questal, hoping to cash in on the ardanium rush there. However, he quickly learned that it was easier to importing certain illicit goods for sale to other prospectors. His penthouse ship contained a gladiator pit in which he pitted his champion, Cromag, against challengers often provided by Moff Bandor. His small empire grew quickly during the ardanium boom, but he started seeing a drop-off in profits when the mines began playing out. (GCQ)

Moshaw Dark Star

this black hole was located on the edge of Sesswenna Sector. (PP)

Moshene Tre

this Rellarin was the Un'Yala of the Cas'ta tribe on Rellnas Minor. He was also a New Republic Observer in charge of patrolling the sector around Cejansij. It was Tre who intercepted Luke Skywalker on Cejansij and asked him to witness the gatherings in Tranquility Common, in hopes that the Jedi Master would better understand the galactic situation following the revelation of the Caamas Document. (SOP)

Moshudda

this Hutt reporter for the Nal Hutta Kal'tamok produced an in-depth analysis of the various newsfeed available during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ11)

Moshuddaa

this being made regular reports to the Basic version of the Nal Hutta Kal'tamok during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ10)

Moska

this minor Hutt crimelord was a rival of Torga the Hutt, vying for spice smuggling supremacy on Nar Shaddaa during the height of the New Order. Moska had Torga's chief lieutenant, Nak Simm, murdered shortly after the Battle of Yavin, in an effort to persuade Torga to turn over his spice operations. The plan was to ensure that Torga looked incompetent in the eyes of Jolla the Hutt, with whom Torga had been planned to forge an alliance. Moska hoped that the death of Nak Simm, coupled with several other assassination attempts on Torga's life, would also make Torga too much of a risk for Jolla. Moska's plans were thwarted when his Clawdite assassin, Nomo Sliken, was captured while posing as Nak Simm. His operations were further undermined by Jolla himself, who posed as Moska to hire a number of assassins to eliminate the mercenaries working for Torga. (WOA23, WOA24)

Mosko Bolpa

this Moggonite befriended Qui-Gon Jinn, when the Jedi Master traveled to Arorlia with his Padawan apprentice, Obi-Wan Kenobi. Like most members of his race, Mosko Bolpa was conceited and uncaring, continually berating Qui-Gon's every effort to be friends. He later betrayed the Jedi by leading his people in an ambush of the Jedi's camp. Qui-Gon was forced to kill Mosko Bolpa during the attack, and explained to Obi-Wan that if he hadn't killed him, then Mosko would have prevented him from completing his work as a Jedi. (T1)

Mospic High Range

this string of low, rocky outcroppings marked the delineation between Mos Espa's environs and the Dune Sea. (TPM)

Mosrk'teck

this alien creature inhabits the swamps of Marca, and has highly-sensitive hearing and smell. The mosrk'teck was a carnivorous amphibian measuring upwards of two meters in length, and resembling a squashed lizard. These creatures were at the top of the food chain in the swamps of Marca, hunting in groups of six or more at one time. (POM)

Moss

this Bothan name was given to newborn males. Translated into Basic, it meant "dutiful" or "dependable." (GCG, WOTC)

Moss Deevers

this Bothan was known as a two-bit smuggler who lied much better than he smuggled. He worked with a Sullustan side-kick named Twingo. It was said that, if they actually did one-hundredth of what they claimed, they would be the richest rogues in the galaxy and would have single-handedly defeated the Empire long before the Battle of Endor. They weren't well-liked by their brethren, especially after they set the two-man record running through Lando's Folly. (VP)

Moss-hopper

a carnivorous creature native to the moon Yavin 8, the centimeters-long moss-hopper is also one of the moon's tiniest predators. Its front teeth are pointed and hollow, and inject a poison into the moss-hopper's prey. (GG2)

Mossk, Choaaty

a freelance operative working for the G'uatr Network, he was a space pirate and galactic strong-arm before joining the Network. He and Elena Ray have had several arguments about his tactics. (SN)

Mossol the Menace

this man was a member of Swang's Swoopers, the Mos Eisley swoop gang which kidnapped Diew Rejeff and held him for ransom, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (MEAS)

Mossonian Sector

another name for the M'shinni Sector, using a form of the derogatory term 'Mossy.' (GG12)

Moss-painting

this was a form of art which developed on the planet Alderaan. It involved the cultivation of specific strains of moss which neither spread nor reproduced, keeping their position static within the artwork. The secrets of how to cultivate these mosses and grow them into a painting were well-guarded even on Alderaan, and were lost when the planet was destroyed by the first Death Star. Because of these secrets, moss-paintings could not be forged. In order to maintain the moss patches, specialized moisture-control circuitry was developed to ensure the survival of the mosses. (TG)

Mossy

a derogatory term used to describe the M'shinni race. (GG12)

Most Honourable Guild of Armourers

this Outer Rim Territories group is formed from weapons specialists who have experience in exotic and rare weaponry. It maintains an auction house on Epsi Nadir, and has developed methods for avoiding "Imperial entanglements." The main guildhouse is located in the galactic Core, and oversees the sale of various weapons. Past customers of the Guild include Boba Fett, Dengar, Zardra, and Matt Talon. (GG9)

Mostlaa

a short, weasel-like humanoid race. (GMH)

Mosu System

this star system was located on the edge of the Cademimu Sector of the galaxy. (WOA26)

Mot Not Rab

this Old Republic Senator was known to be stubborn and confrontational, and kept his true motives as well-guarded secrets. Rab was a Tarnab, with shaggy hair and horns. (IG1, SWI74)

Mota

this man was a member of the Worker faction on New Apsolon, some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. Mota secretly worked with a group of individuals to obtain and sell virtually anything, providing the highest bidder with weapons, vehicles or rations. Mota demanded, however, that his fellow Workers refrain from using illegal methods in fighting for their freedom. During Balog's attempt to take control of the planet, Mota helped Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi obtain a probe droid and speeders, to help them track Balog. Unfortunately for the Workers, the Jedi learned that Mota had been selling weapons and explosives to the undercover Absolutes, thereby undermining their attempt to remain free. (DOH)

Motamba

this old, blue-eyed Wookiee was a munitions expert in Katarra's underground, during the Imperial occupation of Kashyyyk. (RD)

Mote, The

this space station was located in orbit around the star known as Kuna's Eye, and was located in the Modell Sector of the galaxy. It was named for the way in which it resembled a speck of dust in Kuna's Eye, but it was originally constructed to serve as a mining platform. The planetary disk surrounding Kuna's Eye was rich in metals and ores, and several mining operations were established on the station. The Mote was actually a collection of refineries, law offices, and spaceports, which served the various mining concerns. (GMR9)

Motee'

this woman served as one of Senator Padme' Amidala's handmaidens, during the years following the Battle of Geonosis. Motee' was portrayed by Kristy Wright in Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (SWI71, E3)

Motesta

this was the fourth settlement founded on Tatooine. It located between the Jundland Wastes and Mos Eisley, along Arnthout Pass. It was a farming community located about two and a half hours north of Anchorhead by landspeeder. (GG7, TJP, GMH)

Motesta Oasis

this freshwater oasis was located near the settlement of Motesta, on the planet Tatooine. It was found on the edge of the Jundland Wastes, between Arthout and the Jawa Heights. (IWST)

Motexx

this planet was the origin point of the Star Morning, as it left fully-loaded and bound for Gowdawl just before the Battle of Endor. The ship was lost from New Republic records until it reappeared on Arat Fraca - a full two sectors distant - a year after the fall of the Empire. (SOL)

Moth

this hot ball of rock was the innermost planet of the Naboo System. It had no natural satellites. (SON)

Moth

an Alliance container transport destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Mother

this was the title given to the eldest woman of each Tarasin Irstat. Each Mother was considered a wise woman and leader, having served as an Irstat-Kes for several years. (LFC)

Mother

this was Mara Jade Skywalker's callsign, as a member of Saber Squadron, during the defense and evacuation of the Jedi Knights' base on Eclipse, two years into the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (SBS)

Mother Ithor

this Ithorian herdship made regular excursions into the Tion Cluster, the Corporate Sector, and the fringes of Hutt Space. It was known as a ship which provided aid to oppressed inhabitants of these areas. (GMR4)

Mother Jungle

what the Ithorians call the environment of Ithor, they choose not to set foot on it in order to preserve its natural beauty. In order for an Ithorian - or any other being - to come into contact with the forest floor, they had to first give up something of themselves in order to prove their desire to save themselves. (DA, DTR)

Mother of Night

a Gamorrean religious icon or deity. (JTH)

Mother Sea

this was a New Republic frigate. (IF)

Mother Vima

this starship was part of the fleet commissioned by Queen Elsinore' den Tasia to carry explorers from Grizmallt to a new planet, accompanying the Beneficent Tasia on its final journey, many millennia before the Battle of Naboo. The colonists aboard the ships, which also included the Constant, settled on the planet Naboo some 3,900 years before the Battle of Yavin. (GB)

MotherClan

this was the primary governmental body of the Riileb, consisting of those Riileb who were considered the only direct descendants of the mythical first Riileb. All representatives of the MotherClan were females, with the eldest being the leader and holder of the ClanRing. (SWJ13)

Mothers United March on Alsakan

this event was staged on the planet Alsakan, in protest of the way the Jedi Council handled the case of baby Ludi Billane. Baby Ludi was taken from her homeworld of Ord Thoden after a devastating earthquake destroyed Domitree, but her mother, Jonava, also survived. Jonava tried to recover her daughter, but the Jedi refused to release the child. The March on Alsakan was organized to raise the level of awareness of Jedi tactics with regards to young children, as well as to raise money to help Jonava cover her legal expenses. (HNN5)

Mother's Valkyrie

this starship, belonging to Belezaboth Ourn, was nearly destroyed when the Aradamia tried to lift off from Coruscant. Nil Spaar used the damaged ship as part of his plan to show how Leia Organa-Solo was keeping him on the planet against his will, thus causing damage to "innocent bystanders." The ship was later impounded by the New Republic, forcing Ourn to remain on Coruscant. This provided Spaar with a source of information on the planet, but kept Ourn from being able to leave. (BTS, SOL)

Mothma, Lieda

this young woman was Mon Mothma's daughter, born during the early years of the Alliance. (NEGC, SWI82)

Mothma, Mon

a native of the planet Chandrila, Mon Mothma grew up in a political environment, as her mother was a governor on Chandrila and her father was an arbiter-general in the Old Republic. Mon Mothma eventually became the youngest person elected to the Imperial Senate at that time. (Leia Organa was the youngest ever to be elected.) She was an outspoken representative, who was one of the first Senators to notice the degeneration of the Old Republic. She was also one of the first to do something about it. As the Clone

Wars ground on, Mon Mothma and Bail Organa worked with Padme' Amidala to enact legislation that ensure Chancellor Palpatine relinquished the additional powers he had acquired during the conflict. Their efforts were only marginally successful, and they received only Palpatine's assurances. When the First Battle of Coruscant caught the Republic off-guard, Mon Mothma was the first Senator to openly voice the suspicion that the Jedi Knights had become Palpatine's pawns in the larger game that resulted in his rise to power. Bail Organa managed to convince her otherwise, and joined with her to create the Petition of the eTwo Thousand. It was Senator Mothma who suggested that they bring in Senator Amidala to join their petition, hoping that her relationship with Palpatine might help them push their petition through. However, the Petition of the Two Thousand failed to produce results, and Senator Mothma and her colleagues were forced to watch Palpatine name himself Emperor and institute the New Order. Along with Senators Garm Bel Iblis and Bail Organa, Mon Mothma negotiated the Corellian Treaty following Palpatine's institution of the New Order, and formed the Alliance to Restore the Republic. She became the leader of the Alliance, and her political savvy made her nearly irreplaceable. How domineering attitude, however, created tense situations, and led to the departure of Garm Bel Iblis from the Alliance prior to the attack on Milvayne. Mon Mothma, along with Crix Madine and the Mon Calamarian Ackbar, devised the plans to destroy the second Death Star at Endor, which eventually succeeded. From that point on, Mon Mothma served as the Chief of State for the New Republic. While trying to bring more worlds into the New Republic's fold, she was poisoned by Furgan, the ambassador from the still-Imperial world of Carida. He threw a drink into her face; the drink contained a huge number of carefully-created nanodestroyers which ate away at Mon Mothma's genetic structure. A timely solution was found when the Jedi Healer Cilghal extracted the nanodestroyers, but Mon Mothma no longer felt able to run the New Republic. She asked Leia to take over for her, and retired to her estate on Coruscant. Just before the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy, Mon Mothma died of natural causes. Mon Mothma was portrayed by Caroline Blakiston in Star Wars: Return of the Jedi. (ROTJ, HTTE, COTF, EGC, DW, LEV, VD3)

Mothma, Tanis

this woman was the planetary Governor of Chandrila, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN4)

Mothra

this Imperial Tax Inspector was a thorn in the side of Roark Garnet. He was a hypochondriac, and any symptom of a cold was shunned by Mothra at the first chance. Garnet once faked the Merthian Lung Infection in order to scare Mothra away from inspecting a cargo he was carrying. After being promoted to Associate Governor, Mothra later discovered that the disease didn't exist, and become extremely vigilant whenever Garnet was in his local area. (SWCP)

Mothut

meaning "charity" or "generosity", this was a common female name among the Mon Calamari race. (GCG)

Motion Interface Package

created by SoroSuub, this cyborg system allows the recipient to have increased visual acuity through a direct interface with a starship's computer systems. A cyborg with this package can control piloting controls, weapons systems, and shield systems, allowing the cyborg to operate the ship with increased efficiency. Designed around the Multi-Motion computer framework, it allows the cyborg to manage huge amounts of tactical data. Many recipients claim that a starship dogfight becomes much like a holo-vid arcade game. However, the recipient quickly grows tired of even the most intense engagements, because they become easy to handle. (CFG)

Motivator

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was stationed near Maldra IV during the height of the Galactic Civil War. It had been dispatched to investigate a pirate base on the planet, but Captain Briera and his crew discovered an Alliance training base and munitions plant on the planet. (SWJ10)

Motivator

the device which converts energy into mechanical motion and provides locomotion for droids. (SW)

Motmot

native to Toola, these huge, shaggy herd creatures are the preferred prey of the Whiphids and snow demons. They measure up to 12 meters at the shoulder, and up to 15 meters in length. A single motmot - or mastmot, as some Whiphid tribes call them - can feed a tribe for a month, and its pelt will provide each family with a tent and jacket. (CPL, SWJ10)

Motoball

this droid locomotion system utilizes a large, round ball as its base. The metallic ball rests underneath a cap which allows the ball to roll freely while balancing the upper section of the droid over the ball. The system uses tiny repulsors to keep the upper section upright while the ball is free to roll in complete motion. (OS)

Motor-sled

this was another name for a repulsorsled. (SWJ10)

Motosurfing

a sport in which a rider uses a motorized sled to race across the water. (SE)

Mott

this swift-moving, herbivorous creature resembled a small hippopotamus, and was native to the planet Naboo. They have sharp claws and small horn on the end of their snouts, all of which are used to dig up the delicate flowers of the Naboo plains. Individual motts can be domesticated, but they often uproot their owner's gardens. Motts were the favored prey of many of Naboo's predators, and the motts evolved to reproduce rapidly. Up to fifteen young were born per litter. Each community of motts was led by a dominant male and, maybe, a lieutenant which guarded the newborns. (GF, WSW)

Mott, Cellis

this famous leader of the Nanth'ri Pirates created a list of "ship's articles" used by pirates everywhere. He was a portly, bearded man who wasn't as dashing as he believed himself to be. He kept his eyebrows in the Peluchian style, dyed and trimmed. He suddenly disappeared, and the Nanth'ri Pirates disbanded soon afterward. It was later learned that Mott had been captured by the Alliance, and was en route to an Alliance penal colony when the transport ship - the Celestial - was lost in Otherspace. Mott was part of the group, led by Bane Nothos, that escaped from captivity and took control of the transport, only to be deposited into Otherspace when the ship tried to jump into hyperspace. Mott was severely affected by the Charon's red mist, and went mad aboard the huge ship, the Desolate. Mott was killed when a group of Alliance agents tried to rescue any survivors of the Celestial's crew, in a firefight aboard the the Desolate. He hid a substantial treasure on a remote asteroid, which went undiscovered until Marka Durn located it a few years after Mott's death. (SWJ2, OS, IA)

Motta

this Hutt crimelord was active on the planet Tatooine, during the era of the Great Sith War. He was known to have dealt in slavery, and was one of the few beings that enslaved members of the Rakata race. Motta also controlled the local swoop racing circuit. Motta kept a Rakata 'specimen' in a strange box, which he shipped across the galaxy with a warning to its carrier: never open the box. If the box was opened, the being was transported inside and forced to answer three of the Rakata's question. If the being failed to answer the questions, they were trapped inside the box until Motta opened it himself. The box was a unique device known as a mind prison. The entrapped beings were then sold into slavery by Motta, once he recovered the box. (KOTOR)

Motti

this Imperial Admiral was part of Grand Moff Wilhuff Tarkin's support staff, in command the the Navy forces assigned to the first Death Star prior to the Battle of Yavin. Motti was a strong proponent of the first Death Star's abilities, and was believed to have been related to Tarkin by marriage. He once told Darth Vader that he was a "sorcerer", and that the Force was an ancient religion. For his outburst, Vader nearly choked Motti to death through the Force, hoping to prove to the Admiral the power of the Force. In the end, Motti was killed when the Death Star was destroyed during the Battle of Yavin. Motti was portrayed by Richard Le Parmentier in Star Wars: Episode IV - A New Hope, and by David Clennon for the Star Wars Radio Drama on National Public Radio. (SW, SWR, DSTC, NEGC)

Moulee-rah

this Huttese word translated into Basic as "money." (GMR5)

Moulee-Rah Patogga

this Besadii kajidic transport was captured on the planet Karnst by a joint team of Jedi Knights and Old Republic forces, after more than 100 metric tons of ryll spice were discovered in her holds. The discovery occurred just before the Battle of Geonosis, and prompted a full-scale investigation of the sources of ryll spice throughout the galaxy. (HNN5)

Mound Mite

this cale-covered insect was native to the planet Tatooine, where it lived in mounds of refuse in cities and towns. (GQRG)

Mounder Potato Rice

this staple food is found within, and as a side dish to, many Corellian meals. (TNR)

Mount Avos

this large mountain, part of the Hormack range found on the planet Troiken, overlooked the Lycinder Plain. The mountain was once a source of spice during the Old Republic, but the mines dried up quickly. (SHW)

Mount Berin

this Garosian peak is situated on the outskirts of Zila. (SWJ3)

Mount Dagger

former name of the highest mountain peak on Dagobah. It was renamed Mount Yoda following the Battle of Endor. (MMY)

Mount Deldarca

this active volcano was the site of the Alliance base known as Dalgeer's Rim. The base of the volcano was riddled with caverns and tunnels which had been formed from lava flows, which made the location ideal because much of the excavation work was already done. (HAS)

Mount Hollow

this extinct volcano, located on the planet Velusia, was the property of the Nexcore Mining Corporation during the last decades of the Old Republic. NMC established a small city and a spaceport inside the shaft of Mount Hollow, allowing NMC to control its operations from a single location. The operations within Mount Hollow were split into four layers. The lowest layer was originally set aside for the Aquar laboreres who worked for NMC, but it eventually became a sort of slum where unemployed Aquar eked out miserable existences. The next layer up served as the living quarters for NMC's executives. The second layer from the top contained hotels, casinos, and holovid theaters, serving as the entertainment district. The topmost layer served as the spaceport, which had four landing pads that could accommodate large transport vessels. (CCW)

Mount Hugo

named for Hugo Bartyn, this mountain was the tallest peak in the range known as the Krakana's Maw, located on the planet Lamaredd. It was on the slopes of Mount Hugo that the Bartyn family estate was erected, overlooking Bartyn's Landing. Beneath the mountain, a series of tunnels and caves were excavated by the Outer Rim Oreworks corporation, many of which remained actively mined by droids and other automata for more than 500 years. The Menahuun took control of many of these caves as their own, including the cavern known as Hua'Bal. (GMR7)

Mount Ison

this immense, snow-covered mountain was the tallest peak in the North Ridge chain, found on the planet Hoth. (IWST)

Mount Meru

site of the Jedi Assembly speech on Deneba. (DA, COTF, DLS)

Mount Meru

this mountain, located on the planet Drogheda, was the site of the planet's primary mining operations. Much of the planet's economy was based on the ores and minerals mined from Mount Meru. (LTA6, MC83)

Mount Mogaar

this was one of the tallest mountain peaks found on the planet Naalol. (GMR5)

Mount Scich'tl

this worn-down peak was located on the planet Barab I. (EGP)

Mount Skar'lak

this huge, inactive volcano was located on the planet Lwhekk. (EGP)

Mount Ste'vshuulsz

this mountain, a jagged mound of shale and rock, was located on the planet Barab I. (FH2)

Mount Tantiss

this mountain, located on the planet Wayland, was considered a forbidden place by both the Psadan and Myneyrsh races. This made it the perfect location for Emperor Palpatine to hide his collection of valuable artifacts and extreme technology, including a cloaking device and the Spaarti cylinders used for cloning. The main purpose of the Mount Tantiss installation was to protect and preserve the new technologies in case of the Emperor's death. To this end, the Emperor placed a Guardian to watch over the installation. Joruu C'baoth later arrived on Wayland and defeated the Guardian, taking control of the Imperial interests there, but was unable to maintain control of the world. In the aftermath of Grand Admiral Thrawn's reign of terror, C'baoth confronted Luke Skywalker and Mara Jade within its living areas. In the battle of light and dark, Luke and Mara defeated the clone Luuke Skywalker and C'baoth, but the release of dark-side energy brought much of the mountain down in a huge explosion. Nearly everything in the storehouse was destroyed, and the mountain itself was shattered. It later collapsed under its own weight, reducing itself to a slope of rocky debris. Some years later, a clan of Noghri established a dukha at the foot of Mount Tantiss, as a reminder of the betrayal their race suffered at the hands of the Empire. (HTTE, TLC, SOP, GMR10)

Mount Thunderstone

located on the Forest Moon of Endor, this craggy mountain was believed to have been the home of the evil witch, Morag, during the height of the New Order. (ECAR)

Mount Thunderstorm

see Mount Thunderstone (MECAR)

Mount Umate

it was believed that this was one of the highest peaks found in the Manarai Mountain range, located on the planet Coruscant. It was at the peak of Umate that Monument Park was created. (CCW)

Mount Usca

located on Garos IV, this peak was the site of some of the planet's richest hibridium mines. (EGP, SWJ5)

Mount Yeroc

located on the planet Tahlboor, this mountain contained the sky cannon. The mount was controlled by the

Hobors for many generations, with only a few individuals knowing that the mountain could be used to communicate with the planet. (DRPC)

Mount Yoda

the highest mountain peak on Dagobah, it is the home of a secret Alliance outpost used by DRAPAC. It is also the site of Dagobah Tech. (MMY)

Mountain Nerf

this species of nerf evolved on the planet Fennesa, after a group of colonists brought them to the rocky world. Originally from the main stock of nerfs from the planet Alderaan, mountain nerfs on Fennesa have adapted to life in mountainous terrain over several thousand years. This led to a problem for the colonists, as the nerfs were able to hide in the crags and crevices of the mountains and were hard to capture for shearing or slaughter. The saliva of the mountain nerf contained an acidic compound that helped them digest food. This saliva was not poisonous to the colonists, but could produce a burn on the skin if not washed away. (WOTC)

Mountain Nikto

the common name of the Esral'sa'Nikto people. (GG12)

Mountain Squill

this subspecies of squill was native to the rocky hills and mountain ranges of the planet Tatooine. (GQRG)

Mountain Terrain Scout Transport

see MT-ST (PH)

Mountain Vesp

this naturally-occurring species of vesp was native to the planet Naboo. (GQRG)

Mountains of Faith

this range of mountains was located between Colony One and Colony Two, on the planet Ylesia. (TPS)

Mountains of Lightning

this crystalline rock formation, found near the city of Hweg Shul on Nam Chorios, is thought to be the source of the strange Force lightning storms which sweep the planet's valleys. Seti Ashgad maintained a residence there. (POT)

Mountains of the Exalted

this mountain range is found on the planet Ylesia. The beautiful peaks are located near Colony One, and the Altar of Promises is located at their base. They are so named because the t'landa Til priests stand with the mountains at their backs during Exaltations. (TPS)

Mourning Glory

this was the name of Grov Bricker's pirate ship, used during the height of the New Order. (PH)

Mouse Droid

another name for the smaller versions of MSE droids. These black, trapezoidal droids roll around on 6 wheels. (COJ, DF)

Mousul

this Ansionian represented his planet as a Senator to the Old Republic, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. He was one of the many supporters of the secession movement which sprang up as the Old Republic began to crumble, following the Battle of Naboo. He allied himself with Shu Mai, and agreed that Ansion would serve as the lynchpin of the secession movement. He had correctly represented his people as fractious beings who cared little for the Republic's endless laws and requirements, and believed that there was no possibility of the city dwellers agreeing to a treaty with the nomads which would keep Ansion a member of the Republic. However, he was unable to foresee the work of the Jedi Knights in persuading the two factions of Ansionians to define a common ground and sign the treaty, which allowed Ansion to remain part of the Republic. Despite this setback, Senator Mousul remained loyal to Shu Mai, who decided to maintain the Senator's support despite the loss of Ansion. (APS)

Mouth of the Ancestors

this unusual translation device was used by the Rajah of Virjuansi to speak with off-worlders who were visiting the Palace of Splendid Harmony. (SW172)

Moutil, Barr

this Imperial Navy Captain commanded the Interdictor cruiser Stellar Web, in the service of Admiral Rogriss. (SOC)

Movator

this was a moving walkway which passed through an elevated tube. Movators were used to connect sealed domes on remote worlds which had no atmosphere, or a very polluted or toxic atmosphere. However, individual movators tubes were not self-sealing. Any breach would simply trigger the blast doors at either end to close down, isolating the tube until the breach could be repaired. (GSE)

MoveSense 34

this top-of-the-line BlasTech motion sensor is often regarded as too sophisticated for its own good. When installed in a tight pattern, the MoveSense 34 will trigger during a slight breeze. This is due to quality components, but also to the fact that the MoveSense 34 monitors average air density surrounding it. (CFG)

Moving Meditation

this was a form of active meditation that was practiced by many of the Jedi Knights of the Old Republic. Rather than remaining in a single position and entering a meditative trance, those Jedi who preferred moving meditation engaged in a relaxing activity. This allowed their minds to remain active without requiring a great deal of concentration and thought. Anakin Skywalker often used this relaxing technique during the Clone Wars, turning his attention to the repair of machinery to take his mind off the struggles and ravages of the war. (RNML)

Movo Brattakin

this tall humanoid ran a criminal organization from a tall spire on Nar Shaddaa. Olag Greck worked with him for some time, prior to the Galactic Civil War. Brattakin expelled Greck from his organization, and Greck fled to Kalarba. Movo wore a tall, elaborate helmet and was draped in flowing red robes. He was killed when Olag Greck, trying to return to Nar Shaddaa with a load of stolen ash ore, was intercepted and disabled by the ship run by Unit Zed, R2-D2, and C-3PO. Greck's ship crashed into the landing bay in Movo's hideout, killing everyone in the area, including Movo himself. It was later discovered that Movo was able to place his brain inside the cranium of the droid B-9D7, and was able to continue his plots to overcom Olag Greck and Jace Forno. However, Movo and B-9D7 were destroyed by Jace Forno when they attempted to discredit Boonda the Hutt. (DRO)

Movris

this planet is located in the Noonian Sector. It was surmised that a cell of Alliance support was located there, since foodstuffs stolen from Nebula Consumables were traced to the planet. (SWJ2)

Mowa Gundeeb

Mowa was one of the New Republic scouts who served under Korren Starchaser aboard the scout ship Jedi Dreamer. One of the rare Sullustans who lacked a sense of humor, Mowa was a former mercenary whose team was wiped out by a rival gang. Mowa survived only because an Alliance X-Wing patrol happened upon the scene of the battle and rescued him. The commander of the X-Wings was Captain Starchaser, and Mowa agreed immediately to join the Alliance's starfighter corps. When Starchaser left his command to become a scout for the New Republic, Mowa followed him and became Starchaser's second-in-command. (SWJ6, SWJ13)

Mowen, Enger

this grotesquely obese human was an Imperial recruiter who worked on the Ihtorian herdship Bazaar. His favorite ploy was to plant rumors that he was actually an Alliance recruiter, and got his business associates to forward prospective recruits to him. He then turned their names over to the Imperial Security Bureau, who rounded them up and arrested them. (GA)

Mowgle

a temperate, agricultural planet which has not developed a high level of technology. (SN)

Mozos

this temperate world was the third planet in the Empress Teta System, and was orbited by a pair of moons. (PH)

Mozz Box

this was a musical instrument which was developed by the jizz wailers of the New Order. (WOTC)

MPS

manufacturers of shipboard power cores. (SCRE)

MPTL 17

this was Bryn & Gweith's mini-proton torpedo launcher, used by ground-based strongholds to defend against aerial invasion. (HAS)

Mqaaq'it

this unusual creature was bio-engineered by the Yuuzhan Vong as a form of replacement eye. The Supreme Overlord, Shimrra, was one of the most prominent members of their society to use mqaaq'it implants. The mqaaq'it implants employed by Shimrra changed colors to match his current mood. (DW, UF)

MR-9

this series of humanoid housekeeping droids was used by the Empire. They were similar in many respects to a short, simple 3PO protocol droid. (POM)

Mradhe

this is a form of (plant? animal?) which produces a slimy muck. (SOP)

Mrahash

a crimelord and authority figure from the planet Kvabja. Mara Jade claimed to have a gift from the Mrahash to Chay Praysh, in an effort to gain entrance to Praysh's fortress during her attempt to rescue Sansia Bardrin. The Drach'nma guards let her in, but Praysh put in a call to the Mrahash himself to verify the delivery. When the Mrahash claimed to have no knowledge of the gift, Praysh immediately had Mara detained. (TFNR)

M'rak, Yade

this Corellian smuggler was addicted to gambling, and spent most of his earnings betting on the pod races which were popular during the last decades of the Old Republic. Yade was forced to set up a makeshift base on the planet Tatooine, after losing most of his belongings on a bet with Gardulla the Hutt. He made his money smuggling black market weaponry. (CCG13)

Mrash

this was one of the more common names used by Trandoshan hunters. Like most Trandoshan names, it was reserved for males, but could be adopted by those rare females who became hunters. In the Trandoshan language, the name meant "gives no mercy". (GCG)

MREM-02

this was the designation of the droid known as Urahasam Moreemohtwo. (T7)

Mrid

this small beast, native to the planet Velmor, was the favored target of the royal family. Mrids were ancient natives of Velmor, and had developed fantastic survival instincts. Large numbers of mrids were bred for sport, to be released when a ceremonial hunt was held. Part of the sport was locating the small, four-legged creatures, which could hide virtually anywhere. (LTA2, MC49)

Mriss

this was the name of a single member of the Mrissi race. (TLC)

Mriss artwork

traditionally two-dimensional paintings and planics. (TLC)

Mrissi

the native sentient species of the planet Mrisst, the Mrissi cultures were noted for their primarily two-dimensional art. An avian race descended from flying animals, the Mrissi no longer have the ability to fly. They are known in the galaxy as educators and administrators, and are very knowledgeable about the politics of the known galaxy. (TLC, TTSB)

Mrisst

a planet located by the 10th Alderaanian Expedition, Mrisst is the homeworld of the Mrissi species. It was singled out by Thrawn as a feint point for the Corsucant attack. It is located in the GaTir System. The average day on Mrisst lasts about 20 standard hours, and its year encompasses 278 local days. (DFR, TLC, WG, TTSB)

Mrisst Trade and Science Academy

an institute of higher learning located on Mrisst, the MiTSA provided high-quality education to those beings who were unable to attend one of the Imperial Academies. (TTSB, WG)

Mrkeesh

this was one of the many cities found on the planet Mrlsst. (HNN4)

Mrlssese

this was the name given to the native language of the Mrlssi. (ANT)

Mrlssi

this avian race, first encountered by the Old Republic some 7,000 years before the Battle of Yavin, was native to the planet Mrlsst. They are short in stature, and walk upright. They have large, black eyes, blunt noses, and beautifully-colored feathers. However, they are not born with coloration to their feathers. Babies are born with dusky-brown plumage which developed color with age. They pride themselves on their plumage, and bright, full plumage is often regarded as idyllic. They are also a technologically advanced race, as demonstrated in the creation of the Phantom cloaking device. However, this advance also brought out the Mrlssti deviousness. They showed themselves to be manipulative and conniving in their dealing with Wedge Antilles and Rogue Squadron a few years after the Battle of Endor. Note that this species is referred to as Mrlssti in Alien Encounters. (XWPA, PGT, AE, UANT)

Mrlssi Half-hitch

this was one of the more complicated knots known in the galaxy, developed by the Mrlssi during the last decades of the Old Republic. (YDR)

Mrlsst

this swamp-covered planet was one of two worlds in the Tapani Sector of the galaxy on which humans were not the dominant species. After the fall of Emperor Palpatine at Endor, Mrlsst aligned itself with the New Republic. Wedge Antilles and his Rogue Squadron of X-Wing pilots were escorting a supply convoy to the planet when they were ambushed at Cilpar. This was the homeworld of the Mrlssi race of avians. The Rogues ended up on Mrlsst again, during the negotiations for the Phantom cloaking device. (XWRS, XWPA)

Mrlsst

this New Republic CR90 Corvette was part of the force sent to liberate the planet Ciutric from the control of Prince-Admiral Krennel. It supported the flagship Emancipator, along with several other Corvettes and a trio of Nebulon-B frigates. It took heavy fire during the battle, and was left for dead. (IR)

Mrlsst Academy

the primary institute of higher learning on Mrlsst, it was here that the Phantom cloaking device was developed. It was also here, years ago, that the Jedi Taj Junak made his final stand against Palpatine's forces. (XWPA)

Mrlsst Center for Linguistic Studies

located in the city of Mrkeesh, on Mrlsst, this university was dedicated to the study of language and its development throughout the galaxy. At the time of the Clone Wars, the university had been in operation for 800 years, cataloging and cross-translation of all forms of verbal communication in the galaxy. It had become a common training ground for diplomats and businessbeings throughout the Old Republic. (HNN4)

Mrlsst Motorworks

this Mrlssti vehicle maker produced a variety of flitters and speeders for use by the Mrlsst, including the MVD-1 flitter. (LOE)

Mroc

this Nociv was one of the elder leaders of his people, during the Galactic Civil War. (LAT3)

MRR

this was Alliance fighter pilot slang for the food they were fed after they were captured by Imperial forces. MRR actually stands for "meals ready to regurgitate." (XWES)

Mrrov

this orange-and-white-striped Togorian female was the promised mate of Muuurch. She became bored with society on Togoria, and chose to leave the planet and explore the galaxy, much to the dismay of Muuurch. Mrrov left her world, and traveled for some years before landing on Ylesia. She was pursued all the while by Muuurch. On Ylesia, Mrrov fell under the attractive spell of the t'landa Til who ran the worship of the Oneness, and was enslaved at Colony Two. After Muuurch and Han Solo were able to escape from Colony One, they rescued Mrrov from Colony Two in a daring escapade. They fled to Togoria, where Mrrov and Muuurch were eventually married. They had two cubs, a male and a female, before they rejoined Han and Bria during the Battle of Ylesia. She sustained several injuries, and lost an eye, in the battle, but was otherwise unharmed. (TPS, RD)

MRX-BR Pacifier

this exploration starship, designed and manufacturer by Sydon Vehicle Works, was so well-armed that it could be classified as a light fighter. It measured 25 meters in length, and was capable of hyperspace travel. Minimum armament included a pair of proton torpedo launchers and three laser cannons. During the New Order, it had been the Empire's scout ship of choice, especially when additional weaponry allowed it quickly subjugate any new worlds it encountered. It required a pilot to fly, and could carry up to three passengers and 10 cubic meters of cargo. The ship's sensors were capable of counting the leaves on a single tree from orbit, and its weapons systems were tightly-controlled by the ship's onboard computers. All of this meant that the bat-shaped Pacifier was equally useful as a contact ship and as an assault vessel. Note that No Disintegrations denotes this craft as the MBR-RX Pacifier. (GG6, GG8, VOF, ND)

Mrykos

this is one of the three barren moons of Atraken. (PG2)

MS/8

this was the designation of the morning work shift at Santhe/Sienar Technologies. (ML)

MS-133

this Imperial research team was working on the planet Aaris III during the early years of the New Republic, trying to unlock the secrets of the ancient Aaris civilization. They had discovered the Aaris Artifact in the Place of Kastays, and was trying to discern its operations when the primitive Aaris began attacking them. Their SOS calls were answered by the crew of the FarStar. (DARK)

MS-15

this diamond boron missile was developed by Sienar Fleet Systems. The MS-15 wasn't a weapon itself, but was a high-strength carrier for a variety of explosive warheads. The diamond boron construction allowed the MS-15 to penetrate virtually any starship hull. However, these devices were prohibitively expensive, and even the Empire gave up on using them. (EGW)

MS-19

this was the codename of a Siener Fleet Systems warhead, with the capability to pass through most forms of shielding to strike at its target. The MS-19 was self-guiding, and was sure to give the struggling Empire a chance to defeat the New Republic. Information on the MS-19 had been passed from the Squib trio of Grees, Sligh, and Emala to the Invisible Shell. Ludlo Lebauer, acting chairman of the Invisible Shell, then made sure that the information was passed onto the New Republic Intelligence agency. Unfortunately for the Squibs, Ludlo discovered that the MS-19 never existed, and that they had been passing him false information for months. Angry that the Squibs had used him to make a quick profit, Lebauer had Grees captured and frozen in carbonite. Ludlo later revealed to Leia Organa Solo that the information on the MS-19 was bogus. (SWI67)

M-s3

Seinar Fleet System's Concussion Missile Launching system, used on the TIE Bomber. (SCRE)

MSD-32

this was the designation of Merr-Sonn Munition's handheld disruptor pistol. Like other disruptor weapons, the MSD-32 fired an energy blast that caused the target's molecules to become excited and lose cohesion, leading to the utter annihilation of the target. This disintegrative affect made them illegal in most parts of the galaxy, although the MSD-32 was actually commissioned for use by Imperial agents. Because of its destructive capability, the MSD-32 was a heavily-guarded secret, and the Imperial Security Bureau spent a great deal of time tracking down individual weapons that were lost or stolen. Eventually, the effort to conceal the existence of the MSD-32 became too great, and the Empire ordered its production stopped. All records of the MSD-32 were erased from Merr-Sonn's computers, and individuals assigned to the development and manufacture were either executed or sent to the Spice Mines of Kessel. (FOP, AEG)

MSD-36

this was a model of heavy disruptor pistol produced by Merr-Sonn. (WSV)

MSE-15

a series of cleaning droids. (COJ)

MSE-5

this is a general-purpose droid produced prior to the introduction of the MSE-6. (GCQ)

MSE-6

Rebaxan Colmuni's general purpose droid, the MSE-6 was heavily advertised and promoted in over 400 sectors. While many trillions were sold throughout the galaxy, billions were returned because their emissions were similar to those of various species of pests. The galaxy generally detested the little droids, and Rebaxan faced bankruptcy. The company ended up selling them to the Empire at a small loss. The Empire used these small, 10-inch-tall droids to fill the need for cheap, reliable labor. These boxy little droids, known as Mouse Droids because of their size, were easily programmed to perform class-three tasks, such as message delivery, in nearly every Imperial outpost, including the Death Star. (ISB, SW, TLC)

MSE-6-E629L

this messenger droid was part of the pool maintained aboard the Iron Fist. It was also one of the first droids reprogrammed by the astromech Tonin, on the orders of Lara Notsil. MSE-6-E619L often assumed the identity of MSE-6-P303K, which Tonin use for other purposes. (SOC)

MSE-6-P303K

this messenger droid was part of the pool maintained aboard the Iron Fist. It was also one of the first droids reprogrammed by the astromech Tonin for subversive activities, on the orders of Lara Notsil. MSE-6-P303K was instrumental in acquiring holocam access to parts of the ship, as well as obtaining information on the Iron Fist's schematics. With these schematics, Lara discovered the secret labs Zsinj maintained to house the work of the Binning Biomedical team on board the ship. (SOC)

MSE-9

a series of general purpose droids that have often served as security guards. (SN)

MSE-X-PR6

this excentric droid was, at one time, a standard mouse droid assigned to the Imperial research base on Binaros. It was programmed to shuttle messages between the research personnel, so it's skill matrix was removed and replaced with a volcabulator. The droid's holographic projector and manipulator arm were removed to allow for several storage spaces for datapads and other objects. Because of the droid's many modifications, it developed an enjoyment of petty theft and the acquisition of shiny objects. Among the objects MSE-X-PR6 collected was a thermal detonator and an artifact recovered by the research team from their temple base. (KO)

MSF

this variant of the MSE-6 mouse droid was produced by the droid manufacturing center on Uffel, during the early years of the New Order. The MSF was given programming to allow it to perform minor repairs, and it was given a small repulsorlift engine to allow it to maneuver in tight spaces. The profits from the sale of MSF droids allowed QS-2D to buy out Riboga the Hutt and take control of Uffel outright. (LFC)

MSF-F2

this droid was the original prototype of the MSF-series line produced on the moon of Uffel. MSF-F2 was on the only type of its kind kept on Uffel by QS-2D, and it was programmed to follow any visitors to the moon in order to keep QS-2D aware of their activities. (LFC)

M'shento'su'Nikto

one of the five Nikto races, the M'shento'su'Nikto were commonly known as the Southern Nikto. These Nikto had yellow scales, and lacked the facial horns of the other four species. Instead, the Southern Nikto had a multitude of breather tubes which protruded from the back of their skull, which acted as ultrasonic sensory organs. (GG12, EGA)

M'shinni

this strange race of humanoids is characterized by their outer coating of plant material. They are often referred to as Mossies. The M'shinni people (an individual in called a M'shinn) are skilled botanists and traders, and live in close-knit families. The M'shinni plant-like skin covers all but the palms of their hands and the soles of their feet. It ranges in color from pale yellows through vibrant greens to dark emeralds, depending on the type of star they live near. The plant covering begins to wither when natural sunlight is not available, and will die completely after ten sunless days. This plant material lives in a symbiotic relationship with the M'shinni flesh, feeding upon sweat and dead skin cells while supplying nutrients and moisture. M'shinni give birth is done by cloning cells of the female's body. This parthenogenic reproduction has instilled a strong sense of family ties in the M'shinni, who show an unassailable allegiance to their own familial Rootline. The M'shinni evolved on the planet Genassa, but have spread throughout the galaxy with the discovery of the hyperdrive. They have long been members of the Old Republic, providing their unique terraforming practices to the Republic in return for technologies they do not possess. However, the M'shinni were also opportunistic, and were known to have driven the Skirlling off their homeworld in order to turn it into an agricultural planet. They tried to remain neutral during the Galactic Civil War, dealing with the Empire at arm's length while secretly aiding the Alliance. (GG12, ANT)

M'shinni Sector

this area of the galaxy is located along the Celanon Spur. (GG12)

M'sluss

this name was commonly given to Quarren males, and meant "good-humored" or "comical". (GCG)

M-SMS

this was the designation of the Merr-Sonn Missile System developed for use by Imperial rocket troopers. The M-SMS was a simplified version of the basic rocket launcher, lacking any form of homing or heat-seeking capabilities. Because the weapon had to be carried while in flight, it was armed with just three missiles to cut down on weight. (WOTC)

MSS-C-342A

this was Loronar's most popular Corporate-class modular unit, which provided a pre-selected configuration of the most useful outpost station elements. It included a landing bay, command center, garage, airlocks, and lab space. (HAS)

Msst

this planet is seemingly named for the dense mists that shroud its surface. This Rim world was a major Imperial stronghold until it was abandoned after the truce at Bakura. Much of the planet's ecology was destroyed by the Empire, which ravaged Msst's crystal swamps to generate credits. (TNR)

MST-3K

a container group. This is a reference to the Comedy Channel's Mystery Science Theatre 3000 television show. (TIE)

mstrslcr

this was the handle of one of the many slicers who first discovered Tiny F's message of an impending attack by the Thaereian Military on the people of the Cularin System, during the early stages of the Clone Wars. Many months later, mstrslcr claimed to have intercepted a transmission from the Jedi Temple on Coruscant, bound for the Almas Academy. Although unsure of what to do with the message, mstrslcr placed an unedited copy on the newsnets of Cularin for all to see and read. He claimed that he had no love for the Jedi Knights, but also that he was concerned about the transmission's authenticity. These conflicting ideals made him pause, albeit for a couple of days, before releasing it to the newsnets. The transmission itself was damning to the Almas Academy, citing "lack of leadership presence, inconsistent visioning, and policy avoidance" as the key reasons the school should be closed down, and all personnel reassigned to other locations. (LFCW)

MSW-9

this was the designation of Xana Exotic Arms' molecular stiletto. The blade on this weapon measured thirty centimeters in length when extended, and was made up of a mono-molecular material that was fragile but extremely deadly. (ROE, AEG) designation of a model of dropship manufactured by Meller & Dax for the Empire. This 52.5-meter craft was armed with a single light laser cannon. Before each drop, the MT/191 is coated with VACX, which provides an added layer of protection during atmospheric entry. The VACX is burned off, and needs to be replaced before each drop. It requires a single pilot, but can transport up to 160 troops. (ISB)

MT/191

MT-16

a modified version of the Incom T-16, built by the New Republic Engineering Corporation, the MT-16 was a combat speeder. (HTSB)

MT-5

a hyperdrive unit manufactured on Kalarba. (DRO)

MT-AT

these Mountain Terrain Armored Transports were developed by the Empire on the planet Carida. They were first used against the New Republic by Furgan of Carida during his assault on Anoth. Derived from a smaller vehicle known as the MT-ST, the MT-AT was a late-model Imperial walker which had been tested on Carida for some time. The MT-AT had eight legs with highly-articulated joints, and clawed "feet" that employ mild explosives to better grip the terrain. It was deployed from a capital ship in a cocoon-shaped drop ship, which protected the MT-AT by enclosing it in bistate gel. The gel was fluid during descent, which helps dissipate the frictional heat of atmospheric entry. The gel was hardened by the dropship's droid brain just before impact, cushioning the MT-AT. When the dropship was safely landed, the cocoon cracked open to allow the MT-AT to emerge. The abdomen of the MT-AT had three sections: a forward cockpit, a middle drive pod, and a bulbous rearward cargo section. Also nicknamed spider walkers, they could climb an almost-vertical mountain face. The body and legs were studded with laser weapons. (COTF, EGV, PH)

M-TD

this is a small, face-shaped, miniature translation droid built by C-3PO and Chewbacca to help Chewie's nephew, Lowbacca, communicate with the students and instructors at Luke Skywalker's Jedi Academy on Yavin 4. When Lowie was kidnapped by Tamith Kai, she had Em Teedee reprogrammed to spout Imperial doctrine whenever he talked with Lowie. The little droid was quickly repaired by Jaina Solo and Lowie upon his return to the Jedi Academy, and given the ability to communicate in six unique languages. As the other student on Yavin 4 learned more and more of the Wookiee language, M-TD's primary function became less important. However, with the help of other students, he obtained new programming and learned new ways to be of assistance. M-TD proved useful in starship navigation and repair, as well as communications and remote slicing. (HTF, SA, DK, SHA)

M-TD Droid

this was a series of repulsor-equipped translation droid. They were considerably less expensive than a protocol droid, but had a limited translation package. (SWRPG)

MTS-56T

this was a model of power pitons produced in the Tapani Sector, during the height of the New Order, for use by mountaineers and thrill-seekers. (LOE)

MT-ST

developed on the planet Carida, the Mountain Terrain Scout Transport was the design basis for the MT-AT. Measuring 7.2 meters in length and resembling a huge, six-legged insect, the MT-ST was given the name "bug walker" by the Imperial soldiers who tested it, during the height of the New Order. Capable of speeds reaching 100 kilometers per hour over flat terrain, the MT-ST was actually designed for moving over and around rugged, mountainous territory. The six articulated legs gave the MT-ST amazing traction and maneuverability. It required a single driver to operate, and was armed with a turret-mounted, twin blaster cannon. (PH)

MTT Large Transport

this Baktoid Armor Workshop Multi Troop Transport (MTT) craft was designed for the Trade Federation's droid army. Piloted by two command droids and two co-pilots, the 31-meter-long ship had a bulbous front end which opened to allow the deployment of a full complement of 112 battle droids, which were carried in folding racks. The MTT stood just over 13 meters tall, and could attain a maximum ground speed of 35 kilometers per hour. It was lightly armed, with four 17-kv anti-personnel laser cannons mounted on a pair of turrets at the front of the craft, but it was heavily armored to protect against attack. Like all Federation craft, the MTT was remotely controlled by an orbiting droid control ship. (X1, IG1)

Mu Fiev

this was the name of a noted Blood Carver, famous in the history of the planet Batorine. (UANT)

Mu Tree

native to the moon of Isamu, these trees were unusual in that individual trees made love to each other at night. Two trees would twine together, exchanging pollen and reproducing their species. (SWJ15)

MU-12

this spindly, humanoid housekeeping droid was owned by Jango Fett during the last years of the Old Republic. Jango employed the droid to tend his young son, Boba, while he was away from home on bounty hunts. MU-12 was also something of an administrative assistant to Jango, accepting incoming messages and screening poor clients or fake bounties. (JF)

Mu-2 Long Range Shuttle

a variant of the Sienar Fleet Systems' Mu-class shuttle, the Mu-2 was developed to transport armaments and supplies. (OE)

Mu-3 Shuttle

this Sienar Fleet Systems shuttle was the third variant of the successful Mu-class troopship and was created to drop troopers whenever stealth was not required. It measured 20 meters in length, and was capable of hyperspatial travel. Each Mu-3 shuttle was armed with a pair of front-mounted laser cannons. (ROE)

Muawa

this was an alien word which translated into Basic as "no." (GMR10)

Mubbin

a Whiphid smuggler who claimed to have found a "secret" in Plett's House on Belsavis. He disappeared shortly after. (COJ)

Mubs

this ancient Quarren surname meant "keeper of spears". Like many Quarren surnames, it could be traced back to the time of the Battle of Ruusan. (GCG)

Muchardis Mulaxis

this Ayrro heirarch served as the chairbeing of Tripartite Lines, based on the planet Ovise III, during the early years of the New Republic. Mulaxis was also sworn in as Moddell Sector's Senator to the New Republic, although his only trip to Coruscant was for his swearing-in ceremony. (GMR9)

Muckracker

see Muckraker (VD3)

Muckraker

this was the more common name of the crab droid that was developed by the Separatists during the height of the Clone Wars. (SWI81)

Muckwalker

native to an unspecified swamp world, the muckwalker was domesticated by the natives for use as a mount. Muckwalkers congregate in large herds, using their numbers for protection against predators. When attacked, a muckwalker used its heavy tail to lash out at its attacker. Despite their name, muckwalkers were better swimmers than they were runners, a trait which stemmed from their evolution in the swampy environment. These creatures also had excellent night vision, and used a form of echolocation to augment their perception. (ANT)

Muckworm

this large annelid was known to eat raw forms of spice. (GOF1)

Mu-class Shuttle

this series of Imperial troop ships was designed and manufactured by Sienar Fleet Systems. The Mu-class was designed from the basic form of the Lambda-class shuttle, with the upper wing removed and the fuselage expanded for passenger and cargo space. It measured 20 meters in length, and was often armed with a pair of laser cannons. The basic Mu-class design could carry up to 6 passengers and 100 metric tons of cargo. Several variants of the basic Mu-class design were developed, each with a different mission profile. (ROE, OE)

Mucous Salamander

a pink-colored, amphibious creature that was formless in water, the mucous salamander was found on Yavin 4. When the salamander was exposed to dry conditions, its outer membranes harden, forming the creature into a salamander-like shape. The hard, outer casing acted like an insect's exoskeleton, allowing the shapeless mass inside to maneuver by contracting and expanding against the outer membranes. When exposed to water, however, the molecular structure of the skin "loosened," becoming amorphous and giving the creature its mucous-like appearance. (HTF, WSW)

Mucus Trees

unusual trees which excrete a yellowish ooze which serves to disseminate their pollen. (JS)

Mud Crab

this crustacean was native to the planet Vernet. (SWJ15)

Mud Crawler

see Sid'Han. (POC)

Mud Puddle, The

this cantina, located on the planet Ord Mantell, was located in a building that once housed a landspeeder repair garage. It got its name from its location, on the edge of a small pond that partially blocked the cantina's only entrance. Patrons were often forced to get their feet wet in order to enter the building. (WOA29)

Mud Sloth

the name given by Luke Skywalker to Akanah's Verpine Adventurer, the Mud Sloth was a Model 201, Production Group E starship. Originally owned by Andras Pell under an unknown name, the ship was passed into the possession of Akanah after Pell's death. Akanah had the ship extensively modified when she began her search for the Fallanassi, stopping on the planet Golkus to allow Talon Kaarde's people to perform much of the work. Kaarde's technicians added a Smuggler's Kit to the hyperspace transponder, and the ship's hyperdrive motivator was programmed so that it wouldn't kick in until the ship had cleared a planet's Flight Control Zone. (BTS, SOL)

Mud Station

this was the name of the city which sprang up around the primary starport on the planet Shador. (SL)

Mud-baller

this is scout slang for anyone who lives on the surface of a planet. (GG8)

Mudcrawler

this creature is protected by a thick, spiked shell. When flipped over onto its back, the spikes severely hamper its ability to return to an upright position. The mudcrawler usually flounders on its back until it dies of starvation or thirst. (SOL)

Mudfoot

Imperial military slang for the infantry which accompanies an AT-AT walker. (SWJ9)

Mudlath

this man was a Captain in the Aphran Planetary Exosecurity force, during the years surrounding the Battle of Coruscant. Captain Mudlath was on duty when Han Solo and his wife, Leia Organa Solo, arrived on Aphran IV in an effort to establish a resistance cell on the planet. Mudlath immediately had them imprisoned, on charges that they were subverting the security of Aphran IV by being recognized on the planet, when they were obviously targets of the Yuuzhan Vong. He then alerted his Peace Brigade superiors, hoping to win favor with them by turning in the Solos. (EL2)

Mudman

an amorphous creature composed of mud that inhabited the planet Roon, mudmen were deemed semi-sentient by many xenobiologists. Comprised almost entirely of loose, wet soil, mudmen could be broken apart into smaller versions of themselves with a strong spray of water. In fact, some amoral beings captured the tiny mudmen and kept them in glass jars, to be sold as pets. (DCAR, EGP)

Mudmauler

see Swamp Crawler (SME)

Mudmub

this Sullustan bounty hunter was among the group that agreed to help Risso Nu eliminate Boba Fett on Ma'ar Shaddam. Mudmub and his Rodian partner were eliminated by Fett when he captured the Sullustan and strapped a number of explosive devices to his chest. Fett then shoved Mudmub into a room with his partner just before the explosives went off, killing both bounty hunters in a gory mess. (T18)

Mudon

this Ithorian surname was believed to mean "forest warden" - or, more specifically, an individual who dealt with animal control - according to historian who studied the Ithorian race. (GCG)

Mudopterist

this was the title given to any being who studied avian insects. (MJH)

Mudwasp

this was a species of flying insect that lived in huge swarms. (TF)

Mudwater

this was a slang word used by smugglers to describe any cloudy, gritty beverage. (TG)

Mueb

this was a common female name given to Sullustan females. It meant "tearful" in the Sullustan language. (GCG)

Muehling

this alias was used by Mara Jade Skywalker, during her attempt to locate Thrynni Vae on Duro and determine what was going on with the refugees who were displaced by the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Baroness Muehling was a native of Kuat, who wanted to meet with the SELCORE representatives - mainly, Leia Organa-Solo - and discuss possible assistance. Baroness Muehling was accompanied by her servant Emlee, who was actually Jaina Solo. She later used the Muehling alias to meet with Dassid Cree'ar, thereby exposing the scientist as the Yuuzhan Vong executor Nom Anor. (BP) meaning "melancholy", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Mufrenes

Muftak

this Talz was orphaned at Docking Bay 12 of the Mos Eisley spaceport on Tatooine. He grew up among the cantina's regular, local customers, performing odd jobs to make a living. He always knew that he was different from almost every other race that passed through Mos Eisley, but he couldn't learn who or what he was. He searched out information from his friend, Momaw Nadon, but Nadon had never seen a Talz before. In time, Muftak found and adopted the abandoned Chadra-Fan female named Kabe, and the two are nearly inseparable. Together they are known as pickpockets and thieves, with Muftak providing the brawn, while Kabe provides the brains. Muftak and Kabe decided to rob Jabba the Hutt's Mos Eisley townhouse just after the Millennium Falcon blasted out of Mos Eisley, and were rewarded when they were able to rescue a droid from Barid Mesoriaam, who was being tortured by Jabba for information on the Alliance. Muftak and Kabe barely escaped, but were paid 15,000 credits and a pair of travel vouchers signed by Grand Moff Tarkin. They fled Tatooine, traveling to both Alzoc III and Chad before visiting other planets. During this time, Muftak wrote his autobiography, Sands in Winter. Although uncredited, Muftak was played by Laine Liska in Star Wars. (SW, SCRE, TME, SWDB)

the title given to the religious ruler of the planet Gaurick. (CSA)

Mug

a name used to describe any foolish being. (RP)

Mugaar

this Mid Rim world was known as the homeworld of the Mugaari race. (WOA33)

Mugaar

this was the specialized language used by the Mugaari. (CCW)

Mugaari

this was a race of heavy-browed, lantern-jawed humanoids which were native to the Javin Sector of the galaxy. This area of the galaxy used to be known simply as Mugaari Space, until the Old Republic began settling planets in the neighboring Anoat Sector. The Mugaari were native to the planet Mugaar, and eventually colonized ten other planets, including Javin. Many people associated the Mugaari with pirates, and for good reason. As a people, the gray-skinned Mugaari resented the rest of the galaxy for isolating them, believing that the decline of their own culture was caused by the apathy of the Galactic Senate. Despite an uneasy truce with the human race, the Mugaari continued to operate pirate fleets in the Tungra Sector. With the ascension to power of Emperor Palpatine, the Mugaari threw their support to the Alliance, although they took no official position during the Galactic Civil War. Their base was destroyed in an Imperial raid shortly after the Battle of Hoth. (TIE, CCW, WOA33)

Mugaari Space

this collection of eleven star systems was controlled by the Mugaari. It was located along the border of the Mid Rim and Wild Space, and contained the planets Javin, Aztubek, and High Chunah. After the Old Republic began to settle and colonize worlds in these systems, Mugaari Space was absorbed into an area later called the Javin Sector. (WOA33)

Muggask

this was one of the more common names used by Trandoshan hunters. Like most Trandoshan names, it was reserved for males, but could be adopted by those rare females who became hunters. In the Trandoshan language, the name meant "pummels with his fists". (GCG)

Mugruebe

native to the planet Agamar, this creature resembled a large frog, with huge rear legs and tiny front legs. The natives of Agamar considered the flesh to be a delicacy, and used it in a stew-like meal favored by Keyan Farlander. (XW, EGP)

Mugshub

Gamorrean matriarch of the Klagg tribe on Pzob. (COJ)

Mugwump

this was a Khoan term of derision. (SL)

Muh

this Gamorrean word was used to describe any being who was not a native of Gamorr. It translated to "outlander." (SWJ14)

M'uhk'gfa

this was the name given to the battle armor assembled by a Gamorrean warrior. Each plate of m'uhk'gfa armor was supposed to be retrieved from the battlefield on which a warrior distinguished himself, serving as a collection of trophies taken from their enemies. However, after the decay of the Old Republic and the rise of the Empire, many Gamorreans chose to purchase pre-fabricated armor in order to better protect themselves against blasters and other energy weapons. (UANT)

Muhndee

this form of Nimbanese competition was developed in an effort to avoid all-out warfare. Each Nimbanese clan would present the others with a puzzle which required complex thinking to solve within a year. These yearly muhndees kept the ancient Nimbanese busy working on puzzles rather than on weapons and warfar. The development of muhndees over the centuries has given rise to a healthy bureaucracy among the nimbanese, as each clan has to keep track of the paperwork involved with solving many of the puzzles. There have also emerged electoral muhndees geared toward determining the best candidates for political positions. (GG12)

Muja

this flowering tree was native to the planet Gala. The tree produced a tasty fruit which was often used in muffins. (MOC)

Muja Juice

this juice was created from the berries of the muja tree. (DH)

Muja Muffin

a breakfast pastry once favored by the Daan, muja muffins originated on the planet Gala. (DOD)

Muja, Kav

this colorful smashball player was one of the galaxy's best-known players at the time of the Clone Wars. Muja was also known to be xenophobic, and often complained that the league's allowance of non-human players was contrary to the sport's roots and objectives. Just before the onset of the Clone Wars, Muja was playing for the Elom Ranphyx team when they were soundly beaten by the Corellian Dreadnaughts, which had admitted several non-human players to its team. His tirade against smashball's leaders and directors was as much a political statement as it was a personal one. (HNN4)

Mujmai linan

this Yuuzhan Vong Lieutenant once proposed that the planet Kubindi could be taken with just half the usual number of coralskipppers. Unfortunately for him, Kyp's Dozen was able to hold off the reduced force, allowing all spaceworthy ships to flee Kubindi. Tsavong Lah, upon learning of the loss of so many potential sacrifices, had linan executed. (BP)

Mukit

this Ubese criminal was one of many who went to work for Ghez Hoka, when the crimelord took control of the planet Qiilura during the last years of the Old Republic. Mukit was forced to clean up the remains of his fellow Ubese, Cailshh, after Cailshh was beheaded for disobeying Hoka's orders. (RCHC)

Mulack

a alien creature. (RD)

Mulako Corporation

this corporation was set up on a huge comet that wandered through an uncharted system every hundred years or so. They stripped the outer layers of primordial ice off the comet as it passed through its orbit, and distilled it for sale as a gourmet water to self-important chefs and dignitaries. When the comet neared the star it orbited, it was also used as a resort. The corporation had dug out luxurious living spaces deep within the comet's core, and opened them to the well-paying public twice each orbit. The first time came as the comet neared the star; the second came after the comet had passed close to the star and was on its way out of the system. During these two, three-month periods, the evaporating elements in the comet created a breathable environment for non-workers. When the comet was close to the star, the environment was too hot and the gases too plentiful. When it passed beyond the star, the comet was too cold. During these times, the comet is only inhabited by the workers of the Mulako Corporation. (DS)

the larvae of this creature are considered a delicacy by the Hutts, and they are served with fregon-blood sauce. (RD)

Mule

an Imperial heavy lifter group assigned to outpost D-34, just after the Battle of Hoth. (TIE)

MULE Droid

see Mechanical Universal Labor Eliminating Droid. (EGD, GG8)

Mulissiki

this species of small scavenger was native to the planet Cularin. In nature, mulissiki lived by eating the refuse and waste of their environment. The Tarasin of the planet used controlled populations of mulissiki to keep their villages clean. However, uncontrolled populations often formed in the true cities of Cularin, and the mulissiki were forced to scavenge anything in order to survive. The average mulissiki stood about a meter tall at the shoulder, and was covered with yellow- and green-striped fur. The nose of a mulissiki was prehensile, and used for searching for its food. The long tail of the mulissiki was seemingly useless, and simply dragged behind the creature as it moved. (LFC, EOS)

Mulk

this was one of the more common surnames used by the Duros people. Like all such names, Mulk was used only for official business, to indicate one individual from another when in the presence of non-Duros. This name literally meant "speaker" or "politician". (GCG)

Mull

this was the term used to describe a group of cochlera individuals. The average mull contained thirty and fifty cochlera at a time. (WOTC)

Mullanite Sculpture

an artform which uses specially-constructed lattices on which grow creeping vines. The lattices allow the vines to grow into many beautiful shapes and images. (HSL)

Mullee

this Huttese verb translated roughly into Basic as "to pay for." (E1A14)

Mulleshar, Troye

this man was a member of the Blue Guard, during the months leading up the Clone Wars. Shortly before the vote on the Military Creation Act, he was knocked unconscious by a horde of rioters who were protesting the possible passage of the Act. His fellow officers managed to extricate him from the mob. (HNN5)

Mullinine

a metallic substance which holds an edge extremely well. (TME)

Mullinore

this Imperial Navy Captain was a classmate of Admiral Daala on Carida. A native of Taanab, Mullinore grew up in a strict family and learned to be formal and proper in all his actions. He was assigned as the commander of the Basilisk, in support of the Maw Installation. (DA, JASB)

Muln, Garen

this restless boy was one of Obi-Wan Kenobi's friends, during the time he trained at the Jedi Temple on Coruscant. The two boys fought over the most trivial things, but maintained a strong friendship. Because they were of similar size, Garen was used as Obi-Wan's double during the search for Xanatos. Xanatos had infiltrated the Jedi Temple with the intent of stealing a cache of vertex crystals and destroying the Temple, but Obi-Wan and Qui-Gon Jinn managed to thwart the attempt. Garen later trained as a starfighter pilot, in an effort to augment the ranks of pilots among the Jedi. Garen was among the first Jedi chosen to train at Clee Rhara's starfighter facility on Centax 2, later apprenticed with Clee Rhara as a Padawan. Despite their efforts, the starfighter training facility eventually closed its doors, but Garen and Clee went on to have distinguished careers among the Jedi. Just prior to the Clone Wars, Muln was elevated to the rank of Jedi Knight, and accompanied Siri Tachi on a mission to the Xanlanner System. While en route, they discovered Obi-Wan's distress signal from TY44, and helped him reach Vanqor to rescue his apprentice, Anakin Skywalker. (RF, HP, CT, JAD, JQ7)

Muloha, Ingah

this woman served the Empire at the Tatooine garrison, in the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. She served under Lieutenant Harburik during her tenure on Tatooine. Her troopers were the first Imperials to discover the hidden base of Momaw Nadon near Mos Eisley, but she was unsure what to do with the information. She set out on her own, working with Centa Sonhan to pursue the Ithorian. They hoped to destroy Nadon's small grove of bafforr trees as an example to any Alliance sympathizers on Tatooine. She was delighted when the Gamorrean and his thugs captured Momaw Nadon, but she was killed when a team of Alliance agents captured Sonhan's sail barge and rescued the Ithorian. (WOA5)

Multi-Frequency Targeting Acquisition System

known as an MFTAS, this part of a stormtrooper's helmet provided assistance in acquiring targets in conditions of low visibility and at long ranges. (FOP, SWJ1)

Multifrequency Targeting and Acquisition System known as an MFTAS, this sensor system is part of a stormtrooper's standard armor. It is centrally located in the helmet, and allows the trooper to "see" in darkness, smoke, rain, and other blind situations. (SF)

Multi-Motion

this computer framework, pioneered by Holo3-Graphics, allows the programmer to manipulate three-dimensional data in a realtime environment. (CFG)

MultiNode Comlink

this communications link was manufactured by BCC during the Galactic Civil War. (ROE)

MultiPack

this is the term used to describe any carrying case used by a scout or explorer to transport their personal effects. A good multipack can hold medpacs, glow rods, ration kits, breath masks and/or aquatic rebreathers, a ThinHut, a recharging unit, a HydroExtractor, cutting blasters and/or weapons, and a datapad. (GG8)

Multipede

this many-legged insect was native to the planet Corellia. It was said that the multipede's simple brain was incapable of doing anything but placing one tiny foot in front of the other. It ever were to think about something else, it would be unable to continue walking. (E3N)

Multisensor Airflow Analyzer

a device which measures the direction and force of air flowing around a spaceship's hull. Useable only in atmospheres, the device is useful for detecting homing beacons or detonation devices attached to the outside of a ship. They work best with smooth-hulled ships. (DFR)

Multi-Sentient Unarmed Combat Rounds

this sport was essentially a regulated form of multi-species, unarmed combat. (TTSB)

Multitool

a compact hand tool which contains a number of useful parts, including a drill, a lens, and other implements. (CS)

Multitude, The

this was a religious reference used by the Fia of Galantos, used to describe the heavenly appearance of the Koornacht Cluster. (FH1)

Multiweapon

any form of hand-held weapon which can perform many different tasks. Most multiweapons can act as a knife, club, or garrote, depending on its configuration. (ROE)

Multopo

an alien race native to the planet Baralou. They have been at war with their neighbors, the Krikthasi, for most of their history. The average Multopo was a tall, muscular amphibian with a humanoid appearance. Attached to their arms and legs were thick membranes which assisted them in swimming. Their heads were conical in shape, with a rounded cranium and a pointed snout. Three pairs of gills were located just below their jawbone. Aside from their feud with the Krikthasi, the Multopos were a curious people who adapted to technology with ease. The Multopos especially disliked the Krikthasi after the Krikthasi developed a taste for Multopo eggs. (PG1, AE)

Multycorp

this was one of the largest corporations based on the planet Vorzyd 4, during the decades leading up to the Battle of Naboo. The corporation's headquarters were bombed by the Freelies, at the height of the youth organization's industrial sabotage. The plan had been to explode the bomb at night, but Flip decided to detonate it in the morning, when the adult Vorzydiaks were arriving for work. Thanks to Tray, Grath and Obi-Wan Kenobi were able to warn the adults of the bomb and evacuate nearly every Vorzydiak in the building. Unfortunately, Flip was caught in the blast and was killed. (TTW)

mum

this Shyriiwook word was used as the suffix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "claw", "climber", or "tool". It could be attached to a prefix by itself, or combined with other suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Mumbin

this name, which meant "stormy", was common among Gungan males. (GCG)

Mumbri Storve Cantina

this seedy tavern was the location where Aves intercepted Wedge Antilles, Derek "Hobbie" Klivian, and Wes Janson just prior to the Battle of Bilbringi. Aves more than likely saved the New Republic pilots from being discovered by Imperial agents, who were searching for clues as to the Republic's intentions to attack either Tangrene or Bilbringi in order to obtain a crystal gravfield trap receptor. (TLC)

Mummergy

an aromatic plant that Wuher uses to create the perfect liqueur for Jabba the Hutt. (TME)

Mummers

this gang was formed on the planet Naboo during the height of the New Order. (GQRG)

Mummery

Munch-fungus

this edible form of mold was found within the caves of the planet Ryloth, and was the basis for many Twi'leki dishes. (PSPG)

Mundi

this was a common component used to create the names given to Cerean males. In general, male Cereans given an individual name, which is added to the names of their father and grandfather. Complete male names are arranged based on harmony and cadence, but the literal meanings are arranged to ensure proper descriptions. The name Mundi indicated an individual's intelligence, strong will, or mental power. (GCG)

Mundis

a foodstuff grown on Cilpar. (XWRS)

Mung-tee

this casino game was played with a set of metallic balls. (BF4)

MuniCenter

the social and cultural center of Plawal. (COJ)

Munificent-class Star Frigate

this 825-meter-long frigate was designed and manufactured by Hoersch-Kessel Drive and Gwori Revolutionary Industries during the height of the Clone Wars. The Munificent-class frigate was originally commissioned by the InterGalactic Banking Clan to protect planets on which the IBC had erected vaults and storehouses, as well as to harass those planetary governments that owed the IBC debts. After the Battle of Geonosis, these vessels served the Confederacy of Independent Systems as combat communications platforms, coordinating fleet movements and navigation across vast distances. The Munificent-class frigate was armed with a pair of heavy turbolaser cannons, two long-range ion cannons, twenty-six twin turbolaser cannons, twenty light turbolaser turrets, and thirty-eight point-defense laser cannons. A crew of 200 droids was required to operate the vessel, which could also accommodate up to 150,000 deactivated battle droids. A Class 1 hyperdrive gave the Munificent-class frigate a range of some 150,000 light-years, allowing it to move into and out of battle zones with ease. Separatist engineers added huge hyperwave transceivers and communications jamming systems to the Munificent-class frigate, allowing it to broadcast battle plans to other CIS vessels while jamming the communications and targetting systems of Republic ships. Two separate reactors provided power to the many shipboard systems, and could operate independently if one was damaged or forced off-line. The Needle-shaped Munificent-class frigate had an array of four wings at the aft of the vessel. The larger, horizontal wings provided stability, while the shorter, vertical wings housed the hyperdrive systems. Interestingly enough, the Munificent-class frigate lacked any sort of hangar or docking bays, although droid starfighters could be held in a cargo area if needed. (X3)

Munk

this was a Stassian swear word, indicating a form of excrement. (SWJ6)

Munlali Mafir

this planet was noted for its rugged landscape and thin, though breathable, atmosphere. The homeworld of the Krizlaw race, Munlali Mafir was one of several planets investigated by Luke Skywalker for clues as to the location of Zonama Sekot. (FH2)

Munn City

this was the financial and political capital of the planet Muunilinst. (HNN4)

Munten

this grumpy man was in charge of security for Finis Valorum, during Valorum's tenure as Chancellor of the Old Republic. When a group of freelance security officers captured Senn Riip Domeet and brought to light the activities of The Flail, Munten had them arrested until Valorum explained that they were hired to augment Munten's own forces. (SWRPG)

Muntique, Corell

this young noble of House Calipsa was naive enough to think that his appointment to the annual Vor-cal was an honor. He was also very focused on his goals, which included representing Calipsa and meeting with Vaskel Savill in the planning of an attack on the Imperial torpedo sphere near Tallaan. To help ensure his victory, Corell even purchased a trained vornskr - which he name Crill - to assist him during the Vor-cal. (LOE)

Munto

this large city is located on the planet Commenor, spreading through a wide valley. (IR)

Munto Codru

Muntuur Stones

this famous grouping of seven stones was once held aloft by Ferleen Snee, using only the Force. Each of the Muntuur stones weighs five or more metric tons apiece. (GG9)

Muo Glandish

this small-time smuggler used to dive into the StarForge Nebula to avoid being captured by Old Republic forces, until he finally got tired of it and established a base on operations on an asteroid in the nebula. The base grew as more and more smugglers and pirates realized that Glandish had the right idea, and Glandish made a tidy profit skimming profits from the smugglers as "rent." The asteroid base grew into StarForge Station, and Glandish invested most of his profits into expanding and enhancing the base's facilities. Glandish was shot and killed by an old enemy who wanted a piece of the action, but Glandish ensured the continued freedom of StarForge Station by killing the enemy with his own returning fire. His groundwork allowed a succession of leaders and administrators to continue growing the station. (PP)

Muphrida

this is the Whiphid term for a large, disgusting creature. (RD)

Muptupp

this red-haired human was one of Huba's crew of chefs that were wrongly enslaved to a Hutt crimelord by Olag Greck. Muptupp followed Huba to Kalarba, where they tried to be pirates in order to steal enough money to start their own restaurant. When R2-D2 and C-3PO beat Rippter in a vump-shugga race, and Huba refused the Captain's medal, Muptupp made R2-D2 the Captain. (DRO)

Mura, Ado

this dark-skinned human girl was a student at Madame Vansitt's Charm Academy at the same time Pala was there. (E1A6)

Muracie

this city was located near Rubyflame Lake, on the planet Centares. (WOA32)

Murahl

this woman was a Lieutenant in the customs agency of the planet Kaal, during the height of the New Order. She as known to be a friend of independent spacers, acting as a go-between with the Imperial customs officers who were stationed on the planet. She would bend the rules to make sure everything she did ended up a win-win situation, as long the Imperials weren't drawn into the deal. (PSG)

Murashani

this was the Huttese word for a bounty hunter. (SWI76)

Murble

this man eked out an existence beneath the surface of the planet Coruscant during the early years of the New Republic. Along with his pet bursa, Fierce, Murble shuffled through life by staging makeshift circuses for any being in the Southern Underground who would pay a credit to see it. (CCW)

Murchason Ring

these rings were used in a variety of technological applications. (IWE1)

Mure, Nigella

this woman was placed in command of the clean-up crews in the Desrini District of Coruscant, shortly before the Clone Wars, when a garbage launcher misfired. She discovered that a group of squatter families had tapped into the power matrix of the garbage launcher, disabling its obstruction sensors and causing the launcher to activate, even though the path of the garbage bin was blocked. (HNN5)

Murglak

this was a species of vile, disgusting creature. (T3)

Murglak

this was a swear word used by many disreputable groups, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SHW)

Murgoob

a Dulok oracle, Murgoob was over 600 years old just before the Battle of Endor. He was known to the inhabitants of the forest moon of Endor, especially the Duloks, as the Great Murgoob or Murgoob the Cranky. It was Murgoob who recognized that Wicket Wystri Warrick had discovered the battle wagon his ancestor, Ephram, had built. Murgoob insisted that King Gorneesh take the battle wagon from the Ewoks and use it against them. Unfortunately, Wicket was able to destroy the battle wagon before the Duloks could take possession of it. (ECAR)

Murishani

this Huttese word translated into Basic as "bounty hunter." (GMR5)

Murisson, Rith

this young woman decided to try a new massage therapy, and allowed herself to be covered with an umgullian blob. However, her doctor failed to alert her to the possibility that her skin might have reactions to the blob's secretions, and she found herself scarred by the suction disks used by the blob to move about. (EGA)

Murk

this airless planetoid was the innermost body in the Murk System, located in the Modell Sector of the galaxy. It was continually bathed in dull, red light from its primary star, a red dwarf that was also called Murk. The planetoid was best-known as the site of an Imperial transfer station during the construction of the second Death Star, at the end of the Sanctuary Pipeline. After the Battle of Endor, the transfer station was abandoned. It was later refurbished as a haven for the Shell Hutt known as Tagoonta. (GMR9)

Murk

this red dwarf was located in the Moddell Sector of the galaxy. It was best-known as the terminus of the Sanctuary Pipeline, which was established by the Empire to help ensure safe passage into Moddell Sector, during the construction of the second Death Star. The star was orbited by a collection of airless planetoids, many of which were mined for ores. The innermost planetoid, also known as Murk, served as the Empire's primary transfer station. (GMR9)

Murk Lundi

this Quermian, born on the planet Ploo II, was a noted professor teaching galactic history on Coruscant during the years preceding the Battle of Naboo. He was distinguished from other Quermians by the black apparatus which covered his left eye. Doctor Lundi was something of an expert on the lore of the ancient Sith, and his lectures on their magic and the Dark Side of the Force were extremely popular. One of his students, a youth named Norval, listened intently to Doctor Lundi's words, as did another student named Omal. Lundi took a sabbatical some six years before the Battle of Naboo, in an effort to recover the Sith Holocron which was believed to exist at the bottom of the planet's oceans. Norval, sensing the power of the Holocron, traveled to Kodai and tried to take it for himself, but the Holocron was lost in the struggle to control it. The appearance of Qui-Gon Jinn and his Padawan, Obi-Wan Kenobi, forced Norval to flee. However, Lundi was captured by the Jedi and held prisoner on Coruscant. He languished in prison for ten years, going slowly insane, until the Jedi decided to return to Kodai and attempt to recover the Holocron again. This time, Doctor Lundi was accompanied by Obi-Wan and his own apprentice, Anakin Skywalker. Anakin's own growing power frightened Doctor Lundi, who began to die after realizing that the Holocron would never be his. Despite the fact that the Jedi were able to recover the Holocron from Norval, Doctor Lundi died shortly afterward. (JAF)

Murk-cave

this was the term used to describe any of the deepest, dankest caves found on the planet Af'El. (CCW)

Murl

this was one of the more common Kel Dor surnames. Its meaning and origins were unknown. (GCG)

Murleen, Ru

a member of the Alliance, Ru Murleen played a number of key roles in the events leading up to the destruction of the first Death Star during the Battle of Yavin. She was the youngest of the Alliance's starfighter commanders, with a quick wit and an eye for talent that helped her train many new pilots. She was also instrumental in the discovery of the V-38 fighter. (RA, RA2)

Murmamn City

this was one of the largest cities found on the planet Baltimn. The School of Hidden Wisdom was located in the city's residential district. (PJSB)

Murninkam

this world was a tropical paradise that was only sparsely settled at the time of the Battle of Endor. The primary reason for this was that it was located far from most space lanes, although the presence of Spinda Caveel was more than enough to keep most people away. (SEE)

Murno, Kot

this man was a Lieutenant within the Peace Brigade, and led the team which traveled to Yavin 4 in an effort to capture the students of Luke Skywalker's Jedi praxeum, when the Yuuzhan Vong claimed they would stop their invasion if the New Republic turned over the Jedi. When challenged by the Jedi, Murno claimed to be acting on the authority of the Alliance of Twelve. (EVC)

Murquan

this Imperial Moff controlled the Lorn System during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. (AIR)

Murr

this was a species fo tough, but dim-witted, beast of burden that was raised on the planet Ithor. (GCG)

Murr

this was one of the seediest cantinas found on the moon of Nar Shaddaa. Located on Level 15, well below the level at which natural light can penetrate, the Murr was little more than a room with some tables and chairs arranged haphazardly within it. (TF)

Murr

this was one of the most common male names used by members of the Ithorian race. Although most Ithorian names were not used for a specific meaning, historians found that this name referred to a tough, albeit slow-witted, Ithorian beast of burden. (GCG)

Murr Danod

this peaceful Ithorian smuggler was part of a trade guild that was operative in the Outer Rim Territories, during the last decades of the Old Republic. He had no qualms about dealing with questionable cargoes, but always tried to treat his customers fairly. (CCG13)

Murra

this bristle-furred herbivore was native to the planet Corellia, and was often herded together by farmers for its milk and meat. (QQRG)

Murra

a tribesman of the Ysanna on Ossus, Murra is the first to help Okko attempt to defeat Luke Skywalker and Kam Solusar when they arrive on the planet. (DE2)

Murra Orders

founded during the early years of the New Order, this brotherhood of weaponsmasters created the Kartranin method of wielding a sword. (AIR)

Murripin

a Hutt divan or bed. (JTH)

Murrtaggh

this former Jedi Master once defeated a "Dark Underlord." (HR)

Murrwooro urrwooro

this Wookiee and his friend, Urrurrowo, were badly injured when a swarm of flame beetles exploded near them, shortly after the Clone Wars. Murrwooro was a native of the city of Rwookrrorro. (GMR4)

Murtceps

an Imperial freighter discovered by Keyan Farlander during his first tour of duty as an X-Wing pilot, the Murtceps evaded Farlander and survived his attack. (XW)

Murthe', Leonis

this depraved Imperial scientist was known to have been one of the staunchest supporters of Emperor Palpatine's High Human Culture. To this end, Doctor Murthe' and his partner, Admiral Mir Tork, spent much of their careers subjugating and destroying entire alien civilizations. Doctor Murthe' set up a collection of holding pens and laboratories aboard the Azgoghk, where he perfected his techniques and torturing and killing. Murthe' later retired to Malicar 3 in the wake of the Battle of Endor, shortly after working with Admiral Tork to destroy the Gulmarid civilization. On Malicar 3, he spent much of his time torturing and killing aliens for the pleasure of it, no longer concerned with any scientific pursuits. Murthe' was later hunted down and killed by Boba Fett, who had been hired by Slique Brighteyes to avenge the Gulmarids. (AOD)

Muru Ki

an Imperial Nebulon-B frigate that saw duty during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Murul Trench

this undersea valley was located on the planet Calamari. (SWJ10)

Murzz

this young boy was one of many children captured by, and forced to work for, Gilramos Libkath, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Libkath forced the children to perform a number of criminal activities or suffer his wrath, such as stealing weapons from Jabba the Hutt and disrupting the activities of the Separatists in Mos Espa. (BF4)

Mus

this name was given to female Zabrak, and meant "wine". This name originally referred to any strong alcohol that was used to cleanse wounds. (GCG)

Muscave

this large gas giant was the seventh planet of the Coruscant System. It was orbited by twenty-one natural moons. (PH)

Muscle Maggot

this burrowing insect was native to the planet Rattatak. They were named for the way in which the consumed only the muscle tissue of a host organism, a trait that the native Rattataki put to use as an interrogation technique. A few muscle maggots were placed on the skin of a prisoner and allowed to begin burrowing. Over time, the prisoner lost muscle and strength, making them more susceptible to questioning. (RHF)

Muse, Duriel

this Corellian was the wife of Grondorn Muse. (CCG9)

Muse, Grondorn

this former Corellian militia member was also a noted musician, until the Empire blacklisted him. He then joined the Alliance with his wife, Duriel. (CCG9)

Museum of Applied Photonics

this museum of technology was located on the planet Obroa-skai. Twenty-seven years after the Battle of Yavin, after the Yuuzhan Vong overran Obroa-skai and claimed the world for themselves, they left the Museum of Applied Photonics intact, one of a thousand such buildings which were saved from destruction so that the Yuuzhan Vong could better understand their enemies. The Museum itself was converted into use as Warmaster Tsavong Lah's personal base of operations during the war. (SBS)

Museum of Light

this wondrous museum was located on the planet Tandis Four, until it was destroyed by Count Dooku's Separatist forces during the height of the Clone Wars. (MJH)

Museum of Tatooine

this art museum was located in the city of Bestine, on Tatooine, and boasted a huge collection of artworks created from the sands and minerals of the planet by the galaxy's best artisans. (SWTJ)

Museum of the Absolutes

located in the city of New Apsolon, on the planet of the same name, this museum was built in the former headquarters building of the Absolutes. It was established as a grim reminder of the atrocities of the Absolutes under the Civilized Authority, and presented information and artifacts from the civil war between the Workers and the Civilized. It was later revealed that Eritha and Alani had arranged for an underground tunnel to be excavated, connecting the Governor's palace to the Museum. They used it to reach the Museum, where they regularly met with the Absolutes who had been in hiding, planning for the time when Alani would be elected Governor and return power to the Absolutes. The Absolutes had gone so far as to make the displays in the Museum active, in case of a breach in their security. (TTB, CTV)

Museum of the Galactic Republic

this Old Republic monument was established on the planet Centares by the Senate of the Old Republic. The Museum was shut down by Emperor Palpatine. (VQ)

Museum of the Republic established on Coruscant, this New Republic edifice contained numerous displays depicting the events of the Galactic Civil War and the years following the Battle of Endor. It contained a room dedicated to the Battle of Yavin, which had a cut-away model of the first Death Star and a listing of the battle station's full complement of personnel. The display was designed to highlight the destructiveness of war, regardless of the outcome. (SOL)

Mushkil

this Noghri, a member of the Baikh'vair clan, accompanied Corran Horn and Jacen Solo to Garqi, during their attempt to infiltrate the Yuuzhan Vong occupation of the planet. In their first battle with the Vong, Mushkil was killed by Krag Val's amphistaff. (DTR)

Mushroom Cutting Festival

this annual event took place on Gandle Ott, when the cattarash mushrooms were ripe enough to harvest. (DARK)

Mushroom Mesa

this Tatooine landmark was located on the Mos Espa podracing course made famous by the Boonta Eve Classic. The top-heavy stone pillars of this area are shaped like giant mushrooms, and many observers claim to have seen faces carved into the stones. Legends say that the Sand People are the keepers of the secrets hidden in the stone faces, while most geologists claim that any "faces" in the stones were carved by unusual wind erosion. The Mesa later served as a section of the noted Mos Espa Circuit, a swoop racing event held annually during the height of the New Order. (RAC, IWE1, SWGAL)

Mushroom Patch

this was the term used by owners of moisture vaporators to describe the patch of ground at the base of the vaporator. It was here that stray moisture collected in the soil, creating a damp area that allowed mushrooms to grow. (NEGW)

Music Ball

a small, silver orb that plays music when shaken. (XWRS)

Musk Merchant

this was the name given to those merchants who captured thrantcills and extracted fragrant oils and chemicals from their flesh and organs. (TCD)

Musket

a Ripoblus assault transport operative during the Sepan Civil War. It was used in the Sepan battles against the Empire. (TIE)

Muskov

Captain of the Cloud Police when Zorba the Hutt assumes control of Cloud City, Muskov is a secret agent working for the Central Committee of Grand Moff. (MMY)

Muskree

this planet, little more than a barren, red ball of dust, was located about an hour's hyperspace travel from the Perlemian Trade Route, beyond the Tion Hegemony. It was considered the primary planet in the Simus Minor System, and was once believed to be a treasure trove of minerals and ores. However, initial scans proved false, and many mining operations went broke and abandoned their bases on Muskree. A small world, Muskree was so remote that it lacked any form of spaceport, and any being with a reason to visit was warned to follow an automated beacon to an open landing area. A single settlement near the landing field was the only inhabited area on the planet. It was here that Osaji Hux chose to live as a recluse, keeping herself safe from harm as the leader of the Osaji Syndicate during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (WOA32)

Muslo, Defaris

this Imperial Governor blamed the Alliance for the death of his daughter, Marna, who actually died under the ministrations of an Imperial interrogation droid. Because of his daughter's allegiance to the Alliance, Defaris was also suspected of supporting the Alliance and was targetted for assassination. (GMH)

Muslo, Marna

this woman was the daughter of Imperial Governor Defaris Muslo. She was an active supporter of the Alliance. She was killed after she was captured by Imperial agents and subjected to torturous interrogation by an IT-0 droid. (GMH)

Muss

this hide of this creature was used to cover furniture. (PSPG)

Mussat Nasrabi

this Mon Calamari owned and operated a Tibanna gas mining operation out of Cloud City during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. An old friend of Platt Okeefe, they worked together on a Sullustan starliner before going their separate ways. Nasrabi had served as the liner's chief engineer, and used his experience to set up the tibanna operation later on. Nasrabi also owned and operated the Floating Fish gambling club, and he was a member of Cloud City's Gambling Guild. (IDC)

Musson System

this star system aligned itself with the New Republic, following the Battle of Endor. The pirate Jerresk once ambushed a Republic convoy bringing supplies to the Musson System. (WBC)

Mussubir III

a planet with an ancient, aristocratic House. (COJ)

M'ust

this race of cave-dwelling aliens worshipped the eternally-burning fires found in subterranean caves on an unspecified planet. Cody Sunn-Childe discovered the M'ust people when he was shot while fighting the Empire on the planet, after its subjugation during the early days of the Galactic Civil War. It was from the M'ust that Sunn-Childe learned to control his desire for violence, and eventually became a peace-loving individual. When Sunn-Childe finally decided to leave their planet, many of the M'ust followed him to his newly-created spacecraft, which traveled between dimensions rather than in realspace or hyperspace. (MC46)

Mustafar

this volcanic world was the smaller of two twin worlds that orbited a remote star. The surface of the planet was continually being shaped and reformed by eruptions of lava and gas, and it appeared to glow a deep orange-red from space. Amazingly, a race of tall, thin humanoids known as Mustafarians managed to eke out a civilized existence on the planet. The Techno Union established a mining outpost on Mustafar, extracting precious metals and ores from the free-flowing lava that covered much of the planet's surface. It was on Mustafar that General Grievous hid the Council of Separatists, after the Jedi discovered the presence of Grievous on Utapau. This was all part of the schemes of Darth Sidious, who knew that he needed to eliminate the Separatists before he could assume control of the galaxy. By gathering the Council of Separatists on Mustafar, Sidious had them trapped in one location. Then, he dispatched Anakin Skywalker to eliminate the Separatist leaders. This event served as the final act of both the Clone Wars and the Old Republic, solidifying Chancellor Palpatine's position as Emperor of the galaxy. (SWI80, IS3, VD3, E3N)

Mustafar Lava Flea

this was a species of immense insects, used as mounts by the inhabitants of the planet Mustafar. The six-legged lava flea walked in a head-down position, with its armor-plating torso held high enough to place a fire-resistant saddle at its crest. The eyes of the lava flea were protected by nictitating membranes that could cover the eye and protect it from dust and ash. (IS3, VD3)

Mustafarian

this tall, thin-bodied alien race was native to the planet Mustafar. Many xenobiologists believed that the Mustafarians were related to the Kubaz, a link that was emphasized by the similar facial structures of both races. The Mustafarians had a long trunk instead of a nose, and their foreheads sloped gently back to their necks. (VD3)

Musti

a creature which can be domesticated. Once trained, it becomes extremely loyal to its owner. (XW)

Mutanda

this planet, located in the Killaniri System, is the site of an orbital prothium gas mining/producing facility. The mining rights are owned, and the mining controlled by, BlasTech Corporation, Czerka Weapons, and Blethern Gas Industries. Mutanda itself is a moist, temperate world which is home to the Horansi race. Mutanda rotates once about its axis every 18 standard hours, and its year encompasses 267 local days. It had four moons. While Killaniri was known for the prothium gas, Mutanda was known as a safari world, on which the rich and wealthy of the galaxy could hunt for exotic game such as the kalans and hokami. (PG1)

Mutandan Porf

described by those who have eaten it as a dangerous meal, it consists of grain, meats, and spices stewed together and served with bread. (XW)

Mutant Zombie Cooler

a mixed beverage Han Solo makes sarcastic reference to while escaping with Dracmus from the Human League on Corellia. (AS)

Mutar-Horan

this was the outermost of the four moons which orbited the planet Mutanda. (PG1)

Mutated Behemoth

this creature was once the apex predator found on the planet Caamas, known for its lengthy hibernation periods. When Caamas was destroyed, most of the baseline-stock behemoths were killed or died shortly afterward. Some of those that were hibernating at the time managed to survive, but were horribly mutated. These mutated behemoths had three pairs of clawed legs, and had oblong-shaped skulls filled with oversized teeth. These behemoths measured over four meters in length, including a short tail which was used for balance. (WOTC, CCW)

Mutdah, Bohhuah

an extremely obese human, Bohhuah Mutdah was the richest man in the galaxy during the early years of the New Order. He was a retired industrialist who personally controlled trillions of credits. He lived on Oseon 5792, an asteroid in the Oseon System that he had altered to create his own fortress. There, he had servants to perform any task he required, and it was rumored that he had not lifted a finger or used his hands in five years before he was killed by Rokur Gepta as part of a convoluted plot to kill Lando Calrissian. He was well over 100 years old when he was murdered, an age achieved by the proximity of one of the largest life-crystals ever exported from the Rafa System. Another source of his longevity was his intense addiction to lesai. He also had the asteroid's gravity modified, to allow him to maneuver his bulk around with ease. In his asteroid retreat, Mutdah had amassed one of the largest private collections of writings and books, and possessed them in all their forms: early scrolls, worn hardcover texts, memorywire spools and memory rods, and data cards. (LCF)

Muted Orbs of Valah'ha

this was a religious reference used by the Gran people. (ETM)

Mutilator

this was the name of the YZ-775 transport owned by the Dark Jedi Gilflyn. (CCW)

Mutiny Box

this was the generic term for any failsafe device which could be triggered in case a military position was breached or infiltrated. Hidden within the mutiny box, which was controlled by the base commander, were switches that triggered the self-destruct mechanisms on weapon emplacements other defenses. Essentially, the mutiny box prevented traitorous forces from gaining control of one's weaponry. (SHPT)

Mutiny, The

another term used to describe the Galactic Civil War. (DESB)

Mutonium Ore

this highly-valuable metal was mined in the Stenness System. It was often smuggled out of the system, or stolen by one of the system's pirate bands. (TOJ)

Mutriok

native to the planet Socorro, this canine hunter was known for its sharp senses of smell and direction. The nomadic tribes domesticated the mutriok, using them as companions during their hunts. The mutriok was also valuable to sniffing out pockets of Trauger Gas before a hunting party could stumble into them. (BSS)

Muttamok

this species of small mammals was not fully sentient, but often acted as if it understood what an intelligent creature was thinking. Resembling a bipedal, russet-furred fox, the average muttamok was attracted to bright and shiny objects, which it usually tried to steal and bring back to its lair. These objects were quickly forgotten in the hunt for new trinkets, but a captured muttamok had the uncanny ability to return a stolen object to its original owner. This act was accompanied by an apparent plea for sympathy, which was actually a modified Force skill that projected a form of friendship into the other being's mind. In this way, the muttamok was able to escape from its captor without harm, although it often left its trinkets behind. (PJSB)

Muttani

this humanoid race was distinguished by its sickly appearance and peculiar body odor. The skin of a Muttani had a greenish-gray coloration, and their bodies were generally hairless. The bald head of a Muttani was crowned by pointed ears, and their mouths were filled with sharp teeth. (BH)

Mutual Claim Registration

developed by independent scouts to solve a situation where two or more parties lay claim to the same unregistered planet prior to credit being paid, the Mutual Claim Registration is signed by all parties. It gives each party an equal share in the claim, thereby eliminating any bickering over claim jumping. It never fully settled the issues surrounding the fact that more than one claim was entered, but it ensured that everyone got some form of compensation. The development of MCRs actually led to more claim jumping, as it gave each party a share whether they actually found the planet or not. (GG8)

Muudabok

this herbivore was native to the coastal swamps of the planet Naboo. Resembling lupine antelopes, the muudaboks were distinguished by their thick horns and the spikes which protruded from their haunches. It was a streamlined swimmer, but rarely dove below the surface of the water. The claws on the front feet of the muudabok were used for digging up roots. The horns of the muudabok were hollowed out by the Gungans to form musical instruments. A collection of buoyant knobs were found at the end of the muudabok's tail, which were used as floats during swimming as well as clubs when attacking or defending. (WSW)

Muun

this archaic name was common among Sullustan males, and meant "bludgeon". (GCG)

Muun

this young Sullustan served as a General during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, despite his young age. Many believed that his command was the result of excellent testing scores, and not any conduct or success in battle. Others believed that he achieved the position because of his relationship with Admiral Sien Sovv. Two years after the initial appearance of the Yuuzhan Vong, General Muun was placed in command of ensuring that the Bilbringi Shipyards continued to operate under Republic control, thereby ensuring a stream of new warships for the battle. He was flustered when Han Solo and his wife, Leia Organa Solo, asked for twenty ships to assist a Vray convoy fleeing the invasion. Muun refused, citing that the New Republic could not play favorites among its member species. (SBS)

Muun

this tall, thin, humanoid race was native to the planet Muunilinst. Their skulls were elongated and thin, with a tall brain cavity and drooping cheekbones. Their large hands were tipped with equally long fingers. The skin of the average Muun was a pasty-white color, the result of living indoors and underground for much of their lives. A Muun's internal organs were perhaps most noted for the fact that each Muun had three hearts. Although Muuns often traveled away from their homeworld, such trips were quite short, as many Muuns became homesick if away from Muunilinst for too long. (SWDB, GMR10, BF3, UANT, E3N)

Muun

this was the native language of the Muun people. It consisted of two sounds - "eh" and "um" - combined in varying pitches, frequencies, and orders, creating a language that was very similar to droid Binary language. The written form of the Muun language was a simple, mathematical shorthand representation of the spoken form. (GMR10, UANT)

Muun

this was the shortened name for the planet Muunilinst, used during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SWI65)

Muunilinst

this planet, the homeworld of the Muun race, was the financial heart of the Empire in the years following the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. Known to many Imperial officers as Moneyland, it was a world steeped in history that dated from the glory days of the Old Republic. It was protected by a pair of Golan III defense platforms, defenses which Moff Disra had tried to move to Bastion. Years later, after the Yuuzhan Vong took control of the planet Coruscant and then were soundly defeated at the Battle of Ebaq, the alien invaders turned to the fringes of the galaxy to make smaller attacks. After destroying the Yevethan homeworld of N'zoth, the Yuuzhan Vong turned their attention to the Imperial Remnant. In a coordinated strike, the Yuuzhan Vong eliminated Bastion and its supporting fleet, then decimated the forces protecting Muunilinst. The planet itself was bombarded from orbit, reducing it to a wasteland from which the Yuuzhan Vong plucked any survivors for use as slave labor. (SOP, SWDB, FH1)

Muur

a tentacled predator. (RPG)

Muur

this simple, yeast-based food formed the basis of the Yuuzhan Vong diet, during the long trip between galaxies. (FP)

Muurbux

this was a common name among the Sauvax race. (UANT)

Muurian Transport

a 40-meter cargo and personnel mover, this wedge-shaped craft has a outriggered storage and weapons module. It has been rated at a top speed of 90 MGLT, and is armed with 2 turbolasers and 3 laser cannons. 80 SBD shields protect a 30-RU hull. (TIE)

Muuurgh

this huge Togorian stood nearly three meters tall, and was covered in patterned black fur. Muuurgh was betrothed to Mrrov while on Togoria, but she wanted to see the galaxy before settling down. She left the planet, and Muuurch pursued her. He lost track of her on Ylesia, and opted to remain on the planet and work for Teroenza as a bodyguard. When Han Solo took the job of pilot for the t'landa Til, Muuurch was assigned as Han's personal guard. Their relationship grew steadily during Han's tenure, until both beings trusted each other. When Han discovered the truth behind Teroenza's religion and plotted to escape, Muuurch misunderstood his plannings as a direct attack on the t'landa Til. This went against Muuurch's vow of service to Teroenza, and he tried to apprehend Han. Han quickly relayed the information that Mrrov was a prisoner at Colony Two, and Muuurch was then convinced that Han was telling the truth. They developed an elaborate plan to get off the planet, which succeeded with only Muuurch taking a blaster bolt in the side. Muuurch and Mrrov returned to Togoria, where he soon recovered and they were married. They had two cubs, a male and a female, by the time Han and Bria returned to Togoria to recruit soldiers for the Battle of Ylesia. Both Muuurch and Mrrov joined them. (TPS, RD)

Muvon

this small B-7 freighter was owned by Brophar Tofarain, and was brought with him when he signed on as a crewman aboard the FarStar. It was a small ship, characterized by its cramped quarters and cluttered interior. The ship was stolen by Gorak Khzam and Nizzal, when they defected from the FarStar near the Qu'mock Station. (KO)

Muvon II

this was the Aegis-class shuttle acquired by Brophar Tofarain, after the loss of his first ship, the Muvon. (E)

Muz

this was a common name given to male Duros children. The name Muz came from the term meaning "hearty". (GCG)

Muza

this sentient race was native to the planet Muzara. They resisted the colonization efforts of the Brentaal League, some 4,000 years before the New Order, until the Jedi Knight Keval Raffaen mediated an agreement between the Muza and the human settlers. They were a nomadic species of hunter-gatherers who descended from nomadic ruminants. They could be aggressive when they needed to be, but often chose to work out their problems. (TOJC)

Muzara

this planet, located far from Coruscant in the Expansion Region, was first settled by the Brentaal League some 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. They were unaware that the planet was inhabited by the Muza, and the Jedi Knight Keval Raffaen was dispatched to mediate an agreement between the two factions. (TOJC)

Muzzer

an Imperial Grand Moff serving the Empire after the birth of the New Republic, Muzzer is an obese man who is brash and exciteable. (GDV)

Muzzlian Squills

this trinket is often found in starport giftshops. (GMH)

MVD-1

this flitter was produced by the Mrlsst Motorworks. It measured 14 meters in length, and had an insectile body which could transport up to five passengers and a metric ton of cargo. These craft, although beautiful to see in flight, were not very durable, and had to be scrapped within ten years of use. (LOE)

M'Ven

this avian creature was native to the planet Goroth Prime. Its name literally meant "swooper," which described its preferred method of movement. These creatures, distinguished by their coarse, black feathers, were herbivores that fed on the various mosses found on the planet. (GSE)

MVR-3

this was one of Incom Industries' earliest attempts at developing a speeder bike, first produced during the height of the Old Republic. Because it was also one of the first speeder bikes ever developed, its design and form were considered very different from the more modern speeder bikes. The MVR-3 was a bulky vehicle, with a large tail section housing the repulsorlift and thrust engines, along with the vehicle's electronics and a storage bin. The semi-circular seat was located just behind a curved housing that held the controls, allowing the driver to sit in the curve with their feet in the stirrups. While modern speeder bikes made the MVR-3 seem comparatively slow, the MVR-3 was nevertheless extremely maneuverable and had larger than average cargo capacity. (AEG)

Mwarri

this name was common among Ithorian females. Although such names do not generally have meaning, Ithorians who studied their race's history learned that the name meant "singer" - or, more literally, "singing water". (GCG)

M-Web Repeating Blaster

this was one of the derivatives of the original EWHB-10 repeating blaster, produced during the early years of the New Republic. (NEGW)

M-Well

this design of Gravitech navigational detection system was used on many Mon Calamari luxury ships. (RM)

Mwith

this was a common name among Quarren females. It meant "female ruler" or "queen". (GCG)

MX Cannon

an ancient weapon developed by the Old Republic, the MX cannon used ion flow as a power source. (TSW)

MX-10

this was MerrSonn's anti-vehicle missile emplacement, developed during the Galactic Civil War. (HAS)

MX9

this was the model number of the standard-issue blaster rifle issued by the Thaereian Military, during the height of the Clone Wars. (LFCW)

MX-series Droid

this series of droids was designed to perform routine starfighter maintenance. (VOF)

My Heart Belongs to You

this jizz tune was made popular by Evar Orbus and His Galactic Wailers. It remained a hit for the band's new incarnation, the Max Rebo Band. (SWI67)

My Princess

this was the name of a cracian thumper which was raced at the Heatherdowns Hotel and Track, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TSIA)

m'Yalfor'ac Order

this was one of the continental armies of the Bitthaevrian military, which was rumored to have defeated the Jedi Knights in battle shortly before the advent of the New Order. Based on the I'Quar'ta continent of the Bitthaevrian homeworld of Guiteica, the Order was sworn to eliminate two groups: Force-sensitives and Bothans. The m'Yalfor'ac detested the way in which Bothans avoided direct conflict, a triat which angered and frightened them because the Bothaevrians couldn't comprehend Bothan ways. The Order was led by five beings: Colonel Quaal Tavie Catharius and his four subordinates. At the height of the Galactic Civil War, the Order numbered more than 10,000 fanatically loyal soldiers, all but two of which were Bitthaevrians, and represented more than eighty percent of the Guiteica Militia. With the advent of the New Order, the m'Yalfor'ac Order saw the Empire as the lesser of two evils, since anything was better than the Old Republic. (AIR)

Mycogen

this small, bio-engineered organism was used by the Yuuzhan Vong to generate light. Entire colonies of mycogens were implanted into the walls of Yuuzhan Vong worldships, providing a ready source of bioluminescence. (EVR)

Mycosia Flower

a species of plant with large pink blossoms, they were a favorite of Evir Derricote. They provided him with early experience in genetic manipulation. (MBF)

Mycroft

this temperate world was garrisoned by the Empire, in order to construct the M13 repair station in orbit above it. Mycroft had no sentient life, but had a temperate ecology which supported a variety of lifeforms. (SWCP)

M'yet Luure

this Exodeenian Senator to the New Republic was a powerful leader who spoke openly with Leia Organa-Solo at all times. Their friendship had grown with the Republic, and when former Imperial supporters became elected Senators, Luure countered Leia's distrust by reminding her that she herself once served Emperor Palpatine. The senior Exodeenian Senator at the time, Luure was killed when Dolph's sabotaged droids exploded during a Senate meeting. (TNR)

Mygeeto

this crystalline world was covered with thin layers of ice, making travel across its surface dangerous at best. The native crystal worms that lived beneath the ice compounded the danger. Mygeeto was singled out by Supreme Chancellor Palpatine, during the last stages of the Clone Wars, as one of the Outer Rim worlds that would be targetted by the Grand Army of the Republic. According to Palpatine, the worlds of Mygeeto, Felucia, and Saleucami were a "triad of evil" that served as Separatist bastions. Ostensibly, Palpatine ordered troops to Mygeeto and several other worlds as a way to end the Outer Rim Sieges and bring the Clone Wars to a halt. (OWS, LEV)

Myill

this race of blue-furred creatures was enslaved by the Ghawem pirates and used as laborers. (SWJ8)

Myinyar

this female was a member of the Quara species of Aqualish. She helped a member of the Alliance obtain quantities of sedrellium from the Ando fishing platforms, stealing it from refineries which supplied the Empire with raw materials. (COG)

Mykal

this flying creature was native to the forests of the planet Kashyyyk. (KOTOR)

Myk'Chur Finux Zug

this Lannik was part of the Red Iaro delegation ostensibly sent to Malastare to negotiate a peace treaty with Prince R'cardo Sooflie IX, shortly after the Battle of Naboo. Zug was the only surviving member of the Red Iaro to have faced Jedi Master Even Piell in battle. The Jedi was forced to kill the other six members of Zug's squad before Zug himself fled the scene of the battle. Zug later became an ally of Gran Senator Aks Moe, a position which he hoped would aid him during the negotiations. Senator Moe also promised that the Red Iaro would have the cooperation of the Malastare government during the negotiations. Zug was behind the plan to kill the Jedi mediators during the Vinta Harvest Classic podrace, but the plan failed when the Jedi escaped. Zug was forced to capture Prince Sooflie and hold him hostage. When the Red Iaro's plans to kill the Prince failed, Zug tried to escape them by igniting his rocket backpack and fleeing the Prince's hotel. Unfortunately, he took off into the midst of the Vinta Harvest Classic podrace, and was killed when he was sucked into the intake turbines of Sebulba's podracer. (ETM)

Myke

this near-human race was characterized by their tall, thin bodies and gaunt faces. They had two small horns descending from either side of his chin. (HCE)

Myles

this man was a member of the Mandalorian Shocktroopers, serving under Jango Fett some twelve years before the Battle of Geonosis. Myles was killed when he was cut in half by a Jedi Knight during the Battle of Galidraan. (JFOS)

Mylok IV

primary planet in the Mylok System, located in the Outer Rim Territories. It is the homeworld of the Habeen and the Nharwaak. (TIE)

Mylore, Yndis

this one-time governor of Bryexx was an Imperial Moff in charge of the Varvenna Sector. He, at one time, employed Porcellus. (TJP)

Mylthea

this was the name of a noted Vuvrian individual. (UANT)

Myn

this was one of the most common names given to female Corellians. (GMR9)

Myn

this was one of the most common male names among the Corellian population. (GMR9)

Myn Seda

this was a noted member of Chagrian history. (UANT)

Myneyrsh

this was the native language of the Myneyrsh people, consisting of primitive snorts, honks, and vocalizations. There was no written form of the Myneyrsh language, and all information was passed down from generation to generation through oral histories. (UANT)

Myneyrshi

a race native to the planet Wayland, the Myneyrshi were known for their close-in blade combat skills. They had four arms (an upper set and a lower set), two legs, and had crystalline blue skin. Like the Psadans, they disliked any offworld races. The Myneyrshi also shunned technology, calling any piece of advanced technology an "item of shame." This aversion applied even to weapons, as evidenced by the saying, "A knife never runs out of ammunition." (DFR, TLC, EGA, MBS)

Mynkin

native to the planet Mrlsst, this species of predator was humanoid in stature and stood over two meters in height. Their gangly arms were contrasted their stumpy legs, and their bodies were covered with plate-like scales that were colored in such a way as to camouflage the mynkin against a rocky background. The mynkin was armed with a mouthful of sharp teeth and heavy claws. (LOE)

Mynnic

this Jedi Knight was a consular during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Mynnic and his team - the Rodian Vinto, the Cerean Pal-Han-Das, and the Trandoshan Wertsnik - worked to resolve issues without the use of force. However, in a pinch, the team was able to act as a cohesive unit to deflect an attack. (GMR6)

Mynock

this independent smuggler was a supporter of the Alliance, during the Galactic Civil War, and often served as an intermediary between the Alliance and other independent spacers. "Mynock" worked from a base on the planet Calamari, often from the Fathoms restaurant. (FTD)

Mynock

a winged parasite made of silicon, they roam the vacuum of space and attach themselves to passing ships, from which they draw the energy they need to survive. They then find a suitable asteroid to feed on, ingesting silicon and other materials until it has enough to reproduce. Mynock reproduction is based on fission of a single mynock into two new mynocks. Their origins are unknown, but it is known that they cannot fly through hyperspace by themselves. This points to a single origination system. They can grow to lengths of 1.6 meters before reproducing. (ESB, MTS)

Mynock 7

a space station. (SWJ11)

Mynock Cloud City

this dish was served at Cal'ulorn's restaurant, the Kavsrach. It was described in the menu as "a spicy combination of marinated mynock strips with vweilu nuts and Ithorian chale, in a lum sauce." (IJ)

Mynock Hole

this tavern, located in Vlarnya on the planet Courkrus, was the favored hangout of the Blackstar pirate force. Despite the disgusting appearance of the main barroom, the pirates maintained an opulent gambling establishment and brothel in a rear room, behind a code-locked door. (IJ)

Mynock Mud Pie

this was one of the many dessert foods served at Aucellis Park, on the moon Keriba VI, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (WOA27)

Mynock-class Assault Boat

this stubby, 44-meter warship was developed by Corellian Engineering Corporation to serve as a well-armed system patrol craft, during the early years of the New Republic. The Mynock-class assault boat required a pilot, co-pilot, and gunner, and could carry up to 24 troops. It was hyperspace-capable, and was armed with a turret-mounted quad-laser cannon, a concussion missile tube, a pair of medium ion cannons, and two chin guns. (CTD)

Mynock's Haven

a tavern in Coronet city, on Corellia. It was here that Haber Trell agreed to meet Borbor Crisk and transfer the false cargo being transported by Grand Admiral Thrawn, who was secretly disguised as Jodo Kast. (TFE)

Mynor Dac

this being served as part of Twin Suns Squadron, supporting the Galactic Alliance's efforts to defeat the Yuuzhan Vong. (FP)

Myntor

this burrowing predator was native to the Arblis Forest of Kothlis. It was protected by a hard shell, and moved about on four stout legs. The typical myntor was an ambush predator, creating a hole in the ground and covering with derbis, then waiting for an unsuspecting animal to fall into the trap. (SPG)

Mynus, Cor

this Imperial Intelligence agent was assigned to work with Bren-Jules Rordan some years after the Battle of Endor. His cover was that of a COMPNOR observer and trainee assigned to Rordan, given when the last agent was moved off of Kirima. He was a tall, gangly man with blond hair and blue eyes, and an appearance that belied his age. He reported directly to Kora Primos, providing information he gathered on Rordan and the activities of Corporate Sector and New Republic activities on Kirima. (TSK)

Myo

this vicious Abyssin had won three separate fights during Bloodings before being captured by the slaver Malak. Using his physical prowess, Myo managed to escape during a refueling stop at Kinun Depot, and met up with Lirin Car'n. He booked passage to Tatooine with the kloo horn player, and was actually in the Mos Eisley cantina when Luke Skywalker and Obi-Wan Kenobi first met Han Solo. Shortly afterward, Myo met up with the Brubb, Dorlar, who convinced the Abyssin to come to work for him on OM813. Myo agreed, and in a short time became one of the Galactic Outdoor Survival School's top desert survival teachers. Myo was portrayed by Laine Liska in Star Wars: Episode IV - A New Hope. (CCG, SWDB)

Myocaine

this muscle relaxant was used throughout the galaxy during the last years of the Old Republic. (MJH)

Myoflex

this was a thin plastic sheeting produced during the early years of the New Republic. (GUN)

Myomar

this planet, which housed an Imperial maintenance facility, was subjugated by Grand admiral Ishin II-Raz in what became known as the Massacre at Myomar. Years later, Han Solo and Chewbacca once stole parts from there for the Millennium Falcon. The world joined the New Republic after the Battle of Endor, but was briefly occupied by Imperial forces under the command of Grand Admiral Thrawn. (SWSB, SOP, SWI66)

Myoplexaril

this was a form of muscle relaxant that was developed during the last decades of the Old Republic. There were several variants on the basic drug, each specially formulated for a specific species. (MJH)

Myor Devker

this was the name of a distinguished Morseerian individual. (UANT)

Myoris

this Harixian school teacher was one of the many teachers that openly rebelled against Imperial control of Harix. She was kidnapped by the Gektl Rahz, who attempted to silence the rebellion by removing the school teachers. Her son, Berd, enlisted the help of Luke Skywalker in rescuing his mother. Luke, along with Han Solo, managed to save her from execution at the hands of Darth Vader. (CSWEA)

Myostim Unit

a device which uses a sensor field coupled with adjustable, computerized electromyoclonic broadcasters to stimulate muscles. It can be programmed to alternately contract and relax muscles, thereby giving the user an intense physical workout while lying prone on the ground. The user can develop intense physical strength and muscle mass without a lot of equipment, time, or effort. Myostim units were originally developed to help combat muscular atrophy on low-gravity worlds. Medical research during the height of the New Order revealed that the units have certain side effects, including electromagnetic interference with the user's nervous system. Also, a being who had trained with a myostim unit and was forced to stop experienced rapid atrophying of the muscles they developed. Normal strength training was not a suitable substitute any more, and often caused more harm than good. (SE, SESB)

Myr, R'Ytha

this woman thought she knew Ace Azzameen from a party on Luxior 7. (XWA)

Myra

Wedge Antilles' nickname for Mirax Terrik. (XWPA)

Myra

a tentacled deity whose name is often used in vain by Rars Lefken. (SWSB)

Myrenia

this was the name of Coh Veshiv's personal Lambda-class shuttle, stationed aboard the Empire Forever. When Veshiv was captured by Dhas Vedij and the crew of the Far Orbit, they also took control of the Myrenia. (FOP)

Myrgaanti Shi-iki

this Gorvan Horansi was once a freelance operative for the Alliance, until he fled active service with Bryce

Agoris. Myrgaanti was known as a boisterous brawler and womanizer, and was inseparable from Agoris during their service to the Alliance. Shortly before the Battle of Endor, they deserted the Alliance, taking more than two millions credits worth of equipment with them. Aboard the Warhog, they became freelance mercenaries. (SWJ6)

Myrial

this ancient noble was the provisional governor of the planet Argazda, and was known as the man who seceded the Kanz Sector from the Old Republic and began seizing control of nearby planets. She ordered the slavery of Lorradians about 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War, and ruled for about 300 years until her forces were defeated by the Jedi Knights. (CSA)

Myris Pictures

this was one of Adarlon's largest holofilm studios, known for their big-budget movies during the last decades of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

Myrkr

a haven for smugglers and other not-quite-law-abiding groups, this planet was located in a system near the Borderlands Regions. It was also known as the indigenous home of the ysalamiri and the vornskrs. Much of its native plantlife stored metals as part of their existence, and the presence of these metals often dampened the effectiveness of scanners and communicators. The planet was first settled about 300 years before the Battle of Endor, and seemed to have gone unnoticed before then. Old Republic records, as well as those of the Jedi Order, make very little mention of the planet, however, and the Jedi simply left it alone. Myrkr had a 24-hour day, and a 324-local-day year. Some twenty ears after the defeat of Grand Admiral Thrawn, Myrkr was attacked and overrun by the Yuuzhan Vong. A worldship was inerted into orbit around the planet, in which voxyn were bred for use against the Jedi Knights. The planet is referred to as "Myrkyr" in the early chapters of the Heir to the Empire comic series from Dark Horse, as well as in Force Heretic III: Reunion. (HTTE, DFR, HTSB, EGC, HTTEC, FH3)

myrlinator

this was the handle of one of the many slicers who first discovered Tiny F's message of an impending attack by the Thaereian Military on the people of the Cularin System, during the early stages of the Clone Wars. (LFCW)

Myrmin

this species of small, red, six-legged insect had a pair of feelers on its head and jaw pincers that helped them gnaw they prey to death. They were often chased and eaten by pittins. (CS, COJ, SWJ15)

Myssess

this unusual plant was native to the grottoes and dense forests of the planet Kashyyyk, where it produced wondrous blossoms. (SWGAL)

Myssess Glade

this forest area, located on the planet Kashyyyk, was named for the abundance of myssess blossoms that grew on the ground. The copse surrounded the opening to a natural system of caves, which eventually became home to the Myyydril clan of Wookiees. (SWGAL)

Myshand

this Snivvian word represented the number 3. (HNN5)

Mysterious Stranger

this was the nickname given by Ajuur the Hutt to the survivor of the Endar Spire crash who participated in his gladiator event, some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. (KOTOR)

Mystic Burn

this disk-shaped freighter was a heavily-modified YT-1200 light freighter, measuring some thirty-five meters in length and armed with a single, turret-mounted laser cannon. The distinctive offset cockpit was mounted on the right side of the ship. The Mystic Burn could accommodate up to eight passengers and seventy-five metric tons of cargo. The sublight engine pods rose up from the rear of the ship, while the hyperdrive was situated between the pods. The ship was purchased by Deel Suroon from Harkan Resch, on the planet Naboo, shortly after the Battle of Naboo. Resch, who named the ship after the glow of its engines, was unable to afford the necessary repairs to the ship, and Suroon was able to purchase it for a good price. (GMR1)

Mystic Martial Arts of Squib Combats and Transactions

this was one of the largest bodies of knowledge established by the Squib, developed for the training of future members of the Reclamation Fleet. (HR)

Mystifying Hoop Trick

developed by an unusual alien and stolen by Wim Magwit, this unusual device defies any specific explanation of its operation. Essentially a pair of hoop-shaped frames which were studded with replaceable matter transmitters, the hoop trick seemed to instantly transport anything that passed through one hoop to the other. In this way, Magwit could hold one hoop in his hand and step into it, and re-appear from the other hoop. The exact method of matter transfer is unknown, although the transmitters themselves have to be constantly replaced from burnout. (EGW)

Mystra

a female bounty hunter who worked for Raskar, she wore a wrist blaster and a cybernetic vision implants which allow her to precisely target her prey. She introduced Han Solo and Chewbacca to Raskar, during their search for a power gem, after being alerted to their search by an agent on Junkfort Station. (CSW)

Mytag Crystals

a very common crystal vertex used as oscillators in old subspace communications and detection gear. Xim the Despot, realizing the need for wide-ranging communication for his forces, had planned to stockpile mytag crystals in his vaults on Dellalt. Thus, the Queen of Ranroon was loaded with crystals when it was hidden on Dellalt. When Han Solo discovers the starship, he finds that the rumored treasure of Xim was really just a vast supply of military supplies. (HSL)

Mytaranor

this planet was located in the Outer Rim Territories, and served as the base of operations for the Mytaranor Slaving Council. (GMR7)

Mytaranor Sector

this area of the galaxy was known for the Mytaranor Slaving Council. (AIR)

Mytaranor Slaving Council

one of the galaxy's lesser-known slavery rings, this group was controlled by the former slave Talas Piran, who ran the operation from a base on the planet Mytaranor. Piran, in turn, was answerable to the Twi'leki crimelord Lonay. As part of Lonay's holdings, Mytaranor was at the beck and call of Black Sun during the Galactic Civil War. The Council plied the spacelanes of the Mytaranor Sector, but also provided slaves to a large number of mining operations and other "resource management" companies. (GG12, SESB, AIR, GMR7)

Mythosaur

this ancient reptile was once native to the planet Mandalore, until Mandalore the First and his warriors conquered the planet and wiped out the mythosaurs. It was generally believed that the skull-shaped markings on the armor of Mandalorian shock troopers was a stylized mythosaur skull, as an homage to the greatest predator to walk the surface of Mandalore. It was later discovered that the image was actually a reverential symbol for an ancient combat trainer. (SWI08)

Mythosaur Axe

this was the traditional weapon of the ancient Mandalorian Crusaders. It was named for the mythosaur, which was once native to Mandalore until the species was wiped out by Mandalore the First. Calcified mythosaur bone was used to form the blade of the axe, with overlapping plates being honed to razor-sharpness. This overlapping pattern was repeated on each side of the handle, creating a deadly crescent of bone. (SWI80)

Mythra

this is a valuable metal often used in jewelry settings. (SWJ8)

Myto, Keos

this Old Republic scout is given credit for discovering the hyperspace route known as Myto's Arrow. His ability to locate faster routes between existing points was well-known, and several corporations and financial firms contracted him to seek out these routes. One such route was to link Dantooine with Obtrexta Sector, which eventually became Myto's Arrow. (SWJ8)

Myto's Arrow

this hyperspace route, discovered by Keos Myto, was commissioned by several financial institutions to connect Dantooine with Obtrexta Sector. However, the route had to pass through a multitude of dust storms, nebulae, and other dangerous phenomena, and many of the planets along the way were of little use to developers. Over time, the route was abandoned. (SWJ8)

Mytus V

the name for Stars' End given by Han Solo to Pakka when he was trying to flush out Rekkon's murderer. (HSE)

Mytus VI

the name for Stars' End given by Han Solo to Torm when he was trying to flush out Rekkon's murderer. Unfortunately for Torm, he discarded the name Han gave him and used the correct name, Mytus VII. (HSE)

Mytus VII

the planetoid on which the Corporate Sector Authority built the Stars' End penal colony. It is located in the outer fringes of the Corporate Sector, and is the outermost planet in its system. An asteroid belt separates it from the other planets and its primary sun. It is a lifeless, airless rock. (HSE)

Mytus VIII

the name for Stars' End given by Han Solo to Atuarre when he was trying to flush out Rekkon's murderer. (HSE)

Myyydril

this clan of Wookiees was native to Kashyyyk, although their home city was destroyed by a group of Trandoshan slavers. They were welcomed into the families of Kerritamba Village until Hosdra tried to assassinate the leader of Kerritamba Village. The Myyydril were outcast from Kerritamba, ordered to flee into the jungles to survive on their own. They wandered for many days until they found the caverns hidden within the Mysess Glade. They made the caverns into a home, reviving the tribe in the hidden safety of the caves. Following the discovery of an odd, brain-like creature by one of the younger Wookiees a few years before the Clone Wars, the Myyydril tribe's numbers began to dwindle. The missing Wookiees were attributed to the so-called Urnsor'is, which multiplied in a separate cave and began feeding on the Myyydril Wookiees. An intense battle between the two groups of cave-dwellers ensued, and the Myyydril Wookiees were unable to find a way to defeat the Urnsor'is. It was during this time that the Poltur Virus began afflicting the Myyydril Wookiees, further decimating their numbers. A being by the name of Yraka Nes agreed to help them fight the Pultor Virus, helping them remain alive during the struggle for Myyydril Cavern. (SWGAL)

Myyydril Cavern

this was the name given to the cavern, located beneath the Mysess Glade on the planet Kashyyyk, that was inhabited by the Wookiees of the Myyydril tribe. (SWGAL)

Mzerc

this alien was one of the Imperial supporters who attended the 13th Imperial Diplomatic Conclave on Phelarion. (CSWEA)

MZX33291 System

originally discovered by an Imperial survey team, this system was dominated by a pulsar that blocked communications into or out of the system. The fifth planet in the system, known as Bimmie, was discovered to have been visited by the Yuuzhan Vong nearly fifty years before they attacked Belkadan and Helska. (DTO)

N-1 Starfighter

this starfighter design was created for the use of the Royal Naboo air defense fleet by the Theed Place Space Vessel Engineering Corps. It was a sleek, needle-shaped craft with two short wings. It employed an astromech droid to offload key functions from the single pilot. Unlike future designs which load the astromech from the top, the smaller N-1 loaded the droid from the bottom. The legs and lower body fit snugly into position, and the droid's head was raised up to extend above the fuselage. This allowed greater connectivity to the ship's computers and freed up valuable space. The wings supported a pair of modified Nubian 221 sublight engines arranged in a J-type, or twin-radial, configuration, which made the craft extremely maneuverable in atmospheres. With this configuration, the N-1 had a top atmospheric speed of 1,100 kilometers per hour. The N-1 was also equipped with a Nubian Monarc C-4 hyperdrive for interstellar travel. The ship was armed with a pair of laser cannons and a proton torpedo launcher, and had a sophisticated sensor and shielding suite. Overall, the N-1 fighter measured eleven meters in length. The distinctive rat-tail which extended from the rear of the ship housed a computer communications package that allowed ground-based controllers on Naboo to relay battle information to each N-1 starfighter while in combat. In keeping with the Naboo culture and ecology, the N-1 was also equipped with propulsion systems that produced a limited amount of emissions. The ship's yellow fuselage was contrasted with a highly-polished chromium finish, which indicated that the ship served the ruler of Naboo. (SW1, X1, IG1, SWK, NEGV)

N-11

this was the callsign of the ARC Trooper known as Ordo. N-11 accompanied Kal Skirata during his tenure as special security advisor to the Galactic Senate, during the height of the Clone Wars. (SWI81)

N2

this Ubrikkian ion engine design was used on many of their cruisers and luxury yachts. (EGV, THG)

N21-3

this was a model of Incom Industries power converter. (GG2)

N21-H

this was one of the two Alliance encryption codes used to protect communications with the Condor drop point facility. (SWJ14)

N2-3PO

this blue and gold protocol droid served the Friends of Paran resistance group on Derilyn, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. N2-3PO had a female personality, and peppered her speech with Gamorrean curses. (OE)

N24-I

Incom's medium-duty shipboard power converter. (SCRE)

N2-f

this was the designation of a high-performance Koensayr microthruster design. (EGV, SWDB)

Na bads

this Mandalorian term translated literally into Basic as 'to not hurt'. (KOTOR)

Na esowon

this was the Mandalorian term for 'hidden'. (KOTOR)

Na Goo

this was an Ewok phrase which meant "stop." (GMR10)

Na hti vel?

this phrase was Togorian for "What do you want?" or "Can I help you?", depending on the context and the delivery. (DH)

Na Maak

this was one of the more common surnames used by the Duros people. Like all such names, Na Maak was used only for official business, to indicate one individual from another when in the presense of non-Duros. This name literally meant "atmospheric dome crafter". (GCG)

Na nuh ghis

this Mandalorian phrase meant 'not now' or, more literally, 'before'. (KOTOR)

Na yoka

this Huttese word translated into Basic as "joke." (GMR5)

Naal

this sweet-smelling incense was created on the planet Sullust. (GCG)

Naal

this was a common female name given to Sullustan females. It referred to a sweet-smelling Sullustan incense. (GCG)

Naal Thorn Burner

this self-contained heating unit was originally developed for use in laboratories and medical applications, although many beings used them to heat the chemicals for their hookah pipes. (VD)

Na'al, Voren

Voren was a cub reporter, building his credentials covering the swoop races on Corsin for the Galactic News Service, when the Empire took control of the planet. He failed to believe that the Empire was working for the good of the galaxy, and decided to join up with the Alliance. He became a skillful agent, infiltrating Imperial bases with relative ease and escaping with vital information on such projects as the Death Star. He later became an assistant historian working for Arhul Hextrophon, working to preserve the history of the Alliance to Restore the Republic. After chronicling the adventures of Luke Skywalker, Han Solo, and Leia Organa, he was named the Director of Council Research for the New Republic. (MTS)

Naalal

this was the primary city located on the planet Naalol. (GMR5)

Naalol

this backwater planet, the third and outermost world in the Mid Rim's Naalol System, was a cool world of temperate plains and snowy poles. The Empire established a small garrison on the planet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GMR5)

Naat Reath

this young humanoid was the sister of Stam Reath, and was also a student of the Force at the Jedi Temple on Coruscant during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. After Stam was killed by Sev'rance Tann on Geonosis, Naat was chosen to become the Padawan learner of Stam's former Master, Echuu Shen-Jon. Naat was eager to prove herself as a Jedi, although she secretly wanted to avenge her brother's death. Naat and her Master were given several mission related to the capture of Sev'rance Tann, but their actions brought them dangerously close to the Dark Side of the Force. When they finally tracked Tann to the planet Krant, Naat was captured by the Dark Jedi and held prisoner. Tann then demanded Shen-Jon to fight her in a lightsaber duel, with Naat's life being the prize. This action pulled Master Shen-Jon completely to the Dark Side, and he tapped into its power to defeat Tann in combat. When he set out to mutilate her, though, Natt stepped in stop her Master from going any further. She decided to return to Coruscant, and begged her Master to come with her. Naat returned alone, and explained to the Jedi Council that Shen-Jon had defeated Sev'rance Tann, though at the cost of his own life. (GBC)

Naatan

this was the capital city of the planet Mawan. It was a wondrous city that was continually lit with soft, glowing lights, making it beautifully visible from space. In order to preserve the beauty of the city's surface, a vast network of tunnels and sublevels was built beneath the city. Some twenty distinct levels made the underground of Naatan into a city unto itself. Some three years before the Battle of Naboo, Naatan was virtually destroyed during a planet-wide civil war. All forms of infrastructure were demolished, and the population was decimated in the fighting. Crimelords moved in and took control of sections of the city, fighting over control of the power grids and other necessities. (JQ6)

Naaz Hola

this was a noted Quermian individual. (UANT)

Nabat

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name meant "farm" or "farmer". (GCG)

Nabat Valla

this black-skinned Twi'lek was a noted information broker during the modern era of the galaxy. (GMR3)

Nabatu

this barren, rocky world was the tenth planet in the Coruscant System. (SBS, PH)

Naberrie, Jobal

a native of Naboo, this woman was Padme' Amidala's mother, having married Ruwee Naberrie. The couple moved from their mountain home to the city of Theed, in an effort to obtain a better education and a richer life. Like most mothers, Jobal was worried about Padme's choice of career, and believed that her daughter spent too little time "just for herself." Jobal's daughters also joked about their mother's cooking: Jobal was a gracious host who served up lavish meals for her family and friends. During the Trade Federation's invasion of Naboo, Jobal and her husband, Ruwee, were arrested and sent to jail, primarily because of their relationship to Padme' who was the Queen of Naboo at the time. Jobal Naberrie was played by Trisha Noble in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones and Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (OWS, AOTCN, SWDB, LEV)

Naberrie, Padme'

this was the birth name of Queen Amidala of Naboo. Padme' showed an interest in politics at a very early age, joining the Apprentice Legislature at 8 and becoming a full Legislator at 11. After being elected Queen, Amidala retained the name Padme' for use whenever she had to travel in dangerous territory. During these times, her handmaiden Sabe' often portrayed Amidala, while Amidala used the Padme' identity as one of the Queen's handmaiden. For this reason, Padme' sometimes disappeared on mysterious errands for the Queen. The reason for these errands became clear to Anakin Skywalker when Amidala petitioned to the Gungan leader Boss Nass for help in breaking the Trade Federation's blockade of Naboo. In reality, Padme' was just an alter ego of Amidala herself. In times of trouble or danger, Padme' would return from her errands, while the handmaiden Sabe' would run off. This was because Sabe' also served as Amidala's double, as they were very similar in appearance. (SW1, TPM, OWS, SWDB)

Naberrie, Pooja

a native of Naboo, this child was Padme' Amidala's niece. Her mother was Padme's sister, Sola. Pooja was just four years old at the time of the Battle of Geonosis. Named for her father Darrad's maternal grandmother, the talkative Pooja sometimes told friends that she wanted to be an astromech droid when she grew up. Pooja Naberrie was played by Hayley Mooy in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones and Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (OWS, AOTCN, SWDB)

Naberrie, Ruwee

a native of Naboo, this man was Padme' Amidala's father. Ruwee was a builder who worked for the Refugee Relief Movement during his education. He later served as a teacher at one of the universities on Naboo. During the Trade Federation's invasion of Naboo, Ruwee and his wife, Jobal, were arrested and sent to jail, primarily because of their relationship to Padme' who was the Queen of Naboo at the time.

After Padme', his youngest daughter, was named as Naboo's Senator to the Old Republic, Ruwee developed a relationship with Queen Jamillia, in order to learn any news of his daughter. Ruwee Naberrie was played by Graeme Blundell in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones and Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (OWS, AOTCN, SWDB, LEV)

Naberrie, Ryoo

a native of Naboo, this child was Padme' Amidala's niece. Ryoo was the elder daughter of Padme's sister, Sola, and was six years old at the time of the Battle of Geonosis. She was named for her maternal great-grandmother, who was in turn named after the ryoo flower. Ryoo Naberrie was played by Kiera Wingate in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones. (OWS, AOTCN, SWDB)

Naberrie, Sola

a native of Naboo, this woman was Padme' Amidala's older sister. Sola worried about Padme' and her desire to set the galaxy right, wondering if her younger sister would ever settle down and have children of her own. Sola married Darred Janren after the pair had graduated from one of Naboo's prestigious universities, and they had two girls, Ryoo and Pooja. Recognizing that the Naberrie name was well-respected in politics and business, they chose to maintain it for their own family. Sola and Darred lived in the city of Theed, close to her parents. Sola Naberrie was played by Claudia Karvan in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones and Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (OWS, AOTCN, SWDB)

Nabkess

this Orolan female worked as a computer expert for Adriav Kavos aboard the Isilia. (PG1)

Nabon, Fenig

this Corellian woman was a smuggler and con artist who operated in the Outer Rim during the early years of the New Republic. She was an orphan, living on the streets of Coronet City when Jett Nabon took her in and adopted her. She learned a great deal from him before his untimely and senseless death on Ord Mantell. Fenig and her partner, Ghitsa Dogder, met about two years after the Battle of Endor while on Socorro, and they were often at odds with each other. Despite this, they maintained an excellent working relationship. Fen as she was known to her friends, was also the owner and pilot of the Star Lady, the ship she used in her daily business. They once contracted the Mistryl to carry a group of Twi'leki dancers to Durga the Hutt, then pestered their Mistryl crew into forcefully ejecting them from the ship in an escape pod. This was all part of Ghitsa's plan to have the dancers be set free, rather than be sold into slavery. She reprogrammed the Mistryl ship's IFF codes to resemble the Indenture as a parting shot, so that Ghitsa could provide the Hutts with the Indenture's codes and claim the Karazaks stole the Twi'leks. Shortly afterward, the Star Lady was sabotaged, and Fen had to put down on Prishardia. There, she encountered Kyp Durron, who was traveling under the name Zeth Fost. Once she figured out who he was, Fen wanted to execute him for the destruction of billions of innocent lives in the Carida System. However, she realized that this was what Kyp wanted her to do, and refused to let him off so easily. Together, they rescued Ghitsa from the crew of the Rook. (TFNR)

Nabon, Jett

Fenig Nabon's adoptive father, Jett taught her everything she knew about starships and smuggling. Jett had been one Karl Ancher's good friends, having flown with Ancher for more than forty years before his death. He was known in certain circles for his compassion in helping the Mistryl, bringing trade to them when no one else cared or bothered to. Unfortunately, Jett was killed in a senseless barroom brawl on Ord Mantell. (TFNR, GMR2)

Naboo

this yellow star was the central body of the Naboo System. (SON)

Naboo

this was the human species which, along with the Gungans, inhabited the planet Naboo. They were descended from colonists from the planet Grizmallt, who arrived at the planet aboard the starships Beneficent Tasia, Constant, and Mother Vima, shortly after the death of Queen Elsinore' den Tasia. Their arrival occurred some 3,900 years before the Battle of Yavin. During much of their existence, the Naboo took great pains to avoid contact with their Gungan neighbors, and were mostly unaware of the huge underwater cities the Gungans built to escape contact. This was the result of a bloody war which was waged several centuries before the Battle of Naboo, in which large portions of both races were killed. However, fringe elements of both species realized that they couldn't survive without the other, and specialized trading relationships were set up. While these relationships were not officially recognized by either government, they were vital to the survival of each species. In general, the Naboo were a peaceful people, and chose to live in harmony with their environment rather than destroy it. When the Trade Federation blockaded, then invaded, their world, the Naboo people were powerless to defend themselves. Their armed forces were largely made up of unproven volunteers. In a bold gambit, Queen Amidala placed her people in a subordinate role to the Gungans, led by Boss Nass, and gained the confidence of the Gungan people. Together, the two races managed to win the Battle of Naboo and re-establish relationships between them. Adulthood and the right to vote among the Naboo was usually based on intellectual maturity instead of age, and aptitude was tested regularly to determine an individual's readiness to become part of society. This method of encouraging individuals to participate and grow led to a enlightened civilization which was free of many of the problems faced by other civilizations. (SW1, TPM, SON) this unusual planet was noted for the fact that it lacks a solid mantle and molten core. Instead, the planet was a ball of softer metals riddled with caverns and small tunnels. This allowed the planet to retain copious amounts of water, giving the surface a swampy environment which hid the true extent of the depths its oceans could reach. The small sections of solid ground were marked by wide, rolling plains. Hidden below the porous rock of the planet was a core of almost pure plasma energy. The human inhabitants of the planet, descended from the Grizmallt colonists of the Beneficent Tasia fleet, learned to harness this plasma energy and used it to provide limitless electric power. Naboo was the homeworld of the Gungan race, although the human settlers called themselves the Naboo. Naboo was the third and primary world of the Naboo System, and was orbited by two small moons. An Outer Rim world, Naboo was located some 34,000 light-years from the galactic core. It was believed that, just prior to the Battle of Geonosis, Count Dooku offered to free Padme' Amidala, as well as Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker, if Senator Amidala turned over control of her planet to the Separatists. Because she refused, Dooku was forced to turn the prisoners over to Poggle the Lesser and the Geonosians, who then tried to execute them in the gladiator arena. (SW1, GF, IWE1, SON, GB, GBC, GC)

Naboo Bomber

developed by the combined efforts of the Royal Security Force and the Theed Palace Vessel Engineering Corps, this starship was prototyped shortly before the Battle of Naboo. It was created from sleek, Nubian components and a Naboo spaceframe, and was heavily armored. It was armed with energy bombs and laser cannons, giving it the ability to strike ground-based installations as well as attack airborne opponents. The Naboo Bomber first saw real action during the struggle to liberate Naboo from the Trade Federation. (BFN)

Naboo Civic Spaceport

this small, public spaceport was located in the city of Theed, on the planet Naboo. (SON)

Naboo Diplomatic Corps

this branch of the Naboo government was set up to provide diplomatic relations with other worlds. (SON)

Naboo Moon Mining Union

this union was formed to represent the various miners who worked in the Naboo System during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. It was formed by forty mining ships and their crews, and was created to ensure proper pricing of the kassoti spice found on the smallest Naboo moon. The Union was forced to land at remote starports on Naboo after the government opened the planet to refugees who were fleeing their homeworlds after secession from the Old Republic. The plan was to ensure safe arrival at Naboo, but the Union began staging "sit-in" protests by leaving their mining ships in port, against the orders of the portmasters. (HNN5)

Naboo Police Cruiser

this system patrol craft was created by the starship engineers of the Naboo, and was designed to guard the Naboo System from invasion. Like the N-1 starfighter, the Naboo Police Cruiser easy to operate, having an astromech droid, sophisticated sensors and targeting systems, and incredibly maneuverability. Its weaponry was less powerful, however, since its primary mission was the policing of the system's spacelanes. (SFT, BFN)

Naboo Royal Advisory Council

this was the small body of advisors formed to assist the ruler of the planet Naboo. Led by the planetary Governor, the Council was made up of men and women with specific ministries to oversee. Most Councils had ministers for architecture, music, the sciences, and education. The history of the Royal Advisory Council paralleled that of the Naboo, as noted by the fact that there had not been a minister of war during the Great Time of Peace. After the Battle of Naboo and the Clone Wars, the Royal Advisory Council remained a vital part of Naboo's government, even after Emperor Palpatine assumed control of the galaxy. The fact that Queen Kylantha refused to dissolve the Council even after the Battle of Yavin was constant point of concern for many Imperial officers. (IG1, ROD)

Naboo Royal Cruiser

this was the sleek, wide-winged starship used by Senator Padme' Amidala to travel between Naboo and Coruscant, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Like the Naboo Royal Starship, the Cruiser was chrome-plated, with visible seams that were simply decorative marking the gleaming hull. The wingspan of the Cruiser measured some ninety-one meters, and the ship's four main engines were mounted into the wings in the J-type configuration. This configuration gave the ship a top speed of 2,000 kilometers per hour in atmosphere, and it could move swiftly through hyperspace with a Class 0.7 hyperdrive. Being a diplomatic ship, the thirty-nine-meter-long Cruiser was sometimes called a Diplomatic Barge, and lacked true weaponry. However, the Naboo had learned their lesson during the Battle of Naboo, and provided the Cruiser with enhanced, redundant shielding. It was also escorted on all trips by four N-1 starfighters, which could link up to the wings of the Cruiser for refueling and during jumps through hyperspace. It was commanded by a pilot and co-pilot, and had deck stations for a navigator, a shield officer, and a communications officer. Four luxury cabins and six guard cabins completed the living quarters. Unfortunately for the Naboo, the Cruiser was destroyed shortly before the Battle of Geonosis, when Senator Amidala returned to the city-planet for the vote on the military Creation Act. The ship's landing platform was rigged with explosives by Jango Fett and Zam Wesell, who had been hired by the Trade Federation to eliminate the Senator. Senator Amidala was actually traveling in a support ship at the time, but her handmaiden Corde' died in the explosion. (AOTC, AOTCN, X2, NEGV)

Naboo Royal Starship

this is the name give to the chrome-plated, sleek transport ship used by the royalty of the Naboo. Created by the Theed Palace Space Vessel Engineering Corps from a Nubian substructure and components, the 76-meter-long spaceframe was designed around a J-type configuration. Equipped with a pair of Headon-5 sublight engines, a Nubian 327 hyperdrive, and a Nubian T-14 hyperdrive generator, the Royal Starship was easily recognized by its highly reflective chromium plating and distinctive, dagger-like shape. The Royal Starship was equipped with stations for up to 8 astromech droids that were used to perform a variety of functions, including repair and navigation. The ship, completed six years before the Battle of Naboo, was equipped with heavy-duty shields, but no weapons. It required a command crew of two, with six auxiliary crewers and eight astromech droids. It measured 76 meters in length. (SW1, TPM, IG1, X1, OWS)

Naboo Senatorial Delegation

this was the name used by Senator Palpatine and his entourage, during the period leading up to the Battle of Naboo and Palpatine's promotion to Supreme Chancellor. The Delegation purposely downplayed the role of the Gungans as that of "simple-minded barbarians who have barely mastered the basic hallmarks of civilization," indicating the roots of Palpatine's xenophobia. (SON)

Naboo Star Skiff

this small transport ship was developed by the Theed Palace Space Vessel Engineering Corps of Naboo. It was essentially a flying wing, with the main fuselage and twin engines mounted on the underside. (TCG10)

Naboo Swamp Moss

this moss, native to the planet Naboo, grew in cascading sheets that hung from the branches of tree that grew along the edges of swamps. (MBS)

Naboo Technologies

this small corporation, based on the planet Naboo during the last decades of the Old Republic, produced a variety of military and personal communication devices. (AEG)

Naboo Underground

this was the name of the rebel movement which was formed by students and professors who studied in the city of Theed, during the blockade and subsequent invasion of Naboo by the Trade Federation. (IOT)

Naboo Wastelands

this was an area of the planet Naboo which was barren of most forms of life. (JQA)

Naboo Yacht

this needle-shaped, H-type yacht was manufactured by the Theed Palace Space Vessel Engineering Corps during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Based on the yacht superstructure developed on the planet Nubia, the 47.9-meter-long Naboo Yacht was created for Senator Padme' Amidala's personal use. It was capable of speeds near 8,000 kilometers per hour in atmosphere, and was equipped with a Class 0.9 Nubia 150 hyperdrive core. This speed allowed Senator Amidala to quickly reach her destination, but proved to be a problem for the N-1 escort fighters that were assigned to protect her. The Naboo Yacht required a pilot and co-pilot to operate, with deck space for an optional navigation or communications officer and a shield operator. A pair of astromech droids completed the crew, providing navigational redundancy. However, the ship was specifically designed to be operated by a single pilot, for those times when Senator Amidala needed to travel quickly and discreetly. Like most Naboo craft, the Yacht was plated in gleaming chrome, and was unarmed. The shielding systems of the Naboo Yacht were jointly developed by the Naboo and the Gungans, providing nearly instantaneous activation in case of emergency. The central quarters used by Senator Amidala were located in a shielded capsule, which could be ejected from the craft if necessary to escape capture. (X2, NEGV)

Nabooan Tusk-cat

this feline predator was native to the planet Naboo, where it hunted the plains for small creatures. Despite their fearsome reputation as hunters, the tusk-cats were natural shepherds and could be domesticated and used as herding animals. The Naboo royalty maintained a pack of tusk-cats for use as mounts for parades and hunts, and many wealthy families kept tusk-cats as guardians for their children and homes. These mammals were named for the two heavy tusks which jutted from their lower jaw, which were used to pierce the flesh of their prey. The long tail of the tusk-cat was used for counterbalancing the creature as it ran, giving the tusk-cat a swift gait across the open plains. (GF, WSW)

Nabooian

this was another name for the human race which was native to the planet Naboo. (GMR1)

Nabooian Sheep

this was a species of stupid herd animals native to the planet Naboo. (T5)

Nabrina

this was a common name given to Twi'lek females, and meant "beast of burden" in the Twi'leki language. (GCG)

Nabrina Smoo

this purple-skinned, female Twi'lek was living on the planet Coruscant at the time of the Battle of Geonosis. She was a friend of Ayy Vida, and frequented the Outlander Club during this time. (SWDB)

Nabrun Leids

this male Morseerian was a smuggler and pilot for hire who frequented the Mos Eisley cantina, looking for work. He was a former fighter pilot, and will take anyone anywhere...for the right price. After the Battle of Hoth, Leids was contracted to the Drackmarian Omogg, but broke the contract on his own and fled. He was pursued by bounty hunters, and hid out in the Periphery. (CCG, SSR)

Nabyl, Bock

this Imperial served warlord Zsinj as the Captain of the Hawkbat. (WS)

Nace, Beeyon

once an aspiring logistics clerk on Coruscant, Nace was a heavy-set man with unique preferences. After being caught with the Governor's daughter, he was sent packing, and ended up on Tatooine. There, he has served as an assistant to the Imperial Prefect, logging the incoming and outgoing ships at the Mos Eisley Spaceport. (GG7)

Nacha

this was once of the many names given to Duros females. An ancient Duros name, it meant "fortune-teller" or "prophetess". (GCG)

Nacht-5

this is BlasTech's smoke grenade. (CSA)

Nackhar

a Nartian working as Wuher's assistant in the Mos Eisley cantina when Ben Kenobi and Luke Skywalker sought passage to Alderaan. He had to clean up the mess from Doctor Evazan and Ponda Baba. (TME)

Nackhawn

a carrion bird native to the planet Lucazec. (BTS)

Nada Synnt

this smuggler went by a series of unusual and laughable aliases. Synnt's name was used in a false transmission provided to Chenlambec and Tinian l'att, during their attempt to trap Bossk near Lomabu III. The Wookiees behind the plan had created a sound bite of Han Solo asking a passenger whether or not they wanted to sell their cargo back to Nada Synnt. (TBH, SWJ10)

Nadad, Lora

this young woman was a Padawan learner at the Almas Academy during the years following the Battle of Naboo. She was unusual in that she was nineteen years old at the time, much older than most students trained on Coruscant. She was chosen for training late in life, having endured a rough childhood among The Lost. She had been something of a leader to the group of Lost children of Forard, working hard to give her children a chance to succeed. When she was chosen as a Padawan learner, Lora took advantage of the position to bring the struggle of The Lost into the public consciousness on Cularin. (WOTC)

Nadarr

this man was a regular patron of Didi Oddo's café, some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. His wife was ill, and Nadarr often visited the café in order to take a break from her care. (DH)

Nadd, Freedom

this ancient student of the Force was amazingly open and willing to touch the Force when he was first trained on Ossus. However, he was completely unprepared for his first true test, shortly after the Jedi Masters passed him over for promotion to a full Jedi Knight. In his anger at not being given the title of Jedi Knight, Nadd struck down Matta Tremayne and succumbed to the Dark Side of the Force and the teachings of the Sith. He became proficient in the use of the Dark Side Sith magic, but could progress no further than apprentice, since the reigning Dark Lord was still young (by Dark Side standards) and the Sith had declared that only one Dark Lord could rule at any time. This frustrated Freedon Nadd to the point that he rebelled against the Sith. He fled to Yavin 4, where he was trained by the ancient spirit of Naga Sadow. When he felt strong enough, Nadd destroyed Sadow's spirit and set out to become a Dark Lord. He traveled to Korriban to complete his training, and later took a wealth of Sith artifacts with him from Korriban to Onderon. On Onderon, he began to teach the Sith lore to the Onderonians at Iziz, hoping to establish his own Sith Empire, and he used his Sith knowledge to help the Onderonians repel the Beast Masters time and again. (This has been passed down by the Naddists in the form of a truism that Freedon defeated "the wild beasts and aborigines" of Onderon.) As his power grew, the Jedi Knights learned of his atrocities on the planet, and sent a task force out to bring his reign to an end. There was a pitched battle, and eventually Freedon Nadd was defeated. However, his Sith teachings had been accepted by the Onderonians, and Nadd's bloodlines were extended during his stay, so the power of the Dark Side has never left Onderon. Nadd himself managed to preserve his spirit, locked away with the Sith artifacts he worked to obtain. His spirit was released nearly 400 years later when Exar Kun discovered Nadd's tomb, and Nadd's spirit led Kun to Yavin 4. There, Nadd tried to use Kun as a way to progress further down the dark path. However, when Kun became the wearer of the Sith amulets hidden on the moon, Nadd's spirit was obliterated by Kun's rage. (FNU, TOJ, DLS, TOJC, DSSB, NEGC)

Naddist Revolt, The

this was another name for the Freedon Nadd Uprisings. (ECH)

Naddists

the followers of Freedon Nadd's teachings based on the planet Onderon. They feel that Nadd was their savior, and that he gave them the strength to drive out the wild natives and beasts, which allowed them to settle the city of Iziz. Their belief in Nadd leads them to believe that the Jedi Knights are the cause of all their problems, since it was the Jedi who were called in to bring Nadd down and recover the Sith artifacts. (DLS)

Nadia, Zanthé

a native of Pelagon, this woman was the leader of the Pelagia Freedom Force during the Galactic Civil War. She was on Pelagon when it was subjugated by the Empire, and dedicated the rest of her life to bringing the Empire down. (LOE)

Nadiem

this remote planet was located on the edge of the Outer Rim, and was settled by a group of farmers. The planet was besieged by the droid forces of the Confederacy of Independent Systems some five months after the Battle of Geonosis. A group of clone troopers, led by Luminara Unduli and Barriss Offee, was able to defeat the Separatist forces and free the planet's settlers. Other Jedi, such as B'dard Tone, suffered injuries after confronting General Grievous on the far side of the planet. (T2, CWA2, SWGG)

Nadin Paal

this Gran served as a sort of trade envoy for the criminal organization run by Nirama during the last decades of the Old Republic. Nadin Paal's role was to interface between Nirama's organization and the planetary officials of the Cularin System, ensuring that there is no misunderstanding about Nirama's outward goals. Riboga the Hutt once put a conditional bounty on Nadin Paal's head, a bounty which could only be claimed if the Gran was captured outside the Cularin System. This forced him to remain a member of the criminal underworld, although he longed to find more respectable work. (LFC)

Nadon

this Ithorian surname was believed to mean "tender of gardens" or "caretaker", according to historian who studied the Ithorian race. (GCG)

Nadon Farms

this was one of the many Tatooine moisture farms which sold their water and produce commercially, during the early years of the New Republic. (TG)

Nadri

this smuggler was based on the planet Gelgelar during the early years of the New Republic. (GUN)

Nad'Ris

this city was the planetary capital of Prishardia, and was the site of the planet's largest starport. (TFNR)

Naduarr

this being owned and operated a liquor store in Mos Espa, on the planet Tatooine, during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. Despite the fact that Naduarr carried some of the best spirits and wines available, his prices were always reasonable. (TG)

Naeco

an Alliance starfighter pilot serving on the Independence with Keyan Farlander, he was a practical joker. (XW)

Naescorcom

this manufacturing consortium was controlled by corporate representatives from seven Outer Rim planets during the last decades of the Old Republic. Five years before the Battle of Naboo, they established a manufacturing facility near Genarius by funding the development of Ipsus city. (LFC)

Naeshahn

this Jedi Knight and her padawan Ebor Taulk were dispatched by Mace Windu to the planet Yinchorr, to investigate the aggressive actions of the Yinchorri. Unfortunately, both Naeshahn and Ebor Taulk were killed upon their arrival. Their mutilated bodies were returned to Chancellor Valorum on Coruscant as the Yinchorri response. (AOW)

Nafen

this nocturnal insect is generally regarded as a pest. It is characterized by the harsh, clacking sound its wings make as it flies. They often carry diseases, which is mutated by the insect and fed back into the environment. (POT)

Nag

this Shyriiwook word was used as the prefix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "heroic" or "mythic", and could be combined with one or more suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Naga Sadow

an ancient Sith magician who practiced a thousand years before the Freedon Nadd uprisings, Naga Sadow was one of the strongest Sith Lords at the time Marka Ragnos died. Trained by the old mage Simus, Sadow was an intense individual who wished to bring the Sith Empire to the forefront of the galaxy, a viewpoint not held by his contemporary, Ludo Kressh. Upon Ragnos' death, Sadow chose not to attend the huge funeral. Rather, he plotted how he could obtain the position of Dark Lord of the Sith. At the close of the procession, Sadow confronted Kressh, and the two Sith Lords battled for the position of Dark Lord of the Sith. This clash of Sith energy brought Marka Ragnos' spirit back from the dead, and the spirit warned both of them that conflict within the ranks of the Sith would further no one's plans. With the appearance of Jori and Gav Daragon, Sadow discovered a way to further his own goals. Ludo Kressh believed them to be scouts from the Old Republic's advanced forces, so Sadow freed them and staged a rescue attempt in which many Sith warriors were killed. Sadow claimed it was Kressh's inability to mobilize the Sith forces that caused the deaths, and claimed himself Dark Lord of the Sith in order to guide the Sith into battle. He then took the Daragons to his two fortresses and hid them, playing upon their emotions and their latent Force abilities to gain their confidence. He built up Gav's strength, teaching him Sith magic while manipulating him into a position where he would obey any command. Sadow recovered the Starbreaker 12 and returned it to Jori, telling her that Gav had been killed and that Sadow could no longer protect her from the other Sith Lords. Her flight provided Sadow with all the hyperspace coordinates he needed to begin attacking the Old Republic. When Kressh finally mustered his own forces to attack Sadow, he attacked at Khar Delba. This expended much of his resources, while Sadow hid on Khar Shian. From there, he launched a massive counterattack, decimating Kressh's forces and nearly killing the rival magician. Sadow then retired to Primus Goluud, where he entered a mediation sphere and launched his attacks on the Republic, augmenting his forces with illusory warriors and monsters. When Gav Daragon disabled the sphere, Sadow's concentration was broken. The Jedi Knights and the Republic were able to see through the illusions, and eventually defeated the Sith forces. Sadow, under attack by the Republic's fleet at Primus Goluud, chose to rip the star apart and destroy them all. Gav was able to provide the Republic fleet with an escape vector, saving them from the conflagration but dooming himself. Sadow limped back to the Sith Empire, where he was confronted by Ludo Kressh's restored forces. In the opening acts of the Great Hyperspace War, Sadow used the Dark Side of the Force to coerce one of his starship captains to ram Kressh's ship, destroying his chief rival and securing his position as Dark Lord. However, this left his forces vulnerable to Empress Teta's fleet. In a last-ditch effort, Sadow drew Teta's forces into the Denarii Nova in hopes of destroying them all, but the Nova flared up and destroyed much of Sadow's fleet and part of the Tetan fleet. Sadow himself managed to survive, and fled to Yavin 4 to begin rebuilding his empire. Note that Lightsabers and Dark Lords of the Sith claim Naga Sadow was an insectile beast of pure Sith blood who learned how to give life to the dead. The ruling Dark Lord of the Sith did not appreciate Sadow's bold attempts, and sentenced him to die. Sadow took his knowledge and his followers and fled to the moon Yavin 4. He was eventually hunted down by the Old Republic, who branded him an outlaw and chased him to the Denarii System. There, Sadow used the powers of the Sith to rip the cores from the two Denarii stars and fling them at the pursuing fleet. The fleet was destroyed, and the stars exploded to form the Denarii Nebula. Sadow survived the encounter, but later passed into legends. It was believed that his spirit was finally destroyed on Yavin 4 by Freedom Nadd, who learned much of his own Sith training from Sadow's spirit. Naga Sadow and his followers are now extinct, but their knowledge and powers remain behind on Yavin 4. (DLS, L, GAS, FOSE, NEGC)

this near-Human race came from the planet Nagai, located in a star cluster which was beyond the borders of both the Old Republic and the Empire. Distinguished by their pale, translucent skin and their thin, angular features, the Nagai had jet-black hair which grew upwards instead of falling down. After the Battle of Endor, the Nagai supported one of Lumiya's bids to overthrow the New Republic. The Nagai were a race of humanoid warriors which were bitter enemies of the Tofs. The Nagai claimed to be from a planet beyond the known galaxy, but their homeworld of Nagi was later discovered in the Unknown Regions. When they realized that the Tofs were trying to take over the galaxy, the Nagai joined with the New Republic and the Imperial remnants to overcome the Tofs. Little was known about the Nagai until well after the Battle of Endor, and even the Alliance referred to them simply as "Knives", after the individual Nagai who tried to enslave the Wookiees on Kashyyyk. After the defeat of the Empire and the formation of the New Republic, the Nagai split into two peaceful factions. One group remained neutral, and set out to locate a new homeworld. The other faction decided to join the New Republic, while the Nagai navy set out to liberate as many Nagai as they could from Tof-controlled worlds. (SWG3, WSV, EGA, MC96, LTA6, GMR1)

Nagaian

this was the native language of the Nagai race. (UANT)

Nagak

this was a kind of wide-hulled boat, created to hunt styanax in the Sea of Jarad, on the planet Tralus. Propelled by oars, the nagak was equipped with a harpoon launcher. (CCW)

Nagan

this was one of the many Strike-class cruisers that made up the front lines of the Imperial Naval fleet. (TIE)

Nagelson, Sleepy

this fighter pilot served the New Republic as part of the 21st Recon Group. He earned the nickname "Sleepy" because in-flight monitors recorded him sleeping through a reconnaissance mission during the battle against Grand Admiral Thrawn. Sleepy drew recon duty during the Yevethan Purge, flying over Wakiza to gather information about the Yevethan forces there. Like most of the pilots who drew recon duty during the Purge, Sleepy was shot down and killed before he could return. (SOL)

Nagi

this planet, located in the Unknown Regions beyond the borders established by the Empire, was the homeworld of the Nagai. Note that Marvel Comics' Star Wars comic, issue 104, indicates that the Nagai homeworld was from a different galaxy. (EGA, MC104)

Nagi

this planet was the homeworld of the Nagai people. (LTA6, MC102)

Nagnol

this gas was known to disrupt the abilities of starship sensors systems, if released in sufficient concentrations. (T8)

Nagraoao

Roark Garnet's faithful Wookiee companion. (RPG)

Nagwa

one of the New Republic Agave-class picket ships dispatched under the command of Pakkpekatt to intercept the Teljkon vagabond. The Nagwa was ordered back to drydock after the mission failed to capture the vagabond at Gmir Askilon. (SOL)

Nagyan

this humanoid bounty hunter was among the group that agreed to help Risso Nu eliminate Boba Fett on Ma'ar Shaddam. When the group launched their attack, Fett managed to grab Nagyan's knife and used it to kill Eermik. Nagyan tried to attack Fett using a sword he had strapped to his back, but Fett had no intention of getting close to him. Pulling the knife from Eermik's dead body, Fett threw the knife with deadly accuracy into Nagyan's chest, killing him instantly. (T18)

Nahkee

a huge, innocent phlog, Nahkee is the son of Zut and Dobah. (ECAR)

Nahosos

a YT-1300 transport used by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Nahra

this was a form of Kaminoan performance art, in which the performers often appeared to be inert. (RCHC)

Nahrunba

this Dug was a member of Sebolto's gang during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Nahrunba and his older brothers, Jahrunba and Sahrnba, worked as smugglers during their employment with Sebolto, transporting death sticks from Tatooine to Malastare. The Pixelito Grand Council issued a bounty for their capture, and Jango Fett managed to capture all three brothers during his attempt to meet with Sebolto. (BH)

Naia

this green-skinned humanoid was a native of the planet Solem, and was part of the rebel underground that sprang up during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. Naia was a medic, and she was one of the few survivors of Imperial Governor Malvander's subjugation of Solem. (SWES)

Naiana

this was a common name among Cerean females. Unlike their male counterparts, Cerean females use a single name unless they became a bond-wife. In this case, a female will take on their husband's grandfather's name for official matters. The name Naiana referred to a fruity wine that was created on Cerea. (GCG)

Na'Ilia

this female Tarasin was distinguished by her ability to understand offworld technology. (LFCW)

Naithol

this Sullustan agreed to help Roganda Ismaren and Drost Elegin recover the Eye of Palpatine. He was an executive of the SoroSuub Corporation during the early years of the New Republic. (COJ)

Najarka

this planet, located in Rayter Sector, was surveyed by the Empire. The planet is too far from its sun to sustain life, and yet a band of dense rainforests rings the planet. It was discovered that there was intense geophysical activity beneath the rainforests, where the heat of the magma below the crust warms the glacier and provides the necessary heat to encourage life to grow. Icequakes continually rearrange the glacial portion of the planet, which is pummeled by hurricane-force winds and metal-piercing hail. The unique plant life has been featured in several Imperial buildings, including the Emperor's own gardens. It was on Najarka that Yearo Seville and his gang kidnapped Crying Dawn Singer for the Farool brothers. The average day on Najarka lasts 28 standard hours, and its year lasts 402 local days. (TA)

Najarkan Creature

this strange beast is found in the thin band of rainforests near fissures in the glaciers of Najarka. At over 30 meters in length, this huge predatorial reptile has no natural enemies. Its toothy maw averages two meters in width, and its large eyes are designed like low-resolution photoreceptors. The eyes are attuned to searching for and locating the kichicolia, its primary foodsource. The Empire quickly discovered that this creature's ability to seek out the white and black pattern of the kichicolia led it to stalk and capture stormtroopers in full armor. (TA)

Najib

this alien race is native to the planet Najiba. They are very friendly to offworlders, but are also very suspicious by nature. They are humanoid in physique, being stocky and well-muscled. Their legs are quite short, and their arms appear to be overly long, but they are kilogram-for-kilogram as powerful as Wookiees and Houk. They were known to be hard-working and determined and quick to adapt to new situations. They were discovered by Old Republic scouts many millennia ago, but the screening of the Children of Najiba kept them isolated for many centuries. The Empire eventually found the Najib and subjugated them, wiping out entire villages when the Najib fought back. The Najiba had a tribal society, with individual tribes being ruled by a specialized governing tribe. This governing tribe was made up from representatives of each of the lesser tribes. (SWJ4, TFE, SWJ13, AE, SWJ15)

Najiba

this Outer Rim world is situated near Tatooine, in the Faj System. Najiba has an elliptical orbit, and passes very close to its system's asteroid belt for much of it. Thus, traffic on and off the planet is very limited, and is curtailed whenever Najiba passes closest to the belt. The asteroids themselves are known as the Children of Najiba. Its axial tilt and its elliptical orbit resulted in a spring-like season which never truly ended, but was broken by electrical disruptions and torrential rainstorms. This is the homeworld of the Najib, a friendly yet suspicious race. The average day on Najiba is short, lasting only 18 standard hours. The Najiban year encompasses 215 local days. (SWJ4, TFE, SWJ13)

Najus

this ancient Sith Lord was known as the creator of the Bracers of Najus. (GMR10)

Nak Shimor

this planet was located along the Perlemian Trade Route, on the border between the Colonies and the Inner Rim. (TOJC)

Nak Simm

this Zabrak served as Torga the Hutt's chief lieutenant during the height of the New Order. He was known to be an excellent judge of character, a trait which Torga valued in choosing the members of his criminal organization. Shortly after the Battle of Yavin, Nak Simm was scheduled to meet with Jolla the Hutt to discuss a possible alliance between the two minor crimelords. Before he could attempt the meeting, however, Nak Simm was assassinated by Nomo Sliken, a Clawdite killer who worked for Moska the Hutt. Nomo Sliken then attended the meeting in Nak Simm's place, hoping to destroy Jolla's confidence in Torga. (WOA23) this Trandoshan criminal was sent to Dles IV for the murder and kidnapping of Alliance agents. Nakaron had been exiled from his home city of Forak, on the colony world of Dosha, for his conceited disrespect and outspoken views. He found work with Glorga the Hutt, and tied to expose Lanish Ran as an Imperial spy. Glorga refused to believe Nakaron and ordered him banished from his court. In a fit of rage, Nakaron murdered Glorga and then killed Agent Ran. Alliance agent Thom Clessigan witnessed the bloodshed and immediately arrested Nakaron. Shortly afterward, Nakaron hijacked the shuttle that was transporting him to the penal world, took its crew hostage, and fled. He was wanted by the New Republic for a variety of crimes, not the least of which was the kidnapping of Agent Clessigan. (SWJ4)

Nakaron

Nakay, Keela

this young Balawai girl was one of five children rescued by Mace Windu from a lava flow in the jungle of Haruun Kal, shortly after the Battle of Geonosis, when he traveled to the planet to locate Depa Billaba. The children, led by her brother Terrel, had been trying to return to their camp in a steamcrawler when it was caught by the laval. Keela had suffered a massive head injury, and was unconscious when Master Windu found the children. When Pek Rankin and the rest of his group arrived to recover the children, one of the other parents revealed that Keela's father had died in earlier fighting. Terrel was later killed by Kar Vastor, leaving Keela and her sister Pell orphaned. The sisters, along with Urno and Nykl, were taken in by Nick Rostu, after Windu left them to seek out answers in the jungle. (SHPT)

Nakay, Pell

this young Balawai girl was one of five children rescued by Mace Windu from a lava flow in the jungle of Haruun Kal, shortly after the Battle of Geonosis, when he traveled to the planet to locate Depa Billaba. The children, led by her brother Terrel, had been trying to return to their camp in a steamcrawler when it was caught by the laval. Pell and two of the boys, Urno and Nykl, had managed to get outside the steamcrawler, but were trapped by the lava. Master Windu was able to get Pell to urge the two boys off the steamcrawler, so that he could rescue Terrel and Keela. When Pek Rankin and the rest of his group arrived to recover the children, one of the other parents revealed that Pell's father had died in earlier fighting. Terrel was later killed by Kar Vastor, leaving Pell and her sister Keela orphaned. The sisters, along with Urno and Nykl, were taken in by Nick Rostu, after Windu left them to seek out answers in the jungle. (SHPT)

Nakay, Terrel

this young Balawai boy was one of five children rescued by Mace Windu from a lava flow in the jungle of Haruun Kal, shortly after the Battle of Geonosis, when he traveled to the planet to locate Depa Billaba. Terrel was the oldest - at thirteen- of the group, and acted as their leader during their attempt to travel back to their camp in a steamcrawler after their original camp was overrun by the ULF. The steamcrawler had been caught in the lava, and Terrel stubbornly refused to allow Master Windu to rescue him, until Windu explained that three others were already safely under his control. Later, Terrel and his companions began to think that Windu was actually a bounty hunter, despite his obvious Korun appearance. Windu did nothing to change their opinion, since it maintained his true identity. When Pek Rankin and the rest of his group arrived to recover the children, one of the other parents revealed that Terrel's father had died in earlier fighting. Terrel, already distraught because of this, flew into a rage when Master Windu revealed that he was a Jedi, in an effort to defend the children from ULF attackers. In response to what he perceived to be deception and lies, Terrel used a blunt knife to maim Besh and Chalk, who had been in a state of thanatizine suspension. Unfortunately, this act of mindless aggression was discovered by Kar Vastor, who used his vibroshields to cut Terrel in two in retribution for his actions. (SHPT)

Naked Hutt Cantina

a watering hole located on the planet Omman. (BSS)

N'a-kee-tula

this green-skinned boy, a native of Shadda-Bi-Boran whose name meant "sweetheart," was rescued from the doomed planet by Padme' Naberrie. Unfortunately, the natives of Shadda-Bi-Boran were unable to adapt to the planet on which they were placed, and they died shortly afterward. (AOTCN, AAOTC)

Nakhym, Golov

this pirate Captain was captured by the Alliance, shortly before the Battle of Endor, after his forces began raiding Alliance supplies. (XWA)

Nak'tra Crystal

this tough crystal was native to the deepest caverns found on the planet Kashyyyk. These crystals were harvested by the Wookiees of the Myyydril tribe, who found that they were an effective weapon against the Urnsor'is. Individual crystals were used as the focusing lense for specialized blaster weapons, which emitted coherent energy of a specific wavelength that did large amounts of damage to the Urnsor'is. (SWGAL)

Naktu Jeera

this male Kadas'sa'Nikto was a known associate of Longo Two-Guns during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Jabba the Hutt issued a bounty for his capture in connection with the ambush of a Twi'lek supply convoy near Mos Gamos, which was eventually claimed by Jango Fett, who was on Tatooine trying to arrange a meeting with Jabba. (BH)

Nal Hutta

a planet in the Corellian sector, it was colonized by the Hutts and is the birthplace of Jabba the Hutt. The name "Nal Hutta" means "glorious jewel" in Huttese, which described its setting near a radioactive nebula. The planet, located in the Y'Toub System, was at one time known as Evocar, and was inhabited by the Evocii race. The Hutts, fleeing the desolation of Varl, settled on Evocar as a suitable home. They began trading technology to the Evocci for land, and continued to do so until they owned most of the planet. The Evocii realized what was happening, but too late. The Hutts began construction on a multitude of palaces and pleasure sites before the Evocii could do anything about. Their appeals to the Old Republic were taken seriously, but the contracts they signed with the Hutts were ironclad in favor of the Hutts. Even the Jedi Knights were powerless. The Hutts forced them off the planet and onto Nar Shaddaa, where they were eventually mutated over the years by the various technologies in use on the moon. The planet is ruled by the oldest Hutt families, who control Nar Shaddaa from their homes. The planet is huge, but it has no natural heavy metals. Thus, its density is less than expected. Its day lasts 87 standard hours, and its year is 413 local days in duration. What remains of the planet's natural landscape is flat, marshy bogs. In the aftermath of the Battle of Fondor and the duplicitous actions of Borga the Hutt, the Yuuzhan Vong targetted Nal Hutta for destruction. The Vong bombarded the planet from a remote location, although many of the missiles exploded in the atmosphere. Eventually, both Nal Hutta and the moon Nar Shaddaa were overtaken by the alien invaders, and teraformed into worlds more suitable to them. (DE1, DESB, DS, JE, BP, SWJ15, SOT)

Nal Hutta Jewel

this was the name of Ganis the Hutt's Ubrikkian Minstrel-class pleasure yacht. (IA)

Nal Hutta Kal'tamok

this was a Huttese newsfeed which was available on the computer networks of the galaxy. It was produced in a Huttese-only version as well as a Basic version. It was rumored that the Empire once tried to shut down the Kal'tamok, but there were too many bureaucrats who used the newsfeed for their own illicit dealings that any action was delayed indefinitely. (SWJ3, SWJ13)

Nalan

this Twi'leki woman was one of the dancers Brin'shak agreed to send to Durga the Hutt. Ghitsa Dogder had negotiated the deal, then she and Fenig Nabon arranged for passage from Ryloth to Nal Hutta. However, Fen and Ghitsa never planned to give the dancers to Durga. The tricked Shada D'ukal and Dunc T'racen into forcing them into an escape pod, in order to cover up the fact that they really wanted to dancers to go free. Nalan provided Shada with a message rod from Fen, which explained the whole situation. The message from Fen also requested that Nalan and the dancers be returned to Ryloth, and delivered to the Dira clan for safekeeping. (TFNR)

Nalan Cheel

one of the Bith performing with Figrin D'an and the Modal Nodes, Nalan played the Bandfill. He was homesick for the comforts of life on Clak'dor VII. (TME, CCG2)

Nalargon

this large musical instrument was operated by a keyboard and foot pedals. It had a great many pipes and subharmonic resonators that produced a multitude of sounds, which were considered soothing to many humanoid species. The instrument was favored by many jazz bands throughout the galaxy. (THG, ROD)

Nala-tree Frog

this amphibian was a favorite food of Kibbick the Hutt. He introduced them to his uncle, Aruk, who demanded that a supply be made readily available for his consumption. Teroenza, sick of the Besadii control over the Ylesian colonies and his own life, began working with Jabba and Jiliac to poison the frogs he sent to Aruk, hoping to kill the ancient slug. (THG)

Naldar

this planet was one of many worlds that were attacked by splinter groups of the Empire, in the wake of the Battle of Endor. It was located near the planet Belderone, and was once a refuge for the natives of Belderone who also fled Imperial subjugation. (MC92)

Naleshekan

this ancient Selkath served as a judge in Ahto City, on his homeworld of Manaan, during the decades leading up to the Great Sith War. Naleshekan was one of the judges who presided over the trial of Sunry. Naleshekan was neutral in the case, believing that Sunry and Elassa were simply idealistic opponents who clashed over their ideals. (KOTOR)

Nalgol

this Imperial Navy Captain was a member of the Kuat family, and was the commander of the Tyrannic during the early years of the New Republic. He maintained his command following the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn, and was part of the group picked by Moff Disra to begin his assault on the New Republic. Shortly after the revelation of the Bothan involvement in the Caamas Incident, Disra got Nalgol and three other Navy Captains together to introduce them to Thrawn, artfully portrayed by Flim. Although he didn't trust Disra, Nalgol accepted the command of an assault on the Bothan homeworld of Bothawui, in an attempt to further undermine the fragile position the New Republic was in at the time. Even with the reappearance of Thrawn, Nalgol questioned the necessity of the mission. Every vigilant, Nalgol shook Thrawn's hand after accepting his orders. This allowed him to use the specialized Kuat family crest ring to obtain a skin sample. The ring was designed to administer poison, but Nalgol hadn't used it in years. Disra, at Major Tierce's request, had taken great pains to alter Thrawn's records, so that any genetic analysis done by Nalgol would prove Flim to be the actual Thrawn. Like his comrades, including Captain Dorja, Nalgol was completely fooled by the performance and the subsequent confirmation of the false Thrawn's genetics. Arriving fully cloaked in the Bothawui system, Nalgol and his peers captured a comet in a masterful piece of coordination. The comet was brought into the cloaking device's range, and the Tyrannic was hidden behind it. As the comet moved toward Bothawui, Nalgol was under orders to attack from behind the cloak, in an effort to draw the various alien forces amassed there into an all-out civil war. (SOP, VOF)

Nali-Erun

Nallen

this tall, bald-headed Alderaanian man was the servant of Raal and Heeth Panteer and their family, during the early years of the New Order. Nallen often accompanied the two young men to their vacation home on a remote moon in the Ryloth System, and was with them when the first Death Star destroyed Alderaan. (SWEPH)

Nallok

this Twi'lek woman was an Alliance agent. Prior to joining the Alliance, she was a slave dancer for a Hutt crimelord until an Alliance SpecForces team captured the Hutt's luxury yacht and confiscated it. Grateful for her rescue, Nallok dedicated her life to assisting the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. She was double-crossed by Bennbus Polag and held captive until a strike team managed to free her from captivity. Nallok and the strike team were recognized by the Alliance for their bravery, and they eventually formed their own SpecOps team. (IA)

Nalmar, Elana

this woman was the eldest daughter of Ral and Emie Nalmar. She had been groomed to take over her father's criminal empire, until Qual'om Soach tried to destroy the Nalmar organization and killed her parents. Elana herself barely escaped the attack, and was rescued hours later by firefighters. She recovered from her injuries to discover that Eelian Kirat had assumed command of the Nalmar organization, and that the majority of Nalmar's employees supported Kirat. Elana was forced to become Kirat's second in command, but vowed to retake control of her family's business. (FBS)

Nalmar, Emie

Nalrithian

an alien race native to an unknown Outer Rim planet, these insectile humanoids communicated telepathically amongst themselves. They stand just under two meters in height, although they can be heavily muscled. They had four eyes on the front of their heads, located above a mouth which was surrounded by a pair of short tusks. Their young are hatched from eggs, and several Nalrithian infants will be born from a single egg. These eggmates have a special telepathic bond which augmented their latent telepathic abilities. They were isolationists and xenophobes. (RMOM, TBH, SWG5)

Nalroni

an alien race native to the planet Celanon. They have an acute economic sense, and have managed to turn huge profits even during the reign of Emperor Palpatine. The average Nalroni was a golden-furred humanoid with a tapered snout and sharp teeth. They were slender in build, but muscular and lithe. They were adept at understanding the psychology of other races, and used this trait to augment their impressive business acumen. (PG1)

Nalroni Merchant Council

Nam

this is one of the three stars which center the Chorios Systems in the Meridian Sector. (POT)

Nam Chorios

this planet, located in the Chorios System of the Meridian Sector, was chosen by the Grissmath Dynasty as a penal world some fifty years after a group of colonists fled the Grissmaths in order to be free. The original settlers, as well as the prisoners sent there, discovered that the crystalline rocks of the planet were alive with the Force. When the Force was used on the planet, it created backlashes within the crystals, and ripples of Force lightning sometimes plunged through the canyons at night to expel excess Force energy. When the Grissmaths sent drochs to the planet to ensure the prisoners were killed, the inhabitants and the crystals tried to do everything in their power to keep the drochs from spreading off the planet. It was on this world that Dzym rose to power, enslaving the crystals - known as Spooks - and selling them to Loronar for used in CCIR technologies. When Leia Organa-Solo and Luke Skywalker arrived on the world - Leia to meet with Seti Ashgad, Luke to search for Callista - they discovered the abilities of the Spooks, and managed to depose Dzym and Ashgad. Luke then spent a number of years scouring the galaxy for those Spooks which could be returned to Nam Chorios. Note that the jacket liner of Planet of Twilight refers to this world as Renat Chorios. (POT, WOTC)

Nam Priax

Namana-class Light Cruiser

this Bakuran starship was designed after the planet was liberated from the Ssi-ruuvi. It was the first ship designed to break through an interdiction field using the hyperwave inertial momentum sustainer (HIMS) system. The Namana-class cruiser measured 400 meters in length, and required a crew of 1,200 along with 100 gunners. It could also transport 150 troops and 3,500 metric tons of cargo. It was armed with 10 heavy turbolasers, 20 laser cannons, and two tractor beam projectors. (CTD)

Namarhe

an Alliance starfighter pilot from Bestine IV who was killed while trying to capture the Imperial transport Omicron. (XW)

Name It, Claim It Law

this was the slang term for an Old Republic planetary development decree. Under this law, explorers had only to locate remote systems, perform cursory life-form scans, and file for development rights in order to take control of the system. The result was the discovery and naming of a vast number of planetary systems without any real idea what each system and its worlds held. (SOP)

Nanda-Ree Janoo

this Jedi Knight accompanied Obi-Wan Kenobi to Balamak, during the early stages of the Clone Wars, to help destroy an experimental communications jamming facility built by the Separatists. (SWI65)

Nanda's Luck

this was one of many Aqualish mineral prospecting ships which plied the oceans of Ando during the height of the Galactic Civil War. It was owned and operated by Bipopa Bogzider, and was designed to capture the Andoan mineral-fish and process it for the minerals in its body. At just under twenty-one meters in length, the Nanda's Luck required a crew of four to operate, and could accommodate up to twenty-five fisherbeings and fifty-eight tons of cargo. Like many ships of its kind, it left the harbor laden with sand, so that it rode low in the water. This made the empty ship appear to be full of processed ore, a tactic which helped deter pirates from stealing her cargoes. Bipopa Bogzider and his fellow captains knew that their ships were easy targets when filled with ore, so they used the sand to mimic a full ship, forcing pirates to take the risk of expending energy to capture the occasional empty ship. The Nanda's Luck was attacked by Pyash Yopayomba, the Pirate Queen of Ando, some time after the Battle of Yavin. During the fighting, many crew members were killed, and Yopayomba eventually took control of the vessel. She killed Captain Bippi for his quick surrender to her terms, and placed Sissalik in command. Sissalik later learned that Yopayomba had been led to believe that the Imperial governor of Ando would pay her handsomely for starting a civil war between the Aquala and the Quara, a war which the Empire could use to fully subjugate the Aqualish. Her plans failed, though, when Sissalik reprogrammed the autopilot on the Nanda's Luck, ramming the ship into Pyash's own flagship, the Majestic. All hands on board, including Pyash and Sissalik, were killed in the explosion. (PH)

Nandi

this woman worked as a waitress at the Varykino resort in Naboo's Lake Country, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (AOTCN, VD2)

Nandreeson

this Glottalphen was the unofficial ruler of Skip 6, in the Smuggler's Run. He held a grudge, and a heavy price, on Lando Calrissian, who had stolen a great deal of treasure from Nandreeson's lair during the reign of Emperor Palpatine, and prior to his acquisition of Cloud City. Nandreeson's influence was so great that Calrissian refused to return to the Run until Han Solo disappeared there. Nandreeson held much of the Run in fear of his wrath. When Dolph began implementing his schemes, he used Nandreeson's position of power to assist with the distribution of his rigged droids. During the time of the New Republic, Nandreeson spent most of his time like Jabba the Hutt, commanding his small empire from a pond located deep inside Skip 6. There, he fed on aprfue gnats and caver eggs while his major domo, Iisner, served as his official liaison. When Han Solo was intercepted in the Smuggler's Run, Lando decided that he needed to find out what had happened, despite his distrust of Nandreeson. Lando's plans failed, and he was brought to Nandreeson. The Glottalphen kept Lando at bay by holding him in the deepest part of the pond for some days before Han discovered Lando's whereabouts. In the resulting firefight which revealed the true colors of a number of Han's smuggling "friends," Nandreeson was shot and killed by Han himself. (TNR)

Nandy, Tars

this light-haired man served as a TIE Fighter pilot aboard the Rand Ecliptic, during the months leading up to the Battle of Yavin. A classmate of Biggs Darklighter and Derek "Hobbie" Klivian at the Imperial Academy, Nandy was among the pilots who were dispatched to intercept the Lark. When Klivian launched his mutiny, he managed to capture Nandy and hold him prisoner, using Nandy's access to Imperial communications codes to make the mutiny a success. (SWED)

Nane

this was one of the most common surnames found among the human population of Corellia. (GMR9)

Nane, Waric

this man was one of the Ministers who led the planet Danoor, and was the primary contact between Danoor and the Lance of Endor, under the command of Rolf Treidum. Nane believed Treidum's lies about his being a leader of the New Republic, and threatened the crew of the FarStar when they arrived at Danoor. He was willing to listen to Captain Adrimetrum, only after the IFF code was verified, and eventually came to trust them crew. His trust seemed to be won over when they agreed to help retrieve a mining droid in the Duhrib Belt in exchange for navigational information for crossing the Kathol Rift. However, Nane was far from soft-hearted. He wanted to rule Danoor with an iron fist, creating a totalitarian society dominated by a strong police and military presence. He was developing a number of alliances with other Ministers when the FarStar arrived. Because of his beliefs, Nane was often threatened by the populace, and so he purchased an assassin droid to protect himself. He also falsified his deal with Captain Adrimetrum, having been given the opportunity to meet Rolf Treidum without his false identity. Nane, seeing that the New Order was truly the form of order he so desired in a government, agreed to help Treidum delay the FarStar if at all possible. After the ship's arrival, Nane secretly signalled to Treidum. (KO)

Naneb Pefan

this Ithorian trader had considerable experience plying the spacelanes of the galaxy, and eventually joined the Devaronian Vacasor as co-pilot of the Merasy. Nania this female Vorzydiak youth was one of the original members of the Freelies, some eleven years before the Battle of Naboo. Nania was one of the young Vorzydiaks who sided with Grath in working to ensure that their industrial sabotage was not directed toward living beings, despite the wishes of Flip and Tray. However, Nania did not want the Freelies to fight among themselves, and tried to bring Flip and Grath together. Despite her efforts, Flip was killed in the explosion at the Multycorp building. (TTW)

Nanja Fly

this carnivorous, scavenging insect was native to the underground caverns of the planet Csilla. (FH3)

Nank

this unusual creature was considered something of a nuisance by the Ugnaughts, although the diminutive aliens ate immature nanklings as a source of food. (PH)

Nankling

this was the name given to an immature nank. Nanklings were a favored food of the Ugnaught race, and were often served flash-fried. (PH)

Nannarium

a flower native to the planet Drall. (AS)

Nanno-jump

a maneuver in which a starship briefly enters hyperspace to make a short trip over a small distance without being seen until the last moment. (HSE)

Nanny Droid

see TDL Droid (COTF)

Nanoblip

this was a very small measure of time, used by the Yuuzhan Vong. (T)

Nano-Counter

this BlasTech detonation fuse is often used in micronite charges. (CFG)

Nano-destroyers

also known as nano viruses, these microbes are created in laboratories to attack a certain genetic structure and dismantle it slowly. They are expensive and time-consuming to develop and manufacture, due to their single-purpose use. They are beyond the means of most criminals, which is the only reason why their use isn't more widespread. The nano-destroyers enter the target's cells and slowly dismantle the cell's nucleus. Once the nucleus explodes, the nano-destroyers are distributed to neighboring cells to start the process again. They are very difficult to stop, even with the use of copious amounts of bacta, and will consume their target within a few months. They were originally developed by humans, and seem to work only on human and certain near-human species. The Caridan Ambassador Furgan used a group of self-replicating nano-destroyers to try and slowly debilitate Mon Mothma and bring about the fall of the New Republic, but his death occurred just prior to Cilghal's using the Force to remove the nanodestroyers from her body, one at a time. (COTF, JASB)

Nanogar

this small corporation produced a variety of personal conveyance devices during the era of the New Order. (GFT)

Nanogene Droid

this highly experimental form of automaton was designed to affect the cells of living organisms. A number of nanogene droids are injected into the target's system and attack the genetic material of the target at the molecular level. They are programmed to rewrite the target's genetic code, causing strange and unusual reactions. Developed during the later years of the New Order, nanogene droids were deemed too costly to use on a widespread basis, and the project was supposedly abandoned. An unscrupulous scientist named Uris ressurected the project with his own funding, and very nearly released a batch of the droids on the population of Voorsbain before he was stopped by a group of Alliance agents. Uris' droids manipulated their targets' genetic structure in such a way that they would be turned into a mindless zombie within 3 weeks. (GMH)

Nano-missile

this was a form of miniature projectile weapon used on several starfighter designs of the Old Republic. These tiny missiles lacked guidance technology to help them find their targets, and had to be used in conjunction with a secondary targeting system, such as an ion-enabled sensor tag. (STF)

Nanosilk

this incredibly fine, smooth fabric was created by artisans on the planet Corellia. It was generally considered one of the most expensive fabrics of the Old Republic. (E3N)

Nano-technology

this was the science of created extremely miniaturized versions of everyday technology. It was perfected by many corporations during their height of the New Order, as the Imperial war machine required more and more sophisticated wares. (SLS)

Nanothread

nanothreads were microscopic filaments that were developed by cyberneticists to allow communication between a computer system and a living being. Nanothreads could be extended from a cyborg implant and inserted directly into the brain of a being, creating a direct connection between the brain and the implant's computer system. (NEGW)

Nanowave Oven

a fast-heating oven. (LCJ)

Nanta

this was a common name for Ewok females. Like other Ewok names, it referred to a spirit or character in the Ewoks' mythology. (GCG)

Nanta

according to Ewok legend, this female shaman broke an evil spirit's curse, waking an entire village from a deep sleep. (GCG)

Nantama

this planet was located just inside a massive asteroid belt, and was noted for its wondrous displays of shooting stars. (JQ9)

Nanta-Ri

this Farlax Sector planet was blockaded during the Yevethan Purge by the New Republic's Fourth Battle Group. (SOL)

Nantex-class Territorial Defense Starfighter

this Geonosian Fighter was developed and manufactured by the Huppla Pasa Tisc Shipwrights Collective on the planet Geonosis. Designed for atmospheric and in-system travel, the 9.8-meter-long Nantex-class fighter was created to be bonded to a unique Geonosian pilot. Armed with a single, turret-mounted laser cannon located in between the forward mandibles, it provided the Geonosisians with a highly-maneuverable craft with which to defend their manufacturing operations. The weapons mount was located on a sphere, and was modular enough to allow for other weapons to be swapped for the laser cannon. A collection of narrow-beam tractor beam/repulsor generators lined each side of the ship, providing enhanced maneuverability as well as minimal offensive capability. The fighter was capable of attaining speeds of 20,000 kilometers per hour in atmosphere. Each pilot of a Nantex-class fighter was bonded to his ship at birth, mating with the onboard computers to form an integrated system. Pilots used a combination of innate ability and scent simulators to control their craft, sometimes flying by their sense of smell to provide feedback to the ship's systems. The cockpit bubble provided a full 360 degrees of vision, allowing the pilot to see what was going on around it. The hull of the fighter was created from woven, reinforced laminasteel. (X2, SWDB)

Nantha

native to the moon Sulon, this flowering plant gave off a sweet, almost nauseating scent when in bloom. (RAG)

Nanth'ri

a planet. (OS)

Nanth'ri Pirates

this infamous group of space raiders were united under Cellis Mott. They preyed upon ships that flew through the Nanthri Route. The pirates found themselves without a leader when Mott was captured by the Alliance and perished in Otherspace, and disbanded soon after Mott's disappearance. This band is also referred to as the Nanthri Pirates. (SWJ2, OS)

Nanthri Route

a hyperspace shipping lane prowled by Cellis Mott's Nanth'ri Pirates. The pirates routinely scoured the space around the planet Nanth'ri, taking Imperial commissions. They were given preferential treatment in return for turning any suspected Alliance agents over to the Imperial authorities. (SWJ2, OS, IA)

Nanth'ri Trade Route

see Nanthri Route. (IA)

Nantz

this New Republic Navy Admiral was promoted to senior flag officer just prior to the Republic's blockade of the Koornacht Cluster, following the Yevethan Purge. He was briefly considered as a choice to replace Etahn A'baht as commander of the Fifth Battle Group during the blockade, but was a real candidate after the capture of Han Solo. (SOL, TT)

Naorstrachem

this substance is highly flexible, and is often used in netting or webbing. Synthetic naorstrachem was used by Merr-Sonn to fabricate the webbing shot from the Tangle Gun 7. The synthetic form combined more readily with the shrinking agent required to contract the webbing around the target. (CFG)

Naos III

this was the unimaginative name given to the largest of the settlements established on the remote moon of Naos III. The settlement itself was located on a river delta, with bridges spanning the waterways and muddy roads linking the buildings. The spaceport that served Naos III was essentially a connected group of hills that had been hollowed out to accommodate starships. (LEV)

Naos III

this small moon was little more than a mud-covered frontier world which was originally settled by Rodian and Lethan Twi'leki criminals who found rich veins of ryll spice beneath its surface. Because of its orbital position, Naos III should have been a frozen ball of muddy ice that was covered by regular snowfalls, but intense volcanic activity kept the surface just warm enough to melt the ice into a thick sludge. Most of the natural animal life had been hunted to extinction, and only a handful of imported rycrits and banthas managed to survive. In addition to its spice, Naos III was also known as the homeworld of the Nos sharptooth. It was on Naos III that Darth Sidious hoped to murder Obi-Wan Kenobi, during the last months of the Clone Wars, in an effort to orphan Anakin Skywalker. The two Jedi had been searching for Fa'ale Leh, as part of their ongoing investigation into the many connections Sidious had throughout the galaxy. Sidious ordered his apprentice, Darth Tyrannus - known to the rest of the galaxy as Count Dooku - to ensure Kenobi's death. Tyrannus was hesitant, since it obviously meant that Sidious wanted to take Skywalker as a future apprentice. (LEV)

Naos III Mercantile

this was ostensibly the governing body of the remote moon Naos III, during the last decades of the Old Republic. The Naos III Mercantile's primary function was the overseeing of the harvest and export of Naos sharptooth, an industry that provided the moon with much of its income. (LEV)

Naos Sharptooth

this pink-fleshed fish was considered a delicacy in many parts of the galaxy, despite the fact that it was native to the coldest bodies of water found on the remote moon of Naos III. It spawned during the deepest portion of Naos III's near-continual winter, making it difficult and expensive to harvest. Nevertheless, restaurants were willing to pay the price for its tasty flesh. (LEV)

Naotebe Wingling

this species of insect was shaped by Nom Anor, during the time he was posing as Doctor Dassid Cree'ar on the planet Duro. They were known as white-eyes by the New Republic, and were developed to chew through the synthplas which formed the domes of the refugee camps on Duro's surface. (BP)

Nap Lagard

this Neimoidian was the Commander of the Trade Federation battleship Acquisitor. (COD)

Naplousean

this unusual alien species was little more than a mass of snake-like, ribbonous tissues supported by three legs. Its head was nothing more than a knotted blob of wet eyes. (RP)

Naps Fral Cluster

this area of the galaxy was located between Ryloth and Nal Hutta. The Karazak Slavers Guild often kept a few ships positioned in the Cluster, hoping to intercept ships transporting Twi'leks from Ryloth to Nal Hutta. (TFNR)

Napvansa Tadavv

this Sluissi engineer was known for her good work, although she often doubled or tripled her repair-time estimates so that she would look good when she came in before the deadline. She was approached by Dhas Vedij and offered a chance to serve on the crew of the Far Orbit, shortly after Vedij defected from Imperial service. (FOP)

NaQuoit Bandits

aliens who operate as outlaws in the Ottega system. They jumped Mako Spince during a smuggling run, and severely injured him. (DE1, RD)

Nar

this was a common component used to create the names given to Cerean males. In general, male Cereans given an individual name, which is added to the names of their father and grandfather. Complete male names are arranged based on harmony and cadence, but the literal meanings are arranged to ensure proper descriptions. The name Nar indicated a dagger, sword, or weapon. (GCG)

Nar

a planet. (RPG)

Nar Bo Sholla

a planet in the Mid Rim, Nar Bo Sholla was infested with stone mites shortly before the Clone Wars, but the damage proved to be minimal before the mites were eradicated. (WBC, HNN5)

Nar Hekka

one of the many habitable planets in the Hutt sector of space. Located near a dim red star at the edge of the Y'toub System, Nar Hekka has very little indigenous life. However, due to the intervention of the Hutts, several plant and animal species have been imported to the world, resulting in a beautiful planet covered with gardens, parks, and arboretums. Much of the habitable area of the planet is covered by a transparent dome that alters the incoming red light and creates a blue sky tinged with violet. (TPS, THG)

Na'R Ji'Gek

this huge crater, also known as the Doomgate, was located on the eastern hemisphere of the planet Goroth Prime. (GSE)

Nar Kreeta

this planet was controlled by the Mining Guild during the early years of the New Republic, although Hutt crimelords held sway over the underworld. Jaden Korr traveled to this world some ten years after the Battle of Endor, ostensibly to locate information on the Disciples of Ragnos. While there, he managed to free a group of elders who were being held prisoner by the Hutts. (JKA)

Nar Shaddaa

this was Nal Hutta's spaceport moon, known for its vertically-built cities, experienced spaceship mechanics and its lawlessness. It was once the site of several mining installations, but over the centuries it became a center for smuggling operations. It was here that Han Solo supposedly learned the smuggler's trade as a youth. When the Hutts took over the moon, they began using it as a spaceport, and soon huge refueling spires and repair facilities reached up from the ground into orbit. Over time, the mass of the moon was increased 300 percent as construction continued unabated. There is no observable land mass left on Nar Shaddaa, since the spaceports have grown around the spires and now completely cover the planet. The moon was uninhabited during the time that the Evocii lived on Nal Hutta, although they called it Evocar. When the Hutts took over the planet, they relegated the Evocii to Nar Shaddaa. However, the Hutts used them as semi-free slaves on the moon, and the press of so many various species and technologies eventually mutated the Evocii. Nar Shaddaa is similar to its parent planet, having a day which lasts 87 standard hours, and a year which lasts 413 local days. It is tide-locked with Nal Hutta, and only shows one side to its planet. This results in a day which has two distinct periods of lightness: one in which it is in full view of the sun, and one in which it obtains light reflected from Nal Hutta. This also results in two periods of night. When the Yuuzhan Vong began to make attacks on Hutt Space, Nar Shaddaa was considered a technological nightmare. After Nal Hutta was subjugated by the alien invaders, Nar Shaddaa was leveled by orbital strikes and eventually rebuilt into a world more suitable to the Yuuzhan Vong. (DE1, DESB, DE2, THG, ETM, RAG, SOT)

Nar Shaddaa Shipping

this transfer company maintained an office on Dravian Starport. (GMH)

Nar Shaddaan Wind Chimes

this form of chime is made from flattened sheets of metal, and they represent renewal in Hutt society. (CCG7)

Nara

this young girl was the eldest of Vedran Veb's grandchildren. (TOJC)

Nara Deega

this Bith Senator served on the New Republic's Defense Council. He filled the position vacated by Tig Peramis during the Yevethan Purge. (SOL)

Nara Parks

this profitable resort is owned by Galaxy Tours. (CSA)

Narada-ti

this is the Yevethan term for midwife. The narada-ti attends to the various marasi assembled for impregnation by a male. (TT)

Narbuj Desilijic Preor

this Hutt crimelord once employed Stormtrooper X as a smuggler and mercenary. However, when a cache of spice and credits was found to be missing, Narbuj believed that Stormtrooper X was the thief. Narbuj posted a large bounty for the capture of Stormtrooper X. (GMR6)

Narcassan

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Narcassan, Vyn

this dark-skinned man was a member of the Old Republic's Intelligence agency. He was one of the first members of the Intelligence agency to discover a highly-sensitive and well-shielded communications line inside the governmental offices on Coruscant, although he could not trace the line to any single individual. One of the agency's older agents, Narcassan was smart enough to engineer his own disappearance when Emperor Palpatine rose to power. No one ever found him. Myn Donos believed that Narcassan was, in fact, Shalla Nelprin's father, but this was never proven. (SOC, HNN5)

Narco-interrogation

this multi-level form of prisoner interrogation involves the use of certain drugs (like skirtopanol) and torture to extract information electronically. There are four levels of narco-interrogation. Level Four is the lowest level of interrogation, and involves intense questioning with the use of large amounts of skirtopanol. Level One interrogations are extremely intense, and are designed to extract information that has been purposely buried or forgotten, and often uncovers certain genetic memories. (KT, SWJ7)

Narco-mist

developed during the height of the New Order, this reddish mist of chemicals was sprayed on the body of an injured being to help speed their recovery. Unlike bacta, narco-mist was a combination of painkillers and hormones that allowed a body to heal faster, without the associated pain and discomfort. (MC21)

Narco-spice

a highly-addictive form of spice which found widespread use in the Minos Cluster. (GG6)

Nard, Junix

this man was a bartender who worked on the planet Tatooine, some four millennia before the Battle of Yavin. He spent much of his free time playing pazaak at his cantina in Anchorhead. (KOTOR)

Nardah, Elth

this patient, fastidious Doctor was best-known for his work with the Karran race. A wizened old man, he worked for the Alliance Diplomatic Corps, hoping to negotiate a treaty between the Alliance and the Karran people, as well as discovering ways in which the Karrans could stand against the Empire's xenophobic laws. When he accepted Darryn Edalm's surrender and brought the Imperial governor to his base, the native Karrans accused Nardah of being a traitor and in league with the Empire. Tist, one of Nardah's friends among the Karrans, beat Nardah with his bare fists until he was dead. (SWJ1)

Nardi

meaning "dramatic", this was one of the most common names among Rodians, and was used for both males and females. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Nardi Shodu

this Rodian female lived with her friend, Booton Piton, in the undercity of Coruscant during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. (OWS, SWI75)

Nardix

this Imperial Sector Governor was wanted by the Alliance for crimes against sentients. 4-LOM and Zuckuss accepted the bounty the Alliance placed on his head, and captured the Governor. This left the two hunters with an Imperial death warrant on their heads. Nardix was convicted by an Alliance, an embarrassment for the Empire at a time when the New Order was failing in its attempt to win over new worlds. 4-LOM and Zuckuss took the job in order to obtain the credits needed to finance the cost of new lungs for Zuckuss. (TBH)

Nardo

this assistant of the Lady Tarkin was her personal bodyguard as well. He maintained a display of megonite in her offices, and kept track of her appointments. During the 13th Imperial Diplomatic Conclave on Phelarion, he caught Leia Organa trying to use Lady Tarkin's transmitter. He attempted to shot her, but one of his laser bolts struck the megonite display. Nardo was killed in the explosion, but Leia managed to escape. (CSWEA)

Narees

this Iktochi was one of Alexi Garyn's vigos, serving the Black Sun criminal organization during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Narees was killed on Ralltiir, at Garyn's fortress, when Darth Maul was dispatched by Darth Sidious to eliminate any trace of evidence linking Hath Monchar to Sidious. Maul wiped out the Black Sun complex on Ralltiir, executing all the vigos and Garyn himself in order to ensure secrecy. (DM)

Narek-ag

owner and pilot of the transport shuttle Moon Dash, she and her co-pilot Trebor were working toward retirement when they impacted an unknown object in orbit above Coruscant. As their ship came apart around them, Narek asked Terbor to marry her. He accepted as the Moon Dash exploded. (LO)

Naren

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Naren

this was one of the most common male names among the Corellian population. (GMR9)

Narg

this planet is located in Rayter Sector, and was the site of TransGalMeg Industries' corporate headquarters. Its climate varies greatly with latitude, with equatorial deserts and polar ice caps. It is a low-tech world on which human life evolved normally, until the planet was discovered by the Empire three years before the Battle of Yavin. The planet was quickly industrialized and stripped of its natural resources. The Empire decided that the human population was not ready for entrance into the galactic community, and placed the planet under a provisional protectorate owned by TransGalMeg. TGM received ten years of full power over the planet's resources in return for managing the planet for the Empire. Because of their isolation, the humans of Narg are highly xenophobic. Narg's average day lasts 21 standard hours, and its year encompasses 431 local days. (TA)

Narg Starport

this is the main public starport on the planet Narg, located in the city of Grig. The starport supported a wide range of services, including a cultural information center, refresher services, a souvenir shop, and a logistical office which keeps track of all beings requesting to stay on the planet. (TA)

Narglatch

these large, feline predators were native to the planet Naboo. Young narglaths were abandoned at birth and left to fend for themselves, but they were able to hunt immediately after birth. Cubs often hunted in packs for protection from larger predators, until they could fend for themselves. They were remarkably adaptive creatures. Adults are stealthy hunters, although much of the hunting was done by the females. The males served as the protectors of their family prides. Generally solitary beasts, the narglatch would commingle during the mating season. A pregnant female always gave birth to two cubs, a male and a female. Each sex was distinguished by its skin, with the females having smooth skin while the males had fleshy spikes on their upper bodies. (GF, WSW)

Narglatch XJ-6

this highly-customized personal airspeeder was owned by Senator Simon Greysthade, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. The two-seated, yellow speeder was distinguished by its open cockpit and its front-mounted engines. At 6.23 meters in length, the Narglatch XJ-6 could attain speeds near 720 kilometers per hour, and the forward-mounted engines gave it incredible maneuverability. Greysthade's speeder was stolen by Anakin Skywalker on Coruscant during the young Jedi's pursuit of Zam Wesell, shortly before the Battle of Geonosis. The speeder was reported stolen, but Anakin returned it to its parking space as soon as the chase was over. Unfortunately for Senator Greysthade, the speeder was stolen again shortly afterward. (NEGV)

Nargo

this crime lord was known for his incredible lack of sympathy. He once set up a group of freelance freighter captains by asking them to transport some Tirefin spice for him, then sent a group of pirates out to waylay them. He then forced them to pay for the spice they lost, effectively doubling his credits. (GMS)

Nargo

this is the capital city of the planet Nigel IV, and is the site of the planet's primary spaceport. (TSK)

Narik

meaning "bright", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Narik

this Rodian served as his planet's representative to the New Republic, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. He bristled at the fact that Borsk Fey'lya supported the protection of the Mid Rim, including the Bothan world of Bothawui, while virtually sacrificing the Outer Rim to the Yuuzhan Vong in order to further protect the Core. Note that this character is also referred to as Navik in Balance Point. (BP)

Naris-bud Tea

a stimulating drink. (BTS)

Nariss Siv Loqesh

this Kerestian bounty hunter often traveled under the alias Andov Syn. As a bounty hunter, Loqesh was known to have posted a ninety-percent success rate, and worked for more than a decade before the Battle of Yavin. A full-body suit of armor obscured his appearance, making him exceptionally mysterious among even his fellow hunters. He was among the bounty hunters who were hired by Jabba the Hutt to hunt down Han Solo during the months leading up to the Battle of Yavin, and was later contracted by the Empire to hunt down Solo in the wake of the Battle of Hoth. He declined the Empire's offer, an action which earned him a considerable bounty on his own head for treason against the Empire. (SWG6)

Naritus

this New Republic Mon Calamari MC80a cruiser was a veteran of New Republic military operations when it was assigned to intercept Belindi Kalenda's Ugly starfighter when it arrived at Coruscant, following her discovery of rise of the Human League on Corellia. Captained by Genkal, it assisted in eliminating the last of the Khuiumin Survivors, and later assisted in the evacuation of the Thanta Zilbra system. (AS, CTD)

Narkaa

this razor-toothed ocean predator is native to the planet Rathalay. (SOL)

Narlit

this small fish, native to the oceans of the planet Mon Calamari, was often kept as a pet by Quarren children. It was known for its affectionate nature. (GCG)

Narlit

this was a common name among Quarren females. It referred to a small, affectionate fish that was kept as a pet by Quarren children. (GCG)

Narloch

this Herglic was a native of Giju, and was a successful gambler and entrepreneur. He owned casinos on several worlds, including Reaper's World and his most recent base of operations on the planet Emmer, and traveled the galaxy in his personal starship, the Elusive. It was rumored that Narloch had the backing and support of Jabba the Hutt. During the Galactic Civil War, a bounty was placed on his head for theft and fraud by Lord Haakon, following a sabacc match in which Narloch took nearly all of Haakon's wealth. His courier, Fellan, betrayed Narloch by providing evidence of his dealings with Jabba to the bounty hunters who were searching for him. However, Narloch managed to avoid capture for a long time. (ND)

Narloch's Casino

located on the planet Emmer, this casino was owned by the Herglic entrepreneur Narloch. It was built from the superstructure of an Imperial landing platform to better accommodate the walkers which were used to move about on the planet. (ND)

Narmle

this was the first settlement to be established on the moon Rori, named for the Naboo man who founded it. The settlement grew slowly at first, since most Naboo were perfectly content to live on their homeworld. Over time, however, Narmle grew steadily until the population was decimated by an outbreak of brainworm rot some 200 years before the Battle of Naboo. (ROD, GQRG)

Narmle

this man, a native of the planet Naboo and once the King of the planet, was known more for his restless attitude than his skills as a leader. He preferred to travel to far-flung planets, instead of remaining on Naboo to govern his people. For this reason, the Naboo Royal Advisory Council suggested that he relinquish the throne and become an ambassador for Naboo. Narmle agreed, but established the first permanent settlement on the moon Rori before leaving the system in his new role. The settlement was named Narmle, in his honor. When the city failed to attract many settlers, Narmle himself left Rori and headed into the Outer Rim, and was never seen again. (ROD, GQRG)

Narmle Memorial Rally

this swoop race was held annually on the moon of Rori, during the Galactic Civil War. (SWGAL)

Narmox

manufacturers of avionics control systems for starfighters. (XW)

Narnee Bomu

this Rodian soldier was a member of the Bomu clan, and worked for Vago the Hutt during the early years of the New Order. (TF)

Narol

this was an alias assumed by Garik Loran, shortly after Wraith Squadron captured the Night Caller. Narol was the executive officer of the Night Caller, serving under Zurel Darillian. (WS)

Naroon

this given name was common among human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Narr

see Narra (SWEGS)

Narra

this Lambda-class shuttle was captured by the New Republic and assigned to support Wraith Squadron. It was captured from an Imperial captain who had deserted the Empire and turned to a life of smuggling. It had been retrofitted to provide him with hidden compartments, enhanced weapons and shields, and stronger engines. (WS)

Narra

an Alliance star pilot, Narra was the leader of the Red Squadron of X-Wings prior to the Battle of Hoth. The pilots who served with him often referred to him simply as "The Boss". Commander Narra was the leader of one of the first missions to scout out a new location for an Alliance base, after the Battle of Yavin. His team, which included all of Red Squadron, was attacked on a remote jungle world by Imperial forces. They were surprised to find themselves supported by A-1707, a clone trooper who had survived the Clone Wars and was stranded on the planet. Narra was later killed in an Imperial ambush near Derra IV, when the supply convoy he was escorting was attacked. After Narra's death, Luke Skywalker was promoted to Commander. This is contrary to what Classic Star Wars maintains, where it is claimed that Luke was promoted to Commander after Vrad Dodonna's death. (ESBR, SWECS)

Narrant System

this planetary system was controlled by a confederation of liege-lords who controlled separate factions of genetically-linked species. A series of deep-rooted, ritual obeisance and internal blood oaths kept them from killing each other, and helped cement a number of loose affiliations. (MA)

Nars Dojah

this Twi'lek served the Old Republic during the height of the Clone Wars, and was assigned the position of quartermaster at the Rimsoo Seven medical hospital on Drongar, after the death of Filba the Hutt. (MJH)

Narseri

this pirate was based on the planet Hosrel XI, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GUN)

Narsh

this small company produced a line of crop-spraying vehicles during the last decades of the Old Republic. (RCHC)

Nar-Somo-Dali

this Cerean elder was one of the few that held faith in the ability of Ki-Adi-Mundi to search out the source of the swoops and other technology which was imported to Cerea during the last decades of the Old Republic. He sent a messenger to Ki during his initial search for Ephant Mon, to bring the Jedi his lightsaber. The lightsaber was being held as evidence for the trial of Maj-Odo-Nomor, but Nar-Sodo-Dali managed to free it with the use of an obscure loophole in Cerean laws. (PTR)

Narth

this New Republic Navy officer served as one of Etahn A'baht's tactical aides during the blockade of the Koornacht Cluster. (SOL)

Narth

this planet was once the site of an Imperial shiyard. (BTS)

Narthax

a native of the planet Ukio, this man rose through the Imperial ranks as an accomplished stormtrooper. He was later assigned to the Blizzard Force of snowtroopers that attacked the Alliance's Echo Base, during the Battle of Hoth. He had developed a training regimen for snowtroopers which prepared them for the frigid, extreme weather of environments like Hoth. (CCG9)

Narthrup, Oponni

this woman worked as the Alliance's primary liaison to Vergesso Base, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. She served as the general administrator of Alliance personnel in the Lybeya System, and was known for her ability to work several different tasks at one time. She had a wealth of skills that made her too valuable to work as an officer, and the position on Vergesso allowed her to use all her skills to the best of her abilities. (SPG)

Nartian

a short, four-armed alien race. (TME)

Nartissteu

this was the assumed name of the A-class freighter used by Grand Admiral Thrawn as the pawn in his attack on the Sluis Van shipyards, some five years after the Battle of Endor. The Nartissteu was supposedly coming from Nellac Kram, but had been ambushed by pirates. Their main drives had been damaged, and they had requested assistance from the shipyards. In reality, Thrawn had placed several groups of cloaked TUIE Fighters inside the freighter's hold, to be deployed near the shipyards in an effort to gain to steal other starships for Thrawn's growing fleet. (HTTE)

Nartlo

this small, balding man was apprehended by Kirtan Loor on Coruscant, during the time he ran the Palpatine Counterinsurgency Faction. Nartlo was selling diluted bacta for increased profits, and had information on how the New Republic was obtaining its bacta. Loor employed him as a spy, and was giving him lotiramine as an insurance policy. Nartlo was also under observation by Fliry Vorru. Vorru used skirtopanol to pull information from Nartlo, and the interaction of skirtopanol and lotiramine set up intense convulsions and cerebral hemorrhaging that eventually killed him. (KT)

Narvath

this planet is the homeworld of the Narvath race, and was a strong supporter of the Alliance to Restore the Republic. (BTS)

Narvath

this alien race, native to the planet Narvath, was humanoid in stature, with long limbs. (BTS)

Narwe, Ryca

this man was part of the workforce assigned by Eyar Treatment Systems to clean the south-central branch of the Eyar City sewers. His superiors recognized that Ryca was abrasive and surly, and rarely bothered to assign him a partner. Ryca considered himself underpaid and underappreciated, but continued to work because of the steady paycheck. He had a fear of the dianogas which lived in the sewers, and he would often hide and call security when he encountered one. (HAS)

Nas Choka

this Yuuzhan Vong was the supreme commander of the war fleet which invaded the known galaxy. Despite his position of power, Nas Choka was smaller than most of the Yuuzhan Vong, but no less powerfully built. He wore a deep red cape, signifying his position as supreme commander, and his fingers and arms were covered with rings and signets. He hated the fact that Nom Anor was given a second chance to lead the fleet during the invasion, and was inwardly pleased when the plan to infiltrate Elan into the Jedi Knights failed. In the wake of Elan's death, Choka ordered Commander Tla and the priest, Harrar, back to the Outer Rim and away from the front line of the invasion. Nas Choka also questioned the tactic of destroying the Jedi Knights before conquering the galaxy, claiming that the Force was just an idea, and could be replaced with something else. Nas Choka's fleet was later assigned to Hutt Space, where it quickly subjugated the Hutts and took control of many worlds and spacelanes. After the death of Warmaster Tsavong Lah at the Battle of Ebaq, Nas Choka was recalled from Hutt Space and named the new Warmaster. He immediately made an impact on his superiors, ordering his commanders to withdraw from battles they couldn't win, in order to save their warships for another fight. This smacked of heresy, since it was the Yuuzhan Vong way to fight to the death, Nas Choka, however, realized that the Yuuzhan Vong needed living warriors to completely subjugate the galaxy. With the losses of Yag'Shul, Thyferra, and Fondor, Nas Choka decided to change the tactics of the Yuuzhan Vong fleet. Rather than focus on specific military targets, Nas Choka devised a plan to destroy the New Republic's HoloNet. This would render their realtime communications worthless, eliminating the advantage of interstellar coordination of forces. Although the plan worked well, and thwarted the Republic's Operation Trinity, Nas Choka continued to wonder about the ongoing plans for ending the resistance of the Republic. When Supreme Overlord Shimrra announced plans to decisively strike at the Galactic Alliance by attacking Mon Calamari, Nas Choka was the first to request that additional planning be put to the mission. Where Shimrra wanted a final death blow so that he avoid facing the Galactic Alliance and Zonama Sekot, Nas Choka was concerned that the enemy was gaining strength in other areas of the galaxy. While Mon Calamari might be taken, the Yuuzhan Vong would be weakened in other locations. He nevertheless acceded to the Supreme Overlord's wishes, and set out for Mon Calamari. The attack went as planned, and just as he was about to call in reinforcements, Nas Choka received word that Zonama Sekot had reappeared near Coruscant. He ordered the fleet to return to the capital immediately, and placed the fleet between the living planet and the Citadel. When Shimrra revealed his ultimate plan - to use the Alpha Red infected coralskipper that had returned from Caluula to poison Zonama Sekot - Nas Choka personally led the protective fleet that accompanied it. When the coralskipper was free to plunge into Zonama Sekot's surface, Nas Choka then turned his attention to the rest of the battle, planning to destroy the Ralroost and eliminate the leadership of the Galactic Alliance's forces. When he saw that Shimrra's escape craft had launched from the Citadel, he moved his ship Yammka's Mount into position to recover it. Unknown to Nas Choka, however, was that Shimrra was already dead, and Onimi was about to die at the hands of Jacen Solo. When the escape craft plunged into Coruscant after dying, Nas Choka realized that the war was over. He offered his subordinates the chance to die in battle or to take their own lives, or to throw in their lot with him and surrender to the Galactic Alliance. Although many chose suicide over surrender, Nas Choka welcomed those who joined him in surrender. After the deaths of Shimrra and Onimi - who proved to be the true Supreme Overlord - Nas Choka and the rest of the Yuuzhan Vong agreed to surrender to the Galactic Alliance. Nas Choka himself, upon learning the truth about Zonama Sekot's relationship with Yuuzhan'tar, personally called his commanders and their forces back to Coruscant to surrender. In accordance with the advice of Jedi master Luke Skywalker, the Galactic Alliance allowed the Yuuzhan Vong to travel to Zonama Sekot to re-establish their civilization. The planetary consciousness Sekot welcomed them with open arms, then fled into the Unknown Regions to allow its new inhabitants to evolve in peace. (HT, JE, DW, FH1, FP, UF)

Nasalle, Birdigan

this human was a champion swoop racer on the TransGal Circuit, during the height of the New Order. (SWJ2)

Nasda

an ISB General, Nasda was placed in charge of creating a set of recruiting guidelines that would screen out Alliance infiltrators before they were indoctrinated and could defect with large amounts of knowledge. (ISB)

Nasdra Magrody

founder of the Magrody Institute, Nasdra was one of the galaxy's premier expert on droids and automata. An Arkanian, Magrody had a close relationship with Bail Organa and Mon Mothma, until he was sought out by Moff Tarkin to teach at the Omwat orbital program. He was very enthusiastic when Qwi Xux survived the program and joined the team of scientists at the Maw Installation. Magrody was later tapped, along with Xux, by Tarkin and the Emperor when the first Death Star was being designed. His work in trying to create Force-sensitive machines was heightened by the fact that Nasdra was somewhat Force-sensitive himself, a secret he nearly managed to keep quiet. When Roganda Ismaren began to plot how best to recover the Eye of Palpatine, she realized that Magrody's Force-sensitive automata would be best-suited for the job. She kidnapped his wife and child, forcing him to develop a special brain implant for her son, Irek. Magrody worked diligently with Irek, creating an incredibly intelligent mind that could manipulate inorganic machines with the Force. When he tried to get word of this to the New Republic, Roganda arranged for him to conveniently disappear. Roganda realized two benefits from his disappearance. It kept her plot secret, and it cast doubt on Leia Organa Solo's position as Chief of State for the New Republic, for rumors quickly spread that she had used her position to eliminate Magrody for his involvement with Palpatine. (COJ, OWS)

Nashal

this minor city was located on the planet Talus. (GQRG)

Nashal River Race

this swoop race was held annually during the Galactic Civil War, along a dry riverbed near the city of Nashal, on the planet Talus. (SWGAL)

Nashira

Akanah provided this Fallanassi name to Luke Skywalker, claiming it was his mother's. It was a star-name, held in high regard. When Luke and Akanah finally discovered the Fallanassi, Wailu told Luke that she could not reveal whether or not Nashira was his mother, because he was not of the White Current. (BTS, TT)

Nashtah

one of the infamous hunting beasts of Dra III, the nashtah is a six-legged beast with long, diamond-hard claws on all six feet. They have three rows of sharp teeth on each jaw, and their tails are barbed. Extremely well-muscled and built for speed, the nashtah is also a tenacious, tireless hunter, stopping for nothing once they have chosen their prey. They have a distinctive green pelt. (HSR)

Nashtah Bite

this aging Victory-class Star Destroyer was part of Warlord Zsinj'd third fleet. (SOC)

Nashtah Pup

Bossk's short-range scout ship, the Nashtah Pup was secured within a dorsal hold on the Hound's Tooth. The Nashtah Pup was released by opening a dorsal hatch. The Nashtah Pup was an emergency-use ship, being large enough for only two passengers and no cargo. (EGV)

Nasirii

this was one of the larger Hutt kajidics, or clans. Before Jabba the Hutt claimed Tatooine for the Desilijics, the Nasirii clan controlled nearly one-fifth of the planet's criminal activities. The Nasirii were also in charge of maintaining the various pleasure dens established by the Hutts on the desert planet. (SOT)

Na-Soth Larr

this was the name of a noted Givin individual. (UANT)

Nasrabi

meaning "female ruler" or "queen", this was a common female name among the Mon Calamari race. (GCG)

Nass

this was one of the most common Gungan surnames, taking from the father's side of the family. These surnames were not dropped, even after marriage. To the Gungans, it meant "deep waters". (GCG)

Nassin

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Nassin, Qatya

this woman was one of the pilots who served within the Hawk-bat pirate squadron. In reality, Qatya was Shalla Nelprin. (IF) this humanoid was in charge of the local underground on Mrlsst, during the early years of the New Republic. A gawky, bird-like being with dark brown skin and pronounced eye-sockets, he helped Rogue Squadron uncover Loka Hask's plans by using the surveillance cameras in the Mrlsst Academy to view Hask's strategy meetings. (XWPA)

Nasta

Nastascha, Areilla

this woman was a high-ranking noble of House Cadriaan, and a member of Lady Bathos' inner council. Areilla grew up on Achillea with Lady Bathos, but Areilla concentrated on sports and the military. She served for twelve years in the Tapani Sector House Guard before being recruited by Lady Bathos after her election. After learning that House Melantha was working with Mining Guild auditor Annora Calandra, Lady Areilla dispatched the Herglic lord Knumai to ask for help from the Alliance in determining their schemes. (LOE)

Nastion

this Imperial Bayonet-class cruiser traveled to the planet Goroth Prime, at the behest of Moff Nebin Cray, during the early years of the New Order. Believing he would find a dead world, the Captain of the Nastion was amazed to find the Gorothites thriving in the hostile environment. Core samples taken from the planet's crust revealed a wealth of heavy metals and hyperbarides, and indicated that the historical records of the planet's resources were correct. (GSE)

Nat

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name meant "rock". (GCG)

Nat Secura

a Twi'lek descendant of the Secura Twi'lek clan, Nat Secura the son of Lon Secura. He was the younger of Lon's two sons, but his brother Van died suddenly. It left Nat the prime heir to the Secura clan's leadership. Nat was kidnapped several years after the Battle of Naboo, as part of a plot by Ro Fenn to maintain his stature among the Twi'leks, despite the law which required his death. The Morgukai warriors Tsyrr and Bok took him, but they were pursued by the Jedi Master Tholme and his apprentice, Aayla Secura. Years later, Nat found himself under the control of Bib Fortuna, just before Jabba the Hutt's death. When Jabba came to Ryloth to obtain Twi'leki slaves, he had burned buildings in Nat's city in order to force the Twi'leks out of them and into capture nets. Nat had been severely burned in the fires; his lekku had been completely burned off. Fortuna had discovered Nat while looting his house, and had "rescued" him. The Twi'leki survivors never forgot Nat's bravery, and Fortuna had planned to use Nat as his figurehead and as a rallying point. However, Jabba had grown tired of Nat's presence, and was planning on feeding him to the rancor. Fortuna intervened, again "rescuing" Nat, only to have Nat's brain surgically removed by the B'omarr monks and placed in a nutrient jar. Nat's mind railed against the loss of his body, but he eventually came to accept his place. Jabba then threw Nat's body - which had been kept alive by the monks' skillful surgery - to the rancor, seemingly ending Nat's life. Fortuna had planned to find a Twi'lek clone body for Nat's brain, a body that was not scarred and deformed like his original one. He told Nat this, and Nat decided that he wanted Han Solo's body. Fortuna thought that this would be a fitting revenge against Solo, and kept the plan in his mind. However, the death of Jabba and the monks' revenge against Fortuna left both of them disembodied. (TJP, ROP)

Nataal, Bek

this Corellian smuggler managed to rescue Tere Metallo from the slavers who had taken her from Riileb, and he adopted her as his apprentice. Unfortunately, Nataal was killed during when the Empire unexpectedly boarded his ship. (SWJ6)

Natalar Mountains

a range of mountains found on the planet Adarlon. (GG6)

Natalon Core Bandits

this band of monstrous alien pirates was active during the early years of the New Order. (AVS)

Natamee

this was one of the smaller raft-cities which floated on the oceans of Ando during the height of the New Order. These small settlements served as resupply or refueling depots for the crews and vessels that plied the various sea-based industries of the Aqualish. (PH)

Natara

this man was a General with the Alliance, and served in the Brak Sector Command office during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. (FBS)

Natchgas

this natural, gaseous fuel was created by converting animal and municipal waste produced into a liquid sludge that is boiled. Natchgas was easy to create, and found widespread use in the cash-poor Outer Rim Territory. (IWE1)

Nate

this clone trooper, originally designated CT-96/298, was one of the many that developed their own personalities during the height of the Clone Wars. Nate's identification number was often shortened to simply A-98, since he was the leader of a small unit of ARC troopers. He was a veteran of the Battle of Geonosis, having saved himself and five comrades from the attack of a droideka. His actions led to a rapid series of promotions to the rank of Captain. A hip injury while fighting off a broca on Altair 9 nearly cost him his leg, but the recuperative powers of a clone troopers allowed him to survive and restore nearly all his range of motion. Two years later, after surviving the training missions on Vandor-3 with exceptionally low casualty rates, Nate was placed in command of the troopers who were to be attached to Jedi Masters Obi-Wan Kenobi and Kit Fisto on a mission to Ord Cestus. He chose four other ARC troopers - known as Forry, Sirty, Xutoo, and Seefor - to serve on the team. Nate was assigned to Master Fisto's team, which was charged with locating the Desert Wind terrorist group, in an effort to create public unrest across the surface of Ord Cestus. It was on this mission that he met Sheeka Tull, a woman who claimed to have once been the girlfriend of Jango Fett. The connection seemed to spark something inside Nate, who found himself attracted to the woman. After spending time with her, Nate became more and more aware of his own individuality, in addition to his own connection to Jango. For this reason, he adopted the new nickname Jangotat, which literally meant "brother of Jango" in Mandalorian. Shortly afterward, the hidden lair of the Desert Wind terrorists was discovered by Asajj Ventress, who sent a group of infiltration droids to destroy them. In the fighting, Jangotat sustained heavy injuries, and was rescued by Sheeka Tull. (HIV, TCD)

Nate, Pori

this fifteen-year-old boy was one of the first of his generation to admit that he was using and abusing the death stick, shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars. It was later discovered that Pori Nate was not the boy's real name. (HNN4)

Nath

this figure was from the Zabrak mythology. Together with her sister, Ath, Nath welcomed dead Zabrak into the afterlife. (GCG)

Nath

this archaic name was given to female Zabrak, and referred to the being in Zabrak mythology who welcomed Zabrak into the afterlife. (GCG)

Nath, Jamur

this man was one of the many officers who served under Zozridor Slayke as a member of Freedom's Sons and Daughters, during the height of the Clone Wars. Nath held the rank of Corporal, and was partnered with Omin L'loxx when Slayke decided to attack the Separatists who had taken control of Praesitlyn, some two and a half years after the Battle of Geonosis. After L'loxx and Nath rescued Odie Subu and Erk H'Arman, they were ambushed on their way back to base. In the firefight that ensued, Nath took several blasts from a Gamorrean thug, and was killed before he could be retrieved. (JT)

Nath, Reson

this woman was a bounty hunter for the Paramexor Guild of Hunters. She was accused by Prefect Adar of a variety of crimes, and was sentenced to Guild punishment. In her case, it was armed combat with her accuser. Adar quailed at the prospect of fighting with her, and withdrew the charges rather than fight her. However, Moff Gorliz - called in to observe the trial - had already wagered Janq Paramexor that Adar would last at least ten minutes on combat, and ordered the to begin. (GG10)

Nathanjo Nirrelz

this Gotal Emmisary to the Old Republic was captured by the Roshu Sune near Atzerri, shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars. Nirrelz had been on Atzerri trying to secure shipments of bacta back to his homeworld, in an effort to provide aid to the Gotals who suffered hardships after the Battle of Antar 4. Following Nirrelz' kidnapping, the Roshu Sune guerillas simply transmitted the Articles of Secession in place of formal demands. They hoped to force the government of Antar 4 to formally secede from the Republic. Nirrelz was eventually freed by a team of Jedi Knights. (HNN5)

Nathas I

this cold, airless planet was located in Questal Sector, and was the homeworld of the Protean race. (AE)

Natinati

this planet was visited by Jabba the Hutt some years before the Battle of Yavin, as Jabba wanted to explore the sacred temple of Poborandurannum. (JTH)

National Museum of Alderaan

this was one of the major collections of historical artifacts found on the planet Alderaan. It also had a large collection of artifacts from other worlds. (TNR)

Nativum

this planet was one of many worlds targeted for takeover by the Confederacy of Independent Systems, during the height of the Clone Wars. The plans for the attack on Nativum were actually a ruse, meant to throw the Old Republic off the trail of the true Separatist target. In reality, the Separatists had been waiting for the codebreaking device created by Talesan Fry to show up. When the codebreaker was brought to Azure, a tracer installed by Helina Dow sent out a signal pinpointing its location on Azure. (SOJ)

Natja

this Hutt crimelord made her wealth in the slave trade of the Outer Rim Territories. Despite the fact she was very polite with her visitors, Natja was ruthless and untrustworthy at best. She was known to keep a tribe of Jawas under her control, to serve as servants and personal escorts. Natja eventually purchased the prototype Imperial armor and shields auctioned off by Sard Nightbringer, for an even 100,000,000 credits. She was later poisoned with a verneilan parasite, and quickly died. It was later revealed that her killer was none other than Marg Sonat. (POC)

Natori Association

this branch of the Tenloss Syndicate was made up of former military personnel who worked to train mercenaries for hire. They were based on Sperin, in the Palaquin System, and were a serious rival of the Ragnar Bounty Hunter Syndicate during the early years of the New Republic. It was believed that the Natori Association was funded and controlled by Malakin Enterprises during the early years of the New Republic. Those soldiers who attended the Association's training had the option of paying up-front or deferring payment. Those who deferred payment were obliged to pay for their education by serving in the Natori Shock Troops. (GG11, SWJ15)

Natori Shock Troops

this was the lowest level of first-line soldiers who graduated from the Natori Association. It was manned by those soldiers who didn't pay for their education in the Association up front. (SWJ15)

Natunda

this was the fifth day of the Tapani local calendar's week. (PGT)

Natural Planetary Protectorate

this radical environmental protection group rose to prominence during the height of the New Order, after they foiled an expedition from the Dreskin Foundation to acquire a Burskan gundark. The NPP valued life above all things, so their tactics usually involved the sabotage of equipment or, in extreme cases, starships to prevent the unwanted removal of plants or animals from planets which had been declared as protected preserves during the Old Republic. (WOTC)

Naul Cilgris

this Duros trader was the nephew of Thes Cilgris, and inherited the Birthright from Thes' son, Yett. Like his relatives, Naul used the ship for business, but was also supportive of the New Republic's efforts to eliminate the Yuuzhan Vong threat. Naul made many supply runs for the Republic, helping to maintain a level of stability despite the horrors of the alien invasion. (SOG)

Nausage

this was a grilled food which was favored on Tatooine during the early decades of the New Republic. Nausage was often served with dustcrepes as a breakfast meal. (SBS)

Nautag

Yarna d'al' Gargan's Askajian mate, Nautag was known as one of the best weavers of tomuon wool on Askaj. Nautag and his family were captured by Jabba the Hutt's slavers and brought to Tatooine. When Nautag cursed Jabba for being nothing more than a low-life scum who would never have his family as slaves, Jabba dropped Nautag into the rancor pit. After Yarna escaped from Jabba's palace, she named her older surviving male cub Nautag, in honor of its father. (TJP)

Nautag

this was the older of two male sons born to Yarna d'al' Gargan and her mate, Nautag. The younger Nautag was named in honor of his father, who was killed by Jabba the Hutt while trying to protect his family. (TJP, SWDB)

Nautical Star

this 30-meter-long Mon Calamari transport ship was typical of the smaller ships produced by the Mon Cal. Like all Mon Cal starships, it was unique among similar ships but retained the exquisite lines and exception craftsmanship inherent in all Mon Cal designs. It has controls for a number of non-Calamari races, including humans. It could handle up to 75 metric tons of cargo, and had a number of redundant systems. The Nautical Star has the unique ability to be able to operate in the vacuum of space, in atmosphere, and under the water. The Nautical Star was armed with a pair of laser cannons. (SWJ9)

Nautila

this was the written form of the Nautolan language, which is only pronounceable underwater. (PJSB, UANT)

Nautiloid

see Nautolan (NEGC)

Nautolan

this was the native language of the Nautolan race. It was fully pronounceable only underwater, so many Nautolans preferred to remain below the surface of the water when communicating with each other. They could speak either Anselmian or Basic when out of the water, or when communicating with the Anselmi. (WOTC)

Nautolan

this humanoid race was amphibious in nature, with green skin and a collection of headtails falling from the rear of their skulls. The Nautolans were native to the Sabilon region of the aquatic world Glee Ansem, a planet they shared with the Anselmi. They were known for their incredible sense of smell, which came from the highly receptive olfactory receptors located throughout their head-tails, and they could detect the presence of pheromones and changes in a being's body chemistry. This sense of smell was exceptional when used underwater, but tended to fade when the Nautolan lived on the land. Because of this, and the fact that their native Nautolan language could only be fully pronounced underwater, Nautolans preferred to live in the water. In addition to verbal and pheromonal communication, the subtle swirls and patterns found in a Nautolan's unblinking eyes often displayed their emotions. The music of the Nautolan race was difficult to comprehend for most other races, as the pauses between notes were more important than the notes themselves. The musical notes were often sustained in irregular units. Note that Star Wars: The New Essential Guide to Characters names this race as Nautiloid. (TCG1, WOTC, NEGC, OWS, TCD)

Nauton IV

Jedi Master Ruati was beheaded on this planet, during the height of the Clone Wars. It was believed that he was killed by Asajj Ventress. (O)

Nava Card

a data card which contains navigational logs and information from Imperial starships. (DF)

Navander, Romas "Lock"

this Corellian pilot attended the Imperial Academy, but defected to the Alliance upon graduation. Much of his training and expertise was in communications and tactical planning. After earning a promotion to the rank of Lieutenant, he became one of Echo Base's senior technical communications officers. Working with Tamizander Rey, Lieutenant Navander directed the distribution of orders to Alliance ships during the evacuation of the base following the Battle of Hoth. Lock Navander was portrayed by Jerry Harte in Star Wars: Episode V - The Empire Strikes Back. (CCG3, SWI74)

Navardan Regenerator

this implant was developed some 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. It provided the user with enhanced healing powers, allowing wounds and injuries to heal in mere seconds instead of days or weeks. (KOTOR)

Nav-Computer Route Astrogation Bypass System

known as the N-CRAB, this device was created and manufactured by Kuat Drive Yards to allow starship pilots to alter their course while in hyperspace. Without the N-CRAB, pilots had to drop out of hyperspace and recalculate their flight routes in order to alter their destination in the middle of the trip. With the N-CRAB, the pilot can enter in the new destination coordinates, and the N-CRAB will slowly integrate them into the existing flightplan programming. Over a short period of time, the N-CRAB will alter the starship's hyperspace vector, bringing it to the new destination without having to revert to realspace. In many situations, this ability could save a pilot many hours of time during a run. The only drawback to the N-CRAB's ability was the fact that it interfered with the ship's primary navigation computer, requiring that the nav-comp be "cleaned" periodically and especially before the N-CRAB is used again, to ensure that the calculation routines haven't been altered. (GFT)

NavDif

this term used to describe any device which provided navigation and direction finding information to its user. (GFT)

Nave

this three-leafed, yellow swamp plant is found on the planet Naboo, where it is used by the Gungans as a spice and a wrapping for many meals. (GF)

Nave Vengaris

this female served as the governor of the planet Aquilaris during the last decades of the Old Republic. She welcomed the tourism and income which accompanied podracing during this period, and heartily supported the used of several floating cities as parts of the race courses. (RAC)

Navett, Drend

this member of the underground organization known as Vengeance worked with Klif to incite crowds to riot over the smallest of issues. Klif did the talking, using forceful words to bring a crowd to a state of agitation. Drend, once the mood was right, would touch off the riots with a few well-placed blicci-fruits or pipe-bombs. The two found steady employment when Moff Disra hired them to cause riots on several New Republic worlds after the revelation that the Bothans were involved in the destruction of Caamas. Later, Navett and Klif were placed in charge of taking out the shield generator in Drev'starn, posing as exotic animal dealers. In this capacity, they were able to obtain several swarms of metalmites, which they infiltrated into the genreator building on the clothing of the workers. When the Bothans realized that they had a problem, they called in Navett and Klif. They were only too happy to help the Bothans exterminate the metalmites, and while laying down the insecticide they also laid several spreads of liquid nutrients. Then, after gaining access to a power conduit under the restaurant of a Ho'Din - with the help of Pensin and Horvic - they used a nesting of baby mawkrens to carry out the next steps. The mawkrens were hungry, and Navett used this to his advantage. After strapping small, remote-detonating bombs to their backs, Navett helped them get the scent of food: the liquid nutrients they had placed in the generator building. The first wave of mawkrens were used to take out the building's main walls, while the second group was used to destroy the generator itself. Unfortunately, this second step required Navett to be close the explosion - it was a suicide mission. As soon as Navett got the shields down, the others managed to get aboard the Predominance and initiate a battle for Bothawui. (SOP, VOF)

Navi

this wealthy Sephi was the nephew of King Alaric, the leader of the Sephi people during the height of the Clone Wars. Navi served as Thustra's representative to the Galactic Senate, and had become one of the many Senators who spent more time worried about their own luxury than the needs of their people and the galaxy. After Alaric decided that Thustra would secede from the Republic, Navi was called back to his homeworld in order to reinforce Thustra's secession. Once back home, Navi found that Jedi Master Yoda - Alaric's old friend - had been arrived to try and negotiate with the King. Using all his new skills, Navi tried to twist Alaric's decision to appear as if the King had become old and senile, and was sending the Sephi to their deaths. Alaric, for his part, explained that he had recalled Navi to cut off his illicit profits, not to bring him back for support. Finding Yoda impenetrable, Navi went after the two Jedi Padawans, Cal and Pix. He provided Cal with information that would allow the Jedi to escape the palace, then he met with Pix to give her a fabricated story of Alaric's execution of the Jedi. Navi gave her information on the latest troop movements of the Sephi, as well as information on how to attack Alaric's palace. Meanwhile, his assistant Moje began planting rumors of a plot by the Jedi to murder Alaric, inciting an anti-Republic sentiment that further incited the Sephi. When Alaric was killed in a fight with Yoda, Navi used the event to secure his position of power. He then returned to Coruscant to call for the elimination of the Jedi Order, hoping to make the Senate believe that Yoda had been killed shortly after being apprehended. Yoda's sudden reappearance put an end to Navi's machinations, and the Sephi Senator was thrown into prison for his duplicity. (J5)

Navibrain

this was the New Republic term given to the brain-like structure which served as the navigational computer of a Yuuzhan Vong warship. It was discovered by Lowbacca, aboard the Ksstarr, that the navibrain detected minute changes in the surrounding environment, measuring the gravity of planets, moons, and stars to determine its location and the direction it should take in order to reach its destination. (DJ)

Navigation Bouy

also known a NavBouy, these floating, deep-space devices provide information on interstellar coordinates to nearby starships, as long as they have the correct access codes. They can also aid those starships that have hyperdrives but limited navicomputer capability. (XW)

Navigation Computer

also known as a NavCom Unit, these computers were used to plot trajectories and hyperspace flight plans between the planets contained in the computer's database. It used the spatial coordinates of the ship in order to accurately chart a course. Many military-grade navigation computers maintained continually-updated databases of the coordinates of billions of planets, moons, and stars to several hundred decimal places, which allowed the computers to accurately plot courses through realspace as well as hyperspace. Civilian models did not require this level of accuracy, but nonetheless maintained incredibly accurate information on the locations of spatial bodies. Coordinates were based on the current location of the planet Coruscant, which was denoted by the coordinates (0,0,0), even though it was not at the exact center of the galaxy. This fact was irrelevant to navigation computers, but vexed many astrocartographers, especially those not born in the Core Worlds. (SW, SCRE, GMR9)

Navigational Deflector Shield

a starship protection device which uses an ionized graviton pulse emitter to deflect solid matter away from the ship. These shields are extremely important for protecting starships moving at high speeds, but are not effective for deflecting large objects. (SWSB) meaning "dark", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Navik

the leader of the Chattza Rodians, Navik is easily distinguished by the red birthmark which covers his face. This birthmark led to his nickname, Navik the Red. He perpetuated the warlike nature of the Rodians, using the traditional wargames as an excuse to make war on other tribes. In doing so, he killed Greedo's father and forced the Tetsus tribe to Flee Rodia. He hunted them down, forcing them off the jungle planet they had adopted and onto Nar Shaddaa. Navik returned to Rodia, and after the Battle of Endor he became Rodia's de facto leader. He was later named the planet's main representative to the New Republic, and was a member of the nine-being leadership of the New Republic Defense Force. (TME, JE)

Navin

this was the Snivvian word for "starship." (HNN5)

Navin-u kir-essen?

this Snivvian question translated into Basic as "Can you fly a starship?" (HNN5)

Navlaas

this gas giant was the third and outermost planet in the Pyrshak System. It was orbited by eight moons. (PH)

Navroc City

this was one of the larger cities found on the planet Cartao. (SWI68)

Navshe'starn

this city was located on the western continent of the planet Bothawui. (SPG)

Navy, Imperial

the space-going branch of the Imperial armed forces, the Navy oversaw all operations the involved the Imperial fleet. They had become a mental weapon for the Emperor Palpatine, who used them as a primary part of his "rule by fear" doctrine. He beefed up the Navy, adding the larger and fiercer Imperial- and Super-class Star Destroyers while increasing the speed and firepower of the TIE fighter squadrons. It was rumored that, at its height, the Navy consisted of over 25,000 Imperial-class Star Destroyers. The Imperial Navy also possessed the sophistication to determine galactic stellar coordinates to 3 additional decimal places over and above the necessary precision for most navicomputers. (SW, AC, ISB)

Navy, New Republic

the space-going branch of the New Republic armed forces, the Navy oversaw all operations the involved the Republic fleet. Like the Alliance before it, the New Republic Navy initially consisted of ships that were donated, on loan, or stolen. This meant that many ships were outdated and there were several instances where designs were represented by a single ship. This made for tremendous logistical problems for maintenance and repair. Thus, one of the first considerations of the New Republic was outfitting its Navy with new classes of starships. Among the first of the new fleet were the Sacheen- and Hajen-class ships. Following the defeat of Grand Admiral Thrawn and Palpatine's cloned reincarnations, the New Republic began to decommission much of the Navy, feeling that the need for their firepower was past. This led, in part, to many star systems beginning to consider secession from the New Republic, in order to more fully protect their assets. The Corellian Sector was one of these systems, and Thrackan Sal-Solo took advantage of the New Republic's reduced firepower to actually secede from the Republic. The also possessed the sophistication to determine galactic stellar coordinates to 3 additional decimal places over and above the necessary precision for most navicomputers. (SW, AC, BTS)

Nawara

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name meant "tongue" or "speaker". (GCG)

Nawara Ven

this Twi'lek was a member of Wedge Antilles' X-Wing Rogue Squadron. On Ryloth, Nawara was born to the Ven clan. His name was translated literally to be "tongue of silver," but the translation was modified to mean "excellent speaker." On Ryloth, he is known as Nawar'aven, which indicates the Twi'leki tendency to modify names to indicate meaning. If he were known by his true clan name, Nawara'ven, the translation would then be "tarnished silver." He was a lawyer with the New Republic before applying for fighter duty. As such, he drew a part in the mission to liberate Coruscant. Once on the planet, Nawara contracted the Krytos virus, but underwent immediate bacta therapy and was able to overcome the virus. He later served as Tycho Celchu's defendant in the trial of Corran Horn's murder, as well as the Rogue Squadron primary representative in the mission to Ryloth to obtain Kor ryll. Upon his return to Coruscant, Ven was contacted by Kirtan Loor, who offered to expose every Imperial agent on Coruscant, including the true identity of the traitor in Rogue Squadron, in return for freedom from Ysanne Isard and certain liberties. Ven brokered a deal with the New Republic's Provisional Council, and met Loor with Iella Wessiri in the bowels of Imperial City. When they exited the turbolift at the prosecutor's level, they were attacked by Diric Wessiri. Wessiri believed that Loor was actually Evis Derricote, and wanted to kill Derricote for enslaving him. Instead, Diric shot Ven in the hip before killing Loor. Diric himself was killed by his own wife, Iella, who believed him to be a crazed assassin. Ven managed to overcome the injury and return to Rogue Squadron, but was shot down during the Battle of Thyferra by Evis Dlarit. He ejected before his X-Wing exploded, but he sustained damage to his legs when his vacuum suit was pierced by shrapnel. He decided to give up flying and become the Rogue's Executive officer. He tried to develop a relationship with Dia Passik, but she remained aloof to him because of the fact that he remained loyal to Ryloth in many ways. He later started working for Booster Terrik aboard the Errant Venture, using his legal and accounting skills to keep the floating outpost solvent. He was briefly stranded on Trogon during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, while trying to arrange for transport of some "hot items" off the planet's surface. The "hot items" were actually a group of Force-sensitive children Nawara was trying to return to the Errant Venture. He was impeded when a group of bounty hunters arrived on the planet looking for Jedi Knights, but a group of freelance operatives helped him evade the bounty hunters and return to the ship. (XWN, WG, KT, BW, SOP, IF, NJOSB)

Naween Oasis

this freshwater oasis was located on the planet Tatooine, just north of Mos Eisley. (IWST)

Naweenen Fate Rooms

a famous casino found on the planet Ord Mantell. (RM)

Nawnum

this minor Hutt crimelord worked for Ganis before attempting to assassinate Ganis in order to take over his empire. Ganis survived, and placed a huge bounty on Nawnum's head. (IA)

Nawruun

this elderly Wookiee was the last surviving member of the Nysshyyyk clan enslaved at the Maw Installation. When the New Republic invaded the Installation and rescued the captive Wookiees there, Nawruun took the opportunity to brutally kill Grodon Lakky, the Wookiee keeper who had tortured him over the years. Despite the satisfaction generated by the act, Nawruun nevertheless regretted his outburst. (COTF, JASB)

Naxxis Bats

this ancient Dashade warrior was noted for describing the ancient Jedi Council as "twelve blind swordsmen (who) seek only to acquiesce never to resist." He claimed that this was a display of weakness, which could be exploited. (LAWS)

Nay

this was one of the many family names used by the Bothan people. It translated loosely to "snow" or "ice". (GCG, WOTC)

Nayama

this woman was once the wife of former Jedi Knight Jolee Bindo. (SWDB)

Nayli

this small city, located on the planet Chandrila, was the site of one of the planet's three main spaceports. (CCW)

Naytaan

this Lieutenant served the Alliance as an X-Wing pilot in Red Squadron. As Red 9, Naytaan was a key participant in the relief effort that helped bring supplies to the rebels on Clak'Dor VII. His X-Wing was modified to have additional cargo space. He was famous for achieving ace status in just two missions for the Alliance. (CCG9)

Nazaar

a Ripoblus Lambda-class shuttle group operative during the Sepan Civil War. It was assigned to protect the refugees on the Glas. (TIE)

Nazay Seat

this ornately-carved, high-backed chair was used by the ancient Alwari of the Delgerhan province, on the planet Ansion, during certain rituals. (APS)

Nazfar Metalworks Guild

this Yevethan starshipwright guild built hundreds of Aramadia-class thrustships for Nil Spaar's Navy. (TT)

Nazrita

this woman worked as a master mechanic for the Klatooinan Trade Guild during the height of the New Order. It was Nazrita who first taught Platt Okeefe the basics of starship maintenance. (PSG)

Nazwa

this is the name of the ancient city ruins which were encircled by the modern city of Baroo. The city of Nazwa was the seat of the ancient Majan culture. (RAC)

Nazzar

a race of grey-skinned equine humanoids which was native to the planet Nazzri during the golden age of the Old Republic. They adhered to the tenets of the Ulizra and the Great Structure, remaining aloof from the rest of the galaxy. For this reason, and the fact that they were rarely seen away from their homeworld, many other races considered the Nazzar to be xenophobic. The few Nazzar encountered away from Nazzri were either outcasts who had rejected the Ulizra, or missionaries who hoped to bring the Ulizra to new peoples. After Emperor Palpatine rose to power, the Nazzar simply remained on their homeworld, ignoring the rest of the galaxy. (FNU, TOJC, PJSB)

Nazzar

this was the native language of the Nazzar. (PJSB)

Nazzer

this dark-haired man was one of the many bounty hunters who were part of the Crimson Nova chapter of the Bounty Hunter's Guild, during the height of the Clone Wars. Nazzer led the small group that was sent to the planet Null, to intercept and kill as many of the Jedi who were fighting on the planet as they could. Ultimately, they only managed to acquire the lightsaber of Jedi Master T'ra Saa. (RSF)

Nazzri

this planet was the homeworld of the Nazzar race. (TOJC)

N-class Freighter

this starship design had a squat cylinder for the main hull, with the cockpit mounted at the front of the cylinder and a central access tube running perpendicular to the cockpit at its midsection. (MC16)

N-CRAB

this was the shortened name for Kuat Drive Yards' Nav-Computer Route Astrogation Bypass system. (GFT)

N'croth

this is the capital city of the planet M'haeli. (ROC)

NCW-781

this unexplored planet was the site of a secret Imperial base during the Galactic Civil War. An Alliance Y-Wing on surveillance duty was shot down by the Empire, and the Alliance launched a mission to recover it. (IA)

NCW-86

this was the Imperial designation of the planet known as Demonsgate. (E)

ND9

Seinar Fleet System's hyperdrive activation unit used on the TIE Advanced. (TIE)

Nder

this man, a native of Cularin, was killed in his home when a group of Jedi Knights mistakenly attacked it, during the height of the Clone Wars. (LFCW)

Ndowi

this tribe of Socorrans was known to be the only indigenous group which didn't live in the desert wastes. They were also the least nomadic of the four main tribes, having established a series of villages along the Rym Mountains. However, the Ndowi were also the smallest in number, with the entire tribe made up of less than 1,000 members at the height of the New Order. (BSS)

Ndowi Tribal Lands

this part of the planet Socorro was owned by the Ndowi tribe, and comprised an area from the equator southward to the pole. The lands were bordered by the Rym Mountains. (BSS)

Nduuati

this was a race of reptilian sentients. (BSS)

Ne Ganna Dateel Jabba

this bas-relief was commissioned by Jabba the Hutt to illustrate his vast influence. Created from sandstone quarried on Nal Hutta, it was chiseled by the slaves of the great Hutt artist Dreyba. Jabba prominently displayed the sculpture at his Tatooine residence. (CCG7)

Ne linga ne hochka

this was a Rodian insult. (SWJ5)

Ne ompee doe gaga punta?

this Huttese question translated into Basic as "Is this freshly dead?" It was used in food preparation as well as when food was served. (GMR5)

Neary

this planet was located in the Outer Rim Territories. (AIR)

Neathlat

this was a form of living bandage created by the Yuuzhan Vong. In accordance with Yuuzhan Vong tradition, the neathlat treated the wound but did nothing to diminish the pain of the injury. (EL1)

Neb Dulo

this unusual alien was a native of the planet Tocoia. He was a devote follower of the Davrilat religion, and had strong protective instincts. (CCG9)

Neb Neb

this name, which meant "short" - or, more literally, "down down" - was common among Gungan males. (GCG)

Neb Neb Goodrow

this Gungan was one of the best bongo racers in the city of Otoh Gunga, prior to the Battle of Naboo. Neb Neb's trademark was his green-colored bongo, a custom-built monobubble vehicle designed for speed and maneuverability in tight turns. Unfortunately, just before the Battle, Neb Neb crashed with Spleed Nukkles in a practice run for the Bongo Rally, and was unable to compete. Neb Neb later helped Lob Dizz in capturing Captain Swagg, after the blue-skinned pirates tried to destroy the Lake Umberbool arena for a second time. In the years following the Battle of Naboo, Neb Neb and Spleed continued race their bongos, but more often than not they ended in a crash. Whether between themselves or with other racers, Neb Neb and Spleed always managed to survive and race again, a fact that made them popular with young Gungans and new fans across the galaxy. However, it made them less than popular with other racers, who considered them reckless and dangerous. They were often accused of collusion, purposely wrecking other racers so that one or the other could win. They were briefly suspended from racing following the crash and disappearance of Zak "Squidfella" Quiglee, but redeemed themselves by restoring Boss Nass's old heyblibber and bringing Squidfella in for questioning. (E1A12, GMR4)

Neb Nob

this Gungan served under Commander Wollod as a communications officer, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. (E1A9)

Neb Ufentes

this noted space vessel engineer was an expert in hyperspace theory. Neb was contracted by Drooim-Durtha Systems to develop the ShipFinder for use by the Empire some two years before the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. He continued to develop newer versions of the device until he was killed by the crimelord Mahk'khar, who then stole the latest prototype. (SWJ8)

Neb, Killium

either a Gamorrean or one of Pothman's stormtroopers. (COJ)

Nebael

this was a common name among the S'kytri people. (UANT)

Nebit

this Jawa was known for his ability to plan raids on rival tribes, and was known to other tribes as a despicable warrior. He was the acknowledged leader of his tribe, and hated to be "frocked." (CCG9)

Nebo

this Onderonian street philosopher and Naddist helped Exar Kun find the hidden Sith artifacts on the Dxun moon. (DLS)

Nebula Award

this award was given by the Alliance to those military and special forces members who displayed uncompromising loyalty and unswerving bravery in the face of imminent danger. (CFG)

Nebula Chaser

this independent transport ship was owned and operated by Captain Pollux. It was a modified Corellian Engineering Corporation civilian cruiser, measuring 1,000 meters in length and equipped with a Hoersch-Kessel sublight drive system. Some two years after the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy began, the Nebula Chaser was part of the small fleet which assisted in the evacuation of the planet Talfaglio. Shortly after leaving Corellian space, it was ambushed by the Gift of Anguish and boarded by the Yuuzhan Vong. Aboard the ship, Alema and Numa Rar tried to escape, but were cornered by a voxyn. Alema managed to escape, but Numa became the first of the Jedi Knights to be killed by the voxyn. The Yuuzhan Vong took possession of the cruiser, and used it as a pawn in their plans to obtain Jaina and Jacen Solo. The ship was eventually destroyed, in an effort to sway Leia Organa Solo to the Yuuzhan Vong's position. She refused to turn over any information on the Jedi, and the Nebula Chaser was destroyed. (SBS)

Nebula Consumables

a corporation that grew in the clouds of the gas giant Tyed Kant, Nebula Consumables is the planet's leading producer of food. It has two primary customers: Tyed Kant's government, and the Empire. (SWJ2, SN)

Nebula Front

this protest group sprang up in response to the Trade Federation's control of trade routes in the Mid and Outer Rim Territories during the last decades of the Old Republic. Based on the planet Asmeru, in the Senex Sector, the Nebula Front had issues with the Old Republic as well, and took great pains to hamper the activities of the Trade Federation and Republic starships in the Outer Rim. These were the so-called "free trade" zones, despite the fact that the Federation exercised a great deal of control there. Several decades before the Battle of Naboo, Finis Valorum's father had a chance to eliminate the Nebula Front, but simply chastised them and allowed them to regroup and rebuild. It was known that the Nebula Front tried to negotiate a truce with the Trade Federation, but the two groups were unable to see eye to eye. The Nebula Front refused to accept funding from the Hutts or any group which supported slavery. After the Trade Federation was given a full franchise by the Old Republic, a militant branch of the Nebula Front set out to hire pirates and mercenaries to strike against the Federation. They were later accused of plotting the assassination of Chancellor Valorum, and only the timely intervention of Qui-Gon Jinn and Adi Gallia prevented Valorum's death. In the wake of their failure to kill Valorum and break up the Trade Federation, and with the death of Havac at Eriadu, the Nebula Front disintegrated. (COD)

Nebula Hotels

an Outer Rim chain of reasonably-priced hotels. (GG9)

Nebula Manufacturing

this Old Republic manufacturer was one of the largest corporations found on the planet Coruscant. (CCW)

Nebula Masters

this branch of the Dark Star Hellions was based on the planet Questal. Led by Bim Maldeen, they discovered Tiree's X-Wing after the Alliance agent landed on the planet to help find his brother-in-law, Rogan, and sold the ship on the black market. They recovered Tiree's locator pendant, which misled a group of Alliance agents who were searching for him. (GCQ)

Nebula Orchid

this eatery was located in Kuat City, and was quite popular during the early decades of the New Republic. It was here that Reck Desh learned of Elan's seeming defection to the New Republic from an unknown telbun. (HT)

Nebula Orchids

brilliant flowers native to Yavin 4. They grow on thin vines, which are used as string. The vines are filled with fluid which seeps out when cut. This causes the vines to contract, tightening any existing knots even further. (DA, HTF)

Nebula Queen

this luxury ship was operated by Event Vistas, and made regular runs to Coruscant. (SOC)

Nebula Rubantine

this was the primary override authorization code used by the crew of the Nebula Chaser. (SBS)

Nebula-class Star Destroyer

one of the first major designs produced by the New Republic, the Nebula-class was a mobile assault platform similar in its role to a Star Destroyer. First unveiled some eleven years after the Battle of Endor, the Nebula-class was considered one of the new class of starships produced for the New Republic's Navy, and measured 1,040 meters in length. (BTS, SOP)

Nebulas of Ossorock

this vast area of space is so dense with gases that it affects starship sensors and other systems. More ships have crashed into each other while travelling within the Nebulas than in any other part of the galaxy. (GMS)

Nebulba

this Dug was a member of Sebulba's clan, and worked for Sebolto's gang during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Mawhonic issued a bounty for his capture, claiming that "all the kin of that dirty Dug Sebulba deserved to fry." Jango Fett managed to claim the bounty during his attempt to meet with Sebolto. (BH)

Nebulon Ranger

this was the name of Ulic Qel-Droma's Coruscant-class heavy courier starship. He used it to transport himself, his brother Cay, and Tott Doneeta to Onderon in order to help enact a truce to the Beast Wars as Master Arca's chargemen. After Ulic was possessed by the Sith magic of Exar Kun, the Nebulon Ranger fell into Cay's hands, and he used to assist the Jedi during the Great Sith War. Cay took it to Ossus in an attempt to help the Jedi recover their lore after the destruction of the Cron System. However, he discovered Ulic's presence there, and took to the skies to defeat his brother. In the battle, the Nebulon Ranger was destroyed by Ulic, forcing Cay to land at great cost to the ship. Ulic then murdered Cay in a lightsaber battle. (TOJ, DLS, TSW)

Nebulon Rangers

this group of space pirates, led by Ssurussk, ambushed many cargo convoys in the Expansion Region of the galaxy during the early years of the New Order. (SOG)

Nebulon-B Frigate

the designation of the Kuat Drive Yards EF76B Escort ship, it is a strangely-shaped ship that has a long, thin hull with its main decks hanging off the front end and the engines hanging off the rear. It measured 300 meters in length. They are slow, unwieldy ships, and were designed to carry a number of TIE Fighters as protection. Originally built for Imperial escort duty just after the Battle of Yavin, the Alliance was able to capture a number of them intact, and used these frigates as medical ships. They had a normal crew of 920, but could be operated with as little as 850. They were built at a cost of 194,000,000 credits, not quite a fifth the cost of an Imperial-class Star Destroyer. The Nebulon-B Frigate boasts the following shipboard systems

- 12 Borstel RH8 Laser Cannon Batteries
- 2 Phylon-Q7 Tractor Beam Projectors
- Serridge SEAL Shielding System (rated at 160 SBD) or Delphus JC-671 Projectors
- 12 Taim and Bak XI7 Turbolaser Batteries
- Plat Dromma Targetting Computer
- Triple Tam Stardrive and Hyperdrive Motivator
- Fabritech ANs 9.5w Wide Range Sensor System
- 2 Fighter Bays
 - 1 X-wing or 1 A-wing Squadron
 - 1 Y-wing Squadron

KDY also produced a modified version of the Nebulon-B frigate, aptly named the Nebulon-B2. (ESB, HTTE, SCRE, XW, TIE, SFS, SOG)

Nebulon-B2 Frigate

this was the follow-up to Kuat Drive Yards' successful Nebulon-B Frigate design. The primary difference between the B and the B2 is in the forward section of the ship. The Nebulon-B has a deep-based forward pod that extends well below the aft engine section. The Nebulon-B2 has a smaller forward pod, comparable in size to the engine pod. Attached the smaller pod, in order to gain stability, are two downward-planed wings. It is otherwise exactly the same as the original Nebulon-B. (TIE)

Nebulon-Q Swoop Racer

manufactured by Mobquet, these popular swoops were used by racers as well as swoop gangs. They are single-person craft, with a maximum flight ceiling of 350 kilometers and top speeds of 600 kilometers an hour. The Nebulon-3 measured three meters in length. Note that the Star Wars Adventure Journal, Issue 6 names this vehicle as the Mobquet-Q. (SWSB, SWJ6)

Nebulon-R Swoop Racer

this was the follow-on to Mobquet's Nebulon-Q swoop racers. (SWJ5)

Nebulon-S Swoop Racer

another Mobquet racing swoop, the Swoop-S measured 3.2 meters in length. It is armed with a single blaster cannon., and has a top speed of 600 kilometers per hour. (DFRSB)

Nebulo-Q

this was a Mobquet thruster jet engine, produced during the New Order for use on high-performance speeders. This might actually refer to the Nebulon-Q swoop. (NEGV, GMR4)

Nebulox Q Racer

this was a model of swoop built by Mobquet. (ML)

Ne'Chak

this Rodian mercenary trained a team of Jawas in the use of weapons and hand-to-hand combat, for employment as security agents at the Bantha Traxx establishment on Lianna. Ne'Chak owed Yin Vocta a favor, and reluctantly agreed to train the diminutive creatures. Despite his misgivings, the Jawas quickly exceeded Ne'Chak's expectations. Ne'Chak was later hired by Omze'kehr Kahr to serve as the captain of the security forces aboard Omze's Incredible Traveling Starport, commanding a team of Rodian mercenaries who kept the peace aboard the converted cruiser. (WSV, PSPG)

Necil

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Necresh

this small scavenger is native to the planet Korbin. Necresh as red-furred mammals which resemble rats. Their keen senses of smell and hearing allow them to locate sources of food, although they rarely have to use them because most necresh live near the Last Call valley. This valley provides most necresh with a ready source of dead meat. (PG2)

Necropolis

this planet, originally known as Dahrtag, was populated by a human culture known as the Necropolitans. Hoole asked Han Solo to take he and his charges - Tash and Zak Arranda - to the planet in order for them to purchase a new ship after the planet D'vouran consumed their previous vessel. The planet's surface was shrouded in a perpetual mist. The natives of the planet had an ancient civilization, whose origins went back thousands of years before the Battle of Yavin, and they revered their dead with deep-seated traditions. Doctor Evazan used this planet as a place to hide out from the various bounty hunters searching for him, and perfected his reanimation serum during this time. He used the many legends and traditions of the Necropolitans to keep his efforts a secret. (GOF2, ANT)

Necropolis

this was a term used by Judder Page and his team of infiltration agents to describe the planet Coruscant, after it had been terraformed by the Yuuzhan Vong into a simulacrum of Yuuzhan'tar and then destroyed by Supreme Overlord Shimrra. (UF)

Necropolitan

this was the name used by the living human natives of the planet Necropolis. Much of their day-to-day activity is governed by the Master of Cerements, who works to ensure that the Curse of Sycorax will not be invoked. Many of the modern children of Necropolis believed the ancient Curse was simply a bedtime story meant to scare children into behaving. However, the ancient rituals evolved into time-honored traditions, and the Necropolitans observed them all. Funerals were especially impressive and elaborate, but solemn and thought-provoking nonetheless. The loved ones of the deceased are kept separated from the body, for the Necropolitans believed that if the dead person saw the living mourn, they would come back from the dead. The family of the departed therefore lived in seclusion for seven days. (GOF2)

Necr'ygor Omic

this was a popular, interstellar wine served during the early years of the New Republic. It was said that the '47, '49, '50, and '52 vintages were among the best at the time. (HTTE)

Nectarot

this was an inexpensive liquor that was favored by Watto. (TG)

Nectarsect

this form of insect lived by sucking the nectar out of fruits and certain flowers. (JH)

Nectarwine

this wine is fermented from the fabled fruit fields of the planet Nepoy. (BF)

Ned

this young boy was the son of a spaceport worker on Belasco, some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. Ned's mother provided information about Cir L'ani and his companion to Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi, during their search for Jenna Zan Arbor. (TDR)

Nedij

this remote planet was the homeworld of the Nediji race. (MBS)

Nediji

this alien race was native to the remote world of Nedij. Avian in appearance, the Nediji were distinguished by their bird-like face, but were more humanoid than avian. The nose and mouth were formed from rubbery cartilage that tapered into a sharp point that resembled a beak, but the head was smooth, and the ears were flat against the skull. The skin of a Nediji was covered with what appeared to be pale blue fur or feathers, with a darker blue patch of skin beneath the chin. The fingertips of a Nediji ended in yellow talons, adding to their bird-like appearance. Most Nediji remained on their homeworld throughout their lives, living as part of the Flock. It was generally believed that travel offworld was considered taboo among the Flock. Only those who could not become members of the Flock were free to leave Nedij, and made their way in the galaxy as trackers and assassins. The number of off-world Nediji was exceptionally small, however, making their appearance in the galaxy an unusual occurrence and their innate skills relatively unknown. (MBS)

Nedmak, Kaj

a native of the planet Drall, Kaj stowed away on the smuggling ship of Zewel Hortine and learned to be a smuggler. At the age of seventeen, he set out on his own. He was one of the Nar Shaddaan smugglers who agreed to help Bria Tharen fly troop and rescue ships during the Battle of Ylesia. Years later, he teamed up with Celia Durasha, taking her much the same way Hortine had taken him in, after finding her stowed away aboard his ship, the Tryan Kajme. However, Kaj wasn't as good a sabacc player as he was a spacer, and he found himself heavily in debt to Rass M'Guy. This only added to the debt Kaj already owed Bwahl the Hutt, after failing to deliver a cargo of spice to the Gordian Reach, which was blockaded by the Empire. In an effort to pay off both Bwahl and Rass, Kaj convinced Celia to allow him to give an entire shipment of weapons - which they had been contracted by Bwahl to deliver to Tammuz-an - to Rass. Kaj then planned to play some sabacc and run enough spice to pay back Bwahl. Celia reluctantly agreed, but feared that something bad might happen. After Rass took the weapons as payment for the interest Kaj owed him, Kaj gave serious consideration to joining the Alliance. He hoped to avoid any further legal entanglements by joining up, but Celia asked him to stay out of the war. Before they could get very far from Ord Mantell, the Tryan Kajme was pulled from hyperspace by one of Bwahl's ships. They were forced to crashland on Ord Mantell, and Kaj was lost. He was captured by the bounty hunter known as Thune, who used Celia as an unwitting accomplice to capture Treytis Prash as well. Thune planned to return Kaj to Bwahl, and turn Prash and Celia over to the Empire. Celia and Prash managed to subdue Thune, and Kaj shot her Gank partner. Thune, however, came back to consciousness and managed to stab Kaj through the heart with a heavy knife. Kaj held on long enough for Celia and Prash to escape, and was eventually rescued by U-THR. The droid had finally had enough of Thune's bounty hunting, and helped Kaj stun her. Kaj then recovered the Y-Wing in which Celia and Prash had escaped, and they all made off with the Faceted. Kaj and Celia renamed the ship to Starlight Red, and recruited U-THR to help them out in their smuggling activities. (RD, SWJ14)

Nee

this female Sunesi was one of Agapos the Ninth's primary followers. Like Agapos, Nee had a sensitivity to the Force, and could heal others. When Urek managed to free Daye Azur-Jamin, Nee was able to assist him. She managed to heal Daye's eyes, but was injured before she could help further. She turned her abilities inward, and was able to heal herself. (SWJ10)

Nee choo

this Huttese verb translated into Basic as "to die." (GMR5)

Neece

this Rutanian was in charge of the prison facility in the city of Testa, during the rule of King Frane. (SP)

Neechak

this Rodian gunrunner worked for Tern Ashandrik, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (ND)

Needa, Lorth

an Imperial Navy Captain, Needa was one of Ozzel's closest advisors in the Imperial fleet. A veteran of the Clone Wars, Needa held the rank of Commander during the First Battle of Coruscant, when he commanded the Carrack-class cruiser Integrity. It was Needa who demanded the surrender of General Grievous, but he was unable to prevent the cyborg's escape. During the era of the New Order, Needa was promoted to the command of the Imperial-class Star Destroyer Avenger, and was part of the fleet that attacked Hoth in order to destroy the Alliance's Echo Base.. Following Ozzel's inability to follow instructions at the Battle of Hoth, Needa was directed by Darth Vader to follow the Millenium Falcon into the Hoth asteroid belt. Needa's failure to capture the Falcon resulted in his execution at the hands of Vader. Needa was portrayed by Michael Culver in Star Wars: The Empire Strikes Back. Needa was also portrayed by Nicholas Kepros for The Empire Strikes Back Radio Drama on National Public Radio. (ESB, ESB, MTS, WG, E3N)

Needa, Virar

this first-cousin, once removed, of Lorth Needa served the Empire on Coruscant as an orbital mirror commander. He was in control of mirror OSETS 2771 (The Krytos Trap indicates he was in command of OSETS 1127), which was reprogrammed by Winter to evaporate one of the planet's major reservoirs, in hopes of creating a huge electrical storm to short out the planet's shield generators. Virar was powerless to stop them. (WG, KT)

Needalb, Dedro

this Imperial Customs officer served the Empire on Nar Shaddaa during the early years of the New Order. Although he was an Imperial officer, he was under the control of the Hutts that controlled Nar Shaddaa. Whenever he felt like it, he would send an unverified report on traffic and cargo shipments to Moff Sarn Schild. (THG)

Needan

this planet, located beyond the Outer Rim Territories, was the homeworld of the Geelan race. The majority of the planet was once covered with oceans which teemed with life, while the land masses were covered with beautiful jungles. The planet was suddenly knocked from its orbit by a passing comet, and Needan was pushed into a wider orbit. As a result, the planet was plunged into a premature and permanent ice age. Much of the flora and fauna was killed off over a couple of generations, but the Geelan managed to construct domes to protect themselves from the perpetual winter. (SWJ13)

Needla

this was the name of Shantee Ree's pet attack stohl. (COG)

Needle

developed by Loronar Corporation in the early years of the New Republic, the Needle was a small, automated attack ship which employed Centrally Controlled Independent Replicant technology. Less than three meters long and extremely fast, Needles could be deployed from anywhere in the vicinity of their target. They were built from small, shielded transport shells manufactured by Seifax, and employed small hyperdrives built by the Bith. The droch Dzym agreed to supply Loronar with Sppok crystals for CCIR in return for weapons and synthdroids. In the field, Needles were controlled from a remote location, usually the starship from which they were launched. Their speed and size made them nearly impossible to detect and track. As part of their deal, Dymurra obtained the rights to build a Needle production facility on Antemerdis, although this construction never occurred. (POT)

Needle Beast

this lethal predator is native to the planet Dithanune. (CRO)

Needle Flier

this gauzy-winged avian was native to the planet Neimoidia. Each needle flier had two pairs of wings. (COD)

Needle Ray

this was the term used to describe a specialized blaster setting. A needle ray was an extremely thin beam of coherent light that forced a shooter to be extremely accurate. Needle rays were often employed in sporting events, to test the marksmanship of contestants. (MC22)

Needle Ship

this defensive craft was named for its slender shape. This shape allows the needle ship to slip into cloud cover and virtually disappear. It also allows the ship to evade most radar and sensor scans. (TNR)

Needle Thorn

the Yuuzhan Vong cultivated a unique plant for growing needle thorns. These thorns were quite thin and sharp, and were often thrown at a target. (FH3)

Needlebeamer

a small weapon often used in duels. It fires a thin, tight laser beam at its target, allowing a quick death with a minimum of bloodshed. (HSR)

Needlebug

this insect lives in the forests of Kashyyyk. It has a barb-covered nose which it uses to dig into the wroshyr trees' bark and suck out the sap. (TT)

Needle-launcher

this is an ancient version of a flechette gun. (SH)

Needler

this was a term used during the last years of the Old Republic to describe a small shiv or other pointed weapon. (YDR)

Needler Carbine

this form of dart carbine was developed by the Alliance to fire small darts. (SWGAL)

Needler Crab

this crab, native to the rocky reefs of Jodaka, uses a deadly poison to capture its prey. The poison is injected through a long, biotic needle which it can expel with a short burst of air. The natural food source of the needler crab was the seagulls that search the reefs for fish, which it shot down using its poisoned darts. (SWJ1)

Needles Mountains

this was a range of low, rocky mountains located on Tatooine near the desert formation known as The Needles. (TG)

Needles, The

a section of the Jundland Wastes on Tatooine, The Needles were the traditional camping grounds of the Tusken Raiders. They were distinguished by the thin, needle-like rock formations which sprang up from the desert sands. (ISU, SWO)

Needo Farr

this Rodian youth was ten years old at the time of the Clone Wars. Needo had been a member of the Legislative Youth Program's mock vote on the Military Creation Act, siding with those junior senators who voted in favor of the formation of the Army of the Republic. (HNN5)

Neegad 7

this was a model of tranquilizer dart gun used by pet shop owners who dealt in the sale of vicious creatures. (OE)

Neek

a small, slate-grey sauropod native to Ambria, neeks traveled in great flocks for protection and breeding as well as general companionship. Most neeks took quite readily to humanoid contact, and many beings kept neeks as pets. Explorers kept small groups of neeks for use during scouting missions, as the naturally skittish neeks would become frightened whenever impending danger was at hand, thus acting as a natural alarm system. (TOJ, TOJC, EGA)

Neek me

this Huttese phrase translated roughly into Basic as "the next time." (E1A14)

Neek Payvees

this male Gran and his brother, Reek Paynees, were noted criminals who worked for Sebolto during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. A bounty was issued for his capture by an anonymous individual, who simply wanted the "worthless scum" off the streets. The bounty was claimed by Jango Fett, when the bounty hunter traveled to Malastare to meet with Sebolto. (BH)

Neeka

meaning "sweet", this was one of the most common names among Rodian females. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Neeka Sot

this female Yuuzhan Vong warrior was ostensibly under the command of Khalee Lah, although she actually answered the priest Harrar. Shortly after the taking of Coruscant, it was revealed that she had been born to a sect of assassins and trained to serve as a silent killer. (DJ)

Neek-in-the-Middle

this was a childrens' game in which two players tried to keep an object - usually a ball - from a third player, who stood in between them. (E3N)

Neekoflight

native to the jungles of the planet Neimoidia, this comical bird was distinguished by the membranous crest atop its head. Their stout bodies were dominated by their wide-mouthed heads. The call of the neekoflight was distinctive, something like a beeping squawk. (WSW)

Neela

meaning "gentle", this was one of the most common names among Rodian females. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Neela

this Rodian female was once married to Greedo the Elder, and was also Greedo and Pqweeduk's mother. Neela and her brother, Nok, realized that the Tetsus clan was in trouble after Navik the Red killed Greedo the Elder, and they established a plan to leave Rodia at a moment's notice. Their efforts paid off briefly, when they were able to flee Rodia and reach Nar Shaddaa before Navik caught them. Unfortunately, Neela was killed in an Imperial ambush on Nar Shaddaa's Corellian Sector when Greedo was just a teenager. (TME, NEGC, HFG)

Neela, Sayer Mon

this woman once served as a barrister for the Old Republic. She was one of the more vocal opponents of Senator Palpatine's plans after his ascension to the position of Supreme Chancellor, and was one of the first individuals targeted for assassination by the new Chancellor. She fled public service, eventually joining the Alliance as a battle strategist and tactician. Her own sons had died while fighting against the Empire, and it was the least she could do to continue their legacy. She, along with her personal aide Raan Stasheff, managed to hide out on the planet Horob for a while, but their presence was eventually discovered. This proved to be detrimental to the Alliance, as the research base on Horob was close to completing work on an experimental sensor chip. Sayer Mon Neela managed to get a version of this chip before being captured by Captain Sergus Lanox, in order to preserve the work. She managed to escape the Imperials, but only after Raan took a blaster bolt meant for her, and Captain Lanox helped her reach the Starcrossed. (SWJ10)

Neelah

this was the childhood nickname of Kateel of Kuhlvelt, and was derived from the way she said her name before she learned how to talk. This was the only name she remembered after her sister, Kodir, tried to wipe her memory in order to keep her own plans a secret. Kateel had objected to Kodir's plans, and her ambitious sister needed to quiet Kateel quickly. She arranged for Kateel to be kidnapped and have her memory erased, but the thugs did a very poor job of it. Kateel almost died because of the injuries she sustained. Kateel was then supposed to be shipped off by Ree Duptom, never to be seen again. After Duptom's engines suffered a partial meltdown and left this ship adrift, Kateel was found by Boba Fett and brought to Jabba the Hutt's palace for safekeeping. Fett remained at the palace, ostensibly to remain on Jabba's payroll, but primarily to keep an eye on Neelah. He knew that she was part of the mystery surrounding Kuat of Kuat, although he wasn't sure how all the pieces fit together. When Jabba was killed near the Pit of Carkoon, and Boba Fett nearly killed by the Sarlacc, Neelah was left to wander on her own until she was discovered near the Sarlacc by Dengar and his betrothed, Manaroo. Both Fett and Neelah were taken to Dengar's hideout in the desert, where Dengar and Neelah nursed the other bounty hunter back to health. Over the next month, Neelah began to recover bits and pieces of her memory, both on her own and through Fett's own descriptions of the situation surrounding her. As they tried to unravel the mystery of Kuat of Kuat, Neelah discovered that she had a regal bearing and a strong will. When she stumbled across a picture of the scratches left by Nil Posodum in the holds of Slave I, a big piece of her erased memory flooded back into place. Posodum had scratched the logo of Kuat Drive Yards into the ship's floor, and Neelah suddenly remembered that she was a member of one of the Kuat ruling families. After being captured by Kodir near Oran-?, the rest of her memory returned. Once back at Kuat, she exposed her sister's duplicitous schemes, but couldn't save Kuat of Kuat from killing himself. She didn't want to take control of KDY, but made sure that the ruling families were kept in line. She was distinguished by her athletic build and jet-black hair, and she had a scar on her cheek from the vibroblade of a Gamorrean guard in Jabba's employ. The Gamorrean had tried to keep her from escaping Jabba's palace, but she managed to take the weapon from the clumsy beast and kill him with it. (MA, SLS, HM)

Neelanon

this planet was a member of the Old Republic. (SWDB)

Neelgaimon

a planet feared for its slave-worked sandmines. (COJ)

Neelian

this corvette was one of the many ships used by the Old Republic during the height of the Clone Wars. It was dispatched with the Ranger and its small fleet to Praesitlyn, under the command of Jedi Master Nejaa Halcyon, on the mission to retake the Intergalactic Communications Center from the Separatists. While Halcyon oversaw the operation from the Ranger, Anakin Skywalker commanded the main landing force from the Neelian. The orders from General Halcyon indicated that the Neelian was to stay out of any firefight that might occur, and to focus on getting her troops to a safe drop point. (JT)

Neelig

this venomous serpent, once native to the planet Ithor but now extinct, was known for its ability to get inside homes. It was a fast-moving reptile, which made it hard to catch. (GCG)

Neelig

this was one of the most common male names used by members of the Ithorian race. Although most Ithorian names were not used for a specific meaning, historians found that this name referred to an extinct species of venomous serpent. (GCG)

Neema

Vima-Da-Boda's daughter, Neema was as gifted with the Force as any of her famous ancestors. Vima tried to teach her, but Neema wanted to learn more than her mother's traditional teachings would provide. Neema began to experiment on her own, unknowingly delving deeper and deeper into the Dark Side of the Force. Thus, Neema's fall from the Light Side was utterly complete, beyond even Vima's ability. Vima kept trying, though, and Neema became angry at her mother's attempts. She fled her mother and became the mistress of an Ottethan warlord, in a effort to gain the aid of some friends who courted him. Neema eventually married him, to further gain aid, but he quickly tired of her and cast her out. Neema used all of her Dark Side power to strike him down, but the warlord used a primitive defense and survived the attack. He then imprisoned her, where she eventually repented her ways and tried to telepathically contact her mother, in an attempt to regain her freedom. Vima heard, but arrived too late, for the Ottethan had set her loose in the forests of his home world, where she was killed by the native rancors. (DE1, DESB)

Neen Niuv

this Sullustan criminal worked from a base hidden within Hutt Space, during the early years of the New Republic. Hiding from the Hutts aboard the modified shieldship Penumbra, Neen Niuv was too paranoid to meet with any individual one-on-one. Instead, he ordered his Twi'leki majordomo to meet with beings while Niuv himself piloted the shieldship and maintained security. (WOTC)

Neena

this former Alderaanian woman grew up in the household of Bail Organa. She displayed a large amount of musical talent, and was off-planet studying when the Empire destroyed Alderaan. This left her without any form of support, which meant that she had to break off her studies and fend for herself. She supported herself by performing aboard starliners, always trying to locate surviving members of the Organa household. Eventually, she found herself working on Adarlon, where she met Drun Carinwick and became involved with the Alliance. She became an undercover agent, posing as one of the performers aboard the Chariot in order to gather information on the Moff of the Minos Cluster. (GG6)

Neena Garnet

this famed gunslinger was killed in a duel with Uul-Rha-Shan. (CSA)

Neenoc

an Alliance YT-1300 destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Neep

this term is used to describe an individual who installs computer systems. (POT)

Neer, Pirt

this youth was one of the many students of the Force who were training at the Jedi Temple on Coruscant during the height of the Clone Wars. She was one of the many students who participated in the Apprentice Tournament that was eventually won by Tallisibeth Enwandung-Esterhazy. Pirt managed to defeat Enver Hoxha after Enver's lightsaber was taken by Scout, but Pirt was unprepared for a sneak attack by Lena Missa. Lena came up behind Pirt and put her in an arm bar that forced the young girl to yield. (YDR)

Neesada

meaning "high diver", this name was common among Gungan females. (GCG)

Neesada Bari

this Gungan female was a well-respected politician, having served three times on the Rep Council. She married the entrepreneur Bullba, and was the mother of Toba. (WOTC)

Neesh

meaning "loud", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Neesh

a Chattza Rodian, he and Thuku hired Spurch Goa to get Greedo killed. (TME)

Neeta

this woman befriended Darrik, after he landed on Cloud City with Platt Okeefe. She took him to the Floating Fish casino, where Darrik hoped to meet up with Platt, and showed him the basics of playing sabacc. (IDC)

Neetakka

this Rodian clan took their name from the Rodian word for "Ultimate Hunters." The Neetakka were one of the younger Rodian clans, and spent their entire focus on honing their hunting skills. Other clans regarded the Neetakka as bloodthirsty goons, albeit excellent hunters. (SPG)

Neevlin

this name was common among Ithorian females. Although such names do not generally have meaning, Ithorians who studied their race's history learned that the name referred to a protective species of Ithorian bird. (GCG)

Neevlin

this Ithorian bird was known to be extremely protective of its young. (GCG)

Neff

this Imperial Major was stationed in the Koornacht Cluster, as part of the Black Sword Command. He survived the Yevethan takeover of the Black Fleet shipyards, and was imprisoned on Pa'aal. Neff worked with Sil Sorannan, creating pulse-transceiver chips for use in the prisoner uprising during the Black Fleet Crisis. (TT)

Neff

this woman was a member of the Cloud City Wing Guard, at the time when Darth Vader had the outpost garrisoned. She was curious about the Dark Lord, and tried to catch a glimpse of him whenever possible. (JKG)

Neffron

this man served as the Undermaster of the spaceport on Kelada, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He was continually searching for evidence of rebel activity, hoping to earn credits and power by revealing it to the Imperial authorities. (SWJ6)

Nefra Canyons

this was a spectacular canyon located on the moon of Sulon. (RAG)

Nefta

one of the Emperor Palpatine's closest friends, and a member of the reborn Emperor's Dark Side Adepts. He soon realized that the Emperor's continual rebirth through the use of clones was not what it seemed to be. Along with Sa-Di, Nefta formulated a plan to destroy all of the Emperor's clones and trap his Dark Side energies in the netherworld forever. Following the reborn Emperor's death on Byss, both Sa-Di and Nefta began destroying the clone vats. Before they could finish the job, however, they were both killed by Sedriss. Unknown to both of them at the time, Palpatine had already entered a new clone body. (DE2)

Neftali

this frozen ball of ice is the second planet of the Socorro System, orbiting just outside the planet Socorro. Two kinds of ice from the planet were mined as a commodity by the Socorrans, who get little water from their desert planet. Pure-water ice was used in the preparation of zsajhira berry tea as well as Socorran raava, while nether ice was used as a coolant. It was believed that Neftali was forced into its wide, erratic orbit when Sokor expanded into a red giant. The new orbit, which brought Neftali near to Socorro, created a new seasonal pattern on Socorro. Like Socorro, Neftali is seismically active, and volcanic lava below the surface kept the Beija Seas liquid despite the frigid temperatures. (BSS)

Neftali'l

this was the Socorran name for the planet Neftali. (BSS)

Neftat

this Socorran term is believed to be based on an Old Corellian word which meant "home out of the desert." (BSS)

Nega, Anniha

this young man was one of Coruscant's most sought-after bounty hunters and assassins during the last decades of the Old Republic. By his early twenties, Nega had established his reputation as a hunter, although many of the hunts he included on his resume' were falsified to bolster his image. Nevertheless, he had innate skills as a tracker, and he always got his prey. Nega dressed in a suit of Ithullian war armor, and tracked his prey in a modified Z-95 headhunter he called the Flare. (CCW)

Nega-ball

a sport played with an anti-gravitational ball. (RPG)

Negate

originally defined by Arvo Norstrag as part of the Rules of the Blade, this was the most serious form of duel recognized by the Phosphura Belt Pirates. In a negate duel, two opposing factions of a pirate company find themselves at odds with each other. Their contention threatens to tear the pirate band apart, thereby threatening the company as a whole. Each faction chooses a champion and up to four aides, with the champion most often being the leader of the faction. No energy weapons were allowed, and the duel ended when one of champions was defeated. This form of duel was most often invoked to choose a new leader when a pirate gang does not have a clear successor. Sometimes, it was fought within a ring of fire, a duel sometimes referred to as the Fire Ring of Fornax. (PP, SWJ5)

Negatron

an explosive substance used in bombs and other detonation devices. (CSW)

Negatron Impact Charge

a form of explosive that uses a compressed, directed bundle of negatrons to cause massive amounts of damage. Doctor Arakkus used several of these charges to accelerate the gravity of a remote star by collapsing much of its core. Knowing that he was going to die of severe radiation poisoning, Arakkus set up a huge gravity well to draw in and kill others along with himself. (CSW)

Negleem, Fesjo

this Imperial research scientist was the man who determined the source of the Gray Death disease, encountered on Sedesia during the height of the Galactic Civil War. The Alliance team which was dispatched to Sedesia discovered that Negleem was formerly part of the Empire's biowarfare division, which led them to believe that the Gray Death had been engineered. Further evidence surfaced when Negleem's notes revealed that he had, in fact, created the disease, which he codenamed FNV-23, as part of the Empire's Pathogen-Based Loyalty Enhancement Program. Doctor Negleem himself was only loyal to the Empire as long as it provided him with a chance to gain more power for himself. When it was revealed that the Empire was using the Sedesians as a experiment, Doctor Negleem found passage off-planet and escaped the riots which ensued. (SWJ6)

Negna Mundro

this was a Chevin individual of some renown. (UANT)

Negollup

this Aqualish bounty hunter was typical of his species: rude, abrasive, and itchy for a fight. Known as Scrapper to other hunters, Negollup was part of a group hired by the Empire to hunt down the Alliance agents who were investigating the construction of Bissillirus Resupply Base shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (GMK)

Negotiator, The

this was a term used during the height of the Clone Wars to describe Obi-Wan Kenobi, in reference to the way in which he used measured tactics in order to champion the goals of the Old Republic. (SWDB)

Negra Star

an Imperial frigate which assisted the Warspite in its attempt to kidnap Sullustan diplomats during the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Negus Nigekus

one of the human settlers of New Brigia, Negus had worked his entire life on the planet in the chromite mines. He was dying from the constant exposure to chromite dust when the Yevetha arrived to execute the settlers and take control of the chromite mines during the Great Purge. (BTS)

Nehass

this was one of the largest cities on the planet Tarhassan. Known for its brightly-colored cityscape, Nehass was also the site of a prison facility controlled by Tarhassan Planetary Security. (SWI73)

NeHimmep

this ZH-25 Questor transport was purchased shortly before the Battle of Yavin by Mirchidi NeMall. He saved for many years to buy the ship, which he named after a famous Duros explorer. (SS)

NeHimmep

this was the name of a legendary Duros explorer, trader, and starship captain. (SS)

Neic Norim

this Sullustan smuggler was, at one time, a test pilot for SoroSuub Industries, on his homeworld of Sullst. An accident during one such test cost him his arm, and Neic was forced to retire. He had the arm replaced, with a cybernetic prosthesis and took up smuggling. He often planted his contraband in the holds of other, unsuspecting pilots who were traveling to the same destination. Neic then raced to his destination to meet the ship. If the other pilot passed customs without incident, Neic sneaked aboard the ship to recover his goods. If the other pilot was apprehended, Neic remained free to continue his operations. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, he ran afoul of Intra-Corellian Collections and took refuge on the planet Selonia, where he felt right at home in the underground warrens of the Selonians. (CCW)

Neimie

this was a slang term used during the last years of the Old Republic to indicate a member of the Neimoidian race. (RCHC)

Neimodian Jakrab

this species of jakrab was one of the few mammalian herbivores that were native to the planet Neimoidia. (YDR)

Neimoidia

this planet, located in the Colonies Region, was the homeworld of the Neimoidian race. It was located less than six parsecs from Kuat, a fact that heightened the competition between the two ship-building worlds during the Clone Wars. (IG1, IWE1, SWI68)

Neimoidian

this race of aliens resembles the Duros in many physical respects, having descended from pure Duros stock when a group of colonists settled on Neimoidia some 25,000 years ago. They have smooth, greenish skin and large, red eyes, although the Neimoidian eye has a pupil which splits it horizontally. They also have a more developed cranium, which is studded with small knobs and bumps. Their mouths are down-turned, giving them a perpetual frown. On their homeworld of Neimoidia, they live in communal hives from the time of their birth, but are given limited access to food sources during their seven years of grubhood. This helps weed out the weak individuals at a very early age, as those grubs which can't find food - or steal it - quickly die. This method of raising their young instills tremendous greed into the young Neimoidians, but it also forces them to become organizational. Coupled with the fact that the most able Neimoidians left their homeworld to serve with the Trade Federation, the general population of Neimoidia was made up of the weakest of the Neimoidian people. In general, the Neimoidians are entrepreneurial, but are also lazy cowards. They have developed one of the most advanced droid technologies in the galaxy, and use automatons for everything. They developed droid chairs, droid starships, and entire droid armies. They are also very conscious of rank and position, and use all methods of clothing to describe their status. Elaborate headdresses; the cut, color, and texture of the cloth; and the collars and trim of their clothing all have specific indications of rank and position. The Neimoidians developed the Trade Federation several decades before the Battle of Naboo, hoping to increase trade to the Outer Rim worlds while maintaining an equitable balance between the poorer worlds of the Rim and their richer, Coreward kin. When the Old Republic began taxing the trade routes between the Core and the Outer Rim, the Neimoidians and the Trade Federation were outraged, but their whining could do little to repeal it. They found an unusual ally in Darth Sidious, but the Sith Lord only used them for his own schemes. In the end, following the Battle of Naboo, the Neimoidians were disgraced on a galactic scale. (SW1, IG1, OWS, COD, EGA)

Neimoidian

this was the name of the language spoken by the Neimoidian people. (WOTC)

Neimoidian Gunnery Battalions

originally based on the planet Neimoidia, this was one of the many organic military forces that supported the Confederacy of Independent Systems during the height of the Clone Wars. They were dispatched to the planet Moorja to protect the agricultural facilities there, after the frequent ion storms rendered droid armies unusable. (SWI76)

Neimoidian Harvester Beetle

this immense, five-meter-long insect was raised by the Neimoidians on their purse-world of Cato Neimoidia. The harvester beetles were bred for their huge jaws and spined carapace: the jaws allowed the beetles to cut down trees and grains, which it then placed on its back. The spines helped to keep the cut trees and plant material atop the beetle as it moved through a grove or field, until the beetle could return to its home and unload it. These creatures moved about on four stout legs, and their flat heads were crowned with a pair of looping antennae. These antennae were used primarily as communication organs, since they exuded and decoded powerful pheromones. Communication was usually done at the hive level, with all individuals taking part in communal activities. The antennae were also used as feelers. Like most hive insects, the harvester beetle had several distinct classes, with the queen at the center of all activity. During the height of the Clone Wars, when the war came to Cato Neimoidia, harvester beetle soldiers were used as infantry against the clone troopers of the Old Republic. (LEV)

Neimoidian Home Defense Legions

this was the collection of military units assigned to protect the planet Neimoidian and its colony worlds, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SWI71)

Neimoidian Inner Circle

this was the primary governing body of the Neimoidian people. During the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo, the Inner Circle was led by Viceroy Nute Gunray. (COD)

Neimoidian Shuttle

resembling a giant, clawed beetle native to Neimoidia, these small transport ships were designed to carry up to five Neimoidians between their freighters and a ground-based installation. These shuttles measured just fifteen meters in length, and were piloted by two droids. Each shuttle was armed with a single blaster cannon. These craft were often referred to as Sheathipede-class shuttles. (SON, NEGV)

Neira Shai

this Yuuzhan Vong warrior, a relative of Shedao Shai, was killed when Corran Horn and Ganner Rhysode rescued the slaves being held by the Vong on Bimmiel. (DTO)

Nejet

this was a common name among the Snivvian race. (UANT)

Nejma

this species of Iskalonian was native to the planet Eriscot, and were known among the Iskalonians as the Honored Ones. They were extremely tall and brown-skinned, with orange hair and red eyes. The Nejma were also distinguished by a dorsal fin which ran down their backs. Although the Nejma were considered part of The School, they tended to keep themselves isolated from other Iskalonian races. The Nejma were perhaps best-known for their organic sculptures, which used living coral reefs to form beautiful pieces of art. This artwork, unfortunately, attracted both tourists and thieves, much to the dismay of the Nejma leaders. (EGA, GMR1)

Nek

the nek, also known as the Cyborrean Battle Dogs, was a predatory mammal native to the planet Cyborrea. This species of creature was originally bred by the Cyborrean people as a hunting beast, but they eventually became used during the wars which spread across the planet. The average nek stood two meters tall at the shoulder, and was armed with three rows of teeth and sharp claws on its feet. Specially-bred neks such as Battle Dogs were controlled electronically, with implants placed in the nek's brain to receive signals from a remote control device. When used in a hunt or in battle, the augmented nek was accompanied by two beings: the hunter or warrior, and the nek handler. (DE1, DESB, MBC, ANT)

Nek

this was a deity whose name was often taken in vain by the Nikto people. (SWT)

NEK-01

this spy droid was employed the Hutts on Nal Hutta, tracking down those individuals who failed to repay their debts or simply angered the Hutts. NEK-01 worked with a team of droids to track down all the beings it was asked to find. A greedy droid, NEK-01 often arranged for his subordinates to be destroyed at the conclusion of their mission, in order to ensure that it did not have to share the Hutts' payments. NEK-01 was dispatched by Sottos the Hutt to bring in Deggar Feps, during the early years of the New Order. A quirk in the programming of NEK-01 - and all other droids given its programming, such as NEK-072 - caused the droid to utter the word "nebula" whenever Deggar feps' name was mentioned. Unfortunately for NEK-01, Feps managed to escape to Nar Shaddaa. NEK-01 then placed additional bounties on the heads of the mercenaries who helped him escape. (WOTC) formerly designated R-DP0, this protocol droid had been reprogrammed with NEK-01's personality, during the early years of the New Order, so that it could take orders from NEK-01 and act on them accordingly. NEK-01 remained in control of the protocol droid at all times. NEK-072 was dispatched to coordinate the capture of Deggar Feps, shortly after the scout angered a Hutt crimelord. Unknown to NEK-072, NEK-01 considered it expendable, and would have destroyed it anyway in order to collect the entire fee being paid by the Hutts for Feps' return. However, NEK-072 had also been fitted with a homing beacon, and had been programmed to kill Feps at all costs. NEK-072 hoped to get a bounty hunter to destroy the Lost Lady, after learning that Feps was trying to escape Nal Hutta on the ship, in order to avoid being destroyed. This would allow NEK-072 to collect some of the reward money offered by the Hutts. Unfortunately, NEK-072 was destroyed by the freelance mercenaries who were helping Feps escape. (WOTC)

NEK-072

Neka

this nut tree is native to the planet Druckenwell. The meat of the nut is tasty, and the shells are hard and often used in necklaces. (TFE)

Nekcarc

this was an alias sometimes used by Airen Cracken. (SWJ7)

Nekkel juuvar obwegadada

this was a Jawa curse. (SWJ11)

Nekotrig

this is one of the four moons of the planet Zelos II. It is unexplored by the Zelosians, who fear the darkness. (PG2)

Nekouda

the Ysanna word that roughly translates to "hold your fire." (DE2)

'nel

this suffix was added to a Bothan's family name to indicate the individual's affiliation to the Onel clan. (GCG, WOTC)

Neldor

this was a common name among the Ryn. (UANT)

Ne'lear

this Kian'thar was a noted loanshark, working in the Outer Rim during the early years of the New Order. (AIR)

Nelfrus

this planet was located in the Elrood Sector of the galaxy. (FH3)

Nelinik

this ancient Zabrak assassin was noted for once killing an Echani High Protector, many millennia before the Galactic Civil War, although he used specially-programmed battle droids to accomplish the task. For this, however, Nelinik was hunted down and killed by Sanasiki. (KOTOR)

Neliosa

this was the name of a noted member of the Tarasin culture. (UANT)

Nell Indigo

this female Wroonian was a mercenary, who sold her fighting skills to the highest bidder during the Galactic Civil War. Her parents were both gunrunners, and she learned the skills of a pilot and smuggler at an early age. She apprenticed herself to several other Wroonian mercenaries, and eventually made a name for herself when, at the age of twenty, she bought her way into the Guild of Glorious Mercenaries. (SWJ7)

Nella 342

this light freighter was produced by SoroSuub during the Old Republic, although it was a durable ship and saw duty in the modern era in pirate fleets. It measured 29.7 meters in length, and could transport up to five passengers and 50 metric tons of cargo. (PP)

Nella System

this Tapani Sector star system was part of the holdings of House Mecetti during the New Order. (LOE)

Nellac Kram

this planet was the supposed departure site of the Nartissteu. (HTTE)

Nellis, Furko

this noted pazaak player lived on the planet Tatooine, some four millennia before the Battle of Yavin. (KOTOR)

Nellisho

this Rodian term referred to a large laser weapon, such as a quad laser cannon. Adjectives and modifiers were used to better describe the weapon. (PSG)

Nellist

this harvester, which was part of the small fleet maintained by the settlers on the planet Leritor, disappeared shortly before the Gevion was attacked. An independent team of investigators found that the crew of the Nellist had been killed by a Sauvax army, although the reason behind the attack was hard to discern. Just a few miles east of the Nellist's location, a Sauvax kuuvan had been equally slaughtered. It was later discovered that a group of slavers, working from a base in the Bleaks mountain range, and been behind both attacks. The slavers had been looking for slaves to work in an excavation site, and captured Sauvax and humans alike in an effort to form a workforce for Profex Rynalla. (GMR10)

Nelona

this was the fifth month of the Tapani local calendar, which mapped almost directly to the Coruscant local calendar. (PGT)

Nelprin

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Nelprin, Shalla

this dark-skinned woman, a native of the planet Ingo, joined Wraith Squadron shortly before they were assigned by the New Republic to hunt down Warlord Zsinj. She was the younger sister of Vula Nelprin, and was also personally trained by her father in hand-to-hand combat. Her father, an irascible man, had faked his own death in order to avoid Imperial entanglements and led to Ingo to raise his family. She used this skill to help the Wraiths become better ground agents, especially in preparation for their activities against Warlord Zsinj. She was assigned the position of Wraith Ten serving as Myn Donos' wingman, after the losses of Eurssk Thri'ag and Falynn Sandskimmer. She assumed the identity of Qatya Nassin as part of the Hawk-bat Independent Space Force, and was supposedly killed in action during Warlord Zsinj's attempt to steal the Razor's Kiss. In actuality, she commandeered a TIE Interceptor and landed atop the Razor's Kiss's shield generator platform. Once the New Republic forces were arrayed in a constraining pattern, Shalla destroyed one of the Super-class Star Destroyer's shields. Voort saBinring knocked out the other, and the Razor's Kiss was destroyed by the Republic's forces. For her part in this and other missions, Shalla was promoted to Lieutenant following the battle over Kuat. (IF)

Nelprin, Vula

this woman served the New Republic and a hand-to-hand combat specialist. She was the sister of Shalla Nelprin. Trained by her father, Vyn Narcassan, she herself later trained the Republic's commandos and other operatives in the art of fighting without a weapon, and was known to be an excellent -though physical - teacher. (IF)

Nelroni Marauders

this ancient group of pirates was based on the planet Voon until they took control of the Hyabb-Twith Corridor, nearly 1,000 years after the Great Sith War. They preyed upon the ongoing feud between the governments of Hyabb and Twith, and eventually the Marauders established a base on Dachat. The Old Republic demanded that the Jedi Knights step in and remove the Nelroni threat. In what became known as the Hyabb-Twith Campaigns, the Jedi eventually rooted the Nelroni out of their bases on Voon and Dachat. The battles wages for several years before the Jedi - led by Arca Jeth - managed to eliminate the Nelroni threat. (TOJC)

Nels, Res

this man served as a Captain in the Alliance, and was in charge of the rescue operation put in place to retrieve Lieutenant Talnar from Naalol. (GMR5)

Neluenf, Ben

this man was generally considered the greatest podracer ever born and raised on the planet Tatooine. The tableland known as Ben's Mesa, around which wove the Mos Espa Circuit racecourse, was named for this man. (IWE1)

Neluenf, Will

this young man was the son of Ben Neluenf, and continued his father's pod racing traditions during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Will participated in the illegal pod races that were held on Euceron, four years prior to the onset of the Clone Wars, against the backdrop of the Galactic Games. (JQ3)

Nelvaan

this planet was the primary world in the Nelvaan System, which was located some thirteen parsecs from Tythe. When the Old Republic's forces nearly captured Count Dooku on Tythe, during the final stages of the Clone Wars, many Separatist ships jumped from Tythe to Nelvaan to escape the battle. This was mainly a ruse, since the ships only briefly remained at Nelvaan before jumping to a nearby location and then to Coruscant, where they assisted General Grievous' forces in the First Battle of Coruscant. Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker were dispatched to Nelvaan to investigate, and discovered the Nelvaanians - a race of feline beings which appeared to be made up of only females and children. The males had been captured and twisted by the Separatists as part of an experiment for creating their own organic army. Anakin, in a trial ordered by the natives and decreed by Obi-Wan to be his final test, destroyed the Separatist facility and freed the males. (LEV, CWC3, OWS)

Nelvaanian

this feline race of beings was native to the planet Nelvaan. (OWS)

Nemat

this species of flying creature inhabits the swamps of Ergeshui. They are about 10 inches in length, with a 20-inch wingspan. They attack in swarms, employing a shrill, insectile buzzing that immobilizes their prey. Once they attack, they latch onto their victim and suck out its bodily fluids. (PG2)

Nematiec Gang

this gang was defeated by Bogga the Hutt, who used Enforcer One to destroy their asteroid base. (EGV)

Nembus Sector

this area of the galaxy was subjugated and then heavily re-equipped by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War. (ISB, SWMW)

Nemedor

this was a common name used by the Qwohog race. (UANT)

Nemesis

an Imperial-I class Star Destroyer, the Nemesis was part of Grand Admiral Thrawn's fleet during the years following the Battle of Endor. The Nemesis was one of the Star Destroyers that Thrawn used to attack Bpfassh, as one of his first moves against the New Republic. (HTTE)

Nemesis

this was the brand name of Mili-Corp's DZ 17X powered armor. (GUN)

Nemesis One

Corran Horn's callsign, used during his imprisonment at the Lusankya facility. The Nemesis flight group was the forerunner of Avenger Squadron. (KT)

Nemet

this Imperial logistics officer served on the Avenger during the last years of the New Order. Fiercely competitive, he was a member of the Imperial Navy Line Branch. During the Battle of Hoth, Nemet was responsible for relaying important scanner data to Captain Needa. (CCG4)

Nemo

this ancient Jedi Master once served the Jedi Order on the planet Dantooine, where he died many millennia before the Battle of Yavin. His remains were found in a collection of strange ruins on the planet, and many within the Jedi enclave felt that these ruins were the key to understanding why Darth Revan and Darth Malak turned to the Dark Side of the Force. (KOTOR)

Nemonus

this Nautolan appeared on Ord Cestus, bringing news from Count Dooku to the Five Families during the height of the Clone Wars. Nemonus was known for a number of crimes in which he held innocent people hostage to obtain what he wanted, trading blood for credits. In reality, Nemonus was Jedi Master Kit Fisto, who tried to frighten the Families into joining the Old Republic during the war. Nemonus claimed that Dooku was greatly upset at the Families' attempt to raise the prices of their JK-series droids, and that Dooku feared the Families could no longer be trusted. In order to force their hands, Nemonus managed to kidnap several prominent members of the Five Families, and held them in a speeder deep in the tunnels below ChikatLik. The plan was to make the Five Families believe that Count Dooku had betrayed them, then to have Obi-Wan Kenobi "rescue" the leaders as a way to lure the Five Families into siding with the Republic. In a carefully staged fight, Obi-Wan was able to drive Nemonus off, thereby saving the Family members from harm. Unfortunately, while the entire incident did convince the Five Families to briefly side with the Republic, the entire incident was recorded by Asajj Ventress. The Dark Jedi then provided a tape of the incident to the Five Families, showing that the entire kidnapping was a farce. (TCD)

Nemor-Jelak

this was a noted member of the Yarkora race. (UANT)

Nemphas

this escort freighter intercepted the Spirit of Jabba shortly after the smaller ship was stolen by Big Gizz and Spiker. The Nemphas was operated by Gorga the Hutt's minions. (TJT)

Nemrileo irm-Drocubac

this being, a native of the planet Tanjay IV, was one of the supporters of the secession movement which rose in the Old Republic Senate during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Nemrileo hated the common being, despite the fact that his own lifestyle was based on their output. However, he had never worked with Shu Mai before joining the secession movement, and questioned her loyalty to the cause. For his doubts, Nemrileo was murdered by hidden agents, as a message to the rest of the secession movement. Ostensibly the victim of a speeder crash on Coruscant, he was survived by a wife and two children. (APS, HNN5)

Nemzet

an Imperial system patrol craft operative during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Nen

this is the fifth combination symbol in the Aurebesh script, and represents the Basic combination "ng". (SWM)

Nen Tsup

this was the name used by Kae Kwaad to describe the Shaper Adept, Nen Yim, during their time working together aboard the Baanu Miir. The word "tsup" was an older Yuuzhan Vong term for a slave which served its master in unseemly ways. (EVR)

Nen Yim

this young Yuuzhan Vong female was trained as a shaper by Mezhan Kwaad, during the aliens' invasion of the known galaxy. She was chosen by Kwaad for her heretical beliefs. Nen Yim was one of the few Yuuzhan Vong who believed that their race was not ordained to rule the galaxy, but was part of a larger collection of lifeforms. Nen Yim trained aboard the worldship Baanu Kor, and had never set foot on a real planet. When Mezhan Kwaad was appointed to investigate the source of The Force, she took on Nen Yim to help map out the nervous system of a Jedi Knight. Their subject was Tahiri Veila, and both shapers realized that they had to think beyond the rigid Yuuzhan Vong protocols in order to discover the source of a Jedi's power. Despite her beliefs, Nen Yim was a skilled Adept, and was able to quickly map out Tahiri's nervous system. After Tahiri was rescued by Anakin Solo and Mezhan Kwaad was killed in battle, Nen Yim feared she would also be executed. However, she was brought before Warmaster Tsavong Lah and relegated to the work on preserving the dying worldships. She was spared her life as long as she provided the names of other heretical Shapers. Her efforts, however, had attracted the notice of Supreme Overlord Shimrra, who dispatched Nen Yim and the Master Shaper Kae Kwaad to the Baanu Miir. Nen Yim came to hate Kae Kwaad and his maniacal approach, especially when he began deflecting her from the work of keeping the worldship alive. She was surprised to learn that Kae Kwaad was actually Overlord Shimrra's jester, Onimi, when she was taken to meet with Shimrra personally. Shimrra, while not condoning her work, offered her the chance to continue working beyond the known protocols of the Qang qahsa. She agreed to offer up whatever sacrifices were required to Yun-Yuuzhan in order to obtain knowledge beyond the eighth cortex of the Qang qhasa, especially after Shimrra revealed that his vision of Yuuzhan Vong conquest included Nen Yim, raised to the level of Master Shaper. She was placed in the service of Warmaster Tsavong Lah, and spent a great deal of time trying to understand why Lah's arm rejected the radank claw which had been implanted on it. She discovered that the radank claw seemed to be growing, consuming the Warmaster's flesh as it developed. Later, Nen Yim found that Ghithra Dal had been placing materials on the infected arm which made the radank claw grow. Later, after she was given access to a Sekotan starship that had been recovered, Nen Yim came to the realization that Supreme Overlord Shimrra might be a fraud. His fear of Zonama Sekot only solidified her beliefs, and Nen Yim set out to locate the living planet herself. With the help of Tahiri Veila and Corran Horn, she was able to escape Coruscant reach the living planet, along with Harrar and Nom Anor, who was disguised as the Prophet Yu'shaa. On Zonama Sekot, Nen Yim learned that her memories had been stolen to create the Riina Kwaad personality which had been implanted in Tahiri's mind. Emboldened by the existence of the planet, Nen Yim tried to make contact with Sekot by altering certain cells from Sekotan life. Her plan, to use these cells like a qahsam worked almost too well. She found herself flooded with Sekot's knowledge, and nearly passed out from the connection. She didn't live to do much more with the information, however, as Nom Anor tracked her down and killed her, so that he could attempt to destroy Zonama Sekot and regain favor with Shimrra. Before she died, Nen Yim tried to tell Tahiri what she had learned of Zonama Sekot. However, her heart failed before she could finish. (EVC, EVR, EL1, EL2, FP)

Nen, Crela

this woman served as the Director of Administration, under Imperial Governor Marsh Limoth, on the planet Gorothe Prime during the height of the New Order. Under her direction, the number of administrators grew rapidly, but their activities were threatened when Limoth took over. He hated the bureaucracy, while Crela Nen had been trained in the nuances and processes of the Imperial bureaucracy. She fought hard to ensure that all activities were properly documented, and even instructed her people to drop important items whenever Limoth began to impose his own structure on the Administration. Her loyalty to the Empire was surpassed only by her loyalty to herself. (GSE)

Nen, Sheffel

this woman worked as a concert promoter worked at the Nessem Shipyards orbital construction facility, bringing in a variety of musical acts for the entertainment of the Nessemite workers. She had a great number of contacts in the musical world, ranging from the most popular intergalactic bands to small-time critics like the Trandosha mercenary Ssorku. (WOA12)

Nena

this child was a native of Melida/Daan, and was a member of The Young. Nena was in charge of restoring housing to the natives of Zehava, after The Young defeated their elders in battle. (UP)

Nen-Carvon

manufacturers of several vehicles for the Empire, ranging from the R-444 sky swooper to various ground combat vehicles. (ISB, CFG)

Nensil

this barren sphere of rock was the second planet of the Rhinnal System. (CCW)

Nentan

this planet has been a stopover point for those citizens fleeing Imperial domination for the Alliance. It was covered with ancient ruins, which were used to house the dishomed peoples of the galaxy. The planet was discovered by the Empire mere months after being set up, and then-Captain Bren Derlin organized a squad of Alliance personnel that had to evacuate civilians as well as military personnel. Derlin eliminated the Imperial threat and captured an Imperial transport ship. This action gained him the rank of Major. (MTS)

Neo-Caarite

this phrase was used on the moon Dorumaa to describe any being who was extremely cheerful. The term was used quite extensively, since many of the beings who lived full-time on Dorumaa worked in the tourist industry, and worked hard to please their guests. (LFC)

Neocel

a thin material which is used to make heat-retaining bodysuits. It can also be extruded into thin fibers for use in carpeting. (SE)

Neocomora

this planet was the site of an ancient complex of ruins. In the vaults of the ruins were several ancient Wookiee texts which were held sacred by the Wookiees. (SWJ11)

Neo-Crusaders

this was the name given to the first groups of beings who were recruited by the ancient Mandalorian Crusaders to join their ranks and fight alongside them in the Great Last Battle. These Neo-Crusaders became what many modern military experts consider the Mandalorian shock troopers, a collection of beings from disparate races and backgrounds who banded together under the tenets of the ancient Mandalorians. The armor worn by the Neo-Crusaders was much bulkier than that of their predecessors, but was designed to withstand blaster fire and to identify the wearer as a Neo-Crusader. This armor was not studded with weaponry, but was efficient and functional. Individual Neo-Crusaders painted their armor as they wished, allowing for a variety of color schemes. It was the Neo-Crusader armor that later became the design basis for the Old Republic's Senate Guards. (SWI80)

Neo-Fundamentalist Phlangites

this radical political group was active on the planet Zaraksander, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. They often staged what became known as Peaceful Dawn rallies, in an effort to return the planet to its older, more fundamental ways. (GG10)

Neo-leather

a form of imitation leather that is much stronger than real leather. It was often used for flight jackets. (THG)

Neolian

an alien race. (EOE)

Neolsse

this was the ruling family of the city of Keremark, during the New Order. The Neolsse family was decidedly anti-Imperial in their political stance, and strove to throw off the Imperial yoke of control during the height of the Galactic Civil War. They controlled Fortress Keremark during this time, using it to strike back at the Imperial forces which tried to control the planet Risban. (HAS)

Neoman, Barse

this Imperial Captain trained at the Academy on Corulag before being stationed on the Sisar Run, under the command of Governor Newen Streeg. He commanded the Ion Storm, and resented being subordinate to Streeg, who wasn't even a Navy man. He was known as a collector of Expansionist Era art, a fact which became known to the crimelord Sprax shortly after Neoman was posted on the Run. Sprax's agents made contact with Neoman, and he was soon on the payroll of Black Sun, providing valuable information on Streeg's plans for the Sisar Run in return for credits and pieces of art. It was Neoman and his small fleet who captured Morturr Heth and the surviving Disac pirates when they attempted to hijack the Destination: Adventure! shortly before the Battle of Endor. (SSR)

Neona

this was one of the strongest planets of the Freeworlds Region of Tapani Sector, during the height of the New Order. It was covered with oceans, and the sea bed was rich in natural ores. It was originally scouted by Hanson Mining Consolidated, several hundred years before the Battle of Endor. The settlers of the planet established huge, floating cities from which they launched mining operations. Excavation of the planet's solid surface has revealed that a sentient civilization once existed on the planet, but was slowly swallowed up by the rising ocean levels during a warm period which melted the polar ice caps. The ocean floor was littered with the ruins of their cities. (PGT, LOE)

Neona Military Academy

this military educational facility, based on the planet Neona, provided a number of excellent officers and soldiers for the Freeworlds Common Navy during the height of the New Order. (LOE)

Neonan Red Cheese

this crimson-colored cheese was created on the planet Neona, and was considered a delicacy throughout Tapani Sector. (LOE)

Neor-Yatten

this small corporation produced a variety of para-wing gliders for civilian and military use. (ROE)

Nep

this archaic name was common among Sullustan males, and meant "axe". (GCG)

Nep Chung

this being was one of Alexi Garyn's vigos, serving the Black Sun criminal organization during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Nep Chung was killed on Ralltiir, at Garyn's fortress, when Darth Maul was dispatched by Darth Sidious to eliminate any trace of evidence linking Hath Monchar to Sidious. Maul wiped out the Black Sun complex on Ralltiir, executing all the vigos and Garyn himself in order to ensure secrecy. (DM)

Nep, Zey

this woman frequented the Outlander Club, on Coruscant, during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. She was often seen in the company of her friends, Artuo Pratuhr, Dixon Just, and Civ Sila. Zey Nep was portrayed by Zeynup Selcuk in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones. (OWS, SWI75)

Nepe

this gas giant, located in the Episol System of the Kathol Outback, is orbited by the populated moon of Dayark. (KO)

Neph

this docile species of huge, flying beasts was native to the planet Dalos IV. They can grow to be 24 meters in length, with a wingspan nearly double that. They were tamed as juveniles for use as mounts, but they became ornery as they grew and had to be set loose. (ND)

Nepoy

this planet was the native planet of the various fruits used to create nectarwine. (BF)

Nepoy Juice

another name for the nectarwine produced on the planet Nepoy. (TJT)

Nepton

a series of SoroSuub power cores used to power starships. (WBC)

Ner Vod

this was a Mandalorian phrase which translated into Basic as "my brother." It was used to indicate a bond of friendship or love between two individuals. (RCHC)

Ner Yan

this was the name of an obscure Cerean tradition, whose name literally meant "mind chord". Its followers were all sensitive to the Force, and could link their minds in a kind of haphazard way. (GMR8)

Nera

this was a common name among Cerean females. Unlike their male counterparts, Cerean females use a single name unless they became a bond-wife. In this case, a female will take on their husband's grandfather's name for official matters. The name Nera indicated beauty, love, or freedom. (GCG)

Nercathi

this ancient Twi'lek clan was known to have created three beautiful crystallite skulls to commemorate a long-dead hero. Each skull represented one of the primary Twi'leki tenets - Jasshi'rr, Waala, and Keysshi. During the Galactic Civil War, the Nercathi were raided by the Empire for slaves, until they aligned themselves with the Alliance and fought back. (SWJ12)

Neree

a planet. The humans who live on the planet have a distinct accent. (WBC)

Nereus nereus

this was the scientific name of the KyLessian feather mite, named for Wilek Nereus, who discovered it while examining the KyLessian fruit bat. (TBBS)

Nereus, Wilek

a native of OrulShai III, Nereus hoped to one day take over the Imperial governorship of Gyosha. However, due to a bureaucratic error, he was instead named Imperial governor in charge of the Bakura system. Despite a long series of protested and petitions, the error was never corrected and Nereus remained on Bakura. Fearing that he had angered a superior, Nereus ruled the system via the tenets of the Tarkin Doctrine, using the fear of reprisal to keep the locals in line. He also authored a report to Emperor Palpatine himself, detailing the need to completely subjugate the Outer Rim Territories, but there was never a response. An avid hunter, he collected the teeth of all the major predators he has beaten, including humans. Shortly after the Battle of Bakura, Nereus was killed when he attempted to execute Leia Organa. His shots were deflected by Luke Skywalker, and struck him in the chest. (TB, TBSB)

Nerf

a pack animal, the nerf was also raised as a source of meat. Originally native to the planet Alderaan, these rangy creatures have curved horns and long fur. Their muscular bodies are lean and supple, and they have a nasty temper. Their long fur mats and tangles easily, creating a mass of hair that collects everything it touches. Thus, the nerf carries a strong odor around with it. The shepherds that raise nerfs - referred to simply as nerf herders - are looked upon as lesser members of society, but when they bring their meat to market, they live like kings. The fur of the nerf is often carded into wool, for use in making warm jackets and leggings. Nerfs are also hardy creatures which could adapt to a variety of climates. This made raising them on other planets quite easy, ensuring that the species survived the destruction of their homeworld. (ESB, JS, ISU, TPS, WOTC)

Nerf Bait

this was spacer's slang for any form of phony lock or security system installed on a starship, which was booby-trapped by the owner in order to catch shipjackers. (SWJ13)

Nerfburger

this was a form of sandwich made from ground nerf meat. (TG)

Nerfloaf

this was a meat pie made with salted nerf meat. (REC)

Nerf-pox

this was a mild, childhood disease that affected most Alderaanian youths. (HNN5)

Nerfworks

this was the name used to describe Shipyard Lab 6671-X42, a joint venture to produce droid starships by the Corellian Engineering Corporation and the Loronar Corporation. It was known as the Nerfworks because the employees who worked there came to feel that they "smelled too bad" to warrant a visit from corporate executives, as well as any real funding for their research. (GMR10)

Nergon-14

this was an unstable, highly-explosive element used in Imperial proton torpedoes. It was blue in color when inert, and changed to red, then white, when it exploded. It was originally mined on Tyne's Horky by Kreb Zellock, who planned to make his fortune by selling it to the highest bidder. (DCAR)

Nerinit

meaning "little clown", this was a common female name among the Mon Calamari race. (GCG)

Neris

this man was an Imperial sub-prefect during the rise to power of Emperor Palpatine's clones on Byss. An administrator of the Governor's office on Korbin, Neris succeeded Bergless as the sub-prefect, but was no less adamant about eliminating crime. Like Bergless, this cost Neris his life, when he told Gornt Seron that crime wasn't going to be tolerated by the Imperial remnant on the planet. Seron promptly pushed Neris out a small trap door in the floor of his office, and Neris fell some 500 meters to his death. (GG11)

Nerit

this was one of two moons which orbited the planet Ossus. (TOJC)

Nermani, Ashii

this beautiful woman was considered Imperial HoloVisions's most popular newscaster around the time of the Battle of Yavin. She was the first to break the story that Venslas Beeli had become a privateer working for the Alliance. The newsfeed article was part of a plot to draw Captain Dhas Vedij and the Far Orbit into a trap laid by the Empire. She also broke the story of the capture of Coh Veshiv, although her report claimed that he had been killed in a space accident. (FOP)

Nern

this is the fourteenth symbol in the Aurebesh script, and represents the Basic letter "n". (SWM)

Nerra

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name meant "brother". (GCG)

Nerra Ziveri

this Twi'leki Jedi Master was one of the Jedi who were named Headmaster of the training facility on Almas, in the Cularin System, in the wake of the Dark Jedi Conflict. During his sixty-three years as the leader of the training facility, he made sure to tell the stories of Kibh Jeen to every new apprentices. Master Ziveru also served as the watchman of the Cularin System, investigating the presense of Dark Side energy on the far side of Almas. It was Master Ziveri who trained Lanius Qel-Bertuk to take his place, before suddenly disappearing from Almas some twenty-four years before the Battle of Naboo. (LFC)

Nerran, Jev

this young boy was a childhood friend of Ryoo and Pooja Naberrie. (SWDB)

Nerris, Delt

this man was part of a taskforce put together by the Corellian Security Force and the Empire, and was assigned to be the pilot of the Lantillian Short Hauler known as the Nova Whisper. Delt was also an Alliance sympathizer, and he hijacked the ship in order to turn it over to the Alliance on Asher III. (SS)

Nerrowr

this Wookiee male lived in the city of Gadin, on Cularin, during the last decades of the Old Republic. He often worked with a trio of Rodian females named Nesha, Besha, and Kesha, when he was employed by the former crimelord, Riboga the Hutt. (LFCW)

Nert

this Kitonak name was common across Kirdo III. (UANT)

Nerus

this was a common name among the Zeltron people. (UANT)

Nerve Amplifier Belt

this ancient device, created during the decades leading up to the Great Sith War, was used to monitor the brain activity of its wearer. These belts were originally created to retrain or alter the inherent "programming" of an individual being, and was known for its uncomfortable fit. The belt generated energy waves to help reinforce certain patterns of activity, thereby establishing a certain kind of behavior in the wearer. The belt could also be used to block any outside influence on an individual's brain. (KOTOR)

Nerve Disruptor

an expensive piece of torture equipment, the nerve disruptor used a variety of injection methods to deliver drugs and serums into the body of a being under interrogation. The drugs then disrupted the normal activities of the being's nervous system, allowing the interrogator to gather more information. The nerve disruptor was equipped with a droid brain that monitored the being's vital signs, allowing the disruptor to adjust the dosage of drugs as necessary to keep the being alive during interrogation. (TME, NEGW)

Nerve Pinch

a defensive technique used to immobilize and adversary. (CSW)

Nervestick

this was a chewable stimulant that was popular among the clone troopers of the Grand Army of the Republic, during the height of the Clone Wars. (TCD)

Nescan Tal'yo

this lupine being was a known thief, active during the height of the New Order. Protected by his android bodyguard, Hermos, Tal'yo stole a holocube conyaining the locations of several Alliance bases from a courier on Fairwell Station, some time after the Battle of Yavin. He was tracked to Elerion by Leia Organa, who learned from Orma Hundeen that Tal'yo planned to sell the holocube to Commander Shad and the Empire. When Leia first met him on Elerion, Tal'yo claimed to be an import expert. However, Tal'yo was no match for Leia's skills with a blaster, and she quickly trapped him and demanded the holocube. Tal'yo, however, had left the holocube with his partner, Gogol. Leia knocked Tal'yo unconscious for his efforts and left him tied up in a hotel room. (T15)

NESDF-456

located atop an arid plateau which rarely received any rain, this Imperial facility was found on the planet Sirpar during the height of the Galactic Civil War. A Nonessential Equipment Storage and Disposal Facility, NESDF-456 took in all the scrap and surplus from the Imperial training facilities on Sirpar and either recycled it or disposed of it. (SWJ2)

Nesdin

the human pilot of the Jade's Fire. He disappeared in the first days of the Corellian revolts surrounding the Starbaster plot. (AC, SC)

Nesha

this Rodian and two of her friends - Besha and Kesha, all unrelated - worked with the Wookiee known as Nerrow whenever he was on Tolea Biqua, on the planet Genarius, during the height of the Clone Wars. Together, the group was once employed by Riboga the Hutt. (LFCW)

Neshtab

a planet. (SWMW)

Neskroff

this is the capital city of the planet Isis. It is located atop a huge, crystal mesa. The planet's main spaceport is located in a bowl-shaped depression in the middle of the city. (IC)

Nesloor, Odin

this man's entire family was lost when their starship made a routine jump into hyperspace, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. He spent the rest of his life trying to find them, following a lead which led him to the planet Tatooine during the Boonta Eve Classic podrace won by Anakin Skywalker. (CCG13)

Nespis VIII

a planet near the Cron Drift, where Luke Skywalker first met Kam Solusar. A sprawling space city orbits the planet, which is located in the Auril System, developed millennia ago by the Jedi Knights as a place where politics and bureaucracy had no place. Scientists and scholars could come to the station to debate and explore without concern for which side actually owned the discoveries. The station eventually became so big that it had its own interior weather patterns. It had been around since before the Great Sith War, although much of the spaceport was abandoned after the Clone Wars, and the city became a drifting derelict. Rumors abound about the existence of a vast, ancient, Jedi library somewhere on the station, and even the very existence of the station was considered a legend until shortly after the Battle of Yavin. The library supposedly contained volumes which contained all the knowledge of the galaxy. As rumors of the library spread, treasure hunters flew to the station to recover some of the ancient tomes. In this supposedly abandoned location, Borborygmus Gog developed his Nightmare Machine, in an effort to pry a person's deepest fears from their minds and turn them against them. He used the legends of the Jedi library to attract minds, hoping one day to capture a being who was strong with the Force. When the reborn Emperor Palpatine destroyed the New Republic's Pinnacle Base, the Republic's leaders fled to Nespis VIII to regroup. It was at this time that Anakin Solo was born on the space station city. The location of the base was betrayed by a spy, and the Emperor fired his Galaxy Gun at it. However, the projectile did not explode upon impact, and Nespis VIII was spared for some time. The Republic was able to evacuate the space city before a second projectile was launched. This one exploded as planned, completely destroying the Nespis VIII spaceport. (DE1, DE2, EE, GOF4, GOF5)

Nessem

this planet, located in the Expansion Region, was known during the early years of the New Order for the orbiting Nessem Shipyards. (WOA12)

Nessem Shipyards

this starship manufacturer maintained an orbital space station as its base of operations, located near the planet Nessem. Because most of the workers at the Shipyards put in long hours, the orbital facilities were enhanced to include residential sections that appeared like small towns. (WOA12)

Nessemite

this was the name adopted by the humans native to the planet Nessem. They were known for their incredible craftsmanship, and were also apolitical in their nature. They sold their ships and services to any being with the credits to afford them, and they regularly invited offworlders to Nessem for conferences. (WOA12)

Nessie

a nickname applied to the inhabitants of the Stenness system. (DE1)

Nesst-class Light Freighter produced by SoroSuub, the Nesst-class freighter measured 29 meters in length. It resembled a pair of long cargo pods connected along a central axis. A triangular cockpit sits at the front, and twin engine pods take up the aft section. SoroSuub developed the Nesst-class to appeal to the independent spacer and to appease the Empire. It was given a large, 150 metric ton cargo area, but was unarmed and underpowered in order to avoid Imperial entanglements. (WBC, PP)

Nest Blessing

this was a quasi-secret form of greeting used by members of the Nediji race. The blessing itself was quite simple - "Fly free, fly straight, Brother of the Air" - but was virtually unknown on non-Nediji. (MBS)

Nest Leader

this is the title of the male Arcona who is chosen by popular vote to rule a Grand Nest. (GG4)

Nest Leader

this title, which was given to those Geelan who led the individual city-like nests, was derived from a similar Arconan title. Each of the Nest Leaders answered directly to the Geeloniran, or the great Geel. (AE)

Nest, The

this was the name given to the command center of the space station known as The Rig, during the height of the Clone Wars. (RSF)

Nestclan

this is the basic unit of Shashay society. (TA)

Nestless Ones

these Avogwi who do not have their own eyries in the arid cliffs of Altor 14 occupy the lowest rung in Avogwi society. (GG4)

Nestmother

this is the name used by the Shashay to indicate the rulers of their planet, Crytal Nest. The Nestmothers make all of the decisions which affect the Shashay society. (TA)

Nestra Pallik

this was the name of a noted Ranat individual. (UANT)

Netassa

this is the capital city of the planet Salliche. (CRO)

Netbers

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Netbers, Radaf

this former Imperial Captain served under Warlord Zsinj during the period following the Battle of Endor and the breakup of the Empire. A native of the planet Broest, he was an expert in hand-to-hand combat, and was requested to test the Hawk-bats' skills in this area before the assault on Kuat. In a brief melee, Qatya Nassin - the alias used by Shalla Nelprin - broke his nose and quickly incapacitated him. It wasn't the first time his nose had been broken, and Netbers considered it another battle scar. He was assigned to the security force left behind at Binning Biomedical, after Zsinj abandoned it and brought the labs aboard the Iron Fist, and nearly captured Wraith Squadron on Saffalore. However, Hohass Ekwesh caught and managed to break his right shoulder and his neck by swinging Netbers against a wall. (IF, SOC)

Netcaster

this predatory arachnid lived in the forests of Kashyyyk, trapping daubirds with an elaborate net. The average netcaster grew to a length of 75 centimeters, but it used a highly-toxic venom to kill its prey and defend itself from larger predators. (TT, GMR4)

Neth

this Em'lii was distinguished in the history of the planet Shalyvane. (UANT)

Neth, Karie

this woman served as a gunner with the Alliance's Starfighter Command. She was one of the members of Rogue Squadron. Shortly before the Battle of Endor, she replaced a Bothan gunner who was lost during the mission to recover the plans to the second Death Star. She flew with Gray Two during the battle. (CCG11)

Nethathanin, Parto

this man served as a crewman aboard the scout ship Bright Seeker. (TSIA)

Nether Ice

this was the name used by Socorran native to describe the ice they "mined" from the planet Neftali. Because of the mineral concentration within the frozen water, nether ice remained in a frozen state for many months in even the warmest conditions, and was used by Socorran pilots to cool their starship engine drives. Small pieces of nether ice have also been carved into jewelry. (BSS)

Nethermost Abyss

the Askajian name for the deepest regions of evil in the earth. (TJP)

Nethius

this likeable man served as the entire "security force" aboard Darknon Station, at the height of the New Order. Nethius was also in charge of customs, although there was rarely a problem while he was on duty. However, Nethius was more than a security officer. He was also a Sergeant in the Imperial armed forces, and was stationed on Darknon Station in order to protect the location of a secret research facility hidden within the Itani Nebula. He also monitored the activities and communications of the spacers who visited Darknon Station, hoping to find a lead on the Alliance's activity in the area. (PSPG)

Neti

this race of tree-like beings descended from the planet Ryyk, although it was believed that they first evolved on the Myrkr. For many years, the Neti were also referred to as the Ryyk, which only served to confuse their actual heritage. Xenoarchaeologists of the New Republic believe that the alternate name of "Ryyk" was actually a reference to the original homeworld of the Neti, and not a reference to a distinct species. This information was pieced together from the Jedi Holocron of Bodo Baas. The ancient Jedi Masters Ood Bnar and Garnoo were Neti, as was T'ra Saa. As a people, the Neti were intelligent plants, reproducing by creating a few seeds every century. They survived by gathering food through photosynthesis, and could change their shape, size, or appearance almost at will. Most Neti were capable of three distinct forms: as a solid tree, as a humanoid, or as a quadrupedal creature. Each of these forms provided certain levels of mobility and strength, and the Neti could adapt its shape to meet the needs of its surrounding environment. It was believed that Ood Bnar was the only surviving member of the species, being offworld when the planet Ryyk was destroyed, until T'ra Saa was discovered by the Jedi many centuries before the Clone Wars. (DE2, EGP, EGA, PJSB, WOTC)

Neti

this unusual language was spoken by the Neti, or Ryyk. (PJSB)

Net'Iseb Toli Park

this wooded park was built by the Fia on the outskirts of Gal'fian'deprisi City, on their homeworld of Galantos. Like the city, Net'Iseb Toli Park was located in the midst of the Gar'glum Sea. It differed from the city in that it was situated completely atop the gelatinous sea. The Park was noted for its wide variety of exotic plants and fragile wildlife. (EGP, CCW)

Netolio System

this Tapani Sector star system was part of the holdings of House Calipsa during the New Order. It was seized from House Pelagia, after Pelagia was virtually exterminated by House Mecetti. (LOE)

Nett, Theron

this smuggler, a native of Ord Mantell, joined the Alliance shortly before the Battle of Yavin. He became one the Alliance's best X-Wing pilots, serving as Garven Dreis' wingman. Nett flew as Red Ten during the Battle of Yavin, and perishing trying to protect Dreis during their assault on the first Death Star. (CCG9)

Netta

this was the sixth planet in the Obas System. (IA)

Nettar

this herd herbivore was native to Dantooine. (COG)

Nettic, Calder

this man lived on the planet Dantooine some 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. He was murdered by Handon Guld and Rickard Lusoff, after Handon discovered that Calder was having an affair with his wife. (KOTOR)

Netting Beetle

also known as lav peq, these insects were bio-engineered by the Yuuzhan Vong to fly around an area and exude an organic netting. When released in swarms, netting beetles formed a dense network of fibers that stuck to anything it touched, creating the netting as a by-product of their feeding. The first wave of beetles strung their fibers between trees and bushes, while successive waves fed on whatever they found in order to replenish the netting. Using these creatures, Yuuzhan Vong warriors could capture a fugitive or enemy without actually knowing where they are. Many times, the netting beetles fed on the flesh of the enemy, using the cells in the formation of the netting, but this was rarely fatal to the captured individual. Once a target had been captured, the grub-like insects began to reel themselves back along the fibers, drawing the captured prey back to the attacker. A specialized form of netting beetles was used on prison worlds such as Selvaris, with enough rudimentary intelligence to accept minimal training. This allowed the Selvaris netting beetles to fly in coordinated patterns, crisscrossing their webs to weave a much stronger web. (EVC, FH3, UF)

Netus

an ancient, squid-headed Defense Minister of the Old Republic, Netus was on Coruscant during the Great Sith War. Prior to his governmental service, Netus served for 5 years in the rocket-jumper corps. His found that he preferred politics, and spent the next twenty years serving the Old Republic before the Sith War broke out. (TSW, TOJC)

Neural Band

developed shortly after the Great Sith War, this device wrapped around the skull like an intefrace band. Instead of providing computer access, however, the neural band augmented the willpower of the wearer by electrically reinforcing established mental patterns. The troopers of the Old Republic referred to this device as the "Little Shocky". (KOTOR)

Neural Collar

this device, developed by Cybersoft Corporation, was used to control large creatures in zoos and universities. When placed around an animal's neck, the collar could receive signals from a remote control unit, allowing the animal handler to control a dangerous beast through verbal or electronic signals. Many slavers used modified versions of the neural collar to control slaves, although this practice was outlawed in the Core Worlds. (GFT)

Neural Storm

this telepathic ability involved using psychic energy to overload a victim's neural network, causing extreme but momentary disorientation. (UANT)

Neural-net Eraser

this device was developed during the Clone Wars, as a defense against rogue or runaway droids. When fired at a droid, the neural-net eraser destroyed the software and delicate circuitry that controlled the droid's ability to move and react. Neural-net erasers became popular during the Clone Wars, when many beings feared being attacked or captured by the droid armies of the Separatists. (YDR)

Neuranium

this was one of the heaviest, densest metals found in the galaxy. Some gravity-sensitive species claimed to be able to feel a small warping of the space-time fabric of gravity when close to a large piece of neuranium. Among its most useful properties was the fact that even a millimeter-thick piece of neuranium was impervious to sensors. Although this might have been a boon to smugglers and other criminals, the weight of enough neuranium to protect a hidden item or to line a cargo hold would have been prohibitively heavy. (VD3, E3N)

Neuritic Carbide

this was a deadly, gaseous chemical. (SWI65)

Neuroengine

this was the name used by New Republic scientists and military advisors to describe the bio-technology that powered Yuuzhan Vong starships. It was believed that specially-developed dovin basals were connected in a hive-like structure at the aft of the alien starships. (JE)

Neuronic Whip

a particularly cruel weapon produced by TholCorp, the neuronic whip causes intense pain and trauma in its target by sending electrical charges into the target's nerve cells. (GG12, AEG)

Neuroprenoline

this pain-killing drug was developed during the last decades of the Old Republic, and found widespread use during the Clone Wars. (MBS)

Neuro-Saav Corporation

this large corporation manufactured a wide range of products, although much of their work was based on the blending of neurology and technology. Most prominent among their portfolio was a line of cyborg enhancements, including cyborg/droid interface modules. These modules allowed a cyborg to converse with, and draw data from, a droid or a computer system. During the last years of the Old Republic, Neuro-Saav entered into an agreement with TaggeCo., which resulted in the formation of the BioTech company. This alliance also put Neuro-Saav in good graces with the Empire, after the establishment of the New Order. (CFG, NEGW)

Neuro-Saav Technologies

a division of Neuro-Saav Corporation, Neuro-Saav Technologies manufactured a wide range of weapons sighting accessories, including light amplifiers, holographic imaging systems, and heat bafflers. (RPG)

Neuro-shock Hand

this cybernetic prosthesis from BioTech is more of a weapon than a bionic limb. The hand is equipped with a series of repulsor-field generators connected to a neuro-trigger in the palm. When the hand is jabbed at a target and makes contact, a full-force repulsorfield is generated from the hand, inflicting damage to the target. This action is continually active, so someone with the Neuro-shock Hand could cause pain and damage even if they accidentally run into someone. (CFG)

Neurostaff

this pike-like weapon delivers a nerve shock when it touches bare flesh. (GG10)

Neutra Four

this planet was one of many worlds subjugated by the Empire. (MC45)

Neutral Jedi Zone

this was the Basic translation of the Barabel term used to describe a high-ceilinged cave located beneath the surface of Barab I. It was in this cave, which was several hundred meters in length and width, that the Barabels resolved far-reaching disputes that could not be decided at the local level. Individual Barabels were appointed as diplomats to argue each side of a dispute, and visiting Jedi Knights or other dignitaries were asked to mediate the debates. The Neutral Jedi Zone offered offworlders luxury accommodations in exchange for their help in mediating the disputes. (WOTC)

Neutrino Activator

this switching device was used to turn a droid on or off, depending on its setting. They were most often used in small droids, where power requirements were minimal. (MDCAR)

Neutrino Hybridizer

a delicate, critical component of the sublight drives of early Corellian Engineering Corporation YT-1300's, such as the Millennium Falcon. (LCF)

Neutron Dissembler

these weapons were theorized, but never actually developed, by the scientists of the Old Republic. The theory was that a neutron dissembler acted at the sub-molecular level, disrupting the bonds which held neutrons together and caused matter to "melt." The resulting damage appeared like scar tissue. (RP)

Neutron Furnace

a huge power generator, sometimes used on space stations. (MMY)

Neutron Star-class Bulk Cruiser

Rendili Star Drive's modified bulk cruiser, the Neutron Star was a 600-meter long capital ship known to be slow and in frequent need of repair. The Alliance, recognizing that these could be unreliable starships at best, usually assigned them to transport duty. Crewed by 2,050 and capable of carrying up to 200 troops, the Neutron Star was armed with 30 quad-laser cannons and two tractor beam generators. (RASB)

Neutronium

an heavy metallic element used in the formation of dura-armor and durasteel. (SWSB, RD, CTD)

Neuvalis Bounty Hunters Guild

this was one of the more prominent guilds for bounty hunters, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. This was quite an achievement, since the guild was formed just 10 years before the Battle of Yavin. This was due mainly to the family fortunes of the Guild's founders, Marjan and Feras Neuvalis. (GG10)

Neuvalis, Feras

this woman was married to Marjan Neuvalis, and was one of the leaders of House Neuvalis. (GG10)

Neuvalis, Marjan

this man and his wife, Feras, controlled House Neuvalis and the Neuvalis Bounty Hunters Guild. They were extremely rich, drawing from two family fortunes to bankroll the operation. (GG10)

Neuvian Sundae

this was the name of an immense dessert of frozen cream and fruit, served in a wide bowl. (MDCAR)

Nev Ice Flow

this vast glacier was located on the planet Hoth, between the Kerane Valley and the Clabburn Range. Much of the ice forming the flow came from the Lanteel and Cirque Glaciers. (IWST)

Neva

this surname was common among the Sullustan race, and meant "legal council" in the Sullustan language. (GCG)

Neva

this was one of the Alliance's Dreadnaught warships, active during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Neva Kee

this Xamster was a native of the planet Xagobah, and was regarded as a good podracer during the last years of the Old Republic. He preferred the Farwan&Glott FG 8T8 Twin Block2 Special racer, with its unique, cockpit-in-front design. (RAC, IG1, IWE1, SWDB)

Neva Transport

this small shipping company plied the spacelanes of Brak Sector, at the height of the New Order. (FBS)

Nevana

this Dubravan woman's father owned a huge debt to the bounty hunter Sarma. She hoped to pay it off by providing Sarma with the location of Luke Skywalker, so that he could collect the Imperial bounty on Luke's head. However, she was unaware of who Skywalker really was, thinking he was just a smuggler. When Sarma tried to apprehend her with a squad of stormtroopers, she ran to find Jal and confront him. When the Imperials caught up with her, Nevana was shot in the back and killed by a stormtrooper. (VQ)

Nevar

this man served the Imperial Army as a Brigadier General during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Nevar worked with General Veers in coordinating the AT-AT walker assault during the Battle of Hoth. Nevar was an extremely paranoid individual, and had his Blizzard 2 walker upgraded with heavier armor to protect himself. This armor proved to be useless against the ingenuity of the Alliance forces on Hoth, which used harpoons and tow cables to entangle its legs. The walker fell to the group, and the impact of the crash buckled the armor plating. With several passes of laser fire, Alliance T-47 snowspeeders destroyed Blizzard 2, killing Nevar and all aboard. (CCG3, IWS)

Nevar Yalnai

this immense Ranat was outcast from Aralia, and found work as a laborer for Hrchek. When that fails, he will act as a spy for anyone willing to pay him. (CCG)

Never Die

this was the codename used by the person who created the Shard of Alderaan computer slicing program. This person was known to be a former native of Alderaan, but that was all the information known about them. (LAA)

Neverending Valor: The Unauthorized Guide to the Galaxy's Newest Heroes

this datatext, produced by Veritas Press during the last decades of the Old Republic, presented a series of falsified exploits that were supposedly accomplished by a group of heroes. When the book was read by the heroes, not to mention their opponents, it raised quite a stink. Old enemies took exception to their inept portrayal, and the heroes were furious that they were not consulted during the book's writing. Eventually, both the heroes and their enemies teamed up to destroy Veritas Press. (CCW)

Neverquit

this starship, custom-built by the Coyn Shipyards, was owned by the bounty hunter Grea. (PG3)

Nevid d'Hon

this Avogwi ran a starship repair and outfitting business on Ord Mantell during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SL)

Nevik

this man was the Captain of the Imperial Star Destroyer Devastator during the period leading up to the Battle of Hoth. Nevik was killed by Agent Sollaine when he tried to assume command of the Devastator's flight plans during the hunt for suspected Alliance undercover agents. Nevik's people believed an agent was in the Alfestril System, but Sollaine demanded the ship fly to Corulag. Sollaine used the power source in his cybernetic arms to electrocute Nevik in front of the entire bridge crew of the Devastator. (SWJ12)

Nevil

this ancient Quarren surname meant "singer of sagas". Like many Quarren surnames, it could be traced back to the time of the Battle of Ruusan. (GCG)

Nevil

a Captain in the New Republic Navy, Nevil served as one of Rogue Squadron's pilots during the early stages of the war with the Yuuzhan Vong. Note that this may be a mistake, as Dark Tide: Ruin indicates Kral Nevil was a single pilot. (DTO, DTR)

Nevlin

this was a common name among the Lepi people. (UANT)

Nevo

this scruffy human and his gang were hired by Darth Vader to hunt down Boba Fett, while the bounty hunter was tracking Abal Karda. They had been imprisoned on Coruscant, and Vader offered them a chance to redeem themselves if they took the job. They were able to intercept the Captain of the Port-Esta Queen and gather information about Karda's location, then set out to find Fett. Unfortunately, Nevo and his gang were no match for Fett's skills, and all were killed by the bounty hunter on Maryx Minor. (EOE)

Nevoota

this planet was once the homeworld of the Nevoota race, until they were virtually destroyed by the ancient Mandalorian Crusaders. (SWI80)

Nevoota

this insectoid race was once native to the planet Nevoota, until the ancient Mandalorian Crusaders nearly wiped them out in a series of epic wars. (SWI80)

New Academy for Space Pilots (*)

a school for young pilots throughout the galaxy, Luke Skywalker once attended classes there. He saved the Academy from destruction by a moon whose orbit had decayed by deflecting it with zukuonium rays. (MM)

New Agamar

this planet was noted for its greater than standard gravity. The human settlers who colonized the planet evolved over time to be much stockier and more muscled than most humans. (JT)

New Alderaan

a lush, temperate planet that was repopulated by the descendants of Alderaanian-born members of the Alliance. It was one of the Alliance's best-hidden safe worlds. After the birth of the New Republic, it served, for a time, as the hiding place for Jacen and Jaina Solo. Princess Leia also returned there, during the many battles with the clones of Emperor Palpatine, to give birth to Anakin Solo. Note that The Courtship of Princess Leia says Zsinj ravaged the planet, but Dark Empire II has Imperial forces under Xecr Nist laying waste to it. (RASB, CPL, DE2)

New Apsolon

originally known simply as Apsolon, this planet decided to join the galactic community, and the Old Republic, some 15 years before the Battle of Naboo. The people of Apsolon had to choose a leader who represented the entire planet, and the Jedi Knights Qui-Gon Jinn and Tahl were dispatched to assist in ensuring a fair election. The planet was controlled by the Civilized Authority, and policed by the Absolutes. The two primary social factions, the Civilized and the Workers, were continually at odds with each other. After the industrial sabotage of the Workers forced the Civilized to recognize their plight, the two groups agreed to form a single form of government which was known as the Unified Legislature. Each being who inhabited Apsolon was given a vote in the election, giving the Workers the largest portion of the total vote. The natives of the planet elected Ewane to be their leader, and decided to rename the world New Apsolon in remembrance of their new freedom. The planet was known for its two primary exports: high technology and beautiful grey stone. The planet had three natural satellites, and it orbited a pair of small stars. (TTB, CTV)

New Apsolon

this was one of the largest cities on the planet New Apsolon, and was the site of the planet's primary spaceport. Like all cities on the planet, it was divided into a section for the Workers and a section for the Civilized. Before the planet was united under a single leader, some fifteen years before the Battle of Naboo, the two sections were separated by a wall of pure energy, ostensibly protecting the Civilized from the Workers. Following the election, the energy wall was dismantled and replaced with forty shimmering, stone columns. Each column remembered a member of the Workers who died trying to breach the wall, during the civil war which simmered between the Workers and the Civilized. (TTB)

New Architecture

this was the name given to the architectural style that arose during the last century of the Old Republic. It was most obvious in the Senate District of Coruscant, where the upper layers of the city were dotted with somes, spires, and blade-thin obelisks. (LEV)

New Atraken City

this was the capital city of the planet Atraken, built a half-kilometer below the surface of the planet. It once supported a small mining community, before it was ravaged in the Clone Wars. The city remains, although the chemical and biological weapons used on the planet have left it devoid of life. The city now supports the planet's refugees. (PG2)

New Bakstre

a habitable planet with seven moons. It's atmosphere, combined with its nearby-sun, creates a purplish sky overlooking twisted and gnarled vegetation. (RPG, SWJ1)

New Bornalex

this planet was a member world of the Old Republic. It was one of many worlds that were devastated during the height of the Clone Wars, when the Mandalorian Protectors carried out covert attacks for the Confederacy of Independent Systems. (COD, SWI80)

New Brigia

this planet, located in the Koornacht Cluster, was settled by humans who fled the government of Brigia. They were brought to the planet by the Bothan cargo hauler Stanz aboard the Freebird, and paid their passage by selling the chromite they mined to Stanz. Stanz paid them the minimum for the ore, thereby keeping them in debt for many years. The planet was the first world targetted by the Yevetha during the Great Purge, and all of its inhabitants were quickly executed. The chromite mines were left intact. (BTS)

New Calamar

this city, located on Esseles' southern continent, was the site of the Terril Naval Base. (GG2, SWJ7)

New Calince

this city, located on the Rett continent of Draenell's Point, is the planet's primary food processing center. (GMK)

New Class Starships

these classes of starship design were implemented by the New Republic in the wake of the struggle against Grand Admiral Thrawn. The goal of the New Republic was to remove the ragtag ships which made up the fleets of the Alliance, and replace them with more modern, less-expensive warships. They were designed to be smaller and more mobile than the standard Imperial ships they replaced, and were developed to be defensive in nature. (CTD)

New Corellian Treaty

this was the name used to describe the treaty signed by Mon Mothma, Garm Bel Iblis, and Bail Organa, officially announcing the creation of the Alliance to Restore the Republic. This name was adopted to eliminate confusion with the original Corellian Treaty, which established the boundaries of The Slice and the hyperspace travel routes within it. (CCW)

New Coronet

this city, located on the swamp-covered world of Trigalis, was designated in many travel guides as a trading post. In reality, it was little more than a slum, a collection of rundown buildings that served as a haven for all many of criminals during the height of the Clone Wars. During this time, the city was under the control of the Black Sun assassin Xist. (O)

New Cov

the third planet in the Churba sector, New Cov was once the sight of a Bothan battle with a Victory-class Star Destroyer during the early stages of the Galactic Civil War. This event marked the only documented instance of a Bothan-only battle with the Empire. New Cov had no indigenous sentient species, but it was a jungle world teeming of plant life and valuable natural resources. The planet's cities were walled and domed to protect them from the dangers of the surrounding environment. The planet's primary industry revolved around the jungle's exotic flora, which produced various biomolecules with commercial value. However, many of the plants adapted to this threat and became dangerous to the harvesters. The planet had a normal rotational period of about 27 hours, and its year lasted 301 local days. (DFR, DFRSB)

New Cov Biomolecule Company

located in the city of Ilic on New Cov, this company was the primary harvester and exporter of New Cov's various natural biomolecules. These substances were used throughout the galaxy for a number of medicinal, industrial, and military applications. (DFRSB)

New Cov Quasar

this starship was owned by Kevan Startron. It was a Hyrotil Crescent-class transport. (CRO)

New Cylimba

this planet was the site of an Alliance base during the Galactic Civil War. It was abandoned before the Empire could destroy it. (CRO)

New DownTime

this was a code phrase used by the New Republic forces stationed on Folor, and was meant to indicate a full retreat. If a retreat was needed, pilots were required to meet at New DownTime, a reference to the cantina often frequented by Republic pilots. (WS)

New Escrow

this was one of the largest financial centers of the Old Republic, located on the planet Aargau and controlled by the Intergalactic Banking Clan. New Escrow also served as Aargau's planetary capital. Despite the successful use of speeders and airplanes in the urban areas of Coruscant, Aargau chose to build magnificent roadways for its vehicle and pedestrian traffic. (HNN5, PH)

New Escrow Old Spaceport

this spaceport, located in the capital city of New Escrow on the planet Aargau, was converted into a museum when the New Escrow Starport was built, shortly after the Battle of Hoth. (PH)

New Escrow Starport

this was the primary spaceport located in the capital city of New Escrow, on the planet Aargau. (PH)

New History Squad

this group of children from the planet Melida/Daan was established by Nield, after The Young took control of the planet. Their mission to ensure that the Halls of Evidence were destroyed, thereby eliminating the centuries of hatred between the Daan and Melida maintained in their holograms. (UP)

New Holstice

this planet served as one of the many staging points for the Army of the Republic, during the height of the Clone Wars. New Holstice also served as one of the Republic's primary hospital facilities during the conflict. Located in a remote glade on the planet was a wondrous memorial to those Jedi Knights who had been killed over the millennia. The natives of New Holstice created the memorial by generating a shaft of pure light that rose high into the sky. The light, powered by a dedicated generator that ensured the light would not go out, was of a specific frequency and wavelength that attracted the unusual memory moth. The people of New Holstice added one memory moth for each Jedi who was killed, starting from a point many thousands of years before the Clone Wars. The Jedi's name was whispered to a moth, which repeated the Jedi's name in the beating of its wings, seemingly forever. The memorial was filled slowly over the centuries, until the Clone Wars began. Starting with the Battle of Geonosis, the memorial was filled at an astonishing rate, due to the loss of hundreds of Jedi during the fighting. In the wake of the Republic's resounding loss at the Battle of Jabiim, the surviving forces retreated to New Holstice to recover. Some seventeen months after the Battle of Geonosis, New Holstice was attacked by a group of former Mandalorian warriors, but they were eventually defeated. (RBJ, RSF)

New Hope

this Alliance Dreadnaught had once been stationed in orbit around Churba, as a sort of floating museum. Alliance forces stole the ship out from under the Imperials who controlled the planet, and refitted it to serve as a mobile command post during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. In the wake of the Battle of Endor, the New Hope was stationed at Milagro. (SFE, ECH)

New Hope Settlement

this was one of the small settlements found on the planet Ladarra. (TFNR)

New Hometown

this settlement, originally known as Hometown, was located on the planet Ennth. Like all other settlements there, it was almost completely destroyed in the wake of earthquakes and tidal waves caused when Ennth's moon orbited close to the planet. The settlers eventually rebuilt it, and renamed it New Hometown. When it was again destroyed eight years later, it was renamed Newer Hometown. The young Jedi student Zekk was born here, and then orphaned when his parents were killed in an earthquake. (SHA)

New Horizons Development Corporation

this corporation recruited several Fefze swarms in order to make food production more efficient. They also employed Fefze as colonizers, allowing the adaptable insects to make a planet more useful for other races. (GG4)

New Jarvis System

this Tapani Sector star system was part of the holdings of House Calipsa during the New Order. Aside from the Calipsa System itself, the New Jarvis system was the most populated system in the control of House Calipsa. The system was seized from House Pelagia, after House Mecetti nearly exterminated Pelagia. (LOE)

New Kisse

this moon, the eighth moon of the planet Chaasch, was covered with dense underbush and wilderness. It was the homeworld of the Samuac race. (SSR)

New Marketplace

this was a trading and commercial district of the city of Talos, located on the planet Atzerri. (SOL)

New Melaana

this was the name given to the recently urbanized canyon floor of the city of Melaana, on the planet Soterios. The Old City, as it was called, had maintained the canyon floor for use as farmland. However, the deserts of Soterios eventually reclaimed the land, making it unsuitable for farming. In the last centuries of the Old Republic, the city managers built New Melaana in the fashion of the skyscrapers of Coruscant. (PGT)

New Nystao

this was the name of the settlement which sprang up at the base of Mount Tantiss, on Wayland, after the New Republic defeated Grand Admiral Thrawn and took control of the facility. It became the nominal capital of the planet because it was also the location of the largest civilian starport on the planet. (HT, WOA29)

New Oldtown

this village, found on the planet Aldivv, was the home of Lara Notsil before it was destroyed by Admiral Trigit. (IF)

New Order

the name given to Palpatine's reign as Emperor, the New Order was instituted in the wake of the galactic upheaval experienced during the Clone Wars. Although Palpatine had publicly promised to resign his position as Supreme Chancellor when the threats of the Separatists had passed, he had been secretly manipulating galactic events in order to retain his position of leadership. He also worked behind the scenes to curry favor with many Senators, and was not above using force to get his way. Thus, when the Separatist threats to the Old Republic became too great, he graciously accepted continuations of his tenure. With the Clone Wars ended, Palpatine seized control of the military and the government in the wake of what he called the "Jedi Rebellion", instituting the New Order as his plan to eliminate the corruption that was rampant in the Old Republic. In his own words, Palpatine proclaimed, "We will make a New Order. We will trade strength for frailty, order for chaos, and decisiveness for uncertainty." The bywords of the New Order were safety, security, justice, and peace. One of the primary tenets of the New Order was that diversity was a weakness the galaxy couldn't tolerate. Thus, a strong pro-Human sentiment was instilled that relegated aliens and near-humans to a much lower status. (SWN, RESB, GBC, VD3)

New Order Progressive

this was the title of a newsfeed which reported on the state of the galaxy during the reign of Emperor Palpatine. As its name suggests, the NOP was heavily pro-Imperial in its reporting. (SWJ3, SWJ8)

New Oslet Flejj Beasts

this was one of the best Pugil teams found on the planet Lannik, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

New Plympto

this planet was located deep in the Core Worlds, on the edge of the Deep Core. It was located along the Corellian Trade Spine, between Jumus and Duro, in what is known as the Outlier Systems. New Plympto was the homeworld of the Nosaurian race, as well as the rikknit, a species of crablike spider whose eggs were a vital ingredient in many intoxicants. The planet was first contacted by Corellian traders some 10,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. When the trade for ji rikkit was shut down, New Plympto experienced an economic depression, and the Nosaurians came to hate the Republic for it. The change-over to Emperor Palpatine's New Order was no better, especially after New Plympto was declared "expendable" by an Imperial Procurator of Justice. The death of Fefar Blackeye, although caused by Imperial forces, was attributed to the New Republic, and the Nosaurians eventually declared themselves independent from the fledgling government. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, the Nosaurian natives of the planet put up a strong resistance, led by the Jedi Knights Alema Rar and her sister, Numa. In retaliation, the Yuuzhan Vong unleashed a life-destroying plague that wiped the planet clean of organic life. The Rar sisters barely escaped with a large group of refugees, sneaking by the Yuuzhan Vong blockade by hiding in ore freighters. Note that, while Coruscant and the Core Worlds indicates that New Plympto had a day which lasted 18 standard hours and a year that lasted 244 days, Star Wars Gamer issue 9 indicates that New Plympto's day lasted 22 standard hours and its year lasted 370 standard days. (IWE1, BP, SBS, NEGC, CCW, GMR9)

New Plympto

this star was the central body in the New Plympto System. (CCW)

New Polokia

one of the colony worlds visited by the Star Morning after it left Darepp, en route to Motexx. (SOL)

New Quarter

this section of Mos Eisley, located on the planet Tatooine, was the site of many of the newest docking facilities and landing pads, during the height of the New Order. It was centered on, and radiated outward from, the city's water and power distribution center, and was considered the most "tourist-friendly" area of the city. (TCG4, SOT)

New Ralltiir

Han Solo was interviewed by Voren Na'al on this planet. (CSA)

New Regime

the name of the government of Brigia when Han Solo delivers hardware and supplies to the new university there, after leaving Saheelindeel. When it came to power, it instituted a new form of currency, thus enabling it to control trade. They also began to build up the planet's military. (HSL)

New Republic

the name given to the government which overthrows Palpatine's New Order. Founded just after the Battle of Endor and the Truce at Bakura, the New Republic reaffirms many of the Old Republic's basic tenets, and also establishes some new ones. These new beliefs are aimed toward eliminating the beliefs which brought the Old Republic down. It was first headed by Mon Mothma, and later by Leia Organa-Solo. At the time of the Yevethan Great Purge, the New Republic had 400 sentient species on 11,000 inhabited worlds as members. The symbol of the New Republic reused the blue crest of the Alliance, which signified the burning desire to restore justice to the galaxy. Surrounding it were fifteen stars that signified the galactic community. A thin golden border surrounds the circular seal, symbolizing the galactic right of the people to govern themselves. The Republic withstood many internal challenges, not the least of which was the petty squabbling of its member worlds, until being rocked by the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Under incredible pressure to maintain order and ensure their survival, many members of the New Republic Advisory Council worked harder to save themselves than their homeworlds or constituents. The Advisory Council's inability to make a decision on how to address the alien invaders allowed the Yuuzhan Vong to make swift inroads toward the Core Worlds. Within three years, the Yuuzhan Vong captured the planet Coruscant and forced Chief of State Borsk Fey'lya to sacrifice himself in an attempt to stem the tide. With Coruscant destroyed, the New Republic shattered. In one of the earliest meetings of the so-called Inner Circle, General Antilles called the New Republic "a dead, oversizing hulk with a decentralized nervous system, whose extremities don't realize that its heart isn't beating anymore." (HTTE, DE1, JS, BTS, TTSB, EL1)

New Republic Advisory Council

this six-member body formed the highest level of the New Republic's government. Led by the Chief of State, the Advisory Council debated over the most problematic issues faced by the Republic. It was formed nearly two decades after the Battle of Endor, but was scattered in the wake of the Second Battle of Coruscant, when the Yuuzhan Vong destroyed much of the capital planet and precipitated the death of Borsk Fey'lya. (VP, EL1)

New Republic Astrogation Studies Center

this educational resource, funded by the New Republic, was set up to study those planets which lacked sufficient information in the New Republic's databases. They provided detailed information on planets which remained pro-Imperial or neutral, were unknown, or simply lacked detailed information. (CTD)

New Republic Bounty Hunter License

this was the New Republic's version of the Imperial Peace-keeping Certificate, and licensed a being to be a bounty hunter. (HR)

New Republic Cabinet

the New Republic's governing body, established in the wake of the defeat of grand Admiral Thrawn. (JS)

New Republic Cantina

this establishment is located in the city of Algarine, on Algara II. (PG2)

New Republic City

this was the name used to describe the capital city of Coruscant, during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. It replaced the ancient name of Republic City, as well as the name Imperial City, which had been used during the era of the New Order. (UF)

New Republic Claims Office

this branch of the New Republic's government was responsible for ensuring that planets and resources scouted out by independent scouts are not usurped or "jumped" by another scout, as well as paying for the rights to use the newly-found location. Proper registration of the discovered resource must be made by the independent scout in order to receive any form of payments or protection. (GG8)

New Republic Defense Fleet

this is the primary coalition of the New Republic's Naval forces. (TT)

New Republic Defense Force

this was the primary military body, created by the New Republic, to protect the Republic from external subterfuge. The credibility of the NRDF was severely degraded when the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy, since the Republic's military was poorly-equipped to handle the situation. The valiant struggle to win the war was not given much media coverage, further adding to the poor image of the NRDF. However, in the wake of the Battle of Borleias and the release of Wolam Tser's holodocumentary, The Battle of Borleias, the true efforts of the Defense Force were revealed to the public, and popular opinion of the NRDF was restored. In time, the New Republic Defense Force was considered an equal of the Senate, although the loss of Coruscant and the scattering of the Republic's leaders put a great strain on the NRDF's relationship with the government. Once the Galactic Alliance was solidified on Calamari, the NRDF once again set to work protecting those people it could. (HT, DW, FH1)

New Republic Diplomatic Corps

this branch of the New Republic government was formed to work with formerly Imperial worlds, to bring them into the fold of the New Republic without warfare. (WOTC)

New Republic Fleet Infirmary

located on the planet Coruscant, this military hospital was set up to maintain the health of the home fleet. (SOL)

New Republic Historical Archive

this vast warehouse served as the New Republic's primary archive, during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Most sections of the Archive were open to the public, and provided a visual description of the galaxy's history. (PH)

New Republic Honor Guard

this branch of the New Republic military was charged with protecting the dignitaries of the New Republic during their travels. (VP)

New Republic Intelligence

the New Republic's primary source of information throughout the galaxy, it is a vast network of spies and agents. They are very skilled in overt and covert operations. (AC)

New Republic Medical Institute

this medical research and education facility was established on the planet Corellia, in the wake of the Battle of Endor. (EGA)

New Republic Military Oversight Committee

this body of the New Republic was charged with the defense of the galaxy, ensuring that proper costs and justifications were used in all actions. Their work during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy came under intense scrutiny, especially in the wake of Viqi Shesh's exposure as an agent of the alien invaders. (SBS)

New Republic Military Police

this branch of the New Republic's armed forces was responsible for ensuring that the members of the armed forces act within the laws established by the Republic. (IF)

New Republic Obelisk

this tall, thin needle of stone was erected in Imperial City, on Coruscant, to symbolize the unity of the New Republic. (JE)

New Republic Observers

this group of individuals was chartered by the New Republic shortly after Ponc Gavrisom was named President and the policies of the Republic were modified. Their roles was to move freely about their assigned sectors, reporting any improper government activities directly to the High Council. Beings were assigned to sectors of space far from their own homeworlds, to develop Observers who were impartial and incorruptible. They were filling a role which use to be played by the Jedi Knights, when they were much more plentiful. They wore a small, gold-filigree pin to signify their position, often hiding it inside their collars. (SOP)

New Republic Prime Newsgrid

this news agency was the primary source of news throughout the galaxy. It reported on happenings regardless of their location. It complemented the Coruscant Global Newsgrid, and was one of the first agencies to report the lift-off of the Aramadia from the planet. (BTS)

New Republic Reference Service

this information bureau was part of the New Republic. Luke Skywalker had the service search for any references to the Fallanassi or the White Current, during his travels with Akanah. (SOL)

New Republic Relief Corps

this was the body of beings who performed the work funded by the Senate Select Committee for Refugees, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (NEGV)

New Republic Scout Service

this New Republic-sponsored group was created to provide the latest information on star systems and intergalactic phenomena to anyone looking to explore the galaxy. Its findings were considered complete, but often went through several layers of Republic review before they were published. The service was championed by Mon Mothma herself, who argued that the service would help bring the more remote and out-of-touch planets of the Unknown Regions and Wild Space up to the galactic norm, especially in the wake of the Battle of Endor. She received stiff opposition from the Provisional Council, but her reasoning won out in the end. The NRSS employed three kinds of scouts: service scouts, who were members of the New Republic itself; corporate scouts, funded by the many mega-corporations of the galaxy; and independent scouts, who worked for themselves. The Service was derived from a similar branch of the Old Republic, which was disbanded by Emperor Palpatine when he discovered that many Old Republic scouts were feeding anti-Imperial information to newly-discovered civilizations. (GG8, SWJ8)

New Republic Security Force implemented by Airen Cracken shortly after Coruscant was liberated from Ysanne Isard, the NRSF replaced the old Imperial Sector Rangers. It was designed to be a law enforcement agency as well as a counter-insurgency force. (KT)

New Republic Senate

the new planetary Senate formed with the birth of the New Republic, it mirrors the old Imperial Senate in its ways and means. (JS)

New Republic Ship Registry

this bureau replaced the Imperial Bureau of Ships and Services, and was responsible for keeping records of all operative starships in the galaxy. It assigned registry numbers to each ship, and catalogued owners and ports of origin. (SOL)

New Republic Space Academy

a military institution who graduates went on to serve in some of the highest military positions of the New Republic. Many new graduates became part of the Chief of State's honor guard before going into active duty. (POT)

New Republic Space Navy

this was the official designation of the New Republic Navy. (SBS)

New Republic Special Acquisitions Unit

this was the term used by Airen Cracken to describe Cryle Cavv and Sienn Sconn, when they were hired to steal the Super-class Star Destroyer Guardian. Cracken appealed to their vanity and experience when recruiting the two scoundrels. (SWJ15)

New Republic Trade Council

this sub-committee was made up of businessbeings and New Republic officials, with the goal of keeping trade open and free. (SHA)

New Republic War College

this institution was created by the New Republic to preserve and maintain information on the various aspects of warfare used throughout the history of the galaxy. A main branch of the college is located on Woostri, near the planet's HoloScan Database building. (TTSB)

New Sith Wars

this was the term used by historians to represent the history of the galaxy from 2000 to 1000 years before the Battle of Yavin. The alliance of Sith known as the Brotherhood of Darkness rose to power during this time, but the Sith culture was marred by infighting and backstabbing among its members. Although the Sith of this period managed to take many worlds from the Old Republic, the lust of its members was unsatisfied. Each Sith Lord wanted more power and control, and the violence within the ranks was as vicious as it was against the Republic. Ultimately, the era of the New Sith Wars came to an end with the Battle of Ruusan, when the Brotherhood of Darkness was finally defeated. Also during this time, the Mandalorian Mercs were able to recruit an endless supply of soldiers for their seemingly endless campaigns of violence and pillaging. The Mandalorians of this time once again pledged their support for the Sith, and fought alongside them in many battles against the Old Republic. (SWI80)

New Star

this Imperial Nebulon-B frigate was under the command of Captain Miech Conar when it was hijacked by Dhas Vedij and the crew of the Far Orbit. (FOP)

New Town

this was the western part of the city of Bagsho, on Nim Drovis. As the name suggested, it was the most recently-developed section of Bagsho. (POT, EGP)

New Vertica

this was one of the largest, official cities found on the Smuggler's Moon of Nar Shaddaa. (HNN4)

New Year's Fete

this Imperial holiday was celebrated on many Imperial worlds, although it was nothing more than an excuse to get drunk, eat to excess, and take some spice. (SWJ10)

Newcomers

a name given to those inhabitants of Nam Chorios who were not direct descendants of the original prisoners left there by the Grissmath. They came to Nam Chorios to try and open new frontiers and establish profitable commercial centers. The barren wastes of the planet prevented them from doing so. The Newcomers believed that the Therans and other Oldtimers wanted to keep the planet isolated, as evidenced by their use of automatic gun emplacements to shoot down incoming and outgoing cargo ships. This belief was fostered by Seti Ashgad, although the real meaning of the gun emplacements was never made public. The Oldtimers and Therans were striving to keep the drochs from leaving the planet, not trying to prohibit trade. The Newcomers fought for Ashgad, ambushing the gun emplacements when ships arrived. The ships contained weapons required to liberate Ashgad and the droch Dzym from the planet, although the Newcomers were told that the weapons were to be used against the Oldtimers. (POT)

Newer Hopetown

this was the name chosen for the rebuilt settlement of New Hopetown, on the planet Ennth, after it was destroyed in the wake of seismic activity which wracked the planet every eight years. When it, too, was destroyed, it was renamed Newest Hopetown. (SHA)

Newest Coast Town

this settlement, located on the planet Ennth, was typical of the small towns that were built there. The planet virtually tore itself apart every eight years, when its single moon passed close enough to graze the atmosphere and set off huge seismic and tidal disturbances. Rebuilt from the base of a previous town - probably called Newer Coast Town - it was eventually destroyed itself in a huge tidal wave. (SHA)

Newest Hopetown

this settlement on the planet Ennth was built from the rubble of Newer Hopetown. When it was destroyed during Ennth's eight-year seismic cycle, it was rebuilt and renamed Another Hopetown. (SHA)

Newland

this was the largest of the floating cities found on the planet Neona. (PGT)

Newland System

a planetary star system located in the Outer Rim Territories, it contains the planet Argoon. (TIE)

Newlife Point

this is the only city on the planet Carosi XII, located on the north shore of the Avuae Sea. It was named in honor of the fact that Carosi XII offered the Carosites of Carosi IV a new chance to live when the Carosi star expanded and destroyed Carosi IV. (PG2)

Newoongall

this huge, arachnid-like creature was native to the caves of the planet Rodia. Newoongalls have six legs that they use for moving about on the ground, plus a pair of clawed forearms. In addition to these limbs, newoongalls have four upper arms which they used to cling to the ceiling of their caves. (SPG)

Newport

this was one of the three major spaceports located in Imperial City, on Coruscant. The Obroan Institute maintained a landing bay there for many decades, until the Yuuzhan Vong took control of Coruscant and reformed it into a simulacrum of Yuuzhan'tar. Like most locations on the planet, Newport suffered huge amounts of damage during the early stages of the reformation. (BTS, TT, UF)

Newsblink

this term referred to any small, quickly distributed piece of news. (APS)

Newsdroid

this was the name given to any droid which collected news reports for later presentation on a newsnet. (SWJ6)

NewsNet

this was the generic term used to describe the various forums and bulletin boards which sprang up on the HoloNet, to provide all manner of timely information and communication to the citizens of the galaxy. The types of information being shared on NewsNets ranged from gossip to travel notices to realtime news reporting. (SWJ3)

Newt-worm

this is a species of legged annelid. (SWJ8)

Nexcore Mining Corporation

this mining operation established a base of operations on the planet Velusia, during the last decades of the Old Republic. After building a spaceport inside Mount Hollow, NMC set out to extract as much ore as it could from the oceans which covered the planet. They used a series of oceanic exploration missions as cover for their activities, hoping to reap huge profits before they could be discovered. When their activities were discovered, however, NMC was forced to shut down much of its operations. Other mining corporations were given access to Velusia's seas, and NMC lost their monopoly on its profits. (CCW)

Nexer System

located in the Borderlands Region, this star system was believed to house the base of operations of Gaor Tembon during the height of the New Order. This system was located near several well-used trade routes, but was remote enough that it avoided official notice. (WBC)

Next Chance, The

a casino located in Equator City on Rodia. (SE)

Nextor

this was one of the many crystals used by the ancient Sith Lord in the construction of a lightsaber. It was believed to have given the wielder the ability to cause a greater amount of damage with a blow from their lightsaber. It was also thought that a nextor crystal caused an opponent to feel fear or apprehension when faced with the lightsaber. Nextor crystals were found almost exclusively on the planet M'haeli. (KOTOR)

Nexu

this was one of the many Acclamator-class military transport ships used by the Old Republic during the height of the Clone Wars. The Nexu was the ship that transported clone troopers to Vandor-3. (TCD) native to Cholganna, this incredibly dangerous, feline predator was prized by those beings who staged gladiator fights during the last decades of the Old Republic. The head of a nexu was wide and flat, and dominated by its toothy maw. A golden mane surrounded the head, and the paws of the nexu were studded with heavy claws. Most nexu were native to the continent of Indona, with four distinct subspecies existing on Cholganna. Perhaps the most formidable of these subspecies was the four-eyed forest nexu. Two pairs of eyes gave the forest nexu incredible vision, with the primary pair having the ability to see in the visible spectrum while the secondary pair could see in the infrared spectrum. The tail of the forest nexu was partially prehensile, and split into two long "fingers" which were used to stabilize the forest nexu when it hunted in the trees for arboreal octopi. A subspecies of wild nexu evolved on the planet Malastare, after several crimelords had them exported from Cholganna for use as guard beasts. Many of these were too wild to tame, and escaped into the wilderness. It was rumored that the Old Republic Senator from Malastare, Ask Aak, once kept a nexu as an export pet and guard-beast. (TCG1, BF1, VD2, SWI63, BH)

Nexu

Nexu Grin

this was one of the many attack postures practiced by the warriors who trained in the teras kasi martial arts. (HNN5)

Nexus

this Imperial Carrack-class cruiser was part of the Imperial force dispatched to hound the Alliance as its ships massed near Sullust, just prior to the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Nexus

the Imperial shuttle used by Admiral Zaarin to meet with the Habeen diplomats in the shuttle Fairfax. (TIE)

Nexus

this was the brand name of Cybot Galactica's droid scomp link access unit. It was basically a thin arm which had interface ports on its end, and could be extended and inserted into a scomp link access panel. (FTD)

Nexus City

this is the primary spaceport of the planet Entralla. (SWJ4)

Nexus Ring

produced by Menendahl Cybertronics, this Bith device appeared to be an ordinary signet ring. In reality, the nexus ring can be used to connect a cybernetic or prosthetic device to a local power source for recharging. (GFT) this clone commander was one of the many ARC Troopers who led squads into battle for the Grand Army of the Republic, during the height of the Clone Wars. (VD3)

Neyo

Nez Peron

this was a small, agricultural world which was aligned with the Empire, even after the Battle of Endor. The planet was ruled with an iron fist, and the Empire even transmitted a message indicating that the lives of the natives of the planet were expendable if it helped the Empire. (CE, CE2)

Nezriti Organization

a criminal organization that tried to gain Prince Xizor's favor during the Galactic Civil War. (SE)

Ngaaluh

this Yuuzhan Vong priestess was one of the many followers of Yun-Harla. She brought news to Warmaster Tsavong Lah that Vergere had returned to the Yuuzhan Vong during the early stages of their invasion, but had inherent doubts about the truth behind the Eighth Cortex. When the Shamed Ones began speaking of the Jedi Knights as their saviors, Ngaaluh was one of many high-placed Yuuzhan Vong who took to The Message. To prove herself, she donned an ooglith masquer and set out to locate the prophet of the Shamed Ones, Yu'shaa. She tried to present Yu'shaa with a living unrik, but Yu'shaa - actually Nom Anor - believed she was trying to use a weapon. He used his plaeryin bol to defend himself, and barely realized the mistake he had made. Using a specialized anti-venom, Nom Anor revived Ngaaluh. When she had recovered, Ngaaluh agreed to return to Supreme Overlord Shimrra, with a villip concealed in her robes to record everything she witnessed and relay it to Nom Anor. She accepted the mission, despite its obvious danger, because she so believed in The Message. She was appointed by Shimrra himself to begin weeding out the heretical members of the Shamed Ones, a position which allowed her and Nom Anor to plot the downfall of many high-ranking members of Shimrra's command structure. However, their plans were uncovered during Shimrra's own investigation into the supposed treachery of Prefect Zareb and Drosh Khali. Interrogation of the acolytes who had been inserted into Zareb's household revealed that it was Ngaaluh who actually placed them there. Shimrra ordered her captured and interrogated, but Ngaaluh would not reveal her true loyalties. She poisoned and killed herself, rather than revealing Nom Anor's part in the plots. (EVR, FH2, FH3)

N'Gai

an alien race. (EGC)

N'gant-Zarvel

this Rodian weapons manufacturer produced the 9118 heavy carbine during the Galactic Civil War. Much of their distribution was handled by several Hutt clans, so many of their weapons ended up in the hands of criminals and mercenaries. (ROE, WOTC)

Ngaric, Japhod

this shabby old man was the desk manager at the Lake Aire Hostel, on Lamuir IV, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TSIA)

Ngdin

this small, tongue-shaped creature was bio-engineered by the Yuuzhan Vong. It moved about on thousands of tiny cilia, and was created to eat the blood and flesh of anything it found. This way, the Vong could keep their dwelling clean of biological debris, especially the gricha-larva shells they used to house slaves. The cilia caused a numbing sting when they contact living flesh. (DTO)

N'Ge'U Valley

this red-rock canyon was located on the western edge of the Badlands of N'G'Zi, on the planet Geonosis. (IWE2)

Ng'ok

this violent beast has a foul temper, razor-sharp retractable claws, and a fearsome appearance. They are bred for use in many systems to frighten off potential attackers. They are tall, yellowish tripeds with large mouths and two eyestalks. Chewbacca had a holographic ng'ok on his holochess board on the Millennium Falcon. (CCG2)

Ngom

this was an aquatic creature that was once native to the planet Yuuzhan'tar. The ngom was distinguished by its large wattles and its deep cooing call, and was often kept in ponds or moats outside a residence as a kind of organic alarm system. (FP)

Ng'rrh

this Wookiee term means 'clan uncle.' It is used to denote those Wookiees who have taken an apprentice. (TBH)

NH-7

Subpro shipboard avionics control package. (SCRE)

Nhaa, Stannik

this Alliance trooper once hired D'voras Brin to get him off a planet on which he was being pursued by Imperial forces. (GMH)

Nharl

this star was the central body of the Nharl System. About two years before the Battle of Geonosis, Nharl ejected an immense solar flare, measuring more than ten light-minutes in length. The flare torched the planet Equanus, rendering it a lifeless cinder and virtually wiping out the Equani race. Many of the surviving Equani believed that the solar flare ejected by the star was not a natural phenomenon, but the result of a test-firing of the fire Death Star's superlaser. The test was miscalculated, and the star erupted with the solar flare. Although it was of little consolation to the Equani, the scientists who were conducting the test were killed in the flare as well. (MJH)

Nharpira

this small, predatory amphibian was native to the planet Dagobah. It was an aquatic creature, using its speed and tooth-filled maw to catch its prey. (WSW)

Nharqis'I

this area of space was known as the "death place" by many races. The word "Nharqis'I" was actually a modification of a smuggler's term for a killing field. The Nharqis'I is a starless, featureless section of the galaxy which was forbidding in its blankness. (TFNR)

Nhar'qual

named for an Old Corellian term which literally meant "dark death," this huge sand well was found within the Adsila Rifts of Socorro. It was rumored to be bottomless, and the original colonists used it as an execution site. The rift was too narrow to fly a starship into, but sensor probes launched into the rift have transmitted from a depth of 450 kilometers before they were lost. (BSS)

Nharwaak

one of the two predominant civilizations found on Mylok IV, the Nharwaak and their neighbors, the Habeen, had developed a small hyperdrive system which would enable a TIE Fighter to have supralight capabilities. The Nharwaak, however, was decidedly against selling the technology to the Empire. A number of battles erupted in the Mylok System as Admiral Zaarin tried to obtain the hyperdrive technology. When the Habeen sold the technology to the Empire, the Nharwaaks attempted to get the technology to the Alliance, but was not successful. (TIE)

N'haz Mit

Boba Fett tracked this being to the planet Necropolis, shortly after the Battle of Yavin, where he was forced to kill Mit. A week later, Fett learned that Mit still lived, and returned to Necropolis to kill him again. (GOF2)

Nhazz

Nhazz was a fighter for the Alliance and the New Republic, and was probably the brother of Uz Bonearm. (DE2)

Nhoras

this alien race had a 600-year-old feud with the Clatear race, a feud which five generations of Jedi Knights couldn't resolve. When the Empire took control of the galaxy, they subjugated the Clatear while leaving the Nhoras relatively alone. Thus, when the revelation of the Caamas Document brought the feud to a head once more, the Nhoras were unprepared for the Clatears' initial attacks. They began hiring mercenaries - most notably the Dhashaan Shield - to protect them from harm. (SOP)

Ni chuba na

this Huttese question meant "Is this yours?" (E1A14)

Ni toi darama

this Yevethan phrase translates into "the Blessed comes to us." It was chanted and sung by the Yevetha when Nil Spaar arrived in Hariz, after the successful extermination of several Koornacht Cluster worlds during the Yevethan Purge. (SOL)

Niado Duegad

this mercenary creature was native to the planet Vodran. Duegad's culture controlled its environment with terraforming activities. His species' biochemical make-up includes enhanced adrenal glands that secrete huge amounts of adrenalin that can sustain an individual for a short period of incredible strength. Niado resembles a large, upright, monocular slug. (CCG9)

Nian Lup

this Rodian arms dealer was known to be one of the most reputable and respectable dealers in the Outer Rim. Very few beings knew that he maintained the alter ego Karbo Jaxx, in order to run weapons to less than respectable parties. (HAS)

Nib

this ancient form of holdout blaster was once used by Duros females. (GCG)

Nib

this was once of the many names given to Duros females. Among the Duros, the name Nib referred to an ancient form of holdout blaster used by Duros females. (GCG)

Nibao Glumm

this being lived in Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine, during the height of the New Order, working as an ersatz guide and expediter for those tourists who were gullible enough to pay for his services. (GMR7)

Nibber Swoo

this hyperactive Rybet worked as an aircab driver on the planet Coruscant, during the last years of the Old Republic. He had a license from the government to drive outside designated traffic lanes, which made him popular with many of the planet's underground figures, because he could take them to remote locations for clandestine meetings. Nibber's cousin, also living on Coruscant, owned a funeral parlor which had an organic disintegrator, a fact that allowed criminals to hire Nibber's cab to assist in the disposal of unwanted bodies. (CCW)

Nibobo

this Huttese word translated into Basic as "a contract." (GMR5)

Nic Whoma

this Gran gambler was a frequent patron of the Outlander Club, during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. (OWS)

Nicandra Counterrevolutionary Signalmens' Memorial Building

this huge, dome-topped building was located in Galactic City on Coruscant, during the last decades of the Old Republic. It was located near the Skysitter Restaurant. During the First Battle of Coruscant, the building took heavy damage, and several thousand beings were killed in explosions and collapses. (IWE2, VD3)

Nicandra Plaza

this open-air plaza surrounded the Nicandra Counterrevolutionary Signalmen's Memorial Building on Coruscant, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (LEV)

Nichen

this New Republic world helped tend to the wounded and dead from the loss of the Kuari, during the hunt for the Teljkon vagabond near Gmir Askilon. (SOL)

Nichos

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Nici the Specialist

this individual was well-known to the underworld of Coruscant. For a price, Nici could obtain a completely new identity for just about any individual. Han Solo sought out Nici's services after escaping from Ylesia and being apprehended by Parq Yewgeen Plancke at the Imperial Bank of Coruscant. Han had a complete cell re-arrangement and retinal surgery in order to mask his former identity, in order to gain entrance to the Imperial Space Academy. Han had the new identity given the name "Han Solo." (TPS)

Nic-i-tain

the smoky by-product that results from the burning of t'bac. (TME)

Nicki

this Ewok lived in Bright Tree Village during the Empire's occupation of the Forest Moon of Endor. Nicki was portrayed by Nicki Reade in Star Wars: Episode VI - Return of the Jedi. (ROTJ)

Niclari, Groz

this youth was a fanatic player of the roleplaying game Quest for Quasar, during the last decades of the Old Republic. He even maintained a HoloNet infocache dedicated to the game and its rules, characters, and artifacts. (HNN5)

Nicta

this was one of the many small creatures Jacen Solo kept in his collection at the Jedi academy on Yavin 4. Nicta was a gort, and resembled a bright blue ball of feather-like fur. (TCC, CCR)

Nidder, Arl

this redheaded Corellian served Black Sun under the command of Zekka Thyne, before the near-human was imprisoned on Kessel. When Grand Admiral Thrawn, disguised as Jodo Kast, infiltrated Thyne's base in Coronet, Nidder was killed when a firefight erupted. (TFE)

Niddion

this frigid ball of rock was the seventh and outermost world in the Lianna System. (ML)

Nidifer

this man served as a Lieutenant Commander with the Alliance, serving aboard the medical Dreadnaught Mercy during the last years of the Galactic Civil War. (RAG)

Nidosh

this was the Korunnai word used to describe an orphan. Most often, these orphans were given the name of their ghosh as their last name, to signify that they had no parents. (SHPT)

Nield

this young man, a native of Melida/Daan, was the leader of The Young when Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi arrived on their planet to seach out Tahl. His parents were Daan, although he had disavowed any affiliation to either faction. His father, Micae, led his three oldest sons into battle. Micae was forced to leave Nield home because he was too young at the time. All four men were killed in an unremembered battle. His mother was killed shortly afterward, and Nield lived with his cousin. His cousin was killed shortly afterward in another struggle for control of Zehava, and she was just seventeen at the time. He joined The Young after meeting Cerasi and understanding why she lived apart from her parents. Nield's skills in battle and his ability to ecognize and teach strategy earned him the position of the leader of The Young. He agreed to help the two Jedi locate and rescue Tahl, creating a diversion while Cerasi led the Jedi to Tahl's position. Nield used the animosity between the Daan and the Melida to create the illusion of a Daan attack on a Melida sector. The feint was successful, and The Young eventually defeated their elders. Nield was named governor of Zehava, but was unaccustomed to leadership during peaceful times. He demanded that the Halls of Evidence be destroyed, despite a lack of support from his cabinet and to the exclusion of other, more vital activities like providing food and shelter for the inhabitants of Zehava. His resolve was shattered when Cerasi and Obi-Wan petitioned for the cessation of the destruction, and The Young began to splinter along many different lines. After Cerasi's death, Nield exiled Obi-wan from The Young. However, when Obi-Wan revealed Mawat's plans to oust Nield from power, he decided to avenge Cerasi's death by re-establishing peace. He and Obi-Wan managed to defeat Mawat's forces when Qui-Gon showed them all a hologram of Cerasi, pleading for peace shortly before her death. Nield then agreed to form a more cooperative government, working in concert with the Daan and Melida elders to rule the planet. (DOD, UP)

Nieler, Jor

this middle-aged, heavy-set man worked with Aarica Vost, posing as a starship parts dealer at Rordan's Spaceship Parts and More. He was the leader of the Corporate Sector Authority's Security Police Force in the city of Verena, on the planet Kirima. (TSK)

Nien

this name was common among Sullustan males, and meant "good reflexes". (GCG)

Nien Nunb

this Sullustan was tall for his species, and was a loyal worker for SoroSuub until it aligned itself with the Empire. He had worked as a trade runner for the corporation, using his stock light freigher Sublight Queen to move raw materials and minerals to outlying systems. He met Lando Calrissian on one of his many missions for SoroSuub. When the Empire grew to power and SoroSuub claimed its allegiance to the New Order, Nien Nunb fled from Sullust and joined the Alliance. Nien Nunb's greatest achievement came during the Battle of Endor, when he was assigned to be Lando's co-pilot the Millennium Falcon in the assault on the second Death Star. However, in the ensuing months he became increasingly disgruntled by the fact that his part in the Battle of Endor was often overlooked. He assisted Han Solo in the rescue of the planet Vandelhelm from Imperial control, then reluctantly returned ten years later to participate in the dedication ceremony for the so-called Solo Fleet, a mission he reluctantly accepted. However, it was Nien Nunb's quick thinking that prevented Endro from pulling off a coup d'etat and ousting Lilli from power. Later, Nien Nunb helped defeat the Godoans, and again flew the Millennium Falcon against the N'Gai. Following Grand Admiral Thrawn's death, Lando approached him with an offer to help mine Kessel's spice mines for a limited share of the mines' profits. Nien Nunb saw the logic behind employing races which naturally lived beneath the ground to legally mine spice, and agreed to serve as Calrissian's Chief Administrator. Together, they turned Kessel's entire operation into a legitimate business, supplying spice for medicinal and other legal uses. (ROTJ, COTF, EGC, CCR, PH)

Nierer's Folly

a game of chance played in many backwater casinos. (SWJ14)

Nierport Seven

the seventh moon of Eeropha, Nierport Seven was located in the Core Worlds, not far from Coruscant. It was a cold world, with just a single warm month each year. The surface was rocky, dotted with clumps of a thorny, flowering plant. Nierport Seven was unremarkable, except for the fact that Eeropha and its system was a major refueling station for ships destined for Coruscant. (JQ4)

Nieuth IV

this planet is located in the Wyloff Sector, which is part of the Colonies region. (CRO)

Niev Jaub

this Sullustan was an honest trader who did a large volume of business on Nar Shaddaa. He and his ship, the Bnef Nlle, were on the Smuggler's Moon when Admiral Greelanx began his attack. Because of his business ties, and because Nar Shaddaa supported a large contingent of Sullustans, Jaub joined the fight. He got caught in no-man's-land when he mistakenly followed Falan Iniro out of hiding before the rest of Nar Shaddaa's defense forces were ready. Jaub saw Iniro and the Take That! destroyed by the mistake. Jaub managed to take out a few TIE Fighters that launched from the Carrack-class ships that made up the Imperial picket line before sustaining damage himself. Rather than die without fighting back, Jaub piloted his small freighter - the Bnef Nlle - on a collision course with the Vigilance. The impact destroyed the smaller ship and killed Jaub, but the cruiser was defenseless after losing its shields. (THG)

Nig

this was one of the more common names used by Trandoshan hunters. Like most Trandoshan names, it was reserved for males, but could be adopted by those rare females who became hunters. In the Trandoshan language, the name meant "fate of a violent death". (GCG)

Nig

this Gotal was a member of the Rancors gang, during the period before the Battle of Naboo. When the Raptors confronted Darsha Assant during her failed rescue of Oolth the Fondorian, she was forced to slice of Nig's hand with her lightsaber in order to prevent him from shooting her with a blaster. (DMSH)

Nigel III

this planet was located in Kira Sector. (SS)

Nigel IV

the fourth planet in the Nigel System, this world is located along the Enarc Run. The natives of Nigel IV are a peaceful people, and only formed a republican government at the insistence of the natives during the New Order. It was at this time that Nigel IV became involved with galactic trade, and the influx of travelers and spacers brought crime to the world. The laws and penal system of Nigel IV have been very strict since the Galactic Civil War, and have been successful in keeping the planet crime-free. A cool planet covered with flat plains and vast glaciers, Nigel IV rotates once every 20 standard hours, and orbits its star once every 325 local days. (TSK)

Night Beast

this huge, humanoid creature was left behind by the Massassi to keep Yavin 4 safe until they could return. It is depicted in The Sith War as a huge, red-skinned humanoid with skied scales and horns, while Classic Star Wars depicts it as a large, fish-like humanoid with sharp claws and fangs. Classic Star Wars holds that the ancient Massassi created the beast to guard the temples against an enemy takeover, but The Sith War simply showed Exar Kun and the Massassi placing it in the depths of the Great Temple as a guardian. Originally a Massassi Warrior named Kalgrath, the night beast was held in suspended animation until Admiral Griff launched his attack on the Alliance base on Yavin 4. A TIE Bomber crashed on moon, penetrating the Great Temple's lower levels and cracking the beast's suspended animation capsule open. It then began to roam the tunnels of the temple, destroying Alliance equipment in what it believed was the fulfilment of its purpose. It had some use of the Force, and used it to shield itself from energy weapons. When Luke Skywalker discovered the creature, he and R2-D2 were able to drive it away by using the Force to lure the beast into a space transport. They had programmed the transport for auto-jump, and once the night beast was inside, they initiated the launch sequence. The beast was sent into hyperspace. One of the random jumps performed by the transport brought the beast back to Alliance space. This time, through the Force, Luke explained that the beast would eventually find its former masters by getting onto the transport. (CSW, TSW, EGA)

Night Caller

one of the CR90 corvettes under the command of Apwar Trigit, the Night Caller was heavily modified from its original specifications during its initial design. The bow was widened and much of it gutted to allow for a small TIE fighter hangar, while the topside hold had been enlarged to act as storage hold for skimmers. One of the turbolaser turrets on the bow was replaced with a capital-ship tractor beam. The Night Caller was dispatched to destroy the New Republic's base on Folor using Empion mines. While it succeeded in knocking out much of the base, the Night Caller was captured when the Wraith Squadron pilots created the Lunatic and lured the Night Caller in to capture it. Voort saBinring was hidden inside, and when the Lunatic was drawn into the ship's hold, he managed to take control of the bridge and take the ship for the New Republic. The crew was so taken by the surprise of Voort's attack, that they didn't wipe out its computer memory banks, nor did they get off a distress call to Trigit. The Night Caller's flight logs led the Wraiths to several of Zsinj's holdings. Since the warlord and Trigit were unaware that the ship had been captured, Wedge Antilles and Choday Hrakness continued to respond to their orders, and then had the Wraiths fly in after and seemingly attack them. The Night Caller was later reassigned to another Republic flight group and renamed the Ession Strike. (WS, IF) alchemical beasts created during Exar Kun's rule on Yavin 4, these hideous winged reptiles have yellow eyes on each of two heads. Each head sprouts from its own neck. The creatures have purple blood, and their tails are hooked at the end. This hook contains a crystalline poison. They are covered in scales, and have metallic claws. (COTF)

Night Creatures

Night Fangs

this pirate group was operative during the height of the New Order. (PP)

Night Gyre

this Z-95 Headhunter was ostensibly owned by Darrus Jeht, during the last years of the Old Republic, despite the fact that the Jedi Knights were not allowed to have possessions of their own. The Night Gyre had been purchased by the Almas Academy and loaned to Jeht when he was a student in need of transport. The ship simply remained with Jeht, wherever he traveled, and became source of personal pride for him because the ship always came out of a fight relatively intact. The only problem he was unable to resolve was an intermittent sensor ghost caused by a collision with an asteroid before Darrus had taken possession of it. Regardless of how often Jeht replaced the sensors, the "ghost" remained. After several attempts, Jeht stopped trying to fix it, and simply considered it part of the ship's charm. (LFCW)

Night Hammer

this was the name of the Super-class Star Destroyer that Delvardus had been building in secret, using intense amounts of Imperial funding to create it. When Delvardus and the other Imperial warlords were executed by Daala and Pellaeon at Tsoss Station, Daala took the Night Hammer as her flagship, renaming it the Knight Hammer. (DS)

Night Havoc

the YT-1300 stock light freighter owned by Kara and Willi Saffch. It got stranded in the Zelos System after escaping from TIE Fighters. Many of the ship's systems were destroyed in the escape. (PG2)

Night is a Curtain

this song, written and played by Annadale Fayde, was given a scarlet rating by the Imperial Board of Culture. It first appeared on the compilation Darkness on the Land. (GG9)

Night Mynock

this book, written by Rogar Farnoster, was one of the five most popular pieces of literature during the year leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN4)

Night Planet

see Nivek (CWA1)

Night Raider

this Ghtroc freighter was owned and operated by the Barabel Yarrku. It was destroyed, and Yarrku killed, when the Barabel tried to intercept Kinnin Vo-Shay and Nyo over Nar Shaddaa. Yarrku had been hired by the Herglic Doune to kill Vo-Shay, but instead was killed himself. (TFNR)

Night Shade

this rough-and-tumble bar was located in the city of Chikatlik, on the planet Ord Cestus, during the last decades of the Old Republic. The bar served as a front for the criminal organization commanded by Trillot, who worked from an office hidden in the caves below the bar. (TCD)

Night Spider

this large, carnivorous insect was native to the swamps of Naboo. (SWI69)

Night Spirit

an evil deity feared by the Ewoks but worshipped by the Duloks, the Night Spirit was released when a comet sprayed the Forest Moon of Endor with tiny meteors. The Ewoks believed that the Night Spirit was actually contained in the comet, and arrived on Endor inside a fragment of the comet. The Night Spirit promptly stole the Sunstar from Bright Tree Village, hoping to use it to raise the spirits of evil beings which were supposedly exiled to the Forest Moon. Unfortunately, the Night Spirit lost it to Wicket Wystri Warrick and his friends, when they launched a daring mission to recover it. (ECAR)

Night Stalkers

this was another name for the Mashi Horansi. (PG1, AE)

Night Terror

this was one of the Imperial Star Destroyers active during the early years of the New Republic. (SOC)

Night Wind

Jor Entel's modified YT-1300 freighter. (SN)

Nightbat

large, insectile bats that are native to the planet Dagobah. These bats have leathery wings and six thin legs. Each leg has a set of small, sharp claws. (DS)

NightBlind 472

this Fabritech sensor jamming system was often found on tramp freighters, although its cost meant that the captain either was rich or needed the protection. (GG6)

Nightbringer, Sard

this woman was a crimelord in the Tamarin Sector of the galaxy. During the last years of the Empire, she struggled mightily against the bureaucracy of the Empire. Following the Battle of Endor, she and her forces began taking back their sector, invading Imperial positions and removing the forces which controlled them. Her forces obtained a prototype set of combat armor from Imperial station T-1583, which she tried to auction off to obtain funds for her organization. After Natja the Hutt was killed following her winning bid, Marg Sonat killed Nightbringer in order to take possession of the combat armor for himself. (POC)

Nightcast

this Stalwart-class freighter was owned and operated by Callandri. Prior to Callandri, the ship had been owned by Karu Nelbin, but Callandri killed Nelbin and took possession of the ship. She had it modified by outlaw techs, and it was further modified while Callandri was working at Kuat Drive Yards. It was armed with a pair of turret-mounted laser cannons, and its cargo hold was modified to hold Callandri's Q-6100 groundspeeder. (AIR)

Nightcrawler

an insect native to Tatooine, the nightcrawler was a nocturnal predator. (SW, JAD)

Nightcrawler

according to Wookiee legends, this creature inhabits the first (lowest) level of Kashyyyk's jungles, feeding on the blood and spirit of its victims. (RD)

Night-demon

this species of creature has razor-sharp talons that deliver a burning poison to flesh. (TPS)

Nightdevil

native to Gorothe Prime, this predatory creature lived in the mountainous regions of the planet. These creatures were actually primitive relatives of the modern Gorotheites, having branched off from the same evolutionary path many millennia before the Battle of Yavin. During the era of the New Order, nightdevils were quite rare, mainly because their habitats had been destroyed by the mining operations which covered the planet. As their name implied, nightdevils hunted primarily at night, using their heightened senses to locate the lairs of clawcats and other large prey. These creatures were considered semi-intelligent by many xenobiologists, but their intelligence was based solely on hunting tactics. (GSE)

Nightdweller

this was one of the largest predators found in the jungles of Kashyyyk. Nightdwellers were known to have killed Kashyyyk banthas as prey. (GMR4)

Nightfalcon

Ikas-Adno's model 22-B speederbike. It can be armed with a single laser cannon for military duty. This speederbike could carry a driver and passenger, as well as four kilograms of cargo. (RPG, SWJ8, SWRPG)

Nightflier Squadron

this was one of the many starfighter squadrons of the New Republic. The Nightfliers were known as average pilots who excelled in combat due to the tactics of their commanding officer, Alask Vrei. Their base of operations was hidden inside the frozen core of a comet, which had a long orbit that made it exceptionally stable. (GMR9)

Night-flyer

this is a creature out of Wookiee legend, often characterized by its high-pitched screech. (THG)

Nightgaunt

this species of creature is predominantly nocturnal, and generally hunts from the shadows. (PTR)

Night-gliders

alien creatures native to the planet Altarn, and often sold as pets. (HSE)

Nighthawk

this was the name of a battered, old B-7 light freighter discovered by Yoda aboard Jovan Station, during the Jedi Master's mission to locate Count Dooku on Vjun. Yoda and a pair of Padawans had been attacked on Phindar, and were forced to improvise a way to reach Vjun. After taking a rental ship to reach Jovan, they were able to purchase the Nighthawk from a scrapyard. With a little work, the ship was able to get them to Vjun without much trouble. Yoda put the two Padawans - Whie Malreaux and Tallisibeth Enwandung-Esterhazy - to work on the repairs, in an effort to take their minds away from the deaths of their Masters at Phindar. (YDR)

Nighthunter

this four-legged predator was distinguished by its long, powerful legs, whiplike tail, and fanged jaws. However, individuals could vary greatly in appearance, with the variations coming in coloration and shape. Many xenobiologists believed that the nighthunter was descended from another species. In general, nighthunters are hairless, covered with scales which could deflect a blaster bolt. These creatures had a slight connection to the Force which allowed them to cloud the mind of their prey, so that they could sneak up and attack it. During the height of the Old Republic, many nighthunters were exported for use as guard animals, but they proved to be impossible to train and had to be exterminated. A byproduct of their connection to the Force was the way in which a nighthunter bonded with another Force-sensitive being. When the bonding occurs, the nighthunter literally accepts the individual as a member of its family, defending it to the death if necessary. In the wild, nighthunters mate for life, and they could live to be fifty years of age. (PJSB)

Nightlight

this was the brand name of Kalibac's 301-MAX floating security droid. (LOE)

Nightlily

another name for the m'iiyoum plant. (TME)

Nightmare Demon

this feared beast is humanoid in shape, with a head that resembles a bare skull. These creatures have the ability to cloud minds and create illusions, luring their prey close enough to pounce on it. They were supposedly wiped out during the Clone Wars, but Luke Skywalker encountered the demon Reist on Lapez 3. (CSWDW)

Nightmare Machine

this attraction was found on Hologram Fun World. As an amusement attraction, the machine allowed visitors to enter a large room that was initially dark. As the visitors entered, the machine scanned their brain to discover their worst fears. It then displays a vividly-accurate hologram of those fears. It was discovered that the machine was the creation of Borborygmus Gog, and was used to quell rebellious individuals. This was all part of Project Starscream, and the machine was an experiment aimed at providing Gog with a way to use a being's deepest fears as a weapon against them. The Nightmare Machine itself was actually a bioengineered construct, genetically created by Gog. This technology was eventually modified to create the biological weapon known as Eppon, which Gog used against several Alliance soldiers on the planet Kiva. (GOF4, GOF6)

Nightmoon, Debret

this woman was a smuggler who worked as a courier during the last years of the Galactic Civil War. She traveled the galaxy in a modified Z-10 Seeker she named Starlady. (SWJ5)

NightRunner

this Ghtroc Class 720 freighter was operated by Bazak's Gang. It supported the boarding actions of the Skipray Blastboats Slicer and Slasher. It was armed with a double laser cannon and turret-mounted laser cannon. (FBS)

Nightseer

this avian was native to the planet Ruan. When the Salliche Agricultural Corporation began retooling its operations in hopes of pleasing the Yuuzhan Vong, it genetically altered nightseers to be wingless and mute, and used them to create droppings which were later turned into fertilizer. (JE)

Nightshadow

this was a series of anti-sensor baffling produced by Arakyd. This form of countermeasure was used to baffle, or deaden, the various emissions of a starship, including engine exhaust and communications. A smoother, more rounded hull was more effectively baffled than an angular hull. (PP)

Nightshrike

this vicious, avian predator was native to the planet Monastery. Primarily a nocturnal creature, the black-skinned nightshrike used the cover of darkness to attack and kill its prey. The nightshrike was found mainly in the rainforests of the planet. (MC35)

Nightsinger

this large, vicious avian creature was native to the moon known as Nightsinger's Orb. These creatures lived in the craggy caverns which dotted the cliffs of the moon, and resembled huge, flying reptiles. The Hejaran family traditionally hunted these creatures, not for sport, but for food during important feasts. These immanse beasts were named for the keening cries they used to communicate with each other. (TSIA)

Nightsinger's Orb

named for the vicious avians which inhabit it, this semi-tropical moon was located in the Pella System of Tapani Sector. (TSIA)

Nightsisters

a clan of Dark Side witches on Dathomir, the Nightsisters were created by Gethzerion following her own exile. It is rumored that Palpatine feared their power, so he had the planet interdicted and used atmospheric bombardment to destroy any ships on the planet. They are noticeable by the way the blood vessels near their eyes have ruptured from their rage, and from their use of the Dark Side. They made a deal with the Imperial Warlord Zsinj for a transport ship with which they could escape Dathomir, but they were destroyed by Luke, Han, and Leia just as their ship tried to leave Dathomir. (CPL, CTD)

Nightspider

this was a species of predatory spider that was native to the planet Naboo. All nightspiders used a form of poison to kill their prey or defend themselves, and one subspecies of nightspider could spit this poison at its target. All nightspiders were considered aggressive, and were to be avoided if at all possible. (GQRG)

Nightstinger

this weapon, produced by Xerrol, was a model of sniper's blaster rifle. It was well-known among weapons experts for the fact that it fires an invisible bolt. Despite this advantage, the weapon had several drawbacks. First, a canister of the special blster gas it required cost well over 1,000 credits. Second, each canister had only enough gas for up to five shots before it had to be replaced. Lastly, the canisters were specially designed, and only fit in certain weapons. It was created by the Empire for use in taking out specific targets. (SOP)

Nightsweat

this was the pseudonym used by Ylenic It'kla to describe the Anzati Saarai-kaar, Nikkos Tyris. The name is a description of the Anzati's smell, which carried more descriptive information to the Caamasi than physical appearance. (IJ)

Nightswift

a nocturnal, carnivorous creature native to Kamar. They are also a source of food for the Kamarians. (HSR)

NightWhispers

this was the name used by one of the Empire's most elite stormtrooper units. A unit of the Storm Commandos, they were sent into the field whenever incredible stealth was required to gain access to an enemy target. (ROE)

Nightwing

this was the callsign of a member of the Thaereian Navy, during the height of the Clone Wars. He originally joined the military to protect his homeworld, although he was one of the few soldiers who truly understood that protection often meant taking the fight to a superior enemy. His beliefs were challenged when he was confronted by Commander Kulkis, who tested Nightwing's resolve by drawing a knife on the soldier. Nightwing was prepared for the attack, and managed to twist the knife into a position where it stabbed into Kulkis' chest when they fell to the ground. Nightwing believed that he had passed whatever test Kulkis had meant for him, although Kulkis' final words caused him to question the need to continue defending Thaere. Many of the Cularin newsnets were abuzz with activity after an account of Nightwing's actions were posted, and many believed that Nightwing was actually Osten Dal'Nay. (LFCW)

Nigiro

an Imperial freighter destroyed by Keyan Farlander during his first tour of duty as an X-Wing pilot. (XW)

Nigkoe Detention Facility

this immense, stone-walled prison was maintained by the Separatists on the planet Felucia, during the height of the Clone Wars. Many Jedi Knights and Masters were held at Nigkoe during the fighting. (ROF)

Nihil

this was one of the multitude of Imperial-class Star Destroyers which made up the Imperial Navy fleet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Nihun River

this river, located on the planet Brosi, flowed down the Nihun Valley to the Bay of Sypon. (AIR)

Nihun Valley

this river valley was located on the planet Brosi. It meandered through the Blan Forest, emptying into the Bay of Sypon. (AIR)

Niian

Captain Twolz was killed by Imperial stormtroopers near this planet. (SWJ1)

Niik, Li-Suun

this well-known crimelord operated a bold and fearless smuggling operation from a base on the planet Aargau, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. His smugglers were known for their bravery - or stupidity, depending on how one looked at things. Li-Suun himself was hard for authorities to pinpoint, and the name Li-Suun Niik was probably an alias. He had cultivated several contacts within the Bank of Aargau, although his contacts were unaware of his true identity. What was known was that Li-Suun and his smugglers used a variety of methods to smuggle precious metals off the planet, including surgically attaching sheets of gold to bones. Unknown to most beings, Li-Suun was also somewhat sensitive to the Force, although he was self-trained. (PH, MC48)

Niiliisi, Granz

this middle-aged man was the leader of the Massa Family criminal organization on the planet Ukio, during the early years of the New Order. The local government wanted him removed from power, so it hired the ThunderForce mercenaries to remove him. Niiliisi barely survived the assault, and managed to flee Ukio and hide out on an unspecified world. There, he attempted to regroup the Massa Family members and return to Ukio. (HAS)

Niira Kori

this was a famous Iktotchi individual, distinguished in the histories of the moon of Iktotch. (UANT)

Niiriit Esh

this was one of the small group of Shamed Ones who lived with Vuurok I'pan beneath the surface of Coruscant, after the planet had been transformed into a likeness of Yuuzhan'tar. Like the rest of their cadre, Niiriit believed that the Jedi Knights were not abominations, but saviors of the Shamed Ones and symbols of the new ideology which should be embraced by the Yuuzhan Vong. For this reason, their band remained small, in case they were captured by the Yuuzhan Vong warriors. This ensured that their small cult of Jedi followers would never be fully discovered. A former warrior, Niiriit developed a simple relationship with Kunra during their residence below Coruscant's surface. Niiriit was quite suspicious when I'pan returned one day with Nom Anor at his side, having heard of the former Executor's work as a minion of the Supreme Overlord Shimrra, but she was attracted to Nom Anor's charismatic presence. Niiriit was killed when the small band of heretics was discovered by a squad of Yuuzhan Vong warriors. When the warriors were drawn to Nom Anor's presence or simply happened upon the band, they mercilessly killed every Shamed One they could capture. (FH1)

Nijune Treasure Fleet

this traveling starship caravan was rumored to have been one of the most wondrous and valuable sets of ships ever put together during the Old Republic. The Fleet was ambushed by Hez Kragg, the so-called Dread Buccaneer, shortly before Kragg was dispatched by a Jedi Knight. Centuries later, Jonas Durns discovered the location of the Kragg's Fury, which was rumored to contain the riches of the Fleet in its holds. Durns learned of the Fleet's location from Sig Coven, and hired a group of freelance scouts to find it. (SWJ7)

nik

this Shyriiwook word was used as the suffix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "jester" or "riddle". It could be attached to a prefix by itself, or combined with other suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Nikaede Celso

this female Wookiee was a constant companion of Drake Paulsen, and served as the first mate aboard the Steadfast. Huge even for a Wookiee, Nikaede was smuggled off Kashyyyk at a young age by her own parents, in an attempt to keep her free from slavery. She later bonded with Drake, developing a relationship which helped fill in the gaps of her childhood. (SWJ3, SWJ12)

Nikals, Gerrin

this man was a Lieutenant in the Imperial Army, and was in command of the Kal'Shebbol Fury platoon during the early years of the New Republic. (E)

Nikambree

this independent spacer performed extensive modifications to his R2-series astromech droid, to the point that the droid did not resemble its original form. (FTD)

Nikk pryozz

this Yuuzhan Vong phrase translated into Basic as "I am", and was used in announcing one's arrival. (T)

Nikk pr'zzyo

this Yuuzhan Vong phrase translated into Basic as "I was", and was used in announcing one's arrival. (T)

Nikk, Hatras

this woman made a living as a con artist on the Outland Transit Station, during the years following the Battle of Naboo, until Rozatta placed a bounty on her head. She was accused of seducing many a traveler, before robbing them blind. She was caught by Jango Fett and brought to Rozatta for questioning. (BH)

Nikkle Nut

this plentiful plant, which produced a thick-shelled nut, was native to the jungles of Haruun Kal. (SHPT)

Nikkos Tyris

this Anzati was one of the most powerful of the Saarai-karr leaders of the Jensaarai, who discovered some ancient Sith teachings during the Clone Wars. Tyris was also a former Jedi Knight, and his knowledge both the Light and Dark Sides of the Force, coupled with Tyris' unusual style of fighting, made him a formidable opponent. He and his companions were dispatched by Nejaa Halcyon and Ylenic It'kla, but not before Halcyon was mortally wounded when Tyris drove his azure lightsaber through Halcyon's chest. Halcyon, though dying, absorbed all the energy from Tyris' lightsaber and used it to create a fist-like projection with the Force. Halcyon used it to crush Tyris. The other Jensaarai accompanying him was the husband of a Jensaarai who would become the next Saarai-kaar on Suarbi 7/5 and confront Corran Horn. (IJ, PJSB)

Niklos

this noted pazaak player lived on the planet Taris, some four millennia before the Battle of Yavin. He could often be found at the Upper City Cantina. (KOTOR)

Nikohler Elee

this alien was a member of the Galactic Radicals, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. (BH)

Ni'Korish

this Hapan woman was the Queen Mother before her daughter, Ta'a Chume, took the throne. She was known for her intense hatred of the Jedi Knights. (DJ)

Ni'Korish

this political faction was formed on Hapes many decades ago, by those Hapans who agreed with the former Queen Mother Ni'Korish - Ta'a Chume's grandmother - that the Jedi Knights were among the most hated beings in the galaxy. It was believed that the Ni'Korish were behind several assassination attempts on the life of Teneniel Djo, during her tenure as the Queen Mother of Hapes. (DJ)

Nikta

this frothy, powerful alcoholic beverage was created by the Nikto race. (GG12)

Nikta

this was an alcoholic beverage brewed on Aduba-3. (MC8)

Niktha

this Jawa was part of a roaming group of beggars that accosted visitors and inhabitants of Mos Eisley for handouts, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. When several patrons of the Dusty Bowl saloon began to complain about his smell and his aggressive begging techniques, the owners of the saloon issued a bounty for his arrest. Jango Fett claimed the bounty shortly afterward, during a mission to Tatooine to seek an audience with Jabba the Hutt. (BH)

Nikto

a humanoid alien race which evolved into five distinct branches on the planet Kintan. They were an ancient species, being one of the three races signed into servitude to the Hutts during the battle against Xim the Despot. The Nikto were characterized by their leathery skin, reptilian eyes, and fierce temperments. The skin of a Nikto was made up of thousands of overlapping scales, which could be shifted to cover wounds to protect them from infection. All five races are genetically capable of interbreeding; 93% of the offspring from such unions resemble only one of the parents. There were a number of environmental and geological changes that greatly affected life on Kintan, causing the once-singular Nikto race to evolve into five unique races. Chief among these changes was the radiation expelled by the nearby star M'dweshuu. The Red Nikto, called Kajain'sa'Nikto, evolved in the deserts. They have ridged foreheads, eight small horns around the eyes, and two at the chin. They breathe through a permeable membrane over their mouths and through four breather tubes on their necks. The Green Nikto, known as Kadas'sa'Nikto, evolved in the forests. They are visibly scaled, with obvious noses and small horns ringing their eyes. The Mountain Nikto are called Esral'sa'Nikto, and have smooth skin. Their ears are large and fin-shaped, designed to be extended or pulled flat to regulate body heat and enhance hearing. They also have a nasal membrane similar to the Red Nikto. The Pale Nikto, called Gluss'sa'Nikto, are found in the islands of the planet. They resemble the Green Nikto, with fin-like ears. The last race, called M'shento'su'Nikto or Southern Nikto, lack any horns but have a number of breather tubes at various points on their skulls. Their inner strength and fierce nature has been honed over millennia of survival against the predators of Kintan. This led to four intense civil wars which nearly destroyed Kintan some 30 years before the Nikto helped the Hutts defeat Xim. The Hutts then distributed the Nikto to various worlds as bodyguards and strongmen. The Nikto developed atomic-level technology on their own, and absorbed galactic technology from the Hutts. They have remained under Hutt control for over 25,000 years, for the most part remaining neutral throughout the various battles between the Empire and the Alliance. Because of this, many Nikto individuals who were sensitive to the Force remained undiscovered by the Jedi Knights, although a few Nikto escaped slavery to become Jedi. (ROTJ, TOJ, GG12, SWJ6, AOTC, GMR6, MJH)

Nikto

this was the native language shared by all five races of Nikto. (UANT)

Nikto Kajidic

this modified Imperial Customs Frigate was owned and operated by Ga'p'tashi. It was armed with four heavy laser cannons, a heavy ion cannon, and a tractor beam projector. (PP)

Nil

this Quint worked for Jenna Zan Arbor as a guard, at her secret laboratory on Simpla-12. He was jealously loyal to Jenna, and resented the bond she seemed to form with her Force-sensitive test subjects. Qui-Gon Jinn managed to use Nil's anger as a lever, and managed to escape twice from under Nil's guard. Luckily for Nil, he was caught by Zan Arbor each time. Unluckily for Nil, Zan Arbor grew tired of his inability to contain the Jedi, and injected the Quint with a lethal dose of drugs. (EVE, TDR)

Nil Spaar

this cunning Yevethan was in charge of the Yevethan workers at the Imperial shipyard known as Black-15. While there, he plotted to overthrow the Imperials and take control of the shipyards for the Yevethans, and bided his time working under Jian Paret. When the official order to evacuate the shipyards and destroy its ships was issued, Spaar heard it almost as quickly as Paret did, and put his plans into motion. The Yevethan workers gained access to the spaceworthy Imperial craft, and slaughtered their crews. Nil Spaar personally executed Jian Paret and took control of the Intimidator. With his plan under way, Nil Spaar and the Yevetha retreated into the Koornacht Cluster to repair their ships and plan the next phase of attack. The next phase began twelve years later, and would be known among the Yevetha as the Great Purge. Nil Spaar went to Coruscant to discuss a mutual relationship between the Yevethan Duskhan League and the New Republic with Leia Organa-Solo. Spaar carefully avoided an alliance while probing for weaknesses in Leia's government. Spaar wooed certain New Republic Senators who opposed Leia's ideals, and through them sowed seeds of unrest in the Senate. When Leia discovered the missing Black Sword Command, Nil Spaar again called the Yevetha to act, and used a carefully orchestrated series of events to his own ends. He twisted the events to appear as if Leia were the aggressor and himself an innocent victim, while launching a wave of extermination throughout the Koornacht. The Yevetha wiped out any non-Yevethan settlements, keeping intact any strategic mines or businesses. Nil Spaar then retreated to N'Zoth to enjoy the fruits of his labors. He used the New Republic's HoloNet communications network to bombard the citizens and Senators with slanderous accusations against Leia, and he fostered relationships with several disgruntled Senators. He also placed Belezaboth Ourn on Coruscant, and the set-up provided him with a great deal of advanced information on the Republic's moves with regard to the Yevetha. When the Republic decided to send Han Solo to command the Fifth Battle Group, Spaar ordered that Solo be captured, as a way to bring Leia under his control. At the same time, he began breeding with several Yevethan females, hoping to ensure his immortality through prodigious offspring. Taking some of the advice of Tal Fraan, Spaar kept a group of prisoners - taken from each of the worlds the Yevetha purged - on the Pride of Yevetha. This assured that the Republic would not take direct action against him, for fear of harming innocent captives. Among the captives was Han Solo, but Chewbacca and Lumpawarrump were able to penetrate the Star Destroyer and rescue Solo. During the rescue, the Wookiees also destroyed many of Spaar's mara-nas casks. This series of events angered Spaar into taking foolish actions, which led to his eventual defeat at the Battle of N'zoth. Unbeknownst to Spaar, the Imperial officers he had kept prisoner ever since the Yevetha took control of the Black Sword shipyards were also rising up against him. Led by Sil Sorannan, the Imperials took control of several Yevethan warships during the Battle, including the Pride of Yevetha. Sorannan, wanting to kill Spaar outright but also wanting Spaar to suffer for his actions, forced the Yevethan leader into an escape pod as the Super-class Star Destroyer travelled through hyperspace toward Byss. The pod was ejected into hyperspace, and Nil Spaar was never heard from again. (BTS, SOL, TT)

NIL-8

this assassin droid was employed by Moff Bandor to wander the Game Chambers of Questal and remove the prisoners placed in them. Humanoid in form, NIL-8 is coated with a matte-black finish that reduces glare and reflection. NIL-8's head resembles a large set of macrobinoculars, and its vocalizer is located in its chest. The droid was well-built, and normal blaster fire usually bounced off its armor plating. This strength gave NIL-8 a certain bravado, as it often entered a fight by walking out into the open and firing. (GCQ)

Nil-ar

one of the six Tiss'shar races, the Nil-ar were characterized by the thin, reddish bands of scales which covered their eyes, wrists, ankles, and tails. (UANT)

Nilar Med/Tech Corporation

this corporation produced a wide range of medical devices developed for use in the field. (FOP)

N'ildwab

the false Sith lord Nobam Nol was killed by Boba Fett on this planet. (SWG6, TOD)

Nile

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Nilek Rillion

this was the name of a distinguished Morseerian individual. (UANT)

Nilesk

this female Rodian was a member of the Goa-Ato, and was part of the committee which matched hunters to bounties during the height of the New Order. (SPG)

Nilg System

this planetary system was used as a base of operations for Tolad Dor and his criminal organization. (SWJ10)

Nilgaard Bioprocessing

this corporation established a major plant on the planet known as Reaper's World several thousand years ago, and slowly used up all the natural resources the planet could offer. After the world was drained, Nilgaard packed up shop and headed to the Corporate Sector. (ND)

Nilgarian Worm

a vile alien creature. (TJP)

Nilim

this was one of the many Twi'leki clans which were native to the planet Ryloth. In the Twi'leki language, the clan's name meant "heroic". (GCG)

Nilko Bwaas

this Selkath was one of the first of his people to notice that Selkath youths were signing on to become mercenaries for the Old Republic, then mysteriously disappearing, during the height of the Great Sith War. He approached several Jedi Knights to inquire about this situation, and the Jedi investigation revealed a Sith plot to trick the youths and infiltrate the Selkath. (KOTOR)

Nillik

this Imperial Navy sensor master served under Captain Gegak, aboard the Tobay. (TT)

Nilmod

this Ithorian surname was believed to mean "farmer" or "cultivator", according to historian who studied the Ithorian race. (GCG)

Nilo

this man was an acquaintance of Dair Haslip, and was a Lieutenant serving with the Imperial forces who occupied Garos IV during the early years of the New Republic. (SWJ2, SWJ12)

Nilo

this Rodisar was one of the many gladiators who were fighting in the Blood Sport of Rattatak when Asajj Ventress submitted her name as a combatant. Nilo was, at one time, a General in the armed forces of his homeworld fo Rodis, until he and his command crew were captured by a group of Zygerian slavers and brought to Rattatak. Nilo was purchased by a Rattataki warlord and forced to fight in the gladiator arenas.

Despite his rank, Nilo was little more than a brawler, having earned his rank by bribing corrupt Rodisar politicians. He exploits were due primarily to the work of his commanders. Nilo's one and only fight was in The Cauldron against Asaji Ventress, a fight that quickly ended with Nilo's death. (SWDB)

Ni'lyahin Smugglers

this band of smugglers struggled for many years under the oppression of the Empire, until the Battle of Yavin gave them a way to strike back. In the wake of the destruction of the first Death Star, the Ni'lyahin Smugglers began salvaging material from the wreckage. Anything and everything the smugglers found was later sold at a huge profit on the black market, allowing them to fight their own kind of war against the Empire. The Ni'lyahin Smugglers established a base of operations in the nearby Ferrous Aurora Nebula, to ensure their salvage rights weren't stolen. (SWGAL)

Nilzilun

this was the name of a noted Vuvrian individual. (UANT)

Nim

this short, rotund man was a General in the Imperial armed forces, shortly before the Battle of Yavin. He was ordered by Darth Vader to destroy the Icarrii, and laid out plans with Colonel Abal Karda as to their destruction. Karda carried out his orders perfectly, but managed to capture the Icarrii queen, Selestrine. Vader wanted her brought to him, and Nim was dispatched to recover her disembodied head. However, Karda grew jealous and angry, and his mental condition deteriorated. He killed Nim and his guards in order to retain possession of the head, then fled the Empire and was labeled a fugitive. (EOE)

Nim

this identity, used by Pike Angeles, was an Imperial Lieutenant Commander who served in the Military Intelligence branch. (CRO)

Nim Abek

this red Nikto was a pirate who worked for the Nalroni crimelord Sprax. He chose to shorten his full name - Nim'abek'shy-wedell - to make it easier for non-Nikto to communicate with him. He began his career as a freelance pirate working the Sisar Run, until his gang preyed upon one of Sprax's starships. The vigo brought him in, and Nim Abek was surprised when the Nalroni offered him a job instead of executing him. Since then, Nim Abek has been given command of some 100 pirates, plying the spacelanes of the Sisar Run. He maintained a shadowport just beyond the intersection of the Sisar Run and the Ac'fren Spur, known as Abek's Station, to further his own goals. When he learned that information about Black Sun's operations along the Sisar Run were up for sale by Limna Yith, Abek tried to obtain the information before Sprax learned of it, in order to lessen Sprax's stature in the eyes of Prince Xizor. (SSR)

Nim Drovis

the New Republic maintained a Sector Medical Hospital and Research Facility on this planet, located in the Meridian Sector. It is a hot, humid world which was little more than a mudball covered with thick growths of fungus. (POT, EGP)

Nima

this was a common name given to Twi'lek females, and meant "gift" in the Twi'leki language. (GCG)

Nima

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Nim'abek'shy-wedell

this was the full name of the red Nikto Nim Abek. (SSR)

Niman

this was the ancient term used to describe the Form VI lightsaber fighting style. Note that the Wizards of the Coast website indicates that the Niman style of fighting was unique, allowing a Jedi to wield two lightsabers at once. One blade was always used for offense, while the other could be used for parrying or for additional attacks. Although many Jedi trained in the Niman style to gain basic knowledge of a two-bladed attack, very few ever mastered it completely. (SWI68, WOTC, VD3)

Nima'tar

this noted Twi'lek female was a scholar known for her treatises and theories on the civilization and society of the Hutts. During her education, Nima'tar was a singer for a small jazz band, traveling the galaxy in order to earn enough credits to pay for her schooling. Unfortunately, Nima'tar and her band accepted a gig with Jabba the Hutt, and her bandmates sold her into slavery in order to buy passage off Tatooine. Nima'tar was forced to work as a dancer for Jabba, all the while collecting notes and data for her doctorate work. She used her wits and brains - and some help from Tamtel Skreej - to escape from Jabba and return to school, completing her education. (T8)

Nimba 5

this remote planet is along the space lane to the homeworld of the grumph. (TMEC)

Nimban

this planet is the homeworld of the Nimbanese race, and is the primary planet in the Nimban System. Its surface is covered with rolling plains. (GG12)

Nimbanel

the name used to describe a single Nimbanese. (GG12)

Nimbanese

this humanoid race has hairless, walrus-like heads without tusks, and stringy reddish beards. A single member of the species is called a Nimbanel. The Nimbanese race is reptilian, but has a warm-blooded metabolism. As a race, they are regarded as arrogant and snobbish, but they place great value in knowledge and ethics. Native to the planet Nimban, they evolved from herbivorous creatures faced with increasingly resilient plant species. They have become highly adept at solving complex puzzles and questions, and turned to mental battles when many races would have initiated wars. They have been instrumental in the Bureau of Ships and Services and various banks throughout the galaxy, although they were once expelled from the BoSS when an ancient Nimbanel threatened to harm a BoSS family. They managed to merge back into the BoSS arena with the help of the Hutts, who regularly employ Nimbanese as accountants and negotiators. (GG12, CCG)

Nimbanese

this was the native language of the Nimbanese people. (GMR8)

Nimbi, Jasper

this man was a doctor, and was in charge of the recovery of Eelysa shortly before the Second Battle of Coruscant. Doctor Nimbi found himself treating Leia Organa Solo as well, when she was transported to Corellia by her husband, Han, to allow her to recover from the injuries she sustained during the Battle of Duro. Nimbi was sympathetic to the Jedi Knights, even in the face of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion, and maintained tight security in his facility so that Eelysa could heal. (REC)

Nimbia

this gas giant was the fourth planet in the Nubus System. It was orbited by eight moons. (CCW)

Nimbus Rider 2000

Gefferon's Hutt floater, this 4-meter craft was designed for those Hutts who couldn't afford a luxurious sail barge or a larger floater. (DE1, DESB)

Nimbus Soldiers

this was a group of elite ground troops assigned to Alto Stratus and his Separatist armies on the planet Jabiim, during the height of the Clone Wars. It was the Nimbus Soldiers, along with their supporting troops of battle droids, which attacked and devastated the Old Republic's Shelter Base, during the opening weeks of hostilities on Jabiim. (SWI69, RBJ)

Nimbus, The

Nime

this port city was located on the planet Roon. (EGP)

Nimgorrhean Saber-wasp

this is a species of swarming insect. (SLS)

Nimondro

this Hobor was the leader of his people, and represented them at the peace talks conducted by the Tion Hegemony. He had a deep hatred of the Troobs, and chose to speak only Tahlboorean in their presence. This was a ploy by Chief Nimondro, for he could understand and speak fluent Basic, but held onto this trump card to gain the upper hand against the Troobs. Nimondro also controlled Mount Yeroc, and used it to demonstrate his powerful position during the negotiations with Counselor Harthan. His daughter, Larka, was the light of his life, and when she was framed for the murder of Ket Krax, he was furious. When she told him that she was in love with Ket, he realized she was innocent, and prepared to use sky cannon inside Mount Yeroc to defend against an impending Troob attack. However, C-3PO and R2-D2 were able to convince him to let them use the sky cannon for its true purpose while exposing Jake Harthan as the killer. Nimondro then agreed to work with the elder Krax to hammer out a real peace agreement. (DRPC)

Nim'Ri

this yellow-scaled Trandoshan male was the head of security for House Hirskaala, on the planet Cularin, during the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo. It was later discovered that Nim'Ri was also one of the founding members of the underground alliance which sprang up on Cularin, in response to the build-up of power by the Metatheran Cartel. Nim'Ri quit his job with House Hirskaala to join the resistance, believing that the freedom of Cularin was much more important than an individual trading concern. Shortly after the onset of the Clone Wars, Nim'ri suddenly disappeared, although rumors began to circulate that he was "headed home." Most natives of Cularin could not believe this rumor, since Nim'Ri had been born on Cularin. They did, however, believe that Nim'Ri had been captured and possibly executed by the Thaereian Military for his rebellious actions. (EOS, LFCW)

Nin

this ancient Senali woman was Ganeed's elder mother. (SP)

Nin Nemb

an Alliance starfighter pilot, Commander Nemb was fatally wounded in the Cobolt Offensive, but managed to return his starfighter to the rendezvous point before he died. (RASB)

Nina Dar'Eboros

this was a noted figure in Balosar history. (UANT)

Ninchif

this small fish lived deep below ground on the planet Tatooine, existing in tiny, water-filled caves. They were harvested for their tasty flesh, and they were often served fried. (BF4)

Nine Corellian Hells, The

the Corellian people believed that there were nine distinct levels of Hell into which a being would fall, if they were deemed unworthy after death. Many Corellians used an oath similar to "Where in the Nine Corellian Hells am I?" when they were unexpectedly lost. (T)

Nine Families

see Nine Ruling Families (SQ)

Nine Moons, The

this was a mystical reference used by the natives of the planet Tirahnn. (LTA1, MCA1)

Nine Ruling Families

this was one Chiss term used to describe the ruling families of the Chiss Ascendancy. Each family was equally represented in the Chiss government, although they went to great lengths to ensure that family identity was eliminated wherever possible. The leaders of the Chiss did not use names, but instead wore colorful robes to distinguish themselves. This helped ensure that decisions were reached in a fair and equitable method. Note that Force Heretic II: Refugee indicates that there were four Chiss families. (SQ)

Niner

this clone commando - officially known as RC-1309 - was one of the many commandos who survived the Battle of Geonosis. The remainder of his squad was killed in the fighting on Geonosis, and Niner was force-fit into a new squad, known as Omega Squad. (RHC)

Nineteenth Battle of Zehava

this struggle for control of the city of Zehava was initiated by the Melida just six months after the Eighteenth Battle. The Daan had used the underground tunnels and drains of Zehava to gain access to Melida-held territory, and soundly defeated them. (DOD)

Ningal's Droid Repair

this droid repair facility was located on the planet Vannix, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (EL2)

Nink

this was the name given to one of a pair of dwarf opee sea killers kept at the Otoh Gunga Zoological Research Facility before the Battle of Naboo. The dwarf opees were the facility's rarest and most valuable specimens. Despite being just as vicious as their larger cousins, Nink and Vink were also able to understand simple commands after being trained by the researchers. (E1A9)

Ninn

a planet known for its devoted priesthood. They wear green vestments that serve to announce their devotion. (HSR)

Ninopas Orocc

this male Gran and his partner, Botlat Rej, were small-time criminals on the planet Coruscant during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. After Orocc vandalized a hover platform with Cornesian wax, the platform malfunctioned, causing the deaths of three Senators. Orocc fled Coruscant, and a bounty was established for his capture by the Coruscant police force. Orocc hid on Tatooine for a while before traveling to the Outland Transit Station. There, he was captured by Jango Fett and held for questioning. (BH)

Ninth Aquatic Zone

sometimes called AquaZone 9, this was the final destination of students of the Galactic Outdoor Survival School, during their gruelling "final examination." It was noted for its green sand beaches. (AIR)

Ninth Fleet

this was one of the primary naval units of the Old Republic, during the height of the Clone Wars. (MBS)

Ninth Quadrant

an area of the galaxy, located in the Outer Rim Territories between the Greeb-Streebling Cluster and the Noopiths. (COJ)

Nio

this Rodian worked as a taxi driver on the planet Redcap, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ5)

Niobarium

this was a poisonous chemical. (APS)

Niovi

this man was the ranking Imperial Colonel serving aboard the Guardian during the early years of the New Republic. Colonel Niovi was placed in charge of security aboard the ship by Admiral Gaen Drommel himself, during the time they spent repairing the huge ship near Soulllex. He didn't agree with Drommel's methods, and when the New Republic tried to take possession of the Guardian, Niovi shot Drommel dead and assumed control. Niovi then surrendered the ship and her crew to Cryle Cavv and Sienn Sconn. (SWJ15)

Nipasa

a Ripoblus escort shuttle operative during the Sepan Civil War. It was used in the Sepan battles against the Empire. (TIE)

Nipper

this was one of several scavenger species native to the planet Lutrillia. Like the larger chompers, nippers fed on all manner of inorganic material, and a pack of nippers could dismantle a stalled vehicle or other mechanical item in short order. (WOA33)

Nippet

a baby Ewok, Nippet was born to Chief Chirpa and his second wife. Kneesaa often babysat for Nippet, who was the younger sister of Kneesaa's friend Latara. (ROTJ, ECAR)

Nippett

according to Ewok legend, this great hunter married a water spirit. (GCG)

Nippett

this was a common name for Ewok males. Like other Ewok names, it referred to a spirit or character in the Ewoks' mythology. This name could also be spelled "Nippet". (GCG)

Niquon

this Jedi Master was the teacher of Nason Laric. Niquon maintained a retreat on the moon Skalokor, where he often trained his apprentice. (GMR10)

Nir Kento

this was a noted member of the Nagai race. (UANT)

Nir, N'zaet

this Corellian man, a member of the Corellian Security Force's Direx board, was a native of the planet Mayro. During a trip to Coruscant, during the height of the Clone Wars, Nir was among the hostages taken when Senator Meena Tills was captured by Nuriin-Ar. After the situation was diffused by the actions of Omega Squad, it was discovered that Nir was the actual target of the terrorists. The Corporate Sector Authority and CorSec might have been given enough reason to join the Separatists if Nir had been killed. In order to ensure his death, the terrorists dressed him in the clothing of one of their own, knowing that Omega Squad would be firing at the individuals who were wearing certain outfits. However, the intervention of Kal Skirata meant that Nir was covered when the clone commandos entered the room, and Skirata barely kept Fi from shooting them both. (SWI81)

Nira Sivrak

this Shistavanen female was Lak Sivrak's mother. Nira and her husband, Tagg, made great sacrifices to ensure that Lak was sent to school away from Uvena Prime. (EGA)

Nirama

this strange alien - a member of the Oblee race - was the major crimelord active in the Cularin System during the last years of the Old Republic. Nirama started out in the crime business as one of Riboga the Hutt's chief lieutenants. Despite his position within the organization, Nirama despised slavery, and often turned a blind eye to that part of Riboga's business. Unknown to Riboga, however, Nirama had been manipulating events behind his back. Nirama was also skimming profits and falsifying records to make it appear that Riboga's operations were unprofitable. Then, during a high-stakes sabacc match, Nirama played Riboga into a position where he was forced to put up control of his criminal organization as collateral. Riboga, fearing that the organization would destroy him, gladly turned over control to Nirama upon losing the final hand. Nirama then assumed control, and set up his base of operations in the Cularin System's asteroid belt. Nirama ensured that his hold on the belt was legalized by purchasing the rights to the largest asteroid. In an effort to put a better spin on the work he and other crimelords were doing in the Cularin System, Nirama agreed to be interviewed by Yara Grugara for the Eye on Cularin newsfeed. He spoke in the third person, never referring to himself as "I," and barely restrained his anger at Grugara's ingratiating demeanor. Nirama's empire was known by the simple title of The Consortium, and referred to the entire scope of his relationships. He demanded unswerving loyalty to the Consortium, and detractors such as the fringe group known as The Cell were swiftly dealt with. Despite his criminal background, Nirama was outwardly loyal to the Cularin System, and made sure that his public intentions were always of the best nature. He even claimed that his ouster of Riboga was in the best interests of Cularin. (LFC, LFCW)

Niran

this planet was subjugated by the Empire, but the underground resistance eventually joined forces with the Alliance and threw off the Imperial yoke of control. (SWJ12)

Niran Resistance

this group of underground freedom fighters rose up on the planet Niran after the Empire subjugated the planet. The Niran Resistance eventually joined the Alliance, and was able to free the planet from Imperial control. (SWJ12)

Nirauan

this is the second and primary world in the Nirauan system, located in Gradilis Sector. It was here that Faughn and Mara Jade plotted the course of the strange starships which began showing up around the time of the discovery of the Caamas Document. Jade went to investigate, and was stranded on the planet. A dim red star is the central body of the system. Nirauan itself is a drab, seemingly lifeless world when viewed from space, with dull browns and grays dominating the surface. The planet was covered in vegetations, however, although the normally green color had given way to the duller colors in order to survive in the pale light received from its sun. The rocky strata of the planet is riddled with veins of cortosis ore. Hidden deep in a cave, Jade found the entrance to a huge fortress which was similar to those located on Hijarna. Inside the cave, she found a group of mynock-like creatures that seemed to communicate by sending thoughts through the Force. They later revealed themselves to be of two races, the Qom Qae and the Qom Jha. They registered a marked reaction when she talked about Luke Skywalker. The planet was also the site of the fortress known as the Hand of Thrawn, a five-towered citadel maintained by the Chiss in hopes of Thrawn's reappearance ten years after his death. (SOP, VOF)

Nirbella Tanless

this was the name of a noted member of Nimbanese society. (UANT)

Niree

this woman served as the Captain of the Lant Mining Corporation prospecting ship Pulverizer. She was distinguished by her cybernetic arm, the souvenir of a mining accident. (FBS)

Nirellian Groundslug

this is a species of long, fat, ground-dwelling mollusks. (MA)

Niriz, Dagon

this Imperial Navy Captain came from a long line of Old Republic and Imperial Navy officers, but found that he didn't have the desire of his forefathers. Nevertheless, he strove to be the best officer he could become. He graduated with honors, and was given the command of a Star Destroyer. His tactical skills, however, caught the notice of his superiors, and he was transferred to a position within the military command on Coruscant. Niriz got caught up in the promotions of Admiral Thrawn and Captain Parck, and was removed from his advisory position when Thrawn was exiled. Niriz was given command of the Star Destroyer Admonitor shortly after the Battle of Yavin, and then spent several years under the command of Admiral, then Grand Admiral, Thrawn in the Unknown Regions. Niriz fumed inwardly at being assigned to Thrawn, especially since Thrawn was an alien and he'd had nothing to do with Thrawn's exile. When Thrawn began dealing with the alien pirate Creysis, Niriz was approached by General Haverel, who had planned to relieve the Admiral of command. Niriz nearly agreed to Haverel's plans, but stopped short of full mutiny. He did, however, tender his resignation to Thrawn after the discussion with Haverel. Thrawn denied the request, citing Niriz's support of Thrawn during the battle with Creysis. He captured the freighter Hopskip as it was making a weapons run to Derra IV, and commandeered the crew to perform a mission for him. He was working with Grand Admiral Thrawn - who was disguised as Jodo Kast - to smoke out the agents of Black Sun on Corellia. They were successful in the mission, having usurped the services of Haber Trell and Maranne Darmic, who were transporting Riij Winward and Rathe Palror to Derra IV along with a cache of weapons. The second part of Thrawn's plan involved the tampering with their cargo, placing homing beacons within the various crates to help determine their destination. This allowed the Empire to track the Alliance to Derra IV shortly before the Battle of Hoth. (TFE, SWJ11)

Niroida

this female Tarasin served as the Mother of the Vriisan irstat before Kasslan as elected. Like other leaders before her, Niroida heard the stories of Reidi Artom's first visit to Cularin and her relationship with the Vriisan, and passed them on to Kasslan when she died. (LFCW)

Nirrani

this was one of the many tribes of Tarasin which was native to the planet Cularin. (LFCW)

Nirrock

this was one of the more common names given to males of the Mon Calamari race. To the Mon Calamari, this name meant "gold" or "golden". (GCG)

Niru

this feline humanoid was part of a rogue group of Alliance supporters who worked from a hidden base in the Cantros System, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Unlike most of her group, Niru didn't believe that the war against the Empire would be won with more violence. Her views were not shared by Durne, who simply wanted to take control of the Cantros System. He tried to murder her, to silence her voice, but Luke Skywalker prevented him from completing the task. Niru herself captured Durne before he could escape. (MC93)

Niruu

this Alwari clan, native to the Niruu Plateau of the planet Ansion, was noted for their exquisite woodworkings. (APS)

Niruu Plateau

this flatland was located on the grassy plains of Ansion. (APS)

Nirzru

this was a common name among the Filordi race. (UANT)

Nisbat

this small insect was raised by the Yuuzhan Vong as an organic tracking mechanism. Each nisbat in a hatching could sense the presence of its hatchmates over a distance. As one member got closer to another, the nisbat would emit a bussing noise. This buzzing got louder as the nisbat neared its hatchmate. Thus, the Yuuzhan Vong could implant a nisbat into the body of a being and use another nisbat - a hatchmate of the implant - to locate the being by the strength of the buzzing sound. (EL2)

Nisemia Thread

Nish

this sentient race of near-humans is native to the planet Nishr. They were subjugated by the Empire during the height of the New Order, and were reluctant to assist the Alliance Special Forces unit which arrived on the planet. They allowed the group - which became known as the Nishr Taskforce - to set up bases on the planet, but remained neutral in the conflict in order to avoid Imperial retribution. The Nish were in a period of industrial revolution at the time of the Battle of Yavin. (ROE)

Ni'Shaw

this deity was one of the many gods worshipped by the ancient Unfyr Warriors. Ni'Shaw was a minor god, and represented both war and wisdom. According to legend, Ni'Shaw only had two prophets, whereas all other Jydan deities had three prophets. Ni'Shaw was therefore doomed to be forgotten until he found his third prophet. Thus, the leader of the Ni'Shaw-Dak Ministry was referred to as the Third Prophet. Worship of Ni'Shaw rose to prominence through the work of Kaltor Naklian, who founded the Ni'Shaw-Dak Ministry. (AIR)

Ni'Shaw-Dak Ministry

this religion was founded by Kaltor Naklian, and was a derivative of the Jydan religion of the Unfyr Warriors. It was also the most prevalent religion on the planet V'shar. This religion was dedicated to the worship of Ni'Shaw, who fell out of favor among the Jydan after their downfall. Despite Ni'Shaw's minor position among the Jydan gods, the Ministry gained a great following and eventually commanded enough power to influence the government of V'shar. The Ministry was led by a its Third Prophet, who was supported by twelve Al'ma'den priests. Individual ministries were run by Shafar priests. Despite his loyalty to the Zulirian Swordmasters, Kaltor maintained separate accounts for the Ministry, and never let the two missions interfere with each other. Among the Ministry's primary laws were the ideas that wisdom was gained through vanquishing one's enemies, and that the best warriors were those who were mightiest in sword and mind. (AIR)

Nishr

this Outer Rim planet was initially scouted by a team of Alliance SpecForce Wilderness Fighters and Pathfinders, who eventually established a base on the planet and became known as the Nishr Taskforce. They were originally just gathering intelligence on the Imperial presence on the planet, but became a fixture in an effort to harass the Imperials into leaving. The Imperials had garrisoned the planet just nineteen months before the Battle of Yavin. It was a temperate world of rolling plains, low mountains, and the occasional desert. (ROE)

Nishr Base Seven

located on the continent of Feldt, on Nishr, this was the primary base of operations of the Alliance's Nishr Taskforce. The base itself was created from an abandoned mining operation deep in the Lukhur Badlands. (ROE)

Nishr Base Ten

this was the smallest base maintained by the Alliance's Nishr Taskforce during the Galactic Civil War. It was located in the highland caves of the planet. (ROE)

Nishr Base Three

this was a stopover base maintained by the Alliance's Nishr Taskforce during the Galactic Civil War. It was located in the Shirshir Desert, and housed a hidden power station in the midst of an oasis. (ROE)

Nishr Suppression

this was the name given to the campaign in which Governor-General Vin Kollis and his Imperial troops wiped out a large portion of the Nish population in order to secure the Imperial garrison on Nishr, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (ROE)

Nishr Taskforce

this Alliance Special Forces unit was made up of a pair of Wilderness Fighter platoons and a Pathfinder platoon. They were the first group to scout the planet Nishr, which eventually became their home base. A SpecOps mission group and an Intelligence agent were attached to the taskforce for unusual support.

The taskforce was under the command of Fisk Csino during the Galactic Civil War. Their mission was defined after the original scouting party discovered the large Imperial presence on the planet. Their commanding officers deemed it important for them to remain on Nishr and harass the Imperial garrison, in an effort to draw reinforcement to the planet from other worlds. This would have allowed the Alliance to promote other actions during a lull in Imperial forces elsewhere. The mission was poorly planned, but forged moderate success over the years. (ROE)

Niuk

this name was common among Sullustan males, and meant "handsome". (GCG)

Niuk Niuv

this New Republic Senator, a native of the planet Sullust, was a member of the Advisory Council during the start of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion. He was not supportive of Luke Skywalker's plans to re-establish the Jedi Council, in order to better control the actions of the growing Jedi population. Many rumors spoke of Niuk Niuv's own ties to the smugglers that the vigilante Jedi led by Kyp Durron were taking out of business, and hinted that his dislike of the Jedi was based more on lost profits than anything else. When Leia Organa Solo petitioned the Senate to address the Yuuzhan Vong invasion, Niuk Niuv accused Leia of trying to deflect the issue of the renegade Jedi with wildly exaggerated views of the threat. Later, when it was learned that the Yuuzhan Vong planned to attack either Corellia or Bothawui, Niuv argued that Corellia be left undefended so that Bothawui could be saved. Niuk Niuv was one of few members of the Advisory Council to reach Borleias, in the wake of the Second Battle of Coruscant. He joined with Senator Pwoe in trying to restore the Advisory Council, but soon realized that Pwoe's motives were purely personal. When the call came out from Calamari for the Senate to reconvene there, Niuk Niuv abandoned Pwoe and traveled to Calamari. There, however, Niuk Niuv remained a vocal proponent of eradicating the Yuuzhan Vong completely, much to the chagrin of Cal Omas and the Jedi Knights. Note that this character is sometimes referred to as Niuv Niuv. (VP, DTO, JE, WOTC, EL1, DW, FH1)

Niuv

this surname was common among the Sullustan race, and meant "water warden" in the Sullustan language. (GCG)

Nive, Jacob

the captain of the CR90 corvette Backstab, Jacob Nive was one of the few Eyttyrmin Batiiv pirates to survive the Imperial attack that destroyed them. Nive was a young but shrewd tactician who fiercely hated the Empire. The survivors of the Eyttyrmin pirates rallied around Nive, who earned their respect. He was a tall, well-built man with long, blond hair he drew into an impressive braid. The Survivors retreated to Elrood Sector, and established a foothold there by raiding Imperial convoys destined for Derilyn and Berea. When he first met Shondra Del, Nive was suspicious as to her motives. However, when she identified herself as a member of the Alliance, Nive began working with her as part of Operation: Elrood. His assistance ended with the destruction of the Brazen, and the Khuiumin Survivors went back to raiding Imperial convoys. When Corran began taking strides toward defeating the Invids, he was joined by Luke Skywalker in an effort to destroy Leonia Tavira and rescue Mirax Terrik from Suarbi 7/5. Before they left, they confided in Jacob their subterfuge and their plans, and offered him a chance to redeem himself and the Survivors as members of the New Republic. Nive greatly accepted the chance, and left Invid service. (GG9, OE, IJ)

Nivek

this planet had an unusual orbit path that kept it in the shadow of a larger in-system planet throughout much of its year. This meant that the planet's surface was almost always in shadow, sometimes pitch blackness. The landscape of Nivek was dominated by barren, rocky plains, although strange forms of succulents managed to grow in those areas that received minimal light. This unique arrangement earned Nivek the nickname "Night Planet", and probably led to the common name of Shadowmen for its native sentient race. A Separatist base was established on Nivek during the height of the Clone Wars, and Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker were dispatched to destroy it. (CWA1)

Nivek

this red-skinned humanoid was one of Jabba the Hutt's many followers who lived in the Hutt's palace on Tatooine. Nivek has strange, blue appendages sprouting from his head. He was secretly employed by Bib Fortuna to round up as many men as possible in one of the Twi'lek's first plots to kill Jabba. Nivek managed to recruit six beings, and Fortuna's plot was hatched. Unfortunately, it was launched the same day as Gru'um Ropple's plan, and the two became entangled. Nivek was attacked by a frekker released by Ropple, and pleaded with Fortuna to save him. He began to speak of Fortuna's plot, and Fortuna shot him in the head. Fortuna later claimed he was trying to remove the frekker. (JTH)

Nivek'Yppiks

Nizzal

the chief supply officer serving aboard the FarStar during its search for Moff Sarne, Nizzal was one of three Turazza sisters who joined the crew with Loh'khar. The trio of small aliens had hatched from their eggs while in the hands of Loh'khar, and immediately bonded to him. Nizzal was the unspoken leader of the trio, and worked for Loh'khar as a dealer. However, she showed none of the loyalty that Rizzal and Vizzal did. Nizzal defected from the FarStar with Khzam, after the Rodian's past with the Sabiador Slavers was revealed. Nizzal hid the Rodian aboard the Muvon and travelled with the crew to Uukaablis. Once on the ground, Khzam waited until everyone was off the ship before taking control and stealing it. (DARK, KO)

Nizzon

this severe man served the Imperial Navy as a Lieutenant, serving under the command of Captain Plikk during the years surrounding the Battle of Hoth. Nizzon and Plikk witnessed the Millennium Falcon suddenly jumping into another dimension of space, when their hyperdrive malfunctioned some time after the Battle of Hoth. They both hoped that the discovery of inter-dimensional travel would earn them great favor with the Emperor. However, Nizzon and Plikk's entire fleet were stranded in the interdimensional rift when Sunn-Childe allowed them to destroy his floating city. Plikk's ships were forced to drain all power from their hyperdrive systems in order to destroy it, leaving the fleet with no way to return to realspace. (MC46)

NJ Opuh

Nkllon

a super-hot planet located in the Athega system, Nkllon's mantle and core were rich in metallic ores. Due to its proximity to its sun, the surface of the planet was an uninhabitable wasteland that was bombarded by intense heat and radiation during the day, and frozen at night. Lando Calrissian modified an idea proposed by Ecclessis Figg, and used a mobile mining operation to mine the dark side of the planet. Some five years after the Battle of Endor, Grand Admiral Thrawn attacked the planet twice. The first attack was aimed at obtaining some of Lando's mole miners for use in the attack on Sluis Van. The second was an attack to neutralize a primary source of ore for the New Republic. Sometime afterward, Lando was ready to rebuilt his Nomad City mining operation, but he lost the planet in a sabacc match. The planet's rotational period lasted 3,527 standard hours, or just over ninety standard days. Thus, the planet's "year," one complete orbit around its sun, lasted only 5 local days. (HTTE, HTSB, JS)

Nkllonian Lava Extract

this illegal drug was named for its color, which many thought looked as if it had been taken directly from the molten rock of the planet Nkllon. It was one of many illegal substances that appeared in the underworld of Coruscant during the last years of the Old Republic. (BF6)

NLZ5-11

this was the model number of SoroSuub's Dragon suit of power armor. It was built with the Sullustan physiology in mind, and was developed for use by SoroSuub's security forces, but could be adapted for use by other humanoid races. Unfortunately, about the time that SoroSuub allied itself with the Empire, the prototype suit of Dragon armor was stolen, and the suit was never mass-produced. (GUN, SWJ3)

NM-KO-28

this was the identification code of the repulsorcraft stolen by Jacen and Jaina Solo during their escape from the CorDuro Shipping headquarters on Duggan Station. Access to the craft was provided to Jacen by Gnosos, while Jacen was imprisoned by Durgard Brarun. (BP)

N'Mrith

this catfish-headed alien, distinguished by his red scales and long fang-like teeth, was Jabba the Hutt's primary agent on the planet Formos, during the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. N'Mrith was native to a warm, humid planet, and needed to regularly moisten his skin when off-planet. He was captured by Imperial stormtroopers on Formos, just after Chewbacca rescued Hronk from the prison ship commanded by Colonel Quirt. It was discovered that N'Mrith had doubled-crossed Chewbacca and his partner, Han Solo, providing the Imperials with a tip that Han would be transporting a large load of spice off Formos.

Because Hronk was never found, and no spice was detected on the Millennium Falcon, N'Mrith was sent to the Spice Mines of Kessel for his duplicity. (MC11)

N'Noch

this was a specialized mask created by an unknown race. It fit the wearer's facial features snugly, but outwardly revealed nothing of the actual shape of the face. The mask's contours flared upward above the eyes, creating a pair of "horns." Coloration could either be random or patterned, depending on the owner's desires. (WSV)

No Luck Required

this starship was owned and operated by Uldir Lochett, during the early decades of the New Republic. The chassis of the craft was that of an old Corellian YZ-775 medium transport, which had been refitted and updated to more modern technologies and weapons. Inside the ship's hangar were several snubfighters, four modified A-Wings with room for a single passenger and emergency medical supplies. The two weapons emplacements had been heavily modified; one to hold a cesium-vapor turbolaser and a proton torpedo launcher, and the other simply removed to make room for the hangar. The targetting computer added for the turbolaser also served to help fire proton torpedoes. The slots for escape pods were removed to make more room for the hangar, but the A-Wings in the hangar served as escape craft in a pinch. The ship was badly damaged when Uldir managed to locate the rogue Jedi Knight Klin-Fa Gi, who used her lightsaber to slash through bulkheads to reach the hangar bay. She then stole a starfighter and blasted her way out, leaving the ship venting atmosphere. Uldir's crew managed to patch the leak and travel to Wayland, in an effort to recapture Gi. Noble this Invincible-class Dreadnaught was lost centuries before the Battle of Yavin. Its crew was distinguished from other Old Republic crew in that the humans on board all had green hair. (AIR)

Noble Sacrifice

this Yuuzhan Vong warship was believed to have been the first ship to locate the rogue planet Zonama Sekot in the Klasse Ephemora System, during the height of the aliens' invasion of the galaxy. Upon arriving at Coruscant, which had been reformed into a simulacrum of Yuuzhan'tar, the Noble Sacrifice was destroyed in orbit, on the pretense that it carried saboteurs. A yorik-trema landing craft managed to escape, and it was believed that this ship carried Commadner Ekh'm Val to the surface. (FH3)

Nobo

Nocturne of the Winged-Stars

this unusual, natural event took place every 300 years on the planet Caluula. Scientists from across the galaxy gathered on Caluula to investigate its origins and triggers. During the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Caluula was expected to experience another Nocturne, shortly after the Battle of Ebaq. During the Nocturne, thousands upon thousands of winged-stars emerged from their chitinous shells and began their mating dance. Unlike other species which were similar in physiology, such as the drone-flitter, the winged-star had just a single day to attract a mate, then successfully fertilize and lay their eggs. What made the winged-star even more unusual was that its eggs took the next 299 years to incubate and hatch. Thus, it lived its entire life in one brief day. It was this day that drew scientists from across the galaxy to witness the Nocturne. (UF)

Nod, Lorian

as a youth, Lorian trained to become a Jedi Padawan at the same time as a young Dooku, some 68 years before the Clone Wars. They were the best of friends during the early years of their training, sharing their education as well as a number of schemes. Lorian was always a bit more reckless than Dooku, but their different personalities meshed well, until Dooku's incredible skill with the Force made him a favorite among the teachers. When Dooku was chosen to be the Padawan of Thame Cerulian, and Lorian was passed over several times, Lorian was left to ponder his own future. He hoped to impress the Jedi Masters by stealing a Sith Holocron and learning new skills from it, but he imposed on Dooku to cover for him when he was caught. Dooku refused, and eventually Lorian was expelled from the Jedi Temple. He refused to take a position in the Agricultural Corps, and set out on his own. Harboring nothing but ill-will toward the Jedi, Lorian began building his own base of power. Using his connection to the Force, he bullied beings into providing him funding, then established the Caravan corporation as a front for his illegal activities. Posing as a pirate, Lorian began kidnapping Old Republic Senators and holding them for ransom. While attempting to capture Blix Annon, Lorian ran into Dooku once again. Dooku was now a Jedi Master, and he and his Padawan Qui-Gon Jinn set out to arrest Lorian. Lorian managed to capture them on Von-Alai, shortly after kidnapping Senator Blix Annon. When Annon died of a heart attack while in captivity, Nod suddenly found himself in a lot more trouble. Dooku managed to capture Nod and have him sent to Coruscant for jailing. Thirty years later, Lorian appeared on Junction 5, where he was given command of the Guardians police force. His bloodless assumption of power would have been perfect, if the chance arrival of Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi hadn't helped expose his plans. Once again, Nod was sent to prison, and was again eventually released. He returned to Junction 5, and used his skills to help restore peace to the planet he had tried to conquer. During the early months of the Clone Wars, he returned to Coruscant, ostensibly to offer his assistance to the Republic. Obi-Wan refused to believe his sincerity in offering his help, and Lorian could do nothing but work to prove him wrong. When the founders of the Station 88 Spaceport met with Count Dooku on the planet Null, Lorian decided that he could not support Dooku and the Separatist movement. Dooku tried to eliminate the leaders and flee, but Lorian chased after him, hoping to finally rectify all the wrongs he had done in his life. Unfortunately, before he could stop Dooku, the Count pierced him through the chest with his lightsaber. Lorian died as he took hold of the Force one last time. (LOJ)

Nod, Seib

this woman was a frequent patron of Coruscant's Outlander Club during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis, despite the fact that she always wore an blood-red, ankle-length robe that was attached to a unique facial screen that completely hid her true identity. (SWI75)

Noda

this Imperial Army Major was ostensibly in command of the ground forces which invaded the moon of Sulon, shortly before the Battle of Yavin. (SFE)

Nodgra System

Abdi-Badawzi ran a small operation in the system, during the early years of the New Order. (SWJ2)

Nodon

a Cathar from the same litter as Nonak, Nodon and his sibling joined up with Burrk to hunt for some of the galaxy's most desired furs and pelts. They eventually settled on obtaining Wampa pelts from Hoth, and had been fairly successful. That was, until they agreed to take Drom Guldi on a hunt. During the hunt, the Wampas had gotten smart, and had ambushed them at their ship. The Wampas inadvertently started the ship's auto-destruct sequence, which completed before the Wampas were removed from the ship. The ship exploded, stranding the entire party on Hoth. They were later discovered by Luke Skywalker and Callista, who were on Hoth trying to regain Callista's powers. He was injured in a Wampa attack, and was later killed in yet another attack, this one inside their base. (DS)

Noe'ha'on this planet is home to the Noehon race, as well as the k'lor'slug. (GG12, CCG)

Noehon

a race of four-armed insectoids from the planet Noe'ha'on, the Noehons have a savage culture. They stand on two legs, and they are covered with bristly hairs. The eyes of a Noehon are multi-faceted, with each facet having a specific range of vision. Some facets are used for detailed analysis, while others are for detecting motion. They exude a strong scent from glands in their cheeks, and use this scent to mark their territory. A pair of strong mandibles surrounds the Noehon mouth. They are excellent climbers. The Noehon race is obsessed with order and discipline, and are focused on maintaining heirarchies in their society. Their family groups are known as Welds, and consist of a dominant, alpha male ruling up to fifty females. The females have their own hierarchy. This hierarchical society leads many off-world Noehons into the slave trade. It has also led to a large amount of fighting for position in the overall society. The Noehons never achieved a high level of technology, and were planet-bound when they were discovered by the Old Republic. (GG12)

Noehonese

this was the spoken language of the Noehon race. There was no written form of the language. (UANT)

Noerr, Celida

this woman was a student at the Imperial Institute of Higher Learning, in the same class as Shandria L'hnnar. Unknown to Shandria, Celida was also a member of the rebel underground and an agent of the Alliance. When Celida was arrested as a traitor and executed by Imperial forces, Shandria herself joined the Alliance to avenge her death. (SWJ5)

Noeu Sphere

this ball was used in a sport which involved passing the sphere to teammates before throwing it into a goal. (IWE1)

Noff, Gavron

this man was captured by Armx, after a bounty was placed on his head. He might have escaped capture, but the power cell in his blaster failed while the blaster itself registered full-power. (GG10)

Nofre Ecls

this Sullustan was the sister of Loro Ecls, and ran the Nofre Repair Bay at the Gelgellar Free Port. She was also an independent operative for the Alliance, working with Colonel Arik Stijhl's team at the drop point in the Free Port. Nofre kept her involvement with the Alliance a secret from her brother, as he held no support for the Alliance. To ensure that she wasn't discovered, Nofre acted for the Alliance under the pseudonym Talana. Her skills were in gathering information, which she readily supplied to Stijhl and his team. (SWJ14)

Nofre Repair Bay

this starship repair facility was maintained by Loro Ecls' sister, Nofre, at the Gelgellar Free Port. (PSPG)

Nog

a predator native to the planet Smarteel. (JTH)

Noga River

this waterway is found on the planet Teyr. on the opposite side of the world from Griann and the Teyr Rift. (SOL)

Nogdra

the Captain of the Imperial Corvette Bixby, he defected to the Alliance when his ship was captured. He then gave the Alliance the coordinates of the Imperial staging point near Dellalt. (XW)

Nogdra System

this star system is located about three days hyperspace travel from Socorro. (SWJ2)

Nogget

this was one of the more common names given to males of the Mon Calamari race. To the Mon Calamari, this name meant "pilot". (GCG)

Nogget

this male Mon Calamari, distinguished by his bluish skin coloration, was a scout and trailblazer. (GMR3)

Noghrese

this was another name for the Honoghran language. (UANT)

Noghri

this race was held subservient by the Empire. They were known for their guerrilla techniques. Individual Noghri were short in stature, with needle-sharp teeth, steel-grey skin, large dark eyes, and protruding jaws. They were nearly wiped out when two starships battled over the surface of their homeworld of Honoghr. One of the ships was destroyed, and plummeted to the ground, releasing noxious chemicals and rendering much of the planet uninhabitable. The entire battle was only a ruse, however, perpetrated by Emperor Palpatine as a way to reduce the will of the Noghri and bend it to his own uses. The Emperor dispatched Darth Vader to offer assistance to the Noghri, who were only too happy to accept. The price for their salvation was that they had to send their sons to Palpatine for use as silent commandos. Palpatine had all knowledge of the Noghri erased from the Imperial databases in order to heighten the effect of his commando teams. When Princess Leia discovered the Emperor's plan and was able to show the Noghri how they had been tricked, the Noghri quickly began recalling its sons from their commando teams, and joined the New Republic's struggle against the remnants of the Empire. In the aftermath of Thrawn's death and the destruction of the Mount Tantiss storehouse, the New Republic worked with the Noghri to restore Honoghr's ecosystem. However, the damage inflicted by the Empire proved to be too much to overcome. The Republic, and a poetic form of justice, gave the Noghri the option to resettle on Wayland. Many of the Noghri clans made the move, taking up residence on Wayland alongside the Psadans and the Myneyrsh. (HTTE, DFR, SOP)

No-Holds-Barred

this secret group of holo-video producers, directors, and actors was created in the underground of Adarlon's entertainment industry during the New Order. They created bootleg holo-vids that told stories of Jedi Knights and the glory of the Old Republic. The ranks of No-Holds-Barred are filled with artists who were blacklisted by the Imperial censors, and all of them were supporters of the Alliance, through contacts with Drun Cairnwick. (GG6)

Noimm

this female Senator of the New Republic was from an unspecified alien race. (BTS)

Nojik Beanstalk

the discovery of this unusual plant is generally considered one of the greatest archaeological finds of the modern era. (TT)

Nok

meaning "difficult" or "obstinate", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Nok

this Rodian, was Neela's brother, and an uncle to Greedo and Pqweekduk. Nok engineered the Tetsus clan's escape from Rodia, as well as the escape to Nar Shaddaa, when Navik the Red set out to eliminate them. (TME, HFG)

Nok Cartel

this band of pirates was based on the planet Abregado-re during the height of the New Order. (LOE)

Nok Derrick

this disfigured near-human lived in the dirtiest section of Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine, during the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. Nok managed to capture Temo Dionisio, after learning that the man had ties to the Alliance. He planned to interrogate Dionisio and extract any information he held in his brain, then sell the information to the Alliance. Nima Maas hired the inexperienced bounty hunter Greedo to recover Dionisio, hoping that a covert attempt to eliminate Derrick would work. Despite his ineptitude, Greedo managed to kill Derrick and recover Dionisio. (T6)

N'oka Brath

known as the Glowstone by the Qella, this is the star around which the planet Brath Qella orbits. (TT)

Nokeezx

this was an alien word which translated into Basic as "no." (GMR10)

Nokko

this was one of the lesser Hutt kajidics of the planet Nal Hutta. (TF)

Nol Ilen

this near-human male was a native of Demar, and had worked for the Lant Mining Corporation since he was eighteen. At that time, he found work as a grunt on a space barge at Lish V, and was known as an incessant talker. His supervisor finally transferred him off the barge and into pilot training, just to get rid of him. At the time of the Battle of Yavin, Nol worked as a shuttle pilot, ferrying miners to and from their worksites. Nol chats with them all during the flights, trying to keep abreast of activity on Lish V. (FBS)

Nola

this species of grass fills the plains of the planet Naboo. Dried nola grass is used as fire kindling, and can be ground up for use as a cooking spice. (GF)

Nolaa

this was a common name given to Twi'lek females, and referred to the mythical figure Nolaa, who was the daughter of Mala. (GCG)

Nolaa

according to Twi'lek mythology, Nolaa was the daughter of Mala. (GCG)

Nolaa Tarkona

this female Twi'lek was distinguished by her greenish skin and her single head-tail. A group of optical sensors was mounted in the stump of her missing head-tail. It was rumored that she was Oola's sister. She grew to power as the leader of the Diversity Alliance, and sought the location of the Emperor's Plague as a quick way to rid the universe of the human race. She paid Bornan Thul to transport it to her, but he disappeared with the datadisk and had to be hunted down by the likes of Boba Fett and Zekk. When she finally located the Imperial storehouse, Bornan tried to stop her. With the help of the young students of Luke Skywalker's Jedi Academy, Tarkona was nearly captured. In the firefight between their forces, several of the Imperial plagues were unleashed, including the Emperor's Plague and a virus dangerous to Twi'leks. Both Bornan Thul and Nolaa Tarkona contracted one of Evir Derricote's viruses in the plague chamber, but Tarkona managed to escape with Raabakyysh. They fled the storehouse, but Tarkona was too ill to notice that the young Wookiee had blindly jumped into hyperspace. Raaba landed on a remote world and quarantined them both, until Nolaa died of her virus. She hoped that the virus would eventually die, and become harmless to the rest of the galaxy. (SHA, TEP)

Nolaan

this man was, at one time, the Imperial Captain in command of the Interrogator. He was also the mentor of a young officer named Vharing, who eventually succeeded Nolaan in command of the Interrogator. He was executed for an error by High Inquisitor Tremayne. (TFNR)

Nolan, Alikka

this young woman worked with Ketrian Altronel at Arginnall Refinery, during the time when the Empire controlled the natural resources of the planet Hargeeva. She served as the plant's personnel supervisor. She longed to be part of the resistance in Arginnall City, as her brother had been imprisoned in one of Nial Pedrin's labor camps. For this reason, she threw in her lot with Stevan Makintay when he returned to Hargeeva. She was captured, along with Mak and Ketrian, during an Imperial raid on the Lantern Inn, and was subjected to intense interrogation. She died when the drugs administered by Nial Pedrin overloaded her heart. (SWJ8)

Nolar

this planet was one of the largest commercial centers of its sector, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Because of the large number of businesses and wealthy beings passing through the planet's cities and spaceports, thievery was one of the most popular professions on Nolar. (JAF)

Nolari

this bustling commercial center was the capital city of the planet Nolar. (JAF)

Nolarian 6000

this beam drill, produced on the planet Nolar during the years preceding the Battle of Naboo, was considered one of the best mining tools of its age. The Nolarian 6000 was an immense drill, mounted on a mobile platform and designed to underwater mining and excavation. (JAF)

Noldan

this young man was among the many Force-sensitive individuals who were exiled to the planet Dathomir during the early years of the New Order, because he was perceived as a threat by Emperor Palpatine. Noldan became something of an aide to Rohak, and was with the old man when he discovered the location for the Village of Aurilia. (SWGAL)

Nole Tree

this species of tree was native to the planet Vernet. (SWJ15)

Noleria

this barren, rocky planet was the fourth world in the Sacor, or Sacorria, System. It was orbited by a pair of moons. (CCW)

Noli

this flightless bird was native to the planet Ganeid IV, and was the favorite prey of the cooha. The noli were not without defenses, however, possessing powerful beaks and slashing claws. (TBSB)

Nollo Kanx

this Quarren enforcer worked for Odanni, the Mon Calamari owner of the Fathoms restaurant complex. He had a fearful reputation among the locals of Wildwater City, who knew that he presense meant only bad things were going to happen. Nollo Kanx was something of a expert in the use of poisons, and he created many of his own poisons using the plants and animals which were supported within Wildwater City's environs. (WSV)

Noloh Gunga Bongoform

this Gungan-owned manufacturing facility was located in Bartyn's Landing, on the planet Lamaredd, during the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo. It was one of the few businesses based on Lamaredd that were not locally owned, and produced many of the skimmersubs and lifeboat pods that were used on the planet. The company operated the Noloh Gunga Fuel Station, located within the Three Jetties area. (GMR7)

Noloh Gunga Fuel Station

this refueling depot, which was owned and operated by Noloh Gunga Bongoform, was located within the area of the Three Jetties, on the planet Lamaredd. It was located offshore from Bartyn's Landing itself, allowing the workers to contain any potential fuel spills before they reached land. (GMR7)

Noloth

this member of the H'kig colony on L'at was believed to have been captured when the Yevetha took control of the planet during the Great Purge. Nolothe was supposedly held on the Pride of Yevetha in order to deter attack by the New Republic. In reality, Nolothe had escaped on the Star Morning before the Yevetha arrived. Nolothe's presence on the Star Destroyer was an illusion generated by Enara to fool the Yevetha. (TT)

Nolt

this was a common name given to Zabrak males. Like many Zabrak names, it related to survival characteristics, and meant "provider". (GCG)

Nolyds, Burr

this gaunt, white-haired man served on the Imperial Interim Ruling Council. Nolyds was one of the Council members who supported Carnor Jax and the plans he had for eliminating Emperor Palpatine, for the Emperor kept all of his supporters on short leashes. After Jax was killed on Yinchorr, Nolyds took control of the Council. He opposed Feena D'Asta's plan to make peace with the New Republic, despite the legitimacy it would bring to the Council. He was killed when he returned to his quarters after a long debate with D'Asta, and found a message disk in his rooms. When he activated it, it exploded, killing Nolyds instantly. (CE2)

Nom Anor

this shadowy, black-armored figure worked behind the scenes of the Imperial Interim Ruling Council. He used Xandel Carivus as his agent, and predicted that Carivus would be elected to lead the Council after Nolyds was assassinated. Nom Anor spoke with a raspy hiss, which strengthened his evil image. He claimed to be in charge of the dealings on Ord Cantrell, and that the murders which plagued the Council were within his plans. However, General Immodet was soon poisoned, and not by any of Anor's agents. He claimed to be unconcerned about the rumors of Kir Kanos returning. Nom Anor became known to the New Republic several years later, when he emerged as the spiritual and political leader of the Rhommamoolians. Nom Anor made no effort to hide his hatred of the New Republic and the Jedi Knights, and preached about abandoning technology in favor of looking for the truth in the natural elements of life. In response to his charismatic personality, the Red Knights of Life rose up to further his beliefs. He had managed to incite them to rebel against their neighbors on the planet Osarian, sparking an intrasystem battle while furthering his own plans. In reality, Nom Anor was the Yuuzhan Vong leader of the advance forces of the Praetorite Vong, and a member of the Intendent class. When he was given the assignment, he showed his devotion to the Yuuzhan Vong by removing his own eye with the sharpened end of a burning stick. The eye was replaced with a plaeryin bol. He faked his own death by pretending to be on a diplomatic shuttle dispatched to the Mediator, but he was actually in an A-Wing fighter fleeing to Sernpidal. The shuttle exploded in the hold of the Mediator, although Nom Anor himself was in another craft fleeing the battle. He was disgraced upon his return to the Yuuzhan Vong leaders, and was replaced by Shedao Shai. It was later revealed that Nom Anor was a member of a lower caste in Yuuzhan Vong society, and hoped to elevate his people to warrior status by successfully conquering the first planets along Vector Prime. His failure almost guaranteed swift retribution. With the failures of Shedao Shai and Deign Lian, Nom Anor found himself once again in a position of command, leading the forces which destroyed Obroa-skai. He was also part of a growing faction of Yuuzhan Vong which believed the Jedi Knights were the key to taking control of the galaxy. Nom Anor also took steps to form an alliance with Borge the Hutt, which provided a minimum of protection for Hutt Space and gave the Yuuzhan Vong their choice of worlds to use to grow yorik coral. However, Nom Anor found himself entangled with two female rivals during the invasion. The former Jedi Knight Vergere seemed to be favored by Warmaster Tsavong Lah, while Viqi Shesh - the woman he himself had recruited to the Yuuzhan Vong cause - was working behind the scenes to assassinate Borsk Fey'lya and become Chief of State of the New Republic. Nom Anor met both challenges head-on, and was dispatched to Coruscant to meet with the Republic Senate and Chief of State Fey'lya. Nom Anor was summarily arrested, thwarting his immediate plans and those of Senator Shesh, but managed to escape unharmed after rendering the entire Senate unconscious. Upon his return to the Yuuzhan Vong, Nom Anor was again paired with Vergere, this time on the so-called Solo Project. He argued for the project's existence by showing Tsavong Lah that the New Republic - and the Solo family in particular - were destined to win the Galactic Civil so that the Yuuzhan Vong could invade the galaxy. Speaking heretically, Nom Anor explained that the Empire's centralized forces would have crushed the Yuuzhan Vong, so the True Gods altered events to ensure the Alliance own the war. While this appeased the Warmaster, Nom Anor's failure with the Solo Project did not. He was relegated to duty on Coruscant, which had been reformed into a simulacrum of Yuuzhan'tar, locating and eliminating any pockets of resistance. His continued failure to capture Jacen Solo, combined with the loss of Ganner Rhysode and the near-destruction of the World Brain, forced Nom Anor to flee into the depths of the planet to escape execution. There, he met up with a group of Shamed Ones who had begun to revere the Jedi Knights. Their heretical beliefs gave Nom Anor the idea of turning them in to Overlord Shimrra, as part of a plan to regain his stature. When the band of Shamed Ones was routed by Yuuzhan Vong warriors, Nom Anor was again forced to flee deeper into the planet, relying on Shoon-Mi and Kunra to survive. However, his plans were not in shambles, and he continued to gain power as Yu'shaa, the Prophet who would lead the Shamed Ones to freedom. He gathered the Shamed Ones and used their religious fervor to build his own base of power, from which he hoped to strike back at Shimrra for abandoning him. He thought his plans had come to fruition when the living planet Zonama Sekot was located, as he believed that the destruction of the planet - which was a source of fear to Shimrra - would return him to the Supreme Overlord's good graces. After arranging to reach the planet with Nen Yim and Harrar, along with the Jedi Knights Tahiri Veila and Corran Horn, Nom Anor found the rumors of the living planet to be true. He set his plans in motion, hoping to overload the planetary hyperdrive and destroy the planet. He was forced to kill Nen Yim, who had discovered his true identity, only to be revealed later by Tahiri. Nevertheless, Nom Anor managed to escape Zonama Sekot and return to Coruscant, where he was restored to a position of power by Shimrra himself. Nom Anor was named the Prefect of Yuuzhan'tar, much to the dismay of High Prefect Drathul. Drathul decided that Nom Anor should be the individual to put a stop to the heretical cult of the Prophet Yu'shaa, a move that Nom Anor believed would earn him even more power. He was unprepared for Kunra's own plans, however, when the Shamed One twisted his warnings into bold proclamations to the Shamed Ones. Kunra thus forced Nom Anor to lead the masses, rather than abandon them. However, the weight of serving two masters began to force Nom Anor into a corner. When Shimrra finally ordered the World Brain on Coruscant to literally destroy the planet, making it useless to either side of the battle, Nom Anor did the only thing he could to save his planet. He shed his Prefect's cloak and took up arms with the Shamed Ones, fighting against the establishment of Shimrra. Once again, his actions were merely executed to save his own skin, and Nom Anor hoped to escape in the midst of the fighting between Shamed Ones and warriors. He was tracked in his escape by none other than Mara Jade Skywalker, who was part of an infiltration team dispatched to capture Shimrra. Mara's combat skills, both with a lightsaber and barehanded, were no match for Nom Anor, who was already breathless and tired from trying to escape the battle. She forced him to surrender, at which point he told her about Shimrra's plans to use the Alpha Red virus against Zonama Sekot. He then agreed to take the Jedi and the Solos to Shimrra's Citadel, in the hopes of locating Luke Skywalker and Jaina and Jacen Solo. Along the way, Nom Anor continued to look for a way to turn the situation to his own needs, but the deaths of Shimrra and Onimi left him with only two options: rejoining Nas Choka or joining the Galactic Alliance. Neither prospect gave him the kind of power he wanted, however. As he led the Jedi to Shimrra's escape pod, even his attempt to force them into the waste disposal system went awry. Jacen recognized the ruse, and confronted Nom Anor. In a last-ditch effort, Nom Anor used his plaeryin bol to squirt poison at Jacen. The young Jedi, however, simply restructured the poison into nothing more than water. Left with no alternative, Nom Anor chose to die when the escape craft crashed back into the surface of Coruscant. this rocky gulley was located on Tatooine, near the town of Motesta. (AIR)

Nomad Squad

this group of Alliance troopers was part of the security force protecting the outpost on the planet Taul, shortly before it was destroyed by the Victory-class Star Destroyer Dominator. (SWJ1)

Nomad Squadron

this starfighter squadron was part of the New Republic Navy during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Based on the MC80b cruiser Allegiant, Nomad Squadron was one of the very first full units formed by the Alliance to Restore the Republic, during the months that followed the Battle of Yavin. It was originally a squadron of A-Wing fighters, but over time its pilots became famous for their ability to fly anything, at anytime, anywhere in the galaxy. When the Yuuzhan Vong launched their invasion, Nomad Squadron was under the command of Captain Tarrik, and they were stationed in the Meridian Sector of the galaxy. (GMR9)

Nomads

Nomo Sliken

this Clawdite assassin worked for Moska the Hutt during the height of the New Order. It was Nomo Sliken who murdered Nak Simm, then took the Zabrak's place at a meeting that was scheduled to cement an alliance between the Hutt crimelords Torga and Jolla. Unfortunately, Nak Simm's body was discovered before the meeting could be finished, and Nomo Sliken's plans were exposed. Nomo fled from the Corusca Gem Casino in an effort to escape, using a variety of disguises to avoid being recognized. However, the beings with whom he had been meeting managed to capture him before he could escape into the crowded streets. Nomo was later imprisoned by Torga for his treachery. (WOA23)

Nonakara

this slimy amphibian was found in the lakes and swamps of a number of different planets. Its was mainly herbivorous, but would eat small insects and fish if needed. Nonakara produced copious amounts of irritating slime from their skins, and the slime helped debilitate the flora and fauna surrounding the nonakara and allowing it to more easily catch and feed on it. Scientists have also discovered that the slime contained genetic material, and that two nonakara could interbreed by exchanging slime. This mating required that one nonakara travel to the other's body of water, a trip would was perilous for the creatures. In this manner, the two nonakara parents would each give birth to offspring. These creatures were sometimes referred to as whirling snakes because of the thrashing and spinning a nonakara performs after it travels to a new body of water. This spinning motion dislodges huge amounts of slime, allowing the nonakara to disseminate its genetic material. (COG)

Nonam

this man was a Captain in the Imperial Navy. He was in command of the small fleet which deployed the first-stage Darktroopers to take out the Alliance's Tak Base, on the planet Talay. (T4)

No-Name

this was the name used to describe the spies used the Old Republic Senate. Each No-Name was given an entirely new identity, complete with the appropriate text docs and security clearances. A casual investigation of a No-Name's identity revealed nothing unusual or incriminating. When an agent died, the identity was often retired from use. (JAD)

Nonce

this Senali was a member of the Banoosh-Walore clan. (SP)

Nonce

this Radnoran was a known criminal, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Nonce was hired by Dol Heelp to locate teams of youths who were willing to help steal loot from the homes of those

Radnorans who were evacuated from their homes in Tacto, after a plague was unleashed in the neighboring city of Aubendo. (JQ1)

NonHumans Inn

this chain of hotels in the Outer Rim caters to species of non-human origin. (GG9)

Non-Limbed Professional Greenputt Tour

this was one of the primary series of greenputt matches held during the last decades of the Old Republic. It was established to give those beings which lacked arms - which were required to swing the clubs used to hit the greenputt ball on the other professional tours - a chance to compete on a galactic stage. (HNN4)

Nonnah

this Alliance freighter was forced to crash-land on the planet Chorax, shortly after the Battle of Hoth. Rogue Squadron was dispatched to protect the freighter and its crew and cargo from Imperial attack until a rescue team could arrive. (RSG)

Nonnaihr, Lorac

this man was apprehended while smuggling guns through Alderaan's Spacer Quarter, during the height of the New Order. An Alderaanian by birth, Nonnaihr understood why weapons were banned on his homeworld, and demanded that any being who purchased weapons from him must never use them on Alderaan. (CCW)

Nonrey

this noted Imperial scientist disappeared from public view several years before the Battle of Yavin. (AIR)

Non-Sentient Professional Greenputt Tour

this was one of the the primary series of greenputt matches held during the last decades of the Old Republic. For many sports historians, the formation of the NSPGT marked the lowest point in the history of greenputt. It was formed in reaction to the consistent play of three neeks from Ambria, as well as the play of a Taurill named Bortis. (HNN4)

NonSonic

this was the brand name of a series of blaster silencer attachments manufactured by Merr-Sonn during the Galactic Civil War. They were produced for a variety of slughthrowers and projectile weapons, and each version was suitable only for a specific weapon. (ROE, AEG)

Nonsu

this was one of the many corporations which had its headquarters in the Stratablock 7 building of Metellos' Moridebo District, during the height of the New Order. Nonsu and its rival, CarsinShare, were the primary buyers and sellers of business information. They also produced much of the material used to build and maintain the city of Ektra. On the less legitimate side of things, CarsinShare and Nonsu also staged death matches deep in the bowels of Ektra, pitting their champion gladiators against each other in bloody fights to the death. (CCW)

Nontal Quincu

this scientist had been an associate of Jenna Zan Arbor's, and was invited to the party she held at Didi Oddo's café. (EVE)

this was one of the early Imperial battles, and resulted in the Empire liberating the Bothan Sector from rebellious insurgents. (TPS)

No'oma K'bri

this Tarasinese phrase translated into Basic as "advance scout", although the two words failed to convey the true meaning of the phrase. Being the no'oma k'bri, which led one of the traditional Tarasin hunting parties, implied that the Tarasin individual had a certain amount of honor in being the leader. However, it was also used as a form of punishment, since many hunts involved dangerous prey. (LFCW)

Noonam

this was one of the most common male names used by members of the Ithorian race. Although most Ithorian names were not used for a specific meaning, historians found that this name meant "strong-willed". (GCG)

Noonar

this planet, the primary world of the Noonian system, is located in an area of the galaxy near the Halthor Sector. (SWJ2)

Noone, Cecil

this dark-skinned man was the leader of a band of thieves and soldiers that hired itself out to the highest bidder during the height of the New Order. He was also the owner and Captain of the Borogove. Noone was the son of two members of the Freedom's Sons. He stole a decommissioned ship from the group at the age of thirteen and fled to Byblos, where he tried to sell the ship. He was robbed blind by a group of shipjackers, and was forced to re-established himself as a con man and thief. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, however, Noone was the leader of a small band of criminals that included Kels Turkhorn, a Tynnan named Dawson, and the cyborged Sluissi named Hass Sonax. As a group, they managed to steal a Hapan gun of command from Vop the Usurer, and tried to sell it to make a fortune in credits. However, only a few beings offered to buy it, one of them a young Alliance agent who could only offer them a tenth of their asking price. A meeting with Imperial Governor Gilad Halsek nearly got them killed, so Noone tried to sell the weapon to Tyro Viveca on Kabal. Viveca had heard all about the theft of the weapon and Noone's failed attempts to sell it, and was not amused when Noone offered to sell it to him for one and a half million credits. Viveca simply laughed in his face, and gave him a counter-offer: turn over the weapon, and Noone would have the chance to escape through Viveca's hunting grounds. When Viveca turned the Hapan weapon in his direction, Noone set out to escape. He only managed to avoid death through the timely intervention of his comrades. (SWJ15, GMR1)

Noor

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Noor R'aya

a native of the planet Sorl, this Jedi Master had a deep connection to the Force which caused him to leave the daily life of the Jedi Temple to contemplate the galaxy in seclusion on his homeworld, some twenty years before the Battle of Naboo. After building a small home on the Cragh Mountains, he suddenly disappeared, shortly before Qui-Gon Jinn was captured by Jenna Zan Arbor. Adi Gallia discovered that Master R'aya had also been imprisoned by Zan Arbor, but her experiments left him drained of blood and unable to fight back. After the Jedi Knights discovered Zan Arbor's lab on Simpla-12, Noor was placed in the custody of Ona Nobis for transport to Belasco, where Zan Arbor hoped to capture the Jedi. Noor feigned unconsciousness, but managed to remain alert enough to leave clues about his whereabouts. (TDR)

Noor Shan

this female Sullustan served as the Security Chief aboard the Chilastra, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (GMR8)

Noor, Tetengo

this man, a native of the planet Churba, was a member of the New Republic military. An A-Wing pilot, Tetengo served Blue Squadron at Folor base, using the callsign Blue Ten. Later, he served as Polearm Nine, part of the Polearm Squadron assigned to the Mon Remonda during the hunt for Warlord Zsinj. At the Battle of Selaggis, it was Tetengo who made the last firing run over the Iron Fist before it disappeared into a "tunnel" generated by orbital nightcloaking satellites and disappeared. He was able to see the bow of the Second Death just before it exploded, but believed it was the Iron Fist. Noor escaped the explosion with damage to his A-Wing's engines, but returned to the Mon Remonda to report his findings. He reported that a second capital ship fled the area of the Iron Fist's destruction, but he had no idea what ship it was. (WS, SOC)

Noori

Nootka

this was one of the more common surnames used by the Duros people. Like all such names, Nootka was used only for official business, to indicate one individual from another when in the presence of non-Duros. This name literally meant "supervisor" or "commander". (GCG)

Nooxoo Una, Vooz

this man, whose name translated into Bocce as "The Patriot," was once a noted biogeneticist who specialized in the manipulation of plant material. Nooxoo Una later instituted a vigilante war against crime on the planet Coruscant, during the height of the New Order. To protect himself, Vooz Nooxoo Una wore a suit of biochemically and genetically engineered plant fibers, giving him the appearance of a walking tree. The suit, which he had created in the laboratory and donned as an experiment, was studded with heavy thorns, and his hands and feet were tipped with retractable claws. Shortly after the Battle of Yavin, Vooz Nooxoo Una began attacking Imperial officers and soldiers without provocation, earning an Imperial bounty on his head. (GMR6)

Nop

this was a common name given to Zabrak males. Like many Zabrak names, it related to survival characteristics, and meant "first-born son". (GCG)

Nopan

Noquivzor

the New Republic used this planet as a staging location for their assault on the Imperial base on Borleias. Borsk Fey'lya later used the arid world as the site from which the Republic's councilors would plan the assault on Coruscant. Fey'lya knew that many of the councilors would dislike the planet's dry polen-filled atmosphere, and that would put them on edge and at odds with each other. He then stepped in to "reconcile" the situation, gaining his own advantage in the proceedings. The renegade Imperial warlord, Zsinj, took his fleet there to eliminate the Republic outpost, following the capture of Borleias by the Republic. He was too late, and only destroyed empty buildings. It was believed that Tycho Celchu was killed in the battle, shortly before the New Republic attempted to liberate Coruscant. (XWN, WG)

Nor

this was one of the Colicoid leaders who traveled to meet with Krayn on Rorak 5, during the period in which Anf Dec was negotiating with Krayn for the spice processing rights to the Kessel Run. It was Nor Fik who greeted the slave trader Bakleeda - actually Obi-Wan Kenobi in disguise - some four years after the Battle of Naboo. Bakleeda had been employed by the Colicoids as an independent assessor of Krayn's organization. Shortly after their initial meeting, Nor Fik was confronted by Obi-Wan and Siri Tachi, both of whom revealed they had been planning to "overthrow" Krayn. Under her disguise as Zora, Siri reasoned with Nor Fik about the Colicoids' plans to eventually squeeze Krayn out. Nor Fik was unable to commit the full resources of the Colicoids to take up the Nar Shaddaa operations, but agreed to allow the slave revolt to take its course and ruin Krayn's operations. Eventually, Nor Fik was allowed to take control of Nar Shaddaa, and agreed to actually pay the workers to continue processing the spice. (JQ)

Nord

this Imperial Colonel was part of the command crew aboard the weapons platform known as the Tarkin, during its construction in the Patriim System. Nord was part of the group of officers who opposed Darth Vader's careless waste of life whenever an officer failed to meet his goals. When an assassination attempt against the Dark Lord failed, Vader discovered Nord's role in it and planned to execute him. However, when Nord decided to use the ionic cannon aboard the Tarkin to take out Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa, the superweapon exploded. It had been sabotaged by the Alliance, and tore itself apart when fired. Nord and all aboard were killed. (LTA3, MC52)

Nord System

a planetary system. (GG6)

Nord, Calo

considered by many to have been the greatest bounty hunter in the galaxy during the Great Sith War, Calo Nord was an outwardly unassuming man who was known for his deliberate precision in his actions. As a child, he was sold into slavery by his parents, and managed to kill his masters on his sixteenth birthday. He then set out to execute his parents for selling him into slavery, an action which earned him a substantial bounty on his head. Calo Nord was determined not to be captured, and learned everything he could of the tactics used by the bounty hunters who pursued him, before he killed them all in turn. Eventually, Calo Nord discovered who had placed the bounty on his head in the first place, and executed them as well. Calo Nord eventually became a free man, and set out to become a bounty hunter in his own right. His natural instincts for survival and his ruthless efficiency allowed him to become the most feared hunter of his time. Many criminals believed that his existence was a myth that was told to other criminals to frighten them away from a life of crime; this stemmed from the fact that very few beings ever escaped him to testify to his prowess. He eventually went to work for the Sith during the years of conflict surrounding the Great Sith War, and also took on work for The Exchange during the same period. He dogged Bastila Shan, Carth Onasi, and the Jedi Knights who were searching for the Star Forge and Darth Malak, and was believed to have been killed on Taris. However, he managed to survive the assault and escape the planet before it was destroyed by the Sith. Nord continued to work for Darth Malak, and it was while on Sith business that Calo Nord was eventually killed, during the battle for control of the Star Forge near the Unknown World of the Rakata. (KOTOR, SWDB)

Nord, Dren

this arrogant young man was a native of the planet Alderaan. The son of two politicians, Dren was educated at some of the Inner Rim's best schools. When he accepted a scholarship to a prominent medical school, Dren found himself away from Alderaan when it was destroyed by the Empire. He joined the Alliance, and was recruited to be a medic with the Special Operations team. The loss of his family on Alderaan hardened his spirit, and his bedside manner and respect for his superiors were both poor. He found himself having to pull political strings to get transferred to a more prestigious area. However, after learning that he could provide expertise in high-combat missions where the real work was being done against the Empire, he retracted his request and was assigned to T'Charek Haathi's shipjacking team. He bristled at having to take orders from a younger officer, and discovered that he lacked the skills to give them in combat situations. After Haathi's team survived the attack of a Doom Slayer droid on Gelgelar, Nord left the team to work with Colonel Stijhl's team. He was replaced by Stijhl's field medic, Maglenna Pendower. Norn, Harrid this man, a noted pilot, served as a pirate working for his brother, Servid Norn. Harrid was chosen by his brother to fly in a race which was created by Servid and his business rival, Plook Hartar. The rivals hoped to prove which pirate gang had the best pirates. Servid worked behind the scenes to ensure Harrid's success by offering a bounty on Plook Hartar's pilot, Scranton Toon. (GMR6)

Norn, Servid

this crimelord was a rival of Plook Hartar, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Hartar and Norn both believed that they had the best pilots in the galaxy, and set out to prove it. Each nominated a pilot to participate in a race across the galaxy; Servid nominated his own brother, Harrid. The winner would be determined by which of the pilots reached the destination first. The race began on Tynna, then required the pilot to obtain a docking permit from each of the following planets: Bothawui, Nal Hutta, Calamari, Almania, Ord Mantell, Fondor, and Beshin. Once all these permits were acquired, the pilot had to make run to Mos Eisley and deliver the permits to the spaceport controllers there. Unknown to Ploke Kattar, Norn put a bounty on the head of Kattar's pilot, Scranton Toon, in an effort to ensure victory for his pirates. (GMR6)

Northlan is located in the Upper Morcur Valley. (SWJ2)

Northstar

this New Republic tender ship was assigned to the Fifth Battle Group. It was late in arriving to the Koornacht Cluster during the Yevethan Purge, due to a navigational computer failure. It was recalled to the Alland Yards for repairs, and rejoined the fleet a short time later. (SOL)

Northwest

this city is located on the northern coast of the continent of Landra, on the planet Lianna. (ML)

Northwest Coromon

this was a collection of medium-sized islands located in the Coromon Islands chain, on the planet Fresia. (CCW)

Northwest Coromon

this island, the largest of the Northwest Coromons found on the planet Fresia, was the site of Incom Industries' administrative headquarters. (CCW)

Norufu

the near-human captain of Bogga the Hutt's Enforcer One. (EGV)

Norulac

a planet from which pirates launched a series of attacks against the Taanabian farmers. Lando Calrissian helped the farmers drive off the pirates. (ROTJN)

Norun Gep

this young Whiphid went into business with Fillin Ta to start up Gep's Grill in Mos Eisley. They made a number of arrangements with nigg-game hunters to purchase dewback and bantha meat at pre-arranged rendezvous points on the outskirts of Mos Eisley. Gep was also in business with Omon Gantrum, with a stake in Spaceport Express, although Gep was unaware of Gantrum's connections with Lady Valarian. (GG7)

Norval

this dark-haired humanoid was one of Doctor Murk Lundi's students of history, on the planet Coruscant, some six years before the Battle of Naboo. When Doctor Lundi took a sabbatical to make an expedition to Kodai, in search of a Sith Holocron, he chose not to bring Norval along. Norval was an avid follower of Doctor Lundi, and his connection to the Dark Side of the Force was deeper than anyone could have imagined. Angry at Doctor Lundi for leaving him behind, Norval made his own arrangements to obtain the Holocron. Once on Kodai, Norval made every attempt to secure the Holocron for himself. However, Omal struggled to keep him from obtaining it, and the Sith Holocron fell into a deep geyser. Norval waited ten years before returning to Kodai, in an effort to finally recover the Holocron for himself. During this time, Norval learned a great deal about the Jedi and Sith, and even constructed his own, crude lightsaber. Although he succeeded in recovering the Holocron from the geyser, he was followed by Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker. Norval fled to the Ploo System, where he hoped to sell the Holocron. Obi-Wan was able to infiltrate his ship and take back the Holocron, and Norval tried to flee into space. However, the mercenaries who were working with him turned against him at the last moment, realizing that the Holocron was no longer attainable. The mercenaries fired on Norval's ship, destroying it and killing Norval. (JAF)

Norval II

the primary planet in the Norvall system, located in the Calaron Sector, Norval II supplied some of the best New Republic pilots. During the height of the Clone Wars, Norval II was the site of an assassination attempt on the life of Padme' Amidala. The attackers were a group of Mandalorian Protectors led by Alpha-02, but they were ambushed by the forces of the Old Republic and driven off. (DE1, REB, SWI80)

Norvanian Grog

an old, expensive intoxicating beverage. A 400-year-old bottle is exquisite. It is produced on the island of N'van on the planet Ban-Satir II. (HSE, CSA)

Noryath Meatbread

a brown, bread-like food. (BTS)

Norym Kim

this near-human Myke was once a pirate who conquered an entire sector. He later served on the Imperial Interim Ruling Council. He was a tall, thin man with a gaunt face, and had two small horns descending from either side of his chin. He scoffed at the idea that Kir Kanos was responsible for the assassination of Nolyds. Kim ostensibly took control of the Council, although he schemed to have Xandel Carivus appointed to its leadership position as a figurehead. (CE2, HCE)

Norys

this burly adolescent was the leader of the Lost Ones, and underworld teenaged gang on Coruscant. Norys looked the part of a bully, with close-set eyes and crooked teeth that split his sneer into a cruel grin. He went out of his way to make life hard for Zekk. When agents from the Shadow Academy went to Coruscant to search out Force-sensitives for training, they also took the members of the Lost Ones for stormtrooper training. Norys welcomed the chance to prove himself as a stormtrooper, and trained at every opportunity. His marksmanship grew quickly, but he lacked the discipline essential to a stormtrooper. He did become one of the Shadow Academy's troopers, much to the chagrin of Qorl, who trained him. Qorl despised Norys for his lack of respect for his superiors, and their differences flared up during the Shadow Academy's attack on Yavin 4. Norys had, by then, learned to fly a TIE Fighter, and went off on his own to take out the Lightning Rod. Qorl took the opportunity to verbally reprimand Norys and, when the young man failed to listen, Qorl shot his TIE Fighter out of the sky. (LO, L, JUS)

Norz, Ephri

this Doctor of Xenobiology served the New Republic Survey Corps during the years following the Battle of Endor. Doctor Norz compiled an extensive report on the new creatures found on the planet Dathomir, after it was liberated from Warlord Zsinj. (CTD)

Norzek

this Kitonak name was common across Kirdo III. (UANT)

Nos

this disgusting, predatory creature was native to the underwater grottoes of the planet Utapau. The nos was a large, amphibious creature that was believed to have been a distant relative of the varactyl. The head of a full-grown nos was about the size of a starfighter. (OWS, IS3, E3N)

Nos Kellex

this was a note Dashade individual from the ancient histories of the planet Urkupp. (UANT)

Nosa

this Gungan word translated into Basic as "no." (GMR10)

Nosaurian

this alien race was native to the planet New Plympto. The average Nosaurian was a blue-skinned reptiloid which stood nearly one and a half meters tall, with long arms and short legs. Their skulls were crowned with a ring of bony horns, and their pointed snouts were ridged with scales. These horns were an indication of an individual's demeanor, as old or quarrelsome individuals will have many broken horns. As a species, Nosaurians could only see visible light on varying degrees of black and white. They characterized most colors by their particular shade of gray. The inside of a Nosaurian's mouth could be lit with a phosphorescent glow at will, a trait which even the Nosaurians could not describe in terms of an evolutionary need. Individuals had exceptionally fast reflexes, a trait which allowed Nosaurians to excel as pilots or athletes. Nosaurians were also noted for a specific quirk: they always bayed at the setting sun. This response seemed to be almost involuntary, and resulted in seemingly strange behavior among those Nosaurians who traveled offworld. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, the Nosaurian race resisted the subjugation of their homeworld with ferocious wills. Unfortunately, the Nosaurians were wiped out by a bio-engineered plague unleashed by the alien invaders, in retaliation for their resistance. Only a handful of Nosaurians were offworld at the time, and represented the very last members of their race. (SWI64, WOTC, CCW, GMR9)

Nosaurian

this was the native language of the Nosaurian race, consisting of barks, warbles, and hissing sibilants. The written form actually combined two distinct alphabets, and contained a great number of metaphors related to their environment. (UANT)

Nos-Carron, Breezer

this Imperial Security Bureau agent posed as a drifter who wandered the streets of Mos Eisley. He was inserted into Tatooine's landscape after it was learned that Luke Skywalker was a native of the planet. Nos-Carron received orders to ensure that Jared Tome recovered the Shard of Alderaan computer program, so Nos-Carron pretended to stumble aboard the Dune Princess shortly before the auction of the Shard of Alderaan. (LAA)

Nosetongue

this was a form of locking device developed by the Yuuzhan Vong. Used to limit access to portals and chambers, the nosetongue was a small indentation in the wall, into which a Yuuzhan Vong placed their fist. The nosetongue's sensitive palette tasted and analyzed the secretions of the Yuuzhan Vong, then determined if the individual had been granted access or not. If the individual was allowed to enter, the nosetongue instructed the hatch sphincter or other door mechanism to open. (T)

Nosh vu'Ta

this Huttese phrase translated into Basic as "We profit". (WOA25)

Nosh vu'Ta

this ship, owned by the Corsignis Property Alliance, was one of the many ships which blockaded the moon of Pinett during the height of the Galactic Civil War. The name Nosh vu'Ta came from the Huttese phrase meaning "We profit". (WOA25) developed by Audio Performance Incorporated, this small device was basically a passive field generator. It was originally developed for the Alliance's military, which wanted to provide its field agents with a way to conceal an agent's bodily emissions. This allowed agents to move about in close quarters without being detected on lifeform scanners. After the Battle of Endor, many of these devices were discovered in the possession of smugglers and pirates who wanted to hide their actions. When a criminal needed to bypass a security or safety systems, they could slice into the wiring and computer systems and use the No-Show to generate an uninterrupted feed to the security systems. The criminals could then cut through a hull or access panel without setting off the system's sensors. (TFNR, AEG)

No-Show

Nosken

TriGas Corporation tried unsuccessfully to mine this gas giant by using dirigibles. (GG2)

n'Osnyi, Arrissa

this woman was a noted pirate who prowled the spacelanes surrounding the planet Naboo. (SWGAL)

Noss Prisht

this Mrlsst was an assistant to Gyr Keela. He had blue skin and dark red plumage. It was Prisht who told Wedge Antilles that Professor Falken's asteroid lab had been destroyed in an Imperial attack. (XWPA)

Nossk

this was one of the more common names used by Trandoshan hunters. Like most Trandoshan names, it was reserved for males, but could be adopted by those rare females who became hunters. In the Trandoshan language, the name meant "burns his prey". (GCG)

Nosstrick

this winged humanoid was one of Jerresk's pirates. Nosstrick was captured by Jodo Kast on Fluwhaka, after Jerresk was captured by the New Republic. (TOD)

Nostler, Robbe

this man was the Bureau Chief of the Galactic News Network's Indu San bureau, during the early years of the New Republic. He had been reporting from Indu San for twelve years, and had not taken sides during the Galactic Civil War. While he understood that sensational journalism sold better, he preferred to ensure that his stories were as accurate as they could be before he printed them. (SWJ6)

Nostril of Palpatine

this was one of the terms Han Solo used to describe an Imperial superweapon, during his discussion with Vana Dorja following the Battle of Coruscant. (DW)

Notak

a planet lost by the Empire shortly after the Battle of Endor. (BTS)

Notch, The

this was the name given to the entrance to Beggar's Canyon, from the Ebe Crater Valley, on the planet Tatooine. The Notch served as a section of the noted Mos Espa Circuit, a swoop racing event held annually during the height of the New Order. (IWE1, SWGAL)

Noth

this common, albeit archaic, Zabrak surname meant "water guardian". (GCG)

Noth

a native of Alvorine, Noth was one of the many wild Force talents which sprang up during the height of the New Order. Noth was distinguished from other human natives of Alvorine by the bluish pallor of his skin and the small nodules located at the end of each eyebrow. Noth was drawn to the Dark Side of the Force, and was drawn to the Sith Holocron which was possessed by Krova the Hutt. He lacked the strength to steal the Holocron himself, so he hoped to ambush a team of Dark Side adepts who arrived to Alvorine to take it for themselves. Noth managed to launch an attempt to steal the Holocron, but was defeated by the Dark Siders and forced to retreat into the wilderness of Alvorine. (GMR5)

Notha Broth

this was a hearty soup cooked by the natives of the planet Yabosta. (GMR10)

Notha Dab

this Quarren pilot joined Requiem Squadron shortly after the Battle of Endor. In reality, Dab was Nrin Vakil. The Requiem Squadron facade was needed to infiltrate Prince-Admiral Krennel's operation. When questioned about why a Quarren would join an Imperial squadron, Dab explained that he couldn't kill Mon Calamari as a member of the New Republic. (IR)

Nothar

this ball of frozen rock and ice was the fifth and outermost planet of the Nubus System. It was orbited by a pair of moons. (CCW)

Nother World (*)

the ancient Wookiees, when they first arrived on Kashyyyk, named the swamps that made up the forest floor the Nother World. (WSB)

Notho

this was a form of sign language developed by the Nothoiin race for use in hunting, but which found widespread use during the Imperial occupation of the Greater Javin. (WOA33)

Nothoiin

this world, the primary planet in the Nothoiin System, was the homeworld of the Nothoiin race. During the fifty years leading up to the Galactic Civil War, Nothoiin experienced extreme drought conditions, and huge wildfires were touched off every summer. Scientists have blamed this phenomenon on the poor water management techniques of the Nothoiin people, who used all their water supply for municipal and selected agricultural uses. This left the plains of the planet with only meager rains to supply needed moisture. Because of the annual wildfires, Nothoiin's cities and starports were surrounded fire-break walls. The fires also filled the skies of Nothoiin with ash and soot, giving the planet a near-continual shroud of smog. (WOA33)

Nothoiin

this gold-skinned, alien race was native to the planet Nothoiin. Aside from the Lutrillians, the Nothoiins were the most widely-traveled race found in the Greater Javin. (WOA33)

Nothoiin Colony

this was the name given to the ruling body of the Nothoiin race. Rather than implying any sort of favoritism among factions, representatives to the Nothoiin Colony met on the world of Council to discuss the issues that affected their peoples. (WOA33)

Nothoiin Corridor

this hyperspace travel route connected the Corellian Trade Spine with the Eriadu Way, passing through the Ivax Nebula in the Anoat Sector of the galaxy. (WOA33)

Nothoiin System

this system, located in the Anoat Sector, was best known for the exquisite carbon ur-diamonds which are found on the primary moon of the planet Nothoiin. (GG2, WOA33)

Nothos, Bane

Bane Nothos was, at one time, an aspiring Imperial district commander of the space surrounding the Roche Asteroid Field. Nothos was something of a tactical genius. He was assigned by Emperor Palpatine to shut down Ackbar's Shantipole Project, and given a new Nebulon-B frigate to maintain control of the asteroids. Nothos then planted Salin Glek in the project as a spy and informant. Nothos demanded that the Verpine submit or die, but was rejected by Jurfel. He allowed Shantipole to run its course, choosing to take possession of fully-operative B-Wings instead of just plans and designs. At Salin Glek's notice, Nothos attacked Shantipole, and even obtained possession of the B-Wing prototypes. He was able to anticipate Ackbar's actions for a time. However, Alliance agents - including Ackbar - were able to foil his attempt to take control of the project and steal his Nebulon-B frigate. The Shantipole Project was a complete success for the Alliance, and Nothos was demoted. He was then sent to the Outer Rim Territories to lead a patrol fleet. While there, he was captured by a group of Alliance spies. He was being transported to an Alliance penal world aboard the Celestial when he staged an escape. When the transport ship had hyperdrive problems and was lost in Otherspace, Nothos was forced to submit to the powers of Grand Moff Ravik. They were captured by the Charon ship Desolate and forced to flee the machinations of Ber'asco. Nothos eventually was killed when a group of Alliance agents - dispatched to take control of the Celestial - tried to rescue the crew of the transport from Otherspace. The Alliance agents tried to fight the Charon, and Nothos tried to toss a thermal detonator into the melee to ensure their death. However, the detonator exploded before he could throw it, opening a huge hole in the Desolate. Nothos and his Imperial subordinates were believed killed in the explosion, but Nothos somehow survived. He was captured and put into cryogenic sleep, until Ber'asco lost the strange mental battle with Ravik. Ber'asco's mind then took control of Nothos' body, and used it to hunt down Ravik. In a battle on the planet Stronghold, Ber'asco used Nothos' body to nearly defeat Ravik, but the stronger Ravik crushed Nothos' body in his iron grip. Both Ber'asco and Nothos ceased to exist. (SFS, OS, OS2)

Notoganarech

this Elom proved, via physical calculus, that the Alliance was destined to win the Galactic Civil War. Opponents of the use of physical calculus point out that Notoganarech's table was pre-weighted in order to obtain the outcome, a result of Notoganarech performing his analysis after the Battle of Endor was finished. (TT)

Notonian Mudworm

this was a species of especially slimy worm. (APS)

Notron

according to ancient Seoulian legend, Notron was the birthplace of all human life in the galaxy. (MC84)

Notsil

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Notsil, Lara

this was the alias adopted by Gara Petothel, following her escape from the destruction of the Implacable. She used the alias - that of a young farm woman orphaned on the planet Aldiv by one of Admiral Trigit's raids, then forced to be his concubine - to gain entrance to the New Republic's starfighter corps. She was approached by Garik Loran and Ton Phanan, both of whom hoped she would help them expose Colonel Repness' blackmarket schemes. She agreed, but used her own Imperial Intelligence training to pull the job off better than they had planned. In the end, Lara was given a position the thirteenth position in Wraith Squadron, which meant that she could only fly if another member was out of action. During this time, the part of her that was still Gara Petothel longed to return to Imperial service, and offered Warlord Zsinj the chance to use Lara to gather information about the New Republic. However, after flying with the Wraiths and seeing the Republic's operations first-hand, she realized that much of what she believed about the former Alliance and its people was nothing more than propaganda and lies spread by the Empire. She opted to shed the identity of Gara Petothel for good, and simply be Lara and a Republic fighter pilot. This image was nearly shattered when Zsinj tried to expose her by planting a false "brother" of Lara's in contact with her, but she managed to eliminate the brother with the help of Myn Donos. Lara and Myn had begun a serious relationship at the time when Garik Loran started to realize Lara wasn't a simple farm girl from Aldiv. After searching the Republic's records for a name provided by a Coruscant beggar, Loran discovered that Lara was Gara Petothel. Lara fled the Wraiths, unsure what to do until she realized that she still had an enemy: Zsinj. She returned to the Gara Petothel identity and applied for service aboard the Iron Fist, claiming to bring with her the knowledge of Wraith Squadron, Han Solo's fleet, and the Republic. In reality, Lara used her astromech, Tonin, to assume control of hundreds of MSE-6 droids aboard the huge ship, and set up a series of traps that were designed to bring about its demise. During the battle between Solo's forces and Zsinj's fleet at Kuat, her efforts very nearly destroyed the Iron Fist. However, they were discovered before any real damage could be done, and she was forced to flee the battle. Before leaving the Iron Fist, she freed the creatures Zsinj was using in Project Chubar, and the Ewok Kolot volunteered to fly a shuttle to help her escape. Her shuttle was shot down over Selacron, and it was believed that she died in a crash. She turned up later, on the planet Corellia, as Kirney Slane. (IF, SOC)

Notsil, Tavin

this was the assumed name of one of Zsinj's agents. Tavin's background was that he had escaped the destruction of New Oldtown during some shady deals in another city. Tavin also claimed to have gotten Lara a job with Lachany Foods. The agent was placed in the village of Old Newtown in order to draw Lara Notsil - an identity of Gara Petothel - into Zsinj's own plans. However, Lara had made up her mind to remain with the New Republic. She agreed to meet with Tavin, but was forced to eliminate him when he threatened to kill Myn Donos and take with him and his companion, Captain Rossik. (IF)

Notsub Security

one of the subsidiaries of Notsub Shipping, Notsub Security is Mos Eisley's largest private security firm. (GG7)

Notsub Shipping

the parent company owned and operated by Armanda Durkin, Notsub Shipping is the largest company on Tatooine, employing nearly 1,000 beings and 300 droids. Located on the northern edge of Mos Eisley, Notsub's primary income is derived from shipping and transport. Other business interests Notsub manages include Notsub Security, a stock brokerage, several other minor interests, and controlling percentages of stock in over 50 outside companies. (GG7)

N'ottakcca

this smuggler was active during the height of the New Order, piloting her YT-1300 on a variety of dangerous and exciting missions. (GMR8)

Notu

this Huttese verb translated roughly into Basic as "are not" or "were not." (E1A14)

Not-Yet-Dead Professional Greenputt Tour

this was one of the primary series of greenputt matches held during the last decades of the Old Republic. It was designed around allowing the oldest living players to compete on a regular basis. (HNN4)

Notz

a Habeen CR90 Corvette, this ship was one of the original CR90s produced. The Habeen used the outdated ship to protect their hidden research base. (TIE)

Nouane System

a planetary system. (BTS)

Nour'we'sha

this was a noted member of the Nikto race. (UANT)

Nova

this New Republic carrier cruiser patrolled the Outer Rim Territories shortly after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. It was assigned to Captain Neran Bluus and the Corva Sector fleet. (SWJ6, SWJ8)

NOVA

codename of the Energy Emittance Baffler project. (ML)

Nova Award

this award was presented annually during the last decades of the Old Republic, to recognize excellence in news reporting. (MBS)

Nova Bomb

a detonation device. (ZHR)

Nova Colossus

this was one of the terms Han Solo used to describe an Imperial superweapon, during his discussion with Vana Dorja following the Battle of Coruscant. (DW)

Nova Core

this was an elite brotherhood of New Republic Scout Service employees, designed to honor those scouts who have performed above and beyond the call of duty. In order to gain entrance to the Nova Core, a scout must have at least two years of active service with the NRSS, as well as having explored at least five new, unregistered worlds. Then, the scout must get an invitation from a current member of the Nova Core and then pass an initiation test. (GG8)

Nova Crystals

these precious gemstones are best known because they helped bankroll the first Death Star project for the Empire. Found on several planets, including Krann, Sarka, and Cotellier, the nova crystals are highly-agitated gemstones which have a unique crystalline matrix. This matrix, when exposed to bright sunlight (especially in the red color band), absorbs the heat from the light and becomes excited. This allows the gemstone to glow with its own luminescence, providing a ready light source. If not refrigerated after their removal from the rocky matrix, the crystals can explode with incredible force. (HSE, TSK, GMH)

Nova Demons

a notorious swoop gang operating in the Outer Rim Territories. (DFRSB)

Nova Designs Incorporated

this was one of the largest buyers of spin-sealer tibanna gas from Cloud City during the height of the New Order. (GG2)

Nova Flare

a bombing pattern in which proton torpedoes are dropped on a capital ship in an increasingly wider pattern. The first few torpedoes are tightly-grouped, and take out the section of shielding they hit. The remaining torpedoes explode in a pattern around the initial hole, causing the ship's shields to attempt to compensate for an ever-widening assault. The shield generator on most ships cannot react fast enough to provide power to the growing destruction, and fail. (BW)

Nova Force

a mercenary squadron under the command of Willum Kamaran shortly before the Battle of Yavin. Kamaran and Nova Force were contracted by Prince Xizor to help Durga the Hutt defend the Ylesian colonies from Teroenza and the Desilijic Hutts. Durga agreed to pay Xizor thirty percent of the profits from Ylesia for the protection. (RD)

Nova Generator

an experimental power source, even moreso than matter-antimatter reactors. The idea behind a nova generator is to contain a small star within the generator itself. Then, the star is bombarded with R-band emissions, causing it to explode as a supernova. The intense energy generated by the explosion is then harnessed and stored for later use. A working version of the nova generator has yet to be built. (SWSB)

Nova Level

this was the designation of one of the upper levels of the cityscape on Coruscant, located near the Senate Rotunda, during the last century of the Old Republic. (LOJ)

Nova Lilly

a brightly-colored flower. (DA)

Nova Network

this arch-rival of TriNebula News produced a pro-Imperial tabloid. Nova Network trademarked everything, in an effort to gain an advantage over TriNebula. (GG9, SWJ11)

Nova Nova

this is the finest restaurant in Coronet City, on Corellia. Reservations must be called in months in advance. Often described as 'techno' because of its small, artistic portions, the restaurant also used utensils with built-in sensors, which described to the eater the subtle flavorings and ingredients used to create each mouthful. (IJ)

Nova Prince

this bulk freighter served as the base of operations for Klysk and his masters, who were searching for the unusual gemstones which were rumored to be located within the Red Nebula. The ship was destroyed when Klysk tried to obtain the stones for his own wealth, disregarding the fact that they were protecting his homeworld within the Nebula. The ship, forced into automatic pilot, plunged into the star at the center of the Nebula. (LTA2, MC50)

Nova Ruby

a valuable gemstone found in large numbers on the planet Sarka, nova rubies were not found on any other planet in the galaxy, making them exceptionally rare. The native Sarkans, however, considered the glowing stones to be among the most common of gems found on their homeworld, and often laughed at the offworlders who clamored for them. (AE, GMR7)

Nova Scouts

this group of scouts was part of the New Republic Scout Service. They were one of the most successful bands of Service Scouts maintained by the New Republic. (GG8)

Nova Squadron

this New Republic group of B-Wings was assigned to the support structure for the Mon Remonda's fleet during the hunt for Warlord Zsinj and the Iron Fist. (IF)

Nova Starlight

this perfume was popular during the decade just prior to the Battle of Yavin. (MDCAR)

Nova Station

this space station was erected in the remains of the Carida System, as a stopping point along the Perlemian Trade Route. It was situated just within the cloud of the supernova's gas shell, forcing incoming ships to drop out of hyperspace before reaching the system and then use sublight engines to enter the shell. This gave the station's security forces time to identify every incoming ship, and prepare the appropriate response to their presence. Because of this, Nova Station became a haven for smugglers and other criminals, who liked to have warning of an impending raid so that they could escape. (SBS)

Nova Viper

Spurch Goa's sleek cruiser. (TME)

Nova Whisper

this Lantillian Short Hauler had a remarkable history. Originally owned by Tev Driscull, the ship was seized by the outlaw Dharus and modified for use as an assault gunboat. The Corellian Security Force later captured the ship and refitted it for use in its own operations. The Nova Whisper was lost when Delt Nerris hijacked it, and the ship turned up in the possession of Lernik De'Yago. De'Yago, in turn, sold it to a merchant aboard the herdship Bazaar, who stripped it of useable subsystems and put the hulk up for auction. Before De'Yago sold it, the Nova Whisper was armed with an ion cannon and a pair of concussion missile launchers, and it was equipped with terrain-following sensors. (SS)

Novachild

this Gymsnor-3 freighter was listed as being owned by Hes Glillto. It was suspected by Iella Wessiri that the Novachild was an alias used for Lai Nootka's ship, the Star's Delight. (KT)

Nova-class Battle Cruiser developed by the Hapans, these long, fast ships have immense firepower designed to help them supplement Hapan Battle Dragons. The Nova-class measures 400 meters in length, resembling a two-pronged claw with a viper-like bridge, and are armed with twenty-five turbolasers, ten laser cannons, and ten ion cannons. They are normally equipped with two squadrons of Miy'til fighters and six Hetrinar assault bombers. The design of the Nova-class cruiser was a Hapan Consortium production, and was less than a decade old when Prince Isolder sought Leia Organa's hand in marriage. The ship's engines are designed to run a full year without refueling. The cruiser can transport up to 600 troops, with a crew of 1,700 and 90 gunners. (CPL, EGV, CTD, JE)

NovaCluster Players

this troupe of traveling actors was led by Ahric Korownosek, and produced a number of shows during the height of the New Order. (SS)

Novacom

Alderaan's largest holonet service provider. Tycho Celchu's father worked for them, before the destruction of the planet. (WG)

Novacron Press

this book publisher was preferred by the old Jedi Knights for publishing texts on the use of the Force. (GG9)

Novacrown

this board game was played on a standard dejarik table, but used physical game pieces instead of holograms. (LTA5, MC58)

Nova-Drive

this small, Mid Rim corporation manufactured a variety of freighters in systems along the Rimma Trade Route. Unlike the other giants in the starship business, Nova-Drive didn't design its own ships. Instead, it licensed designs from other firms and created modified version of their own. One example of this process was the #3-Z light freighter, which was created from the pashed-out YT-1200. (SS)

NovaFlare

this Alliance CR90 corvette was commanded by Tresk Ortolan prior to the Battle of Endor. (JASB)

Novahawk

this stylized insignia was adopted by those pirate crews who were contracted by the Alliance to raid Imperial convoys. The Novahawk resembled the Alliance Starbird symbol, but was much more predatory in appearance. (PP)

Noval

this was one of the most common male names among the Corellian population. (GMR9)

Noval

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Novaldex

manufacturers of various starship components, including shield generators and engines. (SCRE)

Novaless Soni-Optics

this specialty manufacturer produced a wide range of ultrasonic sighting systems handheld weapons, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GFT)

Novania

this was one of the primary spaceport cities found on the planet Arkania, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (PH)

Novaplex

this holding company owned the Imperial line of hotels and resorts, and was one of the original Contributing Sponsors of the Corporate Sector Authority. (CSA)

Novaplex

this corporation produced a wide range of products, from heavy-duty shield generators to personal security devices, during the height of the New Order. (EGV, GFT)

Novaplex Hotel

located in Galactic City, on the planet Coruscant, this was the largest and most prestigious of all the Novaplex hotels during the last decades of the Old Republic. It was located near the Bonadan Embassy. (IWE2)

NovaQuad-D

this was a Corellian Engineering Corporation starship drive system, made famous by the Barloz-class freighter. The NovaQuad-D was the precursor to the reliable drives used on the YT series of freighters. They were extremely powerful and reliable, and many starship captains chose to modify the existing system, rather than replace it, to gain additional power. (SS)

Novar

this was one of the most common surnames found among the human population of Corellia. (GMR9)

Novar

an Onderonian functionary working for Queen Amanoa, Novar was educated at the Ov Taraba university. His first political role as an advisor to the king's aide, a position he obtained more because of his father's connections than his own competence. However, Novar was much more adept than his superior, Tolo Kad, who claimed all of Novar's successes were his own doings. In order to remove Kad from his position and take it for himself, Novar told Kad that he had completed all the preparations for a state dinner being held by the King, Ommin. Kad bragged about "his own special preparations" to Ommin, but was shocked to find out that nothing had been prepared by Novar. King Ommin, in a great fit of rage, destroyed Kad with Sith magic and promoted Novar in his place. Over the next decade, Novar manipulated Ommin until the king finally began teaching him the Sith magicks. He later served King Ommin after the wasted Naddist returned to power and captured the Jedi Master Arca. Novar was placed in charge of copying the Sith manuscripts stolen from the Galactic Museum by Satal Keto and Aleema. (TOJ, FNU, TOJC)

Novarr, Fiana

this alias was provided to Iella Wessiri by the New Republic Intelligence agency, in order for her to gain access to the planet Adumar during the negotiations between the Adumari, the Republic, and the Empire. Fiana was a Corellian code slicer hired by the Adumari to assist with interfacing their computer protocols with those of the Empire and the New Republic. (SOA)

Novar's Bluff

this Lianna-class corvette was the first starship to be equipped with the Energy Emittance Baffler and the Empire's first cloaking device. However, the plans for the device had been sabotaged by a group of Alliance agents that had infiltrated Santhe/Sienar's headquarters on Lianna, and the ship was fully detectable once the cloaking device was activated. (ML)

Novastar

this was a specialized racing swoop, developed with rocket boosters to give the craft additional speed. The increased speed also meant that the Novastar was dangerous for inexperienced riders to drive. (TG)

Novastar Corporation

this corporation produced starship navigational computers during the New Order. It was rumored that Novastar was developing a portable nav computer that didn't require an astromech unit. It was also rumored that they had acquired an Imperial TIE Fighter for their own study. (SPG)

Nova-Tech

this corporation produced a variety of powersuits, for use in a wide range of environments. (OE)

Noveron

this was one of the binary yellow stars located at the center of the Veron System. Along with its twin, Orell, Noveron provided energy to all three planets in the system. (PG1)

Novoil Cluster Stargoods

this corporation, one of several remanufacturers of TIE fighters, was abandoned after the fall of the Empire. (RPG)

Novolek Beacon

this stellar anomaly is located near the Sisar Run, and disrupts virtually all communication in its vicinity. The Beacon is situated between Nwarcol Point and Sedri. It was known as a trans-dimensional energy streamer, which was a rare sort of pulsar that spewed out matter, energy, and radiation as it spun. The streamer itself was formed from multi-dimensional, gravitational curves which were invisible in the electromagnetic spectrum, but acted like a convergence of hyperspace mass shadows. This star was known to the Hutts as the Grandfather Clock, since it flared outward at a regular interval of 28 standard days, 12 standard hours, and 42 standard minutes. However, the duration of the flare within that time period varies wildly. (SSR)

Novor Asteroid Field

this belt of space rubble was formed around the star Novor Major when it expanded into a red giant, destroying the seventeen inner-most planets of the system. (SSR)

Novor Major

this star was the central body in the Novor System. Many millennia before the Battle of Hoth, Novor Major expanded into a red giant, tearing apart the seventeen inner-most planets in the system. The outer 16 planets survived the expansion, and their environments were quickly modified by the additional radiation from the star. (SSR)

Novor XXIII

this planet, one of the sixteen which survived the expansion of Novor Major, was the homeworld of the Ry'coz species. (CRO)

Novus

this Twi'leki male was one of the Fallanassi children which were taken to the planet Teyr, where they lived in the city of Griann. (SOL)

Noway

this Alliance Lambda-class shuttle group was destroyed when it tried to assassinate then-Vice Admiral Thrawn when he arrived at the newly-completed NL-1 outpost in the Pakuuni System. (TIE)

Noy Waglla

this small, spider-like Hyallp worked for Jabba the Hutt as a spy and mercenary. He employed her to kill the t'landa Til priests of Colony Four on Ylesia, shortly before the Battle of Ylesia. (RD)

Nozho

one of the two Bith cities involved in the conflict that left the planet Clak'Dor VII an ecological wasteland. The strife was the result of a dispute over patent rights to a new stardrive, thought to be owned by Nozho and Weogar. Nozho investigators blackmailed the neutral arbitrator in order to sway his decision, while Weogar's mayor refused to honor the falsified decision. Both cities began producing the stardrive, and the increased trade competition led to the first Bith war in a million years. Nozho struck first, launching a chemical attack that wiped out most of Weogar's population. Weogar's retaliation was a biological weapon that mutated the genetic structure of any life form it contacted, leaving Nozho a desolate land filled with genetic monsters. Just ten percent of Nozho's original population survived the attack, and the survivors were forced to build hermetically-sealed cities in order to survive the devastation. (GG4, SWDB)

Nozzie

this name, which meant "inquisitive", was common among Gungan males. (GCG)

NR 1100

this spindly droid was produced by the New Republic for use in slicing into the encrypted data cores of Imperial computers. Resembling a floating reptile, the NR 1100 was equipped with a repulsorlift engine and a pair of arms which housed a variety of computer interface probes and jacks. The NR 1100 was programmed with a variety of slicing routines, and was given enough intelligence to learn from known encryption routines to decrypt new ones. (EGD)

NR-5

this was a series of maintenance droids produced by Kalibac Industries during the Galactic Civil War. It was generally believed that the NR-5 was produced to compete with the Treadwell series of droids, although Kalibac claimed that they were trying to compete with Industrial Automaton. The NR-5 was equipped with the Mechro-II brain, a heavy lifting arm, a fine manipulator arm, a general-purpose appendage, and a sophisticated visual sensor system. The NR-5 found popularity among shipboard technicians who needed additional assistance in starship maintenance, but the series suffered from a lack of durability. This meant that NR-5 droids working out of doors on many worlds needed continual maintenance, reducing its effectiveness. The NR-5 was virtually dropped throughout the Outer Rim when the R4-series astromech was introduced by Industrial Automaton, but the NR-5 was generally regarded as more effective than the R4 on more gentle planets. (FOP, PSG, FTD, AEG)

Nrak

this was one of the few Tchuukthai ever to be encountered off their native homeworld. (WOTC)

N'rakti Lava Fields

this open area of bubbling lava was located on the planet Geonosis. (NEGV)

NRC

this abbreviation was part of the lingo known as deal-slang, and stood for "not really committed." It inferred the cynical attitude most gamblers had toward the New Republic. (SWJ4)

Nreem, Vara

this woman, a Jedi Knight who lived at the time of the Freedom Nadd Uprisings and the Great Sith War, believed that there was no distinction between the light and dark sides of the Force. She felt that there was just one Force, with various aspects which all needed to be learned. She once traveled to Krayiss Two to learn more about the Sith magicks which used the dark side of the Force. There, after encountering an ancient Sith-preserved spirit, she realized that the dark side of the Force was extremely powerful, and that it was a separate entity from the light side. The spirit showed her the forms of several Jedi Masters it had captured, and she tried to defeat it. She was consumed by the spirit of the Sith, forced to spend eternity wrapped in the pain and torture of their magic. (TOJC)

NRI

see New Republic Intelligence (AS)

NRI-1

this was Tomer Darpen's codename during the Adumari negotiations with the New Republic and the Empire. (SOA)

Nrin

this name was commonly given to Quarren males, and meant "tall". (GCG)

Nrin Vakil

this Quarren pilot joined Rogue Squadron shortly after the recovery of the Eidolon. He was a breath of fresh air to the Squadron, bringing a quick wit and florid personality to the heavy-handed pilots. To keep his skin moist, and to remind him of homeworld, Nrin wore a specially-designed flight suit that was filled with seawater. Nrin found a fast friend in the Mon Calamari Ibtisam, and they were constantly at each other's throats, arguing opposing sides of any debate with relish. During Plourr's attempt to reconstruct the monarchy of Eiattu, Nrin and the Rogues were on hand to prevent any warfare. Nrin was injured during an Imperial ambush ordered by Moff Leonia Tavra. After recovering, Nrin again proved a valuable member of the Squadron during the search for the Starfaring, when he used his X-Wing to take out a tribe of Irrukiine. Nrin was the loudest of the opponents of the New Republic's plan to place Soontir Fel into Rogue Squadron, shortly after the Battle of Brentaal. After the Rogues tried to recover Sate Pastage from Ciutric, he resigned his post with them and took up other duties for the military. He had tired of killing, but still believed that the New Republic was too worthy a cause to abandon. He became a pilot trainer instead. He returned to active pilot duty during the struggle against Grand Admiral Thrawn, but saw limited duty. During the hunt for Prince-Admiral Krennel, Nrin was called upon to pilot the T-65R reconnaissance fighter during a fly-by of the moon Distna. After retiring from active duty for good, Nrin married Koyi Komad. (XWWP, XWRR, HXW, IR, DTO)

NR-N99

this was the Corporate Alliance's version of the tank droid. Although the NR-N99 was original manufactured to "persuade" businesses and corporations to join the Corporate Alliance, the majority of these droids were produced for use by the Confederacy of Independent Systems during the height of the Clone Wars. The design of the NR-N99 was based on a treaded platform that used a huge, central tread to drive the tank droid across terrain, while outrigger treads provided stability and additional traction. The NR-N99 was armed with a pair of heavy-duty, modular laser cannons that could be reconfigured for various types of engagements. Early versions of the NR-N99 were equipped with droid brains, although this configuration was later dropped in favor of a tank droid that was piloted by a droid operator. With the end of the Clone Wars, all NR-N99 tank droids were issued orders to deactivate, as part of Darth Sidious' plan to consolidate military power and ensure the loyalty of his troops. (VD3)

Nrross

this Trandoshan worked as a pirate during the height of the New Order, serving under Captain Naz Felyood as the navigator aboard the Jynni's Virtue until the ship was intercepted by an Imperial patrol. Captain Felyood ordered a hasty retransit into hyperspace, and they fled the scene. However, the ship's astromech droid exploded due to the strain of the jump. Nrross was caught in the explosion and killed. (PH)

NR-V2

this exploration droid was developed by Arakyd Industries during the early years of the New Republic, and was based on the design of the Viper probe droid. (GMR3)

N-s4

Seinar Fleet System's NavCom Unit, used on the TIE Bomber. (SCRE)

N-s6

Seinar Fleet Systems' fire control module used in the TIE Tank. (EGV)

N-s6

Seinar Fleet System's NavCom Unit, used on the TIE Fighter, the TIE Interceptor, and the TIE Advanced. (SCRE, XW)

N-s8.6

Seinar Fleet System's NavCom Unit, used on assault gunboats. (XW)

NSFS Food Blocks

these pre-packaged food rations were used by smugglers to stock their ships. (SWJ1)

Nssis-class Clawcraft

this was the form of starfighter developed by the Chiss in the early years of the peace accord between the Imperial Remnant and the New Republic. Named for their appearance, clawcraft were constructed from the cockpit and engines of a standard TIE Fighter. Instead of solar panels for wings, the clawcraft had four curved, arm-like projections sprouting from the sides of the cockpit, each tipped with a modified L-s7.2 TIE Fighter laser cannon. Measuring just over 7.5 meters in length, the clawcraft also had limited hyperspace capabilities, lacking a true navigational computer in favor of realspace anchor points near each Chiss-inhabited planet. It could attain speeds near 1,000 kilometers per hour in atmosphere. (DTR, GMR5, NEGV)

NT 600

this was the designation of the droid installed by Vilmarh Grahrk to help pilot the Inferno. Villie gave the droid, which was custom-built at the Golden Nyss Shipyards, the capability to operate the navigational computer and a variety of shipboard systems, but never programmed NT to operate the weapons. NT was a small, spherical droid, equipped with a tiny repulsor engine which allowed it to move about. (T3, T8, TDV)

this was the callsign of one of the Imperial stormtroopers assigned to the Devastator, and who participated in the boarding of the Tantive IV. (JKG)

NT-311

this was the callsign of one of the Imperial stormtroopers who boarded the Tantive IV, shortly before the Battle of Yavin. (JKG2)

NT-757

this was the callsign of one of the stormtroopers stationed aboard the first Death Star. NT-757 was one of the troopers who followed Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa into the chasms of the Death Star, after the heroes escaped from the trash compactor. (JKG3)

NTB-630

this heavy naval bomber was developed by Incom and Subpro for the Old Republic, during the height of the Clone Wars. Similar in design to the PTB-625, the NTB-630 differed in its mission profile. While the PTB-625 was designed for planetary bombardment, the NTB-630 was created to deliver its payloads while engaged in space battles. Thus, it was more maneuverable than the PTB-625, allowing it to get close to capital ships and avoid their turbolasers in order to execute its bombing runs. (X3)

N'ton

this H'drachi youth accompanied Ch'no and Mora in searching the cities of M'haeli for junk to rebuild. N'ton saw that his parents and the other H'drachi elders failed to see Ch'no's unwavering ability to correctly read the time-streams, and so he decided to join the Alliance and help avoid the impending war on M'haeli. (ROC)

Ntthan

a New Republic starship captain, his mission was to deliver supplies to the hidden outpost of New Alderaan. He kept very strict timetables, and was never late. Following the second rebirth of Emperor Palpatine on Byss, Ntthan was intercepted by Imperial forces and taken to Bast Castle, where he was interrogated by Kvag Gthull until he revealed the location of New Alderaan. (DE2)

NT-X2

this modified TX-1118 assassin droid was owned by Luskin Exovar, and was employed to help secure Exovar's Emporium on Neftali. Part of a shipment which never made it to its final destination, NT-X2 was known as Entax, and was accompanied by another TX-1118 droid designated BT-X2 but known as Botax. Both droids were given new programming by Exovar, who removed their assassin routines and replaced them with security routines. They worked as a team, and NT-X2 was the more introspective of the two droids. (WSV)

Nu

meaning "quiet" or "close-mouthed", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Nu pratta dunko

this Huttese phrase translated roughly into Basic as "What do you mean?" (E1A14)

Nu, Jocasta

this wispy woman was a Jedi Knight, and served in the Jedi Temple's Library Archives on the planet Coruscant, some ten years after the Battle of Naboo. Despite her frail appearance, Jocasta was known as a firebrand among the Jedi. Her determination and strength as a Jedi Knight carried over into her work in the Archives, where even the most experienced Jedi Master had to bow to her demands. However, her pride in the Archives and their contents often blinded her to the fact that the Archives were not truly complete, and could be altered from within. Thus, when Obi-Wan Kenobi arrived at the Archives to locate a planet named Kamino, Jocasta Nu was of very little help when it didn't show up in the records. According to Nu, if the planet didn't exist in the Archives, then it simply didn't exist. She was forced to face her pride head-on in the wake of the Battle of Geonosis, when Kamino's existence was verified by both Obi-Wan and Master Yoda. She began her own investigation into the matter, and was surprised to find a trail of evidence that exposed Count Dooku's altering of the archived data on Kamino. Jocasta Nu was portrayed by Alethea McGrath in Star Wars Episode II: Attack of the Clones. (SWI57, TOW, AOTC, VD2, LEV)

Nu, Risso

this Corellian man was a noted bounty hunter, who was considered second only to Boba Fett in the number of successful hunts undertaken in the Core Worlds during the early years of the New Order. He met with a group of other bounty hunters on the remote world of Ma'ar Shaddam, hoping to gain their support in a plan to eliminate Boba Fett during his routine maintenance stopover on the planet. Their plan was hastily thrown together, and any planning they had was shattered when Fett recognized the threat. Before Nu could react, half of his team had been killed by Fett. The other half was eliminated systematically by Fett shortly afterward, until only Fett and Nu remained. Since Fett was busy with the other hunters, Nu managed to steal his Mandalorian armor and weapons, and gained access to Slave I. He then used the ship's weapons systems to try and destroy Fett on the ground. Fett survived a missile blast, and obtained a back-up set of armor - that once worn by Jango Fett - he kept on Ma'ar Shaddam. Fett then tracked Nu down and defeated him in one-on-one combat. Nu was stripped of the Mandalorian armor and left in just his underwear, as a reminder that Boba Fett was still the number one bounty hunter in the galaxy. (T18)

Nuala Marauders

this group of space pirates was active during the last decades of the Old Republic. (ASNG)

Nuance

this was one of the many Strike-class cruisers that made up the front lines of the Imperial Naval fleet. (TIE)

Nu-Ar, Fem

this woman was the chief assistant to Doctor Xathan, during the height of the New Order. They were hired by the Empire to locate the planet Seoul 5. When their research led the Imperial to the correct planet, both of them were bound and imprisoned beneath the planet's surface. Only the timely appearance of Han Solo allowed them to get free. (MC84)

Nub Saar

this was the first of the floating cities built in the atmosphere of the planet Genarius. It was founded by a Trandoshan named Russok, who ordered round-the-clock work on its construction in order to have it ready for occupancy. He drew people to the station with claims of the unlimited potential for wealth in mining the gas clouds. However, Russok and his people were unprepared for the radiation storms which swept across the planet. During one of these intense storms, Nub Saar suffered a catastrophic failure in its repulsorlift systems. The radioactive winds of the storm buffeted Nub Saar for nearly two weeks, killing every living thing on the city by shredding them to pieces at the atomic level. Much of the structure of Nub Saar was reduced to rubble, and the husk of the city remained aloft after achieving a kind of orbit in the clouds. Subsequent builders of floating cities on Genarius used the examples of Nub Saar in designing future cities. There were rumors that clusters of beings survived in the ventilation and sewer systems, but were genetically altered by the radiation. Some 20,000 beings supposedly lived in the city, but no records of their existence has been found. However, investigations into the state of Nub Saar were officially prohibited by the government of the Cularin System, so it was impossible to ascertain what really happened. The government, for its own part, declared Nub Saar to be the example of how to build a floating city in orbit around Genarius, claiming that there was a lower limit to the altitude of a city, below which it would suffer the same sorts of massive damage the Nub Saar experienced. The former Jedi Knight Dazen Mok didn't agree with this explanation, and set out to investigate Nub Saar for himself. He found that Nub Saar was just over two kilometers lower than Tolea Biqua, which had suffered through radiation storms and survived. Dazen Mok theorized that Nub Saar had, in reality, been attacked by something born of the Dark Side of the Force. This dark force had once been roused by Karae Nalvas to help him build his floating fortress of Conkesta, and that had been living within the clouds of Genarius until it awakened by the presence of the new city. (LFC, LFCW)

Nuba City

this was the capital city of the planet Nubia. Located on the side of a mountain range on the planet's western continent, Nuba City was an industrial city which was often shrouded in a dense layer of smog. (CCW)

Nubassa

this Selkath worked as a curator at a museum on his homeworld of Mana'an, some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. (KOTOR)

Nubblyk

a Slyte, Nubblyk was Plawal's town boss just prior to the Battle of Endor. He played a high-stakes game of smuggling out parts and valuables left behind by Imperials, primarily xylen chips, gold wire, and gems. He disappeared unexpectedly. (COJ)

Nubia

this planet, located on the outer edge of the Core Worlds, was home to the Nubians, who produce many specialized starship components. Nubia was located along the Corellian Run, just beyond Corellia and Froz. The planet was first colonized some 22,000 years before the Battle of Yavin, who realized that its bleak appearance was merely a façade. Much of the planet's landmass was considered arid by most standards, but huge underground aquifers provided water for irrigation. This allowed the colonists to quickly provide food for themselves. Over time, the agriculture of Nubia came to provide much of the foodstuffs for the sector. The mountains of the planet were rich in ores and minerals, which fueled the manufacture of a variety heavy machinery. Note that the galaxy map inside Star Wars Insider, issue 65, indicates that Nubia is in the Colonies Region, along the border with the Inner Rim. (SW1, IWE1, BP, SWI65, CCW)

Nubia Star Drives, Incorporated

this starship hyperdrive manufacturer designed some of the most artistic components ever seen. Nubian designs often incorporated J-type engine configurations. The Nubians were renowned for other starship components as well, including sublight engines and spaceframes. Originally known as the Nubian Design Collective, this corporation was formed by a group of humans, Bith, Zabrak, and Sullustans some 300 years before the Battle of Naboo. This loose coalition of designers and engineers claimed Nubia as their own world, and set out to produce high-technology starships for wealthy clients. When Emperor Palpatine instituted the New Order, the corporation went underground to try and keep their designs out of the Empire's hands. In the wake of the Battle of Endor, Nubia Star Drives returned to the galactic community and once again began creating their unique designs in public. (CCW, NEGV, NEGW)

Nubian

see Nubia Star Drives, Incorporated (SW1, X1, CCW)

Nubian

this was the name used to describe the human inhabitants of the planet Nubia. Descended from colonists who first arrived on the planet more than 22,000 years before the Battle of Yavin, the Nubians were considered some of the hardest working - and hardest playing - beings in the galaxy. (CCW)

Nubian B4 Cloudbus

this vehicle, produced by Nubia Star Drives, Incorporated, was used throughout the galaxy for public mass transportation. Its elongated-oval shaped fuselage measured 10.5 meters in length, and could accommodate up to thirty-six passengers and 200 kilograms of cargo. (CCW)

Nubian Design Collective

this was the original name of Nubia Star Drives, Incorporated. (NEGV)

Nubian Palace

this was the largest and most luxurious resort found in orbit around the planet Nubia. Located within the Palace's huge grounds were twelve different casinos, four holoivid theaters, a virtual reality suite, and the Solar Gardens. Unknown to most Nubians, the Palace was owned by Prall the Hutt. Prall used the Palace and its many locations as his base of operations. (CCW)

Nubon

this Ithorian surname was believed to mean "builder" or "architect", according to historian who studied the Ithorian race. (GCG)

Nuboocha

this Hutt traveled to the planet Zeltros to recruit female dancers for his court, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. However, after experiencing the near-constant partying on the planet, Nuboocha decided to stay on Zeltron. Only the strict zoning laws of the Zeltrons kept him from moving his entire business to the planet. (PH)

Nubus

this star was the central body of the Nubus System. (CCW)

Nud

this common Zabrak surname meant "weaponsmith". (GCG)

Nudd chaa!

this Huttese command translated into Basic as "Forward march" or, in some instances, "Follow me." (GMR5)

Nudfuh

this pudgy herbivore was native to the moon of Rori, where it was prized for its leathery hide. (GQRG)

Nudj

this iguana-like reptile lives in the roots of trees which grow on the planet Dagobah. They prefer the dark, moist environments of caves as well, and are quite sensitive to the Force and its energy. They are very docile creatures, despite their fearsome appearance. (CCG4)

Nudskutch

this was a Gamorrean settlement, located on their homeworld of Gamorr. Like most Gamorrean settlements, it was named for the clan which controlled it. (SWJ14)

Nudskutch

this Gamorrean clan was an ally of the Bolgoink clan, after Vrokk's brother Rog took control of the clan. (SWJ14)

Nuendo Rash

this tramp freighter once owed about 20,000 credits to Jabba the Hutt. Nuendo was once hired by the Alliance operative and Jedi Kaoln, to transport goods off Tatooine. The Jedi had planned to use a cargo of grain to hide the real goods. As they were leaving the Mos Eisley spaceport, some of Jabba's henchmen tried to shoot down Rash and his ship. In retaliation, Rash dumped the load of grain on Jabba's palace. (GG6)

Nuffin

a group of traders who were a constant thorn in Jabba the Hutt's smuggling business. The Nuffin are a race of unoriginal beings, starting with the fact that they all look the same: nondescript, pink skinned humanoids with beady eyes, no nose, and a ridge of dark skin that rises up there spine and wraps six tendrils around their heads. They identify each other by number. (JTH)

Nugek

this New Republic Ambassador once gave Anakin Solo a busy bix as a gift. The box had wheels that could be spun, and blocks that could be pushed through shaped holes. (SOL)

Nugtosh

this tall, thin alien presided over the annual Vinta Harvest Classic podrace on Malastare, during the era of the Battle of Naboo. (ETM)

Nuh ghis

this Mandalorian term translated into Basic as 'now'. (KOTOR)

Nui Gneppe

this thin Filordi worked as an archivist for the Naescorcom manufacturing operations on the floating city of Ipsus, on Genarius, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Nui Gneppe had previously worked as an agent of the Trade Federation, but became bored with his work. After joining Naescorcom, Nui worked specifically in the Line Two section of Ipsus, documenting all aspects of the development of thermal detonators. (LFC)

Nuiri Sector

this area of the galaxy was controlled by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War. (WSV)

Nuiwit

native to Altor 14, and often referred to as Altorian Lizards, these quadrupedal reptiles are somewhat smaller than the Avogwi, and can walk on their hind legs for short periods of time. They have long bodies covered with horny scales, and their eyes protrude from their heads on short stalks. An unusual aspect of their physiology is their tubular tongue, which is prehensile and is tipped by tough conical spikes. While the Avogwi are carnivorous, the Nuiwit are herbivorous. They are also cold-blooded. The Nuiwit are pacifists by nature, and have a highly-structured society. Despite all these differences, scholars believe that the two races descended from a common ancestor. Like the Avogwi, the Nuiwit dislike technology. (GG4)

Nukkels

this was one of the most common Gungan surnames, taking from the father's side of the family. These surnames were not dropped, even after marriage. To the Gungans, it meant "strong warrior". (GCG)

Nuknog

native to the planet Sump, this unusual alien race was easily distinguished by their unusual skull. The top of a Nuknog's head was dominated by a spined frill, while its jaws were set well below and in front of the cranium. Each node of the frill was filled with fat, which was stored for periods when food was scarce. Nearly a millennium before the Battle of Yavin, the nuknog race literally sold their homeworld to a consortium of unscrupulous businessbeings in exchange for jobs, food, and accommodations. What they got were leftover rations, prefabricated barracks, and generations of indentured and unpaid labor. After several centuries, the Old Republic tried to intervene, shutting down the businesses and ordering hundreds of years of back wages to be paid. Eventually, Sump was returned to the Nuknog people, and the Old Republic began a series of relief missions to Sump, bringing food and supplies to help the beleaguered Nuknogs. However, the Nuknogs feared that the Republic was going to be just as unscrupulous as their former masters. Rather than accepting the relief efforts at face value, they simply took the supplies and then blamed the Republic for "stealing the only life they ever had." The Nuknog leaders then demanded food and supplies be delivered for free in perpetuity, a request which the Republic flatly denied. (SWDB, VD2, UANT)

Nuknog

this was the native language of the Nuknog race, consisting of squeals, barks, and gruff noises. A simple alphabet made up the written form of the language. (UANT)

Nul

this name was given to female Zabrak, and meant "daughter". (GCG)

Nul

a small city found on the eastern coast of the Galleros continent of the planet Zelos II. It was renamed in honor of Galleros Nul. (PG2)

Nuladeg, Bern

a member of Klyn Shanga's militia, Bern Nuladeg served with Klyn from the first battle they fought as children. Nuladeg's prowess with the limited fighter craft the Renatasians had earned him a promotion to flight instructor, and later to Admiral of the flight academy. His family was brutally murdered by a group of off-duty Imperial soldiers during the time when the Empire invaded the Renatasia System, while their commanding officer looked away. The commanding officer was killed in his sleep later on, and rumors have it that Nuladeg was the killer. After the Renatasians were drawn into Rokur Gepta's plans to kill Lando Calrissian, Nuladeg tried to steal Gepta's auxiliary craft. He and Shanga were both thrown in the brig, but they proved that Gepta's soldiers weren't up to snuff. That earned them their freedom to fight against the Renatasians' true enemy, Osuno Whett. However, Nuladeg was killed when he attempted to interfere with the duel between Gepta and Lando Calrissian, and his fighter was shot down by the Wennis. (LCS)

Nulan VI

this planet was an extremely rebellious world in the Empire, until the Scimitar Assault Wing, known as the White Death, laid siege to it with their TIE bombers. The planet's inhabitants eventually surrendered to the Empire. (ISB)

Null

this humanoid race, native to the planet also known as Null, stood a meter taller than the average human. The males wore their beards long and braided, and both sexes preferred to dress in animal skins and thigh-length boots. The Null were known primarily for their skills as hunters and stonemasons. (LOJ)

Null

this forested planet was one of first worlds ally itself with the Confederacy of Independent Systems, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Although a planet-wide government had been established, the native peoples preferred to manage themselves on a more local level. Individual tribes existed in small settlements, and justice was often carried out in the form of swift and deadly skirmishes that left no witnesses behind. During his attempt to gain possession of the Station 88 Spaceport for the Separatists, Count Dooku suggested that representatives from Junction 5, Delaluna, Bezim, and Vicondor all meet on Null to negotiate a deal. Lorian Nod, representing Samish Kash, asked the Jedi Knights to investigate the situation on Null, in an effort to keep the Station 88 Spaceport in the hands of the Republic. Over time, Dooku managed to acquire ownership of the entire planet, and it became one of the many targets of the Grand Army of the Republic during the height of the Clone Wars. During the fighting, the Separatist forces hired the bounty hunters of the Crimson Nova chapter of the Bounty Hunter's Guild to kill the Jedi Knights who were leading the Republic's forces. Null Zone an area of the galaxy surrounded by a sea of gamma radiation, it is where the Prophets of the Dark Side operate, separated from the rest of the galaxy. (LCJ)

Null, Warb

one of the most ferocious Naddists to inhabit ancient Onderon, Warb Null had incredible strength and military prowess in addition to his ability to tap the Dark Side of the Force. Originally a metallurgist named

Shas Dovos, he was melded to his unique set of armor after conjuring a Sith spirit. He launched an attack on Iziz during the funeral processor for Queen Amanoa, and managed to steal the remains of the Queen and Freedon Nadd. Warb Null's base was located beneath the ground of Iziz, and he was serving under the still-living King Ommin. When the Jedi Master Arca appealed to Ommin for aid in recovering the remains of Freedon Nadd, Ommin and Warb Null attacked, overpowering Arca and taking him captive. However, in the battle, Warb Null was struck down by Ulic Qel-Droma. (FNU, TOJC)

Nullada

this immense Shell Hutt was the leader of the group which inhabited the artificial world of Circumtore. Nullada was unaware of Gheeta's intricate web designed to ensnare Boba Fett, until the younger Hutt set them in motion. It was Nullada who offered to keep Oph Nar Dinnid safe from reprisal by the Narrant System liege-lords, in return for the information stored in the comm handler's brain. However, Gheeta executed the Lyunesi before any real information could be extracted. This angered Nullada, but not as much as the destruction of the diplomatic complex on Circumtore, which resulted when Boba Fett reacted to Gheeta's plans. However, Gheeta's death at the end of the battle was more than enough to allow the bounty hunters to leave without retaliation. (MA)

Null-burst Projector

this strange weapon was created by the Aing-Tii monks for use on their Sanhedrim starships. The null-burst projector creates a pocket of negative energy which does little physical damage to its target. However, the target's crew is incapacitated for several hours after the blast, during which time the Aing-Tii can board the ship without resistance. (KO)

NullComm

this was one of the most cutthroat communications agencies of the New Order. (CCW)

Null-gas

this form of gas was used by paranoid starship owners who wanted to protect their ships from being stolen. In the event of a break-in, these captains had installed anti-intrusion systems. One system could release a charge of null-gas into the life support system, effectively removing all oxygen from the environment and rendering the thieves incapacitated or dead. (SS)

Null-gee Polo

a popular, zero-gravity spectator sport. (RD)

Nullicaine

this medicinal spray was used by field surgeons during the height of the Clone Wars to help dull the pain of injury, while at the same time killing any germs or bacteria that might have gotten into a wound. (MJH)

Nullifier

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was placed in command of the fleet which protected the planet Corulag, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. It was commanded by Admiral Nyran at the time. (SWJ12)

Nullifier Diffusion Armor

this specialized piece of technology was a piece of ancient technology, rediscovered by Vallikor En-Vahdi. It was a full suit of armor, including helmet and tactile gloves, which emitted a powerful force field around the wearer. This force field absorbed all forms of energy thrown at it, both from without and within. This meant that the wearer had to use projectile weaponry while the armor was activated, or else all shots fired would be absorbed by the armor before they could hit their target. (WSV)

Num

this was a common name given to male Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Numa

this was a common name given to Twi'lek females, and meant "sister" in the Twi'leki language. (GCG)

Numa Rar

this Twi'lek female - distinguished by her pale blue skin - and her sister, Alema, joined Luke Skywalker's Jedi praxeum some time before the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. The sisters were briefly trained by Daeshara'cor, and were later part of the Jedi team dispatched to New Plympto. Numa Rar and the planet's leaders agreed to help fund the initial stages of the formation of Luke Skywalker's Great River, in hopes that they could rescue their own refugees. While there, the Rar sisters were instrumental in driving off the Yuuzhan Vong. Unfortunately, the Yuuzhan Vong simply covered the planet with a life-destroying plague. The Rar sisters managed to assist several thousand refugees in escaping, finding passage aboard intersystem ore freighters. After a bounty was placed on the heads of the Jedi by Warmaster Tsavong Lah, Numa and Alema were ambushed while traveling in disguise aboard the Nebula Chaser. Numa was the first of the Jedi to fall to a voxyn, dying aboard the ship while she and Alema tried to escape. (EVR, SBS)

Numatra

this hide of this creature is valued for clothing and footwear. (RD)

Numb

this surname was common among the Sullustan race, and referred to a savage predator that was native to Sulon. (GCG)

Numb

this was a species of savage predator that was native to the plains of Sulon, the agricultural moon of Sullust. (GCG)

Numbers

this was the nickname of the Bith who owned and operated the Irrational Number, in Jugsmuk Station on Gamorr. (SWJ14)

Numesh Sector

this was the name of one part of the planet Coruscant, after it had been destroyed and rebuilt by the Yuuzhan Vong into a simulacrum of their long-lost homeworld, Yuuzhan'tar. (FH3)

Nuna

this strange, bird-like reptile inhabited the swamps of the planet Naboo. The nuna had a large, round body supported by two strong legs. Its wings or arms were virtually non-existent, and its head bobbed up and down when it walks. Also known as a swamp turkey, the nuna was often served as the main course at Gungan holiday feasts. When confronted in the wild, most nuna would simply turn and flee as fast as they could. If cornered, though, a nuna would lash out with its sharp beak and kick with its legs. Males often showed aggression by inflating the wattles around their necks and hissing. Females gave birth to a litter which was contained in a single, huge egg. Each egg could contain up to ten young, and the mother had to help the young escape from the thick shell upon hatching. The meat of a nuna was considered tasty to the Gungans, but was poisonous to Rodians and Twi'leks. The Gungans developed a sport, known as nuna-ball, that used a live nuna as the ball. The angered nuna puffed itself up, and was carried by each team toward it's opponent's goal. (SW1, SON, WSW, SWI65)

Nuna-ball

this sport originated on the planet Naboo, when Gungans started using a live nuna as a ball. When angered, a nuna would inflate its body to make itself look bigger. This round nuna was then carried by opposing teams toward their opponent's goal. The sport gained popularity after the Battle of Naboo, and entire leagues were founded on the basis of the sport. (HNN5, SWI65)

Nuna-Ball League

this was the galaxy's first, professional nuna-ball league, established by Lysko Buelia and a group of investors during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Teams in the league, which started out as a product benchmarking test, were made up entirely of droids. New models of droids were grouped into teams and pitted against each other in matches that mimicked the organic sport that evolved on Naboo.

Droid manufacturers liked the format for many reasons, not the least of which was the minimal cost involved in fielding a team, versus the monetary rewards of the sport's popularity. (HNN5)

Nunb

this surname was common among the Sullustan race, and meant "teacher" in the Sullustan language. (GCG)

Nunbar

this smuggler, based on the StarForge Station, discovered a cache of A9G archive droids. He tried to sell them to other smugglers, in order to resell them to an unknown source on Ryloth at a tidy profit. (SWJ14)

Nuni

this Galacian woman was a member of the Hill People, and was known for her skills in watching over and teaching the children of her clan. She was one of Elan's most trusted friends. (MOC)

Nunkee

this was a common name for Ewok females. Like other Ewok names, it referred to a spirit or character in the Ewoks' mythology. (GCG)

Nunkee

according to Ewok legend, this fish spirit lulled Ewok fishers to sleep before stealing - and eating - their bait. (GCG)

Nunsk, Lin

this Imperial Navy Captain was stationed in Tapani Sector, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He commanded the Empire's Tapani Sector fleet from his command ship, the Imperial-class Star Destroyer Gauntlet. He had been stationed in Tapani Sector for six years prior to the Battle of Endor, primarily ensuring that shipments of bacta reached the Imperial Core. He was known as a competent though fearful officer who took as few risks as possible in order to ensure at least some measure of victory. (LOE)

Nunurra

this city on the planet Roon hosted the Colonial Games. (DCAR)

Nupe Yeldand

this being was a native of Manda, during the early years of the New Order. (DCAR)

Nur

this barren, rocky planet was the fourth world in the Vulpter System. It was orbited by a single moon. (PH)

Nuralee

this planet experienced an economic breakdown during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Astri Oddo, the wife of Nuralee's elected Senator, Bog Divinian, was at the forefront of a relief group that petitioned the Old Republic for assistance. Astro hoped that the passage of the All Planets Relief Fund would help Nuralee's situation. (JQ3, JQ9)

Nuri

this Clawdite shapeshifter made a living on the planet Aargau, during the last decades of the Old Republic, assuming the guise of a helpful Bimm in order to help unknowing individuals recover their fortunes from Aargau's banks. Nuri agreed to help the individuals reach the Undercity, where he assured them that cheaper and less obvious methods of making withdrawals could be found. In this way, Nuri gained the confidence of young Boba Fett just weeks after the Battle of Geonosis. Once Nuri delivered the individual to an access machine, he withdrew his own "small" commission - usually a large percentage of the individual's fortunes - then left them stranded in the Undercity. Boba Fett encountered Nuri again on Xagobah, during the search for Wat Tambor. Fett, now thirteen, and discovered that it was Nuri who helped Tambor escape from prison, and was now helping to guard his fortress of Xagobah. In a brief struggle, Boba Fett managed to disarm Nuri and force him to reveal Tambor's exact location by drugging him with the poison of a xabar fungus. Unfortunately, the xabar had been among those altered by Wat Tambor, and Nuri was immediately rendered rigid and unconscious. All his body functions were reduced to bare minimum levels, and he appeared to be dead. (BF3, BF5)

Nuri Pravada

this blue-skinned woman (a Chiss?) was part of the rebel underground on Elerion, serving under General Orma Hundeen during the height of the Galactic Civil War. She posed as one of the Quetzal Sisters to help Leia Organa recover a valuable holocube on Elerion, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (T15)

Nuriin-Ar

this Korunnai native of Haruun Kal led a daring mission to Coruscant during the height of the Clone Wars, capturing Senator Meena Tills and several other beings. They were held hostage in exchange for the complete removal of the Old Republic's forces on Haruun Kal. According to Nuriin-Ar's first message, the Republic was to fear his group, since they were able to operate in the very heart of the Republic without being captured. The government of Haruun Kal refused to admit any knowledge of Nuriin-Ar's actions, but acknowledged that it "fully understood" the gang's actions. In order to make a show of good faith, Nuriin-Ar agreed to meet with Jedi Master Kaim, but became incensed when he discovered a strip-cam hidden in Kaim's robes. To make sure the Republic understood his conviction, Nuriin-Ar knocked Master Kaim unconscious and hid an explosive on his body, then pushed the Twi'lek's body back out into the anetchamber. The explosives detonated, destroying Kaim's body and nearly killing the clone commandos who were waiting outside. The terrorist action only hardened the resolve of the clone commandos of Omega Squad, who were able to sweep in and eliminate all of the terrorists, including Nuriin-Ar, before any more hostages could be killed. It was later learned that Senator Tills wasn't the primary target, just a convenient diversion for the possible killing of N'zaet Nir. (SWI81)

Nurm

this Sullustan pilot worked for Event Vistas, and served as the pilot on the auxiliary bridge of the Nebula Queen in support of Rostat Manr. When Manr was brainwashed into trying to crash the ship into the planet Coruscant, Nurm managed to stun Rostat, rendering him unconscious and saving the ship. (SOC)

Nuro

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name meant "judge". (GCG)

Nuro

this was the designation of a group of Imperial tankers used to supply the Bretie production facility during the Galactic Civil War. (XWA)

Nuro Tualin

this Twi'lek male served as Polearm Two, of the New Republic's Polearm Squadron, during the hunt for Warlord Zsinj. During a short leave from the Squadron, Tualin was captured and brainwashed by agents of Zsinj working on Projects Minefield and Funeral, and programming was implanted into his brain which compelled him to destroy something. That something would be named within a key phrase that would trigger the programming. Just before the Republic responded to the distress call at Jussafet Four, the cook Galey activated Tualin's programming with a short phrase. Tualin was compelled to do everything in his power to destroy the Mon Remonda. He nearly succeeded, blowing a huge hole in the command bridge and killing a number of crewmen. Tualin was killed in combat by Tyria Sarkin. (SOC)

Nurrale

this tropical city, located on the planet Esseles, was the site of the Togatto Speedway. (CCW)

Nursery

this was the name given to the interior of the seedship commanded by Master Shaper Ch'Gang Hool, where a group of immature dhuryams were allowed to grow and learn about controlling their environment. The Nursery was divided into wedges, with the points of each wedge touching the central pond where the dhuryams were growing. Artificial night and day were provided by immense light sources, and the Nursery was stocked with all forms of natural resources. Slaves were assigned to each dhuryam infant, which controlled them in order to execute its own plans for developing the resources in the wedge it controlled. When the time came, the dhuryams which had grown in the Nursery were subjected to the trials of the tizo'pil Yun'tchilat, in which a single individual would emerge as the World Brain that would seed Coruscant. (T)

Nursery Rings

used on the tallest wroshyr trees on Kashyyyk, nursery rings are built as a sort of day care and school for young Wookiees. (HTTE)

Nursling

this was the name for a young falumpaset. (WSW)

Nurstin

this rocky, gas-covered was the third planet of the Bissillirus System. A number of mining colonies were established by Messert Mines Corporation around the planet during the last century of the Old Republic. Its red atmosphere was discovered by Arnoll Draenell to have brilliant flashes of light sparkling its face, and it was later discovered to be rich in corthel and cortheum. The average day on the planet lasts 19 standard hours, and its year encompasses 300 standard days. (GMK)

Nuruk

this was one of the more common surnames used by the Duros people. Like all such names, Nuruk was used only for official business, to indicate one individual from another when in the presense of non-Duros. This name literally meant "soldier". (GCG)

Nurumbal Shrine

this is one of the most revered locations on the planet Esseles, located in the city of Calamar. (SWJ8)

Nuruodo

this was one of the four ruling families of the Chiss civiliation. Like the other families, the Csapla bloodlines predate modern Chiss society. The Nuruodo family controlled much of the Chiss military forces, with colonial units from each of the twenty-eight Chiss colony worlds. The Chiss Expansionary Defense Fleet was also controlled by the Nuruodo. (GMR5)

Nus Whale

this leviathan was native to the oceans of Dorumaa. An average bull whale could swallow a fishing trawler whole, making them extremely dangerous to hunt. An average specimen could grow as much as twenty meters a year, in seasons when food was plentiful. Bulls of 100 meters in length, and cows over eight meters, were not uncommon during the last decades of the Old Republic. (LFC)

Nushk

this planet, the third world in the Hoth System, was covered with liquid-methane oceans. It was orbited by four moons. (PH)

Nusp

this Nediji word described one of the many colors that were not visible to most humanoid eyes. It was only visible to races like the Nediji, that could see above and below the wavelengths of visible light. (MJH)

Nussek

this was a common name among Quarren females. It meant "smooth-skinned". (GCG)

Nut-beetle

this small insect is considered a delicacy by many humans. The shiny, slippery bugs have tasty flesh, and are cracked open while still alive. The meat is removed and eaten, while the shell is discarded. (TBH)

Nute Gunray

this Neimoidian worked as the Viceroy for the Trade Federation, but was primarily under the command of Darth Sidious. Gunray himself was a minor Viceroy until the Trade Federation Directorate was targeted for assassination by the Nebula Front, during the taxation summit on the planet Eriadu, about a year before the Battle of Naboo. When Gunray and Lott Dod were the only two Neimoidians to survive the assassintation, he was promoted to a position in which he was the commanding Viceroy over the entire Trade Federation. Sidious placed Gunray in charge of blockading the planet Naboo and capturing Queen Amidala if she should try to escape. However, Gunray was unable to control the Queen, and she fled the planet. Darth Sidious then sent Darth Maul to recover her. Meanwhile, Gunray was ordered to invade Naboo and take control of the world, which the Niemoidians did with the help of their vasr droid army. However, Gunray and his comrades were unable to foresee the resourcefulness of Queen Amidala, who returned to the planet and managed to capture Gunray and his assistants during the Battle of Naboo. The Niemoidians were returned to Coruscant to stand trial for their actions. However, through political machination, Gunray was allowed to maintain a modicum of control over the Trade Federation, provided that he dismantle the Federation's droid army. Seeing the opportunity that freedom afforded him, Gunray agreed to the deal. However, in the background, he continued to work toward re-establishing the Trade Federation's protective droids. He later supported the Separatists by throwing the Federation's political and financial strength behind Count Dooku's Separatist movement. He also paid Dooku quite heavily for the services of Jango Fett, in an effort to assassinate Padme' Amidala, as a pre-condition to the deal and as a measure of revenge for the loss of Naboo. The plans for the battle droids were provided to the Geonosians, who turned out huge numbers of the droids in their factories. When the Jedi arrived on Geonosis, and the Battle of Geonosis raged on, Gunray and his subordinates saw another disaster looming in their future. Rather than assist in the war effort, they boarded their starships and fled into space to plan the next phase of the Separatist assault. Gunray himself chose to return to the Neimoidian purse-world of Cato Neimoidia, where he maintained a fortified palace and a fungus farm. He was nearly trapped there, some thirty months after escaping from Geonosis, and was forced to leave behind his wealth in order to survive. Among the things Gunray left behind was his custom-build mechno-chair, which was captured by the Republic before Gunray could destroy it. The technology in the mechno-chair, combined with the information stored in its computer systems, allowed the Republic to finally verify the existence of Darth Sidious, and laid bare much of the Separatists' plans for the upcoming war. Gunray, along with the other leaders of the Confederacy on Independent Systems, were secreted away to Utapau just before the First Battle of Coruscant. After hiding on Utapau under the protection of General Grievous, the Separatists were taken to Mustafar. It was there, after Darth Sidious finally lured Anakin Skywalker to the Darth Side of the Force, that the Separatist leaders met their deaths. Skywalker was dispatched to Mustafar by Sidious himself, with orders to eliminate them. Skywalker was forced to hunt down Gunray, who had fled their hiding place when Skywalker began killing the rest of the Separatist leaders. Gunray tried to plead for his life, but Skywalker simply cut him down in mid-sentence. Nute Gunray was portrayed by Silas Carson in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace, Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones, and in Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (SW1, COD, AOTC, AOTCN, NEGC, LEV, IS3)

Nuth

this was once of the many names given to Duros females. Among the Duros, it meant "breathtaking". (GCG)

Nutorium

this specialized hull plating material was developed to defeat sensors systems, allowing a ship to move about with relative stealth. (SWJ5)

Nuuk Kuur

this Duros, an early supporter of the Alliance, was captured on Kvevron by Falto Dragen, shortl before the Battle of Yavin. Nuuk Kuur had been staying in the safehouse maintained by Idu Taanfaar, and was being transported to the spaceport in Mal Ethon City when Dragen intercepted them. Taanfaar was killed, and Nuuk Kuur was taken into custody. (RESB)

Nuun

this was the Yuuzhan Vong designation of those highly-skilled warriors who were chosen to become the physical incarnation of the hunter. Only one in a thousand warriors was chosen to wear the cloak of the Nuun, which was a living material containing photosensitive bacteria that made the wearer blend into their surroundings. (SWI62)

Nuur, Shaela

this ancient Jedi Knight was once a student of the renowned Jedi Master Ood Bnar. When Master Bnar initiated his life-cycle change, he bequeathed a solari crystal to Shaela, whom he considered to be his most promising student. Unfortunately for the Jedi Order, Shaela disappeared shortly after the Great Hunt, and the solari crystal vanished with her. Shaela had been dispatched to Korriban, along with Guun Han Saresh and Duron Qel-Droma, on a mission to hunt down and destroy the terentateks that had escaped from the Sith fortress. However, their party was fragmented when Guun Han grew jealous of the relationship Shaela had with Duron. Guun Han claimed that their passion placed them all on a path to the Dark Side of the Force, and he left Korriban for Kashyyyk. Left alone, Shaela and Duron were no match for the terentateks. Duron was killed first, leaving Shaela alone on the Sith world. She felt herself slipping over to the Dark Side of the Force, blaming Guun Han for Duron's death and hating him for it. Her last words were recorded on a datapad that was later recovered by another group of Jedi Knights, indicating that she set out to kill the terentateks in an act of revenge before being killed herself. (KOTOR)

Nuuswan

according to Ithorian legend, this bird collected pretty gems. (GCG)

Nuuswan

Nuuta

this Phindian male was Kaadi's father. He was arrested by the Syndicat and put through their renewal process. His memory was wiped clean, and the Syndicat dropped him on the planet Alba, in the midst of a bloody civil war. Nuuta was not heard from again. (HP)

Nuutu Plunb

this female Sullustan worked for Xizor Transport Systems as a dispatcher, based on the planet Lianna. She was in charge of routing cargoes from Lianna to XTS locations throughout the Allied Tion Sector. She was known as an excellent judge of character, and could also be a dangerous enemy to those pilots who cross her or the company. (PSG)

Nuyu

this Lafrarian male was a tattoo artist and body decorator who ran a small shop on StarForge Station during the Galactic Civil War. (FOP)

N'Vadin

this merchant had a shop on the Kuari Princess's Bazaar Deck, selling humanoid formal attire. (RM)

N'van

an island in the northern hemisphere of the planet Ban-Satir II, it is famous for its production of Novanian Grog. (CSA) known as the "small giant" of the Sisar Run, this outpost was located at the connecting point of the Run with the Salin Corridor. Often called the Sisar Terminal, which was the term used to describe its location along the Corridor, Nwarcol Point was the primary refueling station for ships travelling from Hutt Space to Tharin Sector and the Salin Corridor. The station fell under the protection of the Nalroni crimelord Sprax during the height of the New Order. Among the many services provided at Nwarcol Point was a huge, sprawling casino, which accounted for more than twenty percent of the station's income. (SSR)

Nwarcol Point

Nyalsan II

this was the name of DefenStar's planetary shutter shield system. (HAS)

Nyantolo

native to the waters of Wyndigal 2, this large mammal was a filter-feeder that consumed swamp debris, algae, and small fish as it moved through the water. The body of a nyantolo was covered with a heavy, plated carapace which is formed from a sticky secretion produced by the animal's body. Bits of debris sticks to the fluid, and over time it builds up to form the "shell." The average nyantolo measured 3-5 meters in length, yet only lives a few years. Reproduction among nyanolo is a communal event, as there are three distinct sexes among them and all three are needed for reproduction. This creature was originally named for the scout who inadvertently discovered them. A Rodian, Nyantolo was knocked from his feet a swipe from one of the creature's long fins, and died when the beak of the creature crashed down on his skull. (COG)

Nyantolo

this Rodian scout was killed on Wyndigal 2 when he discovered a huge, aquatic beast later known as a nyantolo. The Rodian got too close to the water's edge and startled the beast, which knocked Nyantolo from his feet with a swipe from a long fin. Nyantolo fell into the water, and his skull was crushed when the beast brought its head down on top of him. (COG)

Nyarikan Nebula

located near the Garos System, this gaseous cloud makes travel in the area difficult at best. Thus, the Garos System received little travel in or out. (SWJ5, SWJ12)

Nyasko

a planet in the Colunda Sector, it was the site of an Imperial AT-AT battalion during the Galactic Civil War. (DESB)

Nyeta

this was an alien word which translated into Basic as "no." (GMR10)

Nyex

a sleep-inducing drug. (COJ)

Nygann Cantina

located on the Smuggler's Moon of Nar Shaddaa, this cantina was the site of Doune's most famous sabacc victory. He "won" one final hand against Kinnin Vo-Shay, obtaining the human's obsidian amulet in the win. Doune believed the amulet provided Vo-Shay with unending luck, and hoped to become a greater sabacc player with it. Unknown to Doune, the amulet was simply a gift from one of Vo-Shay's old girlfriends. Vo-Shay actually gave the game to Doune, holding a sabacc but allowing it to pass. He did it for two reasons: first, to escape Doune's wrath; and second, to recover the lightsaber Nyo wanted so badly. (TFNR)

Nygreena Clo

this Jedi Knight, along with Plessus Ghon, Ixian Rovieda and Padawan Renxis Dielle, was killed on Kabal during a series of riots broke out when the Trade Federation overtaxed the planet for shipping. The taxation occurred just before the onset of the Clone Wars, and led to massive food shortages among the Kamarian people. The Jedi had been called in to quell the riots, when a fleet of supply ships loyal to Count Dooku and the Separatists began to drop food supplies to the populace. A scramble to obtain food ensued, and the Jedi were killed while trying to maintain the peace. (HNN5)

Nyiestra

this woman was a native of Alderaan, and was engaged to Tycho Celchu. She was killed when the first Death Star destroyed Alderaan. (XWBT)

Nyik Tar'ak

this Ebranite and her sisters, Rith and Tor'ara, were members of the Rull clan, and were sold into slavery in their youth when the Empire took control of Ebra. The three sisters managed a daring escape, forcing the pilot of an Imperial shuttle to take them to the Alliance, where they became some of the first Ebranites to serve. They served in Kesh Sector before joining the ranks of Scandium Team, where they founded the Sandstorm Unit of desert-environment Infiltrators. Rith was the only surviving member of the family following the Wellte-ir Massacre, as both Nyik and Tor'ara were killed near the Umber Banks. (SWJ11)

Nyir

this was one of the many names given to female Bothans. In the Bothan language, it meant "beautiful" or "pretty." (GCG, WOTC)

Nykl

this young Balawai boy was one of five children rescued by Mace Windu from a lava flow in the jungle of Haruun Kal, shortly after the Battle of Geonosis, when he traveled to the planet to locate Depa Billaba. The children, led by Terrel Nakay, had been trying to return to their camp in a steamcrawler when it was caught by the lava. Nykl, his brother Urno, along with Keela and Pell Nakay, were taken in by Nick Rostu, after Windu left them to seek out answers in the jungle. (SHPT)

Nyklas

this Imperial Commander was in charge of construction on a new wing of the Imperial Hall of Heroes when Han Solo was sent to assist him. Nyklas had been using - and mistreating - a group of Wookiee slaves he had obtained from the Trandoshan slaver Ssoh. During a mission to obtain more Wookiees, Nyklas found that his contact's ship was disabled. He ordered Han and his flight of TIE Fighters to take out the ship, but Han discovered that there were Wookiees still alive on board. Nyklas ordered Han to kill the survivors, but Han rebelled against this senseless slaughter. He freed one of the Wookiees, named Chewbacca, and was immediately reprimanded by Nyklas. Han was quickly given a dishonorable discharge and blacklisted as a pilot. (THG, C)

Nyl, Darca

this man was one of the many Jedi Knights who roamed the galaxy during the last decades of the Old Republic. He often traveled in the guise of an immense mercenary, complete with a full-face mask, to hide his true identity. His face was distinguished by the scars running across the bridge of his nose. During the Clone Wars, Nyl traveled to a remote world on what many of his peers considered a mission of vengeance, which distanced him from the rest of the Jedi Order. Upon arrival, he thwarted the capture of a young boy who had been implicated in the kidnapping of Samuel's daughter, Leddar. Samuel, the leader of the remote outpost, agreed to drop any charges against Nyl, so long as he helped locate his daughter and bring the kidnappers to justice. In exchange for Darca's help, Samuel agreed to also provide information on the Dark Jedi Lycan, whom Darca had been searching for. Darca managed to locate Royce, who had kidnapped Leddar, and discovered the truth behind Samuel's relationship with Royce. After ensuring that they wouldn't kill each other, Darca left Samuel to contemplate his actions and set out for Molavar, where Royce claimed that Lycan was heading. (T21)

Nylar

this was an inexpensive, synthetic fabric, used to make all manner of clothing during the early years of the New Republic. (TG)

Nylog

the flesh of this creature was often served grilled. (EVR)

Nym

this Feeorin was known as a pirate who ambushed ships from a secret base on the Naboo System, although the base's location was never discovered. Nym was orphaned on the planet Lok as an infant, and was raised by harsh criminals and pirates. He developed into a fearsome fighter, not because he was overly violent, but because he was swift and effective. Nym was known as a tactical genius as well as a scoundrel, and his piracy of Trade Federation convoys earned him a considerable bounty. When regular channels failed to bring him into custody, the Federation hired Vana Sage to capture Nym. She was able to lure Nym and his crew into a trap when they tried to sell off a load of experimental Scalp-Hunter blasters they obtained from the Trade Federation. Despite her success, Nym's crew soon rescued him from the Federation's control. He returned to Lok to fight the Trade Federation's occupation of his homeworld, but nearly lost everything he owned. Nym piloted his ship, the Havoc, during the Battle of Naboo, helping the Naboo break the Trade Federation's blockade and helping restore trade to the system. A full pardon of his past crimes from Chancellor Palpatine allowed Nym to continue his piracy as well, although he was never monetarily rewarded. He returned to his adopted homeworld of Nym, only to find it still under the control of the Trade Federation. He spent the next few months on Bothan Space, biding his time to return home. Six years after the Battle of Naboo, Nym was hired by the Mere Ambassador Loreli Ro, to help her people overthrow the Trade Federation's control of Maramere. Nym reluctantly agreed to help, but found himself fighting Sol Sixxa's forces as well as the Trade Federation. In the end, though, Nym, convinced Sol Sixxa to join forces with him, and the two set out to destroy the Federation. In the wake of the Battle of Naboo and the Clone Wars, Nym returned to Lok and became the leader of his people. He was considered more cunning and shrewd as he grew older, and was revered by his people during the height of the New Order. It was rumored that he kept several possessions of an old friend, the Jedi Master Adi Gallia, in his hidden retreat on Lok. Nym remained hidden on Lok for many years, as the Empire rose to power and began patrolling the spacelanes. If the price was right, he would sometimes support the actions of the Alliance, although he refused to commit to one side or the other during the Galactic Civil War. (OWS, SFT, STF, T7, SWDB, CRBN, SWI65, ROD)

Nymalian Water-Ox

this immense, bovine creature was distinguished by the way it shook its massive head to dislodge insects. (SHPT)

Nym's Hovel

this was the name given to a large asteroid located in the Spine of Lok. It was believed that the pirate Nym maintained a base on the asteroid at some point in time, thus earning it the name Nym's Hovel. After Nym established his base of operations on Lok, the Hovel was reserved for use as a sort of prison, where Nym could hold his enemies. (SWGAL)

Nyngwah nooglik

this Ansionian phrase was used whenever one individual wanted to dare another into doing something. The phrase imparted the belief that the individual being dared was less than able to perform the task. (APS)

Nyny

this planet was part of the New Republic, and is the homeworld of a sentient race of three-headed aliens. (TNR)

Nyo

a native of Morado, this young man wanted become a Jedi Knight so badly that he tried to scrape up enough credits to buy a lightsaber on Nar Shaddaa. In desperation, Nyo entered into a sabacc match with the Herglic gambler Doune, and lost all but a single credit. Nyo was "rescued" by Kinnin Vo-Shay, who wagered the last credit and eventually won more than 200,000 credits from Doune. Nyo and Vo-Shay then traveled to Nar Shaddaa to purchase the lightsaber, which Nyo had already secured with a downpayment, only to find that Doune had beaten them to the Smuggler's Moon and purchased the weapon out from under him. Nyo was enraged and dismayed, until Vo-Shay offered to try and win the weapon from the Herglic in a winner-takes-all sabacc match. Vo-Shay purposely lost the match, giving Doune the amulet he wore around his neck as the winnings. Doune then gave up the lightsaber, claiming that he no longer needed it. Vo-Shay then introduced Nyo to the real source of his luck, the disembodied Jedi Master Ayzah. Ayzah and Vo-Shay asked Nyo to join them as part of their crew, agreeing to help Nyo learn more about the Force. (TFNR) named for the strange sound it makes when it jumps out of the water, this mollusk is native to the planet Naboo. It jumps from the water to catch insects and small creatures near the swamps, and it is considered a delicacy by the Gungans. (GF)

Nyork

Nyran

this Imperial Admiral was in command of the fleet which protected the planet Corulag during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He commanded a fleet from his flagship, the Nullifier. (SWJ12)

Nyrkar

this Wookiee worked for Cal Majjer as the Director of Food preservation and Dietary Consultation at the Dry Goods Emporium, on the planet Cularin, during the last years of the Old Republic. It was later discovered that Nyrkar was also one of the founding members of the underground resistance that sprang up in response to the Metatheran Cartel's presence on Cularin, in the years following the Battle of Naboo. (EOS)

Nyroska

this short-statured man was a Colonel in the Darkkneel Defense Agency, at the time when Garm Bel Iblis tried to recover the plans to the first Death Star in Xakrea. He was a loyal supporter of the Empire, although he rarely received any form of support from the local garrison. He attempted to make a great deal of credits by recovering the datacards which contained the plans to the first Death Star, then selling them to Ysanne Isard. However, his plans were thwarted when Isard sliced into his computer systems and redirected his troops. Moranda Savich and Garm Bel Iblis managed to recover the plans, leaving Nyroska with nothing but Isard's wrath. (TFNR)

Nyrvona

this planet was the second planet in the Ylesian system to be colonized by the Besadii kajidic as a religious retreat. Like its predecessor, Ylesia, Nyrvona was touted as a religious holy-land, but would really become a ready source of processed spice and slaves. (RD)

Nysad

this kajain'sa'Nikto was one of Jabba the Hutt's sail barge guards. He was intensely loyal to the Hutt, and his loyalty was rewarded with position of guarding Jabba's primary barge during its trips into Mos Eisley. (CCG7)

Nyssa

this planet was the primary world in the Nyssa System, located in Tapani Sector. Part of the holdings of House Mecetti at the height of the New Order, it was once the base of operation for the Mecrosa Order, several thousand years before the Battle of Yavin. (PGT, LOE)

Nysshyyyk

this Wookiee clan lived on Kashyyyk until it was decimated by Imperial forces which raided the planet for slaves. Most of the clan's members were sent to work at the Maw Installation, under the sadistic eye of Grodon Lakky. Eight Nysshyyyk Wookiees were killed by Lakky's unrelenting use of a power-lash within the first month, for sabotaging their work. Four others committed suicide rather than submit to Lakky's anger. Fifty more died from exhaustion during the construction of the Death Star prototype. (JASB)

Nystammall

this was one of the many Jedi Masters who were killed by General Grievous during the Clone Wars. Nystammall died on Tovarski, along with Jedi Master Puroth. Both of their lightsabers were confiscated by Grievous, who later used them in combat against Obi-Wan Kenobi. (E3N)

Nystao

this was the primary cultural center of Honoghr during the early years of the New Republic, primarily because it was one of the few locations on the planet that supported any form of life. Because of this, Nystao was the site of the Grand Dukha. The city had an Imperial-built spaceport that was manned by Noghri, but it was usually kept closed except for Imperial traffic. (DFR, DFRSB)

Nysza III

this planet was the site of an Imperial communications bunker which was destroyed by the Harrier infiltration team. The mission cost the team the life of Arecelis Acosta. (SWJ8)

Nyth, Volu

this woman, a native of the planet Kuat, joined the New Republic's Rogue Squadron shortly before the Battle of Coruscant. (EL1)

Nytinite

this purplish mist was a form of sleeping gas, used by guerilla armies during the height of the Clone Wars. (SHPT)

Nyubba-class Barge Driver

this segmented freight barge driver was produced by SoroSuub. The Nyubba-class had five spherical sections, with the middle sphere being connected to the main drive systems. The drives resembled an elliptical pod emerging from the right side of the ship. The Nyubba-class barge measured twenty-two meters in length, required a pilot and co-pilot to operate, and could transport up to two passengers and 200 metric tons of cargo. These craft were armed with a pair of turret-mounted double laser cannons. Barges could be attached both fore and aft because of the offset positioning of the drive systems. (SWJ11)

Nyubuna Bulul

this female Mon Calamari owned and operated the Even Cut Sabacc Parlor and Casino, located in the Center Sphere district of Bartyn's Landing, on the planet Lamaredd. During the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo, Bulul established herself as Miss Mylla's chief rival, and not simply because the casino was located across the street from Miss Mylla's Saloon. Bulul chose to focus on the gambling, and showed a business sense that was only rivaled by that of her Falleen competitor. (GMR7)

Nyxy

this native of the planet Rudrig was elected to the New Republic Senate. (TNR)

Ny'yosin

this plant was native to the planet Cularin. (LFC)

Nyyv

this archaic name was common among Sullustan males, and meant "flexible". It referred to certain Sullustan individuals who could squeeze into small tunnel openings. (GCG)

Nyyv

this Sullustan owned Uncle Nyyv's Floating Eatery, found on Streysel Island on the planet Vaynai during the height of the New Order. (GMR8)

N'Zoth

this planet, located in the Koornacht Cluster, was the Yevethan homeworld and the capital world of the Duskhan League. It was also the site of the Imperial orbital shipyard Black-15. Sometime after the planet Coruscant fell to the Yuuzhan Vong, the Fia of Galantos made a deal with the alien invaders. The Fia provided information on the Yevetha's strengths and weaknesses in return for their own freedom, leading the Yuuzhan Vong to launch an all-out attack on N'zoth. Hoping to eliminate a possible problem on their rearward borders, the Yuuzhan Vong mercilessly attacked the Yevetha, destroying the planet N'zoth and wiping out every last member of Yevethan civilization. (BTS, FH1)

N'zoth III

this was another name for the planet N'zoth, although its origins are unknown. (UANT)

O-4Z

Novaldex ionization reactor used by Incom on the X-Wing starfighter. (SCRE)

Oa Park

this nature park was located on the planet Coruscant during the last decades of the Old Republic. It was noted for the fact that it contained more than thirty different environments, each representing a different planet, complete with atmospheric mixtures, gravity, and solar conditions. This allowed exotic and unusual plant and animal life from representative planets to be displayed to the public. (MBS)

Oakie

this was an alias used by Platt Okeefe during her early career, shortly after she fled Brentaal. (PSG)

Oakie Dokes

this Swokes Swokes female was a regular at the Outlander Club, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (OWS)

Oasis

this was the most popular of the bars located within the Bantha Traxx bar, located on Lianna. (WSV)

Oasis

this planet was located in a gap of "clear space" in the middle of the Maelstrom. The planet had been producing oxite for the Riders of the Maelstrom to sell when Rodin Higrone won the rights to the planet in a crooked sabacc match. Higrone saw the success that the Riders were having pirating ships that drop back to sublight speeds near the Maelstrom, and set up his own piracy operation based on Oasis. Big Jak Targrim, the leader of the Riders, once planned to crash the Kuari Princess into the planet, hoping to rid himself of the nuisance of Higrone's pirates. The attempt failed when Alliance agents on board the luxury liner were able to overtake the Princess's navigational controls and steer it away. (RM)

Oasis

this is the Dim-U monastery located in the middle of nowhere on Tatooine. During the hunt for Adar Tallon, Zardra's forces tried unsuccessfully to breach its walls and gain access. (TM)

Oasis Child

this was the name given to the immature, mobile phase in the life of an oasis mother, a carnivorous organism that was native to the planet Endregaad. Each oasis child was created in a large, fruit-like sac that grew from the branches of the oasis mother. The oasis children were important to the oasis mother because they were mobile enough to capture live prey and return to the oasis mother before it died, supplying it with warm blood and dying flesh. The oasis children tended to be nocturnal, hunting at night when many creatures were asleep and easier to capture. An oasis child resembled an ape-shaped lump of plant material, with long arms and muscular legs that appeared to be made from reeds and sticks. The average oasis child lived for just a few weeks, and never ate. Its entire existence was dedicated to obtaining food for its oasis mother, to which it was linked telepathically. (TF)

Oasis Mother

this unusual organism was native to the waterholes of the planet Endregaad. It was known to have two distinct phases: an immature phase, known as an oasis child, which was essentially a mobile plant; and the semi-mobile adult form known as the oasis mother. In its adult form, the oasis mother resembled a huge tree, and would plant itself near a large water source. Because it was rooted in one place, the oasis mother relied on the oasis children to bring it food, which consisted of warm blood and dying flesh. An oasis mother consumed its meal by extending pointed tendrils from its trunk, piercing the flesh of its prey and "drinking" its vital fluids. The empty shell of the prey is then drawn into the trunk and converted into an organic mulch for later consumption. The oasis mother was linked to her children via telepathy, which she used to indicate her hunger and her needs. Hanging from the limbs of the oasis mother were clusters of huge fruit, which were the sacs in which the oasis children were grown. (TF)

Oath Rigora

originally defined by Arvo Norstrag as part of the Rules of the Blade, this was the severest form of rigora duel recognized by the Phosphura Belt Pirates, and indicated a duel to the death. (PP, SWJ5)

Ob

this Ithorian surname was believed to mean "sun", according to historian who studied the Ithorian race. (GCG)

Ob Fortuna

this Twi'lek, a distant relative of Bib Fortuna, served Cradosk as the majordomo of the old Bounty Hunters Guild. Just as oily and conniving as his relative, Ob Fortuna worked behind the scenes with several other hunters, including Cradosk's own son, Bossk, to overthrow the Trandoshan and take some profit in the effort. Ob had meticulously dug out peepholes in the walls surrounding Cradosk's throne in the Guild's main headquarters, allowing him to monitor the old Trandoshan's activities. While not the only majordomo Cradosk ever had, Ob Fortuna had remained in position the longest by ensuring that his master's wishes were always met. However, after Cradosk was killed by his own son, Bossk, Ob Fortuna fled the Guild and tried to find work somewhere else. He booked transport with N'dru Suhlak, hoping to reach a safe haven before one of the bounty hunters discovered his treacherous ways. Unfortunately, Suhlak was apprehended by Boba Fett near Uhlenden and boarded. Ob Fortuna was so scared of being taken back to the bounty hunters that he strangled himself with a piece of cable before he could be taken by Fett. However, Fett's bounty was paid whether Fortuna was dead or alive. Fett took the Twi'lek's head for proof, and blew the rest of the body out of an airlock into space. (MA, SLS)

Obana Asteroid Belt

located a short hyperspace jump from Tatooine, the Obana Asteroid Belt was comprised of all shapes and sizes of asteroids. Some of the larger asteroids were capable of capturing an atmosphere and supporting a limited ecosystem. Smugglers and other beings who didn't want to be caught in public made their homes and bases in the Obana Belt, and a group of space beldons was known to inhabit the Belt's inner sections. (WOA11)

Obarren, Del

this man served the Empire as the regional Prefect of the city of A'Lenba, on the planet Gorothe Prime, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He was known as a cold, hard man who did little to hide his distaste for the native Gorotheites. Obarren also aspired to take over the planetary Governor's position, once Marsh Limoth relinquished the post. (GSE)

Obas

the Alliance established a base on this volcanic world during the Galactic Civil War. It was nearly destroyed when the supercoolers required to maintain the base overheated, but a group of Alliance agents managed to obtain replacement parts and repair the system. Obas - located in the Expansion Region - has one moon, and has heavy-than-normal gravity. The average day on the planet lasts 42 standard hours, and its year lasts 401 local days. It was the second planet in the Obas System. (IA)

Obawan

this was Guerra Derida's nickname for Obi-Wan Kenobi. (DR, HP)

Obees Ramee

this male Gran was wanted for a variety of counterfeiting activities aboard the Outland Transit Station during the years following the Battle of Naboo. A bounty was placed on his head by Rozatta himself. Obees was captured on the Outland Transit Station by Jango Fett and brought in for the bounty on his head. (BH)

Obeisance: Betrayal Within

this was one of two successful and damaging documentaries written by Armennion Ullgusta, and rumored to have been produced by Pret Swain. The documentary documented many aspects of the purge of the Jedi Knights, and earned Ullgusta a place on the Empire's most-wanted list. Obeisance: Betrayal Within was also banned by the Empire. (BSS)

Obek

this was one of the many Bothan clans. Membership in the clan was denoted by the suffix 'bek added to an individual's family name. (GCG, WOTC)

O'beki

the name o'beki was used to describe the havens in which the Gorotheite people survived The Scouring. Generations of Gorotheites lived in the o'beki, which were hellish at best, eventually adapting to the presence of vaporized hyperbarides in the atmosphere. Over time, the o'bekis became towns, and the mining corporations which took control of the planet during the height of the New Order used the o'bekis as their settlements. (GSE)

Obelia System

Obigon

a pirate Captain, and owner of the Corellian gunship called Null Space. (HTSB)

O-Bin

this severe Keganite woman was a teaching in the Learning Circle, some fifteen years before the Battle of Naboo. When Obi-Wan Kenobi and Siri was falsely declared truant and sent to the Learning Circle, O-Bin found herself fighting against their knowledge of the galaxy. O-Bin adhered strongly to the General Good, and believed all the lies told to her by V-Tan and O-Vieve. Much of her time was spent administering demerits to Obi-Wan and Siri, who continually questioned her authority and her information. (FFT)

Obinipor

one of the planets visted by the Night Caller shortly before it was captured by Wraith Squadron near Xobome 6. Located deep in the Outer Rim Territories, Obinipor was a world which contained a wealth of natural ores and metals, and had enough active volcanoes that the mining colony there was able to tap them for heat. It was a free colony, although Imperial Warlord Zsinj owned stock in the refineries there under an alias. (WS)

Obitoki

Oblee

this was the native language of the Oblee race. (LFCW)

Oblee

this race of heavy-set beings was distinguished by their pinkish skin, and had two pairs of eyes on their fleshy face. An Oblee also had three arms, the two on the left side and one on the right. The Oblee were rare in most parts of the galaxy, and unseen in the rest, after they were nearly wiped out by a Sith warrior using the darkstaff more than 1,000 years before the Clone Wars. Those that were killed instantly were drained of any Force energy they might have had, and their bodies were discarded. Many who survived were maintained in a form of stasis, as a source of Force energy for the darkstaff. A few others were "seeded" throughout the galaxy, for later use by the darkstaff. When the darkstaff was discovered to have been the artifact behind the disappearance of the Cularin System, its hold on the few surviving Oblee was broken, and they returned to the galaxy near Cularin. The skin color of an Oblee varied from individual to individual, but all Oblee tended to turn gray as they aged. It was Nirama who discovered the newly-returned Oblee, and learned that their original homeworld of Oblis had been destroyed by the power of the darkstaff. Its debris eventually formed the Cularin System's asteroid belt. (LFCW)

Obligon Nebula

this relatively small nebula was located within the boundaries of the Naboo System. Much of the Nebula was pierced by the asteroids of Arrissa's Field, making it a perfect haven for pirates during the height of the New Order. (SWGAL)

Oblis

this jungle-covered world was once the home planet of the Oblee race, until they were enslaved by the Sith darkstaff. A weapon powered by the darkstaff destroyed the planet, rendering the Oblee a homeless race. The debris from the destruction of Oblis became the primary asteroid belt in the Cularin System. (LFCW)

Obliterator

this Imperial Star Destroyer was under the command of Captain Trazzen. It was one of only thirteen Star Destroyers that remained in the Imperial fleet ten years after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. Grodin Tierce claimed to be part of Trazzen's staff when he infiltrated the Ubiquitorate base on Yaga Minor. It was later assigned to accompany the Tyrannic and Ironhand to Bothawui, where the three ships were cloaked from sensors and hidden among the comets that pass through the system. Once the battle was joined, Han Solo managed to get many of the Bothan clans to supply warships from their personal fleets. The three Star Destroyers were forced to retreat to Bastion or be slowly picked apart by the New Republic. Captain Nalgol gave the order to retreat, ending the blockade and bringing to a close the Caamas Incident. (SOP, VOF)

Obliviane

this medical drug is used to keep severely-injured patients in a quiet state of unconsciousness while their injured heal. (MA)

Oblivyn

Obredaan

this planet was the site of a hidden, cortosis-ore mining operation established by the Jin'ha, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. The Jedi Council discovered the operation while investigating the Black Heth and its ties to the Jin'ha. Eeth Koth and Plo Koon were sent to Obredaan to investigate, but were captured. They were later rescued by Obi-Wan Kenobi. (SWI59)

Obri

this was a common female name given to Sullustan females. It meant "poetry" in the Sullustan language. (GCG)

Obrim

this man served on the Senate Guard during the height of the Clone Wars, and was part of the team that was dispatched to guard the Senate Rotunda and its access points. Obrim was the officer in charge of the attempt to free Senator Meena Tills and a group of hostages captured from the Galactic City Spaceport, although he was forced to work with the clone commandos of Omega Squad during the operation. (SWI81)

Obroa-held

this huge gas giant was one of the outermost worlds in the Obroa-skai System. (DW)

Obroan

a native of Obroa-skai. (HTTE)

Obroan Institute for Archaeology

one of the many educational facilities found on the planet Obroa-skai, the Obroan Institute is dedicated to the discovery, cataloguing, and exploration of alien civilizations. They were able to provide assistance to the New Republic, during their investigation of the planet Brath Qella. (SOL, TT) primary planet in the Obroa-skai system, is holds a strategic position in the Borderlands. It has not aligned itself with either the Empire or the New Republic. The Obroans have created a huge repository of information from every corner of the galaxy, but its location and access methods are not given freely. Grand Admiral Thrawn raids the planet's central computer in order to determine the location of the planet Myrkr, as well as to spread the New Republic's forces thin prior to the Battle of Sluis Van. At the same time, Thrawn attacked an Elomin supply convoy that was passing near the planet. Its primary ecology is terrestrial, with vast tundras, frozen deserts, and tall mountains. Its day lasts 26 standard hours, and its years lasts 456 local days. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Obroa-skai was devastated in an unexpected from the aliens. Much of the information stored in the libraries and databases on the planet was lost, although hardcopies of certain references were smuggled out before the attack. The Yuuzhan Vong tried to decipher the information they found, but were unable to obtain accurately decrypted information. (HTTE, HTSB, HT)

Obroa-skai

Obron Mettlo

a Moorin mercenary who frequented Mos Eisley during the Galactic Civil War. Labria tried to find favor with Jabba the Hutt by selling Mettlo's services to the crimelord. Obron angered the Hutt, and Jabba fed him to the rancor. (TME, EGC)

Obs Kaj

this young, green-skinned Twi'lek was studying as a Jedi Padawan under Master Lunis when the Clone Wars broke out. Like many students of her generation, Obs was taken from her homeworld of Ryloth at a very young, and she strived to make sure that her Master's choice was not in vain. However, the stress of trying to match Master Lunis' ideals, combined with the hypocrisy of the Jedi Order's participation in the Clone Wars, led Obs to seriously consider leaving the Order forever. Some fifteen months after the Battle of Geonosis, Lunis and Obs were dispatched to Katanos VII to to investigate possible cloning activities on the planet. Although Stiv Kram denied any such activities, Obs discovered an entire laboratory set aside for cloning vats. The vats contained many failed experiments, the results of the miners' attempts to provide the Old Republic with something of value. The Jedi found themselves cut off from the rest of the galaxy, and ordered to surrender, as Kram explained that he planned to turn them over to Count Dooku for a sizeable bounty. As the miners closed in, Master Lunis made ready to defend himself. Obs, suddenly recognizing that their link through the Force had grown weaker, was unprepared for the attack. She saw Master Lunis killed in the fighting, but managed to escape when Andru let her go. She reached her ship and fled into space, but found that the hyperdrive ring for her starship had been disabled. She sent out a distress signal, only to have it intercepted by Count Dooku himself. Dooku ordered his gunners to fire on her ship, and Obs perished in the explosion. (T19)

Observation Ship

this bulbous ship was developed by the Kaminoan people for use in patrolling the largest sections of their cities. Ovoid in shape, with a detachable observation platform located at its bottom, the Observation Ship was created to move Kaminoan scientists between locations, ensuring that any problems or dangerous situations could be resolved quickly. (IWE2)

Observer

this tracking device was manufactured by MechBlaze Tracking, and was capable of providing information on direction and range from the beacon it put out. (CFG)

Observer

this was the name given to the people that made up the New Republic's public information sources. Observers were employed to work in many of the galaxy's sectors, gathering information that might not have been available over the newsnets or the New Republic Intelligence agency. (VOF)

Obsidian

this Imperial deep-space research platform was destroyed by the Alliance, shortly before the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Obsidian 7

this specially-modified TIE Fighter was part of the Imperial garrison assigned to Cloud City, after Darth Vader froze Han Solo there. The ship was designed to fly in atmospheres, and its pilot was known as the "Winged Gundark" because of his ability to win struggles in the atmosphere. (CCG5)

Obsidian 8

like its wingmate, Obsidian 7, this TIE Fighter was modified for combat in an atmosphere. During the garrisoning of Cloud City, it was piloted by a man who had served under Darth Vader aboard the Devastator. (CCG5)

Obsidian Shrine

this was a religious shrine maintained by the Weequay people, on their homeworld of Sriluur. Those Weequay who left the planet to travel often left an offering at the Shrine, to help ensure their safety. (SWJ6)

Obsidian Squadron

this wing of Imperial TIE Fighters was specially modified to fly in atmospheres, and had special high-output solar panels to boost weapons strength. The pilots of Obsidian Squadron were also specially trained. These pilots were assigned to the this garrison on Cloud City. During the construction of the second Death Star near Endor, Obsidian Squadron was called in to help defend the space station during its construction. (CCG6, CCG11)

Obsidian Temple

located on Yavin's fourth moon, it was the site of a huge, obsidian temple shaped like a huge split pyramid. The temple was shaped this way to help concentrate The Force and enhance the Sith rituals that took place inside. Atop the split pyramid is an obsidian statue of Exar Kun. (DA)

Obstacle

this was the first phase of the Telosian game known as Katharsis. During the Obstacle phase, contestants had to ride swoops along a set course, while dodging holographic obstacles thrown into their paths. (DOR)

Obtrecta Sector

this area of the galaxy is located at the opposite end of Myto's Arrow from Dantooine. (SWJ8)

Obulette

this planet, located in Tapani Sector, was the capital world of House Mecetti. It orbited a dim sun, which cast a reddish glow over the planet and kept it blanketed in perpetual twilight. Much of the planet's wealth came from orbital shipyards which were smaller than those on Tallaan, but were nonetheless successful. Most of the planet's landmass was covered with urbanized cities, while the natural areas were dominated by ash-colored rock and shallow seas. (PGT, LOE)

Obvious Nirvana

this freighter attempted to dock with the space station Tatoo III, but was suddenly drawn to the station. The Obvious Nirvana crashed into the station, completely destroying both structures. It was later discovered that the station, built from native Tatooinian metals, had become a kind of magnet, drawing the Obvious Nirvana to it. (GG7)

Occo Ninebar

this fishlike, humanoid being was one of the galaxy's best podracers, some ten years after the Battle of Naboo. (RACR)

Occupation Council

this was the term used by Nute Gunray to describe the leadership of the Trade Federation which oversaw the invasion of Naboo. The Occupation Council, including Gunray and Rune Haako, were arrested in the wake of the Battle of Naboo and sent to Coruscant for trial. (NEGC)

Ocean

an Imperial freighter group in use during the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Ocean Harvesters

this was one of the largest and most successful aquaculture businesses created on the planet Vaynai. Using a fleet of SorSuub AQ21 harvesting units, the employees of Ocean Harvesters covered almost the entire ocean of Vaynai, maintaining a number of fish and seaweed farms. (GMR8)

Ocean of Memory

this was the largest of Merisee's three oceans, encompassing the entire western hemisphere of the planet. (PG3)

Ocean's Floor

this restaurant was located in the floating city of Hikahi, on Calamari, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (FH1)

Oceke

this man was Benoni Ulte's great-grandfather, and was a member of the Ibhaan'I tribe of the planet Socorro. When the bounty hunter Trauger came to Socorro to locate a target in Cjaalysce'I, he threatened to kill Oceke's mother - and another woman every minute - until a tribesman agreed to act as his scout. Oceke was forced to join Trauger, but never forgot the other man's threats. Instead, it was Trauger who underestimated Oceke, for Oceke led them to Cjaalysce'I via a section of the northern desert which was dotted with pockets of deadly gases. Once within sight of the city, Trauger gave Oceke a blow to the head as payment and let Oceke behind. Shortly afterward, Trauger was killed by the deadly gases. Upon hearing of Oceke's bravery, the Socorrans named the deadly gas Trauger Gas. (BSS)

Ocheron

a Dathomir witch of the Nightsisters clan, she is adept in the use of Force Lightning. She is killed by Luke Skywalker while she is trying to destroy Teneniel Djo. (CPL)

Ochroid Dust

found on the barren plains of Lutrillia, this organic material was considered the planet's primary export. (WOA33)

Ocka Dwei

this Yuuzhan Vong scout was one of the first of his kind to discover the effects of bafforr tree pollen on the vonduun crab armor worn by Yuuzhan Vong warriors. To preserve his true identity, Ocka Dwei wore an oogloth masquer that gave him the appearance of a pudgy young human male. He was implicated in the death of a SchaumAssoc employee in the Calocour Heights district of the planet Coruscant, shortly after the Yuuzhan Vong began their invasion of the galaxy, and was hunted down by a group of freelance mercenaries hired by SchaumAssoc. This prevented Ocka Dwei from delivering the information on bafforr pollen to his superiors. (CCW)

Ockbur

this ball of searing rock was the innermost planet of the Ralltiir System. (CCW)

Ocsinin

this race of near-humans was native to the planet Saclas. Thin-boned, the Ocsinin were known for their stark, white skin and jet-black, pupil-less eyes. (AIR)

Octa

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Octavius Jupiter Scragg

this crimelord was a rival of Jorkat the Render. (POC)

Octensen

this lubricant was used to protect repulsorlift engines. Patented by Besspin Motors, Octensen is a foamy substance which is incredibly slippery. (CCC)

Octofoil

an eight-armed transport craft used by the Exalted Torcaine to hunt down smugglers and thieves near Attahox. (CSWDW)

Octuptarra Droid

this unusual combat droid was developed by the Confederacy of Independent Systems during the height of the Clone Wars. The body of the Octuptarra was a large sphere that sat atop rod-shaped body. From the midpoint of the rod sprouted four laser cannons. The entire droid walked along upright on four crab-like, segmented legs. Swarms of these droids served as the advanced ground forces for the Separatists during the First Battle of Coruscant. (OWS, CWC3)

Odae Ripp

this was the innermost planet of the Thae System. The Thaeian Military maintained a large compound on the planet, during the Old Republic. A large contingent of Bothans settled on the planet's grassy plains, and became the system's primary information brokers. (LFCW)

Odala, Sheel

this brown-haired woman was an old acquaintance of Han Solo's, who he encountered again on Void Station some six months after the Battle of Yavin. They had met several years earlier, and their paths had crossed infrequently afterward. Sheel's luck had gone sour, and she was on Void Station hoping to change her situation. She didn't tell Han that she owed a large sum of credits to Jib Kopatha, the owner of Void Station. Thinking on her feet, Sheel decided that she could sell information on Han's relationship to the Alliance to Jib as payment for her debt. Her only condition was that Han would not be harmed, should Jib decide to wring more information from the smuggler. She met Han in the halls of the station, ostensibly for a tryst, but a group of Kopatha's Trandoshan thugs accompanied her to ensure Han didn't try to run. After Kopatha's interrogators threatened to kill Han, Sheel decided that she had better leave while she could. She tried to reach her ship, the Emerald Twilight, but was intercepted by Chewbacca. It was then that Sheel realized that she couldn't leave Han to be tortured, and worked with Chewie to free him. As they escaped from Void Station, Han asked Sheel to join the Alliance with him. She politely refused the offer, preferring to remain independent, but told Solo that they would meet again. The rendezvous came sooner than expected, when Sheel helped them escape from the Imperial escort that was bringing Darth Vader to Void Station. (SWEIA)

Odan

this husky, red-haired man was the leader of the rebel cell on Akuria Two during the height of the New Order. Later, he served the Alliance as a Colonel during the height of the Galactic Civil War. While on Akuria Two, Odan and his forces were able to befriend the Snow Demons who lived there, eventually gaining the massive creatures as Allies. Odan and his rebels were nearly captured by Imperial stormtroopers, but managed to escape. Their war sled was taken, however, and an Imperial officer posing as Colonel Odan nearly captured Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa, who had traveled to Akuria Two to meet with the real Odan. (PZZ2, MCI4)

Odanni

this female Mon Calamari was the entrepreneur who built the Fathoms restaurant complex, located on Calamari's Wildwater City. A strong-willed perfectionist, Odanni was outwardly tolerant of her customers, but considered herself better than them and, in fact, resents having to serve them at all. She looked down on every other species, and even some members of her own. The only reason she went into the business of owning a restaurant was to make money and have power. (WSV)

Odan-Urr

a reptilian Jedi Master, Odan-Urr was a grey-skinned Draethos who was assigned to assist Empress Teta in securing the seven systems, and he was also given the task of being the watchman of the Koros System. Descended from a race of fierce predators, he communicated by telepathic means, contacting all his people through the Force, rather than speaking. Odan-Urr was trained by the ancient Master Ooroo, and was content to simply study the history of the Jedi and the Sith before being dispatched to the Empress Teta System. It was Odan-Urr who had a vision of Marka Ragnos' death and the chaos that would result from it. He was taken to Coruscant by Empress Teta, in order for him to alert the Old Republic to the danger. Unfortunately, the Republic ignored Odan-Urr's vision, claiming it was the delusion of an untrained Knight. Teta, however, was not as demeaning, and mustered her own armed forces to prepare for a Sith attack. Odan-Urr joined his own Master, Ooroo, in the defense of Kirrek against Naga Sadow's Dark Side forces. When the tide began turning to the Sith forces, Ooroo sacrificed himself to kill them off with the cyanogen atmosphere in which he lived. His dying words to his student were prophetic, telling the young Jedi that he would become one of the most ancient Jedi ever. Odan-Urr then stood by Empress Teta's side during the Great Hyperspace War, and assisted in the destruction of Naga Sadow's Sith Empire. After searching the wreckage of Sadow's ship, he found the Sith Holocron and took it with him to Ossus, where he helped create the huge Jedi library there. Odan-Urr later presided over the Jedi Assemblies for more than 600 years prior to the assembly on Deneba to discuss the rising Dark Side tide and the Krath. It was Odan-Urr who taught Nomi Sunrider how to block another person from the Force. Odan-Urr was the Jedi keeper of antiquities, and possessed a rare Sith holocron. Much of his later life was spent delving into ancient texts and records to discern the nature of the Jedi's relationship to the force. His possession of the dark holocron did not go unnoticed by Exar Kun, who killed Odan-Urr while stealing it. (DLS, TSW, GAS, FOSE, PJSB)

Odd Ball

this was the callsign of one of the clone trooper pilots who accompanied Anakin Skywalker and Obi-Wan Kenobi into battle over Belderone, during the Clone Wars. Their mission was to capture the leadership of the Confederacy of Independent Systems, in an effort to force Count Dooku to surrender and put an end to the Clone Wars. Odd Ball later served with Skywalker and Kenobi during the search for Asajj Ventress on Boz Pity, as well as the Battle of Coruscant. (LEV, O, IS3)

Oddo, Astri

this woman was the adopted daughter of Didi Oddo, and helped him maintain and operate the family cafe in the Senate district of Coruscant, some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. Although she hated the fact that her father dealt equally with Senators and criminals, Astri herself was not above using whatever means necessary to keep the café running. She knew that her father's friend, Fligh, worked in the Senate Chamber, so she paid him to pass along hints about Didi's Café, in order to secure parties for the city's elite. However, Fligh was killed after stealing both two datapads: that of Senator Uta S'orn for Helb and that of Jenna Zan Arbor. As a result, the Oddo's found themselves pursued by a mysterious, Sorrowian bounty hunter. Astri was hurt in a struggle, but not seriously, shortly before the Oddo's fled to Duneeden. However, they were pursued by the bounty hunter there, and barely managed to escape with the help of Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi. Astri herself was again wounded, this time seriously. Astri recovered, though, but Didi was hospitalized with a deadly disease which was linked to Arbor Industries. She helped Obi-Wan track down Jenna Zan Arbor in an effort to locate the cure to Didi's illness, and managed to recover the antidote from Zan Arbor's lab on Simpla-12. Astri was forced to portray Ona Nobis, and pretended to bring in Obi-Wan in order to infiltrate the lab. She was forced to leave Obi-Wan behind, though, and return to Coruscant with the antidote, while Obi-Wan struggled to free Qui-Gon Jinn. Once Didi was out of danger, Astri set out to capture or kill Ona Nobis. The bounty hunter captured her instead, and used Astri as bait to try and capture Obi-Wan, but the young Jedi managed to evade the attempt. Calling on Cholly, Tup, and Weez, Astri set out to follow Ona Nobis, ending up on Belasco. There, she helped the Jedi capture Jenna Zan Arbor, but Ona Nobis was killed in battle with Obi-Wan. In the end, Astri returned to Coruscant to help her father restore Didi's Café to its former glory. Years later, she married a homesteader and moved to the Outer Rim, after selling the café to Dexter Jettster. Her husband, Bog Divinian, earned an appointment to the board which handled the Galactic Games on the planet Euceron, five years after the Battle of Naboo. It was during this time that Astri became pregnant, and later gave birth to a son named Lune. Although his tenure was riddled with scandal, Bog managed to achieve his goal of becoming a Senator to the Old Republic, winning an election on Nuralee. Astri did her part to support her husband, joining several relief agencies in an effort to aid her adopted homeworld of Nuralee and present a helpful and humanitarian side of herself and her husband. She was even part of the plannign committee established to create the All Planets Relief Fund. Despite her outward happiness, Astri couldn't reconcile Bog's machinations in the Senate. When Obi-Wan appealed to her for help, she explained that she could not assist him. When pressed for a reason, she revealed that Bog would take their son away from her if she helped the Jedi. (DH, EVE, TDR, JQ2, JQ3, JQ9)

Oddo, Didi

this chubby, diminutive man owned a café in the Senate District of the planet Coruscant, several years before the Battle of Naboo. He maintained the café with the help of his daughter, Astri. A likeable character, Didi had contacts in all levels of society, and was a close friend and informant to the Jedi Knights of the era. For many years, that was all the kept Didi going, since the food at the café was less than appealing. Didi accepted Astri's help in improving the food and the atmosphere. He was caught up in the events surrounding the death of his friend, Fligh, and the appearance of a strange and dangerous Sorrowian bounty hunter who tried to kill him. Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi tried to help Did and Astri remain safe, including moving them to Duneeden temporarily. Didi had won a small place in the Cascardi Mountains in a sabacc match with Helb, so they decided to hole up there. However, the bounty hunter trailed them to Duneeden, and nearly succeeded in eliminating the Oddos. If Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan hadn't traveled to Duneeden themselves, Didi might have been killed instead of badly injured by the Sorrowian. Didi, however, sustained a wound which was laced with a poison engineered by Arbor Industries, and was only saved when Astri and Obi-Wan infiltrated Jenna Zan Arbor's lab on Simpla-12 and stole the antidote. Didi returned to Coruscant and reopened his café, with the help of Fligh and Astri. After many successful years, Didi retired when Astri married Bog Divinian and moved to the Outer Rim world of Nuralee. They sold the café to Dexter Jettster, who maintained it for many years. Did himself spent much of his retirement looking after his grandson, Lune Divinian. (DH, EVE, TDR, JQ2, JQ9)

Odell, Beuga

this heavy-set woman was one of Coruscant's wealthiest nightclub owners, during the last decades of the Old Republic. She was also one of the planet's most successful crimelords. Like Volven Roxe and Quetemoor, Beuga Odell made his fortune without the intervention of the Hutts. While her outward appearance was that of a sweet, old lady, Beuga would stop at nothing to maintain the security of her organization and expand it whenever the opportunity arose. She was involved in smuggling, gambling, and narcotics trafficking, and spent part of her time fighting against Quetemoor the Venerable and his Mugaari operation. She also worked hard to remain beneath the radar of Black Sun, thereby ensuring the continued survival of her operation. (CCW)

Oden Malksch

this Jedi Knight, who lived and worked at the Almas Academy during the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo, served as a historian who tried to document the events in the Cularin System during the final decades of the Old Republic. (WOTC)

Odenji

this aquatic race is related to the Issori, and are also native to the planet Issor. The Odenji suffer from an intense sadness known as the melanncho, which is so strong it can make the sufferer go insane. The disease didn't affect the Issori, who came to be the dominant population on Issor. The Odenji differed from their cousins in several respects, mainly their breathing apparatus. Where the Issori had olfactory wrinkles in the place of a nose, the Odenji had four horizontal flaps of skin which provided the sense of smell. Their mouths were located beneath their chins, where the Issori mouth was located at the front of their face. After the devastating effect the melanncho had on their population, the Odenji allowed the

Issori to manage their planetary colonies, but retained an equal representation within the Tribe of Odenji. (SWJ13)

Odfath, Patel

this Alliance operative was captured for the bounty on his head by Lu'daal-ud. At the time of his capture, Odfath was carrying several top-secret datafiles, which Lu'daal-ud acquired after the capture. The datafiles documented the working of the Alliance cells on Walin'or and Tierfon. (AIR)

Odnaldor Chull

this male Klatooinan and his relative, Odnamar Chull, were wanted for the theft of several starships from the Guarja Shipyards on Nal Hutta, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. A bounty was placed on his head by Kukul the Hutt, and the pair fled to Tatooine. After nearly being caught in Mos Gamos, they fled to the Outland Transit Station. However, Odnaldor was captured on the Outland Transit Station by Jango Fett and brought in for the bounty on his head. (BH)

Odo

this was a common component used to create the names given to Cerean males. In general, male Cereans given an individual name, which is added to the names of their father and grandfather. Complete male names are arranged based on harmony and cadence, but the literal meanings are arranged to ensure proper descriptions. The name Odo indicated a father, son, or head of a family or household. (GCG)

Odom, Meck

this young man was Kyle Katarn's roommate, during their training at the Imperial Academy on Carida. Meck was also Kyle's only true friend. Following their graduation, Meck was stationed on the planet Danuta, in the lab where the plans for the first Death Star were maintained. When Kyle joined the Alliance and tried to infiltrate the lab, Meck agreed to help his friend out. Meck arranged for a series of security checks to occur, resulting in a temporary shutdown of the base's perimeter locks and defenses, allowing Kyle to get into the facility and steal the plans. For his part in the action, Kyle allowed Meck to "survive" the assault. Meck had positioned himself in the command center where the plans were stored, and Kyle "shot" Meck when he entered the room. Meck rolled to the ground and hid, and later was "saved" when the Imperial rescue teams arrived to clean up the mess. (SFE)

Odosk

this Imperial Army General had survived more than his share of engagements during the rule of Emperor Palpatine, and was seriously considering retirement when he was approached by Grand Moff Tarkin. Tarkin offered him a command position, serving under Admiral Daala at the Maw Installation. Odosk accepted, seeing the assignment as a way to end his career quietly, but with distinction. He was responsible for boarding T'nun Bdu's CR90 corvette in the Cauldron Nebula and placing 12 thermal detonators in the ship's power plant. These were used to destroy the ship, after it was allowed to send a distress signal to the New Republic. (DA, JASB)

Odrion, Mors

this young Alliance dignitary and his aide, Rekara, traveled to Sedri to gather information on the Imperial garrison there. They stumbled onto the struggle between the priests Karak and Cardo over control of the Golden Sun. They were captured by Karak, who used his piece of the Golden Sun to steal information from Mors' mind. Rekara managed to escape and returned to Sedri with a rescue party. They were able to defeat Karak by scattering the Golden Sun's polyps across the oceans of Sedri, breaking its link to his mind. As Pek and Fala began working toward repairing Sedrian society, Odrion decided to remain on Sedri as the Alliance's representative, and to keep an eye on the Imperial garrison. Shortly after the Empire left Sedrian, Mors Odrion was elevated to a position of leadership among the Sedrian, and was instrumental in helping Pek deflect the battles between Limna Yith and the bounty hunters sent to recover her. (BGS, SSR)

ODT

this company was based on the planet Onadax during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, although very few individuals knew exactly what the letters ODT stood for. Whatever its name, ODT was believed to have been founded by Dash Rendar and the human-replica droid known as Guri. The business was based on the premise that people would pay any amount of credits for immortality, and Dash had figured out how to do it. Using a modification of the entechment procedure used by the Ssi-ruuk, Dash and Guri found a way to place the enteched brain of a human into the computer brain of a human-replica droid. In this way, the human brain remained "alive", but in a body that only needed periodic maintenance and never truly aged. It was even believed that a Jedi Knight enteched and preserved in this manner would retain their connection to the Force. ODT, because of its business and his high-powered clientele, was obsessed with privacy, and maintained a heavily-secured compound on Onadax where human minds were enteched and placed into HRDs. The human-replica droid used by Mollie Cundertol were eventually traced back to Onadax and ODT, and Jaina Solo volunteered to investigate their facility. It was at ODT that she first encountered Stanton Rendar, who had undergone the same modified entechment procedure that had prolonged the life of Cundertol. Rather than have Jaina put a stop to the enterprise, Stanton took his knowledge and fled Onadax, destroying the entire ODT facility as he fled. (SWI75)

Odumin

Odumin was a Tynnan skip-tracer working in the Corporate Sector Authority. He found rapid advancement within the confines of the Authority, using his abilities as a delegator to have humans do his work for him while he remained anonymous. He remained so anonymous that rumors that he was really Emperor Palpatine in disguise began to surround him. Odumin reached the level of Detached Duty agent for the Auditor-General, and saved the Grand Inquisitor Torbin from assassination by agents of the Church of the First Frequency. He was promoted to a staff position, and Torbin suggested a larger reward. Odumin declined, liking his anonymity to remain more or less intact. He worked his way up the Authority ladder to become the territorial manager for the area near Bonadan after singlehandedly taking out the Xiochi slaver gang. His demeanor has been described as greatly humanitarian, and he is known as a decent administrator. He was nearly killed in an assassination attempt by the Malrom Family, so Odumin hired Gallandro to take care of them. It was shortly after this incident that he started building his slavery operation. It was at this time that Fiolla found small inklings about the operation, and began her investigation. Odumin thought that Han Solo was Zlarb, and when he tried to leave Bonadan aboard the Millennium Falcon, Odumin thought it was Zlarb trying to skip out on him. He tried to drug Han and immobilize him, but Han proved more resourceful. Odumin was forced to assume the guise of the skip-tracer Spray, who helped Chewbacca fly the Falcon to Ammuud. There, Odumin attempted to wrap up the loose ends created by Han Solo. He revealed that Fiolla was working for him, and that he had tried to use the Reesbon clan to help with his slave traffic. The Ewwen's father - the Mor Glayyd at the time - saw this as a possible betrayal of his clan, and tried to work a deal with him. He was poisoned, once Han discovered the connection, and the plot to kill Ewwen was put into motion. (HSR, CSA)

Ody Mandrell

this reptilian Er'Kit was born on the planet Tatooine, and was later considered one of the Outer Rim's best podracer pilots. During the Boonta Eve Classic race in which Anakin Skywalker emerged victorious, Ody Mandrell's XL 5115 podracer was disabled in a crash and had to come in for repairs. Pit droid DUM-4 was sucked into the port-side engine when it suddenly flared up, and the damage caused by the foreign body ruined the engine. He eventually got the damage repaired and returned to the race, but was knocked off the course by Sebulba and driven into Anakin's pod. The two racers became entangled, and when they finally freed themselves, Ody's ship flew out of control and crashed. Ody managed to survive the crash, but retired from active pod racing for good. He remained on Tatooine as a mechanic, and eventually went to work for Ulda Banai at the Mos Espa Swoop Arena. (TPM, IG1, TG)

Oevvaor

this fast-moving, marine reptile was native to the planet Kashyyyk. It was known among the Wookiees for its agility and territorial ferocity, and usually was found prowling the coastline in search of prey. (X3)

Oevvaor Jet Catamaran

named for a marine reptile, this twin-hulled vessel was built by the Appazanna Engineering Works of the planet Kashyyyk, for moving across open water at high speeds. A pair of jet engines provided propulsion, and each of the tandem hulls had seating for two Wookiees. Like other technology produced by the Wookiees, each Oevvaor catamaran was unique, and many specimens were known to have lasted over a thousand years. Measuring about fifteen meters in length and spanning about ten meters from hull to hull, the Oevvaor catamaran was primarily used in those Wookiee cities such as Kachirho, where moving across the water was a necessary means of conveyance. Many offworlders compared these catamarans to the podracers of the years leading up to the Clone Wars, since the engines of the catamaran were similar in appearance to those of a podracer, and propelled the catamaran at speeds approaching 370 kilometers per hour. (VD3, X3)

Of Minds, Men, and Machines

this treatise was written by the pre-Republic philosopher Plaristes during the decades leading up to the formation of the Old Republic. In the treatise, Plaristes argued convincingly that automatons would never achieve true sentience, despite the regular and impressive technological advances in artificial intelligence. However, over the ensuing millennia, many of his postulations were proven wrong. (OWS)

Ofax ets burrin tehn

this was an Old Corellian phrase. For most modern humans, it translates to "the air is too dangerous here," indicating that the air quality is not conducive to survival. For a Socorrian, it becomes "the air is too heavy here," meaning that the situation in the immediate area is dangerous. (SWJ7)

Offee, Barriss

this Mirialan Jedi Padawan was being trained by Luminara Unduli during the last decades of the Old Republic. In addition to her skills as a warrior, Barriss also proved to be a skilled healer. She was born on a transport ship in deep space, and never knew her parents. Her connection to the Force was quickly discovered, however, and she was taken to Coruscant for training. She proved to be a quick, though impatient, student, traits that seemed to be more and more prevalent among the Padawans of her generation. Barriss accompanied her Master, along with Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker, to the planet Ansion, shortly before the Clone Wars, in an effort to prevent the Ansionians from seceding from the Republic. Barriss was kidnapped shortly after their arrival, but managed to befriend her two Ansionian kidnappers, Kyakhta and Bulgan, after curing them of their mental debilities. Barriss was unsure of Anakin's suitability to train as a Jedi, seeing in him a recklessness and emotion that she deemed uncharacteristic of a Jedi. However, upon meeting face to face with Soergg the Hutt - the very being who had ordered her kidnapping - Barriss realized that every Jedi had emotions that needed to be controlled. Her perception of Anakin changed, and the two became good friends after successfully keeping Ansion as a member of the Republic. Their efforts nearly went for naught, as the Jedi were almost defeated at the Battle of Geonosis. Both Unduli and her Padawan fought bravely, but were badly outnumbered by the droid armies of the Separatists. Only the arrival of Master Yoda and the clone troopers of the Army of the Republic saved the day. Barriss Offee managed to survive the Battle of Geonosis and returned to Coruscant with her Master. Two years later, the pair were separated during the height of the Clone Wars, when Barriss was dispatched to Drongar on a mission to assist the medics there while also keeping a watchful eye on the production of bota. She believed that this would be her individual Jedi Trial, a chance to prove herself against the backdrop of the war. She was unprepared for both the visible horrors of a Republic Mobile Surgical Unit and the mental anguish of being forced to confront death every day. In addition, she found herself at odds with the combat instructor for Rimsoo-7, Phow Ji, who continually egged the young Padawan closer to a direct confrontation. Barriss knew that her desire to best Ji came from the Dark Side of the Force, and tried to keep it under control. When Ji was shot by a Separatist agent with a poisoned dart, Barriss was forced to swallow her desires and save him by extracting the poison with the help of the Force. Her elation at saving him was quickly dissipated when Ji threw himself back into battle, using a thermal detonator to destroy a Separatist army that was converging on his position. Her anger briefly flared again, as she believed Ji had wasted her gift on a mission to prove his superiority. It was then that Barriss realized the extent of the Jedi Trial, and she struggled to keep herself focused on the mission. An attack on Rimsoo Seven showed Barriss the disgusting underbelly of war, as the Separatists broke all conventions to destroy the medical facility. In the evacuation, Barriss watched in helpless horror as Zan Yant was killed instantly by a piece of shrapnel, then had to endure Jos Vondar's stoic refusal to grieve. After the camp was relocated, Barriss accidentally discovered that processed bota could heighten her connection to the Force, a discovery that she quickly relayed to Master Unduli on Coruscant. However, the mutating bota meant that any further investigation was impossible. After leaving Drongar, Barriss was promoted from apprentice level to Jedi Knight. By the time she was dispatched to capture Shu Mai on Felucia, Barris had achieved the rank of Jedi Master, and was actively engaged in the training of her own Padawan, Zonder. However, when Darth Sidious revealed his true nature and killed Mace Windu, he sent out communications to the various clone commanders to execute Order 66. Upon hearing the order, clone Commander Bly ordered his troops to open fire on Jedi, utterly destroying the defenseless Jedi Master. Barriss Offee was portrayed by Nalini Krishan in Star Wars Episode II: Attack of the Clones. (OWS, SWI58, APS, SWDB, MBS, ROF, MJH, IS3)

Offen

this alien race was new to the technology and mental fitness required to make interstellar travel possible when their 6,000 year old queen was killed on a flight to Casfield VI. (TNR)

Office of Peace and Security

this was the name of the primary police force that protected the planet Cularin during the last decades of the Old Republic. (LFCW)

Office of Sentient Species

this branch of the Obroan Institute developed a series of guidelines for explorers and archeologists to use whenever they encounter previously unknown species of sentient life. (TT)

Officer Corps

this the collection of military officers who served the Royal Court of Naboo during the Old Republic. (SON)

Officer's Candidate School

located on the planet Carida, this branch of the Imperial Academy featured a curriculum designed to produce quality officers from promising raw material. The best candidates were nominated for acceptance, and spent a number of years in rigorous training before graduation. (CCG3)

Officers's Candidate School

this was the primary source of education for those beings who strove to be leaders in the New Republic military. (TFNR)

Official History of the Rebellion, Volume One composed by Arhul Hextraphon during his tenure as secretary to Mon Mothma during the Galactic Civil War, the Official History was a compendium of Hextraphon's personal diaries and observations regarding the most pivotal characters of the War. (SWSB)

Offworld Mining Company

this mining operation controlled much of the ore and mineral extraction performed in the Outer Rim Territories, some twelve years prior to the Battle of Naboo. The employees of Offworld wore a triangular black patch emblazoned with a red planet encircled by a silver starship. The planet and starship combined to give the impression of a blood-red eye. Offworld Mining was one of the oldest and richest companies in the galaxy, and it was not afraid to eliminate its competition at all costs. Leadership of Offworld was often mysterious, although Hutts were often used as operational managers while Whiphids were hired as bodyguards and enforcers. The actual mining was performed by slave labor acquired from all over the Outer Rim. Offworld's hold on the planet Bandomeer was broken after Xanatos infiltrated its leadership structure and took control after the death of Jemba the Hutt. It was part of a plan Xanatos had created to exact revenge on his former teacher, Qui-Gon Jinn, but the plan failed and control of Bandomeer was turned over to the Home Planet Party and Arcona Mineral Harvest Corporation. (RF, DR)

Off-Worlder Hotel

located in the district of Haziz Downside, on the planet N'zoth, this was one of the few places that a non-Yevetha could get a room for an extended stay. (CCW)

Offworlder's Bridge

this was one of many bridges leading into the city of Phemiss, on the planet New Plympto. Any being who was not native to the planet was directed to enter the city via this bridge. (CCW)

Off-worlders' Quarter

not actually part of a city but a city by itself, the Off-worlders' Quarter is located on a round island off the coast of the continent of Forethought, on the planet Ropagi II. Any visitors to the planet must pass through the processing center there, before they can move about on the planet. After the fall of the Empire, the native Ropagu imported mercenaries to help keep the peace, and these mercenaries were the only visitors allowed to leave the island. To tourists and other non-mercenary visitors, the rest of Ropagi II was off-limits. Mercenaries were transported to Ropagis for registration and debriefing. (TSK)

OG-9

this was the official designation of the homing spider droid. (X3)

Ogden Minor

a planet. (SHW)

Ogem

this planet was the homeworld of the Ogemite race. (CSWEA)

Ogemite

this humanoid race was native to the planet Ogem. They were distinguishable by their tiger-striped pelt and large hair-frills on their heads. The males of the species were known as traders. (CSWEA)

Oggun Bantha-Horn

this hulking Devaronian goon worked for Ranon Djelkh on the planet Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. Oggun was easily distinguished by his battle armor and helmet, which had been adapted to fit his horns. A pair of bantha horns - from his first kill on Tatooine - were added for effect. He carried a Wookiee bowcaster as his primary weapon, the souvenir of another mission. Sometime before the Battle of Yavin, he was dispatched to obtain a special cologne, extracted from the scent glands of a tirginni beast, from Harbo Wils, as part of Djelkh's plot to assassinate Jabba the Hutt. When he discovered that Wils had tried to double-cross Djelkh, Oggun set out to capture the smugglers who had inadvertently obtained the cologne. Eventually, they all met up at the wreck of the Star Stalker. There, in an intense firefight, Oggun was shot and killed. (SOT)

Oggzil

this creature was created by the Yuuzhan Vong, after the initial stages of their invasion of the galaxy. Oggzils were created to join with villips in order to enhance their communications abilities. Oggzils were fed a diet rich in metals, which they could digest and use to form their skeletons. This ability to assimilate metals and form skeletal material from them allowed the Yuuzhan Vong to employ the oggzil as a living communications antenna. The Yuuzhan Vong then attuned the oggzils to the frequencies of the New Republic. This allowed the alien invaders to broadcast their messages on the Republic's frequencies via villips, without actually using mechanical technologies. (BP)

Oggzil

this Yuuzhan Vong bio-construct was used to broadcast the communication of a single villip to a large number of receiving villips. The oggzil was not much larger than a villip, and actually folded itself around the villip used as the transmitter. A long, antenna-like tail provided the transmission mechanism used to send the message to other villips in the link. (DW)

Ogo Nan

this Cerean was an assassin for hire during the early years of the New Order. Ogo Nan was hired by Mika the Hutt - through a third party - to attempt to kill Mika on Nar Shaddaa, after Popara the Hutt began worrying about the spread of the tempest spice. Mika wanted to find out how much his parent knew about the operation, and hoped that an assassination attempt on his own life might distract Popara. As payment, Mika provided tempest spice to ease Ogo Nan's growing addiction to the drug. A group of freelance agents, on Nar Shaddaa to meet with Popara, was able to shoot down Ogo Nan after the Cerean destroyed one of the Hutt's H-3PO droids. His death suited Mika's needs, since it ensured the secrecy he needed to maintain the illusion of the assassination attempt. Mika then blamed Lungru for the attack, further deflecting blame from himself. (TF)

Ogomoor

this male Ansionian worked as the majordomo for Soergg the Hutt, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. It was Ogomoor who was charged with eliminating any threat to the secession movement which rose up on Ansion, a mission which came to include thwarting the efforts of two Jedi Knights, Obi-Wan Kenobi and Luminara Unduli, and their Padawans, Anakin Skywalker and Barriss Offee. The Jedi continually managed to find a way around Ogomoor's roadblocks, and Ogomoor continually survived Soergg's wrath. However, when the Jedi managed to secure a treaty between the Alwari and the city dwellers of Cuipernam, Ogomoor's efforts were finally proven ineffectual. Knowing that he would be killed by Soergg if he returned to the Hutt, Ogomoor planned to expose the Hutt's dealings with Shu Mai and the Commerce Guild to the Unity of Community. However, before he could produce any proof of Soergg's involvement, Soergg shot Ogomoor dead, destroying the small recorder which held the evidence. (APS)

Ogoth Tiir

this planet was the site of a battle during the Galactic Civil War. (CSA)

Ogygian Cloak

this was the traditional cloak of the Ubese people. (VD)

Ohann

this gas giant is the second planet in the Tatoo System. It has three natural satellites. (GG7)

Ohda

this was the fourth planet in the Obas System. It had three moons. (IA)

Ohh Bronna

this Abyssin was a noted dejarik player, during the last decades of the Old Republic. He had been sector champion in the Colonies Region a number of times, and was known as a cool competitor. Unfortunately, he was infamous for attacking Corwin Kaezeb during a semi-final match on Arkania, and both players were eliminated from the tournament. (HNN5)

Ohleyz Sumteh Vingdah

this was a clan greeting in the High Tongue, used by many Corellian Ensterite families Purging Days to introduce oneself as a member of another's family. It indicated a relationship through the other's mother's side of the family. Usually, one's family name was inserted to indicate more detail on the relationship. Over time, most families adopted the Basic language, and used the High Tongue only on Purging Days. (MJH)

Ohma-D'un

this was the larger of Naboo's two moons, and was capable of supporting life. It was known to the natives of the planet as the Water Moon, since much of its surface was covered with standing water. The Gungans established a settlement on the moon shortly before the Battle of Naboo, and expanded their colonization efforts after they re-established relations with the Naboo. During the early stages of the Clone Wars, the Separatists unleashed a biological weapon on the moon, killing many of the Gungans before a vaccine could be developed. Any Gungans who survived were either killed by combat droids or exterminated by the bounty hunter Durge and his commander, Asajj Ventress. (GF, SWRPG, WOTC, SWI66, RNFW)

Ohma-D'un Super Battle Droids

this was the name used by many Jedi Knights to describe a series of B2-series battle droids produced by for the Separatists and first used in the Clone Wars on the moon of Ohma-D'un. (YDR)

Ohr, Ree

this woman served the Grand Army of the Republic during the height of the Clone Wars, working as an expert in xenobiotics on the planet Drongar. It was Doctor Ohr who diagnosed clone trooper CT-914 with "orthostatic hypotensive syncope of idiopathic origin" - an individual who fainted every time they stood up, without any discernable cause. (MBS)

Ohratuu

a temperate planet. (SWJ10)

Ohta su marvalic plesodoro

this Huttese phrase translated into Basic as "let them marvel at our splendor." (TFNR)

Ohvan

an Imperial trooper killed on Keskin while working with Reydon. (ISB)

Ohwun

this was a common name given to male Duros children. The name Ohwun came from the term meaning "famous". (GCG)

Ohwun DeMaal

this Duro owned several docking bays in Mos Eisley, among them numbers 27, 43, 67, 71, 86, and the famous 94. He inherited them from his parents and his grandmother, who was among the first colonists to settle Tatooine. Along with his wife, Chachi, Ohwun runs the docking bays, an old Gallofree Yards 23K service shuttle, and eight Mos Eisley warehouses. He and his wife were on good terms with Jabba the Hutt until one of Jabba's smugglers blasted out of Docking Bay 94 without paying his bill. (GG7)

Oil Bath

a "dip" for droids, that uses cleansing oils instead of water to remove grease and grime. (SW)

O-Iris

this Keganite girl was a student at the time Obi-Wan Kenobi and Siri were held on Kegan. (FFT)

Oissan

Captain Nalgol's Intelligence Chief, stationed about the Star Destroyer Tyrannic, Oissan was in charge of gathering information outside their cloaked position near Bothawui, during the build-up of forces arrayed there after the discovery of the Caamas Document implicated the Bothans in the destruction of the Caamasi. (VOF)

Ojai

an Alliance freighter which was teamed with the Phoenix during the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Ojat Wan

this was a popular name among the Amanin people, named for a famous individual in Amanin history. (UANT)

Ojia

this small Bothan clan was one of the first to move to Kothlis, during the first wave of colonization efforts. (SPG)

Ojom

this frost-covered planet was the homeworld of the Besalisk race. Located in the Outer Rim, Ojom was an oceanic world which was covered in glaciers. Each of these glaciers supported a group of Besalisks. Several space stations were built in orbit around the planet, serving as spaceports and more hospitable habitats. (SWI70, UANT)

Ojoster Sector Assembly

Lak Jit threatened to protest his capture at Wayland to this obscure body. (SOP)

Ojum

this was the native language of the Besalisk race. (GMR10)

Ojum

see Besalisk. (GMR10)

'ok

this suffix was added to a Bothan's family name to indicate the individual's affiliation to the Uok clan. (GCG, WOTC)

Okamie, Olian

this woman was one of Trax Sector's most ruthless pirates. (HR)

Okand, Hol

this Alliance starfighter pilot served as a member of the Y-Wing Gold Squadron. He was instrumental in an attack on an Imperial outpost of Kashyyyk shortly before the Battle of Yavin, serving as Dutch's wingman and taking down the outpost's shields to facilitate the assault. He later served as Gold 6 during the Battle of Yavin, where he was befriended by Chewbacca. (CCG9)

Okanor, Galidon

this withered old Corellian man ran a pawn shop in Tyrena. He was an old acquaintance of Han Solo, who had sold many stolen items to the old man as a youth. When Han returned to Corellia with Bria Tharen, he sought out Okanor in order to sell off the treasures they had taken from Teroenza's museum. (TPS)

OKC-167

this was the designation of Mobquet's personal repulsor pack system. The OKC-167 used a collection of micro-repulsorlift engines to provide the wearer with maneuverability and lift, although many jet pack owners claimed the micro-repulsors were exceptionally slow. The high price of the OKC-167 also priced it out of most civilian markets, but it managed to find a niche in military operations. (AEG)

Okeefe, Barthos

this man, a native of the planet Brentaal, was one of the leaders of House Okeefe during the height of the New Order. Barthos made his credits working as the director of one of Brentaal's orbital HoloNet relay stations, before retiring to his estate. While he disliked the Empire, he didn't support the Alliance because he didn't believe that they could actually win the war. (CCW)

Okeefe, Platt

this strikingly beautiful young woman was one of the galaxy's most famous smugglers. Platt was the daughter of parents who were members of one of Brentaal's more prominent trading houses. She was supposed to attend the commerce academy and learn about the family business, but the idea of being a stuffy businesswoman didn't appeal to her. After several boring years at school, she packed her meager belongings and hitched a ride aboard the Starlite Cloud. After two years on the Starlite Cloud, she crewed on the Ravelev for two years before joining the Klatooinan Trade Guild as a pilot. She owned the YT-1300 known as the Last Chance. Early in her career, Platt was captured and enslaved by Big Quince. A chance meeting with a fellow slave named Tru'eb Cholak brought her a chance for escape. The two plotted against Big Quince, eventually stealing his personal shuttle and escaping captivity. Platt later repaid Tru'eb for his help, and the two developed a strong friendship. Platt often worked for the Alliance and the New Republic, but was by no means allied with them. She and Tru'eb often worked alone, although they often hired additional help as needs demanded. Shortly after the Battle of Endor, they teamed up with Dirk Harkness while working on Zelos II, when they became aware of the Imperial presence on the planet. They tipped off the New Republic to the location of the garrison, and Harkness went in to ensure the base was cleared out. However, the Republic's team was wiped out and Harkness was captured. Platt and Tru'eb both believed Harkness was worth rescuing, so they infiltrated the garrison and rescue him, along with Jai Raventhorn. (SWJ9, TFNR, CRO, PSG)

Okfili

an alien species native to the Sayblohn System. They are a very religious race. (RPG)

Okins

this was one of the most common male names among the Corellian population. (GMR9)

Okins

this Imperial Navy Admiral served the Empire during the Galactic Civil War. Darth Vader suggested that Okins should lead the attack on the Vergesso Asteroids, so that he could be free to keep an eye on Xizor. Palpatine refused, commanding that Vader lead Okins in the attack. (SE)

Okko

the Great Shaman of the Ysanna tribe on Ossus, he is able to recognize Luke Skywalker as a Jedi Knight when Luke and Kam Solusar arrive on the planet to search out the Jedi stronghold there. He then befriends Luke and Kam. Okko wears a unique mask, and is said to be the greatest magician the Ysanna have ever known. (DE2)

Oko E

this planet is a vacation world, well-known among adventurers who like to wild-water raft. Visitors can navigate treacherous rivers of molten sulfur during their expedition. (SOL)

Oktra

this was one of the many names given to female Bothans. In the Bothan language, it meant "resourceful." (GCG, WOTC)

Oktrem

this Bothan name was given to newborn males. Translated into Basic, it meant "commanding." (GCG, WOTC)

Oku

this barely sentient race of beings was native to the planet. During the years that Figg Excavations made a fortune from the planet's ores and crystal deposits, the work teams left handouts for the Oku during each operation. When the mines played out, Figg Excavations pulled out of their Tokmia operations. In response, the Oku lit huge fires to act as landing lights, in order to help fulfill the prophesy of the offworlders' return. (WOA33)

Ola

this was a common name among Cerean females. Unlike their male counterparts, Cerean females use a single name unless they became a bond-wife. In this case, a female will take on their husband's grandfather's name for official matters. The name Ola indicated peace, tranquility or inspiration. (GCG)

Ola vine

a plant native to Dathomir that withers and dies when it is cut. (CPL)

Olabria

planet on which the deadly Olabrian Trichoid larva are found. (TB)

Olabrian Trichoid

an Olabrian parasite which is small in its egg stage, the trichoid is deadly in its larval stage. As a larva, the trichoid resembled a scaled worm with a wide mouth, studded with a circle of sharp, toothlike barbs. The pupal stage is a period of rapid growth, and the adults emerge fully fertile. Adults can grow quite large, and produce egg pods which contained three distinct larvae. (TB, TBSB)

Olafson

a moisture farming family on Tatooine. They were friends with Ariq Joanson, although they disagreed with his ideals. (TME)

Olag Greck

a tall, thin alien with a wide, flat head and pointed ears, he was an early partner of Baron Pitareeze, when the Baron was trying to get his shipbuilding business off the ground. When Greck realized that the Pitareeze Cruiser was a great ship, he stole the plans and built his own ship, claiming it to be the original. When Greck's ship failed, he begged the Baron to help fix it, but the Baron refused. Greck was angry at the Baron, and blamed the ship's failure on the Baron's intervention. The Pitareeze Cruiser was never built by either party. Since then Greck runs a series of illegal operations on or around Hosk Station. He was responsible for reprogramming a 3PO unit into C-3PX, a killing droid recognizable by the 3PX on its breastplate. He was finally caught on Hosk, trying to steal a load of ash ore. He was nearly destroyed when a detonation he had rigged was defused, but he managed to escape. Unit Zed enlisted C-3PO and R2-D2 to track him down in the Corellian system. They eventually caught up to Greck at Boonda the Hutt's palace. There, B-9D7 had attempted to discredit Boonda, but was exposed when B-9D7 was destroyed by Jace Forno. Greck tried to use the death of B-9D7 to woo Boonda over to his own schemes, but Boonda was the beneficiary of all the plotting, for he ended up with Greck and Forno as captives. (DRO)

Olai

this powerfully-built beast of burden was transported to Redcap from a nearby moon, and was originally bred to serve in the mines as a pack animal. Over time, they became mounts and transports. Their ponderous heads were crowned by a pair of bulbous, hollow horns that were used in the fights that occurred during the mating season. Their wide feet were tipped with metallic claws, giving the olai excellent footing on rocky ground. (SWJ5)

Olall Da'aapp

this Gruvian and her husband, Benja, were tourists who had probably seen more of the galaxy than any living being at the height of the New Order. They carried all sorts of cameras and recording equipment to document their travels, and were known to stop unsuspecting spacers in a starport to ask them to take their picture. (PSPG)

Olan

a wealthy and influential Twi'lek clan based on Ryloth. The name meant "wealthy" in the Twi'leki language. (XWBT, KT, GCG)

O-Lana

this young Keganite child was born nearly thirteen years before the Battle of Naboo. She was discovered to be strong with the Force, and her parents secretly made contact with the Jedi Knights on Coruscant, against the wishes of Kegan's rulers. After the Jedi arrived, O-Lana was kidnapped and taken to the Relearning Circle where she was controlled by V-Tan and O-Vieve. All records of her birth and existence were wiped from Kegan's computers, in order to keep the child hidden and convince the Jedi to leave. However, the Jedi padawans Obi-Wan Kenobi and Siri rescued O-Lana, and the child eventually was trained on Coruscant. (PP)

Olanji

a planet in the Hapes cluster. (CPL)

Olanji/Charubah

this Hapan starship design firm specializes in military applications. They are employed by the Hapan Royal Family, alongside the Hapan Consortium, whenever military craft are required. The Hapan Battle Dragon was contracted out to Olanji/Charubah. (EGV)

Olanz

this balding man, a native of the planet Typha-Dor, was a member of Shalini's resistance group during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (JQ7)

Ola's

this was a tavern, located in the city of Hullis, on Halmad. It was here that several members of Wraith Squadron provoked a fight with Lieutenant Cothron's group, as part of their plan to infiltrate the Imperial garrison and steal TIE starfighters. (IF)

Olbeg, Han

this man represented his homeworld of Pitann in the Galactic Senate, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Olbio

the leaves of this tree, which grew natively on the planet Myrkr, were one of the main food sources of the ysalamiri. It rarely survived if transported off Myrkr. (SBS)

Old Anaxsi

this was the term used to describe the collection families which traced their histories to the original inhabitants of the planet Anaxes. (CCW)

Old Besi

this was the name used by Roy Harlison to describe his SWE/2 riot suppression gun. (SWJ6)

Old City

this abandoned city was located on the water world of Aquilaris. The forerunner of Floating City, Old City employed repulsors to keep it hovering above the surface of the ocean. It was abandoned when a violent storm nearly capsized it, but huge cranes supported by smaller repulsors kept the city afloat while salvage and rescue operations were carried out. Many of the planet's podraces wound through the city, adding an everchanging obstacle course to the racers' challenges. (RAC)

Old City

this was the name used to describe the canyon city of Melaana, on Soterios. It was called the Old City after the development of New Melaana. (PGT)

Old Codger

this was the name of Morgan Katarn's skimmer, used during his overseeing of the refugee base on Ruusan, shortly after the Empire subjugated Sulon. (RAG)

Old Corellian

this archaic language was used by the early natives of the planet Corellia. Over the millennia, it was populated with words and phrases from the Basic tongue, and became the modern Corellian language. The only known vestige of Old Corellian in regular use during the modern era was on Socorro, where the indigenous population - descended from Corellian stock - remained isolated for many millennia. Otherwise, Old Corellian was believed to have become "extinct" some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. (BSS, SWJ7)

Old Corellian: A Guide for the Curious Scholar

this was a guide to the outdated Old Corellian language, written by the Issori linguist Arner Figgis. (SWJ7)

Old Currahen Highway

this Garosian roadway connects the cities of Arian and Garan. (SWJ2)

Old Enemy, The

this was the Nagai phrase used to describe the Tof race, which oppressed the Nagai for many centuries. (GMR1)

Old Ezil

this weathered, old man was a native of the planet Cularin, and was knowledgeable about the criminal underworld of the planet during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. He was not known for the reliability of his information, but more for the overt way in which he rambled about the strange goings-on in the Cularin System. Old Ezil was active for many years, until he suddenly disappeared shortly after the onset of the Clone Wars. Many believed that Old Ezil had been caught by agents of the Thaereian Military and silenced, although no evidence was found to support this. Ezil reappeared during the height of the Clone Wars, retelling stories of being tortured and interrogated by agents of the Thaereian Military, and how he got lucky one day and managed to escape. (LFCW)

Old Folks Home

this was the codename for the Jedi Temple, located on Coruscant during the Old Republic. The codename "Old Folks Home" was used by those field agents who were undertaking top-secret investigations, but needed to get a message back to Coruscant. (AOTCC)

Old Galactic Standard

this language was used many millennia before the Battle of Yavin, and was one of the first recognized languages which tried to bring a common communication method to the races of the Old Republic. (GMR5)

Old Gloxix

this legendary styanax was believed to live in the Sea of Jarad, on the planet Tralus. Measuring over fourteen meters in length and missing its tail stinger, Old Gloxix was distinguished by the forest of barbs and harpoons which stuck out of its flesh. The legend was proven true some 500 years before the Battle of Endor, when Old Gloxix was finally caught and killed by three nagak crews.. (CCW)

Old Guard

this was the highest, and most esteemed, rank held by members of the Society of the Black Bha'lir. Most of the members of the Old Guard were in some form of retirement, but actively took part in the training of talented smugglers. (BSS)

Old High Squibbian

this language is the basis for modern Squibbian. (SH)

Old High Trammic

the ancient language used by the Toka and the Sharu. (LCS)

Old Janx Spirit

this was a particularly powerful distilled alcohol, popular during the last years of the Old Republic. (MJH)

Old Kuurt

this grizzled, old man was a regular patron of the Crosstown tavern on Cularin, during the height of the Clone Wars. Old Kuurt was a veteran of too many battles to remember, and had dedicated his life to defending Cularin against any form of attack. Because of his contribution, the owners of the Crosstown more or less let Old Kuurt eat or drink whatever he wanted when he came in. However, after retiring from active duty, he spent much of his time in an alcohol-induced stupor, in which he tried to escape the harsh realities of the galaxy around him. The owners of the Crosstown learned to fill up his mug with synthetic, low-alcohol brews, although many suspected that Old Kuurt was aware of it anyway. Unfortunately for the rest of the Crosstown's patrons, alcohol also tended to loosen up Old Kuurt's tongue, and he wasn't afraid to vent his frustrations on any being unfortunately enough to sit down with ten meters of him. He hated the fact that the Grand Army of the Republic was made up primarily of clone troopers, since they had little or no regard for the livelihood of the people they were sworn to protect. In Old Kuurt's opinion, a clone trooper would do anything to meet its objective, even destroy innocent civilians if needed. He advocated Cularin's remaining neutral in the Clone Wars, letting the Old Republic and the "Seppertists" fight it out until one side or the other eventually won out. He even went so far as to accuse the Old Republic of acting only in the best interests of the rich, so that small worlds like Cularin never reached a state of economic richness. (LFCW)

Old Law

this Hutt custom is at its simplest a challenge issued by one kadijic leader to another. In certain circumstances, a leader can challenge another to single combat without legal repercussions from the Hutt Grand Council, and the victor is assumed to be in the right. (RD)

Old Mankoo

this planet suffered a devastating economic disaster some seven or eight years after the Battle of Naboo. Most of the planet's people were plunged into poverty, and the formerly wealthy elites struggled to maintain their riches. This led to widespread strife and rebellion, causing even more troubles for the planet. (RHD)

Old Oglaw

this grizzled old spacer was grounded in the city of Iritsa, on Chazwa, during the hunt for the Black Sphere. (ND)

Old One

this was the name given to the Force-sensitive individual who lived in the Onacra village on Aduba-3, many decades before the Battle of Yavin. It was the Old One who discovered the existence of the Behemoth, deep beneath the planet's surface, and was able to bring the creature out of suspended animation. The Old One was unable to control the Behemoth, and was trampled to death when it managed to break free. (GMR4)

Old Ones

the title given to the ancient Snogars. They were intelligent and highly technological. They left behind many strange devices which the Snogars no longer understand. It is theorized that the devices were used to help climatize Ota, but that has not been verified. (CSWEA)

Old Ones

this was the name used by DarkStryder to describe its creators, the earliest known race of beings to inhabit the Kathol Sector. Their descendants became the Kathol. The Old Ones created DarkStryder to guard the last vestiges of their civilization. (E)

Old Orchard Street

Leia Organa Solo chases Roganda Ismaren down this street, located in Plawal on Belsavis. (COJ)

Old Pacht

this was the name given to the oldest buildings of the Abregado-rae spaceport. (CCW)

Old Quarter

this is one of the original sections of Skeebo City. It was here that the Skavers directed Gorga the Hutt to deliver the ransom payment for Anachro. (BF)

Old Quarter

this was the name used to describe the older section of the city of Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine. The Old Quarter radiated outward from the wreck of the Dowager Queen, but was left behind when new water and power distribution centers were established on its outskirts. (SOT)

Old Recluse

this supposedly omniscient Morish lived in a cave in the High Tatmana mountains of Morishim. An ancient male who lived in the isolation of his mountain crag, the Old Recluse was in possession of an Imperial communications center, wedged into the back of his cave. He claimed to be foretelling the future, but was simply listening to Imperial transmissions. His small operation was discovered by Lando Calrissian and Wedge Antilles shortly after the revelation of the Bothan involvement in the destruction of Caamas. They surmised that the communications center had been set up shortly before the New Republic reclaimed the world from Imperial control. (SOP)

Old Republic

this Alliance CR90 corvette was destroyed in the Endor System when the Daggerblade suddenly reappeared, shortly after the Battle of Endor. Despite outgunning the Daggerblade, the Old Republic could not counter the smaller ship's maneuverability. (TBSB)

Old Republic

the name given to the time before the Empire was formed, it was the period in which the Galactic Senate worked with the Jedi Knights to keep the galaxy in order. Most historians point the Old Republic's beginnings at the point when hyperspatial travel was first invented, allowing beings from across the galaxy to move about with relative ease. The Old Republic's government was formed shortly afterward, with the Jedi Knights becoming the guardians of peace and justice. This was believed to have been some 25,000 years before the Battle of Yavin, but exact dating has become impossible. What was known was that the Old Republic grew and prospered for nearly 20,000 years, until the Sith emerged from their hidden empire and ravaged the Republic, first during the Great Hyperspace War, and a thousand years later during the Great Sith War. The Republic managed to rebuild itself over the next 3,000 years, until the Sith emerged once again. With the Battle of Ruusan, the threat of the Sith was believed to have been eliminated, and the Republic once again prospered. For nearly a millennium, the Republic knew peace and harmony, unaware that it was actually crumbling from within. As the Galactic Senate became more and more concerned with petty squabbling and the posturing of its delegates, corruption became more and more prevalent. Secretive factions formed to work in their own best interests, and the Sith Lord known as Darth Sidious began to take advantage of the situation to further his own goals. The humble Senator from Naboo, Palpatine, used the victory at the Battle of Naboo to win the election for Supreme Chancellor, and he continued to solidify his base of power. When the time was right, Palpatine declared himself Emperor and established the New Order, marking the final days of the Old Republic. (SW, CHRN, SW1, SHPT)

this vast information repository was located in Imperial City on Coruscant. (TLC)

Old Sith Wars

this was a generic term used by historians to refer to the period of time some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin, beginning with the Great Sith War. The Old Sith Wars then encompass the Great Hunt, the Cleansing of the Nine Houses, and the War of the Star Forge. Additionally, the Mandalorian Wars are also grouped under the era of the Old Sith Wars, due to their temporal proximity. (SW180)

Old Soveryn

this was a famous character from a play made famous by Adalric Brandl. (TFE)

Old Spaceman's Home

Han Solo's ultimate goal, before joining up with the Alliance, was to live long enough to make it to the Old Spaceman's Home. It is a term used by spacer's to indicate retirement. (HSE)

Old Suicide Squads

this was Alliance slang for the original Infiltrators of the Special Forces division. (SWJ11)

Old Tarmidian

this language, according to Entoo Needan E-elz, was Jorj Car'das' childhood language. (VOF)

Old Town

this was original section of the city of Bagsho, established on the planet Nim Drovis. Much of this section was built on stilts over swampland. Over time, the citizens drained the swamps and established a network of well-maintained canals instead of roadways. Slug ranches were established on the outskirts, and the New Republic established the Meridian Sector medical facility there. (HT)

Old Town

this was the name given to the oldest section of Qaestar Town, on the planet Talus. (CCW)

Old Town Factoryville

this was one of many industrialized, urban areas found on the planet Eriadu. (EGP)

Old X'Tingian

this was the original form of the X'Tingian language, made up from a collection of sounds and smells. A written form of the language was made up of heiroglyphs and pictograms. (HIV)

Oldskep

this Imperial supply freighter was stationed at the Alluuvia mining operation, in support of the outpost which was being established on the planet. It was named for an executive of Imperial Mining, Limited. (OE)

Oldsong, Abbela

this woman served as an assistant to Doctor Plee, the Ho'Din plant-development specialist who worked on the New Republic's team to restore the environment of the planet Duro. When the Yuuzhan Vong attacked Duro, Abbela was one of the first beings captured for sacrifice. The priestess Vaecta then used a tkun to suffocate her. (BP)

Oldtimers

a name given to the original inhabitants of the planet Nam Chorios. The Oldtimers were political prisoners left on the planet by the Grissmaths, which also left behind the drochs in an effort to exterminate the prisoners. Many survived, learning how to beat the drochs and maintain a meager existence. Many Oldtimers followed the words of Theras, and strove to keep larger ships from entering and leaving the system. (POT)

Oleg

this man was a low-level member of the Absolutes, during the rise to power of Balog on the planet New Apsolon, some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. He had been marked for interrogation by his superiors, and he planned to desert the Absolutes when he first met the Jedi Master Tahl. When her cover was exposed, Tahl needed to escape as well, and Oleg helped her get out of the Absolutes' base when he himself fled. It was believed that Oleg had a copy of the list of Absolute supporters, but he disappeared before he could be questioned by the Jedi Knights. His lifeless body was discovered by Qui-Gon Jinn shortly afterward, shot and killed by one of the probe droids which had been outlawed on the planet. Qui-Gon later discovered that Irini had reprogrammed the probe droids, in an effort to obtain the list and prevent any further bloodshed. (DOH, CTV)

this cruiser was part of the Alpha fleet which was commanded by General Wedge Antilles as part of Operation Trinity, during the last stages of the battle against the Yuuzhan Vong. (FP)

Oleson (*)

a General serving at the New Academy for Space Pilots, and Luke Skywalker's favorite instructor. (MM)

Olev Madak

this Duros mechanic worked at Darknion Station at the height of the Galactic Civil War, repairing starships and barely maintaining the operational status of the station itself. Olev came to Darknion Station after fleeing a group of bounty hunters who were trying to bring him in to repaid some old gambling debts. His ship more or less disintegrated after landing at Darknion, and he remained there ever since. (PSPG)

Olgkru

this was one of the many Twi'leki clans which were native to the planet Ryloth. In the Twi'leki language, the clan's name meant "strong-willed". (GCG)

Olgreen Intelligence Guild

founded by Wilam Olgreen and belonging to the Coalition of Automaton Rights Activists, this protest group was known for its blockading of droid reclamation factories, thereby preventing the delivery of scrap or rogue droids for meltdown. The Guild was originally formed during the early stages of the Clone Wars, in protest of the ways in which droids of the Confederacy of Independent Systems were destroyed by the Old Republic. The Guild was known to have erected portable shield generators to prevent Republic transports from dumping the shells of damaged battle droids into reclamation facilities. (FTD, SWI70)

Olgreen, Wilam

this fanatic was the leader of the Olgreen Intelligence Guild during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Olgreen founded the Guild during the early years of the Clone Wars, in protest of the ways in which the Old Republic was disposing of damaged battle droids collected from warzones. Because he maintained no outward connection to the Confederacy of Independent Systems, Olgreen was never arrested for his actions. Years later, it was known that he maintained an illegal droid modification facility somewhere in the Outer Rim Territories, and sold his services and wares aboard Omze's Incredible Travelling Starport. (FTD, SWI70)

Olianna

this six-year-old A'Mar child was only member of their society who had not yet taken a drink from the Wellspring, when the time came to perform The Vigil, during the Galactic Civil War. She was too young to remain by the spring alone, and the other children who were old enough to accompany her had been lost in the woods and had to drink from the spring to survive. As luck would have it, a group of adventurers suffered damage to their starship near Lamus, and had to land on the moon. In exchange for the parts to repair their ship, the adventurers agreed to accompany Olianna to the Wellspring. (WOA31)

Olie', Ric

this man was a native of the planet Naboo, and grew up trying to fly or drive anything he could get his hands on. Among his friends, he was known as "Reckless Ric" for his piloting of a Sandtek Skyflipper into a grassy hill. However, he reined in his enthusiasm and joined the military, and was eventually promoted to the leader of Royal armed forces' Bravo Squadron. However, like the rest of Naboo society, he was unprepared for the Trade Federation's invasion force of droids. Olie and his pilots were quickly rounded up and prepared for dispatching to a detention camp when Qui-Gin Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi managed to liberate Queen Amidala from her Neimoidian captors. Obi-Wan freed the pilots, and the group fled Naboo for Coruscant. Ric Olie took control as the senior pilot, guiding them through the Federation's blockade as best he could. However, all his skills were no match for the firepower of the Federation battle cruisers. He was forced to limp the ship to Tatooine for repairs, but eventually got Amidala to Coruscant. While en route, Ric brought young Anakin Skywalker into the cockpit and taught him about the working of the starship. Later, during the Battle of Naboo, Ric led Bravo Squadron against the Federation's droid control ship. With the unexpected help of young Anakin, they were able to destroy the control ship and eliminate the threat imposed by the Federation's droid armies. Ric Olie was portrayed by Ralph Brown in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace. (SW1, OWS, NEGC)

Olin, Ferus

this young man was training to become a Jedi Knight, some five years after the Battle of Naboo. A noble-looking young man with maturity beyond his years, Ferus had been the chosen Padawan learner of Siri Tachi at the time, and was in training with Anakin Skywalker. Ferus constructed a red lightsaber during his training, a fact that raised many eyebrows in the Jedi Temple. His experiences with the training at the Temple were hard on Ferus, who was friendly with many students but never true friends with any one being. He focused solely on his training, a fact that led his fellow students to call him the "ruler of Planet Dull." He felt that the Force and his Jedi training were simply missing pieces in his life, with the tenets of the Jedi Order seeming to fit into grooves in his mind. Ferus was an older student with a great deal of experience, being about two years older than Anakin, and he had the charisma and fortitude to take control of a situation without hesitation. When he was teamed with Anakin Skywalker during the evacuation of Radnor, some five years after the Battle of Naboo, the two young men found themselves constantly at odds to provide leadership to the Padawan team. The two vowed to keep an eye on each other, as both held reservations about the other's true motives. Later, they were paired on a mission to locate Jenna Zan Arbor on the planet Romin. Posing as the criminals Waldo and Ukiah, they managed to explore the outer edges of the city of Elior, during which time Anakin and Ferus discovered that they both fell into a rapport without any effort. However, it was on Romin that Ferus explained to Obi-Wan Kenobi that he feared for Anakin at the same time he admired him, and worried that Anakin's sense of what was right was clouded by his own inner conviction. This unburdened Ferus of his fears, and allowed him to reach a better understanding of Anakin and his abilities. In short order, the two Padawans began working well together, an occurrence that made the pursuit of Granta Omega, Jenna Zan Arbor, and Roy Teda that much easier. The four Jedi tracked down every possible lead, until they realized that Granta Omega's true target was Chancellor Palpatine himself. Obi-Wan and Anakin had managed to keep Palpatine safe, but Obi-Wan was forced to leave Anakin with the Chancellor in order to locate Omega. When Siri and Ferus reached them, Ferus agreed to watch over the Chancellor while Siri and Anakin when to assist Obi-

Wan. Thus, Ferus was the only Jedi in Palpatine's vicinity when Omega's seeker droids attacked the Senate chambers. Ferus found valiantly, until he found himself guarding both Palpatine and the fleeing Roy Teda. Despite deflecting the attacks of five or more droids, Roy Teda was shot and killed. In the aftermath of the fighting, Ferus believed that he had failed. Even though Roy Teda was one of most vehemently anti-Jedi voices in the Senate, Ferus still mourned his death. Upon returning to Coruscant, Ferus was chosen by the Jedi Council to be the first candidate for an accelerated program meant to promote students to Knight status earlier. He then accompanied the team that was dispatched to Korriban to apprehend Granta Omega. He found himself forced into a competition with Anakin, who believed that he should have been chosen in Ferus' place. As Anakin became more aggressive, Ferus found a new friend in Tru Veld. When Tru's lightsaber was damaged in a fight on Korriban, Ferus tried to repair it, so that Tru would have a chance to continue the mission. However, his repairs caused the lightsaber to drain power at a faster rate, and Tru was left weaponless during another battle. Because of this, Darra Thel-Tanis was left undefended, and later died from a laser blast. Ferus believed himself to be responsible, and decided to leave the Jedi Order upon returning to Coruscant, despite the success of the overall mission. It was then that he learned that Anakin had done some prior repairs to Tru's lightsaber, but had failed to tell him about it. Ferus never forgave Anakin for his lack of assistance, and left the Order knowing that he had done everything he could, but forced to live with Darra's death on his conscience. this Alliance Nebulon-B frigate was captured during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE) this ancient Onderonian noble tried to speak out against Queen Amanoa and the Sith powers she used to control the planet Onderon. Amanoa captured Olis and killed him with a vicious ball of dark-side fire. (TOJC)

Oll Maa'cabe

this Twi'leki anthropologist was a Professor of Anthropology at Alderaan University before the destruction of that planet. He was off-world at the time, and survived the cataclysm. He was a supporter of the Alliance who joined full-time shortly before the Battle of Yavin, and later recruited one of his students, Pajida Anjeri. They were working to recover stolen Twi'leki artifacts when they ran afoul of Imperial forces on the planet Omman. Before Doctor Anjeri could book passage to Ryloth, Doctor Maa'cabe was shot and killed by a squad of stormtroopers. (SWJ12)

Oll, Lari

this brown-haired woman was one of the many Jedi Knights who were on Coruscant during the final months of the Clone Wars. Lari worked at the Jedi Temple as one of the many technicians and support personnel who manned the Temple's communications center. Thus, Lari was on duty when General Grievous launched his attack on Coruscant, but was unable to warn anyone because of the intense jamming employed by the Separatist forces. (LEV)

Olopan

this flat-bodied amphibian resembles the lilypad-like pom plant found in the swamps of Naboo. This allows the olopan to float among the pom pads and escape being eaten by larger predators. It feeds on small plants and the algae-like green glie. (GF)

Olopom

this aquatic rodent, native to the planet Naboo, had short, dense, green fur which allowed it to move through the water quite swiftly and provided camouflage. The six-legged olopom floated on the surface, using its wide head to mimic the pads of poms. A collection of tendrils sprouting from the top of their heads resembled the blossoms of the pom, and these bloomed on response to the pom plant. The olopom fed on the wide leaves of the pom. (WSW)

Olm

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name meant "porter" or "bearer". (GCG)

Olmahk

this Noghri bodyguard accompanied Leia Organa Solo to Bastion, during her attempt to gain the assistance of Gilead Pellaeon in battling the Yuuzhan Vong. He later traveled with Leia to the Conclave on the Plight of the refugees, on Ord Mantell. During the restoration of the ecosystem on Duro, Olmahk was forced to protect Leia's escape route, after the Yuuzhan Vong attacked the planet, and he was killed in the attempt. His efforts were not fruitless, as Leia managed to get off Duro in time. (DTR, HT, BP)

Olmar Grahk

this Devaronian male was the son of Holmar Grahk. Shortly before the Battle of Naboo, Olmar was married off to five Yinchorri princesses, as part of a deal that made his father's cousin, Vilmarh Grahk, a member of the Yinchorri clans. Villie hoped to gain the confidence of the Yinchorri by helping them steal starships from the Golden Nyss Shipyards. The Yinchorri would not agree to the plan unless Villie was a clan-mate. Villie had no desire to marry five Yinchorri females, so Olmar was chosen as the candidate. Later, during the Yinchorri defense of their home system against the Jedi Knights, Olmar was captured by Adi Gallia and Eeth Koth and held for questioning. He managed to escape, but he tried to call for help. His communication went directly to the Yinchorri headquarters, allowing the Jedi to trace the connection and root out the Yinchorri leaders. (TDV)

Omal

this red-headed young man was a student of history, and was one of Doctor Murk Lundi's best students, some six years before the Battle of Naboo. When Doctor Lundi traveled to Kodai in search of a Sith Holocron, Omal discovered that another student, Norval, was trailing him in order to steal the Holocron for himself. Omal set out to stop Norval from achieving this. When Norval tried to steal the Holocron for himself, Omal fought to retain the Holocron for Doctor Lundi. In the struggle that ensued, Omal and Norval lost the Holocron when it fell into a deep, underwater chasm. In the years following the loss of the Holocron and Lundi's imprisonment by the Jedi Knights, Omal and another student, Dedra, lived together on an unspecified planet. (JAF)

Omal-Zan

this was one of the most famous Draethos individuals to hail from the planet Thosa. (UANT)

Oma-Oma

Omar

the primary planet in the Omar System. The Empire built a number of TIE Advanced manufacturing plants in this system during the Galactic Civil War. It was here that Admiral Zaarin defected to the Alliance, attempting to bring the TIE Advanced technology with him. (TIE)

Omas

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Omas, Cal

a native of the planet Alderaan, Cal Omas was a member of the Alliance from its earliest days. He survived many battles and struggles, and eventually rose to become a Senator in the New Republic. He was sympathetic to the plight of Luke Skywalker, who hoped to restore the Jedi Council in order to rein in the independent Jedi acting with Kyp Durron. Unfortunately for the Jedi, and for many of the galaxy's inhabitants, Senator Omas was among those Advisory Council members who were lost in the wake of the Second Battle of Coruscant. He reappeared on the planet Calamari, leading the remnants of the Republic's leadership in an effort to re-establish control of the galaxy. When the self-appointed Chief of State Pwoe refused to join the Republic on Calamari - instead, calling for them to join him on Kuat - the remnants of the Republic ostracized Pwoe and elected Omas to serve as the new Chief of State. Among his first acts, Cal Omas vowed to recreate the Jedi Council, working with Luke Skywalker to form the High Council. He continued to work toward ending the war with the Yuuzhan Vong and bringing the galaxy back together, and was one of the first to support formation of the Galactic Alliance. However, the toll of the war continued to drain him, and it was one of his most difficult decisions to allow a new strain of the Alpha Red virus to be deployed on Caluula. After hearing the report of Leia Organa Solo from her experiences on Caluula, Omas agreed that the Alpha Red project needed to be shut down, but Leia knew that pressure from Dof Scaur might only postpone further deployment. Omega Exercise this was the name given to the final training exercise the trainees at the Imperial Academy on Carida had to pass for being allowed to graduate. In most cases, the Omega Exercise was real-life action against the Alliance, and many students "failed" the exercise when they were killed in battle. (SFE)

Omega Frost

this superweapon was developed by Silas Tagge, the brother of Baron Orman Tagge, for use against the Alliance. Essentially, Omega Frost was a collection of large, vaporator-like devices which produced incredibly low temperatures. When activated in concert, these devices froze everything between them to solid ice in just a few seconds. Any moisture caught within the confines of the Omega Frost weapon quickly turned to ice, often shattering any material in which moisture was trapped. Initial testing of the device was done on the planet Tatooine, where entire plains of sand were flash-frozen in seconds. Silas Tagge's goal, however, was much grander: to be able to freeze an entire planet. The Omega Frost device was discovered by Luke Skywalker and Han Solo, during Luke's mission to recruit pilots for the Alliance. In a daring move, Luke tried to infiltrate the Tagge starship and determine the plans for Omega Frost. He was captured and brought before Orman Tagge, but Luke defeated him in combat and escaped. His ship was purposely disabled by Orman's younger brother, Silas, and Luke was forced to land on one of the many asteroids near Junction. What Silas had not foreseen, however, was that Luke would make it to one of the asteroids where the Omega Frost generators had been placed. Luke was able to destroy its power source, and the loss of the generator shut down the entire Omega Frost system. The Alliance ships, free to move through the asteroids, destroyed the Tagge ship and continued to Junction. (MC32, MC34)

Omega One

Omega Squad

this was the designation of a team of clone commandos that was formed in the wake of the Battle of Geonosis. Its four members - RC-1309, RC-1136, RC-8015, and RC-3222; otherwise known as Niner, Darman, Fi, and Atin, respectively - were each the sole survivors of other groups of commandos, and were put together for the Old Republic's mission to capture Ovolot Qail Uthan on Qiilura. Omega Squad was part of Arca Company, and was based out of Coruscant during the height of the Clone Wars. (RCHC, SWI81)

Omega, Granta

this man placed a bounty on the heads of Obi-Wan Kenobi, Anakin Skywalker, and Wren Honoran, some five years before the onset of the Clone Wars. He grew up on the moon of Nierport Seven, after his month found work at the refueling station there. When he was old enough, he left the moon for Yerphonia, where he attended the All Sciences Research Academy after being sponsored by Sano Sauro. Much of his early career is clouded with mystery, but at some point he began to despise the Jedi Knights. Shortly after the Battle of Naboo, Omega hired a number of bounty hunters in order to ensure that the Jedi were captured during a training mission on Ragoon-6. However, the Jedi managed to escape the various traps that were set, including one set by Omega himself. Further investigation by the Jedi revealed that Omega and a native of Nierport Seven and, while not a Sith himself, collected Sith artifacts with proceeds from a variety of legitimate business connections. Most of Omega's business dealings involved the location of rare ores and minerals, then buying out the entire mine for himself. He could then charge whatever price he wanted for resources needed by the rest of the galaxy. His business connections were nebulous, though, and were not enough to pin down his exact identity. Omega reappeared to thwart the Jedi on Haariden, only to flee into the smoke of the civil war there. Obi-Wan later discovered that Omega was on Haariden to extract titanite, ostensibly in an effort to corner the galactic market on bacta. Meanwhile, Omega captured Anakin and revealed that he was working to destroy Jedi Knights in order to impress Darth Sidious, in an effort to curry favor with the Sith Lord. His efforts on Haariden were thwarted when the Kaachtari volcano erupted before he could secure the titanite mines, and he fled into the depths of space. He reappeared on Mawan in the guise of the crimelord Striker, again luring Anakin into his lair when he realized the Jedi were traveling to Mawan to negotiate peace. Holding Anakin as bait, he hoped to lure a member of the Jedi Council into his lair and kill them, in an effort to impress the Sith Lord he believed to be gathering power in the galaxy. While he did succeed in taking Yaddle's life, the bioweapon he used did nothing to the population of Mawan. Omega continued to scheme, forming brief alliances with both Feeana Tala and Decca the Hutt in order to lure the Jedi into trap after trap. As he fled Mawan, Omega revealed to Obi-Wan that he was, in fact, the son of Xanatos. Months later, Omega was discovered to be working with Jenna Zan Arbor, hoping to use the Zone of Self-Containment as a way to quell the population into submission. Obi-Wan and Anakin began searching for his whereabouts, a search that led them to Romin and Falleen before ending on Coruscant. On Coruscant, the Jedi discovered that Granta Omega had been planning all along to assassinate Chancellor Palpatine, in order to install Sano Sauro as his puppet ruler. All the clues the Jedi had been able to discover only shifted the tack of his plans. When the Jedi discovered the Blackwater Systems facility on Falleen, Omega let them believe that the true delivery mechanism for the Zone of Self-Containment was through water. In reality, he planned to distribute it through the air. Thus, when Obi-Wan intercepted him on Coruscant, Omega was able to escape with the last laugh. Although he was unprepared for the actions of Anakin Skywalker, Granta was able to escape knowing that the Zone would be distributed by a group of seeker droids he had pre-programmed to launch. It was after this escape that Omega was finally given a chance to meet the Sith, and was invited to Korriban for the meeting. He traveled to the remote world with Zan Arbor, knowing that the Jedi would eventually follow him. On Korriban, he found himself growing stronger in the presence of so much Dark Side energy, and believed that he could defeat the Jedi. He especially hoped to destroy Obi-Wan, and got his chance in one of the many tombs in the Valley of the Dark Jedi. After meeting with the being who claimed he was a Sith Lord, Omega confronted Obi-Wan, but the weapon he was using overheated. In the resulting explosion, Omega was smashed against a wall and crushed. He refused to end the fight, and managed to get up and attack Obi-Wan once more. Unable to find another solution, Obi-Wan drew his lightsaber and slashed deeply into Omega's body. As he died, he goaded Obi-Wan one final time, claiming that the Jedi would never learn the identity of the Sith Lord. (JQ2, JQ4, JQ6, JQ9, JQ10)

Omega, Tura

this woman was Granta Omega's mother. She arrived on Nierport Seven when he was three, and worked at the refueling station. She died two years after Granta left for the All Sciences Research Academy. (JQ4)

Omega-1B

this Imperial Security Bureau ID denoted an incredibly high level of security. Actions and datafiles with Omega-1B clearance were highly confidential. (POM)

Omega-class Freighter

this was a boxy freighter that was designed for use by the Empire, during the height of the New Order. (IWST)

O-Melie

this Keganite woman was married to V-Nen. Together, they gave birth to a daughter, who was named O-Lana. They discovered that their daughter was strong with the Force, and contacted the Jedi Knights on Coruscant despite the possible destruction of the Common Good. When O-Lana was kidnapped and held in the Relearning Circle, O-Melie and V-Nen were unable to openly ask the Jedi to help, but instead pleaded with their eyes and their emotions. (FFT)

Omgiya

this female Ithorian served as the Flight Plan Supervisor aboard the herdship Errant Trader, overseeing all of the herdship's operations and managing its day-to-day needs. Serving under the command of Captain Onuumu, Supervisor Omgiya was known for her ability to resolve disputes among the herdship's passengers and crew. (GMR4)

Omicron

an Imperial transport which was used to carry war materiel during the Galactic Civil War. It was captured by Keyan Farlander and his X-Wing squadron. (XW)

Omidelon III

this planet was unusual in that its rotational plane is perpendicular to its orbital plane. This situation resulted in a planet of hostile weather conditions, dominated by an intensely hot climate broken only by a short mild season. After the mild season, Omidelon III was subjected to a frigid winter, then another short period of mildness before returning to the blistering heat. Despite this hostile environment, the planet supported several forms of life, including the adar. (COG)

Omin, Isaru

this man was one of the Senate Guards, serving under Commander Zalin Bey during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Isaru and his partner, Sagoro Autem, were assigned to investigate the murder of Jheramahd Greyshade, allowing Obi-Wan Kenobi and his Padawan Anakin Skywalker to protect Simon Greyshade. Obi-Wan discovered that Isaru was quite sensitive to the Force, and Isaru revealed that he had been tested but was considered too old at two years of age to be trained. As the investigation proceeded, revealing that Greyshade's killer was Sagoro's older brother, Venco Autem, Isaru had to struggle to keep his personal feelings out of the investigation. He reluctantly supported Zalin Bey's order for Sagoro to leave the investigation, knowing that it was best for Sagoro's career. When the investigation was completed, after Sagoro was forced to shoot and kill Venco to protect Simon Greyshade, Isaru found himself between a rock and a hard place. Sagoro was his best friend, but Sagoro also planned to allow his son Reymet to flee Coruscant. Reymet would have been imprisoned for providing Sagoro's authorization codes to Venco, who used them to gain access to the Senate Rotunda. Isaru had planned to arrest Reymet, but was forced to arrest Sagoro instead. During the height of the Clone Wars, Omin was part of a Guard detachment that was assigned to protect Senator Bail Organa. (RHD, RHF)

Ominaz, Ignar

one of the galaxy's most famous swoop racers, Ignar was popular during the last years of the Old Republic, when he vied with Serji-X Arrogantus for the Corulag championships. Ominaz rode an Ikas-Adno JP-420 swoop for Team Millennium Holos, and held a large number of speed and distance records. Years later, Ominaz was killed on Caprioril when an assassin droid wiped out an entire swoop arena in an attempt to kill the planet's governor, Amel Bakli. (SWSB, HNN5)

Omin-Oreh

an Alliance starfighter pilot from the Outer Rim Territories, he was severely injured while capturing the Imperial transport ship Omicron. (XW)

Omipal

this sweet-smelling incense was burned during the Yuuzhan Vong ceremony of appellation, or naming. (EVC)

Omlaut

a Dimok Lambda-class shuttle captured during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Omman

this planet had a very diverse set of cultures during the height of the New Order. It was orbited by five moons. (SWJ3, SWJ12)

Ommin

this man was the king of the planet Onderon some 350 years after the start of the Beast Wars, shortly before the Great Sith War. Like his father, grandfather, and great-grandfather before him, Ommin took control of Onderon and ruled through the use of the Dark Side of the Force. He became enthralled by Freedon Nadd's teachings, and when the spirit of Nadd approached him, Ommin allowed the Dark Jedi to grow in power. When the Jedi Knights were dispatched to Onderon to put an end to the Beast Wars, Ommin was revealed as Freedon Nadd's descendant. He carried some of the Dark Side ability with him, and his marriage to Queen Amanoa helped to bring out the Dark Side in him. Following the death of Amanoa during the intervention of Jedi Master Arca and his Jedi Knights, Ommin went into hiding, and was kept alive by mechanical means. Only his daughter, Galia, and a few trusted advisors knew he was still alive. When Arca came to Ommin to request help in recovering the stolen remains of Freedon Nadd, Ommin drew on the Dark Side of the Force to capture Arca. Ommin used the Dark Side to reach out to Satal Keto and Aleema, who had stolen Sith artifacts from the Galactic Museum on Coruscant. However, the artifacts couldn't save Ommin from the pureness of the Light Side, which had led Ulic Qel-Droma to his underground lair. Qel-Droma defeated Ommin with a swift slash of his lightsaber, crumpling Ommin's mechanical armatures and reducing the withered king to a formless mass of flesh. The spirit of Freedon Nadd, set free by the use of the Sith artifacts, finished what Ulic had started by taking Ommin's soul. (FNU, DLS, TOJC)

Ommis, Kesin

this weapons specialist was a native of Coruscant. He joined the Alliance about a year after the Battle of Yavin, and served as a gunnery mate on several starships including the escort frigate Tharen. An expert in weapons operation, Kesin was assigned to the Echo Base to assist wherever possible. He pulled gunnery duty with Hobbie Klivian during the Battle of Hoth, where he was injured in the fighting. (CCG3, SW174)

Ommni Box

a device which can alter the tones and sounds of musical instruments. It takes a great deal of aural sensitivity, coupled with intense concentration and analytic ability, to manage the instrument. It helps attenuate and clip the music at precise tones and ranges, adding to the overall composition. It takes in the surrounding music by way of a unique, multi-level receptor dish. (TME)

Ommni Wheel

this was the name of the wheel-shaped device found at the top of an Ommni Box, which was used to modulate the sound produced by the instrument. (VD)

Omni Box

Omnino

this Venan woman was a Baroness from the planet Vena, who represented her homeworld during its negotiations with the Old Republic. Some thirteen years before the Battle of Naboo, Omnino's husband Kindoro was killed while traveling through Republic space under the escort of Qui-Gon Jinn. She held a grudge against the Jedi Knights, and Qui-Gon in particular, for the rest of her life. Baroness Omnino became the ruler of the planet Vena in the wake of Kindoro's death, and served as regent for their son Sando. However, she lacked her husband's leadership skills, and she was forced to deal with the Vena Isolationist faction herself. She turned to the use of mind-control devices to manipulate other beings, thereby keeping the isolationists under control. Shortly before the Battle of Naboo, she was targeted for assassination by the Vena Isolationists from her homeworld, who wanted to keep Vena neutral in galactic politics, and was attacked when she arrived on Coruscant. In an unexpected turn of events, she requested Qui-Gon's protection while she was on Coruscant. She apologized to Qui-Gon, but secretly began plotting her revenge against him. She used her son, Sando's, disappearance near Ord Mantell as an excuse to draw Qui-Gon into her trust. She hoped to have Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan Kenobi stumble upon Taxer Sundown's operations on Ord Mantell, where they would have already destroyed the reputation of the Jedi. When Omnino realized that the Jedi had uncovered her plotting, Omnino used a mind-control device similar to Taxer Sundown's to capture Chancellor Valorum and hold him hostage. Qui-Gon was forced to confront her, and when he tricked her into watching her step, Qui-Gon beheaded her with his lightsaber. (LSOM, WOTC)

OmniNode ComSet

this BCC communication package provides a wide range of real-time, multisignal communications. (ROE)

Omniprobe

a device which can track and destroy a probe droid. (PDS)

Omniron

an invigorating and rejuvenating automatic cleaner used in most spas and resorts, it employs 6 15-second cycles to thoroughly cleanse the user. It first issues a cold-water spray, followed by sonic vibration, heat, cleansing, air drying, and an emollient rub. (HSL)

OmniTask

this droid brain was fast enough to record and calculate ten million bits of information per second. The OmniTask was used primarily in droids which mediated disputes and acted as translators, as it allowed them to assimilate a huge quantity of data on an alien culture in a short period of time. (GOF1)

Omni-Vu

this was the name of one of Siep-Irol's passive sensor systems. They were used on the Sienar Fleet Systems GAT-12j blastboat. (TTSB)

Omo Bouri

this Wol Cabbashite was the Jedi Master who orchestrated the famous Treaty of Trammis a century before the Battle of Naboo. Master Bouri was known to have been the instructor of Saesee Tiin, and instilled in the Iktochi a sense of conviction which only increased after Mastr Bouri passed away. (SWDB)

Omo Taj

this Carosite leader of the planet Carosi XII, Taj allowed the New Republic to set up an outpost on the planet. (PG2)

Omogg

this Drackmarian female was the owner of Nabrun Leids' contract until the Morseerian broke it and fled. After the Battle of Endor, she met up with Han Solo in one of Coruscant's casinos. She got into a high-stakes sabacc match with him, and eventually lost the deed to the planet Dathomir to Han. She passed it off as a Drackmarian world. Omogg was later captured and interrogated by Ta'a Chume's personal guards who were searching for Solo and Leia Organa, but the interrogation was interrupted by Luke Skywalker, to whom she gives the name and location of Dathomir. (CPL, SSR)

Omoht

this small creature, native to the planet Ansion, was sometimes kept as a pet by the Gwurran. (APS)

Omon Gantrum

this Quarren ran Mos Eisley's Spaceport Express, a messaging service. He was partners with Norun Gep. On the side, Omon made an alliance with Lady Valarian, allowing her to periodically check his shipments for anything worth her while. (GG7)

Omonda, Canna

this woman replaced Mon Mothma as Chandrila's Senator, and served until Emperor Palpatine dissolved the Senate. She openly criticized the dismantling of the Senate, which angered Palpatine. He charged her with treason, and sent three Star Destroyers to Chandrila to execute her. She was publicly executed during the planet's Fete Week. (SWJ3, SWJ4)

OmoTact Corporation

this manufacturer produced unusual skyships like the Roahks 7m for use in planetary atmospheres. (GG2)

Ompersan

this planet was the site of the Imperial fleet records system, in the years following the Battle of Endor. (VOF)

Ompiach

this infamous Nalroni criminal was the leader of the Hy'thor Pirate gang, during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. (AIR)

Ompren, Sil

this Imperial Colonel was killed when their repulsorcraft was sabotaged by Ostan Atur and exploded. (SWJ10)

Om-Thaim

manufacturers of large-scale shield generators for capital ships. (SCORE)

Omwaan

this Wookiee was known as one of Kachirho's most skilled adventurers, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWGAL)

Omwat

the homeworld of the Omwati race, Omwat was located in the Outer Rim Territories. Omwat was covered with sprawling savannas and rugged mountains. During the height of the Clone Wars, Omwat was the site of an intense battle some six months after the destruction of Honoghr. (JS, YDR)

Omwatese

this was the name given to the native language of the Omwati people. The spoken form was considered an elegant language, made up from a collection of odd tonal inflections. The written form resembled a flowing script in which letters fit together like pieces in a jigsaw puzzle. (ANT, UANT)

Omwati

a race of bird-like humanoids native to the planet Omwat, the Omwati have light blue skin and feathers for hair. They have wide, blue eyes. The Omwati children are extremely bright, and are capable on astounding mental feats. Their civilization evolved with the basic premise that the Omwati were the only sentient species in the galaxy. Thus, their society was based on technological advancement that did not disrupt the natural environment in which they lived. This society was altered when Wilhuff Tarkin first discovered the planet Omwat. He left behind new forms of technology, but he hid the fact that a colony of Omwati lived on the planet Coruscant. Tarkin then kept the Omwati as his indentured laborers, using the best and brightest Omwati children for the development of super weapons. After the Battle of Endor, the New Republic eventually made contact with the Omwati, but only after they were given proof of the deaths of Tarkin and the Emperor. (JS, ANT)

Omwaw

this was one of the most common male names used by members of the Ithorian race. Although most Ithorian names were not used for a specific meaning, historians found that this name meant "persuasive" or "influential". (GCG)

Omze'kehr Kahr

this old Sludir was the owner and operator of Omze's Incredible Traveling Starport. Omze was the brother of the Sludir known as Big Quince, and held a deep-seated grudge against Platt Okeefe. He was the sole keeper of the cruiser's schedule, and was known to leave a system at a moment's notice if things suited him. He was rarely seen by the patrons of the Starport, and very few knew that he was once a great fighter on the planet Looevria. It was on this planet that he grew to hate humankind, especially gamblers who bet on the kinds of gladiator fights he had participated in. (PSPG)

Omze's Incredible Traveling Starport

this bulk cruiser, formerly known as the Allanthia, was purchased by the Sludir Omze'kehr Kahr and transformed into a mobile starport. Omze added three main docking bays in the ship's holds, each of which could hold four small freighters. Its decks were scattered with free-traders hawking a variety of wares and services, and the variety of alien races was unparalleled. Omze and his ship traveled throughout the Mid and Outer Rim Territories, providing services and entertainment as it moved. The ship's schedule was known only to Omze himself, and changed at a moment's notice. One of the most distinguishing features of Omze's Incredible Traveling Starport was its anti-human bias. (PSPG)

Ona Kragg

this male Kadas'sa'Nikto was a known associate of Longo Two-Guns during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Jabba the Hutt issued a bounty for his capture in connection with the killing of four members of Jabba's personal staff, which was eventually claimed by Jango Fett, who was on Tatooine trying to arrange a meeting with Jabba. (BH)

Ona Nobis

this Sorrusian female was a bounty hunter who worked for Jenna Zan Arbor some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. She operated under the alias of Reesa On, as a goad to any being who would try to catch her. Ona was a member of Goq Cranna's tribe, and swayed the tribal leaders to agree to the plan which diverted water from their lands and formed the Arra Desert. She was exiled from her tribe, and went to work as a bounty hunter. Ona's signature weapon was a multi-mode whip, which had a laser actuator at the tip and could shoot blaster bolts when used in laser mode. It could also be used simply as a whip. Ona got involved with Zan Arbor when she was looking for Force-sensitive individuals to test out her theories on, and paid Nobis a stipend for bringing them in. After the Jedi Knights Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi were forced to investigate Zan Arbor's part in the attacks on Didi and Astri Oddo, Zan Arbor used Ona Nobis to eliminate the Jedi. She was unable to do so, but managed to severely injured Didi Astri. After failing to capture Tino on Simpla-12 because of the efforts of Obi0Wan, Ona Nobis declared her employment with Zan Arbor to be completed, and set out to hunt down Obi-Wan on her own. She laid a trap for them on Sorrus, but was unable to capture them. Ona Nobis was forced to trail the Jedi to Belasco, using R'aya Noor as bait to lure them into a trap set by Zan Arbor. In the end, however, Zan Arbor was captured, and Ona Nobis herself was killed in a fall while in battle with Obi-Wan. (EVE, TDR)

Ona Shai

this Yuuzhan Vong, a member of Domain Shai, was the commander of the worldship Baanu Miir, during the invasion of the known galaxy. She was younger than the ship's primary Shaper, Nen Yim, yet held the rank of Prefect. Ona Shai had been born with a slight stoop to her spine, but was allowed to survive because it did not impede her abilities. Nonetheless, living with the deformity had given Ona Shai an air of exciteability and irritability, which came out when Nen Yim discovered that the Baanu Miir was going to die before another worldship could be grown in the shipwomb near Sernpidal. Ona Shai grew impatient with the lack of progress in repairing the ship, especially after Master Shaper Kae Kwaad came aboard. She was unaware that the Master was investigating Nen Yim's heretical approach to Shaping at the behest of Supreme Overlord Shimrra. (EVR)

Onachra

this was one of the larger settlements found on the planet Aduba-3. (SWDB)

Onaconda

meaning "considerate" - or, more literally, "living others' lives" - this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Onaconda Farr

this Rodian represented his homeworld of Rodia in the Old Republic Senate, some ten years after the Battle of Naboo. It was Senator Farr who first accused the upper echelons of the Galactic Senate of conspiring with the Separatists, an accusation which led to the arrest of Yir Tangee Senator Havriso Looruya. Senator Farr claimed to have evidence of more than 240 Senators and Judicial officials who were connected to the Separatist movement. In the wake of Senator Looruya's censure, Senator Farr was named to the membership of the Loyalist Committee in his stead, shortly after the death of his brother and sister-in-law in a house fire. He was named the head of the action subcommittee tasked with defending the Corellian Trade Spine, but his efforts proved worthless in the face of an all-out assault led by General Grievous. Amid public and political outcry, Senator Farr resigned as the head of the subcommittee. However, Senator Farr was blamed - along with Senator Ronet Coorr - for the loss of the planet Duro and its shipyards to the Separatist forces under General Grievous, during the height of the Clone Wars. Investigation by the Senate Bureau of Intelligence discovered that warships had been dispatched from Iseno to protect Duro, but had been rerouted to protect Rodia instead. Initial thoughts were that the rerouting was a mistake, but the investigation clearly pointed to Senator Farr's role in trying to protect his homeworld. Senator Coor was forced to resign amidst the scandal, tendering his resignation and returning to Iseno in shame. Onaconda Farr was portrayed by Zuraya Hamilton in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones. (SWDB, HNN5, OWS, SWI75, SWI76)

Onacra

this small farming community was founded by the Separatists during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. It was located on the planet Aduba-3, near the ancient laboratory of the Dark Jedi Seviss Vaa. Onacra was briefly controlled by Serji-X Arrogantus and the Cloud Riders during the years leadin up to the Battle of Yavin, until Han Solo and Chewbacca helped bring down Arrogantus' band. (GMR4)

Onacran

this was the term used to describe the human inhabitants of the city of Onacra, on the planet Aduba-3. (SWMW)

Onadax

this planet was located in the Minos Cluster. It was a dry world whose surface seemed to be covered with soot, and which lacked any profitable metals. It was also an ancient, backwater world, and warranted very little attention from the rest of the galaxy. This made it an excellent location for those beings who wanted to live without an overbearing government. It was said that the natives of Onadax had fifty different words for dust. Astroarchaeologists believed that Onadax itself had been formed by an agglomeration of asteroids, and the planet's rampant population of mynocks seemed to bear this out. (FH2, FH3, SWI75)

Onahk

this reddish-gray-colored creature was native to the temperate marshes of Osirrag, where they live in nomadic herds. Onahk preyed upon the aquatic birds and reptiles of the planet, picking them from the surface of the water. Onahks measure a meter in length and over two meters in height, with much of their height attributed to their long necks. They move about on six thin legs, and have a group of sensory stalks on the front and rear of their bodies. The longer, front stalks were for taste while the rear stalks were for smell. They had two air sacs located inside their bodies to give them natural bouyancy. At the end of their necks was a sophisticated set of eyes, while their mouths were located under their bodies. They are equally at home in the water and on land, but must breathe air in order to survive. The neck of the onahk is unusual in that it can be extended or contracted by regulating the bloodflow in its flesh. More blood in the vessels of the neck extends the neck, while a reduction in blood caused it to contract. (COG)

Onasi, Carth

a native of the planet Telos, this man was a hot-shot pilot who served the Old Republic some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. During the Great Sith War, Onasi helped transport Jedi Knights into battle. At 38 years old, he was a grizzled veteran who fought against the Mandalorians and was hailed as a hero of the battle. In the wake of the battle against the Mandalorians, in which Onasi witnessed the treachery of the Sith, he suffered from personal tragedy and betrayal that left him with a deep hatred of the Sith. His wife was killed, and his son, Dustil, was lost on Telos when Darth Malak destroyed much of the planet's surface. Shortly afterward, Carth's former mentor, Saul Karath, was seduced by the Sith and turned against the Republic. Carth continued to fight alongside the Jedi Knights in their struggle against Darth Malak, but his motivation came from a desire to avenge his loss, rather than his loyalty to the Old Republic. After the Endar Spire was shot down over Taris, Onasi struggled to keep the survivors alive long enough to locate Bastila Shan. After returning to the Republic, Carth agreed to help locate the Star Forge, a mission that allowed him to carry out one act of revenge. Aboard the Leviathan, Carth slew Karath before escaping the ship. Carth Onasi was voiced by Raphael Sbarge in the video game Star Wars: Knights of the Old Republic. (SWI67, KOTOR, SWDB)

Onasi, Dustil

this young man was Carth Onasi's only son. During the Great Sith War, Dustil was separated from his mother when Darth Malak ravaged the planet. Dustil managed to go into hiding, but was eventually captured and taken to Korriban with a woman known only as Selene. While on Korriban, Dustil was told that Selene had died in the valley, but she had actually been executed by the Sith. Then, Dustil was placed under the tutelage of Master Uthar Wynn, who felt that the youth had the potential to become a great Dark Jedi. Dustil was eventually reunited with his father. (SWDB, KOTOR) this military man was one of the many Alliance supporters who lived on the planet Ord Vaug during the height of the Galactic Civil War. When the inhabitants of the planet Vandelhelm wanted to ensure the safety of the Venerated Ones, Lilli and Endro, General Onassi agreed to help keep the children safe by transporting them to Ord Vaug. In the wake of the Battle of Endor, General Onassi agreed to turn the children over to Han Solo, so that he could return them to Vandelhelm. (PH)

Onassi

Onderon

this planet is the primary planet in the Japrael system of three planets. It has a temperate climate, and was home to a primitive race of humanoids. It has four moons. The primary moon, Dxun, orbited very close to the planet millenia ago, and the various Dxun beasts jumped to the planet. The Onderonians struggled against the beasts, eventually gathering new technologies and building a huge walled city to protect themselves from the beasts. The Onderonians then threw their criminal out into the wilderness without any protection from the beasts. The outcasts soon learned to defend themselves, and a second civilization grew out of the outcasts. They two groups remained at war with each other for many years, and the Old Republic asked the Jedi to watch over the world. When Master Arca took over its watch and assigned Ulic Qel-Droma to the planet, the war was ended when the Onderonian princess Galia married the Beastprince. Onderon was also the planet on which Freedon Nadd tried to set up his Sith Kingdom. Like many other fringe worlds, the Onderonians have a distrust of aliens. (FNU, DLS, TOJC)

Onderonian

this was the version of the Galactic Standard language spoken by the natives of the planet Onderon, during the era of the Sith War which occurred when Satal and Aleema Keto took control of the planet. (DSSB)

Onderonian War Machine

this was a modified form of Akin-Dower Groundborer, augmented with four medium blasters for use as a combat vehicle by the ancient followers of Freedon Nadd. (TOJC, FNU)

Ondi, Candice

this woman served the Alliance as the chief information officer on the moon of Sulon, during the year leading up to the Battle of Yavin. She worked with a specially-designed droid known as A-Cee. Candice held the rank of Captain, and took her job quite seriously. Unfortunately, Candice was killed in the fight to free Sulon. (SFE)

Ondus

Jedi scholars believed that this mythic planet might have been the birthplace of the Jedi Order, mellinnia before the Battle of Yavin. Other possibilities include Had Abbaddon and Utapau. (PJSB)

One

this was the Basic translation of the Yapi word for an intelligent species. The Yapi considered the Imperial officers who came to Kathol with Moff Kentor Sarne to be the "Grey Ones" because of the color of their uniforms. Stormtroopers were considered "White Ones," while the crew of the FarStar and the New Republic were considered "New Ones." (E)

One Below

this was a term used by many to describe the Jedi Master Yaddle, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. It stemmed from her 200-year imprisonment at the hands of the Advوزه warlord Tulak, on the planet Koba. The name was first given to her by the Kobans, who also coined the phrase, The One Below stays below. (JQ6)

One Good Deal

this was a phrase used by the Squib to describe the goal of their pursuit of happiness. (HR)

One Hundred Percent

this phrase was used by the clone troopers of the Grand Army of the Republic to indicate that something was perfect or ready. (TCD)

One Scourge

this was the designation of the first unit of Yuuzhan Vong warriors aboard the Baanu Rass, assigned by Nom Anor to capture - alive, at all costs - the Jedi Knights who had infiltrated the worldship in an effort to destroy the voxyn queen. The entire company of One Scourge was eliminated by the Jedi, much to the chagrin of Warmaster Tsavong Lah. (SBS)

One Shot

this was a false identity maintained by Sythluss Leethe for his YT-1300 freighter, The Maker. (SWJ13)

One Who Creates, The

One, The

according to the legends ascribed to Lord Aragh of the Highland Clans of the planet Skye, The One was the being who would eventually free the S'kytri race from Imperial domination. The prophecy was fulfilled when Luke Skywalker arrived on Skye and helped to restore the Supreme Council to power. The true identity of The One was a secret that the S'kytri guarded for many years. (GMR1)

One, The

this Rakatan individual opposed the leadership of the Elders, during the height of the Great Sith War. Many of his followers were captured and imprisoned for speaking out against the Elders. (KOTOR)

One, The

a member of a large number of aliens who have existed for eons in the depths of space. They were descended from a race of organic machines built by an extinct race whose sun went supernova. The machines survived, and continued to grow. While their creators had no urge to explore space, The One and his race began travelling across the galaxy. Being somewhat conservative, though, they shied away from any contact with other lifeforms. They were huge, rounded versions of Vuffi Raa, and built other organic ships to transport their knowledge. However, in the ages since the destruction of their creators, The One's race has grown stagnant, and they long for excitement and risks. The One decides to take matters into his own hands, and creates Vuffi Raa as a reconnaissance machine. He hopes that Vuffi Raa will make contact with many various lifeforms in the galaxy and report back to The One. He planted Vuffi Raa in a starship cargo hold, and activated him prematurely, setting off the chain of events that led to the Imperial blockade of the ThonBoka. The One, The Other, and The Rest rushed to the ThonBoka, only to find that the Oswaft and Lando Calrissian had matters pretty much under control. The One and his counterparts intervened when the Imperials were about to turn the tide of the battle. (LCS)

Onece

an Alliance freighter group which escaped from the Battle of Hoth. It was later intercepted in the Javin Sector. (TIE)

One-Eye

this was the nickname of New Republic Lieutenant Gulley's wingmate. (TT)

Onel

this was one of the many Bothan clans. Membership in the clan was denoted by the suffix 'nel added to an individual's family name. (GCG, WOTC)

Oneness, The

this false religion was set up by the Hutts and the t'landa Til as a legitimate front for a spice processing facility. The religion centered on Exaltations, which were simply sonic vibrations created by the t'landa Til. Using throat pouches, the creatures can emit vibrations that affect the sensory centers of the brain. The pilgrims which flee society to join the religion speak of intense pleasure and a sense of calm from the Exaltations. The pilgrims eventually find that they can't live without the sensory experience, and attend daily devotions regularly. The t'landa Til then use the pilgrims as slaves, telling them that the work they perform serves the Oneness. In reality, the pilgrims are simply processing raw spice - andris, carsunum, ryll, and glitterstim - for sale by the Hutts. The incredible pureness and processing capability of the pseudo-religion, which operated on the planet Ylesia, made it more than a match for the facilities on Kessel or Ryloth. (TPS)

Ongella

the Alliance captured a small freighter on this planet, shortly after the Battle of Yavin, and used it at Eyrie Base. (SWJ10)

Ongree

native to the planets of the Skustell Cluster, this unusual, alien race was roughly humanoid in stature. They were distinguished by their unusual cranial structure, which came to a rounded point at the top of their skull. The eye sockets of an Ongree were tubelike in shape, originating near the base of the skull and curving forward and down to their chins. The mouth of an Ongree was located between and above their eyes, giving the average Ongree the appearance of having its head attached upside down. Each of their hands ended with two thick fingers and an opposable thumb. The average Ongree stood just over a meter in height, but walked with a lanky gait. (SWDB, AOTC)

Ongun-nur

this large avian was native to the planet Ansion. These creatures had large, balloon-like wings that gave the ongun-nur a comical appearance, although their sharp eyes and sword-like beaks seemed to indicate their ability to hunt. Because of the incredibly light bodyweight and paper-thin skin, ongun-nurs simply rode the near-constant winds of Ansion in search of prey. Ongun-nur most often obtained food by moving in large flocks, with the forward individuals cutting through grass with their beaks, allowing those behind to open their mouths and feed. A regular rotation of individuals allowed each member of the flock a chance to feed. (APS)

Oni

this alien race was native to the planet Uru. As a people, the Oni were considered to be militant toward other races, and most Oni encountered away from their homeworld were employed as mercenaries and hired guns. The females of the Oni race were known to be electrophoretic, and stored static electricity in a unique capacitor gland. (MJH)

Onicrop K'Cin

this male Ugnaught was employed by the Trade Federation as a code breaker and forger, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. In the aftermath of the battle, K'Cin deserted his position and fled into the Outer Rim. A bounty was placed on his head by the Trade Federation's Recruitment Center, as it was believed that K'Cin took with him several classified encryption codes. K'Cin was captured on the Outland Transit Station by Jango Fett and brought in for the bounty on his head. (BH)

Onih k'leth mof'qey

this Yuuzhan Vong phrase was used as a welcome to another individual, and meant something like "You look much better." (FP)

Onila Richblum

this bolo-ball player played for the Yag'Dhul team, during the league play which occurred shortly before the Clone Wars. Richblum tied a league records by scoring twice in one game during that season. (HNN4)

Onimi

this badly deformed Yuuzhan Vong was, at one time, a Shaper of some skill. However, the implants given to him upon escalation were rejected by his body, and Onimi was relegated to the ranks of the Shamed

Ones. For unknown reasons, Supreme Overlord Shimrra chose Onimi to serve as his personal jester and familiar. Onimi had the normal appearance of a Yuuzhan Vong, but with severe deformities. One eye lolled on his face, lower than the other, and his entire skull seemed to be oddly distended. His thin limbs twitched constantly, giving Onimi an excited, nervous demeanor. His lopsided mouth was filled with a single, long fang. He constantly spoke in rhymes and riddles, dispensing wisdom that was shrouded in dark humor. Onimi posed as the Master Shaper Kae Kwaad in order to investigate Nen Yim and bring her before Shimrra, shortly after the Battle of Duro. When the battle against the New Republic began to turn against the Yuuzhan Vong, Shimrra demanded that Nen Yim fill the so-called eighth cortex with knowledge of the lifeforms in the galaxy. He used Onimi as his liaison to the Shapers, in an effort to avoid a direct linkage to their work. Onimi, however, seemed to have his own agenda, and always seemed to be able to read the mind of Nom Anor. After the living planet Zonama Sekot suddenly reappeared near Coruscant, Onimi suddenly became quiet, often refusing to recite his ascerbic poetry, and cowered behind Shimrra's growing power. When the Jedi Knights, led by Luke Skywalker, managed to infiltrate the Citadel and reach the Moonbeam Throne, Onimi remained by Shimrra's side until the World Brain began to work with Jacen Solo to disrupt the battle. Onimi leapt from his seat on the throne and fled upward into the Citadel. Jaina Solo gave chase, but Onimi was able to double back and capture her, drugging her with poison that he exuded from his fang and dragging her into the command chamber of the Citadel's escape craft. It was during this time that Onimi revealed that he believed Jaina was actually Yun-Harla, and that he believed himself to have been the first individual to realize the eighth cortex was an empty lie. He continued to rail at Jaina, explaining that he had grafted yammosk cells to his own neural pathways to try and enhance himself and save the Yuuzhan Vong. Instead, Onimi screamed, Yun-Harla had Shamed him while giving him the ability to manipulate others through the cells inside his body. This allowed Onimi to gain a measure of control over Shimrra, coercing him to usurp the power of Quoreal and begin the invasion of the New Republic. He then admitted that he - of all the Yuuzhan Vong - could see her through the Force, along with the rest of the Jedi Knights, then told Jaina of his plans to kill the Jedi and assume control of the galaxy for himself. Then, Onimi started to launch the escape craft, using his own genetic codes to fire its engines. As Jacen finally reached the escape craft and gained access to the command deck, he realized the truth about Onimi. It was his Shaping that had allowed him to see through the Force, restoring the ability that had been stripped from the Yuuzhan Vong eons ago. By this time, Onimi had come to consider himself the Supreme Overlord, if not by Shimrra's death then by his own belief in the power he held. Onimi tried to hold off Jacen by flinging all manner of things at him, but Jacen had tapped into the Unifying Force in a way that was deeper than before. Onimi attacked as a Shaper, using his enhanced abilities to turn every bodily fluid he possessed into poisons or hallucinogens which could be injected with his fang or simply applied to Jacen's skin. Jacen used his own connection to the Force to neutralize them all, rendering them nothing more than sweat and tears. As Jacen became more and more a living conduit for the Force, he was able to attack Onimi on the level of purest energy. Onimi, unable to let go of the hatred and greed he had lived with for so long, was rendered into nothingness by Jacen's actions. As his body reformed itself into an Unshamed form, Onimi collapsed into death. (EVR, Y, DW, UF)

this is the third combination symbol in the Aurebesh script, and represents the Basic combination "eo". (SWM)

O'nja Rambolt

this male Gran was a noted criminal who was captured and sent to the Oovo IV prison facility several years before the Battle of Naboo. He spent much of his time working with his lawyers to try and plea bargain for a life sentence, in the hopes of avoiding the payment of several outstanding debts to the InterGalactic Banking Clan. The IBC, angry with this tactic, placed a bounty on his head in the event that his lawyers were successful. Unfortunately for Rambolt, Jango Fett managed to claim the bounty during his "rescue" of Bendix Fust. (BH)

Onoh

this small, yellow-skinned creature was loyal to Jabba the Hutt. The Hutt had placed Onoh in place as the watchman over his escape ship, hidden in the rock of Glass Mountain on Tatooine. Onoh resembled a cross between a reptilian kangaroo and a catfish, and was quite excitable. Onoh threw in his lot with Big Gizz and Spiker, shortly after he was attacked by Gorga the Hutt's henchmen. Onoh did his job well, although annoyingly, constantly reminding Spiker and Big Gizz that Jabba was going to haunt them if they stole anything, including the escape ship Spirit of Jabba. Both of the criminals ignored Onoh, taking him along for the ride. Jabba had entrusted Onoh with the security override codes for the main computer, and Onoh used them when the Spirit of Jabba was attacked by the Nemphas. However, their control of the ship was brief. They were forced to crash-land the ship outside of Mos Eisley in order to escape Gorga the Hutt's minions. Onoh, Spiker and Gizz survived, and made their way back to civilization. (TJT)

Onoma

Onoron Fil'vye

this Bothan shipping magnate established a base of operations on Streysel Island, on the planet Vaynai, during the height of the New Order. While most of his transport business catered to corporate customers who needed to get sensitive cargoes quickly to another site, these operations were merely a cover for Fil'vye's more lucrative endeavors. In addition to funding a wide-ranging smuggling outfit, Fil'vye had literally cornered the market on the production of slick, a fermented seaweed oil which had certain medicinal properties. However, Fil'vye's exporting of slick also reached beings who used it as a recreational drug. Note that this character is also referred to as Onoron Fi'vya, Oneron Fil'vye, or Onoron Fil'vya. (GMR8)

Onrai

this goddess was known as the Mistress of the planet Notron. A statue of Onrai was erected in the main plaza of the capital city of Seoul 5. As was written on the base of the statue, Mistress Onrai was the goddess who always gave and never received. This statue of Onrai served as the portal to a control center, once used by the ancient Seoulians as the facility from which they used mental energy to power their devices. (MC84)

Ood Bnar

an ancient Neti Jedi Master, descended from a creature that lived in the trees of Myrkr. Note that the Tales of the Jedi Companion claims Ood Bnar was a member of the Ryyk species, and that he was orphaned on Myrkr. He was 1,000 years old when his prophecies and knowledge enabled him to be named the gatekeeper of the Jedi Holocron possessed by Master Arca just before the Great Sith War. Arca loaned it to Thon just before Thon apprenticed Nomi Sunrider, and Thon used it often in Nomi's training. Ood Bnar appears as a sluglike humanoid, whose round head has no eyes but is covered with long appendages which hang to his waist. Ood Bnar was thought to have been long dead, until Luke Skywalker and Kam Solusar discovered the ancient, tree-like creature on Ossus. There, Bnar was helping the Ysanna tribe discover their Force sensitivity. In a ritual, all young Ysanna warrior-priests were tied to Ood Bnar's form, humbling them in the face of the Light Side of the Force. Bnar was later forced to confront the Executor Sedriss, and in a duel of Dark and Light Side energies, Bnar and Sedriss exploded. Sedriss was not heard from again, but a smaller form of Ood Bnar was found growing in the Jedi Master's former location. The explosion of the two enemies opened a chasm in the earth surrounding the Jedi Master's location, and the Ysanna discovered a wealth of ancient but operable lightsabers. This was a sign to Luke and Kam that the Jedi Knights were about to be reborn. (TOJ, DE2, TOJC)

Oodoc

Ooglith Cloaker

a variation of the ooglith masquer, the cloaker was also bio-engineered by the Yuuzhan Vong. Instead of transforming the wearer's appearance, the cloaker simply covered the wearer in a transparent sheath. The cloaker was grown in different forms, which protected the wearer from all forms of environmental assaults, including weather, temperature extremes, pressure, and vacuum. (VP, EVR)

Ooglith Masquer

this unusual creature was bioengineered by the Yuuzhan Vong. Resembling a blob of protoplasm, the ooglith masquer could be draped over the head and torso of a Yuuzhan Vong and become a living mask. The masquer would extend thousands of tiny grappling tendrils into the pores of the Yuuzhan Vong skin, latching the masquer's body directly to that of its "host." Externally, the masquer created the appearance of another species, allowing the Yuuzhan Vong to walk among another species without being detected as wearing a prosthetic device. The ooglith masquer had to be trained to remain in a certain form while attached to the Yuuzhan Vong's face. At the push of a sensitive point on the ooglith masquer's body, the creature retracted its tendrils and peeled away from the Yuuzhan Vong's face, once again becoming a shapeless entity and returning to its contained. Oola this was a common name given to Twi'lek females, and meant "water" in the Twi'leki language. (GCG)

Oola

Oola was a Twi'lek female dancer in Jabba the Hutt's palace, shortly before the Hutt's death. It was rumored that she was a member of the Tarkona clan, and was the sister of Nola Tarkona. She was brought to the palace by Bib Fortuna, in an effort to please Jabba. When she landed on Tatooine, she and her companions were intercepted by Luke Skywalker, who offered to help them escape their coming slavery. Her companion, Sienn, chose to flee with Luke. Oola couldn't bring herself to escape, and was brought to Jabba. Fortuna fitted her with a leather headdress that contained large metal studs. These studs protruded on the inside of the leather helmet, clogging her ears and causing her undue pain. She was killed by Jabba's rancor after only two days of work, when she refused to submit to Jabba's demands. Jabba opened the trapdoor near his Hutt floater and let her drop into the Rancor's pit. Oola was portrayed by Femi Taylor in Star Wars: Return of the Jedi. (ROTJ, CCG7, TEP)

Oolth

this Fondorian was a former member of Black Sun, who agreed to turn in valuable information to the Jedi Knights in return for his safety, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. Oolth, who worked as the personal servant to Alexi Garyn, had been hiding in the Crimson Corridor, trying to avoid the Raptors gang and the thugs of Black Sun itself. The Jedi Council dispatched a padawan, Darsha Assant, to retrieve Oolth, as the final test of her abilities. Despite her readiness, Darsha underestimated the Raptors, and the gang quickly destroyed her skyhopper. She was forced to drag Oolth on a desperate chase through the undercity, in an effort to escape the Corridor and reach the Jedi Temple. However, they were trapped in an access shaft, and Darsha was unable to hold onto the ladder and maintain a grip on Oolth's bulky form. The handhold of clothing Darsha had ripped apart, and Oolth fell several hundred stories to his death. (DM, DMSH)

OOM Command Officer Series Combat Droid

OOM-9

this Trade Federation battle droid was the Commander of the ground forces sent to control the palace of the city of Theed. The Neimoidians had been controlled by Darth Sidious, and ordered to invade the planet and eliminate any resistance. OOM-9 and its droid troops quickly subjugated the populace of Theed, and eventually captured Queen Amidala and her advisors. During the Battle of Naboo, OOM-9 managed to repel the Gungan Grand Army and began making plans to rout the aliens completely, when Anakin Skywalker managed to destroy the Federation's Droid Control Ship. Without a command signal, OOM-9 was rendered incapable of action, and was among the thousands of battle droids that were dismantled in the wake of the battle. Later, OOM-9's design later became the basis for an entire series of battle droid commanders, in the years following the Battle of Naboo. (TPM, JQ1, GBC)

Oo'rha

this ancient Twi'lek was a member of the Rha clan, which had been locked in a feud with the Lek clan for many generations. Legends say that Oo'rha one day discovered Ko'lek in the warrens of the Rha clan, where he had become lost. Not knowing his true identity, Oo'rha soon fell in love with Ko'lek. To show her the depths of his love, Ko'lek took her to the top of one of the Lonely Five pinnacles. She was breathtaken with the view, but they were caught in a heat storm. Both of them were killed by the searing heat. The tale of their love was been passed down through generations of Twi'leks as a warning about getting lost in a dark tunnel where other Twi'leks feared to tread. (PSPG)

Oorn Tchis

Ooroo

this ancient Celegian Jedi master taught the venerable Odan-Urr. An ocean creature native of a world with a dense, cyanogen-rich atmosphere, Ooroo was a brain-like creature encased in a yellow crystal which maintained the cyanogen atmosphere in which he survived. Ooroo went to Cinnagar to visit with Empress Teta and Odan-Urr shortly after his student was ridiculed on Coruscant for believing in an imminent Sith attack. Ooroo, however, believed that his student was correct in the interpretation of his vision, as were several other Jedi Masters. Ooroo and Odan-Urr led the defense of Kirrek when Naga Sadow finally launched his attack, but they were unable to turn the tide of battle with the Force. Ooroo, seeing that he alone held the key to the battle, told the Jedi to seek shelter and then cracked open his crystal shell. The cyanogen atmosphere was deadly to the Sith forces, which were killed almost immediately. However, Ooroo was unable to survive in an oxygen atmosphere, and expired in Odan-Urr's arms. Like all Jedi Masters, Ooroo's physical form dissipated as his life force became ethereal. (FOSE, PJSB)

Ooryl Qrygg

this Gand was a member of the X-Wing group Rogue Squadron. He was Corran Horn's wingman for much of his time with the Rogues, and was a distinguished member of their group. He survived several battles in which he was nearly shot down, and his breathing apparatus helped him avoid the Krytos plague. His ability to defeat his enemies drew the interest of Vviir Wiamdi and the ruetsavii shortly before the Battle of Thyferra. Vviir and two others flew with the Rogues to witness Ooryl's abilities and to criticize them, if possible. When they all survived the battle which ended the Bacta War, Vviir and his companions deemed Ooryl janwuine, and invited all of Rogue Squadron to Gand as hinwuine. Ooryl was soon after initiated into the ranks of Gand Findsman, although he maintained his standing with the Rogues throughout the battles with Grand Admiral Thrawn and Leonira Tavira. (XWN, BW, IJ)

one of SoroSuub's landspeeders, it could carry a pilot and up to four passengers comfortably. Its maximum speed was around 230 kilometers per hour. (DFRSB)

Opak Trolish

this Houk served as a Sergeant in the Natori Association at the height of the New Order, serving under Major Vam Margan. Opak was one of the longest-lived members of the Natori at the time, having survived many missions through combat prowess and guile. (SPG)

Opalica

this was a common name among the Zeltron people. (UANT)

Opankro

this specialized manufacturer produced personal combat armor during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SHPT)

Opari System

this star system was located near the Al'har System, along the Gevarno Loop. During the Clone Wars, the Opari System was loyal to the Old Republic. (SHPT)

Oparro

this was a common name among the Toydarian race. (WOTC, UANT)

Opatajji, Neera

this spoiled, willful daughter of the Duke of Opatajji flirted with Mirkovig Hirken to draw his attention away from her more attractive sisters. Neera was stout and short, and often dressed in fine clothes to try and accentuate her lacking beauty. She felt a deep hatred for her sisters, and tried to thwart them at every opportunity. However, her actions were noticed by her father, and she soon found herself promised to Hirken. Her superficial nature was further heightened by the revelation that she had found a husband before her sisters. After they were married, Neera found herself left out of Hirken's administrative life, and became lonely and unhappy. When Hirken was assigned to Mytus VII, Neera thought she would die of boredom. When Han Solo infiltrated Mutus VII, Neera and Hirken was in the main tower of Stars' End when it exploded and shot into space. Hirken abandoned her to the Stars' End tower while pleading with Han Solo to help him get off the doomed structure, and Neera shot him in the back. Neera did not escape the tower when it crashed back onto Mytus VII's surface. (HSE, CSA)

Opdoa

this male Rodian worked as an assistant to Nilesk within the Goa-Ato. (SPG)

Opee Fleer

this was an exceptionally fast Gungan bongo, a decommissioned military vehicle that had been rebuilt to participate in the Otoh Gunga Challenge. Many racers considered the Opee Fleer too cumbersome, but what it lacked in maneuverability it made up for in size. Its wide, tribubble body made it difficult for other racers to pass the bongo. (GMR4)

Opee Sea Killer

this huge, aquatic beast is found in the oceans of the planet Naboo. It resembles a thick-bodied fish, although it has eight insectile legs and is generally crustacean in appearance. Its mouth is filled with pointed teeth, and its eyes glow a fierce orange-red in the depths of the sea. The opee sea killer catches its prey with its long, flexible tongue, which could measure more than twice its body length and was covered with sticky mucus. At birth, an opee sea killer measured just two meters in length. Young opees are hatched from eggs which are protected within the mouth of their father until their hatch. Even after hatching the young can find refuge in their father's mouth. However, newly-hatched opees are capable of hunting for themselves. By adulthood, the average opee sea killer measured 20 meters in length, although there were a pair of dwarf opees kept at the Otoh Gunga Zoological Research Facility before the Battle of Naboo. Despite their size, they were no less dangerous than their full-sized cousins. (SW1, IG1, E1A9, SON, WSW)

Opeli

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Open Circle Armada

this was the Old Republic naval task force that was commanded by Jedi Master Obi-Wan Kenobi and Jedi Knight Anakin Skywalker, during the height of the Clone Wars. At its height, the Open Circle Armada had five separate fleets, each capable of independent actions against the forces of the Confederacy of Independent Systems. The symbol of the Open Circle Armada was a simple circle formed by two semi-circle arcs, although each arc was separate from the other, resulting in the open-circle image. Each arc represented one of the Jedi Knights, and the entire symbol signified that Kenobi and Skywalker were the two halves of a single entity. (X3)

Open Investigations Database

maintained by the Bureau of Ship Services (BoSS), this database contained documentation on all outstanding complaints from starship pilots, both independent and corporate. (SON)

Open Sea, The

the Oswaft name given to the vacuum of outer space beyond the confines of the ThonBoka, the Open Sea was located in the most isolated section of the Centrality. (LCS, GMR5)

Opense, Kalara

this harsh woman was one of the many smugglers who worked out of Vergesso Base. Despite her beauty, Kalara had little time for friends, distractions, or delays, and dedicated herself to making each delivery with her starship, the C Plus. (SPG)

Operation 45RA

this is the codename of the plan devised by the Farool brothers to capture Crying Dawn Singer and discredit the Alliance in the eyes of the Shashay. The operation was initiated some time after the Battle of Yavin, and involved not only the capture of Crying Dawn Singer but a series of transmissions which showed Yearo Seville posing as the leader of the Alliance in Rayter Sector. The Farools hoped that it would impress Moff Nile Owen, and gain them both promotions. A separate part of the operation involved the Farools also discrediting Moff Owen, with a transmission which showed Owen's lack of compassion in the matter. This plan would remove Owen from power and place the Farools in his place. The operation was thwarted by Alliance agents in Rayter Sector who managed to infiltrate the plan and recover Crying Dawn Singer before the Farools could gain power. (TA)

Operation Bodybag

this was a method of smuggling people past Imperial patrols, often used on the planet Tatooine during the height of the Galactic Civil War and into the early years of the New Republic. A legitimate individual, often a moisture farmer, would disguise their vehicle as a salvage vehicle. Using chemicals and garbage, they would create noxious fumes in the cargo hold, where they had hidden the people they were trying to smuggle under tarps. If an Imperial patrol stopped them, the farmers would claim that they had found salvage in the desert, and that there had been some dead bodies as well. If the Imperials chose to inspect the cargo hold, they would be assaulted by the smell and see the evidence of "dead" bodies. More often than not, the smell kept the Imperials from further inspections, allowing the farmer to come on their way. (TG)

Operation Case White

this was the codename given to the Separatist plans to take control of the Intergalactic Communications Center on Praesitlyn, during the final stages of the Clone Wars. As part of Operation Case White, Admiral Pors Tonith blockaded Praesitlyn with some 200 warships before landing some 50,000 battle droids as a first attack. He held a million or more battle droids in reserve, hoping to draw out any resistance from the Old Republic before utterly crushing it. As a contingency plan, Tonith had stationed 126 more warships at Sluis Van to drive off any reinforcements the Republic might send to Praesitlyn. Although the initial stages of the operation went off as planned, Tonith was unprepared for the sudden appearance of Zozridor Slayke and his rogue soldiers. Although Slayke's forces were vastly outmanned, they caused damage to Tonith's forces and held them off long enough for a Republic task force - led by Nejaa Halcyon and Anakin Skywalker - to arrive at Praesitlyn. Even then, Tonith's superior firepower was only defeated by a bold plan hatched by Skywalker, that managed to capture Tonith and put an end to the Separatists' plans. (JT)

Operation Durge's Lance

this was the codename of the Separatist attack that planned to take control of the Corellian Trade Spine during the height of the Clone Wars. After capturing Yag'Dhul and Thyferra, the Confederacy of Independent Systems tried to wrest control of the Duro System from the Old Republic. If Duro could be captured, only Corellia would remain part of the Old Republic. Corellia's capture would give the Separatists control of the entire trade route. The operation launched a massive attack on the Republic warships stationed at Duro, eliminating the Acclamator-class assault ships Anvil, Coronet, and Bolide, as well as the Dreadnaughts Prominence and Atrisian Iron. (SW174)

Operation Emperor's Hammer

this was the true mission behind the New Republic's retaking of the planet Borleias, in the wake of the Battle of Coruscant. Using a series of false leads and tantalizing information, the Inner Circle led the Yuuzhan Vong to believe that lambent crystals were being grown on Borleias for use as focusing crystals in the pipefighters of the so-called Operation Starlancer. This forced the Yuuzhan Vong to commit to a full-scale invasion of Borleias, in an effort to destroy the facility. However, there was no such facility. It was all a ruse. When the Yuuzhan Vong forces descended on Borleias, they were allowed to reach the planet's surface. Once the aliens were on the ground, Eldo Davip and the Lusankya bombarded them from orbit, utterly destroying the alien forces with a four-minute aerial bombardment. In this way, the Inner Circle used Imperial bombardment tactics to eliminate a sizable portion of the Yuuzhan Vong military. (EL1)

Operation Emperor's Spear

this was the name used to describe the plan, hatched by Wedge Antilles and Eldo Davip, to use the Lusankya as an immense ramming device against the Yuuzhan Vong which were blockading Borleias. In the wake of the Battle of Coruscant, Wedge had been ordered to hold Borleias long enough for Chief of State Pwoe and the remainder of the New Republic Advisory Council to flee into space. The Lusankya was allowed to take damage in the fighting over Borleias, but never anything too bad. Nevertheless, weapons emplacements were continually being removed from the ship for "repair." In reality, they were being refitted onto smaller ships, giving them more firepower against the Yuuzhan Vong. The Lusankya, in the meantime, was being refitted from the inside out, with a huge Beltway being carved into its heart. This reinforced shaft became a huge, needle-like ram, that would be used to destroy the Yuuzhan Vong worldship. During the last stand at Borleias, Commander Eldo Davip took the Lusankya into battle, but only to deflect large portions of fire from the smaller ships. This caused huge amounts of damage to the Star Destroyer, which served to bolster the Yuuzhan Vong's confidence. Then, when much of the battle had been fought, Commander Davip used all remaining engine power to ram the Lusankya into the Yuuzhan Vong worldship, destroying both ships and eliminating the Yuuzhan Vong threat. (EL2)

Operation False Horizon

devised by Osten Dal'Nay and Broof Yurdel, this was the codename for a series of surprise assaults launched by the Cularin Militia just before the onset of the Clone Wars. Many believed that the Cularin Militia had been disbanded, especially after the build-up of Thaereian Military forces in the Cularin System. However, this was the appearance the Dal'Nay and Yurdel wished the system to see, and they went to work in the background, meticulously planning the operation. When it was launched, the Cularin Militia was activated with coded transmissions, and within hours they had secured or overrun many Thaereian military bases throughout the system. This operation was carried out with the full support of the Jedi Knights on Almas, who suddenly found their communications to the Jedi Temple on Coruscant were blocked by Thaereian forces. While the ground battles proved to be swift victories for the Cularin Militia, their naval forces were initially outnumbered three-to-one by Thaereian warships. The space battle turned when unknown forces - bearing an insignia that showed an image of Cularin superimposed with the letter "N" - arrived in the Cularin System and decimated that Thaereian forces. (LFCW)

Operation Flotsam

this New Republic operation was funded by the Historical Battle Site Preservation Act, and was set up to recover the debris from space battles before it could end up on the private market. It collected Imperial and Alliance artifacts for display in the Alliance War Museum on Coruscant. (BTS)

Operation Glorious Destiny

this was the Hiromi term used to describe their plans to subjugate the planet Zeltros, shortly after the Battle of Endor. The operation got off to a bad start when Hirog failed to distract the Alliance at Endor, then took another turn for the worse when Hirog inadvertently locked himself in a storage room on Zeltros. The only thing the Hiromi managed to gain full control of was the kitchen in the royal palace of King Arno and Queen Leonie of the Zeltrons, before the operation fell completely apart. When the Nagai and Tofs also arrived on Zeltros, the Hiromi gave up any hopes of success and allied themselves with the Alliance to defeat the other invaders. In the end, the Hiromi decided that they could better serve the Alliance better from a safer, hidden planet. (PH)

Operation Groundquake

named by Tyria Sarkin, this Wraith Squadron mission involved knocking out the Imperial bases located in the cities of Fellon and Hullis, on the planet Halmad, during the hunt for Warlord Zsinj. (IF)

Operation Hammerblow

this New Republic Naval operation was first implemented by the Fifth Battle Group. It involved the use of K-Wing bombers to knock out a planet's defensive shielding, thus allowing larger ships to knock out weapons emplacements in preparation for landing. It was heavily opposed in some circles of the New Republic Senate, for it was a heavy-handed use of military power by a government supposedly opposed to the subjugation of planets. Admiral Ackbar and the supporters of the operation cited many planets under Imperial control that would require the use of such tactics. (BTS)

Operation Insignificant

this was the codename of General Trep Reskan's plans to unseat the Empire from its control of Brak Sector. (FBS)

Operation Joystick

this was the codename for the New Republic's plan to bring the planet Adumar - along with its military resources - into the Republic's membership. The basic plan involved two stages. The first was the infiltration of the planet's society, to determine how best to approach the Adumari. It was decided, based on the military background of the Adumari, that the second stage would involve sending starfighter pilots as the primary diplomats to Adumar. (PH)

Operation Katabatic

this was the name given to the Old Republic's attempt to liberate the planet Atraken from the control of the Confederacy of Independent Systems, during the early stages of the Clone Wars. The Old Republic military claimed that Operation Katabatic was a tactical success, acknowledging that the biochemical weapons unleashed by the Separatists killed off nearly ninety percent of the population of Atraken. (SWI67)

Operation Peacemaker

this Imperial directive was used to subjugate planetary systems in which two or more indigenous races were at war with each other. The basic outline of Operation Peacemaker is to artificially escalate the tension between the races, to the point that all-out war is inevitable. The Empire can then invade the system with the outward goal of initiating peace between the warring peoples. The ultimate goal of this plan was the subjugation of all the warring parties under Imperial control. (SWJ9)

Operation Piranha Beetle

this was the term used by General Wedge Antilles to describe the final evacuate effort at the Borleias base, in the wake of the Battle of Coruscant. (EL2)

Operation Ram's Head

this Alliance operation took place shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (EGP)

Operation Rebel Hunt

this Imperial military action was created to cleanse the planet Yetnis of rebellious cells, during the Galactic Civil War. (HAS)

Operation Restbreak

this was the name given to the New Republic's plans for defending the Bilbringi Shipyards, in case they were attacked by the Yuuzhan Vong. Operation Restbreak was forced into use when Nom Anor arrived at Bilbringi to discuss the fate of the Nebula Chaser with Leia Organa Solo. Even though there was no military action, Republic General Muun decided that it was best to have the military presence on full-alert, in case there was any treachery. (SBS)

Operation Retribution

this Alliance action involved a two-pronged attack. The first part involved a full-scale assault on a minimally-defended Imperial outpost. This operation was a feint, meant to draw Imperial forces away from repair station M13. A small team of Alliance agents was then dispatched to Mycroft, and was able to infiltrate station M13 and render it useless to the Empire. (SWCP)

Operation Safe Passage

this was the codename of the evacuation plans developed by the Jedi Knights, in the event that their base on Eclipse was discovered by the Yuuzhan Vong or the Peace Brigade. (SBS)

Operation Shadow Hand

the master plan devised by Emperor Palpatine for the retaking of the galaxy following his defeat at the Battle of Endor, Operation Shadow Hand involved the launching of wave after wave of devastating assaults on the New Republic. He appointed seven elite Dark Jedi, known as the Executors, and placed them in charge of carrying out the plan's orders. However, with Palpatine's final death on Byss, Operation Shadow Hand was closed out. (DE1, DE2)

Operation Shadowplay

this Alliance military operation was implemented in order to get supplies and heavy equipment to forces inserted on Imperial-held worlds. Shadowplay used stealth-equipped combat freighters to deliver the supplies. The freighters would skim the atmosphere of a planet, appearing on sensors as a large meteor or asteroid. They would drop the supplies or equipment and then fly off, as if the meteor had disintegrated into several smaller pieces. The "pieces" were often large chunks of ice, in which the Alliance hid the supplies it was delivering. This way, the supplies themselves - whether food or weapons - avoided sensor detection and could be recovered by the on-planet team. (ROE)

Operation Shadowstrike

this Alliance mission was sent to the unexplored planet NCW-781 to recover the pilot known as Prodigal-One and the datacard codenamed Prodigal-Two. (IA)

Operation Sidestep

the codename given to the military operation surrounding the New Republic's deflecting the Centerpoint Station attack on Bovo Yagen. It was commanded by the Bakuran Naval officer, Hortel Ossilege. (SC)

Operation Skyhook

this was the codename of Princess Leia Organa's mission to retrieve the plans of the first Death Star. The mission was predicated on an agent being able to steal the plans from a secret Imperial installation, a mission which was successfully completed by Kyle Katarn. Later, Leia was to travel to Toprawa and take custody of the plans herself. However, Imperial forces in the system forced her to change the plans, instead having the plans transmitted directly to her ship, the Tantive IV. (SWR, SW174)

Operation Starbird

this Alliance operation was set up to provide data on the situation on Gorothe Prime, and to determine the best course of action to overthrow the Imperial and corporate control of the Gorothe people. Agents working on Operation Starbird were given a fair amount of autonomy, and assumed guises which allowed them to infiltrate the Imperial forces and the corporations, while providing them with access to the native Gorothe population. Operation Starbird supported the efforts of the Gor'Jen'Ar, working to undermine the efforts of the Empire without direct confrontation. (GSE)

Operation Starlancer

this was the name given to the Inner Circle's development of the pipefighter, in the wake of the Battle of Coruscant. Originally conceived on Borleias, Operation Starlancer was designed to fool the Yuuzhan Vong into thinking that the Borleias base was more important than it actually was. The operation was a front, to draw attention away from the Inner Circle's plans to infiltrate Coruscant. Danni Quee allowed Tam Elgrin to steal "information" on Starlancer, information that led the Yuuzhan Vong and Viki Shesh to believe that the Borleias base was trying to grow immense lambent crystals to use as focusing crystals in the pipefighters. The goal of the Starlancer project was to be able to launch remote strikes against Yuuzhan Vong warships, without actually engaging the alien invaders. Analogous to the superlaser used aboard the Death Star, Starlancer employed pipefighters to fire intense bolts of energy. These were combined in order to form a single, super-powerful beam. This beam was focused through a lambent crystal but, unlike the Death Star's laser, could distort space and time to increase acceleration through hyperspace, thereby allowing the Republic to strike anywhere in the galaxy from a remote location. The plan worked quite well, forcing the Warmaster Tsavong Lah to reinstate the rank of his own father, Czulkang Lah, in an effort to destroy the Borleias base. This allowed Wedge Antilles to give the remnants of the New Republic's Advisory Council a chance regroup elsewhere and plan a retaliation against the Yuuzhan Vong. (EL1, EL2)

Operation Strike Fear

a plan devised by Emperor Palpatine early in the Galactic Civil War, it involved the use of the Imperial fleet to subdue pockets of resistance and obliterate them. The goal was to suppress further resistance via the fear of Imperial retaliation. (XW)

Operation Strong Hand

this was the New Republic's codename for the final assault on the Yevethan Navy, during the Black Fleet Crisis. It involved the use of the White Current, wielded primarily by Wailu and Akanah, to create the illusion of a huge war fleet attacking the Koornacht Cluster. Primary command of Strong Hand was given to General A'baht, with his five senior officers - Corgan, Mauit'ta, Morano, Poqua, and Grekk 9 - defining the various roles and assignments. (TT)

Operation Trinity

this was the codename of the massive assault on the Bilbringi asteroid belt, devised by the Galactic Alliance in an effort to eliminate the Yuuzhan Vong presence in the area. The Operation was based on coordinated HoloNet transmissions between the fleets commanded by General Wedge Antilles, General Traest Kre'fey, and Grand Admiral Gilad Pellaeon. General Antilles' fleet, simply named Alpha, was the point for the operation, with Pellaeon commanding the Beta fleet and Kre'fey the Gamma fleet. However, the Yuuzhan Vong chose this point in their invasion to unleash the mabugat kan, which destroyed several HoloNet relay stations and shut down communications between the fleets. (FP)

Operation Venom

Operation Venom was the Empire's plans to root out and destroy the Alliance's Pegasus Strike Force. Under the command of Admiral Berthogg and the Behemoth, the Empire made some headway against the Alliance fleet near Orellon II. (SWJ2)

Operation Yavin Kill Two

this was the codename of Darth Vader's plan to lure Leia Organa and Luke Skywalker back to the remains of Alderaan. He set about planting rumors about the discovery of parts of the Royal Palace of Alderaan in the heart of Asteroid 7785. Vader then augmented the rumors by adding a story about the mining survey team discovering a survivor in the asteroid who claimed to be Bail Organa. Vader went so far as to build a replica of the Palace inside the asteroid, using motion sensors and other mechanisms to trap his victims inside. Unfortunately for Vader, a group of Alliance agents intercepted the message from Hanos Darr and Zaz Hamiroz before it reached Leia Organa, and arrived at the asteroid before she did. The trap was sprung, but without the victims Vader intended. (GA)

Operation: Elrood

this Imperial action was designed to take control of Elrood Sector, not just the interdicted space between Derilyn and Berea. Note that the final section of Operation: Elrood indicates that this was an Alliance action. (OE)

Operational Multisystem Management

abbreviated OMM, this was a system implemented by the Corporate Sector Authority to allow each member of the Authority to access a huge database of information. They employed slicers who had been convicted of computer crimes by the Empire to create a network that allows any system to have access. The slicers also figure out how to keep the system secure. (CSA)

Operational Starfighters

this was a book, produced during the last decades of the Old Republic, which described the standard features of most starfighters. (BF2)

this man served as a guard for the crimelord Mahk'khar, guarding their base of operations on Tuulab during the early years of the New Republic. (SWJ6)

Oph Nar Dinnid

this Lyunesi communications handler was working for one of the Narrant System's major liege-holder clans, and as a direct interpreter for the supreme leader of the clan, when he fell into a hypererotic, passionate relationship with the leader's alpha concubine. Their relationship was discovered when, at a clan ceremony re-affirming the oaths of some several thousand sublieges, the screen separating the main dias from a smaller subchamber was accidentally brought down. Dinnid and the concubine were exposed, in front of the supreme liege-lord and his sworn followers. The Lyunesi managed to escape, invoking the wrath of the Narrant liege-lord, who put out a huge bounty on the comm handler's head. Dinnid, however, was well-prepared to pay for his freedom. He had memory augmenters implanted in his brain, filled with information on the Narrant System's business operations. The memory circuits were rigged to a series of implants that allowed it to be extracted over a long period of time. Any tampering with the splint would result in a complete wipe of the data, not to mention Dinnid's death. This ensured Dinnid's long-term value to his new employer. Dinnid sought refuge with the Shell Hutts, who hoped to gain a foothold in the Narrant System and take over business there. However, Dinnid was exterminated by Gheeta in a fit of rage before the information could be extracted, and before the bounty on his head could be collected by Boba Fett. Gheeta then received a lesser sum from the Narrant System liege-lords upon proof of Dinnid's death. (MA) this arid planet was under the control of Tyrann and his Serpent Masters during the height of the New Order, until Luke Skywalker and Tanith Shire defeated them. (SWDB)

Opila

this was one of the many crystals used by the ancient Jedi Knights in the construction of a lightsaber. It was believed to have given the wielder a greater presence in combat, allowing them to intimidate an opponent. Opila crystals were mined almost exclusively in the asteroid field of the Fyrth Ssystem. (KOTOR)

Opit-Wenbruh

this young Tren felt betrayed when his people voted to join the Empire, but served out his term with the military before beginning a personal crusade to expose the Empire as a xenophobic dictatorship. In an effort to strike out at the Empire, Opit-Wenbruh joined the Alliance and served in the Tynquay Skirmishes before joining the famous Scandium Team as a heavy-weapons specialist. He was one of six members of the team to survive the Wellte-ir Massacre. (SWJ11)

Ople, Gres

this woman once worked for the Trandosha pirate Chorssk, until she was lured away by the Regal Heirarchy of the planet Ilimardon. She was promised large sums of credits to steal a breeding pair of Chorssk's domesticated mynocks, which she stole and brought with her to Ilimardon. There, she worked to develop a flock of domesticated mynocks for the Heirarchy's private use. Chorssk, upon learning of her defection and employment, vowed to hunt her down and kill her for her treachery. (WOTC)

Opos

a YT-1300 transport used by the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War, the Opos was destroyed while on a mission. (TIE)

Oppo Rancisis

born some 174 years before the Battle of Naboo, this Thissipain was a Jedi Master, and served as a member of the Jedi Council shortly before the Clone Wars. Rancisis had no legs, and moved about on a repulsor chair. He had green skin, long fingers tipped with sharp nails, and a mass of flowing white hair. Oppo was trained as a Jedi by Yaddle, and was skilled in the art of malacia. Oppo once inherited the leadership of the Monarchy of Thissipias when, at the age of twenty, his sister was murdered. However, he declined the position in order to pursue his studies of the Force. Among the Jedi Council, he was known for his skills in battle planning and strategy. His fleet strategies were invaluable during the Stark Hyperspace Conflict, as well as the Clone Wars that plunged the galaxy into turmoil. Because of his age and his physical stature, Master Rancisis was one of the handful of Jedi Council members who remained on Coruscant during the Clone Wars. Some thirty months after the Battle of Geonosis, it was Master Rancisis who presided over the trial of Quinlan Vos. Based on the testimonies of Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker, not to mention Quinlan's own defense, Master Rancisis agreed to allow Quinlan to rejoin the Jedi Order. Shortly afterward, Master Rancisis asked Vos to serve as his second-in-command on a mission to Saleucami, where they hoped to locate Master Tholme and destroy the cloning facilities established on the planet by Sora Bulq. Note that the novelization of Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith indicates that Master Rancisis was no longer on the Jedi Council in the wake of the First Battle of Coruscant, having been replaced by Obi-Wan Kenobi. Oppo Rancisis was portrayed by Jerome Blake in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace and Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones. (SW1, IG1, OWS, SWI62, PJSB, RDR, RT, E3N)

Opquis

this alien race joined the New Republic. The Opquis were characterized by their rough-sounding voices. (SOP)

Opreka, Kalzutan

this man, a native of the planet Naboo, served as the Chairman of the Naboo Moon Mining Union, shortly before the Clone Wars. It was Opreka who called for the "sit-in" protest of the decision by Queen Jamillia to close off certain Naboo starports to mining traffic, in favor of allowing refugee ships to land there instead. Union ships were left in their berths, preventing refugee ships from landing, in protest of the loss of kassoti spice caused when it couldn't be processed in time. (HNN5)

Oqa

this bio-organic membrane was used by the Yuuzhan Vong as the connecting tube which allowed two of their starships to dock with one another. Individual Yuuzhan Vong could then travel back and forth between the ships by traversing the length of the oqa membrane. The name oqa was derived from the word used to describe the proboscis of a Yuuzhan Vong pack animal. The interior of the oqa membrane was continually bathed with noxious slime, which was secreted by the oqa as a sterilization and decontamination agent. The floor of an oqa was referred to as a microbial mat, and was constantly swept clear of debris by clusters of tiny, white arachnids. (EVR, UF)

this group of Imperial probes was destroyed by the Alliance, shortly before the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Oracle at Pelgrin

located on the planet Pelgrin, this unusual device was created millions of years ago by the Pelgrin race. The facility which housed the Oracle stood some ten stories in height, being formed on dieuw tree wood and reinforced with metal, and contained a complex network of gears, switches, and pendulums. A central shaft reached from the base of the Oracle to its pinnacle, where a single chamber was situated. The initial discovery team, led by Ermin Phin-Mar some 3,000 years before the Battle of Naboo, was unable to restart the Oracle, but Phin-Mar ascertained that it was originally created as an astronomical device that held a religious or predictive place in Pelgrin culture. This led to its description as an Oracle. However, further investigation by the Jedi who accompanied Phin-Mar, Shannur Darkstar, revealed that the Oracle had some deep connection to the Force. When Darkstar first tried to puzzle her way through to a better understanding of the Oracle by meditating in the upper chamber, she brought the machine back to life. Rather than being operated by a crew of Pelgrins, the Oracle operated on the energy of the Force. Darkstar herself had a vision of a great war, and many other Jedi who arrived on Pelgrin also saw devastating events in the future. Popular rumors sprang up that the Pelgrins foresaw their own destruction in the Oracle, despite the fact that there was no evidence to support such a theory. The most intriguing mystery of the Oracle was the fact that it required an individual with a strong connection to the Force to operate it, although there was no record of the Pelgrins having any Force-sensitivity. Because of the catastrophic nature of the visions experienced in the Oracle, the Jedi Council requested that access to the Oracle be restricted, while scientists claimed that the Jedi were creating a false sense of evil around the Oracle to keep it for themselves. The Old Republic Senate sided with the Jedi, but allowed a few state-sponsored investigations. The Jedi Knights began to catalogue the visions which were reported, and only began to see the truth of the predictions decades later, when certain events the Oracle foresaw actually came to pass. The most disastrous visions, such as that experienced by Shannur Darkstar, took millennia to occur. Unfortunately, the Oracle was destroyed by a group of pirates during the last decades of the Old Republic. These pirates had been hired in secret by Chancellor Palpatine himself, out of fear that the Jedi Knights might discern his plans to take control of the galaxy. (PJSB)

Oracle Base

this Alliance military outpost was located on the planet Tel III, in Brak Sector, during the Galactic Civil War. It was supported by starfighter bases in the De'nel, Jinet, and Intran Systems. The base was hidden within the planetary nebula surrounding the Tel star. At the time of the Battle of Yavin, Oracle Base supported more than 366 personnel, including 214 troops. (SESB, FBS)

Oracle Squadron

this was the designation of the Alliance Y-Wing squadron stationed at Oracle Base, on the planet Tel III, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. The squadron sustained fifty-percent losses during the attempt to rescue prisoners from the Caged Animal, after the Empire launched its own ambush on the Alliance forces. (FBS)

Oradin

this was one of the largest cities on the planet Brentaal, and it boasted an Imperial-class spaceport. In the years following the Battle of Endor, much of Oradin was held by supporters of the New Republic, which allowed the Republic to establish a temporary base there prior to the Battle of Brentaal. Parts of the city were destroyed during the initial battle against the Imperial forces, and an assault shuttle was shot down and crashed into a school. Is Oradin a city or a planet? The captions seem to indicate it's a city on the barren moon of Brentaal IV, but discussion among the New Republic military indicate it's a planet. (XWES, IR)

Oradin Diamond

created by Lon Isoto, this medal was given to the pilots of the 181st Imperial Fighter Group, which helped defend the planet Brentaal from the early efforts of the New Republic to take the planet. Similar in design to the Vuultin Starburst, the Oradin Diamond had an organic look to its red, heart-like center and gold flares. (XWES)

Oraltor

this Ithorian was one of Ithor's Senators to the Old Republic, in the last decades of the Old Republic. (SWRPG)

Oran

this New Republic Navy Communications Officer served under Commander Zoalin aboard the Adamantine before succumbing to the Death Seed plague unleashed by Seti Ashgad. (POT)

Oran Mas

this was one of many cities on the planet Haruun Kal which were controlled by the Balawai during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SHPT)

Orane Mountain

this was the tallest peak on Beija, the small strip of land which connected the Jhunia snow plains on Neftali to the Yiulimar Fjords. (BSS)

Oranessan System

Dengar and Neelah took the Hound's Tooth to this remote system, in an effort to draw the forces of Kodir of Kuhlvelt away from the transport ship of Balancesheet, shortly before the Battle of Endor. Their plan was to divert the Kuati ships' attention long enough for Boba Fett and N'dru Suhlak to leave the assembler's ship in Suhlak's Z-95 and flee to Tatooine and recover the load shifter which contained Kuat of Kuat's falsified record of the deaths of Owen and Beru Lars. (HM)

Orange Lady Tavern

this tavern was located on the planet Corellia, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Note that the Star Wars Adventure Journal, Issue 5 claims this tavern was located on Nar Shaddaa. (SWJ5, SWJ15)

Oran-m

this planet was the largest in the Oranessan System. It was near this world that N'dru Suhlak delivered Boba Fett back to the Hound's Tooth, after returning from Tatooine to recover the load shifter of Kuat of Kuat. (HM)

Orax

this planet was known for its wondrous mineral formations, as well as its hot springs. It was also the homeworld of the species of intelligent, crystalline lifeforms known as Shards. (AE)

Orb of Passage

this unusual stone was discovered some 4,000 years before the Battle of Geonosis by the mysterious Tet-Ami. The Orb, nothing more than a round pebble in appearance, contained the power to control time. (T13)

Orbalisk

this barnacle-like creature lived on the moon Dxun. These symbiotic parasites were protected by a hard shell, and oozed an acidic slime that they used to eat away at whatever surface they attached themselves to. Orbalisks preferred to feed on living flesh, and could infest a living sentient in minutes. These creatures were attuned to the Dark Side of the Force, having lived in proximity to Exar Kun's tomb for many millennia. Because of this, any orbalisk which attached itself to a Sith Lord or other Dark Side adept would form a mutually beneficial symbiosis. Many Sith warriors chose to use orbalisks to create a kind of living armor which grew as the orbalisk reproduced. The individual orbalisks had to be removed, or the being would be covered and consumed by the orbalisk family. However, once a stable, symbiotic relationship was established, the orbalisk armor actually helped heal wounds which its host suffered. (GMR3, DSSB)

Orbalisk Armor

many Sith warriors chose to use orbalisks to create a kind of living armor which grew as the orbalisk reproduced. The individual orbalisks had to be removed, or the being would be covered and consumed by the orbalisk family. However, once a stable, symbiotic relationship was established, the orbalisk armor actually helped heal wounds which its host suffered. (DSSB)

Orbit Dock

any space-based landing and maintenance facility for starships. These can be small docks, catering to small freighters, or they can be huge, multiple-facility stations capable of servicing capital ships. One of the most famous docks is in orbit around Sluis Van. (HTTE)

Orbital Gun Platform

any small ship or base that can launch an attack from orbit. (SWR)

Orbital Mines

small satellites that can be placed in random orbits around a planet. They have tiny propulsion systems that keep them moving in orbit. They also have sensitive detonation systems tuned to explode upon impact. (CPL)

Orbital Nightcloak

this Imperial invention employed thousands of orbiting satellites which, when linked electronically, distorted the natural waves of light from a star and bend them in toward the satellites, effectively preventing all wavelengths of light from reaching the planet below. This caused the planet to cool quickly, and freeze within two weeks. Warlord Zsinj first put these devices to practical use. The first time, he used them to fake the destruction of the Iron Fist at Selaggis Six. He flew the Super-class Star Destroyer into a tunnel created with nightcloaks, hiding the ship from New Republic forces while he jumped to hyperspace. After fleeing, the nightcloaks were recovered, revealing the debris from the mocked-up Second Death to portray the rubble of the Iron Fist. Later, Zsinj used them to force the inhabitants of Dathomir to surrender to him, after Rancor Base had been infiltrated by New Republic forces. The blockade was smashed by the combined forces of the New Republic and the Hapan Cluster. (CPL, IR, NEGW)

Orbital Nightcloak Mark II

this upgrade to the Imperial orbital nightcloak system used satellites which were also equipped with short-range laser cannons and targeting computers, allowing them to fire on any ship which might try to disable the satellite. (EGW)

Orbital Relay Satellite

these transmission satellites, known as ORS devices, are deployed by exploration and reconnaissance ships over specific planets. The satellites can be linked in any number and configuration, and continuously relay information to a central site or flagship. (TT)

Orbital Shipyard 1321

part of the massive starship construction facility located in orbit around Fondor, this facility was in the process of refitting the Amerce when Fondor was attacked by the Yuuzhan Vong. (JE)

Orbital Space Tug

a starship used to ferry larger ships into and out of orbital docking bays and shipyards. (CS)

Orbital Transports Union

this organization of transport companies and independent spacers was formed on the planet Corulag during the last decades of the Old Republic. A series of confrontations between the Union and Zafiel Snopps erupted during the last years of the Old Republic and continued into the New Order, as strikes were called to protest near-continual increases in berthing taxes. (CCW)

Orbitblade-2000

this zZip aerospace transport was used by many private corporations for transporting goods and personnel from the ground into low orbit. It measures 4 meters in length, and comes armed with a concussion missile launcher for defense. (CSA)

Orbiter

this was a game of chance, similar to the Jubilee Wheel, played in many casinos and gambling halls across the galaxy. (WSV)

Orbiting Shipyard Alpha

primary shipyard used by the Duro, it orbits the planet Duro about 100 miles into the atmosphere. (MMY)

Orborus

this was a common name among the Temolak race. (UANT)

Orbot

this series of protocol droids was produced by Serv-O-Droid during the last century of the Old Republic. (MBS)

Orb-spider

this spider was distinguished by the spherical web it wove to trap and ensnare its prey. (YDR)

OrC-19

this was MicroThrust's planetary com-scan unit. The Alliance used the OrC-19 in its defense of Echo Base, on the planet Hoth. (EGW)

Orcel, Batral

this young man, the son of a wealthy Cloud City family, was an Alliance supporter during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He used his position to help the Alliance in any way possible. Shortly after the Battle of Hoth, Batral was identified as an Alliance sympathizer by Justor Ferral, who captured Batral and brought him in for questioning. Batral was later rescued by the Alliance agents sent to Cloud City to transport refugees to Kaliska. (GMR3)

Orchard Crystal

another name for a life crystal. (LCF)

Orchid, The

this high-class, five-star hotel was located adjacent to Aramand's restaurant, in the city of Drepplin on Glova. Like Aramand's, The Orchid was owned and operated by planetary Governor Tegist Byrg. (POC)

Orcim

an Imperial freighter destroyed by Keyan Farlander during his first tour of duty as an X-Wing pilot. (XW)

Ord

this was a common name given to male Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Ord

this prefix, which is used in the names of many modern planets, is actually an acronym used by the Old Republic to denote a world which housed a military outpost. These worlds were designated as Ordnance/Regional Depots, or ORDs. Over the centuries, the word Ord was simply used to describe the planet. (EGP)

Ord Ambassador

this was Ord Mantell's most luxurious hotel. (ROM)

Ord Antalaha

this planet was colonized during the Clone Wars as an Ordnance/Regional Depot along the Shwuy Exchange. The bases were abandoned after the Clone Wars, and the colonists eventually moved elsewhere. About ten years before Emperor Palpatine initiated the New Order, Ord Antalaha started being used as a stopover by smugglers and pirates. The planet's warehouses and buildings were soon converted for use by the outlaws, and Ord Antalaha became a haven for independent spacers. The planet had three continents, all of which were covered with temperate forests and plains. (PP)

Ord Biniir

this planet was the site of a series of Galactic Civil War battles. The first was a victory by a squadron of Y-Wings against the uninspired Imperial forces of the 233rd Imperial Fighter Wing, while the second was a decisive victory by the 181st Imperial Fighter Group against the same Y-Wings. The second battle was a hollow victory for the Empire, since it took place on the same day as the Battle of Yavin. (EGV, MBF)

Ord Bueri

this planet was the site of an Old Republic ordnance and regional depot. (IWST)

Ord Canfre

this planet was overrun by the Separatists, during the early stages of the Clone Wars. (SWI65)

Ord Cantrell

this planet was considered one of the most exclusive resorts in the galaxy. After the death of Emperor Palpatine's clones at Byss, the Imperial Interim Ruling Council set up their base of operations there, in the city of De-Purteen. (CE2)

Ord Cestus

this planet, the homeworld of the X'Ting race, was originally known simply as Cestus, until the Old Republic was allowed to use the planet as a prison world. As such, the planet was designated as an ordnance/regional depot, and renamed Ord Cestus. Much of the planet's landmass was volcanically active, resulting in a landscape that was continually being reshaped by lava flows. Because of this activity, the rich stores of valuable ores and minerals found beneath its surface were continually being exposed and combined, resulting in a veritable treasure trove of raw materials. Much of the planet's surface was once covered with sand and small bodies of water, with hardy plants eking out niches by exuding acids through their roots to break down the rock and sand into essential elements. The descendants of the prisoners who were first incarcerated on the planet became farmers and settlers, using stringent irrigation techniques to grow more than two dozen different kinds of vegetables. However, the abundance of the raw materials was eventually discovered, and many of the resources proved to be important components needed in the manufacture of droids. It was on Ord Cestus that Baktoid Armor Workshop set up its first major operations, although its manufacturing facility was shut down shortly before the onset Clone Wars due to the increasing tariffs imposed on the Trade Federation for their battle droids. This tariff didn't stop the work of Cestus Cybernetics, however, which had the backing of the Confederacy of Independent Systems. During the height of the Clone Wars, Jedi Masters Obi-Wan Kenobi and Kit Fisto, along with their group of clone troopers, managed to defeat the Separatist forces that controlled the planet and the native X'Ting population. Most X'Ting lived in underground hives, preferring to remain out of sight of the offworlders who lived in Chikatlik city. Their networks of tunnels and caves were lit by a bioluminescent, white fungus, which survived by eating away at the rocks on which it lived. This served to naturally expand the tunnels and caves over time. The planet was orbited by a pair of moons. (HNN4, OWS, HIV, TCD)

Ord Dorlass

this is a little-known planet located in the Rayter Sector. (CRO)

Ord Grovner

this planet was used as a naval base for the Imperial Navy. The Crusader and the Bombard returned to the base at Ord Grovner after the defeat of the Khiumin pirates. (SWJ6)

Ord Ibanna

this gas giant planet was home to a famous pod racing course that wound its way through an abandoned, floating gas refinery. During the Clone Wars, the Jedi Order established an outpost on the planet, which served as a remote meeting place for those agents who were working undercover to infiltrate the ranks of the Separatists. (RAC, J4)

Ord Janon

this planet was once the site of base used by the Confederacy of Independent Systems, during the early stages of the Clone Wars. The Army of the Republic was able to force the Separatists off Ord Janon, freeing the planet's populace. (SWI65)

Ord Klina

a planet. (AIR)

Ord Lithone

this planet was the site of a Baktoid Armor Workshop manufacturing facility which was shut down, shortly before the onset Clone Wars, due to the increasing tariffs imposed on the Trade Federation for their battle droids. (HNN4)

Ord Mandel

another spelling of Ord Mantell. (RC)

Ord Mantell

located in the Bright Jewel System, Ord Mantell was known for its lenient banking laws and their flexibility. It was settled some 12,000 years before the Battle of Endor by Corellian colonists as an advanced military outpost for the Old Republic. Over time, more wealthy planets and better hyperspace routes diminished Ord Mantell's strategic importance, but became something of a free port for all manner of freighters and cargo ships. Despite the planet's dropping stature, it remained known as the Heart of the Bright Jewel, orbiting the blue star at the center of the Bright Jewel System. The planet was famous for its thick, outer cometary cloud, which has been the site of the Blockade Runners Derby for nearly 100 years. Two large moons and thirteen other satellites orbited the planet, and the cloudcover was tinged with pink when viewed from the planet's surface. These natural wonders made Ord Mantell something of a tourist attraction, despite its seedier side. It is also one of Thrawn's feint attacks just prior to his attack on Coruscant. It has two moons, and has a temperate environment. It claimed to be free of Imperial interest, but Han Solo discovered an Imperial fleet on maneuvers when he arrived there. It was at a starship scrapyards on Ord Mantell that Dash Rendar, working to locate information on Han Solo's whereabouts for Lando Calrissian after the debacle at Cloud City, ran into IG-88 and other bounty hunters. The bounty hunters were trying to intercept Boba Fett, who was transporting Han Solo's frozen body to Jabba the Hutt. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Ord Mantell was approached by the New Republic to help alleviate the overwhelming rush of refugees fleeing the battlezones. Like many refugee worlds early in the war, it was eventually overrun by the Yuuzhan Vong. The planet was eventually liberated by a band of soldiers wearing Mandalorian armor. It was believed that their leader was none other than Boba Fett himself, although only Han Solo had any evidence to support this rumor. (ESB, TLC, MTS, SSE, ROM, TTBS, SL, HT, SWDB, FH3, UF)

Ord Mantellian Flutterplume

this form of display was developed on Ord Mantell. It consists of large groups of repulsorspheres which trail numerous metallic streamers. They bob and float in a complex mixture of colors and sizes, mimicking the native flutterplumes of Ord Mantell. (ROM, SWDB)

Ord Mirit

a planet in the Mirit System, located in the same sector as the Pyria and Venjagga Systems. It was the site of an Imperial base, but the planet's remote location dictated that the remnants of the Empire abandon it following the Battle of Endor. The garrison on Ord Mirit was moved to Corellia to guard the shipyards there. (XWN)

Ord Mynock

this planet was believed to have been the world on which mynocks evolved. (SWDB)

Ord Namurt

it was on this planet that Aurra Sing was captured by a group of Sennex Pirates. (OWS, ASNG)

Ord Pardron

the primary planet in the Ord Pardron system, Ord Pardron was a defensive center for the New Republic. The planet itself was nothing more than a barren rock, with a thin atmosphere and very little gravity. However, it was rich in minerals and ores, and was extensively mined by the Old Republic and the Empire. It served as the primary defensive site for the Abrion and Dufilvian sectors (including Ando, Filve, and Crondre). The New Republic base there was attacked by the Death's Head, as part of Grand Admiral Thrawn's plans to stretch the Republic's defenses in the wake of the Battle of Bilbringi. (TLC, TTSB)

Ord Pedrovia

this was a model of podracer favored by Gasgano. The cockpit measured 2.72 meters in length, and the engines were 6.71 meters long. They were capable of speeds reaching 823 kilometers per hour. (JAS, IG1)

Ord Radama

this planet, located in the Mid Rim Territories, was the homeworld of the Devlikk race. Note that the galaxy map inside Star Wars Insider, issue 65, indicates that Ord Radama is in the Outer Rim Territories. (IWE1, SWI65)

Ord Sabaok

this planet is located in the Core, and is known for its exclusive nightclubs. (CRO)

Ord Sedra

this planet was one of the many worlds that were part of the Imperial Remnant, during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. It was one of the first Imperial worlds to be subjugated by the Yuuzhan Vong, although their attacks were greatly aided by members of the Peace Brigade. A collaboration between Kyle Katarn, Jans Ors, and Imperial forces led by Lieutenant Pallin was able to defeat the Yuuzhan Vong and free the planet's inhabitants. (T21)

Ord Segra

this planet, located in the Doldur Sector, was run by a corrupt government. The government demanded a seven percent "bribe" from any ship which passes close to its system. Any ship that chose not to pay was immediately fired upon. (SWJ6)

Ord Sigatt

this was an Outer Rim mining world. It was here that Dexter Jettster first met Obi-Wan Kenobi. (SWDB)

Ord Simres

a planet. (SWJ14)

Ord Tessebok

Ord Tessebok was one of the first ten planets to join the Refugee Resettlement Coalition, shortly before the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Ord Thoden

a planet. (HNN4)

Ord Tiddell

this planet was virtually destroyed by a stone mite infestation, just prior to the Battle of Geonosis. The natives of this Mid Rim world fled in panic, leaving cities abandoned. (HNN5)

Ord Torrenze

this planet was liberated from an invasion force during the last decades of the Old Republic, in a struggle which became known as the Battle of Ord Torrenze. (DARK)

Ord Traga

this planet was the site of a possible Imperial base. (SWJ7)

Ord Trasi

this planet was the site of an Imperial shipyard during the reign of Grand Admiral Thrawn, some five years after the Battle of Endor. It was eventually retaken by the New Republic, and the planet served as the staging point for many fleet maneuvers. Foremost among them was the assembly of a task force, under the command of Garm Bel Iblis, to attack the Ubiquitorate base on Yaga Minor and recover a copy of the Caamas Document, some fifteen years after the Battle of Endor. (TLC, VOF)

Ord Varee

Ord Varee was one of the first ten planets to join the Refugee Resettlement Coalition, shortly before the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Ord Vaug

this planet was liberated from Imperial control by the Alliance, shortly after the Battle of Endor. (PH)

Ord Vaxal

this planet served as a penal colony during the last years of the Old Republic, with facilities for psychiatric treatment as well as maximum security jailcells. About twenty years before the Battle of Yavin, a planet-wide jailbreak overthrew the current overseer and his wardens, and the criminal population took control. This anarchic form of society prevailed for many years, until the Empire took control of the planet. The lawless population was then forced to submit to Imperial rule. (OWS)

Ord Vorra

this female Twi'lek had a romantic relationship with Biggs Bogan, during his period of service to the Old Republic on the planet Drongar, some two years after the Battle of Geonosis. She inadvertently provided Kadir with information on Bogan's career, providing the Nediji assassin with a way to obtain a starship to flee Drongar. Like Bogan, Ord Vorra was an Adept at the game of Strag, and their love of the game brought them together. (MJH)

Ord Wylan

Lando Calrissian once won the rights to all taxi-service licenses on this planet in a sabacc match, but lost it on a bet about which liquor was being served. (SWJ5)

Ord Zat

a planet. (TBSB)

Ordaj

this gas giant was the fifth planet in the Hoth System, and was orbited by seventeen moons. (PH)

Order

a Habeen container group stationed near their research base. (TIE)

Order 66

this was the secret mission that was programmed into every clone commander who served the Grand Army of the Republic during the Clone Wars. Known only to Darth Sidious, Order 66 was issued only after Sidious - known to the rest of the galaxy as Chancellor Palpatine - had destroyed Mace Windu and much of the Jedi Council. Upon hearing the execution of Order 66, clone commanders abandoned any loyalty to their Jedi Generals and began to open fire on them. This allowed Darth Sidious to eliminate a huge portion of the Jedi Order, and became the opening act in the Jedi Purge. Historians later debated whether or not the issuing of Order Sixty-six signalled the true end of the Clone Wars, since the order was only issued after Palpatine declared himself Emperor. Others argued that the true end came when Anakin Skywalker - now known as Darth Vader - traveled to Mustafar to eliminate the Council of Separatists. (IS3, E3N)

Order of Dai Bendu

little is known of this ancient organization, whose name was coaxed from crumbling history disks found during the height of the Old Republic. Many historians and scholars believed that the Order of the Dai

Bendu was one of the original incarnations of the Jedi Order, although no evidence was ever found to support this claim. (PJSB)

Order of Independent Trade

this was one of two primary pirate organizations which survived in the Cularin System, during the era of the Battle of Naboo. The Order allied themselves with Nirama, and were given a good deal of work smuggling personnel and supplies into the system underneath the watchful eyes of the Old Republic. (LFC)

Order of Shasa

this quasi-religious order was formed by the Selkath many generations before the Galactic civil War. They took up the mantle of protecting Mana'an from attacks during the years surrounding the Great Sith War. It was believed that the Order of Shasa was formed after a group of Selkath spent several years studying with the Jedi Knights, although rumors persisted that the Selkath had actually been trained by the Sith. Regardless, the Order of Shasa protected Mana'an for many generations, even during the years in which kolto production was stopped and the planet fell into disarray. Like the Jedi, new members of the Order had to train for long periods of time before being admitted as full members. In another parallel to the Jedi, each new member had to forge their own weapon - a fira - before becoming a member. Members of the Order of Shasa were sensitive to the Force, and had some minimal training in how to use it. However, this training proved woefully inadequate when Mana'an was subjugated by the Empire. With the Selkath reduced to living above the water, the Order urged the Selkath to bond together against this new enemy, forming some of the first cells of resistance on Ahto City. (PH)

Order of the Canted Circle

this elitist group is one of the oldest and most exclusive social orders found on the planet Coruscant. Due to the large number of wealthy individuals who make Coruscant their home, the waiting list for admission into the Order is quite long, and the requirements quite rigid. During Emperor Palpatine's reign, the Order was primarily made up from Imperial dignitaries and high-ranking military officers. On average, only eleven new members are chosen each decade. (SWJ9)

Order of the Dark Lords of the Sith

this was the term used by the Sith brotherhood to describe those members who had been elevated to the rank of Dark Lord of the Sith. In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan, the Order only had two active members: a Sith Master and their apprentice. (E3N)

Order of the Kilmar Bange

this secret society, based in Tapani Sector, was considered harmless during peacetimes, but could be the most ferocious of enemies during war. Made up of former House Melantha members who had graduated from the Imperial Academy on Raithal, the Order also accepted associate memberships from Corulag graduates. Their mission was to ensure brotherhood among its members and to strengthen the ties between House Melantha and the Empire, especially during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Despite its pro-Imperial stance, the Order was actually started many centuries prior to the rise of the New Order as a social club. (LOE)

Order of the Sacred Circle

this was the religion that dominated the planet Monastery. The name of the Order originated from the rings of debris which encircled the planet. To the adherents of this religion, the rings represented the eternal and ever-renewing cycle of life. In all matters, the Order of the Sacred Circle tried to remain strictly neutral. During the Separatist crisis that engulfed the galaxy just before the Clone Wars, Monastery opened her ports to refugees, provided that they converted to the Order upon their arrival. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, their belief in the circle of life kept them from siding with either the Empire or the Alliance, for fear that the war would break the circle of life and doom the galaxy. The Emperor dispatched Darth Vader himself to convince the Order to side with the Empire. His arguments convinced the leader of the Order, the young Domina Tagge, to side with the Empire. Sister Domina, however, had already planned to side with Vader, in an effort to force him into a deadly duel with Luke Skywalker. The Order suffered greatly from the Imperial presence near Monastery, and when Domina Tagge stepped down as the High Priestess of the Order, the Circle of Elders agreed to ally themselves with the Alliance. (HNN5, MC34, MC37)

Order of the Terrible Glare

this ancient priesthood was based on the planet Garn. It was destroyed by the Jedi Knights thousands of years before the Battle of Yavin, but the Order left behind the Portal Desolate on Garn. Within the portal was a computer-generated image of Rur, the last of the Order's High Shamen. Rur's image was placed there to destroy the Jedi once the Order could be re-established. However, when Luke Skywalker discovered the portal during the Galactic Civil War, the computer system couldn't reconcile the facts that the Jedi were extinct and a great deal of time had elapsed. The computer system exploded, taking with it the last remnants of the Order. (CSWDW)

Order to Reveal

this Old Republic law, when invoked, required a Senator to reveal all information requested by an investigation. The order to reveal was created to prevent a Senator from hiding information which was necessary to the resolution of a crime, especially when the crime directly involved the Senator or his staff. The need to enforce an order to reveal was required to be severe, and an ocean of paperwork had to be completed, submitted, and approved before the order could be implemented. There was only one known loophole to the order to reveal petition, which involved a Senator invoking their sitting right of refusal. While the right of refusal was legally binding, it did place the Senator in a compromising light. (JQ5)

Ordnance Lifter

this was the military version of the binary load lifter, developed by Cybot Galactica for the Old Republic during the height of the Clone Wars. Each of these bipedal automatons was equipped with a pair of heavy lifting arms, that allowed the ordnance lifter to load starfighters and other warships with missiles, and other ammunition. The central processing unit of the ordnance lifter was located in the rear of the droid, in a position to offset the heavy weight of the ordnance it moved. (SWI81)

Ordinandell

a planet. (RPG)

Ordo

this clone of Jango Fett was trained as an ARC Trooper on the planet Kamino, during the build-up to the Clone Wars. Several months after the Battle of Geonosis, Ordo - known most often by his callsign, N-11 - was assigned as an assistant to Kal Skirata. During the mission to free Senator Meena Tills from a group of Korunnai terrorists led by Nuriin-Ar, Ordo was forced to use an EMP charge to disable all holocameras in the immediate area, after the violent death of Jedi Master Kaim. (SWI81)

Ordo, Canderous

this man was one of the Mandalorian Mercs who rose to power following the Great Sith War, some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. He was also a born leader with considerable skills as a tactician and soldier, and his battle plans were instrumental in winning many battles against the Old Republic. After the Mandalorian Wars saw the defeat of his people at the hands of the Old Republic, Ordo took his combat skills and went into business for himself. For many years, he worked for the crimelord Davik Kang on Taris, using the distraction of the Great Sith War to continue his missions without worrying about being captured. When the Sith destroyed the Endar Spire over Taris and then blockaded the planet, Ordo was among the millions who were eager to flee Taris. As luck would have it, he was contacted by Carth Onasi and Bastila Shan, survivors of the Endar Spire who needed to get off Taris and hunt down Darth Malak. He managed to acquire the droid T3-M4, after he had been ordered to retrieve it by Kang, and used the droid's skills to slice into the Taris defense networks. Using stolen codes, the band managed to escape Taris just before the Leviathan destroyed it. Ordo remained with the Republic agents, searching for Darth Malak and the Star Forge. Canderous Ordo was voiced by John Cygan for the video game Star Wars: Knights of the Old Republic. (KOTOR, SWDB, SWI80)

Ordomire, Lucky

this forger was well-known to the underworld elements of Lumchugger's Hub, on Bescane. He maintained the BanthaQuik! Restaurant as a front, and anyone requiring his services needed to order specific items from the restaurant's menu. The contact would then be arranged. Ordomire helped a group of Alliance agents gain access to the Wastes, during their search for the Death-Hunter project. Ordomire was often accompanied by his Rodian bodyguard. (SWJ9)

Ore Boulevard

this street was located in the capital city of ChikatLik, on the planet Ord Cestus, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Ore Boulevard was located on the outskirts of the city, and was home to some of the city's seediest establishments. (TCD)

Ore Mite

this was a form of insectile creature that fed on raw ores. They were considered pests by miners and asteroid prospectors, since a swarm of ore mites could devour a vein of ores in no time. (EVR)

Ore Sucker

a small pirate ship developed to steal the cargo from the huge Colossus Wasp transport ships. These ships roam the Stenness System, looking for Wasp transports. When they find one, the ore suckers latch onto the Wasp's exterior, and bore into the hull with a drill or laser. Once the hull has been breached, the ore suckers open their own cargo bay hatches and lock them over the breach. The pilots then blow the other cargo bay doors on the ore suckers, creating a vacuum in their own holds. This vacuum sucks the cargo out of the Wasp's holds and into the ore sucker's holds. The pirates who used them had to be quick, so that the stolen cargo didn't simply fly out through their second open portal. (TOJ)

Orell

this was one of the binary yellow stars located at the center of the Veron System. Along with its twin, Noveron, Orell provided energy to all three planets in the system. (PG1)

Orellon I

this large moon orbited the planet Orellon II. It was first believed to be a planet itself, until research indicated it was a satellite. (SWJ2)

Orellon II

this planet, located in the Bastooine System, was covered with lush jungles, sweeping plains, and volcanic mountains. It was also the homeworld of the Kentra. The planet was accidentally discovered by the Jedi Knight Michael Tandre, who was forced to land his starship there. The native Kentra created an entire religion around the Jedi's teachings. (SWJ2)

Orelon

a star in the Hapes cluster. (CPL)

Orenth

this is the sixth combination symbol in the Aurebesh script, and represents the Basic combination "oo". (SWM)

Oreru

meaning "sincere", this was one of the most common names among Rodian females. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG) this man was the leader of a group of outlaw techs who were operating from a base in Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He was contacted by Lieutenant Talnar and his band of Alliance operatives, who were looking for a source of high-tech goods, when Talnar learned that Orex might be an Imperial spy. In reality, it was one of Orex's men that proved to be the spy, after Orex discovered that the man had been secretly accessing all of Orex's files on Talnar. Talnar's men and Orex's band of techs were forced to fight their way free of an Imperial ambush, after the traitor relayed his information to his contact. (SWMW)

Orex

Orfa City

this is the capital city of the planet Kidron. It was the only major city built by the Orfites on the planet, and was established as a testament to the modern technology brought to Kidron by the first off-worlders. Much of the krill processed on Kidron came from Orfa City. (PG3)

Orfa Olfactory Corporation

this Orfite business produced a variety of scent masks and the scent tablets which were used in them. (PG3)

Orfa Olfactory Entertainment, Limited

based on the planet Kidron, this small corporation made a variety of devices which provided olfactory entertainment to users. This area of entertainment was relatively untapped, but found increasing acceptance during the height of the New Order. (PG3)

Orfa Toolco

this Orfite corporation produced a variety of technology for Orfites who traveled away from Kidron, including the Orfite Power Harness. (PG3)

Orfite

a race of creatures native to the planet Kidron, the Orfites are friendly enough to those offworlders who obey their laws. This is an unusual request, considering that many of the offworlders on Kidron are criminals and convicts escaping justice. The avergae Orfite has a stocky build, and their faces are dominated by their large noses, which are filled with frilled olfactory lobes. The nose of an Orfite had evolved to pick up every trace of breathable air from the thin atmosphere of Kidron, and the Orfites had four lungs which helped get the meager oxygen supply into their bloodstream faster. Their society revolved around the sense of smell, with each Orfite exuding pheronomes which convey a variety of information. They lived in tribes known as sahhs, but every member of Orfite society was free to move about, and could join another sahh if they didn't agree with the leadership of their current tribe. The Empire considered the Orfites to be uncivilized savages, and left them alone. The basic number system of the Orfites revolved around the number four. (PG3, AE)

Orfite Power Harness

developed by Orfa Toolco, this device allowed an Orfite to maneuver on normal to high-gravity worlds. On Kidron, the gravity was lower than normal, so an Orfite traveling to another planet would experience incredible pressure under higher-gravity conditions. The power harness was small enough to fit under regular clothing, and provided assistance to the legs, arms, back, and shoulders of the wearer. (PG3)

Orfite Scent Mask

produced by the Orfa Olfactory Corporation, this specialized breath mask was used primarily by the Orfites as a way to make the air they breathed more pleasant. The main unit resembled a standard breath mask, but a small tube connected the mask to a belt pack that used scented tablets to create a breathable mist. The mist was pumped up through the tube and into the mask, allowing the wearer to breathe a variety of pleasurable or intoxicating scents. During the height of the New Order, these masks found their way into non-Orfite society as recreational devices, and the variety of scent tablets grew wildly. (PG3) an asteroid located near the Demophon System, Orflon was the site of an Alliance base during the Galactic Civil War. Frozen and arid, the asteroid was a frigid wilderness that even the Mynocks avoided. (SN)

Orflon

Orga

this unusual tree grew in the lower levels of the forests of Kashyyyk, and its roots were considered a ceremonial food by the Wookiees. The roots were served at the Life Day celebration, as a way to help the spirit of a Wookiee make the journey to the Life Tree. What made the orga unusual was the fact that it had established a rudimentary level of sentience, as evidenced by documented attempts to communicate with Wookiees and their ability to coordinate the defense of their groves. The orga roots were exceptionally long and far-reaching, allowing the tree to gain sustenance from a variety of sources. However, the tree itself was rooted to the ground and, therefore, stationary. Because of this, orga trees used their flexible limbs to hurl their acidic seed pods at any creature that threatened them. The roots themselves were guarded near the forest floor by sentient plants. (EGC, LAT2, GMR4)

Orgamon

this mountain Nikto worked as Mika the Hutt's bodyguard and agent on Endregaad, during the early years of the New Order. When the Endregaad Plague swept the planet, Orgamon was left behind by Mika, in case Popara sent a rescue party. He was forced to live in a warehouse in the city of Tel Bollin, until a mob of humans led by Radigan tried to kill him, claiming that it was a non-human who brought the Endregaad Plague to the planet. Ironically, Orgamon had actually contracted the disease. He fled to the Fallen Warrior Cantina, where he secured a room until the trouble had passed. When the freelance agents hired by Popara the Hutt finally located Orgamon, he explained that Mika had left him behind in order to track down the source of the plague and how to fight it. Orgamon agreed to take Popara's agents to the Temple Valley in search of Mika, allowing the Hutt to be "rescued". (TF)

Organa Solo, Leia

the daughter of Anakin Skywalker and Padme' Amidala, and the younger twin sister to Luke Skywalker, Leia was separated from her brother at birth in an effort to hide their potential Force-sensitivity from Emperor Palpatine. She was taken in by Bail Organa and his wife on the planet Alderaan, where she grew up in the political atmosphere surrounding an Imperial Senator. Leia herself grew proficient in the world of politics, and eventually became a Senator herself. Her mother became Alderaan's Mistress of Education, but died while Leia was still young. Once Leia saw the internal corruption that Emperor Palpatine was fomenting, she quickly turned her idealistic mind to the growing Alliance to Restore the Republic. She became very active in the Alliance, and was chosen to escort the stolen plans to the first Death Star to their final destination. After being captured by Darth Vader and tortured, her homeworld of Alderaan was destroyed by Grand Moff Tarkin. This only hardened her resolve, and crystallized her desire to overthrow the Empire. Following the Battle of Yavin, Leia began to fall in love with Han Solo. The bounty on his life, however, separated them until Leia could gain access to Jabba the Hutt's palace and rescue him, with the help of Luke Skywalker and Lando Calrissian. She then helped the Alliance prepare for the Battle of Endor, and even was a member of Han's ground assault team. Her communication with the Ewoks led to the cooperation of the two forces against the Empire, and helped the Alliance destroy the second Death Star. She then led the team assigned to the Bakura situation, and successfully teamed up with the Imperial forces there to defeat the Ssi-ruuk. During Warlord Zsinj's reign, she appealed to the Hapans for aid in overthrowing Zsinj. They Hapans agreed to help, but only if she were to marry the crown prince, Isolder. This led to the discovery of her love for Han, as well as the Witches of Dathomir. In the end, Isolder shook off his mother's mantle and agreed to help the Alliance without marrying Leia, and he gladly gave her hand to Han Solo. Leia's marriage to Han Solo produced three Force-sensitive children: Jaina and Jacen (twins) and young baby Anakin. She worked hard to keep both Admiral Thrawn and Caridan Ambassador Furgan from kidnapping them by hiding them on Anoth with her childhood friend Winter. Following the birth of Jacen and Jaina, Leia and Luke used their combined powers to destroy the reborn Emperor Palpatine on Byss. After the birth of baby Anakin, Leia assumed the role of Chief of State of the New Republic when Mon Mothma stepped down. However, continued attempts on the lives of her family forced Leia to take a hiatus from leading the Republic at the time when Moff Disra began his power play. This allowed her to assist the New Republic in resolving the situation while allowing her to maintain contact with her family. After she successfully negotiated a peace treaty with Imperial Admiral Pellaeon, Leia resigned her position as Chief of State, but remained a vital part of the government whenever she could. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Leia was one of the strongest voices the New Republic had in identifying the threat and ensuring that there was room for refugees fleeing the warzones. However, the death of Chewbacca at Sernpidal plunged Han into a deep depression, and he grew snappy with his family. Leia tried to understand Han's loss, but was unable to break through. When Han left Coruscant with Roa, Leia became angry with him for trying to keep his destination a secret. When Han returned, only to leave again to locate Roa, Leia refused to have him gallivanting across the galaxy. As Han left, he and Leia had a fight, and they parted on poor terms. Their estrangement deepened in the wake of the Battle of Fondor, when Leia refused to reduce her efforts on behalf of SELCORE to try and patch things up. Han remained at Fondor to help Droma and his family, but would not come back to Coruscant unless Leia agreed to meet with him. Leia was unexpectedly reunited with Han on the planet Duro, as the New Republic tried to bolster the spirits of the refugees by having them help in the reclamation of the planet's surface. Han was helped Droma with settling refugees into their new homes, while Leia was heading up the committee which was directing the clean-up of Duro. They both realized that their petty arguments were nothing compared to what was happening in the rest of the galaxy, and began working to restore their relationship. However, the Yuuzhan Vong attacked Duro, and Leia was captured by the Warmaster Tsavong Lah. In a desperate struggle, Leia and Randa the Hutt tried to escape. The Hutt ultimately gave his life to help Leia, but she was captured by the Warmaster and nearly killed by Tsavong Lah. Jacen's assault forced the Yuuzhan Vong to flee, and Jaina Solo's timely arrival helped save Leia, who had suffered massive blood loss in the fight. Leia ultimately recovered, but only to learn that her son Anakin had died in the mission to kill the voxyn queen at Myrkr. With Chewbacca's death and Han's angry response to it, Leia struggled mightily to try and keep her family from falling apart. Her task wasn't made easier when Jaina decided to become a living example of Yun-Harla and nearly fell to the Dark Side of the Force, nor when Jacen was captured by Vergere and twisted to the Yuuzhan Vong way of life. As the war ground on and months of fighting turned into years, Leia and Han grew closer together through sheer determination. They participated in many missions for the New Republic and the fledgling Galactic Alliance, the primary mission being the re-establishment of the HoloNet communications network. After a strange battle at Esfandia, Leia and Han returned to Mon Calamari only to learn that the Yuuzhan Vong had devised a way to eliminate the HoloNet relay stations using the mabugat kan. With the rediscovery of Zonama Sekot, Leia could only hope that the war might be nearing its end. She had embraced a small portion of her Jedi heritage and often fought with her lightsaber, and although Han seemed to be volunteering for only the most insane of missions, they nonetheless always found their way home. After Zonama Sekot reappeared at Coruscant, Han and Leia traveled from Calamari to Coruscant to be reunited with Luke, Jaina, and Jacen, as well as with Tahiri. Their reunion was short-lived, as Zonama Sekot's return sparked the final battle between the Yuuzhan Vong and the Galactic Alliance. On Coruscant, Leia and Han worked with the priest Harrar to find a way to get inside both the Citadel of Supreme Overlord Shimrra as well as the Well of the World Brain. With Shimrra's death and the destruction of Onimi, the war came to a swift end. Han and Leia returned to Zonama Sekot with the Jedi, to determine what would happen to the living planet. Leia Organa was portrayed by Carrie Fisher in all three Star Wars films. Leia was also portrayed by Ann Sachs for the Star Wars and The Empire Strikes Back Radio Dramas on National Public Radio. (SW, SWR, ESB, ESR, ROTJ, TB, CPL, HTTE, COTF, SOP, VOF, VP, HT, JE, BP, NEGC, FH1, FH3, FP, UF, IS3)

Organa, Bail Prestor

Bail Organa was a youth when the hierarchy of Alderaan was thrown into a huge debate about the ascendancy. There were a number of royal families that held claims to the throne of Viceroy of Alderaan, and each of the families was eager to get its own candidate named to the position. After a lot of political backstabbing and lobbying, the Old Republic was called in and, with the help of the Jedi Knights, finally decided that the Organa family were the rightful successors to the seat of Viceroy. When Bail assumed the title of Viceroy and First Chairman of Alderaan, he also gained a seat on the Imperial Senate, and was soon engrossed in the new form of politics being played by Senator Palpatine and his supporters. Bail quickly asserted himself as a high-ranking graduate from the Academy, and with his wife's support, he began to work toward restoring the Galactic Senate to its former glory. Note that Star Wars Journal: Queen Amidala and the screenplay of The Phantom Menace state that Bail Organa was the first Senator to second Amidala's motion to remove Chancellor Valorum from office with a vote of no confidence, although the novelization of The Phantom Menace states that it was Edcel Bar Gan. Organa found himself oppose to the corruption that was taking over in the Senate, and fought for years to bring the corruption to an end. During the years leading up to the Clone Wars, he was a member of the Loyalist Committee, and did his best to support the efforts of Chancellor Palpatine. It was a daunting task, but one he gladly accepted. Unfortunately, the Clone Wars broke out with the Battle of Geonosis, and Bail found himself thrust into the midst of a war that could tear the galaxy apart. Even in this time of death, he and his wife Brehu - who was the Queen of Alderaan - tried to have children, but her physiology seemed unsuited to pregnancy when she experienced several miscarriages. Bail never gave up hope, in his wife or the Republic. He became famous for his valor in the Clone Wars, where he fought along side the Jedi Knight Obi-Wan Kenobi and the young pilot Anakin Skywalker. However, it soon became evident that Palpatine was growing in power, and that the Old Republic was rotting from the inside out. Organa was desperate, especially after his speech in opposition to the Security and Enforcement Act was met with jeers and cries of treason from his fellow Senators, and turned to the growing resistance as an outlet for his anger. Along with Mon Mothma, Bail worked to solidify the resistance, working behind the scenes to write the Petition of the Two Thousand. The petition fell upon the deaf ears of Chancellor Palpatine, who revealed himself to be none other than Darth Sidious. Organa tried to make it to the Jedi Temple and ensure the protection of the Jedi Order, but arrived shortly after Skywalker began his killing spree. Organa was forced to flee on his speeder or be cut down, after witnessing the death of Zett Jukassa. After young Skywalker became Darth Vader, Obi-Wan Kenobi consulted Bail about hiding Anakin's children from the Emperor. Bail agreed to take in Anakin's wife and daughter. He raised Anakin's daughter as his own, and thereby introduced Leia to the world of Imperial politics and, also, the Alliance. When the Corellian Treaty was being discussed, it was the words of Bria Tharen that persuaded Bail to sign it. As Bail's faith in his daughter grew, he began assigning her more and more Alliance-related missions, until that fateful mission when he asked her to pick up the stolen Death Star plans and enlist Obi-Wan Kenobi out of hiding. When Leia was intercepted by Darth Vader and later tortured aboard the Death Star, Bail continued to assist the Alliance up until Grand Moff Tarkin decided to unveil the Death Star's power by destroying the planet Alderaan in an effort to get Leia to talk. Bail was killed in the destruction. Bail Organa was portrayed by Jimmy Smits in Star Wars Episode II: Attack of the Clones. (SW, SCRE, TPS, RD, JQA, IS1, OWS, RDE, IS3, VD3, E3N)

Organa, Brehu

this woman was the wife of Bail Organa, and the reigning Queen of Alderaan during the last years of the Old Republic. In the wake of the Clone Wars, Brea and Bail gladly agreed to take in the infant daughter of Padme' Amidala, after the Senator from Naboo was killed by her husband, Anakin Skywalker. Is Brehu's maiden name Antilles? It is indicated that she was related to Raymus Antilles. (VD3)

Organa, Celly

one of Bail Organa's sisters, and one of Leia's adopted aunts, Celly was best-known as the Chairman of the Refugee Relief Movement, during the last decade of the Old Republic. She always seemed to talk in riddles when she tutored Leia. (COJ, JPL, HNN4)

Organa, Nial

one of Leia Organa's adopted cousins. (COJ)

Organa, Rouge

one of Bail Organa's sisters, and one of Leia's adopted aunts. (COJ)

Organa, Tia

one of Bail Organa's sisters, and one of Leia's adopted aunts. She was betrothed to a member of House Vandron, but an unknown scandal prevented any marriage. (COJ)

Organarms

this Alliance-backed, deep-space manufacturing facility was destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. The Empire used the Missile Boat, in a demonstration of the new ship's power, to take the platform and much of the supporting fleet. (TIE)

Organic Gill

another name for the Mon Calamari oxygen symbiote. (JASB)

Organium Group

this corporation explored and settled a number of remote worlds during the early years of the New Order. One of their outposts experienced a riot when the spice known as tempest took hold of the population. (TF)

Organ-legger

this was the derogatory term used to describe those smugglers who transported illegally-obtained donor organs across the galaxy, during the early years of the New Republic. (GG11)

Organoform Circuitry

this technology had been theorized and rumored for hundreds of years before it was discovered to be in use on the planet Zonama Sekot, shortly after the Battle of Naboo. It was said that the technology was developed in the Outer Rim, on planets which were technologically advanced and which remained separate from both the Old Republic and the Trade Federation. Organoform circuitry involved the use of crystalline structures formed from organic materials. In some respects, organoform circuitry was alive, since it was created from organic matter. However, it lacked sentience, reacting only to the stimuli it encountered. (RP)

Organoplastics

any organic material whose physical properties allow it to be shaped and molded into a rigid form. Latoprene is an organoplastic. (LCS)

Orgege, Yref

this Imperial Moff was promoted to replace Sarn Shild. Orgege was a stickler for details, but his demand for following the rules slowly managed his commanders into paralysis. Nothing got done without Orgege's say-so, which came only after the appropriate paperwork was completed. (RD)

Orgon

an alien race of intelligent, mobile plants native to the planet Gorsh, the Orgons were sought after by the Genetech Corporation. Genetech wanted to study them for commercial uses, but a usable specimen has yet to be captured. Their central bodies were shaped and formed like shells, and contained the Orgon's brain and vital organs. Trailing from the central shell were six to eight thick tendrils which helped the Orgon move about. While they lack proper eyes, Orgons can sense light around them. They capture their prey by using potent poisons and strong adhesives to trap it, then slowly digest the prey using secreted acids. (PG1)

Orgone Bubbler

this beverage is characterized by a frothy, purple head. (CSWEA)

Orichale

similar to gold, this lustrous yellow metal was found on the planet Naboo. (VD2)

Oricho Sector

this sector of the galaxy was located along the Core-facing border of Lahara Sector, near the Cowl Crucible. (HNN5)

Oridium

a mineral mined in the Arah asteroid plant. (RA2)

Orido Aishara

a musician who performed during the middle years of the Old Republic. (TME)

Original Light

an almost religious reference to the beginning of the universe, with connotations of the Big Bang. (HSE)

Orin

the hostile, uninhabitable, second planet in the Bespin system, Orin was knocked from its original orbit when the Velsar's Ring asteroid belt was formed a millennium before the Battle of Yavin. As a result, Orin's orbit has become extremely erratic. Its elliptical orbit drags it through Velsar's Ring twice during each of its years, blasting the planet with asteroid debris and causing intense seismic activity. (GG2)

Orin Mersai

a musician performing during the Galactic Civil War. (TME)

Orin, Aglar

this former Imperial TIE Fighter pilot decided that, if he was going to risk his life, he might as well get paid well for it. He resigned his commission and became a bounty hunter. He was known for his incessant bragging and his ability to take insane risks and survive. (GG10)

O-Rina

this Keganite woman was a member of the Hospitality Guides, and was assigned to escort Qui-Gon Jinn, Adi Gallia, and their padawans, Obi-Wan Kenobi and Siri, during their mission to locate O-Lana. (FFT)

Orinackra

a planet which was the site of an Imperial detention facility during the Galactic Civil War. Crix Madine was imprisoned there just before the Battle of Yavin, until he was rescued by Kyle Katarn. (DF)

Orinda

this small planet was taken by Admiral Pellaeon and the Imperial forces, and the New Republic was slow to respond. Orinda remained under Imperial control, despite the efforts of General Wedge Antilles and the Lusankya, until the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy. The Imperial Remnant joined the Galactic Federation of Free Alliances, and allowed Orinda to serve as a meeting place for their combined navies. (BTS, ECH, FH2)

Orini, Trinna

this slightly-built woman was one of the best sharpshooters to join the Alliance in the wave of enrollments which occurred shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (GMK)

Oriolanis Defense Systems, Limited

this minor weapons manufacturer produced a variety of low-tech, non-energy weapons during the height of the New Order. (EGW)

Orion IV

this planet was the site of an Alliance base, just prior to the Battle of Yavin. The base was destroyed by Imperial forces. (XW)

Orion-class Starship

an old-fashioned spacecraft which employed a dangerous, ion-particle sublight drive. (RPG, GG7)

Oris

this ball of nickel-iron plates was the innermost planet of the Gorothe System. Ancient Gorothe legend claims that Oris was sheltered in the fiery skirts of K'Len, and the name Oris was the ancient word for birth of dawn. The planet was just 2,950 kilometers in diameter, and orbited very close to Gorothe Alpha. A day on Oris lasted about 31 hours, although it was discovered that this day was actually growing smaller, giving rise to the theory that Oris was not one of the original planets of the system but was, instead, caught by the gravity of Gorothe Alpha. (GSE)

Orix

this gruff Trandosha worked as a thug and strong arm for Nirama, during the last years of the Old Republic. (WOA4)

Orkana

this polluted section of the planet Tatooine was the site of Orko the H'uun's base. It was a toxic wasteland created by the dumping of materials which were by-products of Orko's various dealings. The humans there had evolved over the generations into mutated creatures who lived squalid lives among the refuse. (BF) known as Orko the Foultrader, this Hutt was a member of the H'uun class. Orko was a rival of Gorga the Hutt, until Gorga desired Orko's daughter's hand in marriage. Gorga had Boba Fett kill Bar-Kooda, a pirate who had been harassing Orko's shipments. Gorga then served up Bar-Kooda as the main course at a dinner for Orko at his palace on Orkana. Orko was pleased, although no less impressed, with the offering, and allowed Gorga to marry Anachro. The feud between Orko and Gorga continued, at a reduced pace, until Bar-Kooda's brother, Ry-Kooda, heard about his brother's death. The Koodan set out to kill off everyone involved, and nearly succeeded on Skeebo. Boba Fett intervened, taking out the Koodan before he could do any damage. Unfortunately for Orko, Ry-Kooda was not killed. The Koodan tracked Orko to his palace, and killed off all the guards before killing - and eating - Orko. (BF)

Orko

Orko Consortium

this was another name for the Orko SkyMine operation run by Durga the Hutt. (TFNR)

Orko SkyMine

an asteroid mining company used as a front for the Hutt criminal to funnel expenses. They used it to tap the resources of the Hoth asteroid belt. Durga the Hutt used it to supply resources to the Darksaber project. (DS)

Orlan, Benald

this noted Imperial spy, native to the planet Quian, was the son of New Republic Admiral Karin Orlan. Benald received his education on Marngar III, at the Thene campus of the Imperial University on the planet. He graduated with honors, but initially took a job as a clerk for Galaxy Tours before becoming an informant for the Empire. He was so dedicated to the New Order that he turned his own father into the Imperial authorities for sympathizing with the Alliance. His father was later executed, after the Empire learned that his mother had defected to the Alliance and was a member of their command structure. Benald himself showed no remorse or compassion for his parents, believing them to be traitors to the Empire even in the wake of the Battle of Endor. For his parts in the deaths of his family and several other Republic agents, Benald was a wanted man. (SWJ4)

Orlan, Karin

this woman was a native of the planet Quian, and a supporter of the beliefs of the Old Republic. Shortly after the Battle of Yavin, she defected to the Alliance, leaving her husband and children on Quian. Little did she know that her son, Benald, had become enamored of the New Order and had informed the local Imperial authorities of his parents' sympathies. After she was promoted to Lieutenant within the Alliance's command structure, Imperial forces wiped out her husband and children on Benald's information. Karin later earned the rank of Admiral in the New Republic Navy, but was unaware of Benald's activities until the New Republic Intelligence agency revealed his part in the deaths of several other Republic agents. (SWJ4)

Orlanis, Trista

this young woman was a graduate student of xenoarcheology at the University of Agamar during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. She was one of the student leaders of the team which traveled to Bimmial with Anki Pace, to search for Jedi artifacts. Trista had a slender build and long, black hair. She was attracted to Ganner Rhysode, when he and Corran Horn traveled to Bimmial to check on the group's status. Trista was one of the first beings to encounter the slashrats which were native to Bimmial, and documented their activities. (DTO)

Orl-ar

one of the six Tiss'shar races, the Orl-ar were characterized by their deep green scales, which are marked by jagged yellow-orange stripes. (UANT)

Orlean

this long-defunct starship manufacturer developed some of the most durable starships ever built, including the Star Cab exploration vehicle. (GG8)

Orleon

this obscure planet was covered with swampland and muddy plains. The surface of the planet was constantly changing, as frequent rainstorms soaked the ground and caused mudslides and floods. Many historians believed that the first stone mites appeared on Orleon. It was here that Jabba The Hut met up with Han Solo, before Solo was captured on Cloud City by Boba Fett. Note that, in the Marvel Comics series, which occurred prior to the release of The Empire Strikes Back, Jabba was an Imzig- or Nimbanel-like humanoid who could move about quite well on two feet. After his ship, the Voidraker, was disabled by stone mites, Jabba had to come aboard the Millennium Falcon in order to survive. Jabba then cleared Solo's debt, and canceled all bounties on his head, in return for his own life. Note that this event was proven apocryphal with the release of Star Wars: Episode VI - Return of the Jedi., although it was entirely possible that Jabba reneged on the deal as soon as he was safe. (LTA2, MC28)

Orline

this planet, the third world in the Caridan System, was covered with seas of liquid methane. Orline was orbited by a single moon. (PH)

Orllincus, Evar

this prominent Imperial General was captured by Alliance Special Forces agents while inspecting the Imperial garrison on Prishella III. (ROE)

Orloc

this cloaked man tried to steal Obi-Wan Kenobi's lightsaber from Bast Castle, Darth Vader's fortress on Vjun, some twenty-two years after the Sith Lord killed the Jedi on the first Death Star. During the early years of the New Republic, Orloc remained hidden on Exis Station, searching for the lost lore of the Jedi and the Sith. He posed as a master of the Dark Side of the Force, but he actually had very little sensitivity to the Force. He always wore a purple robe, into which he had woven control buttons and a variety of gadgets. These gadgets allowed him to control his surroundings, giving him the appearance of using the Force to manipulate objects. When he learned of the possibility that Kenobi's blade was on Vjun, Orloc made a quick trip to Vjun to verify the rumor. He was amazed to find that the Jedi Master Tionne had also heard the rumors, and had prepared for the possibility that the Jedi might also turn up on Vjun. Tionne arrived shortly after Orloc, along with fellow Jedi Master Ikrit and three students - Anakin Solo, Tahiri Veila, and Uldir Lochett. However, Orloc's lack of real power kept him from being able to obtain the artifact. Hoping to use the young boy Uldir as an unwitting accomplice, Orloc promised the boy more power than he could imagine if he was able to penetrate the fortress and steal the lightsaber. However, Uldir was rescued by Tionne and Ikrit, and the lightsaber was returned to Yavin 4. Also located during the rescue was a Jedi Holocron, which was turned over to Luke Skywalker. Orloc and his mercenaries fled into space, returning to their base of operations on Exis Station. On Exis, Orloc reprogrammed all of the droids to do his bidding, leaving his own time free to develop new ways to pretend to use the Force. Throughout his self-imposed exile, Orloc dreamed of capturing Kenobi's weapon and the Jedi Holocron he had encountered on Vjun. Uldir, hoping to redeem himself and prove that he could use the Force, stole the Kenobi lightsaber from the Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4 and traveled to Exis Station, hoping to gain favor with - and training from - Orloc. However, when he realized that Orloc was offering empty promises, Uldir turned the table on him and helped the Jedi defeat Orloc and recover the lightsaber. With his false contact with the Force revealed, Orloc again fled into the depths of space. (ECH, VF, KB)

Orlok

an Imperial Commander, Orlok was in charge of the Imperial training center on Daluuj. He hunted the Mon Calamari that were stranded on the swampworld, including Ackbar. He hoped the recapture of Ackbar would gain him prestige within the Imperial ranks. He was killed when Ackbar lured his troops into the swampy water, where they were attacked by the huge water-worms. (CSW)

Orma

this was the most devout of the Aramandi akia, following the tenets of the Eeronon to the letter. They also discovered and settled their own star system, in accordance with the Eeronon's instructions to leave Aram and find their own worlds. (AE)

Orma System

this planetary system, located in Brak Sector, was located in the restricted Aramand Cluster. (FBS)

Ormachek

a food source used by the Mon Calamari. It is often frozen and shipped off-planet. (BTS)

Orman

this male Chev was one of the free slaves living off Vinsoth. A shrewd businessman, Orman lived on Lianna, operating deftly in the galactic black market. He has died his skin blue and his hair silver. He was the owner of Orman's Sky Palace. However, Orman was not above selling out a customer to the Empire if the price was right. He employed a group of thugs and guards to protect his investments. (GG12, ML)

Ormann Bomu

this Rodian soldier was a member of the Bomu clan, and worked for Zonnos the Hutt during the early years of the New Order. Ormann worked with his brother, Heedran, aboard the light freighter Vengeance during his tenure with Zonnos, leading the boarding parties that raided enemy ships. The pair was dispatched by Zonnos to intercept the freelance agents who had been hired by Zonnos' parent, Popara the Hutt, to rescue Mika from Endregaad. Unfortunately, the agents proved to be more resourceful than the Rodians had anticipated. In the firefight that occurred during the boarding operation, Ormann was killed and the remaining Rodians captured and turned over to the Corporate Sector Authority. (TF)

Orman's Sky Palace

this hangout, found on the planet Lianna, was popular with spacers. It was owned by the Chevin Orman. A huge bar dominates the main floor, made of polished lizard hides from Cadinth. (ML)

Ormarda

this was a common name among the Ryn. (UANT)

Ormoj

this was one of the more common names given to Cragmoloid individuals. (UANT)

Orn

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name meant "bird of prey". (GCG)

Orn

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Orn Free Taa

this obese, Rutian Twi'lek was a Senator to the Old Republic. He was most noted for the Lethan Twi'lek consorts he maintained, rather than his politics. Taa was as corrupt as a Senator could be, and used his position to indulge in his every whim. He was somewhat unusual for a Twi'lek, as he had four thick head-tails instead of just two. These misshapen head-tails stored fat like the rest of his body. During the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo, Senator Taa was one of Finis Valorum's most vocal rivals, and took every opportunity to needle the Chancellor in public and political forums. It was during this time that Orn Free Taa became one of Senator Palpatine's supporters, although he found himself floundering after Palpatine was voted Supreme Chancellor. In the years leading up to the Clone Wars, Orn Free Taa continued to support Palpatine, and proved himself to be a stickler for the letter of the law. When the Military Creation Act came up for a vote, it was Senator Orn Free Taa who demanded that the vote be delayed, after Senator Padme' Amidala was nearly assassinated. He had hoped to carry the vote through, but Amidala's speeches only served to shake the resolve of those Senators who had not committed to one side or the other. Ultimately, the vote was taken, but only as a courtesy after it was learned that the Separatists had amassed a huge army on Geonosis. In the following months and years, Orn Free Taa voted regularly for legislation that seemed to maintain or improve Chancellor Palpatine's base of power, and was one of the first to recommend that the Jedi Order be augmented with a dedicated police force. After the apparent death of Master Yoda at Ithor - a complicated ruse involving Palleus Chuff - Orn Free Taa took the matter to the Senate, demanding the formation of a security force that would answer solely to Palpatine himself, and dedicated to the protection of the Galactic Senate and the Chancellor. Note that the Episode I Insider's Guide CD doesn't give a species for Orn Free Taa, stating that his species was distinguished by its large ear flaps, which stored excess fat for later consumption. Orn Free Taa was portrayed by Matt Rowan in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones and in Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (IG1, OWS, COD, AOTCN, OWS, YDR)

Orn Kios

this planet was located in the Yarith Sector of the galaxy. Much of the planet was covered by water, and the settlers who lived on Orn Kios built lightweight shelters atop huge lily pads. The planet's economy was based on fishing. (WOA33)

Orn, Kalebb

this man worked his entire life on Mechis III, as an assembly line monitor. He was of the opinion that his presence wasn't needed on the planet, since all the systems were heavily automated and self-designing. His superiors, however, required periodic human intervention and inspection of all processes on the line, so Orn was hired for that purpose seventeen years before the Battle of Hoth. Orn was on duty when IG-88 arrived at Mechis III and began reprogramming the security networks. Part of the new programming included the elimination of any organic life on the planet, and four worker droids pulled Orn apart before he could escape. (TBH)

Orna Meng

this Skakoan individual was noted in the histories of the planet Skako. (UANT)

Ornik

this was one of the Alliance's Nebulon-B frigates, active during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Oro

this pink-skinned Mon Calamari was one of Mon Mothma's closest advisors until Luke Skywalker discovered Oro was a spy, working for Imperial Governor Parnell. It was later discovered that Oro had leaked word of the Alliance's interest in Erling Tredway to Parnell, who quickly moved to imprison Erling on Tol Ado. After Erling's rescue, Oro was arrested and placed in prison by the Alliance. (JH)

Oro

codename of a group of T-Wing starfighters destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Oro Otel

this male Sullustan scout was a member of the Alliance's Gray Griffins, and was one of the team captured by the Scourge pirates. (OE)

Oro-arys

this was the Snivvian word for "music." (HNN5)

Orogor Binn

this Aqualish and his family fled Coruscant when his homeworld of Ando seceded from the Old Republic, shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars. Orogor Binn ended up on Alderaan, but longed to return to Ando. (HNN4)

Orok

this was one of the many family names used by the Bothan people. It translated loosely to "builder", "architect", or "mason". (GCG, WOTC)

Oron

this New Republic archaeologist and his daughter Meela lived on Delari Prime. Professor Oron was called upon when a team of agents - originally sent to Tuulab to ferret out Mahk'khar - stumbled upon a series of Kashi Mer ruins. Oron had established his base of operations in a former Imperial relay station. (SWJ6)

Oron Kira

son of Modon Kira, and prince of the Beastmasters, Oron was secretly entering the city of Iziz as a kind of spy for many years before Ulic Qel-Droma came to the planet. He once met the Onderonian princess Galia on one of his missions, and they fell in love. Together they arranged a false kidnapping attempt on Galia's life in order to be together. Their plan almost worked flawlessly, except that Ulic - along with his brother Cay and Tott Doneeta - followed them back to the Beastmaster city. There they learned of Oron's love for Galia, and also of the Dark Side influences working on Onderon. Oron and Galia were later married, following Queen Amanoa's death, and the peoples of Onderon were united. (TOJ)

Oront

this was one of the largest cities found on the planet Elom. (HNN4)

Oront

this was a common name among the Elom race, based on the name of the city of Oront. (UANT)

Orooturoo

this planet, located in the Core Worlds near the Koornacht Cluster, was the homeworld of Princess Nampi. (JTH, CCW)

Ororo Transportation

this organization was a front company for the Tenloss Syndicate during the Galactic Civil War. Ororo tried to horn in on Black Sun's spice trade shortly after the Battle of Hoth. Xizor sent Guri to deliver a message to the operation, during which she exterminated three of Ororo's highest-placed officials. To further emphasize his displeasure, Xizor gave Darth Vader the coordinates of an Ororo shipyard in the Vergesso Asteroid Field, telling the Dark Lord that the coordinates represented an Alliance shipyard. The shipyard was destroyed by Vader's fleet. In the wake of the Battle of Endor and the downfall of Black Sun, Ororo was expanded by the Tenloss Syndicate and used to provide transportation services for the Syndicate's many operations. Ororo's headquarters were located on Eredin. (SE, GG11)

Orotay

a barely-palatable beverage, orotay found acceptance among the armed forces of the New Republic because it helped them stay alert. Ronks were found to be allergic to it. Following the Battle of Endor, orotay production fell off, and the price began to rise. (XWRS)

Orotoru G'am

this was one of the many floating cities found on the planet Calamari. During the last decades of the Old Republic, a podrace was held that wound through its streets. (GMR10)

Orowood Medcenter

this hospital and medical center was located in Orowood Towers, on the planet Coruscant. The staff was made up of doctors and physicians who were either natives of Alderaan or sympathetic to them. (REC)

Orowood Tower

this large building was built on Coruscant to house survivors of the destruction of Alderaan. It was painstakingly built and crafted to resemble as much of Alderaanian architecture as possible. However, many of the survivors decided that living on Coruscant, close to the Imperial Palace and the memories of Emperor Palpatine, was too emotionally difficult. After the reign of terror of Grand Admiral Thrawn, all the remaining Alderaanians abandoned the Tower, and it became a business center. The Tower itself was 38-levels tall; the third level of the Tower held airspeeder parking pads, and the fourth level held five tapcafes. (SOP)

Orphan Hall

this was the term used by the Jedi Knights who served in the Clone Wars, to describe the quarters aboard Acclamator-class troopships where children - orphaned by the battles - were held until they could be relocated. (BF2)

Orr Agg R'orr

this Tusken Raider was one of the many who lined the Mos Espa podracing course during the fateful Boonta Eve Classic race that was won by Anakin Skywalker, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. He fired several shots at the racers as they wound through the course, one of which was believed to have hit the podracer of Teemto Pagalies. The Pagalies family issued a bounty for his capture, since Teemto's failure to finish cost them a lot of credits. The bounty was claimed by Jango Fett several years later, when the bounty hunter was on Tatooine to gain an audience with Gardulla and Jabba. (BH)

Orr, Alijah

this Imperial Customs Officer was one of the most powerful men in the Shesharile System during the height of the New Order. Only the local governor had more power. Orr was in charge of all in-system customs, and had the ability to confiscate and search any ships passing through Shesharile. In order to keep Orr happy, the local businessmen and trade cartels constantly invited him to parties and galas, and showered him with gifts. All of this was amusing to Orr, who was a rigid Imperial officer who believed in the exact letter of the law. This trait kept him from advancing beyond the rank of Captain, for his superiors were looking for men they could bend to their wills. His only known vice was an occasional smoke of tabacc, enjoyed through a carved bantha-bone pipe. Orr sought to advance in his position by wiping out all smuggling in the system, and was focused on capturing Shamus Falconi. This is something that Orr uncharacteristically was unable to do. (SWJ9)

orral

this Shyriiwook word was used as the suffix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "treasure" or "worthy". It could be attached to a prefix by itself, or combined with other suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Orramas

this luxury space liner made a regular run between Coruscant and several Rim planets, with a stop at Star Station 9, during the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. Abal Karda fled Star Station 9 aboard this ship, disguised as a Duhman, before landing on Maryx Minor. The Captain of the ship told Boba Fett that Karda had demanded to be let off at Maryx Minor, even though the planet wasn't on the ship's regular run. However, a meteor shower knocked out the Orramas' gyro system, and forced the Captain to land for repairs. The nearest world just happened to be Maryx Minor. (EOE)

Orray

this large beast was used as a mount by Geonosian warriors. The average orray resembled a crocodilian reptile which moved about on four tall legs. The orray was once a predator of the Geonosians themselves, rooting out the newly-filled hives and eating the eggs of thousands of larvae. Over the generations, the orrays have been domesticated by the Geonosians. The tail of wild orrays was tipped with a long stinger, which was bobbed in domestic orrays. The Geonosians capped the tail with a metal fitting, to prevent it from regrowing the stinger. (AOTCN, VD2, SWI63)

Orrh Or'Ur

this Tusken Raider was among a tribe that made repeated raids against the holdings of Gardulla the Hutt, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Gardulla discovered that her own people were unable to locate and capture the tribe, so she issued a bounty for their capture. Jango Fett claimed several of these bounties when he was on Tatooine, trying to gain an audience with Gardulla and Jabba. (BH)

Orrimaarko

this Dresselian was the first to be given command of an Alliance Special Forces Unit. He was part of the Alliance team which assembled near Sullust, just prior to the Battle of Endor, to plan the assault on the second Death Star's shield generator. He was frustrated with the fact that the Alliance chose humans for its generals and leaders, especially the choices of Han Solo and Lando Calrissian. Orrimaarko felt that rank should be awarded by experience, not being in the right place at the right time. (GG12, EGA)

Orriorr

this was one of the many small communities that were created by the Wookiees of the planet Kashyyyk. Its economy was focused on the harvesting and sale of agricultural goods on Kashyyyk itself. (GMR4)

Orrk

this guildmaster from Vandelhelm allowed Mordur to remain hidden in a converted drone barge orbiting the planet. As a guildmaster, Orrk was in control of Vandelhelm's metalsmiths, and was under suspicion by the New Republic. He had agreed to provide the Republic with raw ores and materials for the newly-reclaimed Fondor shipyards, but the delivery of the ores was constantly delayed. Han Solo was sent to Vandelhelm with the young Venerated Ones to persuade Orrk to mend his ways, but Orrk tried to kidnap them when they arrived. He fell to his death trying to capture the Venerated Ones. (VM, MC98)

Orr-Om

this was one of the twenty orbital cities established by the Duros, after they abandoned their homeworld's surface. It was one of the few which were unshielded, and so it was virtually undefended during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Thus, when the alien invaders attacked Duro, Orr-Om was one of the first to be disabled and destroyed. (BP)

Orroman

this planet was plunged into a water crisis by the actions of the Happy Blasters gang, shortly after the Battle of Endor. (SWJ13)

Orron III

an agricultural world that is home to the Corporate Sector Authority's Data Center. Only two types of ships are allowed passage to the planet: drone barges for transporting crops off the planet, and Authority fleet ships. Han Solo agrees to pick up Rekkon there, and Jessa disguises the Millennium Falcon as a grain barge in order to get Han onto the planet. (HSE)

Orrsa

this friendly Wookiee tended bar at the Swirling Vortex cantina, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (GMR2)

Orrtug

one of Jabba's Gamorrean guards. He was one of the guards who accompanied Bidlo Kwerve into the Dune Sea of Tatooine to recover the Rancor found in Captain Grizzid's wrecked ship. Orrtug was the first to discover the rancor's existence, and was nearly killed by it. This brought him great pleasure, and some celebrity on Gamor. (SWSB, TJP)

Orr'UrRuuR'R

this Tusken Raider was in charge of the small groups which lined the racecourse during the Boonta Eve Classic pod races, hoping to take out the loud vehicles and their alien drivers, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (YJC5)

Orryxia

a planet. (TBSB)

Orryxian

a feline race. (GG9)

Orryxian Catsblood

an alcoholic beverage favored in the Outer Rim. (GG9)

Ors, Jan

an Alliance operative used heavily during the early years of the Galactic Civil War, Jan Ors was a native of the planet Alderaan. She learned to dance from her mother, who worked as a choreographer for Alderaan's premier ballet company. She learned how to work on starships from her father, who was an aerospace engineer. During a mission aboard the Star of Empire, Jan was captured by the Empire when her cover was blown. Imprisoned without hope, she found an ear to bend when she met Kyle Katarn. Realizing Kyle's ambivalence toward the Empire, she cultivated a relationship with him until he agreed to help her escape from the prison. When they finally escaped, Jan Ors met with Mon Mothma and persuaded the Alliance leader to hire Kyle Katarn as a mercenary and commando. It was rumored that Jan exaggerated Kyle's trustworthiness in order to convince the leader of the Alliance of what she truly felt in her heart. Shortly thereafter, Jan was captured by Jabba the Hutt and held as a bargaining chip against the Alliance, until she was again rescued by Kyle Katarn. She became one of the few people Kyle trusted, and was also one of the few people he could count on to help him get out of sticky situations. The relationship between Jan and Kyle continued to grow, and they became a formidable team of agents. They continued to work together during the era of the New Republic, until Kyle went to Yavin 4 to train as a Jedi. Jan continued to work for the Republic, taking a position on the Alpha Blue team and eventually succeeding Hiram Drayson as the team's leader, until she was reunited with Kyle shortly before the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. It was during the invasion that Kyle first asked Jan to marry him, and his initial reasoning caused her to decline the offer. She didn't want to get married because they might die any day. She told Kyle that she would marry him when they were ready to get out of the military and settle down to raise a family. After Kyle disappeared following the Yuuzhan Vong War, Jan spent much of her free time with Jaden Korr, hoping that his bond to the Force could help her locate Kyle. They found him in the Cloak of the Sith, where he had captured by Daye Azur-Jamin. After they managed to free Kyle and restore Daye to the Light Side of the Force, the group learned of a Force-sensitive Yuuzhan Vong female, and set out to locate her. (DF, DF2, SFE, T21, WOTC) this man served the Imperial Navy as Captain of the Star Destroyer Dauntless. He was in command of the ship when he was dispatched to escort Lira Wessex to Cloud City, to meet with Doctor Vreen about taking control of the X0-X1 prototype. (CCC)

Orsk

Ort Hoogra-D'En

this Ho'Din was born on the planet Moltok, but spent much of his childhood on Anemcoro. His work on the planet included the cultivation and propagation of several rare species of plants. When the Empire "accidentally" fired on Anemcoro while trying to halt the civil war raging between two neighboring planets, his work was destroyed in the fires that swept the planet, and he vowed to make them pay for their actions. Along with Tergeth Dilorr and Babel Senjorg, Hoogra-D'En began bombing Imperial locations in the Outer Rim with spore bombs of his own design. The Empire put out a bounty on Hoogra-D'En, who was later captured on Pallaxides when he tried to hide out in his base. (ND)

Orth Maag

this Zabrak worked as the bartender of The Hutt's Last Laugh, on the planet Jenenma. He had worked at The Laugh for many years, and was well aware of the criminal organization headed by Pal-Nada. He knew enough to keep his mouth shut, though, and never managed to cross Pal-Nada's thugs. Orth Maag did offer assistance to a group of freelance operatives who were tracking down their stolen starship, leading them to a meeting with Esm. (WOA19)

Orthan

this was a common name used by the Omwati people. (UANT)

Orthavan

this was one of the Mon Calamari MC80a cruisers operated by the New Republic during the fight against Grand Admiral Thrawn. During an Imperial attack on Filve, the Orthavan took heavy damage when the Republic's ships were trapped by an Interdictor Cruiser. Garm Bel Iblis' was leading the defense, and was nearly forced to abandon the cruiser in order to get the rest of his forces free of the system. Only the sudden appearance of Pash Cracken's A-Wing squadron saved the Orthavan, as the small fighters harassed the Imperial enough to force them to break off their ambush. (TLC)

a race native to the Binarran Cloud. (DFRSB)

Orthodox Halbara Style

this hairstyle, popular among the rich and influential humanoids of the galaxy during the years leading up to the Clone Wars, used hairsprays and gels to hold two cones of hair straight out from the sides of the head. A tight cap of hair remained close to the skull, with the two cones curving upward and coming to a point. (VD2)

Ortin

this young man worked for the police force that protected the city of Gadrin, on the planet Cularin, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Orto primary planet in the Orto system, it is a cold world orbiting a red dwarf star. It is the homeworld of the Ortolan race. Water is plentiful on Orto, but most of it is locked in polar icecaps. The only arable land is located along the planet's equator. When scientists found a huge crater buried under the northern polar ice cap, they built a theory that the planet had been hit eons ago by a large body. This impact caused the planet to undergo numerous ecological and physical changes: dust from the collision clogging the atmosphere, the impact knocking the planet out of its original orbit, and the force of the impact creating a new axial tilt. Thus, Orto is the inhospitable planet it is today, although its thin atmosphere is rich in oxygen. The average day on Orto lasts about 24 standard hours, and its year lasts 589 local days. (GG4)

Orto Culinary Academy

this culinary school, based on the planet Orto, produced some of the Old Republic's finest chefs. (HNN5)

Orto, Wyrn

this man represented Galentro Heavy Works at the Pentastar Talks, shortly after the Battle of Endor. While Orto agreed with the necessity of forming the Pentastar Alignment, he worried that Moff Ardus Kaine was using the treaty as a vehicle for gaining personal power. Orto was unswervingly loyal to Galentro, believing that the corporation was his only true family. (SWJ3)

Ortola, Tresk

a student of the Imperial Academy, Tresk and a group of friends jumped ship to join the Alliance. He became known for his bold actions in the midst of battle, and his success rate earned him a swift promotion to Captain. He commanded the NovaFlare prior to the Battle of Endor. Following the fall of the Empire, Ortola continued to serve the New Republic as a Captain, assisting Wedge Antilles in the attempt to take over the Maw Installation. (COTF, JASB)

Ortolan

this is a race of blue-furred, elephantine bipeds native to the planet Orto. They have floppy ears and pudgy fingers, and are known for their insatiable appetites. They are descended from a nocturnal race of creatures, and retain many of their original characteristics. Their eyesight is excellent in dim light, but bright lights hurt them. Their ears are sensitive to sound waves, and their noses are filled with tympanic organs that increase their sense of hearing. The normal mode of conversation among the Ortolans is conducted at subsonic levels, with sounds being emitted through their noses. Their noses also contain sensitive olfactory organs. A small mouth is located beneath their nose. Infant Ortolans are born almost fully developed, and are raised until the age of seven. At that time, most are thrown out of their parents' homes to fend for themselves. In the distant past, after Orto was struck by a large mass, the Ortolan race was much smaller. They managed to survive the devastation because they ate very little, while the larger predators starved to death. Over time, their brains continued to develop, and they developed a basic technology and a high level of industrialization. Note that X-Wing: Solo Command includes a reference to a pink-skinned Ortolan. (ROTJ, GG4, SOC, EGA)

Ortugg

this was a common male name among the Gamorrean people. Like most Gamorrean names, it was essentially gibberish that indicated what a Gamorrean would do if you made him angry. (GCG)

Ortugg

this Gamorrean was the Captain of Jabba the Hutt's personal guard at his palace in the desert of Tatooine. In addition to his duty of guarding the main entrance to the palace, Jabba had assigned Ortugg to keep an eye on Tessek. When Luke Skywalker first entered Jabba's palace, Ortugg tried to stop him. Luke used the Force to choke the Gamorrean, holding him at bay until he reached Jabba's audience chamber. In the wake of Jabba's death at the Pit of Carkoon, Ortugg and his soldiers tried to hold Jabba's palace against invasion and break-in. They considered it an honor to hold the palace until Jabba's return, despite the fact that the crimelord was actually dead. (TJP, CCG7, RESB)

this was the designation of one of the TIE Fighters dispatched by Admiral Piett to pursue the Millennium Falcon when it escaped from Cloud City, just after the Battle of Hoth. (TCG6)

Osaji Hux

this was one of Osaji Shimka's three triplet heirs, all of whom inherited an equal share of the Osaji Syndicate when their father was assassinated on Axum some three years before the Battle of Hoth. As part of their inheritance, each sibling received a pendant made of green stone, to identify them as members of the family. Osaji Hux was considered a recluse who only communicated through his brother, Osaji Uhares. However, many beings considered Osaji Hux to be the true boss of the Syndicate, once Osaji Shimka was dead. In order to protect her interests, Osaji Hux moved her base of operations to the remote world of Muskree. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, all three siblings found themselves the objects of unwanted attention. They were all wanted for questioning by the Imperial authorities, and they were targeted for assassination by an unknown source. After the deaths of her brothers, Osaji Hux revealed to the freelance mercenaries that she had been the being who hired them, as a way to eliminate any contention for control of the Osaji Syndicate. As she was about to kill the mercenaries, the Imperials who had been tracking her arrived on Muskree. A firefight broke out, and Osaji Hux found herself alone after her bodyguards fled at the sight of Imperial stormtroopers. However, in the resulting confusion, Osaji Hux managed to escape from Muskree and was not heard from again. (WOA32)

Osaji Shimka

this man was the patriarch of the Osaji Syndicate during the height of the New Order. Some three years before the Battle of Hoth, he was assassinated on Axum, and control of the Syndicate fell to his fraternal triplets, Osaji Varane, Osaji Uhares, and Osaji Hux. (WOA32)

Osaji Syndicate

this family owned and operated organization made an honest living by offering cut-rate shipping along the Perlemian Trade Route during the height of the New Order. However, their more lucrative business revolved around smuggling and gun-running. Three years after the death of clan patriarch Osaji Shimka, a group of mercenaries was hired to assassinate his three heirs. Osaji Varan, Osaji Uhares, and Osaji Hux were natural-born triplets, and each had inherited an equal share of the Syndicate. (WOA32)

Osaji Uhares

this was one of Osaji Shimka's three triplet heirs, all of whom inherited an equal share of the Osaji Syndicate when their father was assassinated on Axum some three years before the Battle of Hoth. As part of their inheritance, each sibling received a pendant made of green stone, to identify them as members of the family. A former droid researcher and engineer, Osaji Uhares assumed control of the Syndicate's illegal operations after the death of his father, preferring to keep a low profile from a base of operations on Centares. He was distinguished by the cybernetic hand which he had modified with a double-tool mount as well as a weapon mount. His compound was located on the shores of Rubyflame Lake, and were protected by the various combat droids he had repaired over the years. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, all three brothers found themselves the objects of unwanted attention. They were all wanted for questioning by the Imperial authorities, and they were targetted for assassination by an unknown source. After Osaji Varanes was assassinated on Tirahnn, his assistant Harn provided the freelance mercenaries with information on Osaji Uhares' location. Despite his many defense systems, Osaji Uhares was eventually caught by the mercenaries and eliminated. One of his many couriers, a street urchin named Fijil, gave the mercenaries information on the whereabouts of the one surviving sibling, Osaji Hux. However, upon reaching Muskree and locating Osaji Hux, the mercenaries discovered that they had actually been hired by Osaji Hux herself, who simply wanted to eliminate and contention for control of the Osaji Syndicate. (WOA32)

Osaji Varanes

this was one of Osaji Shimka's three triplet heirs, all of whom inherited an equal share of the Osaji Syndicate when their father was assassinated on Axum some three years before the Battle of Hoth. As part of their inheritance, each sibling received a pendant made of green stone, to identify them as members of the family. It was rumored that Osaji Varanes had been a sniper in the Imperial Army before "retiring" to help run the family business. He spent much of his time on the planet Tirahnn, where he had established a thriving import-export business that served as the center of the Osaji Syndicate's legitimate operations. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, all three brothers found themselves the objects of unwanted attention. They were all wanted for questioning by the Imperial authorities, and they were targetted for assassination by an unknown source. Whether good or bad, the freelance mercenaries were the first party to apprehend Osaji Varanes, eliminating him and capturing his assistant, Harn, who gave up information on the location of Osaji Uhares in exchange for his own life. Later, upon reaching Muskree and locating Osaji Hux, the mercenaries discovered that they had actually been hired by Osaji Hux herself, who simply wanted to eliminate and contention for control of the Osaji Syndicate. (WOA32)

Osa-Prime

this is the capital city of the planet Osarian. Nom Anor launched a missile strike against the city, when Rhommamool and Osarian were at their orbital closest, in an effort to engage them in a civil war that would draw the attention of the New Republic away from the Yuuzhan Vong base on Helska and the start of their invasion. Much of the city was destroyed before Commander Ackdool and the Mediator could react to the launch, much to the consternation of the Osarians. (VP)

Osarian

this is the name of the native race of the planet Osarian. (VP)

Osarian

this planet orbited its star in an ellipse that brought it very close to Rhommamool every ten years. Like Rhommamool, Osarian was not a technologically-advanced world when it petitioned the New Republic to mediate a centuries-old feud which had been refueled by Nom Anor. The feud sprang from the fact that Osarian was a pleasant, temperate world, while Rhommamool was a desolate place originally colonized by criminals sentenced to work in the mines. The Osarians who settled on the planet were more or less the wardens and caretakers of the mining colonists of Rhommamool, a kind of master-slave relationship that wore relations between the two planets quite thin. Neither planet had developed the ability to travel through space, and the Osarians employed a mercenary band of Rodians to protect themselves from Rhommamool. Just before Nom Anor fled the system in order to join the Yuuzhan Vong attack force, he launched a series of missiles at Osa-Prime, leaving the city in ruins and sparking a full-scale war between the two planet. (VP)

Osarian First-Force

this was the name used by Grappa's mercenary force, during their period of employment as protectors of the planet Osarian. (VP)

Oscum

this small port town, located on the moon Pinett, was the site of one of the moon's two spaceports. (WOA25)

OSD-III

this was the designation of an Kuat Drive Yards spacedock produced during the height of the New Order. Measuring 1,600 meters across, this station required a crew of 5,500 officers and 64 gunners, and could accommodate up to 500 passengers. Armed with eight turret-mounted turbolaser batteries, the OSD-III was designed as an orbital starship construction and repair facility. (FBS)

Osentay, Ryk

this man was a reporter for the Eye on Cularin news program, during the height of the Clone Wars. It was rumored that he was once a podracing announcer who reported on race status from the pits. He was supposedly beaten to a pulp during a live broadcast when he dropped a microphone into the engine of Sebulba's racer. After joining the Cularin Central Broadcasting team, he was among the first reporters to bring to light the meaning of the TINYF graffiti that began to show up on the buildings of Cularin's cities. It was his report that dubbed the graffiti "Tiny F", a phrase which quickly gained popularity. In a follow-on interview with an undisclosed source, Osentay exposed the connection between the Thaereian Military and the InterGalactic Banking Clan, and opened up a dialogue on the widespread corruption throughout Cularin's businesses and government. His source was revealed to be Gerta Haman, who was brutally subdued by Thaereian military police. Ryk, undaunted, later reported on Gerta's death near Thaere. His investigative work later took him to Tolea Biqua, to report on the legacy of Riboga. None of the beings he approached wanted to talk to him, and he was unaware that the CCB turned his interviews into a sort of comedy show. During one attempt to interview an Ugnaught, Ryk was badly beaten by the short-statured being, while his camera being recorded the entire incident. This footage was later used when Ryk returned to active duty - still recovering from surgery and rehabilitation - as part of the lead-in to his interview with Brin Hesk'l. (LFCW)

Oseon

this was primary star in the Oseon System, which was orbited by seven distinct bands of asteroids rather than solid planets. (LCM)

Oseon 2795

a small asteroid in the Oseon system, it is one of the closer asteroids to the star Oseon. It is therefore very hot, and must be carefully maintained in terms of its life support systems and its air coolers. Its primary commerce is centered around a mining operation, rather than the usual pleasure specialties of other planetoids in the system. Lando Calrissian stopped there shortly after winning the Millennium Falcon in a sabacc match, due mainly to his poor navigational skills. He had been trying to reach the Dela system. (LCM)

Oseon 5631

this asteroid, located in the famous Oseon System, was the site of the most impressive personal estate in the area. Owned by Ema Slake, the facilities on 5631 surpassed even those of Bohhuah Mutdah's residence on Oseon 5792. (GMR5)

Oseon 5792

the personal asteroid owned by Bohhuah Mutdah, 5792 has been specially modified to Mutdah's needs. The disk-shaped asteroid - 15 kilometers at its widest, 3 kilometers at its smallest - has been topped with a domed version of paradise. Multiple transparent covers house living spaces and vast gardens. The underside of the asteroid was built up to form a vast spaceport which is heavily armed and guarded. The gravity on the asteroid has to be specially modified to allow Mutdah to move his vast bulk with little effort. The asteroid is destroyed just after Rokur Gepta kills Mutdah and takes his place, in an effort to kill Lando Calrissian. Lando escapes, but is besieged by Shanga's fighters. One of the fighters takes a hit and crashes into one of the top-side domes, breaching it and setting off a destructive chain reaction in the asteroid's systems. (LCF)

Oseon 6845

the largest asteroid in the Oseon system, it is one of the most luxurious of all the Oseon asteroids. Located within the sixth asteroid belt in the system, it is home to the famous Esplanade. When Lando Calrissian leaves the Rafa System with what was the last cargo of life crystals ever exported, he returned to the Oseon System - and Oseon 6845 in particular - to try and win some big money. He had found that the vast wealth he obtained from the life crystals quickly got sucked away in maintaining the Millennium Falcon. Oseon 6845 has been artificially accelerated to reduce its daily cycle to 25 hours, closer to the galactic standard. (LCF, GMR5)

Oseon 8920

one of the many asteroids located in the Oseon System, 8920 was considered by many to be a miniature version of Nar Shaddaa. Criminals of all shapes and sizes hid from other criminals on the asteroid, which was one targeted for destruction by the Oseoni police force. However, the denizens of 8920 proved to be too great a source of information to eliminate. (GMR5)

Oseon System

a system of seven bands of asteroids orbiting the star Oseon, the Oseon System was named for Gadfrey Oseon. They are primarily vacation sites and pleasure spots for the filthy rich of the galaxy. It is also the home to a huge population of mynocks, and any ships travelling through the system are well-advised to protect their ships from the parasites. The system's primary star flares up in a spectacular display, known as the Flamewind, once a year. A major influx of tourists is seen during the Flamewind. The asteroids within the system are numbered with four-digit names. The first number represents which band the asteroid is in; the other three are just counters. (LCM, LCF, GMR5)

Oseon, Gadfrey

this legendary crimelord operated a traveling circus that served as a front for his illicit operations. Legend says he got into trouble during a performance on Nal Hutta, and fled to the most remote area of space he could find. There, he discovered a star system made up of seven belts of asteroids and no solid planets, which eventually came to be known as the Oseon System. He was forced to remain in the system because of the occurrence of the Flamewind, and he began dreaming of using the wondrous natural event as a tourist attraction. (GMR5)

Oseoni

any native of the Oseon system. (LCF)

OSETS 2711

OSETS stands for Orbital Solar Energy Transfer Satellite, which is one of the many solar heat collectors used to focus sunlight onto the surface of Coruscant. These collectors provide heat to the moderately cold world, and also serve to melt the polar icecaps for water. OSETS 2711 was commandeered by Rogue Squadron and Winter, as part of their last-minute plans to knock out the planet's shields in preparation for a New Republic assault. They caused OSETS 2711 to heat a water reservoir to boiling, creating a huge series of thunderstorms that knocked out the planet's computer systems, bringing the shields down. OSETS 2711 was under the command of Virar Needa at the time. (WG)

Osh

the meaning of this archaic Zabrak surname was lost over time. (GCG)

Osh Scal

this Polis Massan was one of the many members of the archaeological team that was investigating the ancient civilization of the sundered world of Polis Massa, during the last years of the Old Republic. (VD3)

Oshay

this man was a member of Samuel Tomas Gillespie's smuggling group, during the early years of the New Republic. (TLC)

Oshetti IV

this planet known for the illumescent fabric that was created from dried swamp hemp. (CSA)

Oshlin

according to Ewok legend, this flower spirit chased her beloved wind spirit through the forest from dawn to dark. (GCG)

Oshlin

this was a common name for Ewok females. Like other Ewok names, it referred to a spirit or character in the Ewoks' mythology. (GCG)

Oshmahr

this was an alcoholic beverage that was fermented by the Devaronian people. (J3)

Oshtra

this large, oceanic mammal was native to the planet Mon Calamari, and was known for its loyalty and devotion. (GCG)

Oshtra

referring to a large, loyal, oceanic creature, this was a common female name among the Mon Calamari race. (GCG)

Osi

this was the Krikthasi word for the leader of a given territory. Each osi was the most powerful warrior of the territory, which was known as a junieuw. (AE)

Osi Hass

this Krikthasi was the leader of the Undrarian junieuw during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He allied himself with the Alliance, in the hope of obtaining high-tech weaponry with which to defeat the Multopos. (PG1)

Osika Kirske

this Rattatak warlord was known for his vicious lust for power. Sometime before the Clone Wars, Kirske murdered the parents of Asajj Ventress, an act that would come to haunt him later in life. After Ventress was taken in by Jedi Master Ky Narec, Kirske recognized that the pair were a threat to his power. He banded together with the other warlords to murder Narec, but Ventress managed to escape. With her training incomplete, Ventress gave into the anger and hate she felt at Kirske and the Jedi, and succumbed to the Dark Side of the Force. In her anger, she hunted down and eventually captured Kirske and his supporters, locking them away in a dungeon to secure her own position as the leader of Rattatak. After the Battle of Jabiim, Kirske was freed from prison by Obi-Wan Kenobi, who himself had managed to escape the dungeon. Despite their differences, Obi-Wan and Kirske agreed to work together to complete their escape, although Kirske ultimately wanted to make Ventress pay for her actions. He was unprepared for her skill, however, and attacked her without recognizing it. Ventress drew her lightsaber and beheaded Kirske before he could strike a single blow. (SWDB, RHF)

Osil

this was one of the many Bothan clans. Affiliation with the clan was indicated by the suffix 'sil' added to an individual's family name. (GCG, WOTC)

O-Siri

this was the name given to Siri Tachi during her imprisonment in the Learning Circle on Kegan. (FFT)

Osirrag

the primary planet in the Osirrag System, this forested world could have a flourishing tourist trade if it wasn't located so far from the trade routes that wander through the Elrood Sector. The seasons are calm, and only add to the beauty of the terrain. It is said that a race of sentient creatures lives in the air currents of the planet. Rumors tell of a young boy who sought them out, and learned to communicate with them in their own language of whistles. They developed a lasting relationship, with the boy growing up to become their protector. In return, the creatures extended his lifespan. (PG3)

Osk

this is the fifteenth Aurebesh symbol, which stood for the Basic letter "o". (IR, SWM)

Oskan Blood Eater

this horrific creature had a huge, sucker-like mouth and large, slashing claw-like arms. They also have an insatiable appetite. Jabba the Hutt once had one of these beasts as a pet in his Tatooine palace. These creatures have only rudimentary sensory systems, but are extremely stubborn and will track their prey for several weeks. Quite often, the simple sight of a humanoid creature will send the Oskan blood eater into a feeding frenzy. Many xenoarchaeologists and xenobiologists believe that the Oskan Blood Eater was artificially developed at some point in the past, pointing to the lack of mythological or historical data from the civilizations of the planets on which they live. The Empire distributed propaganda that these creatures were created by the Old Republic, in an effort to hide the truth: the Oskan Blood Eaters were the result of a secret Imperial project. (THG, SSR, OE, COG)

Osk'y

this Old Corellian term literally translated as "enemy" or "rival." In the sport of phrenbi, a variation had two teams paired together as rivals, and each team was referred to as an osk'y. (BSS)

Oslet

this timid, herbivorous creature lived in the jungles of Joralla. The average specimen stood nearly three meters tall, and three sections to its body. Each section had a pair of limbs, and the limbs were highly dextrous. These creatures could move equally well on land in the trees. The Tikiarri which were native to Joralla used these creatures as mounts. Their necks were extremely flexible, giving the oslet the ability to turn its head a full 360 degrees. (PG1)

Oslumpex V

a planet, home to the firm of Aerospace Engineers, Incorporated. (HSR)

Osma Bag

this small, leather pouch was made by the shamen of the Ibhaan'I tribe on Socorro. It was filled with a pinch of blessed Socorran sand and a collection of odd trinkets which would have meaning to the intended owner. The trinkets would help define the owner's life-destiny path, and those Socorrans who owned them were filled with stories of their contents. (BSS)

Osman

this Chevin humanoid was Durga the Hutt's majordomo. (RD)

Osman Shrier

the owner of several luxury cruise ships in the Outer Rim Territories. All of his ships' names begin with "O.S.S.," which stands for "Osman Shrier's Ship." (GG9)

Osmani System

a beggar in Mos Eisley once told Bossk that he had encountered the bounty hunter in this system, when the Trandoshan captured an individual from one of his shuttles. Bossk later killed the beggar for being too nosy about his business. (HM)

Osmotic Field

this form of portal shielding was used to maintain a certain level of atmospheric conditions within a room or building. When placed at a doorway or other entrance, the osmotic field could be tuned allow air but not particulate matter - including insects and larger creatures - pass through it into the room. More advanced models also had entropic overlays that pulled energy from the incoming air, thereby cooling it and dropping the temperature within the room. Despite the tuning that could be done with osmotic field, it was virtually harmless to most sentient races, which could push through the field to enter the room with minimal effort. (MBS)

Osmotic Veil

this form of mask was developed for use in operating rooms and hospitals, where the risk of airborne contagions was high. When drawn over the face, the osmotic veil allowed air molecules to pass through, but kept larger particles and most biological bodies from entering. (MBS)

Oso Nim

a Duro encountered by Han Solo and Leia Organa on Belsavis, in the Smoking Jets bar. Oso provided them with information on Drub McKumb and Plett's house. She met Drub just before he disappeared. Oso also provided leads on Nubblyk's operations on Belsavis. (COJ) meaning "spicy" or "hot", this name was common among Gungan females. (GCG)

Osossi

Osprey

an Imperial Nebulon-B2 modified frigate which assisted the Harpax in capturing Admiral Harkov's fleet. (TIE)

OSS Telira

one of Osman Shrier's cruise ships, the OSS Telira is a modified Corellian CR90 Corvette that runs between Elshandruu Pica and Quence Sector. (GG9)

Oss Willum

a thin humanoid Vultan apprenticed to Jedi Master Thon, just before the Great Sith War. He made a living as a simple trader, until the day he rescued an Old Republic courier ship by hailing a Republic prowler. He suddenly realized that a single being could greatly alter the events of the galaxy, and also realized that he had been squandering his own life. He spent a year in seclusion before he realized that he could feel the Force, and so he decided to listen to the Force and become a Jedi. He had been training with Master Thon for five years prior to two interrelated events: the arrival of Tott Doneeta to Ambria, and Thon's apprenticeship of Nomi Sunrider. Oss was assigned to Tott's team that included Ulic Qel-Droma and his brother Cay, which went to Onderon. Oss Willum, along with Crado and a group of about twenty young Jedi, were seduced by Exar Kun into joining him on Yavin 4. There, Kun destroyed the Sith holocron he stole from Odan-Urr, releasing the Sith magic in the shards that exploded from it. The shards caught the young Jedi, including Oss Willum, and they were temporarily possessed by ancient Sith spirits. Oss Willum and Crado were charged with the destruction of Master Thon, on Ambria, and plotted to use the Dark Side beasts of Lake Natth to do the dirty work for them. Thon, with the help of Nomi Sunrider and Sylvar, defeated the beasts and attempted to take the two renegades captive. Crado was able to escape, but Oss Willum was taken. He eventually was brought out of the Sith spell. (TOJ, TSW, TOJC)

Ossan

a dim-witted, child-like race which inhabits the planet Ossel II, the Ossan are a humanoid race whose primary weapons are clubs and spears. They are the favorite food of the predatory cucul. The average Ossan stands just under two meters tall, and has a rodent-like face with a conical snout that ends in a single nostril. They are a heavy-set people, with huge torsoes supported by short, stocky legs. Their arms are gangly compared to the rest of their body, and their strength was surprising for such a docile-seeming people. The Ossan also harvested the syp wood, and trade it to off-worlders for passage. House Vandron used enslaved Ossan to run their Karfeddion slave-breeding farms. (GG4, COJ, SWJ3)

Ossel II

a planet with a strong gravitational force, Ossel II is covered with steaming bogs. It is the homeworld of the Ossan race, and is known for its syp trees, which produce beautiful wood. The atmosphere of Ossel II is brownish-green in color, due to high concentrations of sulfur and chlorine. (GG4, COJ)

Osseriton

this was the only habitable planet, and sole world, found in the Osseriton System. The Hemes Arbora people migrated to Osseriton after leaving their homeworld of Carrivar. The planet was located in the Unknown Regions. (FH2)

Ossiki Confederacy Army

this was one of the primary military groups from the planet Toydaria. One of several such armies which protected individual cities and clans, the Ossiki Confederacy Army was a regular participant in the seasonal wars fought among the Toydarians. They were known, or perhaps infamous, for their use of chemical weapons which destroyed the food stocks of their rivals. A former leader once declared, "If we can't have it, no one can." (SWDB, NEGC)

Ossilege, Hortel

the Bakuran Admiral, in charge of the Bakuran Navy, about the time of the Corellian uprisings. He is a small, slightly-built man with a bald, pink head highlighted by huge, bushy eyebrows and a sharp goatee beard. He has a quick intellect, and a suspicious nature. He was mortally wounded aboard the Intruder when the ship was rammed by three Saccorian droneships. He sustained a grievous wound to the stomach, but stayed in command long enough for Admiral Ackbar to arrive. Then, he detonated the Intruder in the midst of the Saccorian fleet. (AS, SC)

Ossk Kassa

this male Trandoshan was one of the many thugs who worked for Gardulla the Hutt during the years following the Battle of Naboo. A bounty was issued for his capture, which Jango Fett later claimed during a mission to meet with Gardulla to discuss the Bando Gora cult. (BH)

Osskum Ale

an alcoholic beverage. (ROM)

Ossom Okwar

this was a distinguished member of the Pacithhip society. (UANT)

Ossorus

this beautiful, underwater city was seat of the gods who created all life on Naboo, according to Gungan legend. The city, where Oma-Oma held sway, was supposed to be protected by enchanted sando aqua monsters and giant Gungan warriors astride their kaadus. (GB) hailed as the "new breed" of bounty hunter after the dissolution of the True Guild and the Guild Reform Committee, this individual was equipped with state-of-the-art hardware. Many believed that Osss-10 had corporate or other forms of sponsorship, in order to afford the equipment he used. However, Osss-10 was outsmarted by Boba Fett, who was piloting N'dru Suhlak's Z-95 Headhunter, during Fett's search for the load shifter droid owned by Kuat of Kuat. (HM)

Osss-10

Ossune

this name was common among the Kerestian people. (UANT)

Ossus

third planet in the Adega system, Ossus was home to the site of an ancient Jedi stronghold and training center thousands of years before the Freedon Nadd Uprisings and the Great Sith War. Many historians believe that the Jedi Order originated on Ossus, but this was only conjecture. Following the Freedon Nadd Uprisings on Onderon, Jedi Master Arca planned to send the ancient Sith artifacts recovered from Freedon Nadd's ship there for examination, but Exar Kun was able to retrieve them first. In the chaos surrounding the Great Sith War, Aleema and Crado destroyed the Cron System, located near the Adega System. Ossus was caught in the wave of destruction radiating from the supernova. The Jedi attempted to transport the artifacts and lore from the libraries there, but were only able to take a fraction of the wealth stored there over the millennia. In an attempt to preserve a cache of lightsabers, Master Ood Bnar initiated his lifecycle change, becoming a gnarled old tree with the lightsabers entangled in his roots. He was nearly destroyed by the radiation from the Cron System. Over the ages, great cities grew out of the planet's rough, irradiated terrain. In modern times, the planet was nearly wiped out during the Clone Wars. The enemies of the Jedi Knights struck there, attempting to destroy the stronghold and root out the Jedi. Although the planet was devastated, the Jedi survived. Later, following the death of Emperor Palpatine's first clone on Byss, Luke Skywalker and Kam Solusar discover the planet's ancient Jedi connection, and were directed there by Master Vodo's holocron just before Sedriss executed Operation Shadow Hand. There, they found the Ysanna tribe and the ancient Jedi Master Ood Bnar. The planet's atmosphere is laced with electrical storms, probably resulting from the near-devastation it suffered during the Clone Wars. It orbited the Adegan stars in a figure-eight orbit. (FNU, DLS, TSW, DE1, DE2, SWJ15, ECH)

Ossus Day

this Alliance Mon Calamari MC80a cruiser was operative during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Ossyth

this gemstone was found in the deeper parts of the oceans that covered Mon Calamari. (GCG)

Ossyth

this was a common name among Quarren females. It referred to a gemstone found in the depths of Mon Calamari's oceans. (GCG)

Ostan Atur

this Lowen female was implicated in the meleenium heist at the Qua'Tahc mines on Af'El, during the early years of the New Republic. A noted saboteur, Ostan grew up in a world of mercenaries and smugglers before signing on with Tolad Dor. While working for Dor, Ostan was arrested after killing Sil Ompren by sabotaging his speeder. After many successful raids with Dor, Ostan set out on her own, and started up a partnership with Rani Quanic in the Minos Cluster. (SWJ10)

ostenmustdie

this was the userid of a computer hacker who participated in various discussions on the Cularin node of the HoloNet, during the height of the Clone Wars. It was ostenmustdie who called for the arrest and execution of Osten Dal'Nay, after a message appeared on the 'Net describing the killing of Commander Kulkis. Ostenmustdie claimed that Dal'Nay was trying to cover up a deeper motive by posting the account of Kulkis' death, hoping to be proclaimed a heroic son of Cularin while secretly carrying out some evil plan. (LFCW)

Ostfrei

this moon, the third in orbit around Genarius, was the orbital counterpart to Ulbasca. Where Ulbasca was constantly bathed with light, Ostfrei was locked in perpetual darkness. The atmosphere of Ostfrei was laden with carbon monoxide and methane, and soot particles have been suspended in the air after centuries of volcanic activity. (LFC)

Ostrad Peninsula

this point of swampland was located between Otoh Gunga and the Gungan Sacred Place, on the planet Naboo. (E1A11)

Ostrine

found on the planet Hargeeva, this mineral had many unique properties. The chief property was that ostrine could absorb heat like a sponge. This made it a valuable mineral for the production of armor plating for stormtroopers and soldiers. Ketrian AltroneI discovered a method of crystalline manipulation and plas-bonding of certain trace elements that modified raw ostrine into a heat-absorbing material unlike anything else in the galaxy. Its natural absorption properties were multiplied ten-fold. Major Nial Pedrin took the formula for use by the Empire, and hoped to bring Ketrian to Coruscant for more research. However, she defected while en route to an Imperial facility, and used the formula to improve the firepower of X-Wings by adding ostrine to the housings of their laser cannons. (SWJ8)

Osuno Whett

an alien Lando Calrissian meets on Oseon 2795, Osuno is a tall, gray-skinned humanoid with a high-pitched voice and an inability to make a decision. He did, however, have very definite goals of conquest and power, and his image of himself was bolstered when he underwent surgery to have bonemer implanted in his legs, arms, shoulders, and spine to increase his size. A native of the Lekua System, Whett was a renowned scholar there, earning the title of Offdeta there before becoming an Associate Professor of Comparative Sapient Studies. He was assisted by the droid Vuffi Raa, who was sent to Whett by Rokur Gepta. Together they discovered the Renatasian System and its primitive human inhabitants. Whett saw the Renatasians as simple, ignorant people, and he planned to use them to further his own ambitions. He worked for 700 days with Vuffi Raa, who the Renatasians regarded as a deity, keeping a low profile as Vuffi Raa's assistant while arranging an invasion of the system by an Imperial fleet. The Renatasians blamed Vuffi Raa for the invasion, and Whett fled with the droid. Whett then found work as a research anthropologist working for Duttes Mer in the Rafa System before coming to the Oseon, where he did some research on the Sharu. Little did Whett know that Mer was working with the Tund Sorcerer Rokur Gepta to locate the Mindharp and use it to control the system. They used Whett to help them locate all the various Sharu legends, and then sent him to the Oseon System to seek out all possible candidates who fit the description of the Bearer. When Whett encountered Lando Calrissian, he tricked Lando into winning the droid Vuffi Raa, who was being held on Rafa IV as a stand-in for the Emissary of Sharu legend. Whett was further pulled into Gepta's web following Lando's recovery of the Mindharp. Whett was commissioned by Gepta to study the Oswaft, and determine who they could best be used to further Gepta's plans for power. Whett tried to secretly determine what kind of creature Gepta was, but was unable to do so, because his role in the destruction of the Renatasian invasion was discovered by Klyn Shanga. Shanga turned his forces loose on Whett's tiny ship, which was connected to Shanga's battleship pinnacle by a tractor beam. Shanga used the beam to maneuver Whett's ship into a side collision with the Wennis, vaporizing Whett and his ship while destroying the Wennis and her crew. (LCM, LCS)

Oswaft

a race of huge, manta-ray-like aliens that evolved in the vacuum of space, the Oswaft grew in the region of space known as the ThonBoka, or StarCave. They evolved over the eons into space grazers, filtering the various elements that float in the vacuum. They are powerful, winged creatures which have a multitude of fleshy tendrils streaming from their undersides, which allow them to manipulate objects. Normal adults have been known to reach lengths of 750 meters or more, while the Elders can grow to 1,000 meters. They have strange, transparent flesh, inside which can be seen the colors and sparks of chemical reactions. When they die, their flesh becomes opaque, and eventually decomposes into its molecular components. They can communicate across vast distances almost instantly, and have developed a way to manipulate microwaves to enter hyperspace by themselves. This allows them to travel anywhere in an instant, although the nature of the Oswaft is to stay at home in the StarCave, avoiding the dangers of what they call the Open Sea of space. They are incredibly intelligent, but have only gained knowledge within the confines of the StarCave. They are thusly unimaginative, but have incredibly long lifespans steeped in conservative traditions. They have the ability to synthesize complex molecular structures, provided that they have the raw atomic material to start with. The Oswaft society is ruled by a group of Elders, and was believed to have numbered in the billions, just inside the ThonBoka. When Emperor Palpatine learned of the existence of the Oswaft, he believed that the huge creatures were a threat to the galaxy, and ordered them eradicated. Imperial forces blockaded the mouth of the StarCave nebula. They regularly issue poisonous discharges, killing the pre-organic motes that float into the ThonBoka and provide sustenance to the lifeforms inside. Lando Calrissian talks the Oswaft into fighting for the ThonBoka, and together they break the blockade. (LCS, ECH, GMR5)

Ota

it was on this frozen world that Luke Skywalker intercepted Boba Fett, who was trying to locate the Mole. They were both captured by the Snogars, who wanted them to repair their city heaters. They escaped, and were met by Han Solo and Leia Organa. Solo was captured by the Snogars, and Fett agreed to help Luke rescue Han. They were all caught by the appearance of the Mole, who used a huge magnetic generator to pin Fett to a wall while they all made their way off-planet. (CSWEA)

Otalp

this young Squidge and his companion, Remoh, were believed to have encountered a protocol droid in a remote cave on their homeworld. This droid, according to legend, told them of the oppression of the Empire and the struggle of the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. The story was said to have paralleled the history of the Squidge and their subjugation by the Vindar. Before the end of the story, however, a group of Vindar discovered their location. Otalp was caught out in the open with the droid, but Remoh remained hidden. When the Vindar apprehended Otalp, they demanded that he tell them where his companion went. When Otalp refused, he was killed by the Vindar. This prompted Remoh to take up arms against the Vindar, in hopes of freeing his people. (T19)

Otana

this Corellian YT-2000 transport was owned by Thomaas Azzameen, who turned the ship over to his son Ace when he died. It was used to transfer bacta from remote sources to supply depots which were friendly to the Alliance. It was one of the ships which benefitted from the bacta sources known to the Azzameen family and Twin Suns Transport Services. (XWA)
