this was an unusual weapon, produced on the planet Manda. (SWDB)

Seed World

this was a term used by the ancient Jedi Knights to describe a planet that was capable of supporting life. Seed worlds were divided into two types: life-giving, which included planets with oceanic, grassland, or arboreal environments; and death-giving, which included planets with desert, volcanic, or barren environments. (KOTOR)

Seedar Bomu

this Rodian soldier was a member of the Bomu clan, and worked for Vago the Hutt during the early years of the New Order. (TF)

Seedar, Genna

this woman served as a medical officer aboard the New Republic starship FarStar during its hunt for Moff Sarne. Genna was the last surviving member of the resistance on Kal'Shebbol, after Sarne wiped out any opposition to his rule. A shy woman, Genna was nonetheless brave and selfless in battle, traits which won her the respect of her former freedom fighters and the FarStar's crew. She was uncomfortable with the reactions of the crew to the prolonged search through the Kathol Rift, and her fears were realized when a mutiny ensued. (DARK, KR)

Seedcracker

this was a species of small bird, native to the planet Ansion. (APS)

Seed-disk

this was the second phase of life for a seed-partner, after it was forged by the Langhesi with sky fire lightning. The seed-partner, suddenly energized by the lightning, split open its casing and emerged as a flattened, disk-shaped version of itself. These seed-disks were then shaped around a metal framework and imbedded with various devices to form Sekotan technology. In this way, Sekotan starships were created. Sometimes, a seed-partner will not survive the forging into a seed-disk. In this case, the master to whom the seed-partner had bonded was sent away from Zonama Sekot. When they do survive, they reconnect with the mind of their master and present him with a virtual catalog of the shapes they could take during the annealing process. The buyer had but to envision a certain part or curve, and the shaping of the Jentari would do the rest. (RP)

Seed-partner

this was the name of the unusual creature which was later formed into a Sekotan starship. Seed-partners resembled large cockle-burrs, about the size of a child's head and covered with short, hooked spikes which it used to move about and cling to another being. In the Uniting Day ceremony, seed-partners are introduced to a prospective starship owner. If one or more seed-partners chooses the buyer, then a starship can be formed for them. If the buyer is rejected, he is no longer allowed to bond with a seed-partner. Until they are allowed to evolve, seed-partners live with their new masters day and night, attuning their biorythms to those of the buyer. It was rumored that seed-partners were formed from the Potentium. On average, one to three seed-partners joined with a buyer at any given time, then are physically melded together to form the starship. As they matured, the seed-partners split out of their husks, revealing whitish flesh beneath. Several groups of spikes merged with one another to form small three-fingered hands, and they elongated so that each seed-partner had four short legs. After the matured, seed-partners were taken with their masters to the forging pits of the Langhesi, where they were struck by sky fire lightning and quickened. This energized the seed-partners, and the Langhesi forged them into new shapes. These new shapes were known as seed-disks. (RP)

Seedship

this was the term used to describe a Yuuzhan Vong ship dedicated to carrying biological material to a new planet. Once at the planet, the seedship disgorged its cargo, initiating the terraformation of the planet into a world better suited to the Yuuzhan Vong physiology. After the Battle of Coruscant, the Yuuzhan Vong used a highly specialized seedship to transport several immature dhuryams to the planet. The interior of the seedship was reconfigured to allow the dhuryams to compete with each other in the management of their environment. Once a dhuryam had defeated its brethren, it was allowed to take control of the seedship. It then began breaking the seedship up into a huge number of smaller seedships, which carried biological samples to all parts of the planet to be seeded. This gave the dhuryam a link to all the other seedships, allowing it to coordinate the dispersal of biological materials to specific locations, thereby ensuring a complete ecosystem would be formed on the planet. (EL2, T) this Yuuzhan Vong female served aboard the Sunulok as Tsavong Lah's attendant during the aliens' invasion of the galaxy. (BP)

Seef

Seefor

this was the nickname used by the ARC trooper designated CT-12/74, during the height of the Clone Wars. Seefor helped Kit Fisto and Nate train the commandos of the Desert Wind terrorist group, and was among the survivors who managed to escape their lair when Asajj Ventress sent a group of infiltration droids to destroy them. When Nate's body was not recovered, they feared that Nate had been killed, or had broken the Code and betrayed them all in the first place. (TCD)

Seeg

this Rodian starship racer was a rival of Siro Simito. He was also Simito's friend, and their public rivalry was carefully cultivated to enhance the popularity of their sport. Their staged fights always boosted their ratings. (CRO)

Seeing Without Looking

this was one of the many surveillance skills that was taught to the Jedi Knights of the Old Republic. The idea behind seeing without looking was to acquire knowledge about one's surroundings without allowing observers to notice that one was actually doing it. Thus, a Jedi could appear to be taking a simple walk down a street, but their senses were busy gathering in details and facts about the people and locations they saw. (JQ8)

Seek

a native of the planet Tatooine, Seek was one of young Anakin Skywalker's friends. A ten-year-old boy, Seek was something of a pessimist, and believed that Anakin would never get his homemade podrace to fly. Seek was portrayed by Oliver Walpole in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace. (SW1, IS1)

Seeker

a type of remote used for surveillance activities, seekers were developed to assist law enforcement agencies in tracking down criminals. A seeker could be programmed to search out and immobilize a specific target, but in general they were only moderately successful in their missions. Widespread use of seekers diminished during the New Order, although many backwater law enforcement agencies embraced them. (SW, GG11)

Seeker

this was the brand name of Arakyd's AS-M12 messenger droid. (SESB)

Seeker

this Twi'lek operated the Junkard scrap and salvage caverns at the Kala'uun Starport, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He had been cast out of his own clan because he lacked the instincts to become a warrior, instead preferring to tinker with all sorts of machinery. After being befriended by Lo'baan while wandering the warrens of Kala'uun, Seeker helped the old Twi'lek establish the Junkard. Seeker inherited the Junkard upon Lo'baan's death. (PSPG)

Seeker Cub

this was the name of Captain Stitar's scout ship. In reality, Stitar was the smuggler known as Starter, and the Seeker Cub was a false identity for Starter's beat-up X-Wing. (SWJ4)

Seeker Droid

see Prowler 1000 (OWS, SWI81)

Seeker Sea

this was the smaller of two seas found on the planet Bacrana. (FBS)

Seeker Torpedo

any self-propelled detonation device which can be targetted ahead of time and, when released, will track its target until it can impact with it. (TOJ)

Seeker Transport

this was the name used by Arakyd for its civilian hyperspace message pod, designed to transport the AS-M12 Seeker messenger droid. It was based on the hyperspace pod used for the Viper series of military probe droids. Because they were available on the open market, and because the interference with a Seeker Transport was punishable by law, many crimelords used these vehicles to transport illegal goods. (FTD)

Seeker, The

this was another name for the Lesser Mark of Illumination. (SHPT)

Seekerbot

this was another name for a remote surveillance droid. Small seekerbot were often used to watch over doors and hallways. (MJEH)

Seeking Rail Detonator

this weapon was similar to a standard rail detonator, except that it was capable of firing projectiles that could home in on a target. This allowed the user to fire quite rapidly with minimal aiming, thereby ensuring a larger number of targets could be hit. (MOTS)

Seela

this was a common name given to Twi'lek females, and meant "dancer" in the Twi'leki language. (GCG)

Seela

this was the name used to describe those Aramandi who rejected the new interpretations of the Eeronon and accused these priests of lying to the populace. At the heart of the dissention was the Eeronon's prediction of other sentient life outside the Aramand Cluster, a prediction that had previously not existed in the Eeronon's teachings and only surfaced when the Lant Mining Corporation approached the Aramandi to discuss mining rights. The Seelas were allowed to live in uninhabited areas of the Aramand System, but religious persecution forced them onto undeveloped worlds within the Cluster. (FBS)

Seelah, Jedwar

this explorer and scout worked out of Mos Espa, on the planet Tatooine, during the last decades of the Old Republic, and attended the Boonta Eve Classic podrace which was won by Anakin Skywalker. (YJC6)

Seely

this Twi'leki female met Drek Drednar in the Darlonn Sector, and agreed to serve as a lieutenant in his pirate crew. She was a former slaver who stowed away aboard the Sable III, and later became a gifted hand-to-hand fighter. (SWJ5)

Seendar

this Togorian was taken from his homeworld of Togoria by a group of mercenaries which eventually accepted him into their ranks. He enjoyed the excitement and adventure of the mercenary life, but found that he was uncomfortable around the technology of the galaxy. He couldn't comprehend the various forms of technology. His mercenary band was invited to the planet Narg to help train the local police force, but all non-humans in the group were relieved of their duties upon arrival. Seendar was stranded on the planet, where he roamed the streets around the Free Access Grill. He was one of the few individuals in the city of Grig allowed to carry a personal weapon, only because the local constabulary was afraid to confront him. (TA)

Seendat

this was a common name among the Togorian race. (UANT)

Seeno

one of Antar Roat's aides. (WG)

Seeqov

this was one of the many Vratix hive-clans that allied with the Ashern, during the years of Thyferran history known as the Thriving Season. (PH)

Seeqov Thranx

this Vratix of the Seeqov hive-clan was a member of the Razorclaws, the group which would eventually become known as the Ashern, during the height of the Alazhixazha period. Thranx also served as the primary contact for the corporate spy known only as the Bloodletter. She was ostensibly his counterpart when the Bloodletter worked as a field inspector for both the Xucphra and Zaltin factions. Her cover during this period was actually based on fact. Thranx was a respected field inspector and research scientist, and had once helped to eradicate a Rodian fungus that had threatened the planet five years earlier. Her hatred of the Bacta Cartel stemmed partly from the fact that both the Zaltin and Xucphra factions kept the incident a secret, and each claimed total responsibility for solving the fungus epidemic without Vratix help. When the Ashern began development on an enhanced strain of alazhi known as kolazhi - the basis for kolcta - Thranx and the Bloodletter were ordered to keep an eye on its development. They worked together for a year before the project was discovered. A mercenary who wore armor much like Jango Fett's had been hired by the Bacta Cartel to eliminate the Ashern responsible for its development. The mercenary shot both Thranx and the Bloodletter and then left them for dead. Thranx, however, survived long enough to use the enhance bacta to bring the Bloodletter back from the brink of death. Before she died, she told him the complete story of kolcta. (PH)

Seer

this group of Imperial probes was destroyed by the Alliance, shortly before the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Seer Lonnel

this Ugnaught was imprisoned at the Oovo IV prison facility for a number of crimes, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. He became one of the Helmet Squad's most reliable snitches, providing inside information on his fellow inmates in exchange for certain amenities. Because of this, the Dug crimelord Sebolto issued a bounty for his capture, in case Lonnel was ever released from prison. Lonnel thought he was safe behind bars and the relative protection of the Helmet Squad, until Jango Fett infiltrated the Oovo IV facility to "rescue" Bendix Fust. During the attempt, Jango managed to claim the bounty on Lonnel. (BH)

Seer of the Temple

this alien, a native of the planet Gap Nine, fought against Colonel Traft and the Imperials who occupied the planet. The Seer was more than happy to receive assistance from the Alliance in deposing Traft and retaking their planet. (SWJ7)

Seer Varree

this was a famous Iktotchi individual, distinguished in the histories of the moon of Iktotch. (UANT)

Seerdon, Kohl

this Imperial Moff was a military officer in the Old Republic. He was placed in command of the Chandrila Defense Fleet, replacing Hiram Drayson, after the passage of Emergency Amendment 121b during the height of the Clone Wars. Years later, Seerdon was one of the first individuals to recognize the true importance of bacta to the Alliance. Many Imperial officers and leaders felt that the control of arms and foodstuffs would eventually choke out the Alliance, while Seerdon realized that the Alliance would keep on fighting until it could no longer sustain itself. He felt that, in order to eliminate the Alliance's forces, the Empire would have to control bacta. Keeping the healing fluid from the Alliance would mean that it couldn't restore its wounded troops, thereby reducing its numbers and eliminating resistance. He sought to control the world of Thyferra, but was kept from achieving his goals by the combined efforts of Rogue Squadron and the Alliance. (RSG, SWI71)

Seerna

this was a common name among the Snivvian race. (UANT)

Seertay, Anna

an Alliance Colonel, Seertay died with her Marines in the Cobolt Offensive. (RASB)

Seetee

this domestic droid was owned by Imperial Governor Tork Winger. (SWJ2)

SeeVee

this was the nickname of Platt Okeefe's ASP-7 labor droid, used aboard the Last Chance. It had a limited vocabulary, and could only respond with "affirmative" or "negative" to any question. (SESB)

Seezars Planet

a planet. (MC77)

Seffi

this planet, covered with toxic oceans, was the third world in the Rhinnal System. It was orbited by two moons. (CCW)

Seft

this gas giant was the fourth planet in the Genesia System, and was orbited by six moons. The planet's gaseous atmosphere was mined for use by Genesia's industry. (FBS)

Seggor

this large, oceanic predator was native to the planet Mon Calamari. It was revered by the Quarren for its strength. (GCG)

Seggor

this name was commonly given to Quarren males, and referred to a strong, ocean predator that was native to the planet Calamari. (GCG)

Seggor Tels

Seggor Tels was a Quarren from Calamari. He was the embodiment of the friction between the Quarren and their planetary neighbors, the Mon Calamari. He felt that his own race was being neglected by the Mon Cal, whom he felt were taking all the glory for the work the Quarren had done to build the planet's floating cities. He resented the Mon Cal for their dreams and their ambitions. He felt that the Mon Cal had relegated the Quarren to living the bowels of the planet's floating cities, even though they were designed that way. He resented the fact that Ackbar and the Calamarian Council wanted to make contact with the Empire. So, when an Imperial agent slipped past the planet's defenses and approached him, he felt that he could strike out at the Mon Cal by providing the Empire with the codes to evade Calamari's defenses. His hope, that the Empire would cut the Mon Cal down to size, was quickly turned to despair as the Empire enslaved by Mon Cal and Quarren without prejudice. When the Mon Cal began resisting the Imperial yoke, Seggor Tels again laughed at them. However, the forced slavery began to work at his conscience, and he began to wonder whether he should join the Mon Cal rebellion or not. When the Calamarians heard about the Alliance, Seggor Tels rallied the Quarren to join the Mon Cal, despite all their hatred, and together they drove off the Empire and freed Calamari. To this day, Seggor Tels thanks the Imperials - not the Mon Cal - for showing them how to fly to the stars and begin life again somewhere else. (SWSB)

Segken Tels

this Quarren female served Adriav Kavos aboard the Isilia as a gunner. (PG1)

Segmi

this race of builders was created by DarkStryder, after it banished the Charr Ontee from its fortress. Essentially huge worms, the Segmi were developed to exude a resinous substance that they wove into strong forms that supported the DarkStryder's fortress. Over the centuries, after DarkStryder no longer desired further modifications to its lair, the Segmi wandered off and formed their own civilization, and they learned to use the Ta-Ree energy that permeated the planet Kathol. DarkStryder later recaptured a segment of the Segmi population for use in developing new parts of its fortress. (E)

Segnor's Loop

a starship maneuver in which an attacking ship makes a quick run away from its target before doubling back for a second pass. (TFNR)

Segue

this New Republic shuttle was loaned to Major Showolter, to transport the Yuuzhan Vong priestess Elan to Wayland. (HT)

Sehvorah

this minor crimelord was, at one time, deeply in debt due to a huge gambling habit he established in the Core Worlds. Sehvorah fled to the Outer Rim and started over, eventually becoming the chief executive officer of the Droixian Traders League. He caught the eye of Dunstain Manliss, but Manliss's son Artur moved to secure Sehvorah's allegiance. Many believe that the Droixian Traders League was responsible for the death of Dunstain Manliss, but others believe Artur agreed to pay off Sehvorah's gambling debts in return for the removal of Dunstain. Sehvorah recognized a good thing when he saw it, and agreed to join the Mandroxan cartel in order to reap the benefits of trafficking spice. (GG11)

Sei

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Sei

one of the family names used by the Bothan people, it literally meant "magician" or "wizard", although its origins were unclear. (GCG, WOTC)

Seifax

this corporation was a dummy front for Loronar Corporation, during the early years of the New Republic. Based on the planet Antemerdias, Seifax manufactured shielded transport shells for use in constructing Loronar's Needle attack ships. This fact was discovered by the Chadra-Fan journalist Yarbolk Yemm. (POT, NEGW)

Seige of Ank Ki'Shor

this Galactic Civil War battle featured prominent use of the Y-Wing starfighter. (EGV)

Seige of Trasemene, The

this was one of the most famous historical battles of the Empire. It was at this battle that Grand Admiral Takel made a name for himself as a brilliant strategist, thanks in part to his addiction to glitterstim. (GFT, SWI66)

Seikosha

this planet, located in the Breago System of the Borderlands Region, was an undeveloped jungle world at the outset of the New Republic. It had become something of a haven for criminals during the last years of the Empire, and the political wars which continued to rage after the Battle of Endor kept the Borderlands out of most people's minds. Seikosha was the homeworld of the Seikoshan race, and was constantly swept by violent thunderstorms and torrential rains. The average day on the planet lasted 28 standard hours, and its year lasted 422 local days. (POC)

Seikoshan

this alien race was native to the planet Seikosha. They remained neutral during the Galactic Civil War, in part because their planet was located on the border between Imperial and Republic space. They were a primitive culture, and strove to remain so even when smugglers and criminals from the greater galaxy began coming to their homeworld to hide from justice. The average Seikoshan was a reed-thin humanoid with green skin and a small amount of black hair on their head. They have unblinking red eyes, and had a series of ridges running from the bridge of their noses to the top of their skulls. They preferred to live without technology, although they had a highly-developed society with excellent natural engineering skills. (POC)

Seilith Music Charms

this ribbon-like device was used by jazz musicians as a form of good luck. The charms could be draped over an instrument or its stand, providing a visual experience to the music in addition to its sonic impact. (VD)

Sei'Iya

this Bothan witnessed the destruction of a city on Kothlis by an 850.AA maintenance droid, which had been loaded with Arakyd Seeker droids. She fled the destruction to Elshandruu Pica, and offered a reward on Cynabar's Droid Datalog to any being who could provide verifiable evidence of the responsible party. (SWJ14)

Seir, Tarr

see Seirr, Tarr (LEV)

Seirr, Tarr

this young Cerean male was a student of the Force during the height of the Clone Wars. As a youth in the Jedi Temple, Tarr Seirr idolized his fellow Cerean, Ki-Adi-Mundi, and was honored when the older Cerean Jedi turned over the watchman duties on Cerea to Tarr Seirr. Tarr Seirr took the role very seriously, and worked diligently to ensure that Cerea didn't fall to the Separatists. As the Clone Wars ground on, Tarr Seirr was forced to reluctantly leave Cerea and join the ranks of the Jedi Knights who were fighting the battles across the galaxy. Tarr Seirr accompanied Ki-Adi-Mundi to the remote planet Hypori, in an effort to destroy the droid foundries that had been discovered there by Daakman Barrek. However, General Grievous was too well-prepared for such an assault, and the task force was decimated before it reached the ground. Tarr Seirr was among the survivors who reached the planet's surface in the wreckage of their ships, but was among the first Jedi to be killed in battle against Grievous. (OWS, SWDB)

Seismic Tank

this immense, fifty-five-meter-tall repulsorlift vehicle was developed by Hoar Chall Engineered for the Confederacy of Independent Systems during the height of the Clone Wars. In order to avoid legal entanglements, Hoar Chall developed the tank under the guise of a mining vehicle that could penetrate a planet's crust and expose ores that were otherwise unreachable. First deployed into the field on Dantooine, the seismic tank used a huge battering ram as its primary weapon. When the tank's droid operators brought it onto the battlefield, they centered the tank on an enemy's location. Then, hovering some thirty meters over the target, the tank ejected a huge, cylindrical ram from its underbody, driving the ram into the ground. The ram itself was formed from a heavy metal core, and was guided by frictionless, magnetic impellers, giving it a huge amount of inertia. The resulting quake was similar to the effects of a bomb, but without the fallout potential. The magnetic impellers also prevented any backlash from the impact from reaching the main vehicle. From the point of impact, the ground rippled outward, tossing objects and beings aside or burying them in dirt and debris. (OWS, SWDB)

Seitia Prime

this planet was located near Rhamalai. (SWJ13)

Sekae N'sehnor

this was the name of a noted Sluissi individual. (UANT)

Sekct

this race of amphibious humanoids was native to the planet Marca. Their population was parthenogenic, with all members being female. Every two years, a mature Sekct can lay a single egg. However, only one of every two eggs ever hatches, because the genetic makeup of the Sekct often causes damaged embryos. In theory, those Sekct which survive are genetic duplicates of their parent.. They have brown skin, ranging from muddy brown to tan, which lightens as they age. They are short in stature, but have a well-developed sense of honor and are excellent hunters. Shortly after the Battle of Yavin, the Sekct were in danger of being wiped out by the toxic waste-products of the Empire's hyperbaride plant located on Marca. The wastes were introducing devastating genetic changes, as well as killing the environment. A group of Alliance agents, forced to land on the planet when their ship hit a mine, helped the Sekct destroy the hyperbaride plant and oust the Empire from the planet. The Sekct were then allowed to restore their planet and their environment. One of the things which distinguished the Sekct were their two-jointed forelimbs, as each joint was capable of motion in two directions, giving the Sekct a very gangly appearance. Their society was quite primitive by modern galactic standards. (POM)

Seko Cantina

this seedy cantina was located on the planet Ryloth, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SWT)

Sekot

this was the Ferroan name for the living part of the planet Zonama Sekot. In reality, Sekot was a living entity in and of itself, and controlled life and death on the world. Sekot had been living in the system for billions of years, and claimed to have seen the formation of the triple-star system in which Zonama Sekot existed. Many Old Republic databases claim that the planet was simply called Sekot, a remnant of the Ferroan term. When Leor Hal first came to the planet, he discovered Sekot's presence, and believed that she was caretaker of the Living Force, as defined by the Potentium. The two established a deep, working relationship in which both worked to ensure Zonama Sekot's privacy and safety. Sekot agreed to provide Hal with information on how to form Sekotan starships, as long as Hal used all profits to purchase huge hyperdrive cores. In this way, they prepared the planet for entry into hyperspace, an extreme escape mechanism. It was during this time that Sekot also came to accept the tenets of the Potentium as facts. When Leor Hal died, Sekot maintained a hologram of him to give the Zonamans an illusion of continuity. When the planet was attacked by the Far Outsiders, Sekot was forced to use the Sekotan technology to kill them, something she deeply regretted. When Wilhuff Tarkin and Raith Sienar attacked Zonama Sekot in an effort to turn the planet over to Supreme Chancellor Palpatine, Sekot appeared to Anakin Skywalker. The young Jedi padawan had traveled with Obi-Wan Kenobi to discover Vergere's whereabouts. Sekot could take many shapes, and often assumed the guise of Vergere herself to make Anakin more comfortable. Sekot revealed that she controlled all life on the planet, and used her powers to manipulate the weather as well as the positioning of the forests. In that way, Sekot was able to hide the large-scale development of planetary hyperdrives which were installed by the settlers of the planet. In the end, Zonama Sekot was unable to thwart Tarkin's assault, and Sekot was forced to take the planet into hyperspace in order to escape. It hid the planet in many places, each time finding conflict and destruction, until it settled in the Klasse Ephemora System. There it remained for many years, until it was discovered by Yuuzhan Vong Commander Ekh'm Val and Jedi Master Luke Skywalker almost at the same time. Sekot drove off the Yuuzhan Vong, but allowed the Jedi to land. Using a series of carefully orchestrated tests, Sekot tried to ascertain the true nature of the Jedi's visit. Only after it was satisfied that the Jedi truly meant it no harm did Sekot reveal itself, as the Fosh Vergere to Jacen Solo and as a young Anakin Skywalker to Luke. It explained many things about its life to Luke and Jacen, hinting that the presence of the Ferroans on Zonama might have precipitated its awakening. Having discovered the Jedi's desire for peace, Sekot agreed to accompany them back to the galaxy, in an effort to bring the war against the Yuuzhan Vong to a peaceful conclusion. However, the treacherous actions of Nom Anor nearly destroyed the planet. In order to avoid a deadly explosion, Sekot had to jump into hyperspace, thereby killing the incubator the Yuuzhan Vong had placed in hyperdrive vanes that moved the planet. Unable to reconcile its situation, Sekot retreated into itself, ignoring the ecological deterioration experienced by Zonama as the planet jumped in and out of hyperspace. Finally, after conferring with Master Skywalker, Sekot realized that it had to "fight without fighting" against the Yuuzhan Vong, and jumped to Coruscant to try and stall the final conflict that was about to occur. Sekot allowed its starships to be used for defense only during the battle, until it realized that Supreme Overlord Shimrra was planning to use the Alpha Red virus against it. Rather than fighting back, Sekot simply used the natural gravitic abilities of Zonama to pull the Yuuzhan Vong toward it, defending itself by welcoming home its true inhabitants. The virus itself was a simple enough matter to convert into a harmless material, but convincing the Yuuzhan Vong that Zonama Sekot was actually the "offspring" of Yuuzhan'tar was another matter. After the hostilities at Corsucant were concluded by the deaths of Shimrra and Onimi, Sekot discovered that it had been a living part of Yuuzhan'tar that had been cast out into the intergalactic void when it was realized that the ur-Yuuzhan Vong were going to obliterate themselves through war and conflict. The hope was that Zonama Sekot would evolve its own consciousness, and hopefull serve as a new home for those Yuuzhan Vong who put aside their warring ways and returned to a path of enlightenment. Sekot believed that its initial encounter with the Yuuzhan Vong some fifty years earlier was actually precipitated by Skot itself, in the form of a psychic call to welcome the Yuuzhan Vong home. This initial encounter ended in brief, and the truth of its events weren't borne out until much later. The Galactic Alliance, acting on the advice of Master Skywalker and the Jedi, allowed the Yuuzhan Vong to have Zonama Sekot as their new home. Sekot believed that, with time, the Yuuzhan Vong would also recover their ability to connect to the Force. To give the Yuuzhan Vong every chance it could, Sekot took the planet into the Unknown Regions and away from Coruscant. (RP, FH3, UF)

this was the generic term used to describe the incredibly fast starships which were produced on the planet Zonama Sekot, during the last decades of the Old Republic. These ships were organic in nature, and were rumored to be capable of making 0.4 past lightspeed. It was later revealed that these ships were "grown" to a specific master from unique seed-partners which grew around standard starship mechanical parts. The resulting starship was emotionally attached to its master, who controlled the ship by initiating physical contact with it. The development process of these ships was quite intense, and the new master had to be emotionally and mentally ready to accept the burden of ownership. Otherwise, the seed-partners would reject the master. The ships were formed by and extension of Sekot, with the help of immense tree-factories known as Jentari. While not intelligent, Sekotan starships were no doubt alive, and could not survive without the physical and emotional contact of their masters. In order to obtain a ship, a prospective buyer had to locate an agent of Zonama Sekot, who would then arrange for transport to the planet. The planet's exact location was a well-guarded secret, and after the creation process was completed, the buyer had their short-term memory wiped clean to remove any trace of information on the planet or the creation process. After the disappearance of the planet Zonama Sekot some three years after the Battle of Naboo, all Sekotan starships suddenly withered and died, and no others were ever seen in the known galaxy again. This indicated that the living ships also needed a tenuous contact with Sekot itself in order to survive. The development of these starships followed the pattern of the lifecycle of a boras tree, with the seed-partners being forged into seed-disks, then annealed into starship form. (RP)

Sektor 242 NewsLine

this small, highly-accurate, and objective news agency was based in the Outer Rim. It has traditionally been wildly pro-alien, and is deeply supportive of individual rights. These traits were only heightened by the rise of Emperor Palpatine and the New Order. (GG9)

Seku

this was a common name given to Twi'lek females, and meant "memory" in the Twi'leki language. (GCG)

Seku

this Twi'lek female held the rank of Captain within the Hawk-bat pirate command structure. In reality, the Ryloth native was Dia Passik. Seku was easily distinguished by the detailed tattoos which adorned her lekku. During a meeting with Zsinj, during which Castin Donn was discovered within the medical facilities of the Iron Fist, Seku was forced to shoot Donn, much to Dia's dismay. The only thing that kept her sane was the fact that Castin was already near death. (IF) this was a common name given to male Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG) this thin, nervous woman served the New Republic Navy as Wedge Antilles' second-in-command aboard the Yavin during the assault on Almania. She was a crack shot and an invaluable assistant while on Coruscant. She held the rank of Major at the time of the attack on Almania. (TNR)

Sel

Sela

Sela

a group of Imperial cargo freighters assigned to transport a number of TIE Defender prototypes to the Hininbirg. (TIE)

Sela

this star is the primary body of the Seltaine planetary system of Irishi Sector. (SWJ10)

Selab

world on which lives the wisdom trees (or so legend has it), part of the Hapan System. (CPL)

Selab Tree

another name for the wisdom trees native to Selab. (CPL)

Selacron

this world is one of the moons surrounding Selaggis Six, and was ostensibly in the control of Imperial Warlord Zsinj. Five months before the Battle of Selaggis, Zsinj discovered that a group of colonists had taken up residence on the moon. Infuriated, Zsinj punished them as an example to anyone who would dare to colonize a world within his borders, but without his permission. He destroyed the colony entirely, leaving nothing but ruins behind. (SOC, CPL)

Selaggis

this yellow star was located at the center of a solar system containing seven planets. It was located eight light-years from Vahaba and close to the Halmad System. Lara Notsil and Tonin deleted its location from the navigational computer aboard the Iron Fist, hoping that Zsinj would be dragged out of hyperspace by its presence when he fled the battle against Han Solo and the Mon Remonda near Vahaba. Her plan worked, as the Iron Fist tried to flee but was brought out of hyperspace when it encountered the star. (SOC)

Selaggis Six

this yellow-orange gas giant orbited the star Selaggis. It had a heavy debris ring, and was surrounded by several mons. Five months after Zsinj destroyed a colony on the moon of Selacron, Zsinj was forced to flee to Selaggis when he was caught by Han Solo and the Mon Remonda near Vahaba. Lara Notsil had removed Selaggis from the Iron Fist's computers, and Zsinj's fleet was dragged from hyperspace when it encountered Selaggis. (CPL, SOC)

Selana

this bounty hunter was one of the Lieutenants in the Oquan, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GMR5)

Seland' Ir

this Verpine was exiled from his hive, although he claimed to know nothing of the reasons behind the exile. He later joined the Karazak Slavers Cooperative as a project developer, and used his talents to organization and calculation to ensure that any KSC mission would benefit the overall guild. (GG11)

Selander

a Ripoblus modified CR90 corvette that attacked the Youst station during the Sepan Civil War. (TIE)

Selba

this Old Corellian word was used to describe a youth who was held in high regard by his elders. (BSS)

SELSCORE

this was the shorten name of the Senate Select Committee for Refugees, established after the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy. (JE)

Seldam, Jax

this man was a native of the planet Sevarcos, and although he deplored the Alliance's operational planning, he still supported them whenever he could. He acted as a contact point for Alliance personnel on Sevarcos. Seldam also worked to destroy the operations of Lord Quintas, who was strip-mining Sevarcos in order to obtain more spice for the Empire. (SWJ12)

Seldibia

this was the third moon orbiting the planet Mutanda. (PG1)

Seldom Different

this YT-1300 transport was owned by Abdi-Badawzi, and operated by Elias Halbert, during the New Order. (SWJ2, BSS)

Seldona, Hari

a famous poet from the planet Alderaan, Hari Seldona was performing in the Corellian Sector when the Death Star destroyed her home planet. Her poetry had a distinctive anti-Empire theme, and this caused her to drop out of sight when Alderaan was destroyed. She kept on reading her poetry in public, though, appearing unannounced and speaking out against the Empire. Once the message has been delivered, she quickly escapes the crowds and hides. (ISU)

Select, The

this was the term used by Nom Anor, acting as the prophet Yu'shaa, to describe those loyal individuals who were sent to infiltrate the ranks of the Yuuzhan Vong military and government. Those Shamed ones who showed a quick intellect without too much independent thought were assigned to get as close to Supreme Overlord Shimrra as possible and spread The Message, while carrying concealed villips that would allow Nom Anor to see what Shimrra was planning. (FH2)

Seledrood

an Imperial Captain killed in battle. (ISB)

Selene

this woman was captured, along with Dustil Onasi, during the Sith raid on the planet Taris, some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. The pair were brought to Korriban for training, but Selene showed little aptitude for the Force. Uthar Wynn ordered her executed, so that the Sith would waste no more resource on her. (KOTOR)

Selenius VII

a planet. (GG10)

Selenome

this huge, predatory sea creature was native to a single world, although its exact location was never discovered. Selenomes grew in huge reefs, a form of camouflage that allowed the colony to exist in plain sight. When a food source got too close to the reef, individual selenomes could reach out and grab the prey. During the height of the Clone Wars, entire colonies of selenomes were exported by the Separatists for use as defense systems on aquatic worlds like Vandor-3. (TCD)

Se'Lenti

this was the Gorothite term for The Scouring. (GSE)

Selesin Medicinal Electronics

this small corporation produced a range of equipment that helped doctors and field medics maintain a being's physical well-being. (FOP)

Selestrine

this woman was the Queen of the Icarrii at the time when Imperial Commander Karda went rogue. Karda had been ordered to destroy the Icarri by his commanding officer, General Nim, and managed to poison the entire Icarrii tribe and kill them. Karda then took Selestrine captive, hoping to gain riches and power through her ability to predict the future. Selestrine, already dismayed by the death of her tribe, tried to commit suicide by taking the same poison Karda had used on them. He discovered her plan before it could be complete, and beheaded her before the poison could destroy her head. A group of medics then encased her head in a life-sustaining casket covered with kneeb hide, and she predicted that General Nim would be killed in action. Her prophecy came true when Nim arrived to claim her head from Karda, and he killed Nim and his guards. Karda fled the Empire as a fugitive. It was during this time the Selestrine foresaw her own fate was held by a dark-shadowed man, but she saw nothing more than that. He made several stops and used several different ships in order to evade pursuit, but Selestrine began telling him of his own future. She predicted that Karda would be hunted down and killed by Boba Fett exactly thirty-one days from the day he destroyed the Icarrii, and she counted them down on a regular basis. This slowly drove Karda mad over the thirty-one days, during which time he had hidden among the brothers of the Ancient Order of the Pessimists on Maryx Minor. In the end, Selestrine's prophecy was proven correct, as Fett captured and killed Karda on Maryx Minor before taking possession of her disembodied head. However, Darth Vader himself was on Maryx Minor, hoping to take possession of her head. Selestrine realized that Vader was the dark man of her own future. She warned him of Vader's approach, and began taunting him as well. Fett took several strands of her bejeweled hair as a hedge against the future, and set out to defeat Vader. During the struggle between the two armor-clad opponents, Fett managed to retain possession of the small casket, until Vader cornered him at the lip of a lava pit. In an effort to throw off Vader's attacks, Fett kicked the casket into the pit. Selestrine believed she was finally dead, until Vader used the Dark Side of the Force to recover the casket before it could hit the lava. She then taunted Vader with visions of his own future, hoping that Vader would pay for the knowledge of his future by killing her. In this she was also proven correct, as Vader destroyed her head shortly before Emperor Palpatine ordered it delivered to him personally. (EOE)

Self-Regulating Droidmaker

this huge, slab-shaped machine was produced by Loronar Corporation during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. The SRD was developed to turn large quantities of raw materials into droids, without the need for dedicated manufacturing floorspace for multiple tools and equipment. (SWI75)

Selgon

this searing ball of rock was the innermost planet of the Axum System, located in the Core Worlds. (CCW)

Selid, Kleyn

this man served as the Imperial Colonel guarding the Mount Tantiss project on Wayland, during the early years of the New Republic. Selid earned his rank at a young age, was known for his no-nonsense approach to his duties, and rarely took time off from his job. Although he rankled at being given command of the Mount Tantiss base - considering it mere baby-sitting rather than a real command - he became involved in a battle of wills with Joruus C'baoth after the Guardian appeared on the planet. It was Selid who was forced to relay information on the death of General Covell to Thrawn and Captain Gilad Pellaeon, but the information available to him was incomplete. Selid was then faced with a series of strange orders from Thrawn, who had recognized that Covell's death was attributable to the insane Dark Jedi, Joruus C'baoth. Thrawn ordered Selid to seal off C'baoth in the Emperor's chambers, then seal off the mountain from any of the troops which had been in contact with either C'baoth or Covell. Selid didn't understand, but he moved swiftly to carry out the orders. (TLC, TTSB)

Selif Xam

this Polis Massan was one of the many members of the archaeological team that was investigating the ancient civilization of the sundered world of Polis Massa, during the last years of the Old Republic. Selif Xam was trained as a physician, and served the archaeological team as a doctor and surgeon. Thus, when Padme' Amidala was brought to Polis Massa by Obi-Wan Kenobi, Selif Xam was on duty to assist in helping her deliver her twin babies. (VD3)

Seline

this remote, outpost world was the site of a Jedi starport during the last decades of the Old Republic. Its facilities were limited, but available to any traveling Jedi who needed assistance. (RP)

Selio

this was the term used by the Krieks to describe their basic family unit. (SWJ13)

Selkath

this amphibious race was native to the planet Manaan. Humanoid in stature, the average Selkath was distinguished by its sleek, hydrodynamic body. Their long fingers were tipped with poisonous, retractable claws, although many Selkath used these claws only as a last resort. They were the sole producers of kolto during the height of the Great Sith War, and maintained very strict control over its production and export. They chose to remain neutral during the conflict, and tended to view themselves as superior to the rest of the galaxy. Other races regarded this as arrogance, but the Selkath refused to allow one side or the other to gain an advantage by controlling kolto. When production mysteriously halted, the Selkath appealed to the Old Republic for help. Since Manaan was not officially a member of the Republic, help was never dispatched to the remote world. Since that time, kolto production had steadily recovered, but the Selkath vowed never to allow outside influences to control their planet or the production of kolto. Over the centuries, however, the Selkath civilization regressed into a primitive state, so that by the time Imperial scouts rediscovered the planet, the Selkath were living in undersea caverns and could barely understand the Basic language. Petty warlords staged unceasing raids on each other, leaving the Selkath with no formal defenses. Thus, when the Empire rediscovered the planet, the Selkath were quickly subjugated by Imperial forces. They were forbidden to return to the seas, and those few who tried were brutally punished. A few Selkath maintained a record of their previous prosperity, if only through stories, and remained hidden from their Imperial oppressors until they could stage a rebellion. (KOTOR, PH)

Selkatha

this was the native language of the Selkath race. It was formed from a series of guttural, throaty sounds that carried exceptionally well underwater. (KOTOR, PH) one of the primary cities on the now-destroyed planet of Demophon, Selkren was domed to keep the harsh environment at bay. (SN)

Selkren

Selladas

this planet was under Imperial control shortly after the Battle of Yavin. In their attempt to destroy the Imperial garrison there, the Alliance inadvertently wiped out a large civilian population, including the Srrors'tok village in which Tyonsis Cex lived. (GG10)

Sellbo

the navigator of the old strahip Last Legs. (GG9)

Selle

this dark-skinned, female bounty hunter and her partner Brazzo were killed by Darth Vader on Centares, after they learned that Luke Skywalker had destroyed the first Death Star. (VQ)

Selligore

this large, elephantine creature inhabited the tropical waters of the planet Corsin. Measuring four meters tall at the shoulder and up to twenty meters in length, selligore had colorful hides and were quite harmless despite their size. They lived on the plankton and small fish of their waters. Like other aquatic mammals, selligore could survive underwater for several hours before requiring a breath. Their four feet ended in four long toes, and a fin-like fan covered their dorsal ridge. Their large ears also resembled huge fins, and their long faces ended with four thick trunks. (COG)

Sellis

Sellis was a news anchor for the Andasala Achievement News. (GG11)

Selliwurm

a timid, snake-like creature that would just as soon run and hide than confront another creature. (SWJ12)

Sellsecret

this was a slang term used on the planet Tatooine to describe any being who make a living buying and selling information. The term sellsecret had a more dubious connotation than infochant. (TG) this Imperial prison planet was located in the Seltaine System of Irishi Sector. The surface of the planet was utterly devoid of life, without plants or animals, and had barren, frigid landscape. The prison was contained in several domes which kept good air in and bad air out. This arrangement was often preferred by the Empire, because it made escape from the prison nearly impossible to survive. The average day on Selnesh lasts 37 standard hours, and its year lasts 489 local days. (SWJ10, TFE)

Selnesh

Selona

this was the third month of the Tapani local calendar, which mapped almost directly to the Coruscant local calendar. (PGT)

Selong Lian

this Yuuzhan Vong, a member of Domain Lian, served as Warmaster Tsavong Lah's chief aide, following the Battle of Duro. (EVR)

Selonía

a New Republic fleet hauler damaged when a poacher's bomb - which had been disguised as a datapad - exploded in her hold. (BTS)

Selonía

one of the five inhabited planets in the Corellian System, Selonia was an ocean world that was home to the Selonian race. The planet and its inhabitants was renowned for its poetry. Han Solo once told his children that Selonia was home to all of the Corellian System's sea monsters, because it was the only planet with oceans large enough to hold them. Much of the planet's crust and mantle was riddled with caves and passageways, and it was in these subterranean locations that the native Selonians made their warrens. For much of its history, Selonia remained aloof from the rest of the galaxy, preferring live in their warrens in relative peace. (AC, CCW)

Selonian

one of the three primary races in the Corellian System, the Selonians are tall, strong, and quick. Often referred to as serious-minded and refined, the Selonians are well-muscled and covered with short, sleek fur, giving them a seal-like appearance. They have bristly whiskers on their noses, sharp teeth, and long tails. They are excellent swimmers. Taller and more slender than humans, they have long bodies and short limbs. Selonians are equally comfortable walking upright or on all-fours. Each hand or foot is equipped with retractable claws for climbing or defense. The Selonian race is believed to be descended from a predatory aquatic mammal which lived in riverside burrows, but later dug deeper into the ground and farther from water. Each burrow is inhabited by all members of a Selonian family; collectively, they are called a sept. Each sept is distinguished by its lone fertile male breeder. This male, along with the one fertile female, give birth to the sept's members. All male Selonians are born fertile; one of every hundred Selonians born is a male. Of 500 female Selonians, only one will be fertile. These fertile members of the sept, while revered for their fertility, are forced to remain in the burrows. The sterile females run the day-to-day activities of the sept. Non-familial groupings of Selonians, such as the government, are called dens. Each den is made up of sterile females. The Selonians have learned that dealing with other aliens, especially humans, is dangerous. Thus, only specially-trained females ever leave their burrows and contact the outside world. These females learn Basic in addition to the normal conversational Selonian tongue. All Selonians can also speak a modified language of sounds that is used in their burrows. Its pure sounds are not affected by echoes or other auditory anomalies caused by the burrows. (AC, AS, EGA)

Selonian

this was the name given to the native language of the Selonian race. (ANT)

Selonian Coneship

any of the hand-built Selonian transport ships, these coneships look like flattened cones. The wide end contains the ship's engines, while the small end contains the cockpit and viewports. The entire ship lands point upward, so that the ship's pilots must face upward on liftoff, rather than forward as on most horizontal craft. The average coneship measures 20.5 meters in length, and has only enough room for a pilot and two passengers. The New Republic was forced to enact travellers' advisories in the Corellian system whenever a coneship was in flight, due to their unpredictable nature. (AS, CTD)

Selonian Enclave

the name given to the Selonian embassy building in Coronet, on Corellia. The Selonian Enclave was the sight of the first Human League attack on the Selonians in Coronet, following an attack on a Selonian neighborhood in Bela Vistal. (AC)

Selonian Fire

this Victory-class Star Destroyer was part of the fleet dispatched under the command of Admiral Ackbar to liberate the planet Ciutric from Prince-Admiral Krennel. Using the Thrawn Pincer to surprise Krennel's fleet, Ackbar had the Selonian Fire and a sister ship, the Corusca Fire, remain on the far side of the Ciutric System until called for. When Krennel activated the gravity well projectors on the Binder, Ackbar ordered the two Victory-class ships to microjump forward. The gravity shadow from the Binder pulled them out of hyperspace behind Krennel's fleet, allowing them to pummel Krennel's ships which were also trapped in place by the Interdictor cruiser. (IR)

Selonian Glaive

this heavy weapon was developed by the Selonian race, and was the primary weapon used in combat. The shaft of the glaive was formed from heavy wood. At one end of the glaive was an obsidian blade, while the other end sported a collection of obsidian hooks and barbs. Each glaive was created by an individual Selonian female, who proved herself worthy of wielding it by locating the materials herself. (CCW)

Seltaya

this planet is the third of three worlds which orbit the star Ropagi. Its orbit is quite a distance from Ropagi and the inner planets, Elpur and Ropagi II. It is a frigid ball of rock. (TSK)

Seltaya-class Fast Courier

this courier ship was developed by Hoersh-Kessel during the last years of the Old Republic. (YDR)

Selth

Seltiss-1

this was a form of Hutt Caravel produced by Ubrikkian Industries during the last years of the Old Republic. Measuring thirty meters in length, the Seltiss-1 could accommodate up to sixty-five passengers and 150 metric tons of cargo. Its crew complement included a pilot and co-pilot, as well as up to three gunners. The Seltiss-1 was armed with four turret-mounted turbolaser cannons, a tractor beam projector, and a concussion missile launcher. (TF)

Seltiss-2

this modest caravel design was popular with up-and-coming Hutt figures who were only a few centuries old and have not established themselves as prominent figures. It was a large, space-going barge with a large, overhead sail and a prominent bow. (EGV)

Selton

this was a city located on the planet Naboo. Dren Melne was a native of this city. (SFT)

Seltos

this planet is located in the Seltos System, and is known for its production of food, lumber, and precious ores. It is a mountainous world covered in dense forests. It orbits its primary star once every 459 days, which last about 20 standard hours. (RPG, GG12, TSK)

Seltos Planetary Soldiers

this group of law enforcement agents was created when the populace of Seltos overthrew the pro-Imperial government some years after the Battle of Endor. The new government, strongly aligned with the New Republic, established the SPS to help control former Imperial leaders and other dissidents. (TSK)

Seltrayne, Melenna

this young woman grew up an a street urchin on Ord Mantell, and was recruited into the Alliance when she failed in an attempt to pick Koris Haslam's wallet. She became a loyal member of his unit, answering only to Haslam before accepting the orders of the Alliance commanders. She was a pretty, slightly-built woman with blue eyes and blonde hair, and she often used her beauty to draw her targets off their guard. (SWJ10)

Selty

one of the Black Sun criminals working with Grobber during the reign of Zekka Thyne over Black Sun's Corellian interests. (TFE)

Selu

this YT-1300 transport was owned and operated by Twin Suns Transport Service. It was piloted by Aeron Azzameen during the Galactic Civil War, until it came uder fire from Viraxo pirates. Aeron's brother Ace was forced to destroy th Selu to prevent it from falling into the hands of the Viraxo. (XWA)

Seluss

this name was common among Sullustan males, and referred to a serpent that was found in Sullustan caves. The appearance of this serpent was considered a good omen among Sullustan miners. (GCG)

Seluss

this serpent was found in the tunnels and caves of the planet Sullust. Its sudden appearance was considered a good omen to Sullustan miners, since it indicated that the area was relatively safe to enter and exist in. (GCG)

Seluss

this Sullustan pilot worked with the smuggler Jarril, and was Jarril's primary business partner. Seluss once managed to steal the plans to the Millennium Falcon, but he was discovered by Han Solo and forced to return them. He disappeared during the bombing of the Senate Assembly Chamber, and was nowhere to be found when Jarril returned from discussing the Smuggler's Run with Han Solo. Thus, he wasn't aboard the Spicy Lady when it was hijacked by Dolph's agents. Jarril was killed, but Seluss returned to the Run continue Jarril's inquiry into the strange happenings within the Run. He faked his hatred toward Solo to cover his tracks and arrange a meeting with Solo in the Run. He was able to tell Han about the old Imperial equipment being transported through the Run, helping Solo break the mystery of the Run and undermine the efforts of Nandreeson. (TNR)

Selvaris

this planet, orbited by a single moon, was captured by the Yuuzhan Vong during their invasion of the galaxy. A hot world, Selvaris orbited Centis Major and Renaant, the twin suns of the Tantara system, which continually bathed the planet in oppressive heat and humidity. The aquamarine oceans of Selvaris teemed with life, providing shellfish and fish for food. Its forests and jungles were also bountiful, providing many forms of fruits and vegetables. After the Battle of Coruscant, Selvaris was converted into a prison world, with a number of camps scattered across its landmasses. It was here that the prisoners captured during the Galactic Alliance's Operation Trinity at Bilbringi were taken for incarceration, until they could be sacrificed in a massive ceremony meant to solidify the Yuuzhan Vong's supremacy in the galaxy. It was from Selvaris that Han Solo and his wife, Leia Organa Solo, rescued the Jenet soldier Thorsh, who carried an important collection of mathematics codes in his head. (UF)

Selven

this woman was wanted by the Sith for a series of crimes, during the years leading up to the Great Sith War. She was killed in her apartment in the Lower City of Taris by a bounty hunter, who had been hired by Zax the Hutt. (KOTOR)

Semag System

Grand Admiral Thrawn tried to capture Admiral Zaarin in this system, in which the Empire developed its first, working cloaking device. (TIE)

Sembla

this water-covered planet was the homeworld of the Vurk race. Much of the surface of Sembla was in a constant state of change, as active volcanoes regularly deposited new lava formations to alter the livable landmass. (SWDB)

Semmac

a Bakuran Naval Captain, he served under Hortel Ossilege in the siege of Centerpoint Station. (SC)

Semqi Pefis

Vocis Kenit was assigned to this Victory-class Star Destroyer shortly after his graduation from the Imperial Academy on Lianna and his promotion to Junior Lieutenant. (FOP)

Semtin

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Semtin, Marl

this Imperial Captain was distinguished by the metallic cyborg implants which covered his eyes and ears. A man who was frustrated by the Imperial bureaucracy's slow pace, he often worked with the criminal underground to obtain what he needed. Semtin lost his eyes after a deal with the criminal underground went sour. The staunch Imperial was forced to accept Trandoshan eyes as replacements when a raid on BioTech Industries' base on Ambria - at his direction - failed to produce a human pair. He was in command of the Victory-class Star Destroyer Harrow shortly after the Battle of Endor, and was one of the few Imperial officers who knew of the location of the Eidolon. He had researched the disappearance of the ship, and eventually discovered the truth. He threatened to blackmail Sate Pestage, and the vizier offered him a portion of the cache as payment for keeping the secret. Semtin maintained a small detachment of officers on Tatooine in hopes of securing the Eidolon Base cache for himself, and managed to capture Firth Olan before the Twi'lek could discover Eidolon Base himself. He brought the alien back to Ryloth, in an attempt to draw off Rogue Squadron's interest in Eidolon Base. He later brought out a group of elite special forces under the command of Sixtus Quin, in order to eliminate the Rogues. Once Semtin's treachery in using Olan to further his own plans for domination were discovered by Sixtus' men, they hunted Semtin down at Eidolon Base. Sixtus executed Semtin as soon as he was captured. (XWBT, HXW)

Sen

this was a common component used to create the names given to Cerean males. In general, male Cereans given an individual name, which is added to the names of their father and grandfather. Complete male names are arranged based on harmony and cadence, but the literal meanings are arranged to ensure proper descriptions. The name Sen indicated a judge or justiciar, or the quality of justice. (GCG)

Sen

an Imperial assault transport group dispatched to Venzelii 2 Prime. (TIE)

Sen Udo-Mal

this Cerean was a noted Jedi Master and consular of the Old Republic. (SWRPG)

Sena

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Senalak

this thin, meter-long organic spike was developed by the Yuuzhan Vong as a defense mechanism. Senalaks were grown in much the same way as grass or reeds, thriving in sandy soil. The roots of the senalak were also covered with thorns, and ravenously dug themselves into the soil. The blue tip of a senalak shaft contained a strand of thorn-studded cord, which was ejected and whipped about whenever an enemy presence disturbed the shaft. The thorny cord would then catch in the clothing or skin of the enemy, trapping it as the cord retracted back into the shaft. (SBS, UF)

Senali

this was the name adopted by those Rutanians who colonized the moon of Senali and then won their independence in a bloody civil war. Although they were descended from Rutanian stock, they had a silvery coloration to their skin from tiny scales which had evolved over the generations. Senali also wore their hair shorter than the Rutanians. As a society, the Senali tried to do away with titles and the trappings of office, in an effort to ensure that every member of society was equal. Where their ancestors the Rutanians preferred to hunt and kill for sport, the Senali chose to hunt only to obtain food. Any food which was left over from a hunt was distributed to other families, so that no part of a kill was wasted. About twelve years before the Battle of Naboo, the Senali people became divided when Prince Leed of Rutan decided to remain on Senali. One faction argued that he should be allowed to do as he wished, since it was legally his decision. The other faction wanted him to return to Rutan, thereby ensuring the relative peace between the Rutanians and the Senalis. In the end, Leed was given the chance to remain on Senali, and the leaders of the two planets re-established the peace. This arrangement worked well for many years, until the Rutanians sold information on the Senali to the Yuuzhan Vong. The alien invaders utterly devastated Senali, wiping out the civilization and much of the planet's surface before turning their attack to eliminate the Rutanians as well. (SP, FH1)

Senali

this ocean-covered world was one of the moons orbiting the planet Rutan, and was once a colony world established by the Rutanians. Note that Jedi Apprentice: The Shattered Peace also describes Senali as a planet with four moons. The planet's four moons create intense tidal variation, creating swift currents in the oceans. In a violent and catastrophic civil war, Senali won its independence in a stunning upset. However, the war left both worlds devastated. The government of Rutan agreed to recognize Senali as a unique world, and both agreed to work together for peace. In an effort to continue the peace, it was agreed that the first-born child of each generation of the ruling houses on both worlds would travel to the other world once they reached the age of seven. They would remain on the other planet for nine years, learning about the other society. During this time, the children were allowed to receive visitors from, and occasionally visit, their homeworld, so that they never forgot their heritage. At the age of sixteen, the youths were allowed to return home in preparation for taking over as ruler of their homeworld. Another member of the royal family moved to the other world until the next generation was born. This arrangement worked well for many years, until the Rutanians sold information on the Senali to the Yuuzhan Vong. The alien invaders utterly devastated Senali, wiping out the civilization and much of the planet's surface before turning their attack to eliminate the Rutanians as well. (SP, FH1)

Senate Action Subcommittee

this was the name used to describe the small, specialized groups of Old Republic politicians that were appointed to perform a specific task. These action subcommittees were funded by the Galactic Senate, and were assigned to any number of necessities. During the Clone Wars, several action subcommittees were created to address various aspects of the war. However, like much of the Senate's proceedings, the work of the action subcommittees was often bogged down in political wrangling, meaning that nothing ever got done in a timely fashion. This was never more evident than when Senator Onaconda Farr was forced to step down as the leader of the Corellian Trade Spine Defense subcommittee, after the planet Duro was captured by the Separatists. Many reporters believed that Chancellor Palpatine would dissolve all current action subcommittees, in favor of a more centralized war office. (SWI75)

Senate Arena

this was another term used to describe the Grand Convocation Chamber of the Senate Rotunda, used because it was often the site of heated debates that bordered on becoming all-out brawls. (E3N)

Senate Assembly Chamber

this huge, multi-tiered auditorium was located near the Imperial Palace on Coruscant. It was crowned by a beautiful stained-glass ceiling. The New Republic used this building to convene the full Senate body on a regular basis. Much of the seating was left over from the days of Emperor Palpatine, and did not quite accommodate many alien species. It was in this building, during a full Senate meeting, that Dolph triggered the detonation devices that were hidden in many of the Senators' personal droids. The resulting combination of explosions destroyed a great deal of the Chamber, and killed a large number of Senators. The initial blasts did a fair amount of damage, but the stained glass of the ceiling was never meant to withstand such a blast. The support structure and most of the glass rained down on the beings convened there, inflicting many lacerations and cuts, many of which were fatal. (TNR)

Senate Assembly Chamber

this huge, oblate building dominated the center of Galactic City on Coruscant during the Old Republic. The structure measured two full kilometers in diameter. Within its walls, the Senate debated on every aspect of galactic politics. 1,024 repulsor-equipped platforms were arranged around the chamber walls, allowing a delegation to move into the center of the chamber and address the entire chamber. It was rumored that some of the platforms were given speedier repulsor engines, thereby allowing the delegates they carried to reach the Chancellor's podium faster than other platforms. Radiating out behind the bay of each repulsor platform was a long chamber which provided each Senator with an environment that suited their natural worlds. The Chancellor, the Vice Chariman, and their immediate staff presided over the Senate chamber in a centrally-located spire which was topped with an open array of seats and stood 30 meters tall. In order to ensure that everything was done according to procedure, Senate cam droids floated throughout the chamber, recording speeches and monitoring votes while providing real-time coverage of all debates. These droids also piped audio to a central computer, which could send translated audio streams to the other delegates. (IG1, IWE1, COD)

Senate Budgetary Committee

once part of the Imperial Senate, they were responsible for authorizing the dispensing of credits to various groups within the Old Republic and, later, the Empire. This committee was disbanded along with the entire Senate, by Emperor Palpatine. (ISB)

Senate Bureau of Intelligence

this was the primary investigative force assigned to the Old Republic's Galactic Senate. The SBI as under the command of Armand Isard during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Isard was hand-picked by Chancellor Palpatine to reform the SBI, after the secession of many planets from the Republic and the growing terrorist attacks of the Separatists. (HNN5)

Senate Cam Droid

this was the generic term used to describe the small, repulsor-equipped droids which monitored the Senate proceedings of the Old Republic. Built to be unobtrusive, these droids had audio and video pickups which allowed them to provide real-time coverage of the Senate's proceedings. The coverage was also recorded for future reference. Audio was fed to a central computer, which could then provide translated audio to the other Senators. A small number of these droids were assigned to individual Senators, while the majority were allowed to move about the chamber and record the debates. (SW1, IG1)

Senate Committee on New World Discovery and Exploration

this Old Republic Senate committee was charged with funding and furthering the exploration of the known galaxy, beyond all known borders. (PG3)

Senate District

this area of Imperial City on Coruscant was centered around the old Senate Rotunda, and contained much of the surrounding cityscape. Standing in stark contrast to its opulence, however, was the abandoned factory area known as The Works. (RP, LEV)

Senate Emergency Response

this body was formed by the Galactic Senate on Coruscant, in case of a catastrophic event that destroyed much of the galaxy's governmental structure. It was used only once in recorded history, in the wake of the First Battle of Coruscant, when Chancellor Palpatine assume the role of Emperor. The Senate Emergency Response team was forced to declare martial law on Coruscant after Palpatine claimed that the Jedi Order had tried to assassinate him, as part of a far-reaching plot to take control of the galaxy. Among their first actions was to surround the Jedi Temple and ensure that the so-called Jedi Rebellion didn't spread beyond its walls. (E3N)

Senate Guard

this was the order of stoic, blue-armored guards who protected the members of the Old Republic Senate. Their armor was distinctive, and was often considered to be one of the design cues used by the Imperial Royal Guards. Interestingly enough, the design for the Senate Guards' armor was based on the armor of the ancient Neo-Crusaders of Mandalore. Small groups of Senate Guards were deployed across Coruscant to ensure the safety of the various members of the Galactic Senate. Their jurisdiction was not limited to Coruscant, however, as the Senate Guards often accompanied Senators to conferences and special sessions throughout the galaxy. Thus, the selection criteria for the Senate Guard was exceptionally stringent, in order to locate truly non-partisan guards who served the Republic itself. A select unit of the Senate Guard, charged with protecting Senator Palpatine after he was named the Supreme Chancellor of the Republic, was distinguished from the Senate Guard by their red armor. Known as the Red Guard, these guards eventually became the Imperial Royal Guards. During the height of the New Order, the Senate Guard was rendered irrelevant when Emperor Palpatine dissolved the Galactic Senate. (IG1, SWI80, SWDB)

Senate Hall

this was the name of the building which housed the New Republic Senate, during the earliest years of the New Republic. It was built upon the foundation of the old Galactic Senate Rotunda, which had suffered damaged during the Imperial occupation of Coruscant. The Senate Hall was used for many years until it suffered major damage in an attack by Dooku. In its place, and upon the Rotunda foundation which took very little damage, was built the Grand Convocation Chamber. (SOP, T) this was the original Senatorial building established on the planet Coruscant, to serve as the base of operations for the Galactic Senate. It was later replaced by the Senate Rotunda, also known as the Galactic Senate Chamber. (CCW)

Senate Hall

Senate Hill

located in Imperial City, on Coruscant, Senate Hill was formed by a series of small, unimposing monuments to the justice and glory of Old Republic. When Palpatine rebuilt much of Imperial City, he left Senate Hill alone, preferring to dwarf its significance with the sheer size of the Imperial Palace. (XWN)

Senate Hospital

see Senate Medcenter (LEV)

Senate Intelligence Oversight Committee

this branch of the Galactic Senate was charged with ensuring that funds provided to the Grand Army of the Republic were put to proper use, during the height of the Clone Wars. The committee opposed any non-military usage of clone troopers, and had tried to block the use of clone commandos and probe droids on Coruscant itself. Chancellor Palpatine eventually overruled their decision, citing that Separatist spies might already be working on the planet. This decision allowed Mace Windu to assemble a team of investigators to search The Works for evidence of Darth Sidious' existence. (LEV)

Senate Interspecies Advisory Committee

this group, sponsored by the Galactic Senate several decades before the Clone Wars, was formed to monitor the growing racial tensions between members of various alien and human races. The panel consisted of governmental experts as well as Jedi Knights, in an effort to understand how different races interacted with each other, and how to avoid unnecessary conflict. (DFR)

Senate Investigating Commission on Crime Syndication, Dissemination, and Proliferation in the Core and Mid-Rim Systems

this committee was formed within the Galactic Senate, several decades before the Battle of Geonosis, to investigate the ways in which criminal organizations were formed, grew, and expanded throughout the Core Worlds and the Mid Rim. Many Senators from other regions of the galaxy demanded that the committee expand its scope, since much of the galaxy's crime was moving away from the Core to avoid the notice of the Republic and the Jedi Order. (SOJ)

Senate Justice Council

this body, formed from the ranks of the New Republic Senate, was charged with ensuring that the Republic acted legally in its endeavors. (JE)

Senate Medcenter

this hospital facility was located in the Senate District of Coruscant, during the last decades of the Old Republic, and was set aside to handle the varied needs of the Galactic Senate and its members. (LEV)

Senate Office Building

this annex of the Senate Rotunda provided offices and working spaces for the Senators of the Old Republic and their aides, allowing them to accomplish work items and communicate with their constituents in between sessions of the Senate. (VD3, E3N)

Senate Planetary Intelligence Network

known as SPIN, this is a secret organization created by the Alliance after the death of Emperor Palpatine to uncover pockets of Imperial resistance in the galaxy. It was based on Yavin 4, until Trioculus razed the moon in his effort to locate the Lost City of the Jedi. SPIN was relocated from Yavin 4 to a location on Mount Yoda, on Dagobah, before Mon Mothman disbanded it in favor of other important missions. (GDV, MMY, EGC)

Senate Plaza

this was the name used to describe the open-air walkway that surrounded the Senate Rotunda on the planet Coruscant, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (LEV)

Senate Podium

see Chancellor's Podium (E3N)

Senate Relief Fund

this huge relief fund was established by the Galactic Senate of the Old Republic, to fund the recovery efforts that were performed on members worlds which suffered natural disasters or were ravaged by war. (JQ8)

Senate Rotunda

this was the name of the squat, round building used to house the Galactic Senate, during the last millennium of the Old Republic. Large enough to hold 1,024 delegates, their entourages, and living quarters for Senators and their assistants, the Rotunda plunged deep into the cityscape of Coruscant. Each Senator had a repulsor-equipped dais that allowed them to approach the Supreme Chancellor from their own offices. The docking station for each dais could generate a privacy screen, which allowed the Senators to discuss matters with their advisors. Neighboring privacy screens could be overlapped if two or more Senators wanted to converse. The Chancellor, as befitting his position, presided over the Senate from a tall spire located in the exact center of the Rotunda. The building's architect boasted that the Rotunda was indestructible, and that any weapon that could destroy it would crack Coruscant in half. During the Clone Wars, Chancellor Palpatine disabled the privacy screens, ostensibly to allow for more open dialogue on the war. In reality, this allowed his security hovercams to move about among the Senators, recording conversations that might be considered rebellious. The Rotunda endured the early stages of the Galactic Civil War, but suffered damaged when the Empire retook the planet five years after the Battle of Endor. It suffered more damage when the New Republic reclaimed Coruscant, but its internal structure remained intact. The Grand Convocation Chamber of the New Republic was built upon its remains, providing a stable base. (SW1, IWE1, T, VD3)

Senate Security Committee

this subteam of the Galactic Senate was focused on the safety and security of those beings who were serving as Senators during the height of the Clone Wars. (SWI81)

Senate Select Committee for Refugees

known as SELCORE, this New Republic Senate-approved committee was formed to address the problem of the incredible number of refugees who were forced to flee their homeworlds in the face of the Yuuzhna Vong invasion. The committee held the Conclave on the Plight of the Refugees in order to gain the agreement of planets to house, feed, and protect the refugees. Their ultimate goal was to establish species-specific enclaves for the peoples of the Tingel Arm and the Corporate Sector, matching compatible species in order to help maximize space. While the committee ran itself well enough, stretching every credit and every resource to its utmost degree to keep beings fed and housed, the continual advance of the Yuuzhan Vong kept the number of new refugees growing at an alarming rate. Unexpected help came in the form of humanitarian aid from the Hapes Consortium, which gave SELCORE much needed supplies and resources. What they lacked, however, were enough safeworlds on which to transplant the refugees. This situation was compounded by the fact that the Senators of the New Republic continued to argue about which planets to defend and which to abandon, and Senators from many well-defended worlds did not want their already strained resources to be diluted to accommodate refugees. After Viki Shesh was exposed as a traitor and the Yuuzhan Vong captured Coruscant, SELCORE was more or less disbanded as the government splintered and fled into the Outer Rim. (HT, JE, NJOSB)

Senate-class Transport

this was one of the most luxurious transport ships developed during the last years of the Old Republic. (RP)

Senator Cowardheart

this was the term used by the Phindian Captain of the Pride of Honor, when he confronted the New Republic Senators who had commandeered the warship to escape the Battle of Coruscant. He publically denounced the Senators' use of military ships for personal survival, demanding to know how they had the audacity to save their own lives while thousands remained trapped on Coruscant during the Yuuzhan Vong reshaping of the planet. (DW)

Senator Curdleguts

this was the term used by the Phindian Captain of the Pride of Honor, when he confronted the New Republic Senators who had commandeered the warship to escape the Battle of Coruscant. He publically denounced the Senators' use of military ships for personal survival, demanding to know how they had the audacity to save their own lives while thousands remained trapped on Coruscant during the Yuuzhan Vong reshaping of the planet. (DW)

Senator Decamp

this was the term used by the Phindian Captain of the Pride of Honor, when he confronted the New Republic Senators who had commandeered the warship to escape the Battle of Coruscant. He publically denounced the Senators' use of military ships for personal survival, demanding to know how they had the audacity to save their own lives while thousands remained trapped on Coruscant during the Yuuzhan Vong reshaping of the planet. (DW)

Senator Flyaway

this was the term used by the Phindian Captain of the Pride of Honor, when he confronted the New Republic Senators who had commandeered the warship to escape the Battle of Coruscant. He publically denounced the Senators' use of military ships for personal survival, demanding to know how they had the audacity to save their own lives while thousands remained trapped on Coruscant during the Yuuzhan Vong reshaping of the planet. (DW)

Senator Scramblefree

this was the term used by the Phindian Captain of the Pride of Honor, when he confronted the New Republic Senators who had commandeered the warship to escape the Battle of Coruscant. He publically denounced the Senators' use of military ships for personal survival, demanding to know how they had the audacity to save their own lives while thousands remained trapped on Coruscant during the Yuuzhan Vong reshaping of the planet. (DW)

Senator Sneakaway

this was the term used by the Phindian Captain of the Pride of Honor, when he confronted the New Republic Senators who had commandeered the warship to escape the Battle of Coruscant. He publically denounced the Senators' use of military ships for personal survival, demanding to know how they had the audacity to save their own lives while thousands remained trapped on Coruscant during the Yuuzhan Vong reshaping of the planet. (DW)

Senatorial Accounts Presidium

based on Coruscant, this governmental body oversaw the various ways in which the Senators of the Galactic Senate spent credits, from funding campaigns and committees to travel and other expenses. (IWE2)

Senatorial Apartments

this building was second only to 500 Republica in terms of luxury accommodations for the beings that made up the Galactic Senate, during the last decades of the Old Republic. The key difference between the two buildings was that the Senatorial Apartments was privately owned and operated. (E3N)

Senatorial Communications Center

this was the central communications hub, based on the planet Coruscant during the last years of the Old Republic, that linked the Galactic Senate to the far-flung member worlds of the Republic. The SCC was staffed around the clock, in case important information arrived. (JT)

Senatorial Debauchery Improv Troupe

this was one of the most popular groups of improvisational comedians and actors, active during the height of the New Order. (WOTC)

Senatorial Guard

this was another name for the Alderaanian Guard, which was dispatched by Bail Organa to protect diplomats from Alderaan during the height of the New Order. They evolved from the ranks of the Alderaan Guard. (JKG, BW)

Senatorial News Agency

based in Galactic City, on the planet Coruscant, this news agency provided complete coverage of the proceedings in the Galactic Senate during the last decades of the Old Republic. (IWE2)

Sencil Corporation

a droid manufactured based on Churba, it was nationalized by the Empire in an effort to control Mid-Rim droid markets. (SWJ6)

Sencker, Lindu

an Imperial scientist, Dr. Sencker was approached by Geothray Camber. Camber provided Sencker with the scandocs and specifications to the hyperspace orbiting scanner, which he hoped Sencker's team could build. Sencker's team was able to successfully implement the complex technology put forth by Camber. (ISB)

Sendarl Electronics

this Esselian manufacturer was an industrial giant in Darpa Sector during the New Order. When the fringe rebel group known as the Faceless began attacking Imperial outposts and claiming that the Empire was decidedly pro-Human, Sendarl's mainly alien workforce went on strike. The company's plants were virtually shut down, and operated only with droid labor until Kanno Sebak negotiated an end to the strike. (SWJ9)

Sender of Battle
see Dra'jhok (GMR1)

Sendir

this Twi'lek served as Tirgee Benyalle's bodyguard, during the early years of the New Republic. Despite his allegiance to Benyalle, Sendir took a large bribe to allow Imperial Admiral Kermen's forces to infiltrate her organization in preparation for Kermen's hostile takeover of Kaal. When Kermen gave the word, Sendir stabbed Benyalle in the back with a knife. He was quickly detained by agents of the New Republic and held for imprisonment. (SWJ7)

Sendo

this Imperial General in the Intelligence Bureau's Destabilization Branch was a do-nothing officer on Prince Xizor's payroll. Sendo reported pertinent information to Black Sun for a regular fee. (SE)

Sener

this Imperial Security Bureau agent recommended that Tamaron Rill's daughter would be the perfect bounty hunter to locate Tamaron himself, who was wanted in connection with "rebellious activities." (GG10)

Seneria, Jullisa

this girl was the daughter of Yasil Seneria. While playing, she inadvertently slipped off a ledge, but managed to grab a piece of wood and hold on. Her screams were overheard by her father and a roving lepusa. Before her father could reach her, the lepusa fashioned a rope from a length of vine and dangled it down to her. After she grabbed hold, the lepusa pulled her up and out of harm's way. Then, the creature disappeared. (COG)

Senerio, Yasil

this man was a farm manager on the planet Frelig during the Galactic Civil War. He was one of the strongest supporters of the idea that the lepusa were intelligent, especially after he witnessed a lepusa's problem-solving and tool-using skills when it rescued his daughter from a ledge. (COG)

Senesca, Zev

Zev grew up on Kestic Station, near Bestne. He and his parents were sympathetic to the Alliance, and worked to supply the Alliance with arms. When the Empire discovered their gun-running scheme, the Star Destroyer Merciless was sent to destroy the station. Zev was able to escape the destruction, and joined the Alliance soon after. He singlehandedly held off three TIE fighters during the Alliance's evacuation of the Alis Point base. He later served at the Alliance outpost on Hoth, and was the snowspeeder pilot who found Han Solo and Luke Skywalker after they had been stuck outside all night. Unfortunately, Zev was killed in the battle. Zev was portrayed by Christopher Malcom in Star Wars: The Empire Strikes Back. (ESB, SWSB, MTS)

Se'neth

this was the Tarasin word for any dream that was interpreted by a Mother to be a true vision of the future. The occurrence of a se'neth was a rare event, and signaled great events. During the Clone Wars, Mother Dariana experienced a se'neth in which she saw the tide of the war sweeping over Cularin, then the oppression of the Empire. Her vision also showed her a way that the Tarasin could survive, but only if they worked together. (LFCW)

Senex Sector

an area of the galaxy found in the Outer Rim Territories, it had been ruled by a number of familial houses since it was first settled. It was located near the Juvex Sector and the Ninth Quadrant, and was connected to the rest of the galaxy by the Rimma Trade Route. During the Old Republic, Senex Sector was an independent entity that maintained its autonomous stance with the agreement of the Republic. The open acceptance of slavery by the many Houses that controlled the Senex Sector, especially Houses Vandron and Elegin, was what prevented the Republic from accepting Senex Sector as a full member of the Republic. (COJ, COD)

Senex System

site of an Imperial Training Center during the Galactic Civil War. Alliance pilot Dev, during one of his training missions, ended up in the system and destroyed the fleet stationed there. (XW)

Senin Vant

this Utai served as an Air Commodore in the Utapau Skyforce during the height of the Clone Wars. (X3)

Senko Systems

manufacturers of starship weapons components, including the Tru-Lok 5000 laser cannon. (HTSB)

Senn

this Imperial Admiral patrolled Airam Sector during the Galactic Civil War. He was in command of the Super-class Star Destroyer Vengeance. (XVT)

Senna

this was the first planet in the Kessel System, and was a smoldering, boiling rock. Note that the Wizards of the Coast Planet Hoppers feature names this planet Salvo. (JASB, PH)

Sennari

this deadly poison was often used to coat the end of darts and arrows. Jodo Kast was one of the most well-known individuals to use it, although it was discovered that Jango Fett used Sennari to kill Zam Wesell decades earlier. (TM, NEGW)

Sennatt

this planet was located near Kothlis. (FTD)

Sennes Mountains

this mountain range was located on the planet Rhinnal, just north of the city of Rhire and bounded by the Zirfan Glacier. (CCW)

Sennex Pirates

this group of space pirates, active during the last decades of the Old Republic, was known to have trafficked slaves of many different races. It was believed that the Sennex Pirates purchased Aurra Sing from the Dark Woman, after the young humanoid failed to adapt to Jedi training. (ASNG)

Senni

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Senni Vek

this Twi'lek worked as a messenger for the Genoharadan Assassin Guild, during the era of the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Senoti

found on the Forest Moon of Endor, but native to the planet New Canistel, the senoti tree was held in near-sacred regard by the healers of the Ewok race. It was believed that the senoti was brought to Endor by a pair of Canistel AgriStar X-19 freighters which crashed into the moon. This theory was accepted by many, despite the fact that the few senoti trees that managed to take root on the Forest Moon did so in widely scattered locations. It required an alkaline soil in which to grow, and its watery sap had a number of medicinal values, including reduction of fevers and relief from pain. (GMR9)

SensAll

this active sensor array, manufactured by Siep-Irol, was used in the Explorer submergible. (CFG)

Sense

the second of the three Jedi Force skills, the ability to Sense is how a Jedi recognizes the Force in the universe around him. This flow of the Force tells the Jedi information about their surroundings. (SWSB, IJ)

SenseLights

this form of lighting was known for its hypnotic, mood-altering patterns and colors. The technology was developed by Lytos Urtell, who created them expressly for the Glow Dome on Adarlon. (WSV)

Senshi

this Ferroan was one of the leaders of the group which was coerced by Sekot to oppose the Magister, Jabitha, in an effort to test the true reasons Luke Skywalker and his Jedi Knights traveled to Zonama Sekot during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Senshi and his followers kidnapped Jabitha and Danni Quee and brought them to a rogue boras grove, drawing the Jedi to the grove for their final test. When Jacen questioned his motivations, Senshi revealed that he had lost most of his family in the many Crossings Zonama Sekot had done to avoid the rest of the galaxy. He refused to allow Jabitha to agree to helping the Jedi, an action which he believed would strip him once again of his friends and family. He was regarded as an individual who cared more for Zonama itself than Sekot, and had no desire to deal with outsiders. After Sekot had successfully tested the Jedi Knights to ensure that their mission was, indeed, a peaceful resolution to the conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong, the planetary sentience agreed to return to the galaxy and help the Jedi. Senshi was released from Sekot's control and accepted Sekot's decision, and eventually decided that the Jedi were worthy of his assistance. (FH3)

Sensis, Maxina

this eager, young xenoarchaeologist was attached to the New Republic's Daxis Outpost, where she was the Chief of Research. Before this posting, she had planned to work as a researcher for a Corporate Sector employer. However, when she saw the promotional holovid for the New Republic Scout Service, she was hooked. She was also a close friend and respected colleague of Korren Starchaser. So, when Starchaser and his scout team discovered The Gulch in the Serianan Asteroid Belt, he brought her in immediately to investigate. A native of the Parkis System, Maxina also had a vast knowledge of the history of galactic exploration. She hoped that further scout teams would venture to the Serianan asteroids, but had to wait until the New Republic supplied them. (SWJ8)

Sensislug

this small, insectile creature was actually a piece of Yuuzhan Vong technology, developed to serve as a remote listening device. When alerted to the presence of an intruder, the sensislug would exude a chemical as part of its normal respiration. This chemical caused most humanoid species to a deep sleep, rendering them unconscious for a short period of time. Upon awakening, humanoids experienced severe headaches, nausea, and irritation of the nasal membranes. (SBS, UF)

Sensor

any of the various shipboard systems used to detect the presence of other ships or stellar bodies in the vicinity. There are many different kinds of sensors, including full-spectrum transceivers, electrophoto receptors, and hyperwave signal interceptors. (SCRE, SWSB)

Sensor Blind

unlike traditional countermeasures which try to conceal an object or interfere with sensor operation, sensor blinds attempt to disguise an object by emitting energy patterns to make it appear natural. (HAS)

Sensor Decoy

a remote probe-like device which is ejected from its parent ship and emits the same broadcast signals as the parent ship. The parent ship can then run silent, and any pursuit ships would pick up the sensor decoy and follow it. Sensor decoys are virtually impossible to determine. (SWSB)

Sensor Pallet

a starship's complete scanning system, the sensor pallet consists of all the sensory systems employed by a starship. (SS)

Sensor Shroud

this array of sensor jamming devices was developed as a form of cloaking system during the New Republic. It masked a ship's emissions while providing information about the ship's immediate location. (EVC)

Sensor Star

this five-armed, aquatic mollusk was native to the planet F'tral. The five arms surrounded a central body section, which was studded with a number of sensory appendages. They live in groups of 20-30 individuals, using their collection of arms to herd small reptiles, fish, and insects. They seem to communicate via a series of subsonic tones which were inaudible to most humanoid races, but could be detected using specialized equipment. Scientists discovered that the "language" of the sensor stars included combinations of tones for concepts like "emergency," "storm," and "food." This allowed determined groups to actually use the sensor star as a primitive sensor system. (COG)

Sensor Stealth

another term for running a starship without generating any emissions, in order to escape detection. This requires the ship to run on main battery power, and is extremely power-consuming. If the main generators are not put back online soon, the ship will be adrift without life support. (SWSB)

Sensor Suite

another term for a sensor pallet, it denotes a starship's complete scanning system. (HSE)

Sensor Switch

a casino coin game. (HSE)

Sensorscope

this full-spectrum transceiver was used in many droids, primarily the R2 series. It includes electro-photoreceptors, dedicated energy receptors, and heat and motion sensors. The sensorscope interfaces directly with the Intellex IV internal computer, which processes the data received. (CCG4)

Sensory Plug-in a device which allows a droid to interface with computers, sensors, and other data systems. (SME)

Sensua

this was a leather-like material used to create supple bindings and belts for exotic dancing outfits. (VD)

Sensyno Station

this famed unirail station was one of the many stops on the Vohai Unirail, on the planet Vohai. (SWJ15)

Senta

this was the capital city of the planet Belasco. (TDR)

Sentarr Laboratories

this small research facility was owned by Sentarr, Incorporated. They barely turned a profit on paper, and were continually subsidized by their parent company. In reality, Sentarr produced no real breakthroughs. It was merely a front for Sentarr's smuggling operations, which specialized in the acquisition and sale of rare animal species on the black market. (SPG)

Senth

this is the nineteenth symbol in the Aurebesh script, and represents the Basic letter "s". (SWM)

Sentient Property Crime Bureau

this was a special division of the Phindar police force that was focused on the illegal seizure and resale of "personality-bearing artifacts", or droids. (YDR)

Sentient Tank

another name for a tank droid. (DE1)

Sentinel

this Victory-class Star Destroyer was part of the Imperial fleet which patrolled the Wroona System during the early stages of the Galactic Civil War. (PSG)

Sentinel

huge beings used to guard the Emperor's palace on Byss, the Sentinels first appeared when the Emperor had hunted down and captured Ashka Boda. In essence, a Sentinel was a former human which had been augmented and enhanced through Sith alchemies, and many were created from tissue stock of other powerful humans. The Sentinels materialized on the battlefield and escorted the fallen Jedi Master to Coruscant. Since then, wild speculation has surrounded the unknown origins of the Sentinels. They are, in fact, clones which have been mutated by the Emperor's Dark Side Adepts. Odd chemicals and the Dark Side of the Force twist the poor beings into slaves that obey the Adepts until they are destroyed. (DE1, DESB, DSSB)

Sentinel

this was one of the many Interdictor-class cruisers that made up Grand Admiral Thrawn's fleet of warships, during the early years of the New Republic. It served as one of the many Interdictors used by Thrawn to draw Republic forces out of space just outside the Bilbringi System, during the events that led up to the Battle of Bilbringi. (TLC)

Sentinel

one of three Bakura-class destroyers deployed by Hortel Ossilege, in an effort to assist the New Republic in breaking the blockade of the Corellian System. It was one of four ships, along with the Intruder, Watchkeeper, and Defender, that were built specifically for the defense of the Bakura System, in the wake of the Battle of Bakura. After the decisive battle against the Sacorrian Triad, only the Sentinel and the Defender survived to return to their postings as part of Bakura's defense. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, the Bakuran people were again invaded by the Ssi-Ruuk, although this time it was disguised as a peace offering from the P'w'eck. The Sentinel was refitted to accommodate the droid fighters of the P'w'eck, as part of a joint effort to "protect" the Bakuran System. (AS, CTD, FH2)

Sentinel

this was one of the Nebulon-B frigates which were used by the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Sentinel

this immense beast was found on the planet Alashan. Roughly humanoid in shape, the Sentinel stood well over two meters in height, and had crustacean-like armor plating protecting its body. When it was attacked by agents of both the Alliance and the Empire, the Sentinel showed a remarkable resilience to energy weapons and physical damage, surviving even when it was caught beneath several tons of rubble in an explosion. The Sentinel could also be summoned instantly to another part of the city, and had the ability to alter its size to fit its environment. Luke Skywalker later discovered that the Sentinel creature was a beast of pure energy, created by the ancient inhabitants of Alashan to protect their underground city. When the controls panels which maintained the underground city were destroyed, the Sentinel creature lost much of its power, as its connection to the planet's own energy was broken. Luke then dispatched the Sentinel with a stab of his lightsaber. (MC16, MC17)

Sentinel 100

this device allowed stock brokers and individual investors to monitor galactic stock markets, provided they were within the device's range to access and download information. (GFT)

Sentinel Beetle

this small insect was engineered by the Yuuzhan Vong. They were bred in huge numbers, and were created to beat their wings furiously when an intruder was encountered. The wing-song created sounded like an alarm, and alerted the Yuuzhan Vong to the intruder's presence. (DTO)

Sentinel IV

this heavy blaster pistol was produced by the Caelli-Merced Syndicate. (BSS)

Sentinel Squadron

this stormtrooper squadron was part of the forces dispatched to Tatooine to protect Prefect Talmont, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (MEAS)

Sentinel-class Landing Craft

this Sienar Fleet Systems' design was derived from the Lambda-class shuttle, retaining the Lambda's triple-wing design. As with the Lambda, the Sentinel's two lower wings folded during landing. The Sentinel differed from the Lambda in terms of cargo space and weapons. There were eight retractable laser cannons mounted on the hull, two concussion missile launchers, a retractable ion cannon, and a pair of retractable repeating blaster cannons mounted beneath the cockpit. This weapons system of retractable mounts meant the Sentinel-class was sleek and aerodynamic when swift transport is needed, but it could handle its own in a fight. The Sentinel also had enhanced armor plating for defense. The 20-meter-long central section of the Sentinel was widened and elongated to allow for the transport of up to 54 soldiers and six speeder bikes. If all seats were removed, the ship could accommodate up to thirty-six speeder bikes, twelve combat assault vehicles, or 180 metric tons of cargo. The Sentinel-class shuttle was equipped with a Class 1 hyperdrive for speed, and it could attain speeds of 1,000 kilometers per hour in atmosphere with its HD7 engine array. The Sentinel-class was introduced after the Battle of Yavin, but never became widely used in the Imperial fleet. Following the Battle of Endor, SFS allowed Cygnus SpaceWorks to build their own version of the Sentinel, and the craft became available to private, pro-Imperial concerns. In this way, it also found its way into New Republic fleets via front companies. (EG V, SWSE, CCG9, MTSE, NEGV)

Sentinel-class Military Cruiser

this class of warships was developed during the early years of the New Order, as a larger ship capable of leading raids on enemy positions without taking a pounding. (WOA34)

Sentry Gun

this was the term used to describe a class of small, automated turrets that were armed with blaster or laser cannons, and which could be programmed to fire on nearby targets. The original sentry guns were developed for use by the Empire, primarily for defending prisons, garrisons, and other important facilities. (NEGW)

Senvi, Nico

this man was one of Tatooine's more skilled swoop racers, during the era of the Great Sith War. Motta the Hutt wanted to hire Nico as a professional racer, but was only willing to pay him a small salary. A wandering Jedi Knight was able to negotiate on Nico's behalf, and managed to secure a higher salary. (KOTOR)

Senwannus'gourkahipaff

known as Sen for short, he is the senior Elder in the Oswaft society when Lando Calrissian first meets Lehesu. He is just over 1,000 meters in width, making him the largest Oswaft in the ThonBoka. During the Imperial blockade of the ThonBoka, he plays sabacc with Lando as Lando outlines a plan to break the blockade. Being somewhat more forward-thinking than his counterparts, Sen agrees with Lando's plan to fight back without violence, and it helps break the blockade in the end. Sen then asked Lehesu to become one of the rulers of the Oswaft society, fearing that his conservative nature almost cost them their lives. The apostrophe in his name represents twelve other syllables in his name, which he is too modest to use. (LCS)

Seoul

Tapper Quelev's alias when he and Talon Kaarde tried to infiltrate the Morodin safari business of Gamgalon while on Tropis-on-Varont. (EGC)

Seoul 5

this ancient world was once the homeworld of the Seoulian race. It was believed that much of the planet had been destroyed by a biochemical weapon during a war many millennia before the Galactic Civil War. However, the Empire discovered the planet and established a base there, during the years leading up to the Battle of Endor. The base was eventually discovered by Han Solo, who obtained the coordinates of Seoul 5 while gambling with a former Imperial scout. (MC84)

Seoulia

this form of large hieroglyphs was used by the Seoulians, the ancient inhabitants of the planet Seoul 5. (MC84)

Seoulia

this ancient race of beings lived on the planet Seoul 5, many millennia before the Galactic Civil War. They were believed to have used highly-specialized crystals to harness their mental energies, which were channeled to an underground location and used to power every device on the planet. The Empire employed Doctor Xathan and Fem Nu-Ar to locate Seoul 5, hoping to acquire this mental technology for its own uses. However, the key crystal had been taken years earlier, during the initial scouting survey, by an Imperial officer who had since retired. He lost the crystal to Han Solo while gambling, and Solo traveled to Seoul 5 to see what it could do. He replaced the crystal, setting off a chain reaction which unleashed thousands of years of stored energy that ripped the control center to pieces. (MC84)

Sep

this was the Snivvian word for "yes." (HNN5)

Sep Elopore

this ringed gas giant was the seventh and outermost planet in the Calamari System. More than thirty moons were known to orbit the planet. (UF)

S-EP1

this was Leia Organa-Solo's personal security droid. She nicknamed it Sleepy. (SOL)

S-EP1

this humorous-looking droid was one of the New Republic's most effective anti-terrorist weapons. Known as a "Sleepy" unit, these humanoid automatons were manufactured by Ulban Arms to serve as a personal security droid. The S-EP1 combined the best facets of the Warden 10-24 and the Hound-W2 SPD, and was equipped with an Arjan IV logic computer and a database filled with battle tactics, criminal profiles, and emergency and medical routines. The S-EP1 wasn't armed with blaster weapons, but instead had a stun-gas canister installed in its torso to incapacitate a target and was sold with a stun staff. Their eccentric appearance belied the S-EP1's ability to use deadly force, if necessary, to stop a criminal. (EGD.)

Sepan 8

the planet, located in the Sepan System, on which Ripobulus and Dimok politicians met to discuss a joint offensive against the Empire. (TIE)

Sepan Civil War

a protracted internal battle between the Dimoks and the Ripobulus, the Sepan Civil War first broke out some five years before the Clone Wars. Despite the efforts of the Jedi Knights Empatajayos Brand, Bultar Swan, and Chellemi Chuovvick, the two sides were unable to make any sort of lasting peace. The civil war dragged on for many years, throughout most of the era of the New Order. Following the Imperial victory at Hoth, the Empire began expanding its control over these sorts of warring systems. The Empire intervened in the civil war, with the Dimoks opposing them while the Ripobulus tended to welcome their presence. However, growing Imperial domination forced both sides to drop their gripes with the other and band together against the Empire. Both sides were defeated, and the civil war was ended. (TIE, HNN4)

Sepan System

the planetary system which is home to the Dimoks and Ripobulus. (TIE)

Separatist Union

this was one of the most active subgroups of the Confederacy of Independent Systems, during the height of the Clone Wars. The Separatist Union was a mobile operation, allowing it to avoid detection while it gathered information from the battlefronts of the Clone Wars. Much of this information was disseminated via the CIS Shadowfeed, and occasionally was sliced into the Old Republic's HoloNet. (SWI76)

Separatists

this was the term used to describe those beings who believed that the Old Republic no longer functioned for the good of the galaxy, and advocated the secession of worlds from the Republic, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Led by Count Dooku, the Separatists were officially known as the Confederacy of Independent Systems. Together, Dooku and the Separatists drove a wedge into the already-crumbling Republic. Thousands of star systems allied themselves with Dooku and the Separatists, who promised completely free trade to any group, corporation, or government which agreed to support them. Funding was secretly provided by the Commerce Guild and the InterGalactic Banking Clan, and war materiel was provided by the Trade Federation. Although the Clone Wars seemed to go in favor of the Separatist forces for many months, the Grand Army of the Republic finally managed to begin scoring victories. Droid factories were destroyed, cutting off the seemingly endless supply of battle droids that had been protecting the Separatists. In order to protect the various leaders of the Council of Separatists, Dooku ordered his half-alien/half-droid commander General Grievous to secrete the leaders away on remote planets like Utapau and Mustafar. The deaths of Count Dooku during the First Battle of Coruscant and General Grievous on Utapau left the Separatists without a true leader. When Chancellor Palpatine revealed himself to be Darth Sidious, he ordered his new apprentice - Anakin Skywalker - to travel to Mustafar and eliminate the Separatist leaders. Skywalker's vicious slaughter put an end to the Separatist threat, but only sealed the fate of the galaxy as Palpatine named himself Emperor. (HNN4, AOTCN, VD2, IS3)

Sepen, Vega

this Corellian woman, distinguished by her reddish hair and green eyes, served as the first officer aboard the No Luck Required during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. When she was fifteen, her parents had been killed in a reactor meltdown on the planet Eriadu, and Vega had stowed away on a smuggler's ship in order to escape the life of an orphan. She earned her passage after defeating the ship's first mate in a vibrodagger battle, and spend many years learning the ropes as a smuggler. She even worked for a brief time aboard the Free Lance for Urias Xhaxin, before the Yuuzhan Vong invasion began. After the Free Lance was nearly destroyed, Xhaxin turned his crew loose, and Vega decided that she had better do everything she could to save her galaxy. She volunteered for the military, but couldn't handle the attitude adjustment she was forced to make. Thus, she decided to join Search and Rescue, and ended up with Uldir's crew. As a member of the Search and Rescue Corp, she was known for her gruff demeanor, but was nevertheless loyal to her crewmates. (GMR10, EOY, SWI62)

Sephi

this humanoid race was native to the planet Thustra. Outwardly, the Sephi were similar in appearance to human stock, but had a thick spiral of hair-like material that grew from the crown of the skulls. This spiral was a source of personal pride for individual Sephi, who placed gemstones and other adornments into the spiral as it grew. The ears of a Sephi were large and close to the head, with tall points and drooping lobes. The chin was similar in many respects to the spiral on top of their heads, growing into a thick point as a Sephi aged. The Sephi were a long-lived species, with elder individuals living for more than 200 years. (J5)

Seppie

this slang term was used during the Clone Wars to indicate a person who was part of the Separatist movement. (SHPT)

Sept

this was the name used by the Selonians to describe individual units within a den. All offspring sired by the same fertile male were considered part of the sept. (AE)

Septaas

this immense human was a member of Marl Semtin's special forces stormtrooper battalion. Septaas accompanied Sixtus Quin to Ryloth, where they were involved in virtual combat with Rogue Squadron by Cazne'Olan. The Imperials defeated the Rogues, but the simulation resulted in a no-contest when Cazne'Olan wiped out all combatants in a firestorm. Upon returning to Tatooine, Septaas defected to the New Republic when Sixtus Quin exposed Semtin's treachery. (XWBT)

Septapus

a seven-tentacled seas creature native to Z'trop, the septapus is a herbivorous creature with five glowing eyes. They are timid in nature, contrary to the fact that Han Solo claims to have been attacked by one in the past. (MMY)

Septevorres System

this star system, located in the Outer Rim, had three stars at its center. (GG9)

Septoid

an insect native to the planet Eriadu. (CCG)

Septsilk

a wondrous fabric used to make expensive robes. (DH)

Sepulchral Ruby

this ancient artifact was first noted in the histories of the planet Utapau some 57,000 years before the Clone Wars, although its original meaning was lost over time. Modern Utapauns maintained iconic images of the Sepulchral Ruby, as an homage to their ancient ancestors. (X3)

Seqours, Bon

this tall, dashing man was a frequent patron of the Farrimmer Café. He was an imposing man, standing well over two meters in height and wearing a well-polished blaster at his hip. He was known to be a friend to members of the Alliance, remaining neutral himself but doing what he could help the cause. He once pulled off an incredible heist, stealing a wealth of valuable coins and relics from a crimelord by the name of Randar Dowellin. Unfortunately for Bon, the crimelord had laced many of the pieces with a chemical tracer, and sent out a team of bounty hunters to recover the relics and Bon's body - dead or alive. Luckily for Bon, he discovered that the chemical tracer could be neutralized by liberal use of Harmon Kizzlebrew, which he drank whenever he was out in public. (SWJ11)

Sequal

this was one of the largest moons that orbited the planet Kidron. Like its sister, Primor, Segual's make-up was loaded with valuable ores and minerals. The Orfites of Kidron kept this fact a well-guarded secret. (PG3)

Sequencer Charge

this portable mine can be placed on the ground or near doors. Activated by time-delay or proximity sensors, the sequencer charge has much more destructive capability than a thermal detonator or IM mine. (DF2)

Sera

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Sera

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Sera

this man was a scientist who worked for Karflo Corporation, and he was a contemporary of Trem DeSelvaine. They were also intense rivals, and both had been warned by Karflo executives to tone down their struggles to outdo each other. While DeSelvaine was discovering everything he could about the Polydroxol people, Sera developed a toxin which Administrator Renerdat approved for use in killing the Polydroxol on their homeworld of Sevetta. It was rumored that Polly, the Polydroxol individual DeSelvaine studied, killed Sera and everyone aboard their research station during its attempt to escape. (SWJ12)

Seraph

this was the name of a series of landspeeders produced by SoroSuub Corporation during the last decades of the Old Republic. Measuring 4.5 meters in length, the Seraph could accommodate a pilot and a single passenger, with up to ten kilograms of cargo. It was best known for its speed and solid handling, factors that made it an excellent choice for the Naboo Flash speeder. (SON, NEGV)

Seraphan Industries

this corporation active during the height of the New Order, until Illyan Webble was lost on Kalkovak. (UYV)

Serat

a temperate planet, Serat was the homeworld of the Seratians. (COG)

Seratian

this alien race was native to the planet Serat. (COG)

Serbo-bracket

this component of a repulsorlift engine is used to adjust the suspension properties of a landspeeder. (CFG)

Serdo

this Twi'lek was the original owner of the Firerider. He was regarded as a respectable and reputable businessbeing, providing transport services to local and Imperial officials, which helped cover his more clandestine role as spice smuggler. After making his fortune, Serdo retired, and sold the Firerider to Fizzi's Slightly Used Ships on Trevi IV. (SS)

Sere Lure

this Sluissi engineer was a member of Hydrospeare Corporation's Design Team Beta during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. As chief systems engineer, she had contacts on Sluis Van which allowed her to actually use certain facilities on the planet for Imperial research projects. She was nearly captured by Alliance operatives at the Hydrospeare laboratories on Golh, but barely escaped with her life. (AIR)

Seregar

this jungle planet was located in the Outer Rim. During the last decades of the Old Republic, several corporations established mining operations on the planet. (ND)

Serendina Wiggler

this small creature is a favorite fingerfood of many Hutts. (THG)

Serenity

then-Admiral Thrawn tried to trap Admiral Zaarin near this planet by leaking false fleet movements involving it. (TIE)

Serenno

a planet. (HNN4)

Sereno

this Tof Prince was the leader of the invasion force sent to take control of the planet Saijo, some months after the Battle of Endor. It was Sereno who allied the Tofs with Lumiya, especially after she flattered him with long-winded reasons about why she abandoned the Nagai in her pursuit of the destruction of the Alliance of Free Planets. Prince Sereno was distinguished from most other Tofs by his coifured, white-powdered hair. Sereno was eventually captured and held for questioning. (MC107)

Sergar, Voria

this young girl was abandoned by her slave master on the planet Lok, during the height of the New Order. She was rescued by Isnal Roran and nursed back to health by the members of an Alliance cell on Lok. Thus, it seemed only natural for her to join the Alliance when she was healthy. She became a skilled slicer and computer technician, and she quickly gained ranks among her peers. Unfortunately, she was killed during a mission that took her back to Lok, when she was unable to dodge a missile launched at her vessel by an Imperial patrol craft. One entire quadrant of space within the Karthakk System was named Voria's Ember, in her honor. (SWGAL)

Serhan

this was the name of the northeastern desert found on the planet Escabar. (COG)

Seri

this Gallofree medium transport was used by the Alliance to transport bacta during the Galactic Civil War. (XWA)

Serial Torpedo

a form of missile used by the Alliance during the early stages of the Galactic Civil War. (MC16)

Serianan Asteroid Belt

this incredibly large belt of debris is located within the Serianan System of the Outer Rim Territories. It is situated between the first planet, Serias, and the outer three worlds, but constitutes more than half the star system's overall size. Scouts from the New Republic, led by Korren Starchaser, discovered that the asteroids were most likely the result of several planetary collisions, rather than randomly collected space debris. Many of the asteroids are marked with huge glyphs and runes. Located within the belt is a huge asteroid that contains the formation known as the Gulch. (SWJ8)

Serias

this planet, the first in the Serianan System of the Outer Rim, is the only habitable planet in the system. In between Serias and the three outermost worlds is an enormous asteroid belt which takes up more than half the star system. Sensor readings provided by Korren Starchaser and his team of scouts indicate the the asteroid belt was formed as a result of several planetary collisions. Within the belt of asteroids was a huge planetoid that contained the Gulch. (SWJ8)

Series 4 E-Wing

this was the fourth-generation model of the E-Wing starfighter, developed for use by the New Republic Navy during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (SBS) introduced after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn, the Series 4 E-Wing utilized more stable blaster gas and a dedicated power generation system for the weapons to overcome the problems experienced with the original E-Wing fighters. These E-Wings could also use R2 astromech droids. (NEGV)

Series 4 E-Wing

Series 401 Hyperdrive Motivator

a top-of-the-line starship component produced during the early years of the New Republic. (BTS)

Series III

this blaster pistol was manufactured by the Caelli-Merced Syndicate. It was only available for sale on Socorro, or through the black market. (BSS)

Series IV Picket Ship

this large starship was manufactured by Cindev during the last years of the Old Republic. (HXW)

Serifa Altunen

this Akranian woman was once a Jedi Master, serving the Jedi Order during the last decades of the Old Republic. However, when the Clone Wars broke out, Altunen abandoned the Order, claiming that the Jedi were supposed to be servants of the people, not the Galactic Senate nor the Grand Army of the Republic. Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker were dispatched to Arkania to bring her back to Coruscant, some thirty months after the Battle of Geonosis. Altunen had returned to her homeworld in protest, and was recommending to the government of Arkania to declare itself a neutral party in the war. The two Jedi were unable to convince her to return, and Altunen remained on Arkania. (YDR)

Serimerl

this near-human woman was a mystery to everyone, even the Hutts who employed her. Jabba and his underlings gave her the name "Serimerl," a term which denoted her allegiance to the Hutts. Jabba placed her at the head of one of his dummy organizations, and Serimerl quickly proved to be a loyal worker. Upon Jabba's death, she was unable to take a large part of the Hutt's empire. However, she commanded a great deal of loyalty, and she decided to make life hard for the Alliance and the fledgling New Republic, in an effort to avenge Jabba's death at the hands of Leia Organa. She and her followers assassinated many high-ranking officials of the New Republic, creating an undercurrent of mistrust and discontent among many member worlds. (GG11)

Serinas, Bal

this gray-skinned woman was one of the Dark Jedi who rose to power during the early years of the New Republic. (SWRPG)

Serinus, Bal

this woman was a former Jedi Knight who became a devotee of the Dark Side of the Force when her fears overcame her patience. She was quick to draw her lightsaber in an effort to solve problems, and did so out of fear of being killed herself. She angered a Hutt crimelord by accidentally killing his accountant, and she became indignant that she killed the man out of ignorance. She set out to kill the Hutt and his bounty hunters for "inconveniencing" her. She was later captured before she could kill the Hutt, but escaped and wiped out the Hutt and his entire court, taking only one prisoner: her jailor. She tried to sell the alien to another Hutt, but was forced to outdo the actions of Set Harth to win the Hutt's attention. She fought the other Dark Side adept to a draw, and both were imprisoned by the Hutt. (DSSB)

Sermeria

this planet was beset by stone mites, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. The infestation was caught early, preventing any serious damage to the urban areas of the planet. (OWS, HNN5)

Sermerian Bio-League

this group, funded by the planetary government of Sermeria during the last decades of the Old Republic, was responsible for addressing and eliminating an biological or chemical threat to the planet or its environment. (HNN4)

Sermerian First House

located in the capital city of Addolis, on the planet Sermeria, this building served as the seat of the planetary government. (HNN4)

Sern Prime

this planet, the capital world of the Sern Sector of the galaxy, was a member of the Old Republic during the height of the Clone Wars. (SWI75, SWDB)

Sernpidal

this planet, the third in the Julevian System, was the most populated planet in its Outer Rim sector. This made it the first major strike along the Yuuzhan Vong's Vector Prime. It had two moons: a huge moon, nearly one-fifth the size of Sernpidal itself; and Dobido, which only measured twenty kilometers in diameter. The Yuuzhan Vong placed a dovin basal in the center of Sernpidal City and used it to draw Dobido into an ever-closer orbit. Eventually, Dobido crashed into Sernpidal, destroying both worlds. The impact stripped away huge portions of Sernpidal's surface, completely burned away its atmosphere, and created a belt of large planetoids in its orbit. However, this did not diminish the usefulness of the planet to the Yuuzhan Vong. They brought in a swarm of snail-like creatures to refine the larger chunks into usable materials, and set about constructing a huge warship from the rubble. The Yuuzhan Vong referred to this construction as a shipwomb. This shipwomb was later destroyed by the forces of the New Republic, who had been acting on intelligence gathered by Kyp Durrón. However, Durrón knew that the Republic would not willingly destroy a life-bearing ship, so he lied to them and told them that the shipwomb was a kind of superweapon. His words brought back memories of the two Death Stars, and the Republic agreed to destroy it. Kyp's actions drove a spike into his relationship with Jaina Solo, who had begun to think of Kyp as something of a friend and mentor. (VP, DTR, EVR, NJOSB)

Sernpidal City

the capital of the planet Sernpidal, this city was the impact site of the moon Dobido, when the Yuuzhan Vong sought to destroy the planet. The mayor of the city, a wisened old man, discovered the location of a dovin basal placed in the city to draw Dobido into position to strike sernpidal. He was helped by Han and Anakin Solo. When he realized that there was nothing they could do to stop Dobido's impending strike, the mayor took a thermal detonator and destroyed the creature, giving his life to provide extra time to evacuate his people. (VP)

Sernpidalian

this was the name used to describe the human inhabitants of the planet Sernpidal. (NJOSB)

Seron's Castle

this was the name of the pirate base established by Gornt Seron on the planet Korbin. It was hidden in the cliffs of the mountains that ring the planet's equatorial region, near Pleasant City. (WBC)

Serooin's Gear

this equipment store, located on the planet Betha II in the planet's primary starport, was run by a Squib named Arrejis Mellaha. (SWJ8)

Serore, Sonal

this Imperially-suported artisan and poet was native to the planet Naboo. It was Serore who dubbed the Alliance's former base in the Naboo System as the Rebellion Remnants. (SWGAL) a reptilian species native to the planet Serphidi, the Serps were a humanoid race. The males of the species were characterized by their red scales and their toothy maws, which were filled with row of needle-sharp teeth. A heavy ridge of bony scales ran along the crown of their skulls, protecting their eyes. Females were more subtly colored, with orange scales. Where the male face was flat, the female Serps had a pronounced snout, and lacked the eyebrow ridges of the males. Many centuries before the New Order, the Serps were a highly-evolved race, and had developed superior technologies. However, the advances of this technology led to a series of civil wars in which various tribes fought against each other for control of technology. Eventually, a peace accord was signed among the tribes, and leadership was given to a single King. Violence was relegated to jousting and other contests which proved an individual's combat skills, until King S'Shah took control and began using certain forbidden forms of technology to turn the jousting contests into death matches, shortly before the Battle of Yavin. (MC64)

Serp

Serpent

this was one of the Nebulon-B frigates which were used by the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Serpent Masters

this was the name given to the warriors who served as the paramilitary forces of Tyrann, on the planet Ophideraan, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Their name came from the fact that they rode flying serpents, which they controlled with ultrasonic signals generated from a medallion worn around their necks. (CSW, SWDB)

Serpent Nine

this was Barriss Offee's codename, used during her mission to Felucia at the height of the Clone Wars. (ROF)

Serpent Rain

this intense, dramatic play was written by Thalos Lorin, and chronicled the life of a woman who became one of the Empire's bloodiest bounty hunters. (GG10)

Serpentine Crusher

this was one of the names used by the New Republic to describe Tu-Scart, the Beater created by the

Yuuzhan Vong to destroy structures that are in the path of the Yuuzhan Vong army. Note that the Balance Point claims that Tu-Scart is the Biter. (WOTC)

Serpentine Walk

this was the name given to the golden paving which surrounded the Azure Walk of Anaxes' Grand Piazza. It was named for the golden serpentine stone used to line its pathway. (CCW)

Serpent's Kiss

this was one of the many Yuuzhan Vong warships which was called to the planet Coruscant - remade into a new version of the planet Yuuzhan'tar - just before the alien invaders launched their all-out attack on the Galactic Alliance's stronghold on Mon Calamari. (UF)

Serpent's Smile

this old ship was one of the Victory-class Star Destroyers serving under the Warlord Zsinj, during the early years of the New Republic. When Han Solo and the Mon Remonda tried to capture Zsinj at Vahaba, he sent the Serpent's Smile and the Red Gauntlet to attack the Stellar Web. Solo responded by attaching the Skyhook and Crynyd to the defense of the Stellar Web, and their firepower easily destroyed the aging ship. (SOC)

Serper, Wyron

this Alliance undercover agent was a sensor specialist, and once infiltrated the Imperial Star Destroyer Avenger in order to rendezvous with potential defectors. He served at Hoth's Echo Base as a sensor and communications expert, using his knowledge of Imperial starship sensor images to filter out possible Imperial starships from the Hoth asteroids. Unfortunately, Captain Serper and his team were killed during the Battle of Hoth, after Imperial forces managed to breach the main base. Serper ordered his team to evacuate, but a squad of snowtroopers trapped them in the command center, killing them all on sight. (CCG3, SW174)

Serphidi

the fourth planet in the Belial System, it is the homeworld of the Serp race. (MC64)

Serpine

during the last decades of the Old Republic, the planet Serpine was known for its immense gambling palaces. (RP)

Serprine

this woman was a corporate pilot for Nebula Consumables. She was strikingly beautiful, and most men considered her even more attractive in her Nebula uniform. She held independent spacers and smugglers in low regard, and often went out of her way to attract them and then use them to her own ends. (PSG)

Serrata

this gas giant was a near-star located in the Elrood Sector. It was the eighth planet in the Derilyn System, and was orbited by five natural satellites. Its mass was growing even during the height of the Galactic Civil War, and would soon be dense enough to induce fusion. (PG3)

Serres Sarrano

this noted podracing event took place on Sullust, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (GMR10)

Serrian Salt

a strong spice. (RPG)

Serridge

manufacturers of large-scale shield generators for capital ships. (SCORE)

Serrol Gathip

this Duros was one of the leaders of the Duro Shipwrights Guild, during the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. Gathip met with Thel Erelan on Duro Delta Twelve, in order to discuss the possible support the Guild could provide to the Alliance. He and his comrades were nearly captured by Sedret Fain and his goons, but a team of Alliance agents defeated the Imperials. Gathip, who had been neutral up until that point, agreed to throw the Guild's support to the Alliance. (RESB)

Sertim, Darci

this woman, along with her twin sister Marci and older sister Gayle, controlled an independent group of mercenaries during the height of the Galactic Civil War. They were hired by Vost Tyne as "civilian security consultants" at the hyperbaride plant on Marca. The twins are given the position of leadership when Gayle was killed, but were told her death was at the hands of the Alliance. Neither sister was aware of the true nature of Gayle's death, and remained loyal to Tyne and the Empire until a group of Alliance agents crash-landed on the planet and discovered computer records of Tyne's involvement with Gayle's death. Darci and Marci immediately decided to help the Alliance agents, and it was Darci who suggested the enlistment of the Sekct in overthrowing Tyne. However, she was later captured by Tyne and held as a hostage against the Alliance team. (POM)

Sertim, Gayle

this woman, along with her younger sisters Marci and Darci, ran a group of mercenaries which provided security services. They were hired by Arviz Linden to protect the hyperbaride plant on Marca, and Gayle became enamored of Linden. Their relationship was discovered by Vost Tyne, who had executed Linden in order to take control of the plant. In an effort to ensure loyalty, Tyne sent Gayle off-planet on business, but had her shuttle rigged with a remote-detonated Thermex charge. Tyne told Marci and Darci that their sister was killed by Alliance agents, effectively turning them against the Alliance. Computer records of Gayle's death were later discovered by Alliance agents, who turned the information over to Darci and Marci. (POM)

Sertim, Marci

Darci and Marci immediately decided to help the Alliance agents. However, their plans were quickly discovered by Tyne, who captured the sisters and imprisoned Marci. She was later freed by the Alliance agents, and set the plant's hyperbatteries to overload and destroy the plant. (POM)

Servant

a model of Ubrikkian repulsorlift/ion engine used in their Talon I combat cloud car. (EGV)

Servenidain Securities, Limited

this specialty manufacturer produced several encryption devices for the civilian marketplace. (GFT)

Service Scout

this was the term used to describe any galactic scout or explorer who worked directly for the New Republic Scout Service. Unlike corporate scouts or independent scouts, the service scout reported directly to, and was paid by, the New Republic. They receive training from the New Republic military, and those scouts which prefer to remain soldiers are often given the chance to become a Scout Soldier. (GG8)

Service Special Energy Projector

an extremely high-powered, hand-held blaster weapon. It is small enough to be easily concealed, but it has the power output of a starship laser cannon. It has been compared in power to one of a quad-laser batteries four cannons. (LCF)

Servodriver

this was a small power tool used to tighten or loosen bolts, screws, and fasteners. (SW)

Serv-O-Droid

a defunct droid manufacturer, Serv-O-Droid built several models of droids to help with menial tasks, including the JV-Z1 series of domestic droids. They also manufactured the CZ series of communications droids. The corporation had several marketing slogans, such as "Serv-O-Droid -- modular automatons for a less-than-modular galaxy", "Serv-O-Droid -- A lot of droid. Not a lot of credits", and "Serv-O-Droid -- Shouldn't your droid be serving you?" They were one of the original non-voting contributing sponsors of the Corporate Sector Authority, but went out of business shortly after signing the CSA charter. The name Serv-O-Droid remained active, however, being used by a minor manufacturing concern on Elshandruu Pica. (DESB, CCG, CSA, WOTC, PH)

Servogrip

the mechanical grips used as hands by many droids. (HSL)

Servogrip

a starship mechanic's tool, similar to a pair of pliers. They employ a servo-mechanism to produce greater gripping force. (HSE)

Servo-lifter

this was a type of bipedal labor droid which found widespread use during the Old Republic. (E1A4)

Servomotor

the small device which moves a droid's appendages. (SW, COTF)

Seselin Medicinal Electronics

this medical technology manufacturer was operative during the height of the New Order. (GFT)

Sesfan

this Mon Calamari served as Admiral Ackbar's representative to the New Republic's General Council during the early years of the New Republic. Sesfan had joined the Alliance just six months prior to the Battle of Endor, and served as Ackbar's sensor officer during the battle. Ackbar was impressed with his abilities, and retained his services after the establishment of the New Republic. He suffered from Mon Calamari Nerveshock, which he somehow contracted as an adult. The disease seemed to be in remission during much of his career, a fact that allowed him to continue as Ackbar's aide. It was Sesfan who questioned the fact that Luke Skywalker seemed to have established a credit line for Talon Karrde, after Karrde and the fledgling Smuggler's Alliance began providing information on the actions of Grand Admiral Thrawn to the Republic. (TLC, TTSB)

Sesid

this oceanic world, the primary planet in the Sesid System, is the homeworld of the Draedan race. (GG12)

Sespe

this star was the central body in the Sespe System. (SSR)

Sessa

this hot, volcanic planetoid was the innermost planet in the Kothlis System. Sessa was being torn asunder by the proximity of Koth-lar's intense gravity. (SPG)

Sessehshellah

known as the Sesseh', these aliens resemble giant river otters. They have limited technology, and were no match for the Empire, which took over their homeworld of Shaymore and irresponsibly mined off most of its fossil hydrocarbon fuels. The Sesseh' asked the Alliance to help them remove the Imperial yolk, which was accomplished quickly. (RPG)

Sesseranda Ocean

this body of water was located on the planet Kothlis. (SPG)

Sessian Armaments

this small weapons manufacturer produced a variety of personal-use weapons during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GFT)

Sess'Inu

this was the only unconnected continent on the planet Mutanda. (PG1)

Sesstian Hesser

this being was implicated by the Galactic Wildlife Liberation Front in the illegal breeding of several endangered species, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. (BH)

Sesswe

this city is located near Lianna, on the planet Lianna. (ML)

Sesto

this was one of four inhabited continents found on the planet Garnib. (PG1)

Sestooine

Aurin Leith posed as an innocent traveller, bound for Sestooine, as part of Lieutenant Haslam's plan to infiltrate the Imperial prison on Selnesh and rescue Gebnerret Vibrion. (TFE)

Sestra 49

this Khommite, the 49th clone of Sestra, was distinguished in the history of the planet Khomm. (UANT)

Sestria

this planet was a banking world that rose to some prominence during the height of the New Order. Airen Cracken once encountered Yarr Gatonne on the planet. (WBC)

Seswenna Hall

this elaborate building, located in Eriadu City, the capital of the planet Eriadu, was known as an architectural marvel. It was essentially a huge dome which crowned one of the highest mounts in the city, and was tiled with a wondrous mosaic. (COD)

Seswenna Sector

Grand Moff Tarkin ruled here for awhile, and it was here that he developed the Tarkin Doctrine of "rule by fear." The Seswenna Sector included the planet Eriadu. (ISB)

Seswenna Sector Bank

this was the largest financial institution of the Seswenna Sector of the galaxy, and was based on the planet Eriadu. (COD)

Seswennan Nightcloak

this Carrack-class cruiser was one of the ships which participated in the Battle of Fleyars IV. Her captain was fatally wounded during the subjugation of the planet, and Akal Zed was forced to assume command and led the Imperial forces to victory. (PG3)

Seswenna-Sluis Conflict

this was one of the many battles which occurred during the early stages of the Clone Wars. The Sluis Sector had sided with the Confederacy of Independent Systems, while Seswenna Sector remained loyal to the Old Republic. A peace delegation dispatched by the Republic to Praesitlyn to discuss a cease-fire, but it was destroyed before it could arrive. The Separatists claimed that the ship was destroyed by friendly fire, not by Separatist forces. (SWI69)

Set

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Setag, Illia

this man served as the Chairman of Cybot Galactica, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Setel Yast

this was the name of a noted individual from the Nautolan race. (UANT)

Seth

this portly man served as the chief of security at Omman's primary starport, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ3)

Seth

this man, a native of the planet Hapes, was one of the pilots recruited by Jaina Solo to fly reconnaissance missions against Yuuzhan Vong coralskipppers, in order to gather gravitic data on the aline invaders' starships. Jaina hoped that the data would allow her to create yorik coral implants to fool a yammosk into believing that one Yuuzhan Vong starship was actually another ship. Unknown to Seth, his ship contained a piece of yorik coral that projected a gravitic signature similar to that of the Trickster, and Jaina was using Seth's ship as bait to see if the Yuuzhan Vong would track him or not. (DJ)

Seth, Jeng

this truly psychopathic individual forms the Skulls swoop gang while growing up in the lawless back alleys of Stend VI. (GG9)

Seti

this Guardian-class droid was the central character in the holo-drama Revella's Journey: A Story of a Girl and Her Droid. (GFT)

Setla Lamp

this was a form of tall lamp, developed by the Kaminoan people. Essentially a cylindrical illuminator drawing power from a charge plate in its base, the setla lamp provides apparently sourceless light to a room. (VD2)

Setolio System

this Tapani Sector star system was part of the holdings of House Calipsa during the New Order. It was seized from House Pelagia after House Mecetti virtually wiped Pelagia out of existence. (LOE)

Setor

this planet was once the site of Weytin's Colony. The colony suffered from persecution and exile while there, and began searching for a new planet during the New Order. (GG2)

Sette, Urlor

this huge, well-muscled, bearded man was imprisoned at the Lusankya facility before Corran Horn was sent there. He was assigned to the mines, and supported Jan Dodonna's unofficial leadership of the prisoners. It was Urlor who brought Horn before Dodonna, when Corran was sent to the mines. Later, after Corran escaped, Ysanne Isard's clone used Urlor to provoke Rogue Squadron into a fight. She had Sette implanted with a specialized device which dumping a huge amount of neurotoxin into his bloodstream whenever Corran said his name. She then placed Sette aboard the Home One, just after the Battle of Bilbringi. Isard's clone had discovered plans for a post-battle celebration, and had Sette seek out Corran. Sette then explained that he had a message for Corran, but couldn't remember his own name. In this way, Isard guaranteed that Corran would be the one to "kill" Sette. In the end, when Corran said his name, Sette was viciously killed by the neurotoxin and died in Corran's arms. Iella Wessiri and Wedge Antilles traced the components used to build the injection system back to Commenor, but they were simply following evidence planted by Isard's clone. They managed to arrive ahead of the clone's schedule, rescuing several other survivors of the Lusankya and gathering a great deal of data on the clone's plans. (KT, IR)

Settlement 23

this was one of the many basic cities located on the planet Quadrant Seven. Many of the planet's largest merchants were found in Settlement 23. (SOJ)

Settlement 5

this was one of the many basic cities located on the planet Quadrant Seven. Like other such cities, Settlement 5 was little more than a collection of businesses and homes that was centered on a crossroads, with the city laid out in an orderly grid. (SOJ)

Settlement Pact

this was the agreement, signed by the settlers who traveled to Leritor and the native Sauvax, which gave the settlers certain rights to land on the planet. The settlers were not allowed to have any presence - either people, buildings, or vehicles - within 100 kilometers of any shoreline. The Sauvax also had the option to contact the settlers for the purposes of trade, but in general the Pact was meant to keep the two peoples safely separated. (GMR10)

Settlement Thirty-Two

one of the many domed cities erected on the surface of the planet Duro, this synthplas dome served to house refugees who were fleeing the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. The dome, like other such refugee cities, was located beneath one of Duro's twenty orbital stations, protected by the planetary shield that contained the station. Thirty-two was constantly at odds with Gateway, as each dome tried to obtain the other's supplies in an escalating struggle to feed its inhabitants. The dome's integrity was destroyed when the Vong infiltrated a mutating insect strain into the settlement, which evolved quickly into a flying bug which had an acidic saliva. The bugs attacked the synthplas dome, melting holes in it. The New Republic barely got the refugees out of the dome before it was holed. (BP)

Settov Hammer

a strong alcoholic beverage. (ML)

Seuvhat

this was a small vehicle used by the city-dwelling natives of the planet Ansion. (APS)

Sev

this was the nickname used by the clone commando designated RC-1207 during the early years of the Clone Wars. Sev was known for his grim sense of humor, and the other members of the original Delta Squad often said that his cloning vat must have been spiked with something to produce him. (LAWS)

Sev

this clone commando was a member of Niner's squad, during the Battle of Geonosis. Unfortunately, Sev was among the many clones who were killed in the fighting on Geonosis. (RCHC)

Sev

this man, a member of the crew of the Jynni's Virtue, was killed on the planet Korriban by unknown forces, after the ship was forced to crash-land on the planet, near the Valley of Golg. Shortly afterward, Sev's reanimated body returned to attack the ship's surviving crew, having been turned into a thing known as a Korriban Zombie. (PH)

Sev Tok

this planet, which maintained an Imperial allegiance following the Battle of Endor, was the site of Xalto Sneeze's death. (SWJ9)

Seva Ke

this was the name of a noted Kaminoan scientist. (UANT)

Sevan Domna

this being served as one of Jabba the Hutt's most loyal and dedicated majordomos, several decades prior to the Battle of Yavin. Sevan Domna died when he broke up an assassination attempt on Jabba's life, giving his own life so that Jabba could live on. (VD)

Sevarcos

this planet was the second which orbits the star Lumea, and was most famous for its production of two kinds of spice: the common, white andris and the rare, black carsunum. During the New Order, the Empire established a penal colony on the planet, supplementing their production of spice while maintaining an air of seclusion to Sevarcos. Much of the planet was ruled by the so-called Spice Lords of Sevarcos, a group made up from the leaders of the various criminal empires based on the planet. Sevarcos was dry, arid world covered with sandy deserts. (SWJ2, SWJ12)

Sevarcos Dispute

this argument, which occurred more than thirty years before the Clone Wars, was successfully mediated by the Jedi Knight Count Dooku. (HNN4)

Sevari

the human inhabitants of Sevarcos, the Sevari were believed to have been descended from the colonists of the Sevari Cabal who first settled the planet. Over the centuries, the Sevari developed a rigidly-cast social structure that shunned modern technology. (SWJ2)

Sevari Cabal

the colonists aboard this Old Republic colony ship were believed to be the ship which originally settled the planet Sevarcos. (SWJ2)

Sevari Flashpistol

a small, holdout weapon, the Sevari flashpistol was named for the fact that it was the preferred weapon of the Sevari. Native to the planet Sevarcos, the Sevari had no interest in advanced technology, and used gunpowders and small bullets in place of blasters. (SWJ2, KT)

Sevari Sidestep

this term, which was part of the jargon known as deal-slang, was based on the name used to describe a starship maneuver. In the art of the deal, though, it implied the use of finesse and guile to elude the long arm of the law. (SWJ4)

Sevari Sidestep

this was the smuggler term for the safest way to gain access to the planet Sevarcos, without being captured. It required a pilot to exit hyperspace as close to the Sevarcos System's asteroid belt as possible, thereby avoiding immediate attention. Then, after disabling the ship's gravity-mass overrides, the spacer had to cruise at top speed into near-orbit to the largest planetoid between their position and Sevarcos. The ship's shields had to be angled correctly, so that small debris deflected "naturally" off the spacer's ship. This part of the maneuver helped the ship hide from regular patrols. To reach Sevarcos, the spacer then hopped from asteroid to asteroid until they were close enough to make a direct run for the planet. (SWJ2)

Sevark

this is the Gree term used to describe any Gree who serves as an intermediary between Gree guild masters and non-Gree clients. They translate their clients' needs to the guild masters, and also provide general escort and translation services to visitors to the Gree Enclave. The caste of sevarks developed recently, as the Imperial expansion of the galaxy led to greater traffic through the Gree Enclave. Their services are often quite expensive, but they are the only providers of this service. (SWJ8)

Seven Flames Base

this Alliance base was located near Karra. (SWJ1)

Seven Skies of Sumarin

this was the name of an unusual atmospheric event that occurred on the planet Sumarin. (MJH)

Seven Stars, The

this was a religious reference used by at least one human culture in the galaxy. (MC100)

Seventh Security Zone

a section of the galaxy containing Walalla. (BTS)

Seventy-Seven Stars

this Lantilian cruiser was owned by the Twi'lek To'iir. (SWJ10)

Severindas, Reshton

this man was the leader of the Ragnar Bounty Hunter Syndicate during the New Order. (GG10)

Sevetta

this planet was a toxic world of intense volcanic activity and a poisonous, chemical-filled atmosphere. Nevertheless, life emerged on the planet in the form of the Polydroxol species. (SWJ12)

SE-Vigilant

this was the designation of Fabritech's automated sensor beacon, developed for use by scouts, farmers, and municipal facilities that required a level of protection from external sources. The SE-Vigilant was designed with a variety of security scanners and alarm systems to warn of any intrusion. These devices were marketed to those individuals and groups who had to secure a large area, where an energy fence or full security force would be cost-prohibitive. When properly positioned, a network of SE-Vigilant beacons could provide almost complete surveillance of an area. The SE-Vigilant consisted of a central pole, on which were mounted the sensor and scanner systems, as well as antennae and alarms. (EGW)

Sevik

this Corellian conman worked with the Qwohog K'zk to swindle passage from Diergu-Rea Duhnes'rd, thereby financing a treasure hunt to the Zelosian Chine. Sevik and his partner, Hanugar, pretended to be shipwrecked vacationers, and were picked up by K'zk's crew before they reached the Chine. (TFNR)

Seville, Darion

this aging woman was the matriarch of the Seville clan, known for its criminal empire. Darion herself had a penchant for gladiator droid battles, but often used protocol droids instead of full-sized gladiators. She was nearly killed when one of her warrior droids, a conglomeration known MdZ-BLK, got tired of the endless battles and attacked her. Her son, Yearo, ionized the droid and saved her. (CRO)

Seville, Yearo

this pirate first joined a gang at a very young age, and had killed his hundredth man by the time he was fifteen. Yearo was the son of Darion Seville, herself a ruthless matriarch. His cunning and cold-hearted nature led him to form his own gang of pirates, and he was generally regarded as the most blood-thirsty criminals in Rayter Sector during the New Order. He manipulated people extensively, and his own subordinates have become paranoid that their work would not be accepted by Seville. Yearo was a typical "swashbuckler," carrying a gold-plated blaster and an ornate walking stick, and wearing expensive, outlandish clothing. Nine parallel scars slash across his left cheek, although it is unknown how he received the. He once saved his mother from a rogue gladiator droid attack, and had the droid sent to Gorbu the Hutt as a "gift." The droid, MdZX-BLK, eventually killed Gorbu, thereby eliminating one of Seville's rivals. Seville was contracted by the Farool Brothers to kidnap Crying Dawn Singer and his entourage, which they did successfully. (TA, CRO)

Seville, Yosev

this woman and her brother led a team of mercenaries who were hired by the government of Sirdar to eradicate the plague of winged xendrites which was taking over the planet's ecosystem. (COG)

Sevorrt

this reptile, prized for its leathery hide, was native to the planet Tatooine. (QQRG)

Sev'Rance Tann

this female Chiss was born on the planet Csilla, and was one of the few members of her race to exhibit a sensitivity to the Force. Although she was a skilled tactician, many attributed her remarkable abilities on the battlefield to her connection to the Force, although she preferred to demonstrate her skills without resorting to any mystical powers. She was known for her demanding attitude and almost casual brutality. During her early military training, a professor challenged her to make a competent battle force from a group of untrainable Yresilini. She chose one individual to serve as her "General", teaching only the most basic commands. When the "General" and the other Yresilini laughed at her methods, she killed the "General" and chose a second. From that point forward, the Yresilini obeyed her every command. During the last years of the Old Republic, she came under the scrutiny of Count Dooku. She was trained in the ways of the Dark Side of the Force, and became one of the leaders in the military of the Confederacy of Independent Systems. She participated in the Battle of Geonosis before being given command of a group of Decimator tanks on Sarapin, where she managed to defeat the forces of the Old Republic. Sev'ranace Tann was then sent to Krant, where she was captured by Echuu Shen-Jon. She made the fatal mistake of underestimating his fury, for his own Padawan, Stam Reath, had been killed by Tann on Geonosis. Shen-Jon took revenge for Reath's death, and executed Tann without remorse. (GBC)

Sevriina

this Elom term describes their underground burrows. (GG12)

Sevro Slippers

developed and manufactured by Mahled Medical Services, servo slippers were designed to assist beings in walking about on high-gravity planets. Using a sophisticated system of servo-sensors, repulsor compensators, and muscle stimulators, servo slippers provided assistance to disabled beings as well. (GFT)

Sevron Ta

this Sullustan owned Ta's Roost, located in the city of Gallisport, on Shesharile 5. (SWJ6)

Sevv Sunb

this Sullustan worked as a business manager for Vurrha, during the early years of the New Order. (WOTC)

Sewell, Roons

this man served the Alliance as a General in the armed forces, during the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. Sewell grew up on the streets of a backwater world, fighting his way to freedom while maintaining his humanity. He was nearly killed in a street fight, left for dead and bleeding from external as well as internal injuries. After being rescued by a sanitation crew, Roons plotted to avenge his injuries by luring his tormentors in a spike-filled trap. He felt no qualms about killing the street gang in cold blood, because they would have done the same to him eventually. However, he found himself crying in shame for what he had done. Roons fell in love with an actress named Masla while performing with a theater troupe, but their relationship was short-lived. When Imperial agents tried to shut down the troupe on the grounds of seditious performances, Roons lashed out and tried to throw a chair at the commander. The stormtroopers accompanying him began to fire, and Masla was shot and killed. Roons himself barely escaped, then set out to exact his revenge on the Empire. He found a rebel cell, and managed to infiltrate the ranks of the Empire by stealing the uniform of Masla's father and impersonating an officer. After killing an entire squadron of stormtroopers and stealing several Imperial shuttles, Roons and his rebels found the Alliance during the early days of the Galactic Civil War. Roons was the leader of the team which extracted Jan Dodonna and his wife from Imperial service, but found that Dodonna had a greater knowledge of war than he did. When Mon Mothma ordered Dodonna to begin his service to the Alliance by serving under General Sewell, both men found an opportunity to grow, despite the fact that they were polar opposites. Sewell wanted to act, while Dodonna worried about logistics. Together they established the Massassi Base on Yavin 4, with Dodonna focusing on tactics and Sewell on combat. Then, during a raid on an Imperial supply depot, their transport was pursued by Imperial fighters. Roons took a Y-Wing and set out to draw the Imperials away from the transport. Roons was shot down and killed, but Dodonna and the transport returned to Yavin 4 unharmed. Dodonna's eulogy of Roons Sewell went down as one of the most stirring speeches of the fledgling Alliance. (SWERS)

Seylas, Debin

the Imperial Moff in charge of the Joralla System during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (PG1)

Seylott

this race of humanoids was native to the jungles of the planet Seylott. By the time of the Clone Wars, Seylott civilization was in steep decline. Many of the natives had lost much of their sentience, and were reduced to a primitive society. The Seylotts were known to be extremely sensitive to the Force, but most modern Seylotts had little control over it. Priests and shamans could control the Force, however, with passing skill. These large beings had pot-bellies supported by short, stout legs. Their long arms were strong and muscular, and their large hands were used to gripping tree limbs. Seylotts lacked an upright neck, and their wide-nosed faces seemed to hang from their shoulders. (JF)

Seylott

this planet, covered with thick jungles, was the homeworld of the Seylott race. (JF)

Seyugi Dervish

this ancient cult of assassins was based on the planet Recopia. Distinguished by their red cloaks and white masks, the Seyugi Dervishes were attuned to the Force, just enough to enhance their combat skills and help them locate and capture their prey. The Seyugi eschewed any formal training in the Force, preferring to use it to discover new and deadlier ways to kill sentients. They hired out their services to the wealthiest of the Core Worlds' inhabitants, and the appearance of their red robes drove a spike of fear into the hearts of millions. They spread throughout the Core for several decades before the Jedi Knights intervened. In a swift move, the Jedi eliminated all but the Seyugi base on Recopia, which remained hidden beneath the main fortress on Mallif Cove. Hidden in its lower levels, a cave held several hibernation chambers containing Seyugi disciples, frozen in carbonite and waiting to be reanimated. (CCW, WOTC)

Seyyerin Itoklo

this young Jedi Knight was one of those who trained under Luke Skywalker at the Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4, shortly before the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy. When the Yuuzhan Vong claimed they would halt their invasion if the New Republic turned over all the Jedi, Seyyerin Itoklo was one of the first to stand against the Yuuzhan Vong in defending a planet. Itoklo was killed while protecting the planet. (EVC, SWI57)

Sez

one of the family names used by the Bothan people, it referred to a fish found on Bothawui's oceans. (GCG, WOTC)

Sez

this fish was found in the oceans of Bothawui. (GCG, WOTC)

SFI Systems

this droid programming developer was nationalized by the Empire and added to the Imperial Droid Corporation. (FOP)

Sficca

a plant whose beautiful blossoms were often consumed. (DESB)

S-foil

the wing assembly of an X-wing. The wings are connected diagonally, and when the S-foil is moved into attack position, the opposing wings spread apart. On an X-Wing, this results in the characteristic X-shaped wing pattern. On a B-Wing, it brings the wings upward to form the well-known cross-shape wing pattern. The name S-foil is a shortened term for Strike Foil, the original name used to describe these wings by Incom Industries. (SW, SWSB, SWTJ)

SFX

this was the model number of a smoke generator produced for use in theatrical productions by GFBS. It also found use among paramilitary groups, for it helped provide cover during infiltration actions. (ROE)

SG82

see SG-82 (GQRG)

SG-82

this was the model number of Pacnorval Defense Systems' sonic rifle. Like the SD-77 sonic pistol, the SG-82 fired a wide pattern of high-intensity sound waves which could shatter solid objects or stun a living being into submission. (EGW)

Sgauru

this was one of two Yuuzhan Vong creatures, along with Tu-Scart, dispatched to Duro to destroy the refugee settlements established by the New Republic. Known as a male Beater, Sgauru resembled a segmented, hard-shelled creature with a white head that was dotted with black eyes. Around the creature's mouth were dozens of fleshy tendrils that drew bits of debris into its mouth. It was Sgauru that destroyed the buildings and warehouses on many worlds of the New Republic, with Tu-Scart following behind to consume the rubble. After years of conquest, the Yuuzhan Vong brought Sgauru and Tu-Scart to Coruscant, following the planet's reformation into a new version of Yuuzhan'tar. On Coruscant, the pair was put to work in destroying as much of the duracrete and transparisteel as they could, thereby helping the World Brain to complete its worldshaping activities. Some five years after the invasion began, Sgauru and Tu-Scart were ordered to play a more offensive role, when they were dispatched by Supreme Overlord Shimrra to attack the Galactic Alliance infiltration force that landed on Coruscant. Note that the Wizards of the Coast website claims that Sgauru is the Biter. Also note that The Unifying Force indicates that Sgauru was female. (BP, WOTC, UF)

SGB-543

this was a form of gravitic pressure bandage developed by Slusani Interstellar Pharmacologies. Based on a Sluissi design, the gravitic pressure bandage used a combination of micro-repulsorfield generators to apply a gradient of pressure to a wound, helping to staunch the flow of blood and allow for quicker healing. SGL Systems, Incorporated a major producer of black-market assassin droid components, SGL is headquartered on the planet Druckenwell. It was nationalized by the Empire when Palpatine assumed control of the Mid Rim's droid corporations. (SWJ6)

Sgidek

a Habeen Lambda-class shuttle operative during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

SGW-0027

the command code used to shut down the construction droids Wedge Antilles used to clean up Coruscant following the death of the reborn Emperor Palpatine. (JS)

SH?1-B

this MD5 general practitioner droid was taken from Jabba the Hutt's palace by Dengar, following the crimelord's death near the Pit of Carkoon. Dengar needed the droid's services, along with those of its companion, 1e-XE, in order to tend to the ravaged body of Boba Fett. Dengar had discovered the other bounty hunter shortly after Fett destroyed the Sarlacc and emerged from its belly. SH?1-B was not above giving its patients a piece of its mind, but it was also easily quelled into submission. When the bounty hunters fled Tatooine, SH?1-B and 1e-XE were left behind. (MA)

SH-9

this Czerka Arms slugthrowing pistol was a favorite of Alliance Special Forces agents, because it could be easily silenced and used whenever ranged weapons weren't available. (ROE)

Sha

this female name was common among the Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Sha

a Huttese term of respect. (JTH)

Sha grunnik ith-har

this was a phrase used by the Yuuzhan Vong to pray for clemency from their gods. It was repeated as a sort of incantation, pleading with one of the gods for assistance. (FH1)

Sha Koon

this female Kel Dor, the neice of Plo Koon, apprenticed under the Jedi Master Saldith during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. During the Stark Hyperspace War, Sha Koon received a telepathic message from Plo Koon, asking for assistance in fighting back against the forces of the Stark Commercial Combine on Troiken. (SHW)

Shaa

this immense, humanoid deity was the primary god worshipped by the Seylotts. (ZW)

Shaak

this unusual creature roamed the plains of Naboo in great herds. They were quadripedal mammals, although their bodies were quite immense when compared to their short, spindly legs. They were physically weak, barely able to keep themselves upright. This made them poor choices for pack animals by either the Naboo or the Gungans. They had flexible snouts that were used to nibble grass and other plants, and the flesh of the shaak was considered to be a delicacy by both the Naboo and the Gungans because it took little preparation to bring out its taste. The fatty ambergris was also used, as a base for perfumes. Their huge body and short legs keep them out of the swamps, where they are helpless to escape. Luckily, their fat bodies allowed them to float, and even a fall over a waterfall caused little real damage. Females of the species were continually pregnant, and their compartmentalized uterine system allowed them to be impregnated by different males at the same time. (GF, SON, WSW)

Shaak Ridge

this was a low range of rocky outcroppings, located south the city of Theed on the planet Naboo. It was here that the Gungan Grand Army made its stand against the battle droids of the Trade Federation, during the Battle of Naboo. (GB, GBC)

Shaak Ti

a member of the Togruta race, Shaak Ti was a noted Jedi Master who was active during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. She was best-known for her independent spirit, which ran contrary to her Togruta upbringing. After attaining the rank of Jedi Master, Shaak Ti trained two Padawan learners on her homeworld of Shili, but both were killed by criminals shortly after the completion of the training. This led to many beings within the Jedi Order wondering whether she was acting as an instrument of the Force. Shaak Ti chose to work alone, despite the wishes and assistance of her fellow Masters. Shaak Ti was one of the many Jedi Masters who were dispatched to Geonosis, along with Mace Windu, in an effort to rescue Obi-Wan Kenobi from the Separatists. Shortly afterward, Master Ti was assigned to the team that was dispatched to liberate the planet Brentaal from Separatist control. The mission forced Master Ti to confront the criminal known as Lyshaa, who had killed one of her former students, Fe Sun. Master Ti refused to be goaded by Lyshaa, and allowed the Zeltron to help her infiltrate Shogar Tok's chambers. Shaak Ti wasn't prepared for treachery from Lyshaa, however, and was shot by the Zeltron before she could arrest Shogar Tok. As Lyshaa tried to gain Tok's favor, neither party was aware that Master Ti was still alive. She slowed her metabolism down while focusing the Force to heal her injury. As the rest of the team completed their missions to disable the fortress' defenses, Master Ti revived herself and confronted Shogar Tok. In a brief struggle, she was forced to kill him with her lightsaber. Lyshaa tried to escape, but was killed in a lightstorm chamber protecting Tok's office. With Brentaal freed from Separatist control, Master Ti was rescued and placed in a bacta tank to heal. Her recovery came just before the end of the Clone Wars, and she was assigned to the detail that kept a watchful eye on Chancellor Palpatine. When General Grievous launched his final attack on Coruscant, Shaak Ti and her team rushed to the Chancellor's side. His stubborn nature frustrated the Jedi, and it was Shaak Ti herself who had to tackle Palpatine to the ground in order to protect him from fire. Unfortunately, Shaak Ti and her companions - Jedi Master Roron Corobb and Foul Moudama - were both killed in combat by Grievous. Palpatine was captured, and Shaak Ti was spared, but only so that she could report on her failure - and Grievous' strength - to the Jedi Council. In the wake of the First Battle of Coruscant, Master Ti remained on Coruscant. However, when Darth Sidious revealed his true nature and killed Mace Windu, he sent Anakin Skywalker to eliminate any resistance in the Jedi Temple. The young traitor found Master Ti first, alone in her rooms, and killed her before she could defend herself. Shaak Ti was portrayed by Orli Shoshan in Star Wars Episode II: Attack of the Clones and in Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (OWS, TCG1, VD2, SWDB, PJSB, J2, LEV, IS3)

Shaakling

this was a immature shaak. (HNN5)

Shaala Doneeta

this blue-skinned Twi'lek served as an aide to Count Dooku during the height of the Clone Wars. (SW172)

Shaalir Rech

this was the name of a noted Shistavanen individual. (UANT)

Shaara

this young human female (about fifteen years of age) was a dancer in a Mos Eisley club frequented by Imperial soldiers. She often performed provocative dances, a sharp contrast to her innocent nature. She was simply working to support her family's moisture farm. The Imperials wanted to have their way with her, but she fled to her family's farm. There, the Imperials killed her brother Kamma as she escaped again, this time fleeing into the southern desert. There, after a shot from her punch gun, Shaara knocked the Imperials into the Pit of Carkoon. Unfortunately, Shaara's speeder was disabled, and she, too, fell into the pit. All but one of the Imperials and Shaara herself were swallowed quickly. The remaining Imperial uncharacteristically saved Shaara from one of the Sarlacc's tentacles, and was captured himself. The Sarlacc then grabbed her, but instead of dragging her into its maw, it flung her out of the pit. It may have been because she was still dressed in her metallic dancer's outfit, or it may have been that the Sarlacc knew she was in trouble and helped her. No one will ever know. (TJP)

Shaardan

this man was one of the many Sith apprentices who were training at the academy on Korriban, during the height of the Great Sith War. After hearing the stories of Ajunta Pall's sword from Galon Lor, Shaardan set out to locate it in Ajunta Pall's tomb. However, he arrived too late, and decided to ambush the students who emerged with the sword. Unknown to Shaardan, the students were actually Jedi Knights in disguise. He demanded that the sword of Ajunta Pall be turned over to him, and became angry when they refused. He decided to fight them for it, but was killed in the brief struggle. (KOTOR)

Shabanaar

this immense beast lived in a series of caves and warrens, below the surface of the planet Roon. (DCAR)

Shabandar, Mici

this Alliance operative helped Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa capture the prototype Imperial warship, the Staraker, from the Empire's facility on Foundry, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. During the mission, Mici saved Leia from being killed by Imperial stormtroopers when Leia was grazed by a blaster bolt and injured. Mici herself was badly injured when the Staraker re-directed to Alashan, when the planet itself shot down the warship. Mici tried to repair what she could, but a control panel exploded and Mici was smashed into a bulkhead. She survived, aided by medical care from Luke and Leia, but she was unable to protect herself from the might of the planet itself. A huge storm of boulders and energy were sent to bombard the Staraker, and Mici was placed into a form of bio-stasis to help her survive. (MCI5, MCI6)

Shabba

a member of the ground team supporting the X-Wing Rogue Squadron, Shabba was a green-skinned humanoid with pointed ears. (XWRS)

Shabell

a Nightsister on Dathomir, she detected the thermal detonator Han Solo tried to carry into Warlord Zsinj's warroom and deactivated it with a command from the Force. (CPL)

Shachu

this was a common name for Ewok males. Like other Ewok names, it referred to a spirit or character in the Ewoks' mythology. (GCG)

Shachu

according to Ewok legend, this giant warrior was cursed by a witch. (GCG)

Shaclor

this female Selonian was a member of the Chanzari den, and was noted for her ability seek out new caves and tunnels to add to the den's warren. (CCW)

Shad

this is the capital city of the planet Melinz. (CRO)

Shad

this man served the Empire as a Commander in the armed forces, during the years following the Battle of Yavin. He was placed in charge of negotiating with Nescan Tal'yo for a holocube that contained information on the locations of several Alliance bases. Shad and his detachment were waylaid by the seductive wares of the Quetzal Sisters, who were actually undercover agents working for Orma Hunden. While the Imperials were wine and dine, Leia Organa managed to destroy the holocube, ensuring that its contents were never discovered. Commander Shad was forced to admit to General Khorak that the holocube was gone, but told a story about ten or twelve well-armed, male rebels getting the jump on them and stealing the holocube. (T15)

Shad Furies

this shockball team, based in the city of Shad on Melinz, was a five-time champion of the Royal Imperial Shockball League during the last years of the New Order. (CRO)

Shad Raal

this was the name of a noted Zabrak individual. (UANT)

Shadda-Bi-Boran

this planet was destroyed when its sun exploded. The Refugee Relief Movement was called in to help evacuate the people of the planet, especially the children, so that their civilization could endure. Unfortunately, the natives of this planet were unable to adapt to any world on which they were transplanted, and they died out. Note that the adaptation of Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones, written by Patricia Wrede, indicates that Padme' Amidala participated in the evacuation of Shadda-Bi-Boran when she was just eight. (AOTCN, AOTCA)

Shadeshine

it was rumored that Han Solo saved the natives of the planet Ventooine from this unusual stone, some time prior to the Battle of Yavin. The natives of the planet built a huge statue of Solo, and built an entire religion around his saving of the planet. The Shadeshine allowed the Satab and his minions to see across great distances and within any obstacle, making the Satab virtually omniscient. It also allowed the Satab to speed up the metabolism of a being, aging it many decades in an instant. However, the use of the Shadeshine gave the user incredibly sensitive senses, and external stimuli eventually destroyed the user.

The Shadeshine was given to Han Solo for disposal, after Chrysalla and Han Solo defeated the last of the Satabs in combat. Solo dumped it into the engine compartment of the Millennium Falcon, thereby destroying it and freeing the natives of Ventooine. (LTA5, MCA2)

Shadiru

this is one of the Outer Rim's most popular hotel chains. (GG9)

Shador

a Strike-class cruiser in the Valiant's battle fleet. (ISB)

Shador

this swamp-covered planet orbited just 100 million kilometers from its white star. From space, it appeared to be a dark, cloud-covered ball of dirty green seas and yellow-brown continents. Visitors encounter a densely-forested, swamp-covered planet with an atmosphere that is too foul to breathe. Several small cities sprang up nonetheless, mounted on pylons and pilings to keep the structures out of the swamp. Gondollas and repulsor-powered boats moved people around. (SL)

Shadorian

this was the alien race native to the planet Shador. They were known to be skilled assassins. (SL)

Shadorian Dragonfly

a large insect native to the planet Shador. (SL)

Shadorian Slime Crab

a disgusting crustacean native to the planet Shador. (SL)

Shadorian Slime-larva

a noxious creature native to the planet Shador. (SL)

Shadow

this Imperial stormtrooper served as part of the Aurek-Seven unit of the Imperial 501st Legion during the years following the formation of the Imperial Remnant and the signing of a peace treaty between the Empire and the New Republic. Like his companions Grappler, Cloud, and Watchman, Shadow accompanied Chak Fel on the mission to locate the Outbound Flight Project in Chiss space, some three years before the Yuuzhan Vong began their invasion of the galaxy. They took heavy damage when the Vagaari pirates launched their attack, but the unit remained intact throughout the fighting. (FB, SQ)

Shadow

this was the designation of a squadron of TIE Defenders used by the Empire to protect the Bretie production facility, shortly before the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Shadow

this stock light freighter was owned and operated by Lett Minak. (HR)

Shadow

this Mon Calamari MC40a light cruiser was part of a fleet which was protected a hospital space station which was sympathetic to the Alliance. (XWA)

Shadow Academy

this huge, cloaked space station, found in the Core Systems, was a training center for Dark Jedi set up by Brakiss following his departure from Yavin 4. He consolidated Imperial money and discovered exiled Nightsisters to help create the station. Brakiss, at the direction of the Imperial leaders of the time, set a number of self-destruction devices on the station, for use in the event that the students of the Dark Side revolted against their instructors. These devices could also be used to destroy the station, should it come into the hands of the New Republic. Brakiss used the station's cloaking ability to maneuver it into position near Coruscant, in an effort to steal much-needed supplies from Republic transports. Raids were launched from the cloaked station, using the modified assault shuttle employed in the attack on GemDiver Station. The transport ship Moon Dash was a victim of a collision with the cloaked station. The station continued to grow, though, under the watchful eyes of Brakiss and Tamith Kai. When the reborn Emperor Palpatine arrived on the station, Brakiss was honored. They began planning to attack the Jedi Academy on Yavin 4, but Brakiss began to doubt the Emperor's motives when he continually snuffed the young Imperial. At the end of the attack, Brakiss went to confront Palpatine, only to find that the Emperor was really a clever ruse perpetrated by four former Imperial Royal Guards. Brakiss killed all but one of them, who managed to set off the Shadow Academy's self-destruct systems. He escaped before the station exploded, killing Brakiss. (SA, LO, JUS)

an underground-dwelling creature native to Coruscant, the shadow barnacle was a crustacean that anchored its shell to the foundations of buildings. When the barnacle emerged from its shell, it extended a collection of filaments from its mouth. These filaments were used for breathing. To feed, the barnacle absorbed nutrients through its roots, which were burrowed into the duracrete. (ISU, WSW)

Shadow Bird

this was the alias used by Han Solo for the Millennium Falcon, shortly after the Battle of Duro. He used the alias to return to Corellia, where he hoped to buy some time for his wife, Leia, to recover from the injuries she received at Duro. The name referred to the matte-black paint job he had done to the Falcon shortly after the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy. (REC)

Shadow Bomb

this was the term used by Luke Skywalker to describe Kyp Durron's tactic of launching unpropelled proton torpedoes at Yuuzhan Vong targets with the Force. While this took much of the pilot's concentration away from his starfighter and the surrounding battle, the Yuuzhan Vong were unable to accurately target the proton torpedo when it lacked a propellant trail. This allowed the torpedoes to reach a Yuuzhan Vong craft and detonate before a dovin basil could be used to consume it. Those Jedi Knights who flew the newer T-65XJ3 X-Wing starfighter found that they could load one torpedo launcher with modified proton torpedoes, removing the propellant in favor of more explosive material, making even more potent shadow bombs. (SBS, NJOSB)

Shadow Chaser

Garowyn's state-of-the-art, quantum-armored starship used to transport potential Jedi to the Shadow Academy. When Luke Skywalker and Tenel Ka infiltrated the station, they stole the Shadow Chaser as their escape ship. The New Republic confiscated the ship, but later gave it to Luke for his own use. It was put to good use at the Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4 as a transport. (SA, LO)

Shadow Creeper

this was a predator that was native to the forests of Kashyyyk. Could this be another term for the shadow keeper? (AFA)

Shadow Dancer

very little was known about this pirate ship, except that her captain had installed a number of countermeasure and stealth systems that rendered it virtually invisible to scanners and sensors. (PP)

Shadow Droid

designed by Umak Leth and Borborygmus Gog for Emperor Palpatine, these attack craft were basically cybernetic starfighters. They were pilotless, for the most part, being controlled by the biologically-maintained brains of dead Imperial fighter pilots. These brains had been twisted through exposure to the Dark Side of the Force, and obey any command to the death. Shadow Droids were produced in the Deep Core during the period when Emperor Palpatine was reborn on Byss. These craft were armed with an ion cannon, a repeating blaster cannon, a pair of laser cannons, missile- and proton torpedo-launching systems, and an electromagnetic pulse cannon. The only problem with the Shadow Droids was that their once-human brains continued to evolve toward a perceived humanity. This meant that the brains would eventually go insane, once they realized that they were forever confined to their ships. In order to counteract this tendency, Leth and his engineers later installed specialized hardware that removed all traces of humanity from the brain before its installation. (DE2, EGD, OWS)

Shadow Fever

this disease was believed to be confined to the planet Ord Cestus, where it was often fatal if left untreated. (TCD)

Shadow Forest

this area of the wroshyr trees surrounding Rwookrrorro was a densely-forested area in which the bridal-veil sucker and mock shyr compete with the rroshrn and rkkrrkkrl for dominance. Deep in the Forest was located the Well of the Dead. The term Shadow Forest was also used to describe the second and third levels of the Kashyyyk jungle, and was considered the domain of the webweavers. (TT, GMR4)

Shadow I

this was the name of Del Korrot's personal starship. (DSSB)

Shadow Keeper

this five-limbed creature, known as the kkekkrng rro to the Wookiees, lived in the lowest depths of the jungle on Kashyyyk, at the fourth level of the biosphere. It was a carnivore, and preferred to hunt for fresh meat rather than scavenge for food. They were not brave or strong enough to attack a large Wookiee, but they had a long history of being a vicious hunter. An individual shadow keeper had three forelimbs and two rear legs, and move about on all five legs or just the rear legs. Of the three forelimbs, the outer pair were heavily clawed and used for gripping their prey. The inner leg was a bit shorter than the other two but also much stronger, with heavy muscles making it thicker than the other. The claws on all five legs were retractable, and could be used for climbing or hunting. The tongue of this creature was quite abrasive, and could tear the skin off another creature to expose its flesh. The unique, physical design of this creature made them popular among xenobiologists, but no specimen - alive or dead - was ever found for investigation. (TT, RD, GMR4)

Shadow Keeper

there were only seven of these starships ever built. They were one of the deadliest fighter craft of their time, and were named for a Kashyyyk predator. (SSR)

Shadow Killer

this was the term used to describe the most accomplished and feared Dashade hunters. (UANT)

Shadow Magic

this was the name given to the use of the Dark Side of the Force by the Nightsisters of Dathomir. The use of Shadow Magic was documented by Gethzerion in The Book of Shadows. Like all forms of Dathomiran "magic," Shadow Magic employs spells that allow the sister to gather the energy of the Force to her. She can then use its strength to create the desired effect. (CTD)

Shadow Night Festival

this was an Ewok celebration, in which the Woklings of each tribe dressed in unusual costumes and moved from house to house asking for treats. (ECAR)

Shadow of the Alliance

this was the name of a small, dense nebula that was located near the Yavin System. Many of the Alliance ships fleeing Yavin 4 in the wake of the Battle of Yavin hid in this nebula to avoid Imperial pursuit. (SWGAL)

Shadow Runner

this slip-winged starship was owned by Hok and Timar Daragon, and was used to run supplies to the rebels in the ancient Koros System. In a fateful run to bring supplies to the rebels on Kirrek, the Daragons were caught in the middle of the final battle on the planet. The Jedi Knights, using battle meditation techniques, had quelled all the hardest warriors into a cease-fire. However, a few stray minds attempted to kill as many of Empress Teta's troops as they could. In the cross-fire, the Shadow Runner was struck twice and destroyed. (GAS)

Shadow Squadron

this was a squadron of Imperial TIE Fighters active during the early years of the Galactic Civil War and assigned to the first Death Star during the Battle of Yavin. (JKG)

Shadow Squadron

this group of infiltration operatives was a part of the Alliance's Eclipse Team. (AIR)

Shadow Squadron

this group of New Republic X-Wing fighters was assigned to the Battle Dog. (SOC)

Shadow Traproom

this archaeological discovery was found on the planet Liok. Two Obroan Institute explorers - Dreiss and Mokem - were killed during the initial excavations of the site. (TT)

Shadow V

this was a model of combat airspeeder produced by MandalMotors during the last decades of the Old Republic. The Shadow V was 6.5 meters in length, and required a pilot and gunner to operate. It was armed with a double laser cannon, and could carry up to ten kilograms of cargo and a single passenger. (SWRPG)

Shadow Warriors

this was another name applied to the ancient Taungs of the planet Coruscant. (SWI80)

Shadow Wing

this notorious pirate gang was commanded by Abin-Ral-Xufush during the height of the New Order, and terrorized the Perlemian Trade Route for many years afterward. The Shadow Wing was somewhat unusual in that its members actually used the loot that they stole, after dividing it up amongst the members based on rank and priority. In this way, the Shadow Wing acquired most of its starships, by stealing the corvettes and fighters they needed from passing convoyus, then refitting them to their own needs. When captured ships did not meet their needs, the Shadow Wing often employed shipjackers and other criminal agents to acquire the necessary ships. Note that this pirate gang is referred to as the Dark Wing in Pirates and Privateers. (WOTC, PP)

Shadow, The

this was another name for the Rainbow-Eyed Enemy described by The Message of the Yuuzhan Vong Shamed Ones. (FH2)

Shadowcast

this was one of the most secret operations ever undertaken by the Alliance. It was a communications network developed to encrypt messages to deep-cover Alliance agents in Imperial propaganda advertising on the HoloNet. This allowed the leaders of the Alliance to reach those agents and spies who had infiltrated the deepest confidences of the Empire, without raising suspicions. In order to maintain the integrity of the Shadowcast codes, Leia Organa suggested that they be hidden in the Alderaanian moss-painting, Killik Twilight. Although the moss-painting was lost shortly after the destruction of Alderaan, the Alliance - and later, the New Republic - continued to use Shadowcast to communicate with its agents. What the codes used by Shadowcast offered in security, they took away in speed. Each transmission had to be encrypted by hand, then dispatched over a ghost wave. This ghostwave attached itself to a commercial transmission, allowing it to be broadcast on the HoloNet. (TG)

Shadowcloak

this unusual piece of technology was developed to allow individuals to meet face-to-face without having their true identities discovered. The shadowcloak provided two forms of protection. First, it used specialized scramblers to alter the user's voice beyond any recognition. Second, the covered the user with a field of blackness that completely masked their appearance. (CCW)

Shadowfire

this Suwantek TL-1200 freighter was once owned by Derrend Montis, who used the ship as a personal transport. Montis had the ship outfitted with hidden combat capabilities, as a measure of protection when traveling in unknown parts of space. After Montis' death, the Shadowfire was sold to a shipping company which went bankrupt shortly afterward, before it was acquired by Popara the Hutt for use as part of the Skydove Freight fleet. The Shadowfire was armed with a pair of turret-mounted quad laser cannons, two ion cannons, two concussion missile launchers, and a tractor beam projector. It was designed to be operated by a single pilot, and could accommodate up to 150 metric tons of cargo and 100 passengers. (TF)

Shadowhawk

this was the popular name of Ikas-Adno's XR-10 speederbike. (WSV)

ShadoWing-4 Glider

this para-wing glider was produced for recreational use by Neor-Yatten, but found widespread usage among scouts and paramilitary groups as well. It was based on original Imperial military glider designs, and included many of the safety features developed to keep troopers alive during field activities. It was equipped with geomorphous wings and a medium-duty repulsor engine, which provided the ShadoWing-4 with a high flight ceiling and incredible maneuverability. (ROE)

this was the two-man version of Neor-Yatten's ShadoWing-4 glider. (GG2)

Shadowlands

this was the name given to the deepest, densest part of the forest floor on the planet Kashyyyk, by the ancient Wookiees. It was believed that Rothrrawr lost the blade to Bacca's Ceremonial Blade while fighting a creature - which later became known as the Great Beast - in the Shadowlands. (KOTOR)

Shadowmen

this was the common name used to describe the race of beings that inhabited the planet Nivek. The Shadowmen were a race of rail-thin, insectile humanoids who resembled walking skeletons. They evolved unique adaptations to living in the near-total darkness of Nivek's environment, and had incredibly sensitive night-vision. As a people, the Shadowmen were known as skilled hunters and trackers. During the height of the Clone Wars, the Shadowmen sided with the Separatists, and allowed a weapons facility to be erected on the surface of Nivek. (CWA1)

Shadowport

this was the term used to describe any starport that catered to the less-reputable spacers of the galaxy, and provided services without requiring official licensing or notification. (FOP)

Shadowsilk

this strong, flexible thread had a number of uses in weapons and armor. It was incredibly durable and had a high tensile strength, and was often braided to form the bowstrings on bolt-throwers. When woven into fabric, shadowsilk actually absorbed ambient light and sound. This fabric was used by Ayelixe/Krongbing in the creation of Shadowsuits for the Alliance. (ROE, AEG)

Shadowspawn

this Imperial Lord led the Imperial resistance on the planet Mindor, before being defeated by Luke Skywalker and the armies of the New Republic. (ECH)

Shadowstone

this unusual stone was the powerful opposite of the Sunstar. The Shadowstone was controlled by the Tulgah witch Morag for many years, until it was stolen by the Ewok shaman Logray and combined with the Sunstar. The two stones provided enough energy for Logray to defeat Morag and maintain the freedom of the Ewoks. Logray then hid the Shadowstone and the Sunstar, keeping them separate and working to ensure that no other Ewoks tried to control their powers. (ECAR)

Shadowstrike

this unusual Ta-Ree magic allowed the wielder to "send" a physical blow at an opponent, without actually coming into contact with the opponent. The force of the blow would be equivalent to an actual punch thrown by the wielder, but allowed the wielder to remain at a distance from their opponent. (E)

Shadowsuit

this was the specialized form of lightweight, armored bodysuit produced by Ayelixe/Krongbing for use by the Alliance's Infiltrators. The shadowsuit provided a variety of passive stealth and anti-sensor benefits, mainly derived from the use of specialized fabrics such as shadowsilk. (ROE, AEG)

Shadowtrooper

this was the name of the elite stormtrooper unit which specialized in undercover, special-forces type operations. Also known as Storm Commandos, these forces were initially trained by Crix Madine, before he defected to the Alliance. The shadowtroopers, however, were considered very useful by the Emperor himself, and remained as a part of the military structure. Like Alliance SpecForce troops, the Shadowtroopers were used to infiltrate secure areas and break open stalemated situations. Shadowtroopers remained part of the Imperial military for many years following the Battle of Endor. (ROE, JK2)

Shadren V

this planet was the site of an Imperial base which was destroyed by the Alliance shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (GG10)

Sha'Dria

this enigmatic woman worked as a bartender at the Oasis, located within the Bantha Traxx establishment on Lianna. Her background was unknown to almost everyone but herself, and she covered her true identity with a mask she called a N'Noch. A physically attractive woman, Sha'Dria was also a good listener and had a wealth of wisdom, just a few of the reasons she was such a good bartender. She could also handle herself in a fight, and actually destroyed Haelon Tice's hand when he got too friendly with her one night. (WSV)

Shadun

this plant produced a fragrant clove at its base. The clove, once it was de-thorned and peeled, could be crushed to add an exotic flavor to many dishes. (HNN5)

Shaelas

this male Selkath approached the Jedi Knights who were on Manaan, during the Great Sith War, to investigate the disappearance of several Selkath youths. Shaelas feared that they had been captured by the Sith, a fear that was proven correct. However, the Jedi also discovered that Shasa and the other Selkath had been falsely lured to the Sith base as part of a plot to infiltrate the Selkath people. In the end, Shasa was freed and the Sith treachery was exposed. (KOTOR)

Shaelo Cliffs

the Empire had a base located within these cliffs during the Galactic Civil War. The cliffs are located on the planet Harix. (CSWEA)

Shafar

this was the name given to those priests of the Ni'Shaw-Dak Ministry who worked around the planet V'shar, preaching the teachings of Ni'Shaw in individual ministries. (AIR)

Shafr Center

this was one of the most prestigious schools of xenoarchaeology during the height of the New Order. (GMR9)

Shaft, The

this was the name of the longest corridor located on the Jubilee Wheel space station. (HT)

Shag

this term, used in the Elrood Sector, was an affectionate nickname for a Wookiee. (PG3)

Shag

this is Huttese slang for "slave." (IS1)

Shag Fern

this species of quick-growing fern was native to the planet Kashyyyk. (HT)

Shagrad Loset

this Gotal worked with the Gotal Foreign Affairs Commune during the last years of the Old Republic, and publically denounced the involvement of the Jedi Knights in the rescue of Nathanjo Nirrelz. (HNN5)

Shah, Eyal

this red-haired man was a native of Corellia, but lived on the planet Dantooine shortly after the Battle of Yavin. He tried to capture Tash Arranda when she entered the Jedi ruins on the planet, but was stopped by the Shi'ido Hoole. He claimed to be a member of the Alliance base which was supposedly abandoned prior to the Battle of Yavin, but was fully manned when Eyal led them to the base. He hoped they could restore the base's dilapidated freighter to working order. Eyal also told them that the Alliance had abandoned them on the planet. It was later revealed that Eyal and his "rebels" were part of an experimental cloning process that created clones in just over two weeks, rather than the year it normally took, using the rapid cloning technique. The Empire used the legends of the Jedi ruins to keep the native Dantari away from the lab, which was built beneath the ruins. Several versions of Eyal had been created. (GOF11)

Shahn

this man served the Alliance as a sensor operator at the base on the planet Arbra, in the months following the Battle of Hoth. (LTA5, MC58)

Shahverdian, Rafe

this man was Denno Yanglan's only true friend, during Yanglan's service to the Empire on the planet Bakura. When Yanglan defected to the Alliance, Shahverdian joined him. (TBSB)

Shak

this was the Eickarie word for "ready". (SQ)

Shak

this Twi'lek clan ran the Kala'uun Starport on Ryloth during the early years of the New Republic. They were also the providers of the Twi'leki dancers sold to Durga the Hutt, through negotiations with Ghitsa Dogder. (KT, TFNR)

Sha-kae

this was one of the many Eickarie clans that made up the Si-shae-ral tribe on the planet Kariak, during the height of the New Republic. (FB)

Shaka-ka

this Barabel hunter and tactician organized her fellow Barabels against the atrocities committed by Planetary Safaris against her people. The safari corporation petitioned the Empire to eradicate the "savages," despite the fact that the Barabel were obviously sentient. When Captain Alater and sector governor Paro Lanto exposed Planetary Safaris' deception and admitted Barab I into the Empire, Shaka-ka commissioned and built the city and starport at Alater-ka. (GG4)

Shaka-ka Memorial

this memorial, erected in honor of the Barabel visionary Shaka-ka, was built in the city of Alater-Ka. However, when the Yuuzhan Vong attacked Barab I, the Memorial was destroyed. (FH1)

'Shakal

a Hapan term translated as 'worthy.' (CPL)

Shaki, Kisa

this woman worked for Jabba the Hutt as a manager at the Swift Hutt Spacer's Service Depot, during the height of the New Order. When Jabba was killed just prior to the Battle of Endor, Shaki murdered her pit boss and assumed control of the Service Depot, then began plotting a way to take control of Jabba's criminal empire. Shaki gathered many of Jabba's former mercenaries and guards, and formed a militaristic organization of her own. Her main competition came from Qes Dollis, and the two spent most of their resources pummeling each other's forces, and neither was able to take advantage of Jabba's death. (RESB)

Shakka

this was a common name given to Twi'lek females, and meant "lightning" in the Twi'leki language. (GCG)

Shakka

this Lethan Twi'lek was the female companion of Graxol Kelvyyn. (SWK, YJC6)

Shakker

an Alliance Lambda-class shuttle captured during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Shakra

this bounty hunter was one of the few who accepted the challenge of capturing Bornan Thul, after the Alderaanians stole a datadisk from Nolaa Tarkona. She nearly outwitted Boba Fett by capturing Thul's ship and boarding it, but Thul had set it to self-destruct if he were captured, and Shakra died in the explosion. Shakra was a frilled, reptiloid. (TEP)

Shakri Lia

this sword was the symbol of the King of the Kentra people. The name "Shakri Lia" translated to "honor bound" in the Kentra language. (SWJ2)

Shakwa Rehakas

this was the name of a noted Thakwaash individual. (UANT)

Shal Koom

this was one of the many Neti individuals who hailed from the planet Myrkr. (UANT)

Shal Tor

this Yuuzhan Vong consul was escalated shortly after the aliens began their invasion of the New Republic, only to have his body reject the implants which signified his new position. As a result, Shal Tor was forced out of his position and relegated to the ranks of the Shamed Ones. (UF)

Shal, Bryn

this man was the head scientist assigned to Project Wayfarer, during the Expansionist Period of the Old Republic. (PG3)

Shala

this was one of the many Twi'leki clans which were native to the planet Ryloth. In the Twi'leki language, the clan's name meant "crying" or "tearful". (GCG)

Shala

this Hutt maintained a group of pirates attached to the Invids. Shala and much of his team were nearly killed in an attack on a spice shipment coming out of Kessel, when New Republic warships intercepted them. One of his freighters was sucked into the Maw before Leonia Tavria could arrive with the Invidious and drive off the Republic's forces. When Corran Horn began scaring the residents of Vlarnya with his "avenging Jedi" persona, Shala simply took it as a challenge and began to have his pirates perform more and more heinous crimes, in an effort to draw out the Jedi. Shala also had his demolitions expert, Rach'talik, create a trap for him. However, Shala overestimated the Twi'lek's loyalty. Rach'talik built a trap that would kill both Shala and the Jedi. When Corran attempted to remove the deadHutt switch Shala was holding, the only thing he did was scare the Hutt into dropping it. Rach'talik's laser-flechette armaments went off perfectly, reducing Shala to a puddle of laser-blasted flesh. Corran managed to escape with the help of the Force. (IJ)

Shalam

this planet, which suffered large amounts of damage during the height of the New Order when it was bombarded by Grand Admiral Il-Raz's flagship Emperor's Disciple, opened negotiations with the New Republic some 13 years after the Battle of Endor. (TBH, SWI66)

Shalaman

a type of tree native to the planet Belsavis, shalaman wood was often used in furniture and in stair railings. (COJ)

Shalamite

this is the name used by the natives of the planet Shalam. (TBH)

Shaldania Parade

this huge procession of floats, bands, and military regiments was known throughout the galaxy as the first true event of Fete Week on Coruscant. (SWJ8)

Shaleena

this woman was one of Rukil's younger apprentices, living in the Undercity of Taris during the era of the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Shalik

this family of Sedrians is one of the few that lived off-planet from Sedri. They were employed by the Empire to maintain the Imperial aquaria on Kailor V. (GG4)

Shalini

this slender woman was one of the leaders of the Typha-Dor resistance, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Along with her husband, Mezdec, Shalini rallied people from throughout the Uziel System for her crusade against the invasion plans of the Vanqors. Although she was saddened when a traitor was discovered in their midst, Shalini was even more disheartened to learn that the traitor was actually Mezdec. Luckily for the Typha-Dor people, the data regarding the Vanqor invasion plans was contained on a datadisk that was in Shalini's control. She turned the disc over to Jedi Master Obi-Wan Kenobi and his apprentice, Anakin Skywalker, in the hopes that they could get to Typha-Dor and transmit the information back to the Old Republic. (JQ7)

Shall ScreeI

this name was attributed to a known Shi'ido individual, but it remained unclear whether or not it was the Shi'ido's given name. (UANT)

Shalla

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Shalla

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Shallamar

this female Barabel once accused Han Solo of cheating at sabacc on Barab One, shortly after Han had been discharged from the Imperial Navy. He had won fair and square, but Shallamar was angry. Her female Devaronian partner fled the encounter, so Shallamar attacked by herself. Han tried to draw his blaster, but the sight hung up in his holster. The fight was quickly ended when Chewbacca picked up Shallamar and flung her across the room. Han and Chewie fled into the night. After the encounter, Han filed off the blaster's sight for easier drawing. He met up with Shallamar again on Cloud City, for the huge sabacc tournament there. She had to be physically restrained from injuring Solo, because she still held a grudge against him. The casino security on Cloud City proved that Han was free of skifters and other sabacc cheating devices, and Shallamar was sent on her way. (THG, RD)

Shallence, Ellisa

this Baroness-Administrator of Cloud City was in charge of the outpost when Lobot was arrested for theft. She made the young rogue a deal: spend a lifetime in prison, or serve Cloud City as a cyborg computer interface. Lobot chose to serve the City. (GG2, EGC)

Shallow March

this planet was the site of the Shallow March Supply Post, maintained by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War. (CRO)

Shallow March Supply Post

this Imperial supply center was located in the farthest reaches of the Outer Rim Territories, but provided a vital link to remote garrisons and fleets. (CRO)

Shalm

this planet was the site of an abandoned Imperial garrison which was used as a base by Pendarran's Revenge. The base was located on the western side of Ganton Mountain. (WBC)

Shal'mak

this female Kian'thar, the mother of Kreet'ah, once tried to take control of Alexi Garyn's fortress on the planet Ralltiir, during the last years of the Old Republic. The descendant of one of Shaum Hii's most successful criminal families, Shal'mak was a businesslike individual who took her work as a crimelord very seriously. The wife of a derlac herder, Shal'mak was also one of Black Sun's most dangerous agents on Ralltiir. (CCW)

Shalo

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Shalo

this man started his own cantina in the city of Mos Eisley, on Tatooine, during the period leading up the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Supported by a criminal network, Shalo hoped to take away a good portion of Chalmun's business. Shalo got his start in the criminal underworld working for Durga the Hutt as a hired gun, and eventually worked his way up the criminal chain. Shortly after the Battle of Duro, Shalo double-crossed Han Solo by trying to capture Jacen Solo for the bounty on his head, placed there by the Yuuzhan Vong. When Talon Karrde and Shada D'ukal showed up to support Han, Shalo backed off, claiming that he wouldn't actually turn Jacen in. He said that he would have simply extorted protection money from Han. (EVR)

Shal-Orl

this was one of the most famous Draethos individuals to hail from the planet Thosa. (UANT)

Sha'lott

this was the name of the great ibbot ridden by the Drall Wingrider Elamm. The name "Sha'lott" came from the Drallish word for "graywing". (CCW)

Shalthan Leeru

this was the name of a distinguished Morseerian individual. (UANT)

Shalunask

this was a common name among the Temolak race. (UANT)

Shalyvane

this planet was the homeworld of the Em'liy race. It was also believed to be Shira Brie's homeworld. It was later revealed that Shira was lying about this, as part of the cover provided to her by Darth Vader. She infiltrated the Alliance in the city of Chinshassa, which had been devastated by a civil war between the wilderness barbarians and the city-dwelling humans. (MC60, UANT)

Shamarok

a small, flying rodent native to the planet Ithor, these creatures have the ability to mimic the voices and sounds of other creatures. Shortly before the Battle of Yavin, these creatures were very popular on certain Imperial worlds, especially Lianna, and the smuggling of shamaroks became a lucrative business. (SWJ3, DTR)

Shamd City

this is one of two major cities on the eastern continent of Kirima, and is the site of a major staroport. (TSK)

Shamed Ones

this was the name used by the Yuuzhan Vong to describe those warriors who suddenly were unable to withstand the intense scarring and ritual deformation of their species. Other Yuuzhan Vong were Shamed from birth, simply unable to withstand the implants and scarring. The Yuuzhan Vong believed that their gods had deemed an individual unworthy of continued favor, and changed their bodies. The ritual scarring became infected, and implants failed to take root. While these Yuuzhan Vong usually failed in their missions, they were considered too valuable to sacrifice to the gods. They were reduced in caste, relegated to the Shamed Ones, and forced to be humble and utile to their masters. The Shamed Ones believed that the generation-spanning mission to conquer the New Republic was ordained to be their salvation, for Yun-Shuno would redeem the Shamed Ones once the unclean galaxy was cleansed of heretics. Their beliefs were given a measure of credence when Vua Rapuung was revealed to have been infected by Mezhan Kwaad. The Shamed Ones now had evidence that a member of their caste could redeem him- or herself, because his disease was not god-given but merely a natural occurrence. They also began wondering if their lower-class standing was not ordained by the gods, but imposed upon them by the higher castes. Also, Vua Rapuung's experiences with Anakin Solo gave the Shamed Ones hope for redemption, and the belief that the Jedi Knights were their hoped-for saviors spread quickly after Yuuzhan Vong were defeated on Yavin 4. (BP, EVC, EVR)

Sha-mees craa shes-ayi

this Eickarie phrase was used to praise the valor of one's comrades in battle. (FB)

Shamel

this small-time spacer hired Tesslar to steal speeders for his personal smuggling ring. (GG10)

Shamunaar

this large, predatory sauropod was native to the planet Roon, and was the only threat to the wild banthas which lived there. (EGP)

Shamus

Admiral Zaarin's modified Nebulon-B2 frigate, it was his command ship during the Galactic Civil War. He used it to transport the various TIE prototypes he was developing. It was attacked numerous times by Alliance starfighters, but always managed to survive and perpetuate the TIE Fighter growth pattern. He used it to launch his attack on Emperor Palpatine at Coruscant. (TIE)

Shan

this surname was common among the Sullustan race, and meant "gold" in the Sullustan language. (GCG)

Shan

this Herglic term was originally used to describe a Herglic's pod aunt, or any sibling of its parents. After Herglics began traveling in the galaxy, it also was used to indicate any ship on which a Herglic have never ridden. (PGT)

Shan Sien

this was a noted Gossam individual, distinguished in the history of the planet Castell. (UANT)

Shan, Bastila

a native of the planet Talravin, this Jedi Knight was known for her strength with the Force, and was one of the Jedi dispatched to help liberate the planet Taris from the Sith some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. She had been taken from her family at a young age, and she harbored some anger toward the Jedi for this, even after she fully embraced their teachings. Bastila was very young when it was discovered that she had immense skill in the techniques of battle meditation, and the development of this skill placed Bastila on the front lines against the Sith hordes. While outwardly she appeared overconfident, Bastila was all too aware of her situation and that of the Jedi. She devoted her life to the defeat of the Sith empire, hoping that along the way she would also prove herself as a Jedi Knight. It was rumored that her ability to control a battle with only her connection to the Force was discussed privately among the Sith, who feared her abilities might halt their advances. Her strong skills also worried the Jedi Council, which urged her to proceed with caution rather than on impulse alone. After the capture of Darth Revan and his subsequent forced return to the Light Side of the Force, Bastila was part of the team that was dispatched to Taris aboard the Endar Spire. After escaping Taris, Bastila and her band returned to Dantooine, where she was paired with Revan on a mission to locate Darth Malak and the Star Forge. They were captured, along with Carth Onasi, by Malak and held aboard the Leviathan, and it was during their escape that Revan learned of the truth behind his return to the Jedi. Bastila attacked Malak in order to allow the others to escape, and was again captured by the Sith. Malak tortured her, driving her to embrace the Dark Side of the Force. She nearly stopped Carth and Revan on the Unknown World of the Rakata, but they were able to drive her off. Later, at the Star Forge, Bastila confronted her former friends, but was unable to defeat them in combat. The Jedi among them managed to turn her away from the Dark Side. She returned to the Jedi Code, and helped the Jedi defeat Darth Malak and control the Star Forge. Bastila Shan was voiced by Jennifer Hale for the video game Star Wars: Knights of the Old Republic. (SWI67, KOTOR, SWDB)

Shan, Deena

this young woman joined the Alliance shortly after the Battle of Yavin, choosing a life of possible adventure over motherhood or a boring job. She was based on Etti IV, working aboard the Kalla's Stanchion as a supplies and requisitions agent. She had hoped to meet Han Solo, but was frustrated by his growing attraction to Leia Organa. She found herself flying aboard the Millennium Falcon when the Kalla's Stanchion was attacked by Imperial forces, and Han was forced to transport Leia to a meeting on Aguarl III. Their first jump into hyperspace went as planned, taking them to a remote corner of the galaxy. However, a distress call forced them to break off the rest of the jump. They found the remains of a ship that crashed on an uncharted planet, but the crew had been consumed by the native wildlife. Han and Chewbacca almost met the same fate, but Leia and Deena managed to reach them in time to blast them free. It was in the quiet time following the battle that Deena realized she had joined the Alliance for the wrong reasons. Instead of searching for her own future, Deena resolved to work harder at ensuring a better future for the rest of the galaxy. (SWEAT)

Shan, Helena

this woman was Bastila Shan's mother. During the height of the Great Sith War, Helena found herself stranded on Tatooine, during her search for daughter. Bastila and a group of other Jedi traveled to Tatooine to verify her story, and Bastila was surprised to find that Helena was actually her mother. They got into a huge argument over Bastila's loyalty to the Jedi Order, and Bastila turned her back on Helena. However, she realized that her mother was her only surviving family member, and returned to patch things up. Helena then revealed that Bastila's father had hidden a holocron in the desert, and allowed Bastila to recover it. (KOTOR)

Shan, Zavol

this was one of the many tourists who traveled to the planet Manaan during the height of the New Order, only to discover that the "luxury resort" was actually a polluted environment which was being destroyed by industrialization. (PH)

Shana

a female Mistryl guard working for Mara Jade. She was killed when Tol Sivron took the Death Star prototype from the Maw Installation and attacked Kessel. A shot from the station's superlaser caught her ship and destroyed it. (COTF)

Shand Essil

this was a noted individual from Koorivan history. (UANT)

Shan'dira

this young Twi'leki female sought passage off Ryloth, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. Her clan objected to her departure, and imprisoned her to keep her from leaving Ryloth. Mal'aa and a young Twi'lek named Halno'an helped a team of mercenaries infiltrate the Dira clan warrens and liberate Shan'dira. (PSPG)

Shando

this metropolitan area was located on the planet Lirra. (SWJ12)

Shandor Squadron

this Alliance starfighter squadron assisted a team of Onderonian rebels in destroying the Empire's Jyrenne Base, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (SWJ10)

Shang Lines

this shipping and transportation corporation served the Endocray Sector during the Galactic Civil War. (IA)

Shanga, Klyn

the farmer-turned-militia Leader who led a rag-tag team of vigilantes across the galaxy to kill Vuffi Raa, who they believe was the cause of the destruction of the Renatasia System. Shanga's militia was hired by Rokur Gepta, who played Shanga's anger at Vuffi Raa for nearly destroying his system against his own need for revenge against Lando. He commands a specially-built combination of starfighters. None of the 24 ships are identical, but all are physically linked to a huge flying energy source. It appears to be a large, space-going spider when first encountered. Shanga has many titles in his rag-tag militia, including Fleet Admiral of the Renatasian Confederation. His face is covered with scars, so much so that it appears he has no original skin on his face. Shanga was a farmer in the Mathilde nation-state, and grew up as a warrior in the various interstate wars on Renatasia III. (LCF, LCS)

Shang-Troy Thanabo

this ancient Jedi Master, an alien being who resembled a white-skinned Nautolan, was one of the first of the Jedi Masters to take an apprentice. In fact, Shang-Troy took to siblings - twin boys from Boranall - as his Padawans. He discovered the children when they were still in their mother's womb; their connection to the Force brought him across the galaxy to Boranall to find them. Master Thanabo helped the mother give birth, but was forced to pull the two boys apart to get them out of the womb. This seemed to scar one brother, making him different from the other. He took the twin boys to his training facility and raised them himself, teaching them everything he knew about the Force, and learning a few things from the twins along the way. The bonds between them grew strong, and when the boys were old enough, Shang-Troy took them out into the galaxy to fight against evil. However, when the younger brother earned the love of a beautiful woman, the older one grew jealous and angry. He tried to sneak into the girl's room and steal her love, but she recognized the birth-scar on the older brother. This forced a wedge into the brother's love for each other, a wedge that Master Thanabo could do nothing to prevent or resolve. In their anger, the boys started fighting, and Master Thanabo tried to intervene. Blinded by their anger, the twins cut down their teacher and killed him. Instead of stopping them, Master Thanabo's death only added to their hatred of each other. Calling upon huge amounts of Force energy, the two brothers destroyed themselves, the girl, and the entire planet. The resulting explosion created a star in the heavens. The story of Master Thanabo and his two Padawans became legend within the Jedi Order, and served as the basis for two of the Order's most prominent rules: a Master could only take a single Padawan learner, and intense emotion must be controlled or an individual risked being consumed by the Dark Side of the Force. (T14)

Shanh

this was the apex predator of the planet Ansion. The head of the shanh was dominated by its large teeth, while it moved about on six powerful legs. The teeth of the shanh were serrated and pointed backward, allowing the creature to grip its prey with incredible force. Shanhs often hunted in family groups, with the male making the initial attack while the females waited in ambush. (APS)

Shanifer

this was one of the most common names used by the Farghul people. (UANT)

Shanko

this three-meter-tall, insectoid being was the owner of Shanko's Hive, on the planet Borgo Prime. Distinguished by this three pairs of arms, Shanko also tended bar. (SA)

Shanko's Hive

an establishment on Borgo Prime, it was a cone-shaped building sealed in its own atmosphere. It was colored grayish-green. (SA)

Shanks

this man was one of many lieutenants serving Orman Tagge, during the years following the Battle of Yavin. Shanks originally took the position of liaison to the House of Tagge in an effort to further his career, but the continual failure of Orman to carry out his plans left Shanks without distinction. Unfortunately for Shanks, he was aboard the Tagge ship when they tried to abmush the Alliance at Junction. They had hoped to use the Omega Frost device to destroy the Alliance fleet, but Luke Skywalker was able to deactivate the system and allow the Alliance ships to pass unharmed. They opened fire on the Tagge ship, destroying it in minutes. All hands aboard, including Orman Tagge and Shanks, were killed in the explosion. (MC25, MC33)

Shankti Drive Works

this company was headquartered in the city of D'larah, on the planet Demophon. They were among the forerunners in hyperdrive manufacturing and development, and created the hyperdrive motivators used on Imperial-class Star Destroyers. Note that The Far Orbit Project denotes this corporation as Shanki Drive Works. (SN, FOP)

Shannador's Revenge

a two-kilometer-long Invincible-class Dreadnaught used by the Corporate Sector Authority. It intercepted a disguised Millennium Falcon when Han Solo and Chewbacca try to escape from Orron III. (HSE, CSA)

Shannessi, Jeph

this Imperial Colonel was in command of the forces controlling the planet of Minntaa, until a group of Alliance SpecForce agents assassinated him just outside his garrison base. His officers and troops were suddenly demoralized, and the Alliance was able to take control of the planet. (ROE)

Shanpa

a musical style developed on Manpha, it is centered by the music of the Growdi flute. (MTSE)

Shan-pakk

this Herglic phrase meant starport. (PGT)

Shanpan

this was the only city on the planet Manpha that had a spaceport. (MTSE)

Shantee, Phinea

this woman lived in Bestine, on the planet Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. (GQRG)

Shantipole

one of the Roche asteroids inhabited by the Verpine. It was the site of a research station that developed the B-Wing. (SFS)

Shantipole

the Alliance Corvette used to evacuate the Verpines working on the Shantipole Project with Admiral Ackbar. They were forced to evacuate when the project was compromised by a spy. (XW)

Shantipole Project

a joint venture commissioned by Admiral Ackbar and the Verpine colonies of Slayn & Korpil, the Shantipole Project was designed to create more effective starfighters to combat the growing Imperial war machine. The primary offspring of the Project was the B-Wing starfighter. It was nearly taken over by Captain Kolaff and the Empire during the development of the B-Wing Expanded, but Alliance agents working with Ackbar were able to drive Kolaff off. (SFS)

Shanzar

this Em'li'y was distinguished in the history of the planet Shalyvane. (UANT)

Shapani Bypass

this short hyperspace route branched off the Rimma Trade Route and connected Tapani Sector to the rest of the galaxy. It was also known as the Bacta Bypass, since it was originally created to provide a means by which bacta - produced on Thyferra - could reach the Core faster. (PGT)

Shaparo

this Alliance agent was part of the team which was trapped between Imperial forces and the Assassin's Guild in the Tylerin Embankment, on Archais. Shaparo's ability to keep their damaged equipment operating allowed the Alliance team a chance to escape. (AIR)

Shape Throwing

this was the given to the process by which a non-corporeal deity creates a physical manifestation of itself. (CSWDW)

Shapers

this caste of Yuuzhan Vong society was known for their ability to create living technologies from raw, organic materials. There were three tiers of Shapers: Initiates, Adepts, and Masters. Like most other Yuuzhan Vong castes, the Shapers had a patron diety, known as Yun'N'Shel. As an Adept grew in power and skill, they ritually scarred themselves in ways similar to that of Yuuzhan Vong warriors. However, the mutilations of the Shapers were purely functional. Chief among them was the removal of each natural hand, which were replaced with specially-grown hands equipped with various tools and blades for use in shaping new forms of bio-technology. The right hand was the most obviously different, having a cephalopod shape and eight fingers instead of five. Another distinguishing feature of a Shaper was the unusual headdress they wore, which seemed to writhe like a Medusa's head and was attuned to the Shaper's emotional state. Once the Yuuzhan Vong realized that the Jedi Knights were unusual enough to manipulate the Force - an entity that didn't exist in their galaxy but obviously could be used - several sects of Shapers were put to work on finding a way to exterminate the "Jedi problem." (DTR, EVC, SWI62, UF, UFCD)

Shaping

this was the process in which the annealed seeds of the boras tree were shaped into new forms of boras. The process of shaping seed-disks into Sekotan starships mimicked this natural process. (RP)

Shar Dakhan

this ancient Sith magician was one of Naga Sadow's supporters. He was one of the primary planners and organizers of Sadow's naval fleet, which was created to attack the Old Republic and expand the Sith Empire. (FOSE)

Shar Shar

this bloated Zeetsa served as an assistant to regent G'Mai Duris, during the height of the Clone Wars. (HIV)

Shar, Ayla

a native of the planet Korbin, this woman worked as a miner and resource coordinator for Vulca Minerals before joining the Alliance. She provided the Alliance with a wealth of information on industrial sabotage and resource management, and was instrumental in the hijacking of many Imperial ore haulers. Ayla also served, for a time, as a foster agent. (AIR)

Sharalon

this woman was the main desk manager at the Regal Bothan Hotel during the height of the Galactic Civil War. She was also an Imperial Intelligence agent who had spent most of her career bringing down rebellious cells throughout the Core Worlds. She was assigned to the Regal Bothan after a debacle on Kuat. (SESB)

Shard

this was the nickname given to the clone trooper commander who was assigned to Jedi Master Darrus Jeht, during the height of the Clone Wars. (LFCW) native to the planet Orax, this was a species of intelligent, crystalline lifeform. Their physiology was based on silicon rather than carbon, and they grew to sizes of 40 centimeters in length. They appeared to be simply crystals, but the molecular makeup of their forms resembled a complex form of circuitry which developed its own form of electromagnetic energy, and gave them the ability to think, sense, and interact. The average Shard has a long lifecycle, with the oldest clusters being several thousand years of age. After making contact with early settlers on Orax, the Shards and their human neighbors discovered a way to "disconnect" a Shard from the planet and place it inside a droid body, thereby giving it mobility and enhanced sensory input. These Shards traveled to the corners of the galaxy, attempting to gather information and then return to Orax. During the New Order, Orax was raided for crystals, and many clusters of intelligent life were destroyed, believed to be simply stones. The surviving Shards eventually aligned themselves with the Alliance, and those with droid bodies became some of the Alliance's best spies. (AE)

Shard

Shard of Alderaan

this computer slicing program was known to be capable of defeating the security measures of almost any Imperial scandoc. It was created by the Alliance agent known as "Never Die," but was stolen by pirates who worked for Begas Tok. Tok then arranged to auction off the computer program to the highest bidder. He set up an elaborate auction aboard the luxury sail barge Dune Princess, and invited representatives of the Alliance and the Empire, as well as independent interests. Unfortunately for Tok, the sail barge was beset by a sandstorm, and in the resulting confusion, Tok lost the datapad containing the program. It's exact whereabouts were never discovered. (LAA)

Sharda

this woman was a member of the Rabid Mynocks when she met Chop Harlison. They fell in love and got married, produced a daughter named Jardra. Unfortunately, Sharda was killed when the Spiders attacked Mynock territory. (SWJ6)

Sharden, Eida

this woman was a wealthy entrepreneur native to the planet Exocron. She was a long-time friend of Captain Horzao Darr, although he didn't know that she was also a member of the western pirates who loathed the Devisors and wanted technology returned to the people. When Darr suggested to Kaiya Adrimetrum that Eida could help free the crew of the FarStar, she agreed, but only if Adrimetrum would provide her with enough technical information to allow her to create modern hyperdrives and computer systems. (KO)

Shardona, Plin

this young woman was an Alliance field procurement working for the Sandwind Team after the Battle of Hoth. (SSR)

Shardra

this smuggler worked in the Corporate Sector, where she met and fell in love with Doc, the former Klaus Vandangante. They were married, and had a daughter, Jessa. Shardra did not live to see her daughter grow up, however, as she was suddenly killed in a fuel dump explosion. (CSA)

Sharene

this man, the husband of Lodos, was one of the first colonists to settle the Elrood System many thousands of years ago. (PG3)

Sharene

this was the first of Elrood's two moons. It was named for Sharene, the husband of one of Elrood's first colonists. (PG3)

Shargael

this Imperial Moff survived the aftermath of the Battle of Endor, managing to maintain control of I-sector in the process. (POT)

Shark

an Imperial assault transport operative during the Galactic Civil War. It was protecting station NL-1 during Thrawn's visit. (TIE)

Shark

this Mobquet combat airspeeder was an ugly, ungainly craft which handled like a crippled bantha. Much of the craft's handling problems came from the wart-like weapons turret that supported the double laser cannon that served as the ship's only weapon. The turret was taken from the P-34 prototype, and was quite powerful despite its effects on the craft's mobility. The Shark measured five meters in length, and required a pilot and gunner to operate. It could carry very little else, with only enough space to handle ten kilograms of cargo. The Shark had a flight ceiling of 300 meters, and could attain speeds of 1,000 kilometers an hour. (GSE)

Shark

this small fighter, designed by the Mon Calamari for use by Commander Merai's forces during the Clone Wars, was hidden within the hold of Merai's command ship. During the Battle of Kamino, the command ship was forced to crash-land in the oceans of Kamino. Merai himself took the Shark into battle beneath the waves, hoping to destroy the cloning facilities and eliminate the Old Republic's source of clone troopers. While the Shark could function equally well in water, atmosphere, or open space, it took a tremendous amount of power to change from one environment to another. This meant that it had to be launched into the right location for combat, and could not chase down a craft which could move between water and air. The Shark resembled a flat, lozenge-shaped craft, with a small tail fin at the rear, giving it the appearance of a flat-bodied shark. When Merai's forces could not defeat the Jedi defending Kamino, Commander Merai flew the Shark into the midst of the hyperspace rings used by the Jedi starfighters, and activated the self-destruct mechanism. The ship exploded, destroying many of the hyperspace rings and killing Merai, but the resulting confusion allowed Merai's forces to flee into hyperspace. (RDK)

Sharka'k

this Gree craftsman created the device which became known as the Sharka'k Noor. It was the premier device in his collection, but he died on Asation before passing on its use to an apprentice. (SWJ14)

Sharka'k Noor

this ancient Gree device was created by Sharka'k, who died before he could pass on its operation to an apprentice. The device was formed from three short cylinders connected by short arms. The outer cylinders were shorter than the central cylinder, and had fingertip-shaped depressions at their tops. The central cylinder was marked by glyphs, and had a display panel. It emitted a deep, bass tone as it was used. Sharka'k designed the Noor to manipulate geological activity of the world on which it was used. It could create new volcanoes, cause earthquakes, and affect changes to the planet's core. It was originally designed as a planetary engineering tool, and Sharka'k guarded its secrets so that it couldn't be used as a weapon. Unfortunately, Sharka'k died before passing on any knowledge of the Noor's operation, and the was stored in the Gree archives for many millennia. It ws later stolen by Doctor IIs Ee, who inadvertently set off a series of volcanic eruptions on Tujiamoor with it. Doctor Ee's whereabouts, and those of the Noor, remain a mystery. (SWJ14)

Sharky

a group of Alliance YT-1300s destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Sharky

this smuggler and his gang were one of the first groups to begin smuggling goods to the natives of the planet Ralltiir, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (SWJ3)

Sharlee

this white-haired young woman worked as the sensor and computer technician on Constancia's Outpost 8 defense facility, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Like most such workers, Sharlee spent a local year on the asteroid before being relieved for ground-side work, and much of the year was spent in solitude. To ensure her safety while working on Outpost 8, Sharlee wore a suit of augmented battle armor that gave her the appearance of an ornate battle droid. It was Sharlee who rescued Luke Skywalker and Gamine from their starship, when Imperial forces tried to destroy them. She later showed her skills with a blaster when she accompanied Han Solo on a mission to distract the Imperial forces over Constancia, while Luke and Gamine traveled to the surface. (LAT1)

Sharlissian Trade Corridor

this hyperspace trade route was open during the last decades of the Old Republic, and allowed Coreward planets to do business with planets such as Kabal. In the wake of the Battle of Naboo, the Sharlissian Trade Corridor remained one of the most heavily-taxed trade routes, making it cost-prohibitive for most shipping companies to make runs. This led to food riots on planets like Kabal. (HNN4)

Sharnaff

this was a species of specially-designed, bio-engineered creature that was found on the planet Corellia. (GQRG)

Sharockk

this intelligent, attractive woman served Santhe/Sienar Technologies as a receptionist at the corporation's Lianna headquarters. She is very good at sifting out the riff-raff from the real businessbeings, and is tough as a Wookiee when it comes to keeping them out. (ML)

Sharp

this was Alliance starfighter pilot slang for a TIE/fc fighter. (SWJ10)

Sharp Elbow

this was the name of an Imperial starfighter maneuver in which a ship banked hard to the right, banked again immediately to the left, then again to the right, in order to evade pursuit. (SWED)

Sharp Spiral

this was the name of the Cutlass-9 starfighter owned by Jedi Master Saesee Tiin. The ship was a gift from a grateful diplomat from the planet Duro, and had been heavily modified by Master Tiin over time. With its augmented drive systems, the Sharp Spiral had a Class 1 hyperdrive, and was capable of speeds near 8,000 kilometers per hour in atmosphere. (NEGC, PJSB, NEGV)

Sharpshooter V

BlasTech's modified blaster carbine, this weapon has been fitted with a multi-spectrum targeting sight. This addition, when coupled with the Sharpshooter's tightly-coherent energy bolt, makes the weapon deadly accurate over a long range. The combination of these two advances drains an incredible amount of power from the weapon, however. (ISB)

Sharptooth Collector

this specialized repulsor-equipped sled was developed on Naos III as a way for fishermen to transport their catch to the nearest city for processing. The Naos sharptooth was considered a delicacy in many parts of the galaxy, but it had to be harvested and flash-frozen as soon afterward to maintain the best taste and texture. The sharptooth fishermen couldn't wait until the harvesting was done to offload their catch, so they employed drivers to operate the collectors on regular runs. (LEV)

Sharu

many fabulous legends held that the Sharu were an ancient alien race which inhabited the Rafa System, but which mysteriously disappeared ages ago. They were a technologically-advanced race, as evidenced by the wonderful buildings and monuments they built throughout the system. They left a treasure trove of artifacts behind, many of them left to their descendents, the Toka. One of them was the Mindharp, which was rumored to be a way that the Toka could recall the Sharu from their hiding if the Toka were in dire straits. The Sharu were described as "superhumanoids" by scholars, and are believed to have lived in an incredibly long period of advanced evolution, possibly billions of years. When the first humans came to the Rafa System, they befriended the Sharu. When the Sharu were forced to disappear, some bond with the humans was broken. Those humans, the ancestors of the Toka, were unable to recover from this breaking of contact. All of this was disproved when Lando Calrissian and Mohs found the Mindharp on Rafa V. It was then revealed that the Sharu, fearing some threat to their civilization, decided to hide their knowledge and intellect until it was safe to re-emerge. They built huge structures which resembled living spaces but were really vast computer banks of stored knowledge. They devised a grand scheme in which their race could survive, but it required them to be rendered ignorant, and their knowledge stored in the computer banks. They developed the life-crystals as a device which would continually sap the intellect and knowledge from all subsequent generations, maintaining the disguise of the simple-minded Toka. A single member of each generation would be allowed access to the ancient knowledge. This High Singer would keep the hidden Sharu alive by teaching various chants and rituals to the Toka. The Singer's duty was to await the coming of the Bearer and the Emissary, or pass on his knowledge to the next generation. In order to unlock the captive Sharu intelligence, the ancients created the Mindharp, which they hid in the Great Pyramid on Rafa V, and the Key of the Overpeople, which they sent out of the Rafa System. When the threat to the Sharu had passed, the Bearer would arrive in the Rafa System with the Emissary, bearing the Key. He would then use the Key in the Great Lock, entering the pyramid and finding the Mindharp. He would then use the Mindharp to release the Sharu. The Toka Mohs was just about to pass on his duties as High Singer when Lando Calrissian entered the Rafa System. Lando and his droid, Vuffi Raa, were set up by Duttes Mer and Rokur Gepta as the Bearer and the Emissary, respectively. Together, Lando, Mohs, and Vuffi Raa retrieved the Mindharp, only to have it stolen by Duttes Mer, who believed it could control the minds of others. He activated it, thus beginning a system-wide reshaping of the land. Mer was absorbed by the Mindharp as it started activating the Sharu computer banks. The Rafa System continued to undergo massive geological and physical changes, in preparation for the return of the Sharu. (LCM)

Sharu Trammic

this was a sub-dialect of the Old High Trammic language, adapted for use by the Sharu that lived on Rafa V. (GMR5)

Shasa

this young Selkath female and her roommates were part of a group of several Selkath youths who were tricked into joining the Sith on the planet Metaan, during the height of the Great Sith War. It was Shaelas who feared that they had been captured by the Sith, and he asked the Jedi Knights to investigate. The Jedi discovered that Shasa and the other Selkath had been falsely lured to the Sith base as part of a plot to infiltrate the Selkath people. In the end, Shasa was freed and the Sith treachery was exposed. (KOTOR)

Shasa Ale

an ale favored by the natives of Ado Sector. (FOP)

Shasa Tiel

this female Ishi Tib was an accountant for SoroSuub until she was blackmailed into working for Jabba the Hutt. She served as an assistant to Mosep, but hated her job and secretly longed to escape from Jabba. (CCG7)

Shasan

this was the term used to describe an individual member of the Order of Shasa. (PH)

Shasfath Cluster

an area of the galaxy located near the Inner Rim and the Expansion Region. (SWJ5)

Shashay

this race of avians descended from birds on the planet Crytal Nest. They are humanoid in basic appearance, with colorful plumage and vestigial wings. Their wings are no longer used for flying, but will allow the Shashay to glide across a short distance. They are a graceful race, but are also given to quick tempers. The Shashay communicate with a wondrously-rich series of trills and riffs, and those Shashay which have left the planet are known as space singers. Because of their ability to manipulate the various musical arrangements required of their songs, the Shashay have developed large brains, and have the innate ability to calculate galactic navigational coordinates. This ability also garnered them the nickname space singers. (TA)

Shas'mink

this is a Laerdocian swear-word. (SOP)

Shassa

this is a curse used by the natives of Emberlene. (SOP)

Shasstariss Whisperers Corporation

this family-run business was contracted by the Empire to develop specialized, military encryption codes for Imperial computer systems. Among the codes developed by Shasstariss was the encryption codes that protected the control nodes for Imperial-class Star Destroyers. (GMR10)

Shata

native to the Uba System, this large beast was domesticated by the Ubese people, who used its hide to create a durable leather. (VD)

Shatoon Monastery

a religious retreat on the planet Onderon. (EE)

Shatoyo

an old Jedi Master who, at the Assembly on Deneba, spoke out on the way the Dark Side and the Sith teachings behave. (DLS)

Shatras

this was a race of bipedal reptilians native to the planet Trascor. These aliens were similar in size to tall humans, but were exceptionally strong. Their wide, flat heads were supported by a snake-like neck, and dominated by four bulbous eyes. This physiology allowed the Shatras to see in a 720-degree area. There were five distinct races of Shatras, including the Y'tras and the Hy'tras. (AE, AIR)

Shatter Gun

developed by the Verpine, this weapon was a delicate pistol which fired highly-accelerated particles of alloy. The shotgun effect was devastating, but the shatter gun was prone to breakdown or explosion if improperly handled or dropped. (GFT, RCHC)

Shatter Missile

this was a type of projectile weapon developed by the ancient Mandalorians. Upon impacting a target, a shatter missile fragmented into hundreds of smaller pieces, causing huge amounts of collateral damage. (SWI80)

Shattered Rock, The

this was the name given to one of the Alliance's asteroid bases, scouted by Mils Gessak and built with the help of Arago Tanca. (HAS)

Shatterpoint

this term was used to describe the locations at which even the hardest material could be struck, resulting in its breaking into pieces. Most commonly associated with Corusca gems, shatterpoints are notoriously difficult to locate, and the judgement of how much force to exert on a shatterpoint is an art only a few beings ever learn. Too little force applied to a shatterpoint results in a degradation of the crystalline matrix, which caused the gem to fall apart later. Too much force, and the entire gem shatters instantly. A precisely-gauged blow resulted in the shearing of the gem along a certain plane, resulting in a beautiful facet. (SHPT)

Shatuun

this planet is a largely uninhabited world found in the Kathol Outback between the Uukaablis and Nah'Malis Systems. Its surface is dominated by rugged mountain ranges which are continually strafed by intense electrical storms. This combination means that travellers between Uukaablis and Danoor rarely, if ever, stop here. This was quite all right with a pair of Duinuogwuin star dragons who decided to reproduce there. They created a home for themselves some 60 years before the Battle of Endor, but were quite reclusive in their ways. They would accept visitors they believe they can trust, since they didn't want the rest of the Outback to know they were there. (KO)

Shaum Hii

a oceanic planet located in the Tragan Cluster, Shaum Hii is the homeworld of the Kian'thar race. It is known for its loud, raucous derlac "cattle markets." (DFR, GG12)

Shaupat

this nocturnal Nabooan predator uses its claws to cut up its prey into small pieces, since its mouth is quite small. The blood of the shaupat contains an alkyl poison which is deadly to some other carnivores, helping the shaupat avoid being eaten. The bite of a shaupat is also quite painful, as their saliva has a mildly poisonous element in it as well. The Gungans have discovered that the shaupat blood can be distilled and used as a bleach-like stain remover. (GF)

Shaupaut

this was a species of carnivorous marsupial native to the canopy of the jungles found on the planet Naboo. Shaupauts hung from branches by their prehensile tails, waiting for small creatures to fly or wander by. The sharp claws and long fingers of the shaupaut made grasping and capturing easier. (WSW)

Sha'vah

this was the Noghri command for silence. (DFR)

Sha-viri

this was the name of a distinguished Vor individual. (UANT)

Shavit

this is a swear word used by the farmers of Pakrik Minor. (VOF)

Shavree

this young woman sold a working lightsaber to the proprietors of Exotic Items, located aboard the Ithorian herdship Bazaar. She claimed it was her own lightsaber, although she was unable to communicate with the Force. (GA)

Shawda Ubb

this alien race, native to the planet Manpha, resembles a pot-bellied amphibian. They have green skin that covers their bulbous body, which is supported by spindly arms and legs. Their small heads are dominated by heavy brow-ridges, and a thin row of knobs runs from their foreheads down their necks. When cornered or attacked, Shawda Ubb can spit a paralyzing poison at their enemies. (CCG9)

Shawgrim, Ral

a native of the planet Zalso, this Alliance technician was discovered to be a traitor selling information to the Empire. Born aboard the Panorama while his parents were on vacation, Ral joined the Alliance after his parents were killed by Imperial troops on Zalso, and proved to be a valiant warrior. He was hospitalized twice during the battle for Jendar. He was supposed to deliver plans of the X-Wing starfighter to Moff Brinkan, but failed to do so. Brinkan later put a bounty on his head, but Shawgrim was never captured by Imperial forces. He reappeared shortly afterward, wanted by the New Republic for the theft of the X-Wing plans. (SWJ4)

Shawken

this planet's dense catacombs were littered with traps, set by the ancient Shawkenese to deter graverobbing and pillaging. It was on Shawken that Luke Skywalker and Plif were invited to attend a meeting with the planet's leaders, shortly after the Battle of Endor, to discuss Shawken's position on the new galactic government. Up until this time, Shawken had been under Imperial control. Santor, the planetary leader, explained that the Imperials simply packed up and left when they learned of Emperor Palpatine's death, and Shawken simply forgot about them. A number of excavations were left open when the Imperial left, however, providing unusual scavenging opportunities. (MC87)

Shawken Spur

this was one of many ancient hyperspace pathways that connected Coruscant to the rest of the galaxy. This particular route connected Coruscant with the planet Shawken. (CCW)

Shawkenese

this was the name used by the human natives of the planet Shawken. They were known for their ability to harness energy into seemingly inert objects, creating batteries and power cells from everyday things. Ancient Shawkenese were known as philosophers and scientists, but they also followed a nihilistic view of the universe. Ancient Shawken scientists devised ways to bringing about the destruction of the universe and a new sort of "big bang" which would rebuild a better galaxy. To this end, they devised monstrous technologies that could destroy solar systems and galaxies by creating a self-sustaining chain reaction of collisions and explosions. Luckily for the rest of the galaxy, the secrets of using this technology died with the ancient Shawkens. The technology was almost activated by Rik Duel and his gang of thieves, while they were accompanying Luke Skywalker on a diplomatic mission. Only the heroic efforts of Kiro stopped the device and saved the galaxy. (MC87)

Shawnkyr Nuruodo

this female Chiss was a member of the Syndic Mitth'raw'nuruodo who served under Jagged Fel in the Chiss Navy. Two years younger than Jag, she accompanied him on a mission to scout those planets already captured by the Yuuzhan Vong from the Unknown Regions Coreward, shortly after the Battle of Coruscant, to find any shred of information on the Yuuzhan Vong. After meeting up with Jaina Solo on Hapes, Shawnkyr failed to see what Colonel Fel saw in the younger woman. Shawnkyr was openly disdainful of Jaina's skills and ability to lead, despite the impressive results she achieved against the Yuuzhan Vong. When Jagged joined the Twin Suns Squadron, Shawnkyr was given command of the Chiss Vanguard Squadron which was assigned to the New Republic remnant on Borleias. Just after the Second Battle of Coruscant, Shawnkyr bristled at the prospect of being re-missioned, believing that their mission was simply to evaluate the galactic situation and return to Csilla. Jag explained that any damage they could do to the Yuuzhan Vong while on Borleias would only help the Chiss, and would provide deeper intelligence on the alien invaders. Shawnkyr agreed to remain on Borleias and transmit any information they gathered via holotransmission to Csilla, provided that Jag agreed to return to Csilla immediately if she were to die in combat. Together, they worked with the New Republic military, after Jag realized that they would have to fight alongside the Republic in order to gather detailed intelligence to send back to Csilla. Shawnkyr bristled at the idea of fighting for the Republic, but understood the necessity of good data. After the Battle of Ebaq, however, Shawnkyr decided that there was enough information on the Yuuzhan Vong, and was given leave by Jag to return to Csilla. (DJ, EL1, EL2, FH1, GMR7)

Shawpee Gang

this gang of mild-mannered hoodlums patrolled the street of Mos Eisley during the last years of the New Order. (CCG9)

Shawti

one of the many Hutt colony worlds, Shawti was also a breeding world for many of their slave races. Clan Desilijic bred Klatooinan slaves on this world. (CCG9)

Shaxrigge, Rex

this heavily-marketed Core celebrity was under investigation for stealing corporate secrets. Authorities in the Corporate Sector trails him, believing that he would woo female executives and get them to reveal their corporate secrets. The last woman he tried to swindle was actually Dagmar Vozda, who was working undercover on Etti IV. However, Shaxrigge nearly got away from her and almost killed her, but for the timely intervention of Fiolla. She was on vacation from school at the time, and happened to recognize him. When he pulled a vibroknife on Vozda, Fiolla stepped in and thwarted his escape. Shaxrigge was arrested on the spot. (CSA)

Shay

a native of Targonn, Shay led a series of attacks on the dictator Craw. The Targonians he led were known as Revoltists, and tried to overthrow Craw's despotical reign. He failed to overthrow Craw, but did manage to rescue the droids R2-D2 and C-3PO from Craw's clutches. The droids were reunited with Master Zorneth, who eventually toppled Craw's empire. (DRO)

Shayl

this was one of the many names given to female Bothans. In the Bothan language, it meant "sweet" or "dear." (GCG, WOTC)

Shayl Le'tah

this female Bothan was a Jedi Knight who was known for her skills as an investigator. (GMR3)

Shaymore

home planet of the Sessehshallah, it was mined extensively for its fossil hydrocarbon-based fuels. The Alliance helped to free the planet from Imperial control. (RPG)

Shaynday

this Snivvian word represented the number 6. (HNN5)

Shayne Gerarre

this Cerean male, an employee of the Spirited Spirits shop in the city of Hedrett, was a native of the planet Cularin. Shayne was known to the general populace of Hedrett and Gadrin as the creator of the Double-Dip Outer Rim Rumdrop, the specialty drink that made Spirited Spirits famous. He was later discovered to have been one of the original members of the underground resistance that sprang up on Cularin, after the Metatheran Cartel began taking control of the planet's trade. (EOS)

Shaywa, Mapes

this man was a non-descript individual with a secret life. Working from a base on Mexeluine, Mapes could assume any number of roles, depending on the mission he was given. He was outwardly an agent of FiggEx Security, but in reality he was the police force's Chief officer. Mapes was also a key member of FiggEx Security's so-called "black ops" force, responsible for carrying out the dirty work that needed to be done in order to Figg Excavations to succeed. He often assumed the alias of Barseth Gynes, and it was in this role that he hired Nogo Sisteck to locate the noted pirates Salmakk and Clabburn. As soon as the pirates were hired, Mapes worked diligently to ensure that any ties between the pirates and FiggEx were eliminated, providing FiggEx with a way to legally break away from the Mining Guild. (WOA34)

Shazeen

a older Swimmer living in the Dellaltian lake near J'uoch's mining camp, he is Kasarax's uncle. Shazeen was the Top Bull on the lake when Kasarax decided to take control of the lake, and was bested in a race by Kasarax. This meant Shazeen had to submit to Kasarax's usurious practices. This ended when Han Solo bargained for transport across the lake. At first, Shazeen thought Hasti was Lanni, since she had dressed in the same clothes Lanni had worn a few months earlier. This spurred Han's group on, since it gave them another clue as to where Lanni might have been going just before she was killed. Kasarax demanding 40 dritt each, to transport the group across the lake, which enraged Shazeen. Shazeen offered to transport them for nothing, in an effort to get Kasarax angry. It worked, and a challenge race ensued. The race quickly degraded into physical combat, in which Shazeen overcame the younger Kasarax and forced him to submit. This ended Kasarax's control of the lake. (HSL)

Shea

this was a common name among Cerean females. Unlike their male counterparts, Cerean females use a single name unless they became a bond-wife. In this case, a female will take on their husband's grandfather's name for official matters. The name Shea indicated darkness, nighttime, or mystery. (GCG)

Shea

this Cerean woman was Ki-Adi-Mundi's bond wife. He was reluctant to have a child with her, for births with his other honor-wives had always produced girls. She was somewhat sensitive to the Force. Ki desperately wanted a son, and after he rescued Slyvn from Ephant Mon, they agreed to try and have a child of their own. (PTR)

Shear Mite

this insect, native to the planet Dathomir, was named for its razor-sharp mandibles. (GQRG)

Shear-Plane Mode

a way of operating a tractor beam, shear-plane mode involved using the beam in such a way that it moved an object perpendicular to the beam, rather than along it. (TTSB)

Shearran

this was a common name given members of Trianii society. (WOTC, UANT)

Sheathipede-class Shuttle

this was the official class designation of the Neimoidian Shuttle. These shuttles measured just fifteen meters in length, and were piloted by two droids. Each shuttle was armed with a single blaster cannon. (NEGV)

Shebba Kalshi Desilijic

a member of the Desilijic clan, this Hutt was the master of a vast plantation on Shawti. Shebba owned the Klatooinan named Umpass-stay until the Klatooinan insulted Shebba's nephew, Jabba. Jabba had Shebba assassinated and took ownership of Umpass-stay. (MTSE)

Shebs

this was a Mandalorian swear word that referred to certain private body parts. (RCHC)

Sheckil

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Sheckil

this man was a former warrant officer from the planet Concord Dawn, who joined the Empire as a security officer and quickly rose through the ranks. As a Lieutenant assigned to the Death Squadron, Sheckil was placed in charge of the transport of dangerous prisoners. It was rumored that he was Boba Fett's twin brother, although this was never substantiated. It was Lieutenant Sheckil who was ordered by Darth Vader to ensure that Leia Organa, Han Solo, Chewbacca, and C-3PO did not discover the Imperial presence on Cloud City until Lord Vader could capture them himself. Lieutenant Sheckil was portrayed by Jeremy Bulloch in Star Wars: Episode V - The Empire Strikes Back. (CCG5, T6, OWS)

Shedao Shai

this Yuuzhan Vong commander assumed control of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy after Nom Anor failed to secure the initial worlds of Vector Prime. Shedao himself tasted defeat on Bimmial and Dantooine, but regained control and decided to strike out against the Jedi Knights. Shedao was a descendant of the famed Mongei Shai, whose expedition was one of the first to venture into the galaxy some fifty years before the assault on Belkadan and Dubrillion. Shedao had hoped to recover the body of his ancestor, but Doctor Anki Pace and her team recovered the remains in order to better study the Yuuzhan Vong. After learning that the Jedi defeated and killed two members of his family on Bimmieel, Shedao Shai felt a need to know more about the New Republic and the Jedi. Thus, when Elegos A'Kla submitted himself as an emissary, Shedao Shai agreed to show him everything about the Yuuzhan Vong. He was questioned constantly by his second in command, Deign Lian, who was secretly working with the Yuuzhan Vong Warmaster to further the invasion's progress as quickly as possible. In the end, though, Shedao Shai was forced to strangle Elegos with his bare hands. He then had the Caamasii's skeleton gilded and sent back to Corran Horn, who had killed Shai's kin. Shedao Shai demanded retribution and the return of Mongei Shai's remains, despite the pleas of Deign Lian to abandon his "personal agenda." After the Battle of Garqi, Shedao Shai agreed to a duel with Corran on the surface of Ithor. The stakes were simple: the winner obtained possession of Ithor. Corran managed to defeat and kill Shedao Shai in the struggle, leaving Deign Lian in control of the Yuuzhan Vong forces. Despite the honor of Shedao Shai's death, Deign Lian went ahead with his own plans and wiped out all life on Ithor. (DTR)

Shedra Line

this section of the monorail commutubes that criss-cross Umgul City runs through the center of the city. (JASB)

Shee

this was a Korunnai expression of exasperation. (SHPT)

Shee, Cian

this almond-eyed woman was a frequent, though mysterious, patron of the Outlander Club during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. She was sometimes seen with Kalyn Farnmir, which lent a dangerous aspect to her already mysterious past. (OWS, SWI75)

Sheebareevadee

this lazy Squib owned a general store named Sheebareevadee's Emporium of Interstellar Goods in Jugsmuk Station, on Gamorr. He hated Gamorr, but was too lazy to pack up and find a new location. (SWJ14)

Sheebareevadee's Emporium of Interstellar Goods

this general store, located in Gamorr's Jugsmuk Station, was owned by the Squib named Sheebareevadee. (SWJ14)

Sheebla

according to a humorous story that appeared on the HoloNet during the years following the Battle of Naboo, Sheebla was a female Gungan warrior who was in love with George R. Binks. However, George turned down the love of Sheebla to marry another female, since Sheebla was unable to bear him a son. Unfortunately for George, his first and only son turned out to be Jar Jar Binks. (T20)

Sheer Silence

this was the brand name of Audio Performance Incorporated's disruption bubble generator. This device created a two-meter sphere which did not allow sound waves to penetrate it. Thus, beings inside the Sheer Silence bubble could converse without fear of being overheard. The Sheer Silence was originally marketed to beings who wanted to enjoy music or a conversation in a semi-public area, creating a personal "listening chamber." However, criminals and spies soon discovered that the Sheer Silence provided an added measure of security for clandestine communications. (ROE, AEG)

Sheeshoo

according to Ewok legend, this tree spirit often talked to Ewoks by shaking the leaves of the tallest trees. (GCG)

Sheeshoo

this was a common name for Ewok females. Like other Ewok names, it referred to a spirit or character in the Ewoks' mythology. (GCG)

Sheff, Wip

this man was one of the prison guards known as the Helmet Squad, working at the Oovo IV prison facility during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Sheff was part of a large internal smuggling operation that ensured the inmates had all manner of articles that were otherwise prohibited at many prison facilities. Compounding this fact, Sheff was skimming profits from the smuggling operations, fueling his own illicit desires. This was discovered by several prisoners who were eventually released from Oovo IV, and related to several prominent Hutt crimelords. This led to a bounty being placed on Sheff's head, which Jango Fett claimed during his "rescue" of Bendix Fust. (BH)

Sheffield, Quinn

this Baron of House Reena had represented Reena for seven consecutive years in the Vor-cal without making a single kill. Despite his record, Sheffield was not upset, since the Vor-cal provided him a chance to escape the stuffy politics of Tapani Sector and spent all of his time in the outdoors. His lack of success also distracted other nobles from the fact that Sheffield was also one of House Reena's key advisors. (LOE)

Shef'na

this was a fruit-bearing plant that provided growers with a sweet fruit that grew in two distinct halves. (RCHC)

Shelf Station 321

this Rendeel Industries deep-water processing plant was abandoned after the Quekka Trench Station was abandoned. (HAS)

Shelf Station 432

this Rendeel Industries deep-water processing plant was a sister station to the Quekka Trench Station. Station 432 was destroyed in the governmental civil war which wiped out the population of quekka fish in the area. (HAS)

Shelkar

this ancient Selkath served as a judge in Ahto City, on his homeworld of Manaan, during the decades leading up to the Great Sith War. Shelkar was one of the judges who presided over the trial of Sunry. He knew of Sunry's heroic past, but was unable to understand how his Hero's Cross medal came to be on Elassa's body. (KOTOR)

Shell

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Shell

this young woman was a computer slicer. She and her partner Deke once broke into a backup computer maintained by the New Republic Intelligence agency, shortly after the Starbuster Plot was exposed, and stole secret information. They were eventually caught when a tracer, planted on Deke, led Lieutenant Prace to their position. (CTD)

Shell Bat

a flying reptile from Doallyn's homeworld of Geran. (TJP)

Shell Hutt

one of the most unusual factions of Hutts, the Shell Hutts resemble their brethren in every physical aspect. They are huge, sluglike creatures with tough skin and internal organs protected by dense layers of blubber. However, the Shell Hutts chose to protect themselves from external radiation - which about the only thing that will naturally kill a Hutt - by enclosing themselves in riveted metal shells. They broke away from the rest of the Hutt clans, which had failed to genetically alter themselves to protect against radiation, several millennia before the Battle of Yavin, choosing to encase themselves and perpetual their lines. The shells must be continually shed as the Shell Hutt grows, and the donning of a new shell is often a cause for celebration. Everything but the Shell Hutt's face is contained within the shell. Even their hands are hidden inside, manipulating the controls which maintained the shell's repulsor engines and directional thrusters. The Shell Hutts took control of the planet Circumtore and used it as their base of operations. They were quite paranoid about security aroundf Circumtore, and often sent delegates to meet with potential clients or enemies in orbit. These delegates had their shells stuffed with explosives, which could be triggered from within in the event of an emergency. The resulting explosion would kill the Shell Hutt and the enemy force, eliminating any threat to the continued security of their planet. (MA)

Shell One

the inner section of Centerpoint Station, surrounding the open space of Hollowtown. The entire central sphere of the station was divided into shells. (SC)

Shell Spider

this arachnid was known for its incredibly tough and durable silk, which was used to form dense armor plating for personal protection. When woven into a mat, shell spider silk could deflect a vibroblade as well as low-power beams and lasers. (DMSH)

Shell, Kendrell

this man and his partner, Deeka, encountered a slork consuming a rotting corpse while scouting the planet Kidron. (COG)

Shella

this planet was the primary world in Tapani Sector's Shella System, and was part of the holdings of House Melantha during the New Order. (LOE)

Shella

this searing ball of rock was the innermost planet of the Essesia System. (CCW)

Shellar

this man owned a junkyard, located six miles east of Mos Eisley on Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. He was working on the side with the Twi'lek starship mechanic Jela'han, with both men overcharging their customers for referrals to the other's business. Shellar was also sympathetic to the Alliance, and often allowed rebels the opportunity to scavenge his junkyards for parts, provided that they paid their bills. Shellar was a tall, well-muscled man, distinguished by his bald pate as the monocle he wore over his right eye. (GMR2)

Shellava

this was a species of tree which produced a tight-skinned, crisp fruit. (RP)

Shellcrusher

this powerful weapon was developed by the Aqualish, during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (WOA34)

Shell-head

this derogatory term is used by the Rabaanites to describe the S'krrr race. (SWJ9)

Shelltooth

this modified Gymsnor-3 freighter was owned and operated by Kal'falnl C'ndros. Armed with a single heavy blaster cannon, the ship contained a special hold where Kal'Falnl protected her clutch of eggs, shortly before the Battle of Endor. (SSR)

Shelov

this Herglic was a tenth-generation resident of the planet Abregado-rae, and was also one of the most vocal proponents of the Tundei regime. In fact, Shelov was one of the founders of the regime, having formed the government with other off-worlders who had mad Abregado-rae their home. He eventually assumed a leadership position on the Tundei Tribunal, shortly after the Battle of Endor. (CCW)

Shelova Week

this traditional Herglic holiday celebrates commerce and family, two things which are interrelated to the Herglic race. A prominent holiday in the Tapani Sector, Shelova Week is a time to exchange gifts, make new business alliances, discuss trade arrangements, and spend time with family members. As the human population of the sector began interacting with the Herglics, they too began celebrating the holiday, although many humans simply take vacation instead of also developing business partnerships. On the Tapani local calendar, Shelova Week fell between the months of Helona and Melona. (LOE, PGT)

Shelryn

this was a common name among the S'kytri people. (UANT)

Shelta Sune

this female Devaronian was engaged to marry Lavek Talstin, until he got cold feet and fled Devaron. Shelta begged her mother, aunts, and sisters to find him, so they sent their husbands on a continual series of missions to recover Lavek. (CRO)

Shelter

this was the name of the base set up by Han Solo and Leia Organa Solo from the remnants of the Maw Installation, as the starting point for Luke Skywalker's Great River, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. In the wake of the Second Battle of Coruscant, Shelter became the primary destination of the Great River, after Eclipse base was compromised. Much of the station was cobbled together by Lando Calrissian and a team of advisors and patrons he most trusted. (EVR, EL1)

Shelter Base

this was the Old Republic's primary base of operations on the planet Jabim, during the height of the Clone Wars. The base was attacked when its forces were deployed in the field against three Separatist locations, leaving Shelter Base with minimal protection. Only Jedi Master Obi-Wan Kenobi, Orliiss Gillmunn, and a handful of clone troopers remained behind, and they were overrun by the Separatist attackers. Many Jedi died in the fighting, and it was initially feared that Master Kenobi was killed in the assault. (SWI69, RBJ)

Shelvay, Corwin

this young human was full of good intentions, but he was quick to anger. He was taken as an apprentice to the Jedi Knight Darrin Arkanian, who tried to teach Corwin of the Force. Corwin was a quick student, but felt that his powers should be used directly against the Empire. Arkanian tried to get Corwin to control his emotions at every turn. Together, they traversed the galaxy, staying one step ahead of the authorities while searching for surviving Jedi Knights. During one mission, Corwin was captured and brought to Coruscant. There, High Inquisitor Tremayne tortured him in an attempt to reveal Arkanian's whereabouts. Corwin resisted until Arkanian attempted to rescue him. In a battle with Tremayne, Arkanian was cut down, and Corwin became enraged. He leapt after Tremayne and lashed out, severing Tremayne's arm and damaging his face with a lightsaber. Corwin and Arkanian fled, but Arkanian died a few days later. Corwin realized that, in the battle with Tremayne, he had touched the Dark Side of the Force. In a vision some time later, Corwin saw himself as Tremayne's twin, and this shocked him back to the Light Side. Corwin then tried to return to his home, only to find that the Empire had killed his family ten years earlier. What he didn't know is that they had spared the life of his sister, Elena. Corwin, cut loose from all the ties that mattered to him, roamed the Outer Rim until he met Devon Fuller. Fuller's hatred for the Empire touched Corwin's anti-Imperial feelings, and drove Corwin to join the Alliance. Thus, he became an invaluable operative and recruiter in the Outer Rim. Corwin later led a mission - commanding Kyle Katarn, Shira Brie, and Erling Tredway - that was dispatched to disable the superlaser of the second Death Star, while it was en route at D'rinda IV. (GG9, WOTC)

Shelvay, Elena

the sister of Corwin Shelvay, Elena was not killed when the Empire murdered the Shelvay family. She was brought to High Inquisitor Tremayne, who sent her to COMPNOR for training. After spending time in the Imperial Security Bureau's Re-Education program, she came to believe that Corwin was the cause of the deaths of her parents. She was brainwashed into hating him, and has become emotionally unstable and disjointed because of it. However, she also became a competent ISB agent, and was assigned as an aide to Moff Balfour. (GG9)

Shem-Lern

this slug-like being was one of Lando Calrissian's enemies, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (LTA3, MC51)

Shemsher

a Ripoblus Nebulon-B Frigate captured by the Empire during the Sepan Civil War. (TIE)

Shemson, Motto

this man served the New Republic as the head communications technician for the 3rd Platoon stationed in Atrivis Sector during the struggle with Grand Admiral Thrawn. He was the first Republic officer to document the Cracken Twist, following the fiasco at Xyquine. (TTSB)

Shemza

this wizened old man was a noted scientist who hid on Cloud City to avoid being captured by the Empire, during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. Shortly after the Battle of Hoth, Doctor Shemza was captured on Cloud City by a group of thugs hired by Jabba the Hutt. The Alliance's agent on Cloud City, the astromech droid Shorty, helped a team of Alliance agents rescue Doctor Shemza. (WOA9)

Shen

this man a member of Leia Organa Solo's New Republic crew, dispatched to locate the Katana Fleet some five years after the Battle of Endor. Shen assisted in getting the Katana's weapons and navigation controls back online in an effort to combat the Judicator. He sustained serious injuries during the attempt to recover the Katana Fleet, but was transported to safety in time to treat them. (DFR)

Shen

a sister of the Singing Mountain clan on Dathomir. (CPL)

Shen

this is the seventh of the eight combination symbols used in the Aurebesh script, and represents the Basic combination "sh". (SWM)

Shen

this Herglic term was originally used to describe a Herglic's herd mother. After the Herglics began traveling in the galaxy, it took on the meaning of a starship in which the Herglic had ridden. In this new usage, it literally translated as "one who has nurtured him in space." (PGT)

Shen, Merri

this young woman, a native of Aduba-3, was saved by Han Solo when he was stranded on the planet shortly after the Battle of Yavin. Solo and his group of ragtag mercenaries was trying to put an end to the predations of Serji-X Arrogantus, and tried to fend off an attacking group of high-hounds. Her grandfather summoned the Behemoth, in an effort to bring down Serji-X Arrogantus, but was unable to control. Don-Wan Kihotay, Hedji, and Han Solo destroyed the creature, while Merri fell in love with Jimm the Starkiller Kid. They eventually got married and had a child named Hanna. (MC9, MC16, GMR4)

Shen, Oncho

this village leader was a native of Aduba-3, and one of many who struggled against the Cloud Riders during the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. He honored Han Solo for saving the life of his daughter, Merri, during an attack by a group of high-hounds. (MC9, GMR4)

Shen-and-Gretta Pikeual-Angeles of Lorrd

this was the full name of Pike Angeles. (CRO)

Shenbit Bonecrusher

this vicious, reptilian predator was native to Barab I, and was hunted by the Barabels for sport and meat. (EGP)

Shenbit Bonecrusher Blow

this was one of the many attack postures practiced by the warriors who trained in the teras kasi martial arts. If properly executed, this movement can be fatal to the target. (HNN5)

Shendar

this man was an Imperial Moff during the early years of the New Republic. (GG11)

Sheneel

this graceful being was a dancer/acrobat who works for Kersh Lauskner's Travelling Animal/Acrobatic Arcadium. She mesmerized her audiences with her turquoise-hued, iridescent skin and long, silver hair. (GCQ)

Shenir

this was a type of spice that was produced on the planet Mon Calamari. (GCG)

Shenir

referring to a version of spice produced on Mon Calamari, this was a common female name among the Mon Calamari race. (GCG)

Shenir Rix

this female Mon Calamari was a member of the board of directors for Fergriss Pharmaceuticals, until it was forced out of business. She left corporate life for the casinos of the Inner Rim, buying and selling information to the highest bidder. (GG11)

Shen-Jon, Echuu

this man made his home on the planet Krant, during the era of the New Order. Echuu Shen-Jon was believed to have been a Jedi Master during the last years of the Old Republic, and had been trained by Mace Windu himself. After losing his Padawan, Stam Reath, during the Battle of Geonosis, Shen-Jon took Reath's sister Naat to be his new apprentice. He led several important missions during the Clone Wars, including infiltrating the criminal organization of Boorka the Hutt and eliminating the crimelord to cut off his connections to the Separatists. All the while, Shen-Jon and his new apprentice slipped closer to the Dark Side of the Force, and Master Windu began to worry about their actions. When Naat was captured by Sev'rance Tann on Krant, Shen-Jon learned that Tan was the Dark Jedi who had killed Stam on Geonosis. Rather than bringing the Dark Jedi to justice, Shen-Jon executed her for her actions. Naat stopped him from doing any more damage, and asked her Master to return to Coruscant with her. He decided to remain on Krant to avoid punishment, and was later deemed a hero for saving Naat's life on Krant. Shen-Jon's isolation on Krant allowed him to escape the destruction of the Jedi Knights at the hands of Emperor Palpatine and Darth Vader, during the early years of the New Order.. During the early stages of the Galactic Civil War, Shen-Jon's existence was discovered by Leia Organa, who had been working to free the Krantians from Imperial domination. He was forced to destroy the Vor'Na'Tu in order to prevent it from falling into the hands of Darth Vader, an event which many believe had been foretold by the Force. (GB, SWDB, GBC)

Shensarile V

this could be a type for Shesharile V. (ML)

Shenvehr, Pertaal

this man was the Assistant Features Editor for Colonial News Net during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He sed his position on the news staff to pass information to members of the Alliance. He maintained columns like "Art Galaxy Roundup," "Ask Argothil Anything," and "Personalities in the News," fielding letters from readers and responding as appropriate. Many believed his columns were simply idle discussion and advice-giving, but Pertaal had developed a complex form of coded messaging that allowed him to get information to Alliance agents with relative ease from his office on Findris. (CRO)

Shenvehr, Vadid

this man served as a Lieutenant within the Byblos Traffic Central control organization, working as a hangar controller at Byblos Tower 214's hangar 217-11. He was an excellent officer, giving concise commands and adhering to the rules of the galactic government. He was impartial toward the parties of the Galactic Civil War, preferring to dedicate his life to his job. (PSPG)

Shep

this Herglic word translated to "friend." It literally meant "pod mate," to indicate any other Herglic who was a member of its pod but not related by blood. (PGT)

Shepherd Ship

this was another name for the Shepherd-class shuttle. (OE)

Shepherd-class Shuttle

this Ithorian starship was a smaller version of the hership, and was used like a tugboat to maneuver the larger ships during herd meets. (OE)

Shep-pakk

this Herglic phrase was used when referring to an individual's homeworld or home city. (PGT)

Sheris

this Outer Rim world was the sight of a repulsortank battle between the New Republic and Imperial forces. The battle occurred in Bhir'khi Pass, near the end of the reign of Grand Admiral Thrawn. (SWJ9)

Sherruk

this ancient Mandalorian was part of a larger group that was based on the planet Dantooine, some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. Sherruk was known for his ability to hunt down and kill any other being, including Jedi Knights, and several unique lightsabers were found among his remains after he was defeated in combat by another Jedi Knight. The Jedi had been asked by several villagers to put an end to the abuses caused by the Mandalorians, and many refused to back down. Sherruk was among them, and he fought to the death, rather than back down. (KOTOR)

Sheryc Seka

this female Yarkora was one of the best-known smugglers of the Greater Javin, during the height of the New Order. If a being needed a hard-to-find piece of hardware, Sheryc Seka was the being to talk with, especially if one needed an unusual - and untraceable - weapon. She spent much of her career working with the Mon Calamari pirate Salmakk, in a mutually beneficial relationship. Salmakk often provided her with large shipments of weaponry, and in exchange Sheryc "scrubbed" the weapons used by Salmakk's pirates so that they could not be traced to their source. This relationship continued for more than ten years, until Salmakk was eventually caught and arrested in connection with Figg Excavations' plans to break from the Mining Guild. After that, Sheryc kept to herself on Darlyn Boda for many years. When the Peace Brigade approached her about joining with the aYuuzhan Vong, Sheryc flatly refused. Unfortunately, the Peace Brigade then destroyed her operations as well as her credibility with the criminal elements of the Greater Javin. To exact a measure of revenge, Sheryc began running weapons for the New Republic. (WOA34)

Shesh, Viqi

this woman, a native of the planet Kuat, was that planet's Senatorial representative to the New Republic. She was considered handsome, with flowing black hair and a slender build. She was relatively new to the politics of the galaxy, having grown up in a family of wealthy industrialists. When Kuat of Kuat committed suicide by destroying a section of Kuat's orbiting drydocks, the Shesh family lost much of their enterprise and, therefore, much of their status. In order to rebuild the Shesh name, the family began making alliances with the fledgling New Republic, despite the continued Imperial control of the planet. Their persistence paid off when the Empire was forced out of Kuat, and the Shesh family was awarded huge contracts. Viqi herself decided to go into politics and a short educational career as a marketing executive, some six years before the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy. Senator Shesh was one of the few voices in the Senate who worked toward a solution to the Yuuzhan Vong attack which would best suit the needs of the Republic, and not individual worlds. She loved the feeling of power, and was attracted to beings who held power. It was even rumored that she was taken with Chief of State Borsk Fey'lya for a short time. She had been approached by none other than Nom Anor, who recruited her to the Yuuzhan Vong cause. Shesh spoke to the Senators and appealed for unity in devising a suitable response to the Yuuzhan Vong, rather than having individual worlds try to work against each other. She later entered into a deadly game of cat and mouse, pretending to be a traitor to the New Republic and dealing with both Borge the Hutt and Nas Choka to provide information on the Republic. She also used this tenuous position to spy on the enemy, and return information to the Republic on their actions. It was later revealed that it was Viki Shesh who had provided the Yuuzhan Vong with the news of Elan's seeming defection. During this time, Shesh was appointed to be the ninth member of the New Republic Defense Force's leadership committee, and cast the deciding vote for defending Bothawui instead of Corellia. She was subpoenaed by the Senate Justice Council in the aftermath of the Battle of Fondor, and was advised by her lawyers to provide only the facts as she knew them, in order to avoid further investigation. Later, she began meeting with liaison Pedric Cuf, whom she knew to be working for the Yuuzhan Vong. Shesh insinuated herself into position to head SELCORE, which allowed her to strand great numbers of refugees on defenseless worlds, where they could be taken by the Yuuzhan Vong for slave labor or sacrifices. She also began working toward her own form of peace, and promised the Yuuzhan Vong that her agents would completely dismantle with repulsors on Centerpoint Station to prove her truthfulness. Senator Shesh also managed to gain a position on the New Republic Military Oversight Committee, and she hoped parlay this position into an election as Chief of State, when she began plotting the assassination of Chief of State Fey'lya. However, this incredible workload eventually began to wear on her. When Leia Organa Solo began to understand Shesh's role in the invasion, and started exposing bits and pieces of the plans, Senator Shesh launched a secret, personal series of attacks on the Solo family. These led to her undoing, as she was caught on surveillance cameras acting against the New Republic. She was run out of politics, and barely managed to flee Coruscant with her life. She was captured by the Yuuzhan Vong and threatened with death, but she insinuated to Warmaster Tsavong Lah that the Shapers were working against him. She had just enough circumstantial evidence to remain alive, especially when a series of events lent unexpected credence to her claims. However, she was trailed everywhere she went by Denua Ku, and was later forced to accompany the warrior to Coruscant to track down any Jedi still on the planet. She managed to escape several times, and nearly fled the planet aboard the Ugly Truth, but was thwarted each time by her captor, Denua Ku. When the warrior was impaled, Shesh left him for dead and tried again to reach the Ugly Truth, only to find that it had been confiscated by the Jedi. She was confronted once again by Denua Ku, but rather than allow herself to be killed by the Yuuzhan Vong, Shesh threw herself out a window and fell to her death. Shesharile

this gas giant, the primary planet in the Shesharile System, was located in the Minos Cluster. It had a large number of moons. Two of them, Shesharile 5 and Shesharile 6, were large enough to be planets, and are capable of supporting life. They were known as the Twin Planets, despite the fact that they are moons. (SWJ6, GG6)

this fifth moon of the gas giant Shesharile is large enough to be a planet itself. Along with Shesharile 6, they are known as the "Twin Planets" despite the fact that they are moons. Shesharile 5 has been devastated by the corrupt government that runs them. This moon is known for its resorts, but they are dirty and care little about the environment they are destroying. Pollution has led to ecological disaster, and the inhabitants have regressed to become warring factions. Each blames the others for destroying the twins. Much of the commerce on the moon was centered around making the Imperials that controlled the Minos Cluster happy, so when the Empire pulled out Shesharile 5 went into a swift decline. Much of the planet is run by gangs under the control of Yerkys ne Dago. The average day on Shesharile 5 lasts 26 standard hours, and its year lasts 377 local days. (SWJ6, GG6)

this sixth moon of the gas giant Shesharile is large enough to be a planet itself. Along with Shesharile 5, they are known as the "Twin Planets," even though they are moons. Like its twin Shesharile 5, Shesharile

6 has been devastated by the corrupt government that runs them. Shesharile 6 is run by the Twi'lek crimelord Yerkys ne Dago, who also controls Shesharile 5 with a group of gangs. Pollution which has run rampant on Shesharile 5 has found its way to Shesharile 6, and the moon has been continually polluted over the years. The average day on Shesharile 6 lasts 26 standard hours, and its year lasts 377 local days. (SWJ6, GG6)

Shesharilian Vodka

Shev

this surname was common among the Sullustan race, and meant "fresh breeze" in the Sullustan language. (GCG)

Shev

this was the name of a noted Pho Ph'eahian individual. (UANT)

Shev, Xexus

this corrupt Imperial Colonel was in command of the Imperial garrison on Phaeda in the years after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. In his youth, Shev cared little for the Empire, until he was implicated in a crime. He chose attending the Imperial Academy over being sent to the spice mines of Kessel, and remained in Imperial service ever since. A tall, bald man with a neatly trimmed goatee, he was too busy accepting bribes from the local smugglers to notice that the New Republic had set up a cell on his planet. He was in a bar with his officers when Kir Kanos arrived on Phaeda. When Kanos eliminated his officers and a squadron of stormtroopers, Shev set out to capture Kanos himself, in the hope of gaining favor with Carnor Jax. Jax's commander, General Wessel, learned of the incident from one of Shev's Lieutenants, and ordered Shev's forces to stand down so that Jax could personally take care of Kanos. Shev realized that his garrison would never stand up to an inspection, and realized that his only hope for remaining alive was to have Kanos in custody when Jax arrived. To this end, he paid Tem Merkon a hefty sum for the location of Kanos and Mirith Sinn's hideout. He then ordered a full assault on the hideout, but his forces were overwhelmed by Kanos' counterattack. When Jax arrived on Phaeda, he executed Shev for his betrayal. (CE, HCE)

Sheva

this backwater planet, located in the remote Sheva System, was located in the Freeworlds Region of Tapani Sector. Its liberal government made the planet more receptive to smugglers and other small-time criminals. (LOE)

Shevo Banks

located on the planet Selonia, the Shevo Banks were noted for their smooth slopes, which had been worn away by centuries of pounding surf. The Shevo Banks were a popular vacation spot for the native Selonians, who used the smooth slopes as slides. (CCW)

Shevre'starn

this city was located on the eastern continent of the planet Bothawui. (SPG)

She-Who-Speaks

Shey Tapani University

this institute of higher education was named for Shey Tapani, and was located on Estalle Island on Procopia. It was first dedicated by the first emperor of Tapani Sector the same year that the sector capital was moved to Procopia, making the university several thousand years old. Over the years, the university grew too large to be completely housed on Estalle Island, and was expanded to sites on Destato Island. (LOE)

Sheyf

this was the name given to the leader of the planet Kiffu, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (DRKN)

Shiak

this was one of the most honorable of the Jedi Knights' "marks of combat." Shiak was stabbing of an opponent with the tip of the lightsaber blade, causing little physical damage while inflicting a fatal blow. Many Jedi Masters felt that shiak showed as much respect as possible for the Living Force as well as one's opponent, since it dispatched the opponent without destroying living tissue. (SWI62)

Shiarha Root

this plant, native to the humid rainforests of Kirtania, produced a thick bulb. This bulb, pink in color mottled with red, contained a thick fluid. This fluid was discovered by Doctor T'jaleq Kith'Araquia to counteract the deadly effects of the Direllian Plague. (SWJ1)

Shibatthi

this New Republic Senator held Han Solo to blame for firing the shots which started the riots on Bothawui, shortly after the revelation of the Caamas Document, even though there was no supporting evidence. (SOP)

Shibric

Rijj Winward claimed to be travelling from Tramanos to Shibric when he was captured by Captain Niriz while on the Hopskip. (TFE)

Shield

this Defender-class assault carrier was part of the New Republic's Fifth Battle Group, and participated in the initial blockade of the planet Doornik-319 during the Yevethan Purge. (SOL)

Shield Bicapsular Directrix

abbreviated SBD, this was a measure of a starship shielding system's rate of recharge. (XW)

Shield Generator

a power source used to create and maintain a deflector shield. They are often ground-based implements which use a focusing dish to project the shield around a ship, a building, or parts of a planet. (ROTJ)

Shield Hover

a maneuver which tests the shield integrity of a starship, the shield hover involves maintaining a starship's weight off the ground with nothing but its shields. The ship is first lifted by its repulsors, then the shields are activated. The landing gear is retracted, and the repulsors are then slowly cut off. If the shields hold, the ship then hovers above the ground. Good pilots are ready, in case the shields fail, to engage the repulsors and catch the ship before it crashes back to the ground. In some cases, either the forward or aft shield will go, while the other remains intact. This can cause the ship to bounce and flip over onto its topside, causing greater collateral damage. (AC)

Shield Projector

a shipboard component which generates and projects a defensive shield around a starship. They can be small (such as the Chempat projectors used on X- and Y-Wings) or large (such as the Serridge SEAL system). They create deflector shields which roughly follow the contour of the ship. (SW, SCRE)

Shield, The

this group of freelance "security specialists" was also a collection of Alliance operatives, active during the Galactic Civil War. They started out protecting corporate couriers during intra-system travel, then expanded to act as executive bodyguards. Eventually, The Shield got into espionage and security work. Much of their work was done to protect supporters and members of the Alliance, provided that their reasonable prices were paid. (CRO)

Shieldship

a huge, umbrella-shaped craft used to shield spacecraft from the heat of Nkllon's sun. It was one of the first creations of the Republic Engineering Corporation. The design specifications were originally formed by Lando Calrissian. It is basically a curved, 800-meter dish on top, with a 400-meter long cylinder extending from the bottom. The underside of the dish is packed with various cooling systems, while the cylinder contains the main drive. The shieldships proved to be hard to pilot, because of their unique configuration and the rigors of keeping the large ships in place to protect smaller craft. Also, due to the harsh conditions in which they operation, shieldships require constant maintenance of their shields and cooling systems. Lando originally purchased twelve shieldships, allowing him to make three trips from the shieldship depot on Qat Chrystac to Nkllon per day. This allowed plenty of downtime for the repairs necessary to keep the ships running well. After the destruction of Nomad City by Grand Admiral Thrawn, no other shieldships have been built. (HTTE, EGV)

Shieldship 9

this was the designation of the shieldship assigned to escort the Millennium Falcon and Luke's X-wing to Nomad City, during the New Republic's attempt to enlist the aid of Lando Calrissian in the fight against Grand Admiral Thrawn. (HTTE)

Shieljar

this was a pseudonym used by a smuggler who had a great deal of experience with droids. Shieljar was based on Duroon. (SWJ13)

Shien

this was the ancient term used to describe the Form V lightsaber fighting style. Note that the Wizards of the Coast website indicates that the Shien style of fighting was unique, with a Jedi holding their lightsaber horizontally. The tip of the blade was pointed at the opponent, and was swung in a quick arc as the Jedi punched their sword-hand at their opponent. (SWI68, WOTC)

Shigormallan, Mishowan

a native of the planet Yelsain, Shigormallan joined the crew of a cargo hauler as a teenager. When the planetary government began taxing shipments in order to support the Empire, his commanders opted not to pay them. He found himself constantly under the scrutiny of Imperial Customs agents and the Imperial Security Bureau. He met a group of Alliance field agents during one of his detention periods, and decided to join the Alliance. He completed training in the Special Forces division, and was given a place in the Pathfinders regiment. He was hoped to get a position with the Wilderness Fighters, but attacked his new position with zeal despite the setback. He was quickly promoted from Trooper to Lieutenant, and accepted a position in Task Force Shen. He replaced a popular officer who was killed in action, and his brash, abrasive style didn't immediately mesh with the rest of the team. However, his skills proved he was more than worthy of the job, and he excelled in leading the Pathfinder platoon under the command of Major Mart Stevez. (ROE)

Shi'idese

this was the name of the ancient language of the Shi'ido. Incorporating a wide range of vocalizations, the Shi'idese language was believed to have no written form. (UANT)

Shi'ido

this Aqualish served as an aide to Po Nudo, during the height of the Clone Wars. (VD3)

Shi'ido

native to the planet Lao-mon, the Shi'dio - or Sh'shuun, in their native language - were a rare race of shapeshifting aliens. The Shi'ido had the uncanny ability to fog the minds of those around them, allowing them time to alter their appearance and make those around them seeing their new form as the true form. These two traits allowed the Shi'ido to co-exist with nearly any other race as if they were members of it. They could appear to be almost any species, and cloud the minds of those around them to reduce suspicions. Unlike other polymorphic species, the Shi'ido's natural endoskeleton limited their ability to shape-shift to humanoid forms only. Because of their unusual abilities, the Shi'ido were thought of as disreputable spies and assassins, roles for which they were sought after by the Empire and large, criminal organizations. In general, however, they were a non-aggressive species which could live to be 500 years old or more. (ISU, GOF4, SWJ12, AE)

Shiim

this was one of the "marks of combat" defined by the Jedi Knights for lightsaber combat. Shiim was the use of the edge of a lightsaber blade to inflict a wound on the opponent's body. Many Jedi Masters considered shiim to be an inferior form of mark, since it suggested a Jedi's indecision in battle and the superiority of one's opponent. (SWI62)

Shiin

this mysterious being owned Shiin's Library in Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. She only met her patrons after they passed the test of her droid gatekeeper, and different visitors reported her race as Cerean, Mon Calamari, and even Twi'lek. The truly erudite visitors to the library cared little for her appearance, although many wondered whether Shiin was a shape-shifter or simply several different beings all claiming to be Shiin. (GMR7)

Shiin's Library

this library was located in the city of Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine, during the era of the New Order. The library was privately maintained, although the benefactor(s) of the library were just as mysterious as its owner, Shiin. Inside the walls of Shiin's Library was an impressive collection of records and information Shiin had amassed over the years, and the library was only opened to those beings who were truly scholars in search of data. Access to the library was maintained by a droid gatewatcher that grumpily asked each visitor a series of questions to verify their educational background and reasons for access. Once past the gatewatcher, visitors were greeted by Shiin herself, or at least a being who claimed to be Shiin. She collected a small fee from each visitor, then led them to a computer access terminal from which they could gather information. Hidden within the databanks of Shiin's Library were the B'omarr Registry and the Quilan Pyradex, just to name a few of the obscure and unusual documents Shiin had collected. Other information was regularly culled from corporate and governmental networks, and Shiin sometimes offered her services as slicer to her clientele. (GMR7)

Shik

this was a vulgar term, used to indicate another being who you despised. (TAE)

Shikitari

this immense race of barely-sentient, insectoid beings was native to the planet Shikitari. Like most insects, the Shikitari had a multi-staged lifecycle. Shikitari larvae mature inside eggs which were protected by a poisonous gel. As pupae, Shikitari emerge from their eggs and fuse to one another, forming a single being from many smaller individuals. Individual Shikitari grow specialized body parts to become eyes, mouths, feelers, and the entire organism evolved to mimic its guardian or parent. Thus, Shikitari that were raised by humanoids were humanoid in appearance. When the various pupae of a Shikitari individual matured, which took only two standard days, they exuded a chitinous material that formed an immense chrysalis. During this time, individual Shikitari pupae metamorphosed into flutterscouts, which cracked open the chrysalis and flew away. (SWDB)

Shikitari

this lush, jungle-covered planet was located in the Unknown Regions, and was the homeworld of the Shikitari race. (SWDB)

Shil Tervo

this being served as the Project Engineer during the development of the Lantillian GX1 Short Hauler. (HNN4)

Shild

this surname was common among human settlements found throughout in the galaxy. (GCG)

Shild, Sarn

this former Moff controlled the Hutt space around Nal Hutta during the early years of the New Order. A tall, sallow man with ascetic looks, Shild wore no jewelry except for a black krayt dragon pearl in one earlobe, mirroring his jet-black hair and black uniform. He received several unsolicited "political contributions" and other gifts from the Hutts, and he, in turn, left the Hutts alone to do business as they pleased. He honored this agreement until a group of rebels, smuggled onto the planet Rampa II, destroyed an Imperial outpost there. Shild then issued orders to cut off any and all smuggling in his sector, and bring the Hutts to their knees. Jabba and Jiliac sent Han Solo to bribe the Moff, but he refused to be swayed. He ordered Admiral Greelanx to attack Nar Shaddaa and wipe out the smugglers' moon, but the assault failed for several reasons. Shild retired to his estate on Teth, only to learn that his beautiful aide - cunningly played by Bria Tharen - had left him. Rather than face the wrath of the Emperor, Shild committed suicide. (THG, RD)

Shili

this planet was the homeworld of the Togruta race. (VD2)

Shi'lin

this slaver and his crew were known to have treated their slaves quite well, including using stun batons rather than blasters to keep slaves in line. (GUN)

Shilley's

this dark, seedy cantina, owned by the Morganian Tan Shilley, is located in the heart of Gralleenya city, on Qwestal. It was the favored locale for illegal meetings and transactions, although it was considered neutral ground between law and order. The owner paid good, hard credits to both sides to keep it that way. (GCQ)

Shiltu

this bloated Hutt crimelord was a vigo for the Black Sun organization during the decades leading up to the Battle of Naboo. It was Shiltu who managed to acquire the entire organization of Tarnese Lyanne, although many questioned the ethics of his actions. Tarnese Bleyd had hoped to exact a measure of revenge on Shiltu, to assuage the humiliation the Clan Tarnese had to endure. Unfortunately for Bleyd, Shiltu died some eight years before the Battle of Geonosis from a massive cellular hemorrhage. (MBS)

Shim-bay Crispa

this meal was a specialty of the chefs of the planet Brentaal. (SWJ13)

Shimer Londalin

this Ruurian won the decaped-plus race in the "Mobquet Presents: Fastest Land Beings" racing series, just prior to the onset of the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Shimia

this planet, located in the Outer Rim Territories, was the homeworld of the Pacithhip race. It was a remote world, but was located close enough to a major trade route to attract business. (AE)

Shimiese

this was the native language of the Pacithhip race, a language of snorts, trumpets, and intricate vocalizations. The written form of Shimiese used a collection of pictograms to convey words and figures of speech. (UANT)

Shimmer

this frozen world was the site of an Alliance labor camp. (SWJ1)

Shimmerlizard

native to the planet G'rho, these reptiles were named for the way their shiny scales caught and reflected light. (TBSB)

Shimmersilk

a stylish fabric originally used for women's clothing, shimmersilk was used to create wonderful cloaks and robes for nobility across the galaxy. (HSE, WOTC)

Shimor

this was a common name among the Ryn. (UANT)

Shimper Ale

this was the cover name of a small rebel cell working on the planet Obulette, in Tapani Sector, at the height of the Galactic Civil War. Most of its members were enthusiastic amateur warrioers from House Mecetti, but they were extremely careful in their activities. (LOE)

Shimrra

a member of Domain Jamaane, this Yuuzhan Vong was the Supreme Overlord during the initial invasion of the known galaxy. It was Lord Shimrra's vision that led the Yuuzhan Vong to leave their own galaxy and seek out the New Republic. He believed that he was given a vision from the gods, of an unclean galaxy which needed to be cleansed. Yuuzhan Vong priests agreed that his vision was true, and approved the generation-spanning mission to cross the galaxies. Shimrra was an enormous individual, and spent a great deal of his time secreted in a vast chamber aboard an unspecific worldship, surrounded by all the trappings of the Yuuzhan Vong elite. An immense hau polyp dais supported his weight, and rare paaloc incense burned in his chamber. Shimrra was distinguished among the Yuuzhan Vong by the fact that he was born with a twin sibling, a rare event that was supposedly pre-ordained by the gods whenever a strong leader was needed. As lore required, Overlord Shimrra killed his twin brother, thereby allowing him to grow powerful and worshipped as the favorite of the gods. Shimrra developed his base of power by killing Quoreal, the former Overlord, claiming that the gods had chosen him as the new Overlord. Shimrra did much to cover his tracks, and he continually claimed that his power came from the gods. In reality, he developed much of his power through subtle manipulation of the Yuuzhan Vong religion and the cortexes of knowledge they maintained. As the battle to control the galaxy raged on, Shimrra began to panic as early victories gave way to a grudging stalemate, then turned to defeats. He continued to manipulate religion to secure his position, but many of his subordinates began to question his authority, primarily Nen Yim and the Shapers. When it was discovered that Shimrra had killed Ekh'm Val to cover up the existence of the plaent Zonama Sekot, Shimrra's position began to crumble. His fear of the planet, which seemed to tie the Yuuzhan Vong to the galaxy, became more and more public knowledge, despite his efforts to cover it up. After many months of watching his forces lose ground to the flesgling Galactic Alliance, Shimrra had tired of the growing opposition to his rule, as well as to the unusual problems that kept the dhuryam on Coruscant from functioning properly. Using his people's desire to please their gods as a base, Shimrra told the Yuuzhan Vong that their lack of faith in his leadership was actually a lack of faith in their gods, who had appointed Shimrra in the first place. He then went on to say that the problems on Coruscant and the mounting defeats in battle were caused by the gods' desire to show the Yuuzhan Vong that they had failed to maintain the proper levels of devotion. The situation, he explained, was based in the generations-long migration from their original galaxy, during which time a lack of wars and combat made the Yuuzhan Vong forget about their gods and focus on their own glorification. As if to prove himself, Shimrra created the Slayers, a mingling of warrior and priest to develop a Yuuzhan Vong version of the Jedi Knights. He surrounded himself with Slayer guards, and retreated into The Citadel. Secretly, Shimrra believed that the gods had abandoned the Yuuzhan Vong because they were angry at being cast aside, and jealous that Shimrra had gained so much power over them. He seemed to have his beliefs confirmed when Zonama Sekot arrived in orbit near Coruscant, as he raged to Nom Anor that it was the gods who brought the living planet from the brink of disaster to harass the Yuuzhan Vong. It was an act of war, he claimed, against the beings who had decided they no longer needed the gods. By destroying Zonama Sekot, Shimrra believed he could destroy the gods themselves, thereby gaining absolute power over the Yuuzhan Vong. To accomplish this goal, Shimrra held the dying ship that had returned from Caluula in orbit around Coruscant, then dispatched it to land on Zonama Sekot. Shimrra reasoned that the Alpha Red virus would affect Zonama Sekot much the same way it had affected the Yuuzhan Vong. Ensnared in the Moonbeam Throne, Shimrra commanded the World Brain that controlled Coruscant to begin destroying the planet's surface. Couched in commands that made it seem as if such destruction was necessary to save the planet, Shimrra's words were directed toward a less-noble goal, for Shimrra simply wanted to destroy the planet and make it unusable to either side of the war. This plan was thwarted when Jacen Solo arrived on Coruscant with his sister Jaina and their uncle, Luke Skywalker. The trio infiltrated the Citadel after Jacen gained control of the World Brain's mind, but Shimrra dispatched fifteen of his best Slayers to attack them. The three Jedi held their, in part because the World Brain was tossing the Citadel around like a ball. Shimrra remained in his throne until it appeared Luke as exhausted from the battle. Descending the throne and unfurling the Scepter of Power, Shimrra easily overpowered Luke and wrapped him in the amphistaff's coils. Shimrra then drew a lightsaber from his cloak, laughing as he revealed that the weapon had once belonged to Anakin Solo. As Shimrra prepared to kill Luke with the weapon, Luke allowed the Scepter of Power to stab him in the side, momentarily distracting the Supreme Overlord. With this small chance, Luke gained possession of his own lightsaber, as well as Anakin's. In one swift motion, Luke drove both weapons into Shimrra's neck, then drew them apart to decapitate the Supreme Overlord. It was only after Shimrra's death that the forces of the Galactic Alliance came to realize that Shimrra was not actually in control of the Yuuzhan Vong throughout the invasion. Shimrra, it seemed, had been merely the puppet of his familiar, the Shamed One known as Onimi. It was Onimi who had managed to re-establish a connection with the Force, giving him powers that the other Yuuzhan Vong could never have. His position as a Shamed One had given Onimi the opportunity to take control of Shimrra's mind, using the Supreme Overlord to do his bidding. With the death of Onimi at the hands of Jacen Solo, the true Overlord was indeed killed. (HT, EVC, EVR, SBS, FP, UF)

Shimsha

a pleasant-smelling flower found on Kuan. (TIE)

Shind

this man served as one of the traffic control controllers at the Soco-Jarael Spaceport, on Socorro, during the years surrounding the Battle of Endor. (GMR2)

Shinda

this man was the Imperial Moff in command of Spirva Sector, during the height of the New Order. (SWJ12)

Shinda Center

located on Procopia's Estalle Island, this was the largest shopping mall found in the Expanse of Tapani

Sector at the height of the New Order. It measured almost two full kilometers in length, and had seven levels at its largest point. (LOE)

Shindra Lady

this was the name of Jinjur Tomas' starship, an MRX-BR Pacifier she purchased shortly after the Battle of Hoth. She loved the ship, even though it was completely stock, considering it "her baby." (LOE)

Shindra System

this Tapani Sector star system was part of the holdings of House Melantha during the New Order. (LOE)

Shindra's Veil

this area of nebular gas was located in Tapani Sector. (TSIA)

Shine Astara

this upscale restaurant was located in the city of Daplona, on Ciutric. The word "Shine" was pronounced "sheen," with an Imperial accent. (IR)

Shiner

this R2 astromech unit served as Myn Donos' co-pilot as a member of Wraith Squadron. (WS)

Shinev, Thuv

this man served as a New Republic Senator, representing the Tion Hegemony during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. After the fall of Coruscant, Senator Shinev began arguing in support of the Jedi Knights, calling out those Senators who had called for their surrender after the Jedi were instrumental in defeating the Yuuzhan Vong at the Battle of Ebaq. (HT, FH1)

Shinkai Abyss

an underwater chasm measuring 5,000 kilometers in length, the Shinkai Abyss was found in the oceans of Spira, cutting across much of the eastern hemisphere of the planet. Its walls are encrusted with crystals. (SWJ1)

Shinnan

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Shinnan

this woman was a native of the planet Ennth. She was among the first to greet Zekk, when the youth returned to his homeworld in the midst of its worst devastation. She was married to the leader Rastur, and they all worked relentlessly to evacuate Another Hopetown and its environs during the earthquakes and fires. She had been a friend of Zekk's when he was a child, although she was four years older than he was. When the last of the evacuees was aboard a transport, she took a break and returned to her home to retrieve the plans she and Rastur had for rebuilding their home. She was caught in a sudden earthquake, and was killed when the old homestead collapsed on top of her. (SHA)

Shintel

this planet was located in Kathol Sector, between Tanquilla Beach and Ivatch. It was largely uninhabited, although the Empire established a supply and patrol base on the planet during the last years of the New Order. (DARK)

Shiny Switch Rule

this was a common rule of thumb used by starship pilots, when they were faced with having to fly another starship, especially one that has been modified. These modifications usually altered the standard start-up sequences, and most pilots came to discover that simply pushing the shiniest switch - which was usually the one that was installed last - often got the ship started. (JT) this was the only name given to the huge, organic starship which captured Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa, sometime after the Battle of Yavin. In their own galaxy, there were many of these ships, operated by humanoids who eventually exterminated themselves in a series of vicious wars. After a plague bomb was used to wipe them all out, a single survivor fled in his starship and ended up in the Star Wars galaxy. Its surviving pilot ordered the organic computer to capture them, and played games with them until it realized that there was still love and caring in the universe. It agreed to free them, but was first intercepted by an Imperial Star Destroyer. Ship unleashed a flurry of anti-matter bombs on the Imperials, and then set Luke and Leia free. Ship and its pilot set out to locate another galaxy which didn't remind them of their past. (LTA2)

Ship

this was the name given by Luke Skywalker to the unusual, mechano-organic starship he and Leia Organa encountered, shortly prior to the Battle of Hoth. They had been trying to escape an Imperial warship while running supplies to a remote Alliance base, and tried to flee into hyperspace with a damaged drive system. When they reverted to realspace, they found themselves in the starless gulf between galaxies. It was here that Ship first appeared to them. Resembling an immense, green blob of matter, Ship was the only surviving member of an ancient race that had been destroyed in a conflict eons before the Galactic Civil War. Over the millennia, the mind of the survivor had melded with the computer and the ship itself, creating the entity Luke described as simply "Ship." It then spent its time traveling between the galaxies, hoping to flee the reality of its own galaxy and the loss of its companions. Ship initially felt that Luke and Leia were invaders, and tried to eject them into the vacuum of space. However, their compassion and love for each other made Ship close itself up and try to return them to their own galaxy. They were attacked by the Imperial warship which had pursued Luke and Leia, and Ship had to release anti-matter pods to destroy the Imperials and save itself. Ship then released Luke and Leia to continue their mission, while fleeing back into the void to escape the reality of the Galactic Civil War. (MC38)

Ship Shop G-S7

this starship repair facility was located on Genesia's G-S7 orbital station, and was owned and operated by Plu Makor during the early stages of the Galactic Civil War. (FBS)

Shipbuilders and Astrmoechs Guild formed during the early years of the New Republic, this guild designed many of the starships and navigational system used by the Imperial Remnant. (HCE)

ShipFinder

this was the name of Drooim-Durtha Systems' subspace tracking device. Its developed was contracted out to Neb Ufentes, and was unique in that it was so small. The smaller size meant that it had a shorter operational lifespan before it needed recharging, but Ufentes helped prolong its life by designing it to send out bursts of particles at preset intervals rather than continuously. The interval can be programmed in, but a faster interval decreases its operational span. Ufentes had developed a prototype that would last up to eight days, but it was stolen by the crimelord Mahk'khar. In the heist, Mahk'khar killed Ufentes. (SWJ8)

Ship's Operating License

this Imperial document was one of a number of documents required from any spacer who plied the spacelanes during the New Order. The procedures for obtaining the certification were documented in the Spacer's Information Manual. Known as an SOL, this document identified the starship and its owner as being cleared to operate in interstellar space. (SWJ9)

Shipwomb

this was the Yuuzhan Vong name for the "breeding ground" they used to create their living warships. Because of the size of their warships, individual shipwombs were often created from the destroyed hulks of planets. (DTR)

Shipwomb

this incredibly huge ship was grown by the Yuuzhan Vong to serve as the "birthplace" of a new generation of ships. Larger than the Death Star, the shipwomb was formed from the same yorik coral as other Yuuzhan Vong ships, and was surrounded by a collection of thick protuberances that flared out from the central hull like the arms of a spiral galaxy. Because all Yuuzhan Vong ships were living creatures, they eventually grew old and died. For this reason, the shipwomb was a vitally important part of any long-distance war fleet, such as the one that invaded the known galaxy. The Yuuzhan Vong destroyed the planet Sernpidal in order to "feed" the shipwomb and the "offspring" ships that it would produce, then set up an operation in which several young shipwombs were grown in the remnants of the planet. The first worldship to begin dying was the Baanu Miir, and the Yuuzhan Vong realized that a living shipwomb would allow them to continue their fight against the New Republic. However, Kyp Durrón learned of the growing shipwomb, hidden within the remnants of the planet Sernpidal, and convinced Jaina Solo and Rogue Squadron to attack it. He claimed it was a superweapon in order to gain their support, and the combined forces of the Rogues, Kyp's Dozen, and the Ralroos managed to destroy the shipwomb. (EVR)

Shipwrights Union

this union was formed during the early years of the New Republic, to ensure that starshipwrights of all skill levels received adequate compensation for their work. Their primary motivation for forming the Union and enforcing its codes was the emergence of droid labor in the construction and repair of starships, especially at the Kuat Drive Yards. (CCW)

Shipyard Lab 6671-X42

this droid starship research facility was jointly funded by the Corellian Engineering Corporation and Loronar Corporation. It was known as the Nerfworks by the employees of the facility, who explained that they were too smelly to be visited by corporate executives. The Lab produced a dozen or so droid-controlled ships, including the YQ-400 Monitor and the Ycaqt Cargo Ship, but only a few of these designs were actually manufactured. (GMR10)

Shiran Vallendri

this was a noted member of Chagrian history. (UANT)

Shiraya

this was the ancient Naboo goddess of the moon. (VD3)

Shire, Josen

this man and his daughter, Tanith, were imprisoned by the Serpent Masters of Ophideraan when their starship crashed into the desert world, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (SWDB)

Shire, Tanith

this young woman worked as a supply tug operator at the Fondor shipyards for many years during the height of the New Order, until she and her father, Josen, were enslaved by the Serpnet Masters of Ophideraan. They had been forced to crash-land their own ship on Ophideraan several years before the Battle of Yavin. They were captured and put to work in the Great Well as slaves of the Serpent Masters, who eventually learned of her former career. Tanith was allowed to leave Ophideraan for brief periods, provided that she returned with a loaded supply ship from Fondor. She would then crash the ships onto Ophideraan for salvaging, before returning to Fondor with stories of system malfunctions. She was rescued from Fondor by Luke Skywalker when he stole the plans to the Super-class Star Destroyer Executor. They fled the shipyards together, and returned to Ophideraan, the only homeworld she knew. Both were quickly placed in the slave levels of the Great Well. After a time, they defeated the Serpent Masters and freed her people. She fell in love with Luke, but decided not to leave her people when he returned to Yavin 4. (CSW, SWDB)

Shiri

this was a common name given to Twi'lek females, and meant "singer" in the Twi'leki language. (GCG)

Shiri'ani

this Twi'leki female worked as Lady Valarian's chief lieutenant during the early years of the New Republic. Valarian trusted her with every aspect of her operations, and groomed Shiri'ani to take over for her when she died. A cunning woman with a shrewd sense of business - both criminal and legitimate - Shiri'ani was a former slave who had been transported to Tatooine by Bib Fortuna. Upon her arrival, she learned that Jabba the Hutt had been killed and Bib Fortuna was missing, so she fled into the streets of Mos Eisley.

She was later discovered by Valarian, who believed she might know the location of Jabba's treasure hoards. Valarian later put her to work as a dancer at the Lucky Despot, but quickly discovered Shiri'ani's business skills. Valarian began to groom her as a successor by giving her the opportunity to develop the operations of the Lucky Star hotel and casino. All the while, however, she held a deep need for revenge against Bib Fortuna. Despite her loyalty to Lady Valarian, much of Shiri'ani's focus was on locating her fellow Twi'lek and facing him. When Firith Olan appeared at the Lucky Star, Shiri'ani was immediately drawn to him. She agreed to help him in his operations, hoping that he could locate Fortuna for her. Shiri'ani was completely unaware that it was Fortuna's brain that was functioning in Olan's body. When Firith Olan showed her the brain walker in which he had placed Fortuna's brain, Shiri'ani was only too glad to help torment it, unaware that she was being duped. (SOT)

Shirka

this man was a Minister with the Ralltiiri Secretariat at the time when the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy. It was Shirka who refused to allow Leia Organa-Solo and refugees from Gyndine land on Ralltiir, shortly after Gyndine fell to the Yuuzhan Vong. (JE)

Shirley

this Dilonexan woman was a second cousin to Bernie, the customs inspector. (LCF)

Shirley

this woman was a famous entertainer, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. She was hired to perform at the delegation held on Kabray station, shortly before the Battle of Endor. During this time, she went by the monicker, The Chanteuse of the Stars. (MC77)

Shirmar Base

this was a staging area and processing center built by the Ugnuaghts on Drudonna. It allowed them to easy access to Velsers Ring. (GG2)

Shiro

this was a species of slow-moving, turtle-like reptiles native to the planet Naboo. The flesh of the shiro was used by the Gungans in a tasty stew. The hard shell of the shiro was deeply ridged and spined, and seeds and spores from swamp plants sometimes became lodged within the ridges. In this way, tooke trap plants often grew from the backs of the shiro, becoming the symbiotic entity known as the shiro-trap. (GF, WSW)

Shiro-Trap

this symbiotic pair of creatures, native to the planet Naboo, is really a tooke-trap plant which has grown onto the top part of the shiro. The relationship allows the shiro to be camouflaged by the tooke trap plant, so predators won't notice it; the tooke trap plant, on the other hand, is protected from being uprooted and eaten by clodhoppers and other Naboo herbivores. (GF)

Shirro

this burly man was the leader of the swoop gang known as the Blood Razors. He always carried a length of metal pipe, and had a special sheath for it mounted on his swoop. He had a tough exterior, but his motivations were always to keep the gang armed and provide for the dishomed of Biivren. (PSG)

Shirshir Desert

this temperate desert was located on the planet Nishr. (ROE)

Shish

one of the communications officers that worked for Booster Terrik aboard the Errant Venture. (SOP)

Shisha Oil

this viscous fluid was used in desert climates, where temperatures plummeted during the evening. The shisha oil was heated during the day by the burning suns of the planet, and then pumped through pipes which were built into the walls of a desert dwelling. The heat from the shisha oil was transferred to the building material in the wall, heating it up and radiating heat into the dwelling. (IWE1)

Shisha Oil-pipe

this device was created to allow beings to literally "smoke" shisha oil as a sedative. (NEGC)

Shissan, Antyard-Wo

this Jedi Knight was killed on Atzerri, during a mission to free Nathanjo Nirrelz from a band of Roshu Sune terrorists. (HNN5)

Shistavanen

a race of wolf-like bipeds whose eyes glow red, the Shistavanen were native to the Uvena system, and are veiled in mystery throughout the galaxy. They are hunters by nature, and are known for their abilities as bounty hunters and scouts. However, they were also isolationist as a species, and tended to discourage interaction with other species. The Empire enlisted the aid of the Shistavanen many times, in an effort to explore the farthest reaches of the galaxy. (SW, SCRE, AE)

Shistavanen

this was the name given to the native language of the Shistavanen, consisting of barks and growls. (ANT, UANT)

Shiu-Shiu Race Systems

this corporation manufactured racing-quality wheeled propulsion systems for use in automated devices like droids and load shifters. (DWK)

Shiva IV

Princess Leia battled an Imperial warlord on this planet, sometime after the Battle of Hoth. (MC53)

Shiwal Sector

during the Galactic Civil War, Alliance operations in this area of the galaxy were believed to have been infiltrated by the Gand Findsman Lu'daal-ud. (AIR)

Shlecho Newt

this creature was native to the Yuuzhan Vong's home galaxy. They preferred to eat coomb spores, a fact that allowed the Yuuzhan Vong to use them to detect the presence of the spores in a victim. They have a brownish-green coloration in their normal state, but turn bright crimson when they detect the presence of coomb spores. (VP)

Shlith-Dan

this Arconan criminal is distinguishable by his dark grey skin, which has several deep brown stripes. He is also addicted to salt, as denoted by his golden eyes. His addiction spans most of his life, and his later years have been spent as a dealer in salt, further deepening his dependence. His small criminal empire grew after he migrated into the Minos Cluster, where his black market network is bested only by that of Yerkys ne Dago. He hoped to locate a method of inducing a similar form of addiction in humans, and succeeded during the Galactic Civil War. He discovered a fungus which, when given to the people of Shesharile 5 and 6, created an intense addiction that nearly tore the worlds apart. (GG6)

Shmus

this was the designation of a Nebulon-B2 frigate that was part of the Alliance's fleet. (TIE)

Sh'ner-class Planetary Assault Carrier

this pointed, oblong Ssi-ruuvi battleship measured 750 meters in length, rivaling the Shree-class cruisers in sheer size. The Sh'ner-class assault ship was essential to any Ssi-ruuvi attack plan, although it was known that only one Sh'ner-class was sent as part of the force which invaded the planet Bakura. The Sh'ner-class was slow and underpowered for the work it was assigned, and thus was protected by Fw'sen-class picket ships and Wurrif-class light cruisers. They have been equipped with weak shields and minimal weaponry - six ion cannons and two tractor beam projectors - which further increases the need for support craft. The primary mission profile of the Sh'ner-class carrier was to drop off D'kee-class landing ships to battle sites. Each Sh'ner-class ship was equipped with six launch bays to handle the twelve D'kee-class ships it carries. The Sh'ner-class was also sparsely crewed for its size. Only 60 Ssiruuk form the command crew and man the entechment labs. 500 P'w'eck are used for assistance and manual labor, so the ship was riddled with stun traps. There were also 30 Ssi-ruuk gunners to man the weapons stations. The Sh'ner-class carrier could also transport up to 5,000 metric tons of cargo. (EGV, TBSB)

Shnick, Tecknel

this underworld leader controls much of the shipping that leaves Travnin. (GG6)

Shoals, The

this was the name of one of the first settlements established outside the borders of Bartyn's Landing, on the planet Lamaredd. The Shoals was originally leased by Hugo Bartyn to a group of Quarren workers who wanted to live on their own, yet still remain employed by Bartyn's seafood harvesting operations. Bartyn realized that he could make more money by expanding his base of operations, and later funded several other frontier locations like The Shoals. (GMR7)

Shoame, Trann

this man was the leader of the Qektoth Confederation in the years following the Battle of Endor. Shoame advocated and supported the development of biochemical weapons to use against the weaker races of the galaxy, and tested one of them on the crew of the FarStar. Shoame also negotiated for the rights to sell the biochemical weapon with an unknown agent, trading the weapon for ships from which to unleash the weapon. (KO)

Shoaneb Culu

a blind, humanoid of the Miraluka race, Shoaneb discovered that her race's innate abilities with the Force were quite strong within herself. Against her parents' wishes, she decided to leave her homeworld of Alpherides and seek out training with the Jedi Knights. The journey was hard, as the Force changed on every world she encountered, forcing her to relearn all the skills she had mastered on Alpherides. After a year or so, Shoaneb landed on Ossus, and was apprenticed to the Jedi Master Vodo-Siosk Baas. Baas felt that her insatiable desire to learn more about the Force and the Jedi was really a desire for power, but soon realized that she was extremely curious. However, despite her sensitivity to the Force, Shoaneb struggled to master the basic techniques of controlling it and using it. Lightsaber construction came particularly hard for her, as well as combat. While this might have driven off other students, Shoaneb continued to train, and eventually attained the rank of Jedi Knight. During her studies, which lasted much longer than most of her peers, Shoaneb learned a great deal about the Jedi Prophecies. She attended the Jedi Assembly on Deneba to discuss the Krath. She was killed in the Cron System, when Aleema tried to defeat the Jedi Knights by ripping the core from a Cron star. (FNU, DLS, TOJC)

Sho'ban Do

this near-human, a settler of the planet Pitann, was the runner-up in the presidential election that elevated Chandra Hobat to power in the Kathol Republic. Do believed that Hobat's political stance would ruin the Kathol Republic. He felt that the Republic should remain isolated from the Empire and the New Republic, and maintain its self-sufficiency. At the time Moff Sarne sent Rolf Treidum into the Kathol Outback, disguised as a New Republic fleet, to make trouble, Sho'ban Do's political position was strengthened. Do was a short, barrel-chested person with a wide face, and hoped to name himself the leader of the Kathol Tyranny. He was also the main proponent in the sport of gladiator droid wars, hoping to develop a droid army that he could use against his enemies. (KO)

Shobquix Yards

this starship manufacturer built the Gauntlet and Toscan 8-Q starfighters. (CSA, PP)

Shock Cloth

manufactured by Fabreth Medical Biochemicals, this type of cloth was used to control the effects of trauma. When connected to a medical scanner and wrapped around an injured being, the shock cloth provided warmth and could administer fast-acting medicines through dermal contact, reducing the effects of traumatic shock. The dermal contact was maintained by hundreds of tiny injectors woven into the cloth. (GFT, GMR10)

Shock Cord

this flexible, elastic cord was used by climbers as a safety line. If a being fell from a height, and the shock cord was anchored, it would stretch and give before returning to its original length. This allowed the user to survive an otherwise dangerous fall. (HT)

Shock Grenade

any explosive device which uses shock waves, instead of shrapnel, to cause damage. They are similar to pressure bombs. (HSE)

Shock Hauler 33

this small fighter was produced by Incom Industries. It measured 14.5 meters in length, and was armed with four laser cannons. (GMR6)

Shock Lance

this was a form of electropole that was developed during the height of the New Order. The ends were tipped with small power generators that delivered a powerful charge when they struck a target. (SWGAL)

Shock Raiders

this was an elite squadron of Black Sun starfighter pilots. (SSE)

Shock Squadron

this New Republic X-Wing squadron was decimated during the defense of Coruscant against the Yuuzhan Vong. After the alien invaders captured the capital world, the survivors of Shock Squadron were reassigned to the Twin Suns Squadron, under the command of Luke Skywalker. (EL1)

Shockapede

this was a vicious insect known for its stinging bite. (SBS)

Shock-back

one of the offensive positions played during a game of shockball. (SSR)

Shockball

an athletic competition in which two teams try to pass a charged orb into their opponent's goal. They use insulated mitts to pass the orb. (HSL)

Shockball 3

a game of strategy and skill found in many up-scale casinos. (WSV)

Shockboxing

this sport pitted two combatants against each other in a ring. Both fighters wore specialized boxing gloves. The gloves delivered a random electrical charge when they hit an opponent, with the strength ranging from a light sting to a near-fatal jolt. (HR)

Shocker

this highly-maneuverable combat droid, resembled a winged sphere, was developed by the Confederacy of Independent Systems during the early stages of the Clone Wars. The two pairs of wings allowed it to move in tight circles and avoid laser fire, while a dedicated power generator allowed it to fire a burst of intense, electrical energy at its target. In this way, it could incapacitate a living being or overload an electrical system. The primary development facility for shocker droids was hidden on the planet Dagobah, until it was destroyed by Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker, about a year after the Battle of Geonosis. (SWI77)

Shocker Squadron

this was the dedicated starfighter squadron assigned to protect the Jedi Knights' base on Eclipse, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Later, as the war ground on, Shocker Squadron was recalled to help with the general war effort. (SBS, UF)

Shockprod

this was the name of the traditional Gand staff. Measuring more than three meters in length, the shockprod had one end that was shaped into a forked V. Each of the tines at the end of the shockprod could deliver an intense electrical shock, which often stunned or rendered an opponent unconscious. (UANT)

Shockwave

this spherical concussion missile was produced just before the Clone Wars. It was noted for the way in which the concussion field expanded in a sphere, allowing a ship gunner to fire it the midst of several attackers and have the effects of the blast hit multiple targets. (GMR9)

Shockwave

Harrsk's flagship Imperial-class Star Destroyer, the Shockwave was built at his own hidden shipyards in the Core Systems. The Star Destroyer was ravaged by Teradoc's fleet while Harrsk was discussing unification with Admiral Daala, and exploded while Kratas was on board. (DS)

Shockwave Generator

this was a form of sonic weapon developed by the ancient Mandalorian Crusaders. It used an intense wave of sonic energy create the shockwave, which tore apart a target upon impact. (SWI80)

Shockwhip

this vicious weapon is formed from a thin strand of flexsteel connected to an insulated handgrip. Within the grip is a small power generator, which produces a stunning electric charge through the flexsteel whip whe activated. (SWJ9)

Shodon Ko

this representative of the ancient Navigator's Guild sold the rights to the Goluud Corridor to Ssk Kahorr. Following the loss of the Zeta Five near Primus Goluud, Shodon Ko was murdered - and later eaten - by Ssk Kahorr for his part in the loss. (GAS) meaning "gracious", this was one of the most common names among Rodian females. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Shodu

Shodu

meaning "vengeful", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Shodu

this female Ewok was the mate of DeeJ, and mother to Weechee, Widdle, Wicket, and Winda. Among the Ewoks of Bright Tree Village, Shodu was known for her ability to create special poitons from the various plants and herbs that could be found in the forest. Shodu was portrayed by Pam Grizz in both The Caravan of Courage and The Battle for Endor. (EA, BFE, SWDB)

Shoen, Levi

this Alderaanian woman was the star of the popular holovid series which centered on the character of Queen Jesrella, until she was assassinated by Melo Centris. (WOTC)

Shoengen

this port city was located on the planet Brosi, at the northwestern tip of Shoengen Coast. The city was formed in the delta of the Nihun River. (AIR)

Shoengen Coast

this coastal area was located on the planet Brosi, within the Bay of Sypon. (AIR)

Shoengen Delta

located on the northwestern edge of the Shoengen Coast, this delta formed the mouth of the Nihun River. (AIR)

Shoengen Shores

this was the name of the western coastline of the city of Shoengen, on the planet Brosi. (AIR)

Shofeld

this Alliance intelligence agent was assigned by Lieutenant Commander Zhir-Khan to observe Zayl Braith's movements on Ord Mantell, shortly before the Battle of Hoth. (AIR)

Shogun

this planet was known for its unusual dreamscapes. (SW180)

Shok Choka

this Yuuzhan Vong warrior was part of the group which invaded the Yag'Dhul system and took control of the massive space station maintained by the Givin. When Anakin Solo challenged Nom Anor to a duel, the Executor turned it down in order to complete his own mission. This action angered the warriors, for a Yuuzhan Vong warrior would be shamed if they turned such a challenge down. Shok Choka took up the challenge, and engaged Anakin in combat. During the battle, Anakin was able to get Shok Choka off-balance, and cleaved his head off with his lightsaber. (EVR)

Shol'Arma

this man discovered that the Mon Calamari Leviathan armor could be used by other humanoids, provided that they understood that they had to move about like a Mon Calamari. (GUN)

Shollo

this bounty hunter liked to use the S-3 force cage to transport his prisoners, but once gave a captive a datapad with some fiction to read. The resourceful captive used its circuitry to bypass the force cage's shocking system, allowing him to escape. (GUN)

Shome Trahan

this was the name of a noted Woostoid individual. (UANT)

Shomu, Mont

this was one of the aliases adopted by the spy Kaird, during the time he spent on the planet Drongar, during the height of the Clone Wars. Shomu was a corpulent human, and the costume was effective because it completely masked Kaird's true form. It was Shomu who provided Ord Vorra with a copy of the latest broadcast of Galactic Sports Update, which chronicled the Strag Sector Match Championship. Kaird counted on the fact that Vorra would bring her boyfriend, Biggs Bogan, to view the recording, which would allow Kaird to disable Bogan and obtain control of Admiral Erel Kersos' shuttle. (MJH)

Shont, Kena

an employee of BioTech, Kena Shont was also an Alliance supporter. Shont downloaded data copied by Doctor Saren Llalik and transmitted it to a nearby Alliance base. (CRO)

Shook

this feline predator was native to the planet Carratos. It lived in the trees, and often ambushed its prey from above. These creatures were characterized by the heavy tusk at each corner of their mouth, and their long, pointed ears. (EGP)

Shoolbloop

this is the Ergesh name for the ceremonial swamplands in which the Ergesh mating ritual takes place. The seeds of two Ergesh are planted here during reproduction. Literally translated, the word shoolbloop meant "land of beginnings." (PG2, AE)

Shool's Club

one of the Clubs owned by Ace Lorle on Demophon, it was used by Alliance agents as a meeting place. (SN)

Shoon-mi Esh

this was one of the small group of Shamed Ones who lived beneath the surface of Coruscant, after the planet had been transformed into a likeness of Yuuzhan'tar. Shoon-mi was a creche'-brother to Niiriit Esh, and was one of the few Shamed Ones who lived independently, away from groups like that led by Vuurok I'pan. Like the other Shamed ones, though, Shoon-mi believed that the Jedi Knights were not abominations, but saviors of the Shamed Ones and symbols of the new ideology which should be embraced by the Yuuzhan Vong. For this reason, their band remained small, in case they were captured by the Yuuzhan Vong warriors. This ensured that their small cult of Jedi followers would never be fully discovered. Shoon-mi was also devoted to protecting his sister Niiriit, who wasn't so independent that she refused his help. Unfortunately for the small group, they were discovered, and a group of Yuuzhan Vong warriors destroyed most of them. Shoon-mi, along with Nom Anor and Kunra, managed to survive the raids. Shoon-mi agreed to work with Nom Anor to ensure their further survival, as the former Executor adopted the name Yu'shaa and began to spread The Message to the Shamed Ones of Coruscant. However, unknown to Nom Anor, Shoon-Mi had begun to doubt the Prophet's dedication to The Message, and came to feel that Nom Anor was offering the Shamed Ones one form of servitude for another. In a bold attempt, Shoon-Mi and several other Shamed Ones loyal to him tried to assassinate Nom Anor. He hoped to kill the former Executor and, using an oogloth masquer, pretend to be the Prophet until such time as he could reveal himself. As Shoon-Mi tried to stab Nom Anor with a coufee, Kunra discovered the plot and stabbed Shoon-Mi in the back, severing his spinal column. Nom Anor, having survived the attack, then suffocated the remaining life from Shoon-Mi's body. (FH1, FH3)

Shoosha, Bann

this man, a native of the planet Brentaal, was a noted composer during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. His Vissencant Variations were written about his family's escape from Brentaal during the early stages of the Clone Wars. (MJH)

Shoot First

this was the signature song played by the band Proton Overload. (WSV)

Shoot-back Blaster

this type of starship weapon was developed in the wake of the Galactic Civil War. When the ship it is attached to is shot at, the blaster pops up from its concealed port and fires back at the attacker, aiming in the general direction the initial shot came from. (CTD)

Shootcrawler

this Charon bio-construct was a modified version of the basic Charon body structure. They had the spider-like body of a Charon warrior, but also had a blaster built into their exoskeletal armor. (OS)

Shooter

the nickname of one of Leia Organa-Solo's bodyguards, Shooter followed her wherever she went. He was heavily armed and armored, and his role was to come between anyone wanting to harm the President. (BTS)

Shootfirst

this was the nickname used by Eelo Begraas to describe his astromech droid, R6-A1. (WOTC)

Shooting Gallery

an outlawed version of the Kessel Run obstacle used in swoopchasing races, the Shooting Gallery employed real laser cannons to fire randomly along the straightaway. (BSS)

Shooting Star

this was Adi Gallia's callsign, used whenever she was dispatched on a mission by the Jedi Council. (SWI81)

Shooting Star

this Alliance Corona-class frigate collided with the Endor after a mistimed hyperspace jump. The jump was part of a fleet exercise, and all hands on both ships were lost. It became an object lesson for all New Republic fleets, highlighting the need for perfect execution of fleet maneuvers. (SOL)

Shooting Star

this was another name for Koensayr's VGK-3 heavy assault starfighter. (SWJ6)

Shooting Star

this was an Alliance-owned Nebulon-B frigate, active during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (JKG3)

Shopani System

this Tapani Sector star system was part of the holdings of House Cadriaan during the New Order. (LOE)

Shopper's Round

this location of shops and open-air bazaars surrounded Circle Park, in Tasariq City. (SWJ15)

Shoppingland

this major retail outlet is located in the center of Lola Curich starport, and has everything a tourist to the planet Lianna could need. (ML)

Shor

this Shyriiwook word was used as the prefix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "fierce" or "lethal", and could be combined with one or more suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Shoran

this male Wookiee is one of Chewbacca's many relatives. It was Shoran who received a transmission from Leia Organa-Solo describing the capture of Han Solo by the Yevetha. Shoran and Freyrr tracked Chewie down, during Lumpawarumps Test of Ascension, to recall the Wookiee to his duty. Shoran, along with Dryanta, Jowdrri, and Lumpawarump, went with Chewbacca to rescue Solo. When the Wookiees attacked the Pride of Yevetha, Shoran and Chewbacca went in first. During the initial firefight, Shoran was gravely injured by a blaster bolt. Shoran was brought back to the Millennium Falcon by Chewbacca, but was unable to recover despite the ministrations of the New Republic. He died after being treated on the Intrepid. (RD, TT)

Shorda'ki

this was the Tarasinese word used to describe one of the most solemn and powerful of all the Tarasin rites. By invoking the shorda'ki, the Tarasin expended a great deal of strength - both physical and mental - to ensure the very survival of their species. History only recorded two invocations of the shorda'ki, once during the wars that nearly destroyed the ancient Tarasin, and another during the height of the Clone Wars. This latter invocation was performed in preparation for the tarana-te'sath, which the Tarasin believed was about to occur after discussions with a strange Human Jedi Knight. This Jedi agreed to help train the younger generation of Tarasin to connect with the Force, but this required that the elders begin to relinquish their power in order to concentrate the Force among the young. (LFCW)

Shore Patrol

this branch of the Gungan Grand Army was charged with ensuring that no invaders entered the water and discovered the location of the Gungan cities. (E1A10)

Shorg, Kirla

this man was a soldier in the Old Republic military, and was part of the task force dispatched by Colonel Jir Tramsig to recover the head of the protocol droid L80-RC. (WOA4)

Shoribus

this was the capital city of the planet Kabal. (HNN4)

Short

this was the name used by Gaph and R'vanna to describe the shorter of the two humans who approached them to forge a series of transport vouchers for refugees on Ruan. Working with his partner, known only as Tall, Short transported his charges aboard the freighter Treveen. (JE)

Shortgrass

this pink-bladed grass was native to the planet Drongar, and was the only true form of grass that grew on the planet. (MBS)

Shorthoppers

this was the name of the squadron of Howlrunners and Vigilance Interceptors which supported the Jolly Man during its hunt for a Yuuzhan Vong yammosk. (SBS)

Shorts

this was another name for the Utai race, referring to both their short stature and their short lifespans. (E3N)

Short-term Memory Enhancement

a technique used by the Jedi Knights to capture and replay recent events at a later time. (SWSB)

Shorty

this astromech droid was located on Cloud City during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Shorty was secretly an Alliance agent, and was on Cloud City to help refugees reach Alliance safeworlds. (WOA9)

Shosk'irid

this mercenary favored personal body armor that was developed for unique, alien physiologies. (GUN)

Shotaleve, Byll

this man was a resort owner who saw business drop off sharply during the Separatist crisis which shook the Old Republic, just before the Clone Wars. His properties were scattered across the beaches of the planet Amfar, and he saw the beaches reclaimed by redfish after the lack of tourists meant the beaches were empty. (HNN5)

Shotarr Kass

this Tunroth warrior was orphaned by the Reslian Purge. He chose to train as a hunter in order to maintain as much of his species' culture and history as possible. Well educated in Wookiee culture as well as that of the Tunroth, Shotarr eventually was employed by the Nalroni crimelord Sprax as a personal bodyguard. He earned the nickname "The Strap" because Shotarr preferred to wear leather jerkins. Shotarr was not part of Sprax's own security force, and was often left out of many operations he felt should have been his work. This troubled him, but his loyalty to Sprax never wavered, even when Black Sun chose Ket Maliss to wipe out the Disac pirates and not himself. (SSR)

Shotel

this was one of the many Strike-class cruisers that made up the front lines of the Imperial Naval fleet. (TIE)

Shoten Lounge

this bar and recreation area was located on the luxury liner Stellar Mermaid. It was considered something of a spacers' bar, despite its setting on the luxurious ship. (POC)

Shotgun

a Nharwaak CR90 corvette destroyed by the Empire when it raided the Nharwaak base. (TIE)

Shoti, Harissa

this woman was one of the most popular holo-drama stars during the last years of the Old Republic. She was under contract to Kailio Entertainment during the years leading up to the Clone Wars, and was rumored to have been the actress chosen to portray Jonava Billane in a holo-drama based on the life of Ludi Billane. (HNN4)

Shoto Eyefire

this Shistavenan Wolfman took control of Horn Station and used it to fund his own criminal activities during the last decades of the Old Republic. Shoto was also an infamous blastfighter. He met his match, though, when an anonymous Jedi Knight posed as a scared rock miner with a quick draw. Shoto ordered his goons to bring the miner in, then challenged him to a duel. Shoto stacked the odds in his favor, wearing a suit of blast armor and arming his best thugs to guard against any treachery. However, the Jedi's reflexes were too good, and his aim was too precise. Shoto was shot in both knees and his gun hand before he could even get a single shot off, and the Jedi quickly neutralized the armed thugs before escaping. Shoto was forced to flee Horn Station in order to receive medical attention, and the planet was restored to freedom. (T2)

Shott

this man, an Admiral, was a noted criminal who was active during the years following the Battle of Naboo. He was implicated in the distribution of illegal holograms with Gabo the Wicked, but never arrested. (BH)

Shouldersculp

an ornamental form of art worn at the shoulder of a female's dress. (DFR)

Show, The

starfighter pilots' slang for a space battle. (HSE)

Showalter

a Captain serving the New Republic Intelligence agency, he greets Luke Skywalker and Lando Calrissian when they return from their discovery of Thrackan Sal-Solo's interdiction field. He is a young man, with pale skin and a heavy-set, muscular body. Is this the same man as Showolter, who appears during the New Jedi Order? (AS)

Showcase Formation

this is the basic New Republic Naval fleet formation used when entering a system in preparation for war. It provides the most imposing view of the fleet, and is primarily for display purposes only. Once the battle is joined, the formation is broken up in favor of more tactically-efficient formations. (TT)

Shownar

this planet, located in Parmic Sector, is composed mainly of vertag crystal. This creates a uniquely beautiful landscape of stunning crystalline vistas. It is located near the Torch Nebula, whose eerie glow lights up the planet's nighttime hours. The average day on Shownar lasts 25 standard hours, and its year encompasses 370 local days. (GG9)

Shownar Lullaby

this odd music is created by the wind blowing through the vertag crystal spires on the planet Shownar. (GG9)

Showolter

this New Republic Major was placed in charge of the mission to bring the Yuuzhan Vong priestess Elan to a facility on Wayland, where the New Republic could interview her. Showolter was a former member of the Alliance military intelligence agency, and he often played the part of an Imperial officer while on a mission. His muscular physique gave him the right body to blend in with the Imperials, but became a liability after the Battle of Endor. Then, while working for the New Republic, his thick body made him stand out more. This led to his promotion into more of a supervisory role, which he held at the time the Yuuzhan Vong launched their invasion. Showolter and Elan made it to Wayland without a problem, but the Yuuzhan Vong launched a false "assassination" attempt on Elan's life after they arrived at Wayland. Their location was given away by Elan's familiar, Vergere, and forced Showolter to book transport for them to Coruscant. Traveling as a couple - with Elan wearing an ooglith masquer to appear human - they boarded the Queen of Empire in order to return to the Core. Unfortunately, the Peace Brigade learned of the undercover operation from a well-placed spy in the New Republic, and intercepted the luxury cruiser. In an attempt to save Elan's life, Showolter took blaster fire from the Peace Brigade's mercenaries. Badly injured, he was forced to turn Elan and Vergere over to Han Solo. Showolter eventually recovered from his injuries. (HT, NJOSB)

SHPA-C

this version of the Self-Propelled Heavy Artillery-Turbolaser tank, developed by the Old Republic to support the Army of the Republic, featured a concussion missile launcher in place of the turbolaser. (SWI64)

Shrag Brothers

sneak-thieves on Nar Shaddaa. (DE1)

S'hrah

this man was a noted doctor who taught medicine to the interns who did their residency at the Coruscant Medical Hospital during the last decades of the Old Republic. An irascible man, Doctor S'hrah had little patience for non-medical disciplines. He would yell at his students when they tried to branch out or apply medicine to other uses, screaming that they were doctors, not some other profession. (MBS)

Shrail

this baked, sweet bread was popular on the planet Garos IV. (SWJ5)

Shran

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Shredder Bat

a vicious, avian creature native to the planet Atrisia, shredder bats are extremely adaptable to a variety of ecosystems. They have a wingspan of up to a meter across, and hunted in packs of more than twenty individuals. Shredder bats use a complex hearing system, with hearing organs in their necks and behind their ears, to sonically locate their prey. They attacked their prey by diving down on it and taking bites with their sharp fangs, causing their prey to bleed to death. The bats would then land on the downed prey and use their long tongues to consume all the blood and other bodily fluids. They were considered a dangerous nuisance throughout the galaxy, as colonies of shredder bats have been established on over 1,000 different worlds. Once in a new environment, they tend to attack everything in sight in order to establish a territory. These attacks include humans and humanoids. (ND, COG)

Shreebird

this rare avian was nearly extinct by the time the Clone Wars began. A special aviary was erected on Coruscant to preserve a small colony of shreebirds. (HNN4)

Shree-class Battle Cruiser

this Ssi-ruuvi design was a heavy battleship measuring nearly 900 meters in length, and armed with 24 Ssi-ruuvi turbolasers, 24 ion cannons, 12 concussion missile launchers, and 12 tractor beam projectors. Up to 500 Ssi-ruuvi battle droids can be carried in its holds. The decks on the Shree-class are five meters tall, to accommodate the Ssi-ruuk body. The P'w'ecks that perform menial tasks on the ships have a series of accessways and tunnels in which they can operate. Stun-traps have been set in various access portals to keep the P'w'ecks from entering sensitive areas. Unlike most galactic ships, the Ssi-ruuvi designs lack anti-gravitational systems, and so they employ conductive netting to help stabilize gravity. They also lacked reliable inertial compensators, and sudden changes in direction caused inprepared passengers to be thrown against bulkheads. It also had a large entechment lab used to power the ship and its drones. Each Shree-class cruiser required a crew complement of 800 Ssi-ruuk officers, 234 gunners, 5,000 P'w'eck laborers, and 350 P'w'eck troops. It could also transport up to 5,000 metric tons of cargo. (EGV, TBSB) literally known as "His Potency", the Shreeftut was the supreme ruler of Lwhekk, and the leader of the Ssi-ruuvi Imperium and the Ssi-ruuk people. Sometime before the Battle of Endor, the Shreeftut made a deal with Emperor Palpatine to provide personal battle droids if the Emperor would provide human prisoners. Although this particular deal fell through, the Shreeftut continued to work to further his own species. The Shreeftut was advised on all governmental matters by the Elders' Council, and on religious aspects by the Conclave. (TB, FH2)

Shreeftut

Shreel

this graduate of the New Republic Space Academy served a member of Leia Organa-Solo's honor guard during her mission to the Chorios Systems to meet with Seti Ashgad. He served as a Yeoman aboard the Borealis, and perished when Ashgad unleashed the Death Seed plague. (POT)

Shreetam'tiz

this specially-bred subspecies of the Yuuzhan Vong yammosk was created to emit a powerful signal of interference within the telepathic bands used by yammosks, dhuryams, and other such bio-engineering organisms. This allowed the Yuuzhan Vong to temporarily disrupt the control a yammosk had over starships, or broke the link between a dhuryam and its attendant slaves. The shreeyam'tiz was a large, barrel-shaped creature that existed in a large vat of nutrient fluid, and had to be carried into location by Yuuzhan Vong warriors. The shreeyam'tiz was especially useful during the tizo'pil Yun'tchilat, when the dhuryams had to figure out a way to survive without the help of their slaves. (T)

Shreev

this small, winged creature is native to the planet S'krrr. They are the natural enemies of the drog beetle, which is the favored food of the shreev. The bat-like shreev are covered with blue fur, and have a snake-like tail. They were protected by the S'krrr, because they kept the drog beetle population under control. Without the shreev, the drog beetles would eventually consume all the crops grown on S'krrr. The average shreev can consume some thirty drog beetles each day. (GOF8)

Shri

one of Rei'kas' hired thugs, Shri was sent to intercept Talon Kaarde at the Ithor Loman on Dayark. The assault failed when H'sishi and Shada D'ukal managed to taken the thugs out. (VOF)

Shriek

this unusual race of pink-skinned beings lived on the Forest Moon of Endor. Shrieks were easily distinguished by their three eyes. Shrieks were named for the loud noise they made whenever they defended their homes, but they could be convivial friends. (ECAR)

Shrike

an Imperial frigate destroyed by the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Shrike

this nimble starfighter was used by Mara Jade, during her early years of service to the Smuggler's Alliance. (NEGC)

Shrike

this Imperial Star Destroyer was the flagship of the customs fleet that patrolled the Corellian Sector, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (CCW)

Shrike Squadron

this was the designation of the group of TIE Fighters garrisoned at Argenhald Base, on Saffalore, during the early years of the New Republic. (SOC)

Shrike, Garris

this Corellian trader and smuggler worked aboard the starship Trader's Luck, commanding a ragtag band of thieves and swindlers. He employed without prejudice, using street urchins to beg and steal while using strong alien races for extortion and loan sharking. He was infamous among the underworld for his elaborate schemes, in which he would swindle the rich and wealthy of Corellia out of their credits. He ran the Trader's Luck with an iron hand, and demanded complete loyalty or swift retribution would follow. He dressed in the style of Imperial Moffs, with several medals and decorations purchased at pawn shops. It was Shrike who pulled a young Han Solo from the alleys of Corellia, taking the boy in and using him in many of his best schemes. When Han tried to leave the Trader's Luck, Shrike killed the Wookiee Dewlanna before he was knocked cold by young Solo. Shrike never forgot the incident, and when he discovered Han on Coruscant, he intended to pay him back. Their struggle spanned several levels of the city-world's structures before Shrike gained the upper hand. Just as he was about to deal Han a deadly blow, a bounty hunter that had been trailing Han shot Shrike dead. Han was able to escape the bounty hunter as well, dodging a charge at the last minute and sending the hunter careening into a stone structure and snapping his neck. Han then switched clothing with the hunter, placing all his false IDs in the hunter's jacket. He then burned the face off the hunter with Shrike's blaster and dumped the body into a seemingly bottomless shaft. With Shrike dead and his IDs on another body, Han was finally free of his past. (TPS)

this man was Garris Shrike's brother. As cruel and demented as Garris, Larrad was one of the bullies who maintained order on the Trader's Luck. When Han Solo attempted to flee the ship, Dewlanna the Wookiee stepped in to help him. Larrad and several others noticed that Han had bypassed several security systems, and they set out to apprehend the youth. As Garris struck out at Solo, Larrad was attacked by Dewlanna. The Wookiee grabbed him by the arm and swung him around with all her might, smashing Larrad into a bulkhead and breaking nearly every bone in his body. Larrad didn't survive. (TPS)

ShrinCord

this defensive substance is similar to other webbing and netting used by law enforcement agencies and bounty hunters. ShrinCord is either shot from a gun or laid atop a trap. When it hits living flesh, it begins to shrink, tightening around its target and immobilizing them. (ML)

Shrine of the Sleeper

this chamber was located in DarkStryder's fortress, on the planet Kathol. It was here that the Yapi and Charr Ontee discovered the image of the Sleeper. When DarkStryder drove the Charr Ontee and the Yapi away, they took the image with them, because they knew that DarkStryder feared the return of the Sleeper. The crew of the FarStar, after surviving the destruction of their ship, discovered that the Shrine contained the preserved body of the Jedi Knight Halbret, who had been trapped on Kathol during the Rift Disaster. It was Halbret's image the Charr Ontee remembered. Halbret had been preserved by the Kathol after she helped them enter the Lifewell, mainly to help restore the Kathol once the danger of the Dark Jedi had passed. However, DarkStryder continued to evolve, and chose not to revive Halbret or the Kathol, desiring power for itself. (E)

Shrines of Kooroo

this ancient monuments were claimed by the Fellowship of Kooroo to be the original edifices built by Kooroo to focus the minds of his followers on true enlightenment. The Fellowship of Kooroo believed the enlightenment came in the form of telepathic abilities. The shrines consisted of a central, domed sanctuary surrounded by carved stone obelisks. The obelisks are all inscribed with runes and sigils, and their placement around the central building resembled the spokes of a wheel. Shortly after the Battle of Yavin, reporter Andor Javin earned the wrath of the Fellowship of Kooroo by claiming that the Shrines were not religious artifacts but a form of ancient communication device created by an ancient civilization which scouted the galaxy millions of years earlier. (SWJ13)

Sh'rip Sh'pa

this was the name given to Yuuzhan Vong spawn ships, which were similar in appearance to gargantuan gemstones. These ships were essentially freighters or cruisers that had been refitted to transport terraforming biotechnology to newly-conquered planets. Measuring about 810 meters in length, the Sh'rip Sh'pa required a crew of 525 Yuuzhan Vong warriors to operate, and could accommodate up to 2,044 passengers - usually from the Shaper caste - and 2,460 metric tons of cargo. These ships were armed with forty plasma cannons, any of which could be moved to a different facet of the hull to provide an infinite range of fire. A specialized dovin basal provided enhanced protection, helping to ensure that the Sh'rip Sh'pa reached its destination intact. (NJOSB)

Shrithek Al'Iya

this Bothan served as the Consul of Natural Resources to the government of Kothlis, at the height of the Galactic Civil War. An enterprising entrepreneur, Shrithek used his position to stymie competitors while providing access to favored corporations. (SPG)

Shrivel Braittrand

this hunchbacked humanoid was one of the galaxy's best podracers, some ten years after the Battle of Naboo. (RACR)

Shriwirr

a Ssi-ruuvi Shree-class battle cruiser, the Shriwirr was the flagship of the Ssi-ruuk attack on the planet Bakura. The word shriwirr means "ripe with eggs" in the Ssi-ruuvi language. The Shriwirr was accompanied by 4 Wurrif-class light cruisers, 20 Fw'sen-class picket ships, a Sh'ner-class planetary assault carrier, 12 D'kee-class P'w'eck landing ships, and a Lwhekk-class manufacturing ship. A force of over 1,300 battle droids was unleashed in the system. It was captured by the Luke Skywalker and the Alliance during the Battle of Bakura, when Luke escaped from his entechment chair. The Ssi-ruuk evacuated the ship, rather than facing Luke's ability with the Force and possibly dying on an unconsecrated world, and abandoned the ship. It was later renamed the Sibwarra, in honor of Dev Sibwarra's sacrifice to alert the Alliance to the Ssi-ruuvi threat, although its crew secretly called it the Flutie. (TB, EGV, TBSB)

Shron

this small, volcanic world was the innermost planet of the Hoth System. (PH)

Shroom Steak

despite its name, this was not actually a cut of meat, but a thickly cut piece of mushroom which grew on the planet Drongar. Because the mushroom was so large, and its cooked texture was tender and firm, it was called a steak in many recipes and menus. (MBS)

Shroomchip

this was a snackfood that was created by frying thinly-sliced pieces of the native mushrooms that grew near the swamps of the planet Drongar. (MBS)

Shroud

this was the name used by the New Republic to describe the Ghtroc 720 freighter it modified for use by Luke Skywalker. It was named for the covert shroud maneuver, for which the ship became famous. The Republic's technicians gutted the basic Ghtroc 720 and chopped a landing bay inside its hold area. Most of the cargo space was dedicated to the hangar, but a small amount was kept in the bow of the ship for storage of the trac-reflective countermeasures used in the covert shroud maneuver. A repulsorlift generator was added to assist in getting particles out in front of the ship, and a rear-facing proton torpedo launcher was added. (TTSB)

Shroud

this Arakyd Helix Interceptor starship was owned by the Shi'ido Hoole, and he used it to transport himself and his young charges, Tash and Zak Arranda, across the galaxy during the Galactic Civil War. It had been owned by Doctor Evazan, and sold to Meego to fund Evazan's reanimation serum development. When Hoole attempted to get off the planet, D-V9 discovered that Meego had sold the ship Hoole had put a downpayment on. D-V9 negotiated for the sale of the Shroud, and eventually got Meego to sell the ship even before he had wiped its memory banks clean. It was equipped with a GBp-629 hyperdrive, and Hoole later had equipped it with a slave circuit, in order to hide it during their adventures and then call it out when needed. The ship was nearly destroyed over the planet Kiva, when an automated defense system shot the Shroud down. Hoole managed to land it safely, and an Alliance team later rescued them. (GOF2, GOF7, GOF11)

Shroud Team

this group of Alliance operatives was one of the busiest groups of the Divis Arm, based in Corint City on Pirik. Led by Dutra Zeneta, the group acted as spies, foster agents, and infiltrators. (SWJ10)

Shrulldike, Gorvan

known as "Blackblood" to the Daupherm military, this man was a loyal member of the military until he decided to defect and become a smuggler. He recruited Evram Darkmere, and the two managed to steal a ship from the Daupherm government. They renamed it the Retribution, and set out to make a living as smugglers. Shrulldike had few morals, and chose to make a living transporting slaves. Darkmere objected to this career, and challenged Shrulldike for command of the ship. In single combat, Darkmere soundly defeated Shrulldike and assumed command of the Retribution. (CRO)

Sh'shak

this S'krrr warrior was his planet's champion in the years just prior to the Empire's invasion of the Ishanna System. He was also a renowned poet among the S'krrr. He was destined to meet Mika Streev in battle on the Combat Moon, should a dispute arise between S'krrr and Rabaan. He meticulously studied human anatomy and psychology, looking for any advantage he could find. Sh'shak was short for a S'krrr, measuring only 1.7 meters in height, but he was well-trained in the ways of the warrior. He meditated prior to combat, to center his thoughts on the battle ahead. When the Empire finally decided to subjugate the system, Sh'shak and Streev were already on the Combat Moon, preparing to do battle in the ritual Combat. Imperial forces, with the help of Andos Delvaren, attempted to escalate the conflict into a full-scale war by killing both combatants. Sh'shak was hunting Streev when the Imperials began hunting Streev. Streev managed to escape, convinced Sh'shak to work together and them off. Sh'shak was injured when Commander Glave shot him in the thorax, but was rescued by Streev and a group of Alliance agents. They escaped off the moon, and agreed to join the Alliance after they hunted down Delvaren and Glave. (SWJ9, GOF8)

Sh'shuun

this planet, also known as Lao-mon, was the homeworld of the Shi'ido race. Very little was known about the planet, other than it was a tropical world in the Colonies Region. The name Sh'shuun was a Shi'ido word. (GOF4, UANT)

Sh'simm

this was one of the small group of Shamed Ones who lived beneath the surface of Coruscant, after the planet had been transformed into a likeness of Yuuzhan'tar. Sh'simm was one of the few Shamed Ones who lived independently, away from groups like that led by Vuurok I'pan. Like the other Shamed ones, though, Sh'simm believed that the Jedi Knights were not abominations, but saviors of the Shamed Ones and symbols of the new ideology which should be embraced by the Yuuzhan Vong. For this reason, their band remained small, in case they were captured by the Yuuzhan Vong warriors. This ensured that their small cult of Jedi followers would never be fully discovered. (FH1)

Sh'tk'ith

this Ssi-ruuvi Elder was known as Bluescale because of his coloration. He was extremely well-versed in the physiology of humans, and was the leader of the task force dispatched to subjugation the planet Bakura. Sh'tk'ith was also charged with maintaining the obedience of Dev Sibwarra. It was discovered that Sh'tk'ith was chosen for the leadership of the Bakura mission by the Shreeftut itself, and acted as the Shreeftut's voice to the Ssi-ruuk on the mission. There were rumors that Sh'tk'ith was the true power behind the Shreeftut, but no facts were discovered before Sh'tk'ith died during the Battle of Bakura. Luke Skywalker believed that Sh'tk'ith was the exact opposite this, sent to Bakura with enough power to draw potential enemies away from Lwhekk and the Shreeftut. (TB, TBSB)

Shturlan

this is the twelfth of the Tunroth Hunter rankings, and is an average level of achievement. (GG12)

Shu Mai

this female Gossam served as the President of the Commerce Guild, some ten years after the Battle of Naboo. Shu Mai was known among her peers and competitors as a being of unusual intelligence. It was Shu Mai who gathered enough credits to purchase her homeworld of Castell from the Commerce Guild, but she remained loyal to the Guild and kept taxes high to maintain control of her people. Her shrewd actions impressed the Guild, which continued to promote her to higher ranks. Her unscrupulous work ethic soon earned her the promotion to President. She was also a confidante of Count Dooku, and was one of the leaders of the secession movement which formed the strongest undercurrent of the political landscape of the Old Republic at the time. Shu Mai made arrangements with Senator Mousul to work toward Mousul's homeworld of Ansion being one of the first worlds to secede, hoping to drag along the Malarians and the Keitumites and bring about a sudden and strong reformation of the Republic. While their plans were thwarted by the Jedi Knights who negotiated a treaty between the peoples of Ansion to remain part of the Republic, Shu Mai and Senator Mousul remained loyal to Count Dooku's plans for secession. However, Shu Mai refused to openly support Dooku and the Separatists, instead pledging secret support in order to keep from actually committing treason against the Republic. After the Battle of Geonosis, Shu Mai and her assistants returned to their base of operations on Felucia, only to learn that the Republic was planning to attack the planet. They fled Felucia on the orders of General Grievous, who advised them to go to Belderone. After Grievous was routed at Belderone by Anakin Skywalker, Shu Mai returned to Felucia. However, the Republic's forces tracked her down, and Shu Mai might have been captured if Grievous hadn't returned to transport her to Utapau. After hiding on Utapau under the protection of General Grievous, the Separatist leadership was taken to Mustafar. It was there, after Darth Sidious finally lured Anakin Skywalker to the Dark Side of the Force, that the Separatist leaders met their deaths. Skywalker was dispatched to Mustafar by Sidious himself, with orders to eliminate them. Skywalker quickly killed Shu Mai, before setting off after the rest of the Separatist leaders. (APS, SWDB, ROF, LEV, IS3) meaning "beloved" - or, more literally, "love love" - this name was common among Gungan females. (GCG)

Shubelle, Graekus

this man served as the Administrator of Hologram Fun World, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Shud

this was the fifth planet in the Obas System. It had five moons. (IA)

Shudderup

this was a form of music which was not enjoyed by the Gungan race of Naboo. Many street vagrants chose to play it, encouraging passersby to pay money to make them stop playing. (NEGC)

Shug

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Shug Ninx

an outlaw tech on Nar Shaddaa, and an old friend of Han Solo. He is part Theelin and part Corellian human, and had only two fingers on each hand, along with a two-jointed opposable thumb. This combination left him with few choices as far as education and careers went. He found a niche as a mechanic, and saved up enough money to buy a space on Nar Shaddaa. There, he set up his own "spacebarn." This starship garage got him a few good friends, namely Solo, Salla Zend, and Lando Calrissian. They all left to pursue the stars, but Salla's accident brought her back to the spaceport moon. Their partnership was solidified over the years, during which time Shug continued to grow in expertise. His starship garage is located within the spaceport's inner depths, and its entrance is hidden by a large holoscreen. The entry is built from a kilometers-long chute built from a construction module from the second Death Star prototype. (He found the surplus on Bonadan.) He and Salla Zend left the spaceport after Han Solo destroyed one of their prized cruisers, and after Zasm Katth and Baddon Fass ransack the garage. (DE1, DESB, DE2, THG)

Shug's Spacebarn

this was Shug Ninx's starship repair facility, located on Nar Shaddaa. (RD)

Shuldene

this ice-covered planet was located in the Yarith Sector of the galaxy, just Coreward of the Kiax Nebula.

The planet was once covered with oceans, but its orbit was pushed outward by an unknown event, and the surface water froze solid. (WOA33)

Shulell

this city is the capital of the planet Lan Barell. (SWJ1)

Shullos, Trebian

this man was the Maestro of the Conservatory Epic Orchestra during the height of the New Order. (SWJ13)

Shulstine V

this was a planet known for its seedy cantinas. (WOA32)

Shultisam

meaning "twilight", this was a common female name among the Mon Calamari race. (GCG)

Shumavar

this planet was the site of a trade conference at which Bornan Thul was to turn over the Emperor's Plague to Nola Tarkona. (TEP)

Shume

this was the name of a noted Sludir individual. (UANT)

Shumogi

this planet was the site of an Imperial Ordnance Research Facility during the Galactic Civil War. (JASB)

Shun

this was the term used by the Jedi Knights of the Old Republic to describe a one-handed grip on a lightsaber, which is then spun through a 360-degree arc to gain speed for an attack during lightsaber combat. (VD2)

Shunta Osarian Dharrg

this Osarian was the ruler of the planet Osarian, during the time when Nom Anor rose to power among the Rhommamoolians. (VP)

Shurrg

this female Quarren worked as a ship thief for Pal-Nada, during the height of the New Order. Shurrg often stole the uniforms of port authorities where she worked, claiming to be a safety inspector in order to gain access to a target ship. (WOA17)

Shusk

this Chadra-Fan was an ocean guide during the New Order, working with Kimsh to take visitors out to see the bildogs and proops. (EGA)

Shusugaunt

this ocean-covered world was the homeworld of an alien race by the same name. Ancient xenobiologists of the Old Republic believed that the planet was also the homeworld of another race, the Anx, a theory that surfaced after the skeletons of several Anx were found in the shallow seas of the planet. It was later learned that the skeletons were from members of an exploration party of Anx that had made a trip of several dozen light-years to explore Shusugaunt, but were killed by the natives. (GMR7)

Shusugaunt

this language, the native language of the Shusugaunt race, was also adopted as a second language by the Anx. (UANT)

Shusugaunt

this race of spacefaring warriors was native to a planet of the same name. A short-statured race, the Shusugaunt were encountered by one of the many Anx colonization ships that spread throughout their sector during the millennia before the Clone Wars. The Shusugaunt then tried to take control of the planet Gravlex Med, hoping to wipe out the Anx, but the Shusugaunt were unprepared for Gravlex Med's heavy gravity. Unable to fight without quickly becoming fatigued, the Shusugaunt fled Gravlex Med and left the Anx alone. Note that Star Wars Gamer magazine, issue 7, claims that Shusugaunt was the heavy-gravity world, not Gravlex Med. (UANT, GMR7)

Shutter Shield

this form of planetary defense shield doesn't encase a planet in a sphere of energy broken only by fire gaps. Instead, the shutter shield can be opened and closed to allow starships to move through, as well as to fire weapons at orbital targets. Shutter shields are less expensive to power, but are also less effective at keeping an enemy outside as the opening of the shield creates a large hole to fly through. (HAS)

Shuttle 37

the designation of the shuttle Mara Jade and Luke Skywalker used to get on board the Chimaera and rescue Talon Kaarde. (DFR)

Shuttle-skimmer

a large repulsorlift craft used to transport people and cargo across short distances. (HSR)

Shutz

an Alliance Lambda-class shuttle captured during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Shuura

native to the planet Naboo, this plant produced a yellow-and-cream-colored fruit, which was juicy and sweet. (AOTCN)

Shuxl

this star was located in the Yarith Sector of the galaxy, on the edge of the Ivax Nebula. There were no planets in orbit around this star, just a series of dust-filled rings. However, a hyperspace beacon was inserted into the system to help starships traveling along the Corellian Trade Spine reorient themselves. (WOA33)

Shuzz

this huge Kubaz was part of the group working for Meres Ulcane and the Kaarenth Dissension. Shuzz worked the cantinas of Betha II's starport, inviting members of non-human races to Ulcane's rallies. (SWJ8)

Shvash

this was the name of the noxious gas which developed below the surface of the swamps covering the planet Gelgelar. (SWJ14)

Shvash Gas Cooperative

this loose affiliation of shvash gas collectors was run by Vleen Argoe, and attempted to ensure that collectors were paid a fair and consistent procie for the swamp gas. Its officers were located in Gelgelar Free Port. (PSPG)

Shwock Dubllon

this piece of classical music is probably the best-known piece from the Mon Calamari composer Dembaline. Considered Dembaline's most rousing music, it opened with a flourish before fading into a soft mix of discordant notes. The title, when translated to Basic, is known as Crested Wake. (VP)

Shwpi

this small herbivore was native to the planet Bimmieel. They were fairly abundant, once the planet swung into the closer portion of its elliptical orbit and began to warm up. As plant life re-established itself after winter, the shwpi were roused and began to breed. They were the favored prey of the slashrats, whose voracious appetite kept shwpi population under control. During the winter period of the planet's orbit, the shwpi hibernate until the next warm season. (DTO)

Shwuy Exchange

this minor hyperspace trade route ran between Shwuy and Fakir Sectors. (PP)

Shwuy Perimeter

this was the area of the galaxy located along the Coreward border of Shwuy Sector. (PP)

Shwuy Sector

an area of the galaxy that was heavily re-equipped by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War. (ISB)

Shyarn

this was the traditional dueling scimitar used by the Cerean race. Its name was derived from an ancient word meaning "dancer", and described the sinuous curve found in the scimitar's blade. Made from metals found only on Cerea, the shyarn was a light weapon that required a certain amount of skill and finesse to wield. The martial art form shyarn-ado evolved to teach Cereans how to fight and defend with a shyarn. The metals in the blade have unique magnetic properties, which added to the skill necessary to use it. When two shyarn blades struck each other, the impact created vibrations which increased its natural magnetic forces, locking the blades together and forcing the wielders to move in intricate steps to free the blades. Strength and control were needed to break the connection without losing possession of the shyarn. (UANT)

Shyarn-ado

this was the specialized form of swordfighting which was developed by the Cerean people to wield the shyarn scimitar. Usually, a trainee must agree to train with a single master for their entire lifetime, before training can actually begin. This helped to ensure that the availability of shyarn blades was strictly controlled. (UANT)

Shylar

this Jedi Master was one of many who volunteered to infiltrate the Separatist forces surrounding Count Dooku, during the height of the Clone Wars. After the defection of Sora Bulq, the Jedi Council was dismayed to lose contact with Master Shylar for several months, fearing that she too had defected. However, Dooku saw through Shylar's deception and had her imprisoned and interrogated. Despite her situation, Master Shylar refused to say anything to Count Dooku. She was angry and dismayed when Quinlan Vos appeared at Dooku's side, and Vos himself was dismayed by the fact that he couldn't reveal himself without blowing his cover. When Shylar died during the torture, Vos held himself somewhat responsible. Later, Vos admitted to the Jedi Council that he had had a relationship with Master Shylar, during their training as Padawans. Their relationship was voluntarily ended, so that they could remain true to the Jedi Order. (J4, RDR)

Shynne

this woman was raised in the Citadel Inquisitorius, on the planet Prakith, during the early years of the New Order. She eventually became an Inquisitor herself, and chose the Deep Core as her jurisdiction, since her connection to the Dark Side of the Force was strongest in the Deep Core. (PH)

Shyntak

this name was common among members of the T'surr race. (WOTC, UANT)

Shyrack Caves

this series of natural caves was found on the planet Korriban. The primary entrance was hidden in the Valley of the Dark Lords. (KOTOR)

Shyriiwook

this was the name of the Wookiee language known as the 'tongue of the Tree People.' It had a wide range of emotional adjuncts, and was primarily used for trade and travel. Because the Wookiee homeworld of Kashyyyk was covered with dense forests, Shyriiwook provided many different words that translated into a single word in Basic. For instance, Shyriiwook had over 150 words for "wood", depending on grain, moisture content, and underlying structure. (TBH, RD, VD3)

Shysa, Fenn

it was believed that Fenn Shysa was one of the three surviving Mandalorian Protectors, along with Alpha-02 and Tobbi Dala, from an original group of 212 which was sent into battle by the Separatists during the Clone Wars. Popular rumor held that it was Boba Fett, not Alpha-02, who survived the conflict. Note that The Essential Guide to Characters claims that the two other Mandalorians were Boba Fett and Jodo Kast. Shysa and Dala served under Alpha-02 during the battle, and both returned to Mandalore when the fighting was over. Whatever the truth to these rumors, what was known was that Fenn Shysa organized the natives of Mandalore and got them to fight back against the slavers who had taken control of the planet in their absence, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. One of the beings they captured was the bounty hunter Dengar, just after Tobbi Dala was captured by the slavers. Shysa agreed to a prisoner exchange, but Leia Organa demanded to speak to Dengar. The swap was canceled when Dengar escaped and led the Imperials in Kadalbe to Shysa's base. Fenn infiltrated the slavers' base and rescued Leia and Tobbi Dala, but was unable to protect Dala when the Suprema shot him in the chest. Fenn managed to capture the Suprema, but could not save Dala's life. Fenn was eventually named Mandalore, and the Mandalorian Protectors once again flourished. He remained in touch with the Alliance, and eventually pledged Mandalore's support to the Alliance of Free Planets. Unknown to Shysa, though, was the fact that the former Kaminoan cloner, Taun We, had discovered that he was the only surviving Mandalorian from an attack on Kamino during the Clone Wars. She asked Boba Fett to hunt him down to avenge the destruction of her homeworld, and Fett agreed. Note that, although Star Wars Insider magazine, issue 80, says that Fett hunted Shysa down, it also says that Shysa gave his life for Fett on Shogun. (MC68, MC69, EGC, MC99, SWI80)

Shysa, Fenn

Si

this Gran served as a Commander in the New Republic, and was one of the first base commanders of the Esfandia Long-Range Communications Base. It was Commander Si who discovered that the Brrbrlpp were sentient, and devised a form of trinary machine language which the Brrbrlpp could use to communicate with the base. (FH3)

Si Qurr

this noted poet was one of the surviving members of the Abinyshi race. (SWJ14)

Si Treemba

this young Arcona worked for Arcona Mineral Harvest Corporation, and was transported to the planet Bandomeer aboard the Monument with Obi-Wan Kenobi. The two became good friends after Obi-Wan stood up to Offworld Mining's Hutt leaders aboard the transport ship. To Si Treemba, this was one of the bravest things a being could do, and he held Obi-Wan with high regards. When the two discovered that Offworld had been sabotaging Arcona Mineral Harvest's equipment while en route to Bandomeer, they tried to tell their superiors but were thwarted by a pirate attack on the Monument. In the aftermath, Si and Obi-Wan brought out the dealings of Grelb and Jemba, and helped bring many Offworld workers over to Arcona Mineral Harvest. After landing on Bandomeer, Si Treemba and Obi-Wan discovered Xanatos' part in the sabotage of the Home Party Mine, and helped Arcona Mineral Harvest take control of Bandomeer. (RF, DR)

Sia

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Siak-series Protocol Droid

developed and manufactured by Roche Industries, the Siak-series of protocol droids was the first real commercial success the Verpines had during the New Order. More human in shape than the J9 worker drone, the Siak incorporated the technological advances of the TranLang IV communications module. (FTD)

Sian

this name was common among Sullustan males, and meant "inventive". (GCG)

Sian

this was a common name among the Zeltron people. (UANT)

Sian Tevv

this rebellious councilor from Sullust was responsible for bringing Nien Nunb and his raiding squad into the Alliance after the Empire forced them out of the Sullust system. He was a rebel from the start, hanging around with spacers and technicians in order to learn more about starships and droids. This dismayed his parents, who were Sullustan diplomats. One of his first friends was another Sullustan youth, Nien Nunb, who taught Tevv a great deal about starships. Eventually, though, Tevv went to school and became a diplomat like his parents. He was known as one of the youngest Sullustan diplomats to ever travel to Coruscant. However, while he was there, he witnessed first-hand the real power behind the Empire, as the Senators debated over policy changes while the military subjugated world after world. He decided that Sullust would have to join the Alliance to Restore the Republic if it truly wanted to be free. At first, Tevv was worried about what open rebellion would mean for his people. In early talks with Bria Tharen, he and Jennsar SoBilles felt that rebellion would simply mean powerful reprisal for the Empire. He was later instrumental in the development of the Declaration of a New Republic. Tevv then contracted the Krytos virus while on Coruscant, shortly after the planet was liberated from Ysanne Isard. He didn't evidence any symptoms, but underwent preventative bacta treatment to maintain his health. Because of his various dealings with the Provisional Council, Tevv was considered a possible suspect in the Delta Source leak, although he was never charged with any crimes. His innocence was proven when the ch'ala trees near the Imperial Palace were discovered to be bugged. During the hunt for Prince-Admiral Krennel, Tevv was one of the many Republic councilors who doubted the veracity of Wedge Antilles' transmission to the Republic which indicated Rogue Squadron was alive and well, though in the control of Ysanne Isard. (TLC, HTSB, KT, RD, IR, TTSB)

Siang Lance

this was the traditional weapon of the Kilian Rangers, and served as a form of badge of office and symbol of their loyalty to Kilia IV. The lance was essentially an ancient sporting blaster rifle, to which was attached a long bayonet. High-ranking Kilian Rangers learned to imbue the Force into their lance, giving it enhanced power and accuracy. (RESB)

Siarr Tepinnet

this vocal opponent of the Corporate Sector Authority was imprisoned at Stars' End by Viceprex Hirken. (CSA)

Sibarra

this Hutt was the brains and the funding behind Ace Entertainment Corporation and the Ace of Sabres casino. A demented Hutt with cybernetic replacements for his right arm and right eye, Sibarra was outcast from mainstream Hutt society. From that point on, he hated all other Hutts, and went out of his way to harass them in business ventures. Many believed that the only reason Sibarra was still alive during the height of the New Order was because of the skills of Dunan Par'Eil, who managed the security of the Ace of Sabres. Sibarra used the Ace enterprise to cover his more illegal activities, and he also curried favors from his high-powered guests in return for small wins at the games. Sibarra also sold the less-fortunate losers at the Ace to Aubro Ahntanda. (WSV)

Sibble

this was a common name among the Kushiban race. (UANT)

Sibha Habadeet

this collective was one of the Alliance's major suppliers of micrel equipment, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. They specialized in the manufacture of bioelectronic power supplies, like the one which powered Luke Skywalker's cybernetic hand prosthesis. (HTTE)

Sibisime

a planet. (GMR10)

Sibiu

one of Munto Codru's younger, less experienced families. (CS)

Sibwarra

this was the name given to the captured Shree-class Ssi-ruuvi warship, the Shriwirr, in the wake of the Battle of Bakura. The New Republic refitted the ship for humanoid operation, and sent it into the Ssi-ruuvi star cluster to reconnoiter the threat the aliens posed to the fledgling Republic. The New Republic discovered that the Ssi-ruu had been attacked by a force of Chiss from the Unknown Regions, and that the aliens were all by defeated. (TB, ECH)

Sibwarra, Dev

a human forced to work for the Ssi-ruuvi during their invasion of Bakura, Dev was a small boy born to Force-sensitive parents. His mother, Ydra Kilwallen Sibwarra, had just begun Jedi training on Chandrila when the Emperor ordered the Jedi purged from existence. They fled to the planet G'rho, but they arrived just before the Ssi-ruuk overtook the planet. The alien invaders captured the curious lad, and brought him to their own homeworld for five years of conditioning. After that, Dev became a spokesman for the Ssi-ruu race in their quest to entech human minds. The Ssi-ruuk brought Dev with them to Bakura, and hoped he would ease the struggle to entech its human inhabitants. However, Dev's Force-sensitive mind was discovered by Luke Skywalker, who helped Dev overcome the Ssi-ruuvi conditioning and shrug off their restraints. Dev came back to the world of humans following the defeat of the Ssi-ruuk, but he sustained mortal injuries and died at Bakura. (TB, TBSB)

Sibwarra, Ydra Kilwallen

this woman was an apprentice Jedi at the rise of the New Order, and was forced to flee her homeworld of Chandrila. She hoped to avoid Emperor Palpatine's Jedi Purge, and to save her family, which included a young son named Dev. They decided to settle on the Chandrilan colony world of G'rho. Later, Ydra was killed when the Ssi-ruuk first invaded G'rho. (TBSB)

Sickener

this was the name of one of the most disgusting training facilities established for the training of cloned soldiers on the planet Kamino, during the build-up to the Battle of Geonosis and the Clone Wars. The Sickener was named because the facility was basically a huge field of trenches, each of which was filled with the entrails of dead animals and other decaying matter. The clones were forced to crawl, wade, or slither through the Sickener, as part of a training regimen designed to ensure they didn't falter in actual combat. The instructors who drove their soldiers through the Sickener constantly reminded the soldiers that it was nothing compared to what they would encounter on an actual battlefield. (RCHC)

Sickhealers

this caste of Bosph was made up of those individuals which excelled at tapping into the Force to help heal others. (SWJ13)

Sickle Rasp

this species of rasp was native to the moon of Rori. It was named for its sickle-like beak, and was known to deliver a mild poison when it attacked its prey. (GQRG)

Sickle-back Mantis

this predatory insect, native to the planet Dantooine, was known for its intense mating rituals. During the ritual, the red-and-black insects court each other. However, once mating was successful, the female mantis tore the head off her mate and laid her eggs in his carcass. The young mantises then ate their way out of his body, attacking each other to gain their freedom. (YDR)

Sicorn

this Nebulon-B2 frigate was part of the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Sic-Six

an intelligent race of arachnids from the planet Sisk, these black aliens have hard outer shells, eight eyes, and eight 6-jointed legs. They are a highly antisocial race, and have been unable to form a coherent government or any form of industrialization. However, they do have an advanced technology (which they consider to be better than anyone else's), and use it to capture their prey. The poison used in the Sic-six' fangs, while deadly to other members of its species and other creatures native to Sisk, is valued throughout the galaxy as an intoxicant by other races. They are descended from a race of web-lingerers which simply lunged around waiting for prey to become entangled. However, as the star Sisk collapsed and cooled their homeworld, the Sic-Six were forced to begin foraging for food. Eventually, they became the intelligent, sophisticated hunters they are today. (GG4, CCG7)

Sid Te', Berren

this man, a native of the city of Fabrillan, was the leader of the Alliance sleeper cell known only as V-16. He lived most of his life as a lowly street urchin, but used his standing to create a massive network of unknowing spies and informants. Sid, as he was known to his associates, detested the Imperial presence in Fabrillan. He had seen firsthand that the Empire despised entrepreneurs and individuals, and worked to provide any information he could to the Alliance. For all appearances, though, Sid seemed to be an enterprising street vendor with a large network of salesbeings. (CRO)

Siderider

developed by Chop Harlison, this unusual swoop racer was based on the standard Nebulon-Q swoop chassis. The main difference was the addition of a sidecar, which most corporate swoop producers believed would always overturn a standard swoop. Chop Harlison added a large wing on the opposite side of the swoop, counterbalancing the sidecar with the help of gravity compensators. The working prototype of the Siderider was also armed with a pair of blaster cannons. (SWJ6) meaning "musical", this was one of the most common names among Rodian females. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Sidewa

Sid'han

known as a mud crawler, this large reptile was native to the planet Seikosha. Resembling a small-headed crocodile, the Sid'Han were vicious predators which were capable of taking down multiple victims at once. They burrowed in the mud, sensing their prey's approaching footsteps by vibrations. When the prey was close enough, the Sid'Han lashed out with its tail, wrapped the prey before inflicting terrible wounds with its toothy jaws. They can grow to be 10 meters in length. (POC)

Sidi Driss Inn

this was one of the most luxurious hotels found in the city of Anchorhead, on the planet Tatooine, during the early years of the New Republic. During the last decades of the Old Republic, the Sidi Driss was a simple moisture farm, until Dama and her newly-married husband decided to transform it into an inn. Over the years, the Sidi Driss became quite elegant, and catered to all sorts of beings. The Hutts who used to control much of Tatooine's criminal operation even had a special wing set aside for their use. Note that this hotel was named for the actual Sidi Driss Hotel, located in Tunisia, which served as the location for shooting the Lars homestead during the making of Star Wars: Episode IV - A New Hope. (TG)

Sidney Shortfang

this Pada was a miner and prospector, and spent much of his career working the Sil'Lume Asteroid Belt with Gideon Smith. Like all Pada, Sidney hated violence and killing, and was rather reserved. This made him the opposite of Gideon's swaggering boisterousness, but their relationship deepened because of their good fit. Shortly after the Battle of Yavin, Sidney and Gideon met Luke Skywalker, and enlisted his help in rescuing Erling Tredway from Imperial Governor Parnell's prison on Tol Ado. During the rescue, Sidney was forced to kill a stormtrooper who would have surely killed Luke and Gideon. Sidney greatly regretted the action, feeling that his soul would be stained forever. Both Gideon and Luke reminded him that, if he hadn't shot the trooper, they would all be dead along with Erling. This reassurance did little for Sidney's spirit, but he remained loyal to his friends. However, Sidney was killed shortly after Luke and Erling escaped from the prison, in a firefight with Imperial troops. Luke made sure to remember Sidney's contributions when he returned to Yavin 4. (JH)

Sidral II

an Alliance freighter used to transport war materiel to a hidden stockpile during the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Sidras, Mael

this Old Republic Senator who somewhat outspoken in his opposition to the New Order. Sidras was assassinated while vacationing aboard the Savage Pleasure, an action which resulted in the deaths of many other passengers. (CRO)

Siege of Dalron 5

when the Empire decided that it wanted to subjugate the planet Dalron 5, it laid siege to the planet using techniques developed by Jan Dodonna. The Empire was able to overtake the planet, dishoming its people. (MTS)

Siege of Kal'Shebbol

this was the name given to the New Republic's assault on the planet Kal'Shebbol, some four years after the Battle of Endor. The New Republic's goal was to bring down Imperial Moff Kentor Sarne, but Sarne managed to escape and fled to Kathol. (E)

Siege of Kyrskia

this intensely-fought, three-month struggle took place during the Galactic Civil War. It involved several house-to-house campaigns. (ROE)

Siege of Saleucami

this was the term used by historians to describe the five-month-long battle between the forces of the Confederacy of Independent Systems and the Old Republic, during the final months of the Clone Wars, for control of the planet Saleucami. The Jedi Order had discovered that Sora Bulq and Rath Kelkko had begun creating clones for a "shadow army" from the genetic material of Bok, a Morgukai Warrior of great renown. This shadow army was trained by the Anzati in the ways of stealth and assassination, and was deemed too dangerous to develop by the Jedi Council and Chancellor Palpatine. The Republic's forces were led by Jedi Masters Oppo Rancisis and Quinlan Vos, but accomplished little more than preventing the cloned Morgukai from leaving the planet. (RSOS)

Sien

this name was common among Sullustan males, and meant "ingenious". (GCG)

Sien Siev

this New Republic Councilor was part of the new breed of intermediaries created after Ponc Gavrisom was named President. Siev was also a historical expert, with a vast knowledge of Imperial history. (SOP)

Sien Sovv

this Sullustan Admiral was the backbone of the New Republic Defense Force, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. In the wake of the debacle at the Battle of Fondor, Sien Sovv barely overcame a vote of no confidence within the New Republic Senate. He happened to be leading a small fleet of warships in the vicinity of Reecee when Han Solo discovered Yuuzhan Vong forces massing near the Black Bantha. Sovv was forced to engage the Yuuzhan Vong, in an effort to disrupt their plans to attack Coruscant. His fleet was woefully small, and only delayed the second wave of ships which eventually attacked Coruscant. In the wake of the Second Battle of Coruscant, Admiral Sien Sovv was the highest ranking officer in the Navy, and was designated by Senator Pwoe as the Supreme Commander of the remaining New Republic armed forces. Unfortunately, this rank stood even after Pwoe was ostracized on Kuat, and Admiral Sovv was forced to take the brunt of the criticism when New Republic forces were soundly defeated in many battles against the alien invaders. After the Yuuzhan Vong surrendered to the Galactic Alliance at Coruscant some five years after the start of their invasion, Admiral Sovv unexpectedly decided to retire. He was succeeded by Traest Kre'fey. (HT, BP, SBS, EL1, DW, UF)

Sienar Advanced Projects Laboratories

this division of Sienar Design Systems created many experimental prototypes during the last decades of the Old Republic, including the Infiltrator craft used by Darth Maul. Many credit the Advanced Projects team with the earliest advancements in the use of contained hypermatter, which eventually led to the immense power core of the Death Stars. (X1, RP)

Sienar Army Systems

this brand-name used by Santhe/Sienar Technologies was introduced following the Battle of Endor. Lady Valles Santhe created this division to help redeem her name in the eyes of Imperial supporters. (EGV, NEGC)

Sienar Coporation

new name of Santhe/Seinar Technologies, after the fall of the cloned Emperor Palpatine on Byss. (COJ)

Sienar Design Systems

this early brainchild of Raith Sienar was an internal workshop of Sienar Technologies, and eventually became Sienar Fleet Systems. SDS was known for its one-of-a-kind designs and secret projects, which were developed in the Advanced Projects Laboratory. Note that The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology indicates that SDS was a subsidiary of Republic Sienar Systems. (X1, NEGC, NEGW)

Sienar Fleet Systems

a division of Santhe/Seinar Technologies and once known as Republic Seinar Systems, they are the builders of the TIE family of starfighters, Interdictor-class Cruisers, and other Imperial war machines. They have the reputation of being one of the most dominant starfighter manufacturer, and their designs have become wildly successful since the advent of the New Order. (SW, SWSB, EGV)

Sienar Intelligence Systems

this subsidiary of Santhe/Sienar Technologies was developed during the early years of the New Order to provide droid programming for the Empire. It worked with smaller corporations, like LesTech, to ensure that Imperial automata were given similar personalities, skills, and traits. (FOP)

Sienar Patrol Ships

this was a form of patrol craft produced by Sienar Fleet Systems, during the years following the Battle of Endor. (DFR)

Sienar Refinery

this was the name given to the immense refinery and reclamation facility established on Raxus Prime by Sienar Fleet Systems, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Note that the Star Wars Databank provides the Sienar Fleet Systems reference, placing its formation from the old Republic Sienar Systems many years before the institution of the New Order. Scientists at the Sienar Refinery discovered that the sewers of Raxus Prime were constructed to help sweep away waste many thousands of years before the Battle of Geonosis, indicating that the planet had been a toxic wasteland for many generations. (WOTC)

Sienar Ships

this was the civilian branch of Sienar Fleet Systems, and produced many freighter and transport ship designs. (CRO)

Sienar Technologies

this corporation took control of the industrial world of Lianna about 100 years before the Battle of Yavin. Sienar Technologies was the latest in a series of corporations headed by the Sienar family, which traced its roots back to the designers of the warships used by Empress Teta during the Unification Wars. When Emperor Palpatine took control of the galaxy, he nationalized Sienar Technologies and renamed it Sienar Fleet Systems. Shortly afterward, Kerved Santhe purchased controlling interest in Sienar and renamed it Santhe/Sienar Technologies. (ML, NEGC)

Sienar, Narro

this man was the father of Raith Sienar, and was the chief executive officer of Sienar Technologies before he was killed in a explosion aboard a family starship near Dantooine. The explosion was caused by a group of mercenaries, who had been hired by the Xi Charians to eliminate Raith. Raith managed to escape before their ship blew up, but Narro did not survive. The board of directors of Sienar Technologies, upon learning of the ambush and Narro's death, turned over full control of Sienar Technologies to Raith. (NEGC, LEV)

Sienar, Raith

this man was the founder of Sienar Design Systems, and the designer of the basic courier ship which eventually became the Infiltrator. He was born around the same time as Wilhuff Tarkin, and the two grew up as friends within the complex social structure of the planet Coruscant. Raith was the son of Narro Sienar, and was part of a long line of industrialists who could trace their roots back to the warship producers of Empress Teta's Unification Wars. He was trained at the Rigovian Technical University, and his skills with starship design and construction were well-known, and Sienar ships were in high demand. In fact, it was one of Sienar's designs - the Expeditionary Battle Planetoid - which Tarkin eventually stole and claimed as his own which became the first Death Star. Sienar spent a considerable future buying 2,112 failed designs of his competitors, looking for new ideas which failed for simple reasons which could be adjusted to his own uses. In their early thirties, Tarkin convinced Sienar to join him in an attempt to take control of the planet Zonama Sekot. Tarkin hoped to gather one of the unusual Sekotan starships, but he also hoped to eliminate Sienar and gain favor with Supreme Chancellor Palpatine. He appointed Sienar a Commander, and gave him a small fleet led by the Admiral Korvin. Tarkin also assigned Ke Daiv as Sienar's assistant, a move which told Sienar he would be expendable if the mission failed. Until the end, though, Sienar was unaware that he was already expendable. He convinced the Blood Carver that Tarkin was only working for the good of humankind, and was able to turn Ke Daiv away from his assassination attempt. In the end, Ke Daiv was unable to recover a Sekotan starship, and Tarkin decided to attack Zonama Sekot and take control of it himself. Sienar struggled against Tarkin's plans, until the planet disappeared into hyperspace. Both Tarkin and Sienar was disgraced in the eyes of Palpatine, but both worked to turn the loss to their own advantage. Years later, Raith developed the basic outline of the T.I.E. starfighter, which became the design basis for the TIE fighter and its follow-on fighters. Unfortunately for Raith, his success created many jealous rivals, and it was believed that one of these rivals arranged for Raith's assassination during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (X1, RP, NEGC)

Siene Symm

this male Sullustan was the co-pilot of the modified Lantillian Deluxe short hauler, the Long Shot. He was obvious from most Sullustans by his gaudy clothing, which is considered tasteless by some of his acquaintances. Siene Symm is a natural con artist, and made his living taking credits from whoever was fool enough to part with them. When the Empire abducted him, Siene Symm was put to work as a starship mechanic. This provided him with invaluable skills and a burning hatred for the Empire. When he escaped and joined Ixsthmus's crew, he threw himself into this new line of work with great pleasure, which impressed Ixsthmus. Siene Symm's cunning side has also endeared him to his new employer, for it helps make negotiations easier. (SWCP)

Sienn

this was a common name given to Twi'lek females, and meant "maiden" in the Twi'leki language. (GCG)

Sienn

this Twi'leki female, a member of the Rha clan, was abducted by Bib Fortuna and sent to the best dancing schools in preparation for her presentation to Jabba the Hutt. Sienn was younger than her companion, Oola, and Fortuna's instructors had cultivated the image that Sienn was young and vulnerable. Her lekku were tattooed with floral patterns just before she landed on Tatooine. Once there, Sienn and Oola were approached by Luke Skywalker, who offered to rescue them from Jabba. While Oola couldn't make herself leave, Sienn escaped with Luke. (TJP, KT)

Sien'Soro

this band was popular during the height of the Clone Wars. Their transport convoy once ran into a Separatist blockade, and escaped only after Jedi Master Darrus Jeht arrived on the scene. The band was indebted to him, and was able to provide him with tickets to several upcoming shows. Jeht used the tickets to bring his fellow Jedi, Aayla Secura and Trilinae, to one of their concerts. (LFCW)

Siep-Irol

manufacturers of passive sensor arrays. (SCRE)

SIE-TIE Engine

developed by Sienar Advanced Systems and overseen by Republic Sienar Systems, this groundbreaking starship ion drive system was the forerunner of the modern twin ion engine system used on Imperial TIE fighters. Designed by Raith Sienar, the SIE-TIE system employed microparticle accelerators to agitate ionized gasses to relativistic velocities. One of the key features of the SIE-TIE was the fact that it had independently articulated ion stream deflector manifolds for pinpoint maneuvering accuracy. Like the modern TIE fighters, the SIE-TIE drew power from onboard solar panels. (HNN5)

Sif, Doak

this Corellian man and his brother, Hirsch, were combat veterans of a mercenary gang that was active during the early years of the New Order. When the Empire began to extend its power, the Sif brothers "retired" to Talus, where they established their own mercenary crew of Trandoshans. (SWGAL)

Sif, Erran

this Corellian woman was believed to have once been an Imperial spy, active during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Her primary role was to infiltrate the Alliance and report back on any information that might be useful. Sometime after the Battle of Yavin, it was learned that Erran was actually working for the Hutts, stealing information from both the Alliance and the Empire. She fled Corellia and went into hiding on Talus, where she was protected by her two brothers, Hirsch and Doak. (SWGAL)

Sif, Hirsch

this Corellian man and his brother, Doak, were combat veterans of a mercenary gang that was active during the early years of the New Order. When the Empire began to extend its power, the Sif brothers "retired" to Talus, where they established their own mercenary crew of Trandoshans. (SWGAL)

Sif'kric

this planet, the primary world in the Sif'kric System, was the home of the Sif'krie race. (SOP, VOF)

Sif'krie

this alien race was native to the planet Sif'kric. They were involved in a feud with the Frezhlix which began shortly after the Battle of Endor and lasted for the next fifteen years. It flared up after the revelation of the Caamas Document, when the Sif'krie supported the Drashtine Initiative and blocked the Frezhlix Senator from voting against it. (SOP, VOF)

Sifo-Dyas

it was believed that this being - a Jedi Knight of small renown - placed the first order for the cloned soldiers developed by the Kaminoans for the Army of the Republic. The order was placed around the time of the Battle of Naboo, directly to Lama Su himself, despite the fact that Master Sifo-Dyas was supposedly dead at that time. The Kaminoans believed that Master Sifo-Dyas hand-picked Jango Fett to serve as the genetic basis for the clone army, admiring his bounty hunting skills, discipline, and incredible attention to details. Yoda later revealed to Obi-Wan Kenobi that Master Sifo-Dyas had, in fact, placed the order for the clone army. Sifo-Dyas had foreseen the disenchantment of both Qui-Gon Jinn and his Master, Count Dooku, and realized that the Old Republic was going to experience a period of conflict. He had also seen the Jedi Order retreat within itself, becoming self-absorbed with its own neutrality. Sifo-Dyas became one of Dooku's closest friends, and Dooku's plans were something that he agreed with, but couldn't act upon. In secret, however, and without the consent of the Jedi Council, Master Sifo-Dyas traveled to Kamino to order the clones. An investigation on Kamino revealed more about Sifo-Dyas' plans, including physical evidence of his presence on the planet. Unfortunately, these investigations also led to the discovery that Count Dooku had murdered Sifo-Dyas shortly after the initial order was placed, allowing Dooku to choose the clone template: Jango Fett. (TCG1, AOTC, AOTCN, LEV)

Sifu mungu

this Sunesi phrase translates loosely to "He has touched you," and refers to the Maker's ability to work wonders through the Sunesi. (SWJ10)

Sifuchi

a planet. (WOA32)

Sif-Uwana

this planet was the homeworld of the Sif-Uwanai race. (SWJ7)

Sif-Uwana Council

Talon Kaarde claimed to be a part of this consortium whenever he used the alias Syndic Pandis Hart. (EGC, TFE)

Sif-Uwanai

this alien race was native to the planet Sif-Uwana, and are very "casual" with their money. (SWJ7)

Sig

this gas is one of the most common gases used for blasters. (CFG, GG2)

Sightline

this was the brand name of Incom's IN-344-B holographic targeting computer system. (SCRE, EGW)

Sigil

this was one of the many crystals used by the ancient Jedi Knights in the construction of a lightsaber. It was believed to have given the wielder the ability to cause more energy damage to an opponent. It was mined solely in the Sigil System. (KOTOR)

Sigil System

this star system was believed to have been the only source of sigil crystals, which could be used by the ancient Jedi Knights in the construction of a lightsaber. (KOTOR)

Sigma*-class Shuttle

this starship design was developed and manufactured by Koensayr during the early years of the New Order. The Sigma-class shuttle measured 21.6 meters in length, and could carry up to eight passengers and 100 metric tons of cargo. It required a pilot and co-pilot to operate, as well as a pair of gunners. The Sigma-class shuttle was eventually replaced by the more powerful Lambda-class shuttle. It was armed with a pair of turret-mounted laser cannons. (AIR)

Sign of the Tri-Forked Tongue

this seedy tavern was located in the underworld of the planet Coruscant, during the last years of the Old Republic. It was one of several businesses run by Hat Lo by himself, funded by profits he had skimmed from his agreements with the Hutts. The entrance to the tavern was denoted with a virtual-reality image of a huge monga serpent, its mouth open to reveal its three tongues. (BF6)

Signal Operating Instruction

this was a specialized datapad created by the military forces of the Old Republic, designed to carry all the current signs and countersigns used in combat. The datapad was updated each month, and loaded with the identification codes for every day of the month. All dates were cross-referenced to the date on Coruscant, so that each force with a datapad knew what day's codes to use. (JT)

Signal Your Surrender

this was the trademark song played by the band called Boss Code. (WSV)

Signaler

this subnode was generated by Kud'ar Mub'at to provide incoming ships with external information on where to land on the web. A snakelike subassembly, Signaler encircled the section of Mub'at's web set aside for starship docking, and had just enough intelligence to guide incoming ships to their berths. (MA)

Signature

produced by Paradour Enterprises, this scent synthesizer was developed to allow the user to create his or her own unique perfumes and scents, using thousands of stock fragrances as a base. (GFT)

Sigrit

this was a common name among Quarren females. It meant "cherished". (GCG)

Sigurd

a family of moisture farmers who were contemporaries with the Lars and Jensen families. (TME)

Sihan Peach

a fruit grown by the colonists of Sapella. (KO)

Si-hen

this female bird was native to the planet Gelgelar. They were raised for their eggs, and as a source of meat. (SWJ14)

Sihha

this young Bothan male was a student of astrogation at Garqi Ag University shortly after the Battle of Endor. He was a member of the resistance there, working with Dynba Tesc to throw off the Imperial yoke. (TFE, SWJ7)

Siin Suub

a Sullustan, and Chairman of the SoroSuub Corporation when it assumed leadership of Sullust and aligned itself with the Empire. (WSB)

Siiruulian Phantele

this was the name given to Max Rebo upon his birth. Siiruulian was the youngest of five offspring, and was also the runt of his family. His mother feared that he would waste away, since what food he consumed was immediately digested. He adopted the name Max Rebo at the behest of Evar Orbus, in an effort to make his name more accessible to humans. (SWI67)

Sika Peninsula

this spit of land was part of the Encheeko continent, on the planet Rodia, and extended into the Ioliu Sea. (SPG)

Sikadian Gardens

found on the planet S'krrr, this cultural landmark was created by the insectile S'krrr. Its exact age is unknown, but historians know that the Gardens have been around for thousands of years. No modern technology is used to maintain the gardens, which were built on the site of an ancient worshipping ground. Several insect-shaped statues mark where a cult of S'krrr worshipped the insects which they believed were gods. (GOF8)

Sik'ark'kuck

this Gree word literally means "Swallower," and is the name of the largest desert found on the planet Te Hasa. (SWJ8)

Sikes

this Alliance soldier accompanied Leia Organa, Luke Skywalker, and Han Solo to Kiva, in an effort to expose Project Starscream. Unfortunately for Sikes, he was consumed by the biological weapon known as Eppon. (GOF6)

Sikurd

this planet was the homeworld of the Sikurdian race. (SWMW)

Sikurdian

this alien race was native to the planet Sikurd. (SWMW)

Sikurdian Battle-Axe

a dangerous weapon, this was an unpowered axe created by the Sikurdians. (MC7, SWMW)

'sil

this suffix was added to a Bothan's family name to indicate the individual's affiliation to the Osil clan. (GCG, WOTC)

Sil Unch

this Neimoidian served as a communications officer during the blockade of the planet Naboo. Sil Unch specialized in the programming of droid command ships and droid control interfaces, and was known to have disliked taking orders from Daultay Dofine. Sil Unch perished in the Battle of Naboo. (YJC6, CCG15)

Sil Vaturha

this Twi'leki female was orphaned on Corellia and left to fend for herself. She was captured and sold into slavery, and was eventually purchased by Kaylo NaKuda. She found her calling while tinkering with speederbikes and swoops, and truly enjoyed the company of the mechanics and technicians who worked in Kuda's Compound. (WSV) commonly referred to as the "Sleep Inducer," this was Pacnorval's most advanced sonic weapon. It used hypersonic wave energy to disrupt a target's nervous system, rendering the target disoriented in a few seconds. (EGW)

SIL-50

Sil-50

see SIL-50 (AEG)

Sila

this Galacian was part of Deca Brun's political campaign team, during the democratic elections to determine Queen Veda's successor. (MOC)

Sila, Civ

this man was a frequent patron of the Coruscant underworld during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. He was often seen in the company of his friends, Zey Nep, Dixon Just, and Artuo Pratuhr. Civ Sila was portrayed by Trevor Tighe in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones. (SWI75)

Silais

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name meant "gatekeeper" or "caretaker". (GCG)

Silais

this Twi'lek was a representative of the Old Republic, and was dispatched to assist in bringing the planet Cerea in the Republic. He was not expecting the elders of the planet to resist becoming a member of the Republic. Silais spoke of the benefits the Republic could bring to what he considered a backwater world, but Ki-Adi-Mundi the elders remained stoic in their position. Despite their rebuffs of his efforts, Silais provided the technology which exonerated Ki of the murder of a young man and implicated Maj-Odo-Nomor. After the discovery of the Trade Federation's role in the import of technology to Cerea, Silais was recalled to Coruscant without warning. (PTR)

Silan

this creature was believed to be nothing more than a terrible legend, although Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi discovered a specimen on Arorlia during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. The silan was an immense, gray-skinned creature which was armed with a multitude of suckered tentacles, and its body was covered by many wide mouths filled with knife-like teeth. Despite his reverence for all living things, Qui-Gon was directed by the Force to kill the Silan. (T1)

Sil-ar

this is one of the six races of Tiss'shar. Sil-ar Tiss'shar are characterized by their diamond-shaped markings. (GG12)

Silas

this man was a member of the surviving Mandalorian Shocktroopers, working with Jaster Mereel and young Jango Fett after Vizsla and the Death Watch split from their band. Silas joined the Mandalorians after the split with the Death Watch, and had very little knowledge of their existence until the mission to Korda 6. There, Silas was one of a handful of Mandalorians to survive the ambush laid by Vizsla's forces. Unfortunately, Silas was captured by Count Dooku some ten years before the Battle of Geonosis and interrogated, so that Dooku could gather evidence and information on Jango Fett. (JFOS)

Sileen

a Mistryl warrior working with Manda D'ulin. She was the pilot of the Skyclaw, and survived the ambush in Gorno. (TME)

Silencer

this IntelStar communications jamming system allowed pirates, smugglers, and independent starship captains to block a nearby vessel's outside communications. (PP)

Silencer 1

Silencer 7

a "mature" World Devastator, the Silencer-7 was under the command of Titus Klev during the Battle of Calamari. This huge ship - the largest World Devastator ever seen - measured 3,200 meters in length, and stood 1,500 meters tall. It was manned by a crew of 23,684, with 1,975 gunners, 2,000 slaves, 1,600 droids, and could transport 8,803 troops and 1,500 pilots. It was armed with 125 heavy turbolaser batteries, 200 blaster cannons, 80 proton missile tubes, 15 ion cannons, and 15 tractor beam emplacements. The World Devastators were disabled by Luke Skywalker and R2-D2 when R2 was able to tap into the Master Command Codes and take control of the ships. R2 then programmed the World Devastators to destroy themselves. (DE1, DESB, NEGW)

Silent Blades

this group of pirates was eventually wiped out by Captain Kenit and the Far Orbit, but took out a full squadron of Imperial starfighters and caused considerable damage to the Far Orbit before succumbing. The survivors eventually formed the Tarnished Blades. (FOP)

Silent Meditation

this was a relaxation technique practiced by the Jedi Knights of the Old Republic. Most students learned the technique by the time they were five standard years old. (YDR)

Silent Voices, The

this was the term used by the Anzati race to describe the unusual auroral lights that were often seen in the skies of their homeworld of Anzat. Many Anzati claimed that the lights had voices, and could communicate with them in their minds. The Anzati did little to dispel these stories as myths of urban legends, since stories of the Silent Voices originated in the earliest recorded history of their race. The original Anzati believed that the Silent Voices were the disembodied spirits of their dead, and formed a vast collection known as the Sea of Memory. It was this Sea of Memory that later became associated with the idea of "soup". (RT)

Silent Water

a Mon Calamari cruiser commanded by Adar Tallon as the flagship of his Alliance fleet. (RC)

Silent, The

this mysterious group of veiled individuals began showing up in hospitals and medical facilities throughout the galaxy during the height of the Clone Wars. Their mission - which was communicated in writing and never spoken, thus the name of the group - was to assist doctors and surgeons in healing their patients simply by means of their presence. Members of The Silent always wore an identity-concealing osmotic veil when in the presence of the sick or injured, ostensibly to prevent transference of contagions. They never spoke, not even to each other, and took their meals in a private location. It was unknown how The Silent drew their strange power, but the evidence in their favor was startling. Those operating rooms and hospitals in which a member of The Silent was working experienced higher recovery rates than non-staffed facilities. Many believed that The Silent drew upon the Force, although the Jedi Order claimed no relation to The Silent. (MBS)

Silerian Stall

this starfighter maneuver requires a pilot to stall his ship's forward progress, causing pursuers to shoot past and in front of his ship. The pilot can then fire on them, rather than be fired upon by them. (XWWP)

Sileron

this is the first planet in the Veron System, and it has a radical axial tilt. This causes wild and violent seasonal changes. The plants and animals found on the planet have developed distinct cycles that coincide with the seasons. Sileron had two moons. (PG1)

Silicartha

this drug, developed on the planet Tatooine, was used to kill nuisance creatures and pests that dug into hydroponics and destroyed the meager crops of moisture farmers. (MC63)

Silicavore

native to the planet Kamur, this family of creatures consumed rocks as part of their diet. (COG)

Silika

this species of aliens was made of living stone, and was distinguished by their craggy faces and wide mouths. They were humanoid in shape, but had a third arm protruding from the center of their chests. To other species, individuals were indistinguishable. The Silika had many deep-rooted traditions, including using the same initials for children in a specific family unit, which seemed inane but were nonetheless treated with the utmost respect. (SWJ1)

Silika Water

a highly-potent alcoholic distillation created by the Silika race. (SWJ1)

Silky

this unicorn was native to the Forest Moon of Endor. It often pretended to be a loving, caring creature, in an effort to gain the confidence of its victims. Then, Silky would rob them of their most valuable possessions. (ECAR)

Sill

this name was given to female Zabrak, and meant "warm breeze". (GCG)

Sillizar, Gurion

this man spent much of his life trying to exact revenge on Doctor Evazan. Evazan killed seven members of his family by first poisoning them, then operating on them. Gurion attempted to kill Evazan in his castle laboratory, on the planet Ando, with three other brothers, but they all perished while trying to gain access to the castle. Gurion nearly killed Evazan, but he was killed in a fall from the roof of Evazan's castle. (TME, SWDB)

Sil'Lume

this weak, orange star is the central body in the Sil'Lume System, which included the planet Tol Ado and the Sil'Lume Asteroid Belt. (JH)

Sil'Lume Asteroid Belt

orbiting the star Sil'Lume, this huge asteroid field was considered fairly easy to navigate. This was because, despite a million planetoids and billions of smaller chunks of rock in the belt, there was a great deal of space between them all. The Sil'Lume Belt was incredibly wide, taking up millions of square kilometers of orbital real estate. Nearly 900,000 of the asteroids had been catalogued by their owners, and each was assigned a number and a name. The number corresponded to the order in which it was catalogued, and the name was that of the asteroid's first owner. Thus, 24 Tredway was the twenty-fourth asteroid catalogued in the Belt, and was originally owned by the Tredway family. Most of the asteroids in the Sil'Lume Belt were owned by miners and prospectors, until the Empire took control of the Belt and began taking taxes and other tariffs from the independent owners. (JH)

Silly Rabbit

this constellation of stars, which contained the Coachelle System, was located in the Mid Rim. (GMR4)

Silman Eel

an aquatic creature native to Yavin 4. (EVC)

Silooth

this normally docile creature, no larger than a womp rat, was altered by the ancient Sith alchemists to become a huge, ferocious predator. Its eight legs were strengthened and given huge talons, and its skin was altered to become covered with chitinous, armor plates. Its huge jaws gnashed as it moved, biting and consuming anything in its path. Although these creatures had excellent night-vision, the average silooth could only see things within ten meters of its location. Once it located prey, however, the silooth attacked furiously, and could actually spit acid in a wide spray in an effort to bring down its prey. This acid is stored within the creature in two separate sacs, and was inert until mixed and expelled. (DSSB)

Silttes

this was a common name among Quarren females. It meant "quiet". (GCG)

Siluria III

this planet was subjugated by the Empire, until Kaiya Adrimetrum rallied the inhabitants against the Imperial forces and deposed the local Governor, Quannith. (DARK, GG9)

Silurian Rodents

filthy rodents who live in dank cave connected by tunnels. (GG9)

Silver

an Alliance shuttle group destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Silver Arch Hotel and Casino

one of the Outer Rim's most popular resort locations. (GG9)

Silver Bolt

Erisson Flask's starship. (RC, TM)

Silver Bull

this Imperial container transport was assigned to the SpecWar manufacturing facility. (TIE)

Silver Claw

this was the name of Gchalla's personal starship. (PSPG)

Silver Egg

this was the name of Nandreeson's personal starship. (TNR)

Silver Falcon

this was the general name for V'Jar Technologies' V'Jar be' Mun De' B'Den rotorcraft. (GSE)

Silver Flow

the name given to the period of Alderaanian spring when the millions of glimmerfish eggs hatch. The abundance of tiny silver fish flooded the waterways, creating a flashing, silver flow. The Silver Flow was held as a planet-wide holiday on Alderaan, signifying the wonderful rebirth of life each spring. (ISU)

Silver Foil

this thin cable is a common connector found on swoops. (CFG)

Silver Forest of Dreams

located on the planet Kubindi, this forest is filled with giant trees which have huge, 20-meter-wide leaves. When the leaves fall in autumn, they float to the ground like giant rafts. (RF)

Silver Fur

this was the codename of the Alliance's chief undercover agent on Bespin's Cloud City, during the period between the Battle of Hoth and the Battle of Endor. An aging Bothan, Silver Fur was one of the agents charged with helping refugees of the Empire's occupation of Cloud City to the safeworld of Kaliska. Silver Fur was killed when Jodo Kast opened fire on the Alliance agents, hitting the Bothan square in the chest with a small missile. (GMR3)

Silver Koanwood

this exotic tree is found on very few worlds. A stand of them is maintained in the Lonatran Gardens. (SWJ8)

Silver One

this was Loh'khar's nickname for Platt Okeefe. (SWJ6)

Silver Sea

found on the planet Chandrila, this body of water was located near Mon Mothma's childhood home. Her mother was the governor of a port city along its coast, and she later redecorated her rooms on Coruscant to inspire her memories of the place. (KT)

Silver Speeder

a sleek racing landspeeder owned by Boba Fett, it was equipped with cutting lasers, harpoons, and a chainsaw shredder. (DCAR)

Silver Star

a luxury liner operative during the Galactic Civil War. (RPG)

Silver Station

this YsreTech Mining Outpost Station was located in a hidden position within the Doldur Sector. Located near the Dragonflower Nebula, it was originally known as Machenry Station, and was established to mine the nebula of gases. It measured 400 meters in length, and is comprised of a central tube surrounded by interconnected cylinders. After Una Poot and her second husband renamed it to Silver Station, it became a secret base of operations for Alliance activity occurring in the Doldur Sector. (SWJ6)

Silver Unifir

this is the official title given to the brotherhood of the Pedducian Warlords. (POT)

Silver-backed Fish

a species of fish native to the moon Yavin 8. They are consumed by adult Melodies. (LW)

Silverblade

this was the Yuuzhan Vong's name for Corran Horn. (DTR)

Silverblade Squadron

this Alliance X-Wing squadron was based out of outpost DVL-181, on the planet Aracara. (HAS)

Silver-class Engine

see Type 7 Hyperdrive (RP)

Silver-class Starship

this class of starship used Type 7 hyperdrives, which were specially designed for it by Haor Chall. (RP)

Silverhand

this was the nickname given to H-9PO. (SWJ11)

Silverhorn

this tree, native to the planet Cularin, was noted for its tightly-grained wood. This wood was used to carve all manner of objects, including unique blaster handles. (LFCW)

Silverjaw

this was another name for the C'Oon Bel of Gorothe Prime. (GSE)

Silver-nape Beetle

this flying insect, named for the silver color at the base of its head, was native to the planet Dagobah. Silver-nape beetles often burrowed into gnarl-trees to make their homes. (IWS)

Silvertreads

this was the name used by Han Solo to describe the primary droid which served the masters of the Nova Prince. It resembled a beefed-up version of the basic Treadwell platform, with a large dome in place of the manipulator arms. (LTA2)

SilverWing Squadron

designated 20/181, this was one of two starfighter squadrons commanded by Vel Terno and assigned to protect space station 2LC/Blue during the Galactic Civil War. (FOP)

Silverwood

this tree grows in the forests of the planet Kubindi. The silverwood is named for its highly reflective bark. The bark is not mirror-like in its reflectivity, but it does seem to glow with reflected light. (SWJ10)

Silvu Donte

this Advosze was a member of the powerful Zorrsin family, and represented his homeworld of Riflor to the Galactic Senate, during the last years of the Old Republic. (GMR4)

Silvuit Corporation

this subcontractor of Sienar Fleet Systems was used in the design of the Lambda-class shuttle. They emerged from obscurity after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn to produce the Svelte-class shuttle and the Vibre-class cruiser. (JASB, SOG)

SIM

see Systems Infiltration Manager (GOF10)

Sim, Balthazar

this noted smuggler and mercenary was known for his ability to cover up his tracks. During the height of the New Order, Sim was hired by the Imperial financiers of Aucellis Park to clean up the mess which occurred when a shipment of the drug known as "pleaz-mo" was stolen and planted in the food and beverages of a dinner party. Unfortunately for both parties, Sim was caught on a security tape, and found himself pursued by his old rival, Evin Telbre. Several years earlier, Sim was implicated in the death of one of Telbre's friends on Coruscant, as part of his activities to cover up a conspiracy. Sim evaded capture, although Telbre continued to follow his activities. When Sim stole a crystalline corsage from a victim, he failed to realize that the corsage contained a tracking device which was designed to locate its original owner. Telbre learned of the theft, and used the corsage's transmissions to locate Sim while he was en route to Keriba VI. A group of agents, assisting Telbre, located Sim and his commander, Hoogi Grym, beneath the Cavern's Delight ride at Aucellis Park, sparking a wild chase through the attraction and the Imperial facility beneath it. Grym used lies and deceit to enable a hasty escape, leaving Sim behind to be captured. In order to gain a measure of revenge, Sim agreed to tell Telbre and his associates about the true nature of Aucellis Park. (WOA27)

Simcronics

this specialty manufacturer produced several models of personal shielding systems, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GFT)

Sim-First

this was the name of the first settlement established on the abandoned world of Simpla-12, after the planet had been strip-mined by the Old Republic. No other settlement had ever been established, and Sim-First simply spread out from its center and eventually covered a great deal of the planet. (EVE)

Simik System

this area of the galaxy was controlled by the Empire during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (AIR)

Simito, Siro

this charismatic man was born into the Vallaido pirate clan, and spent much of his childhood manning turbolasers on pirate vessels. When he was forced to kill four of Gorbu Dalo's henchmen during a boarding exercise, he began to rethink his involvement with the pirate group. He retired from active duty, and was soon employed by Pann Tefilous as a starship racer. He excelled as a racer, and remained neutral as the Galactic Civil War spread through the Outer Rim Territories. He was forced to change his stance when Yearo Seville and his gang allied themselves with the Empire and used Imperial warships to destroy the Vallaido fleet. Simito allied himself with the Alliance and offered his services as a courier. His skills as a racer, and his fast ship - the Axe - allowed him to take sidetrips during a race, in order to make his drops and still finish at the top of the leaderboard. (CRO)

Simiyar-class Light Freighter produced by the Mon Calamari shipyards, this 26.3-meter freighter was built to transport up to 150 metric tons of cargo and eight passengers, with just a single pilot controlling the ship's functions. (AIR)

Simms, Merrick

this young starfighter pilot served the Alliance at Dantooine, in the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. A disciplined and controlled pilot, he successfully led Alliance forces in a victory against the Empire about a year before the destruction of the first Death Star. This victory earned him the rank of Captain. (RA)

Simonelle

this Ingoian created Guri from the plans stolen from the Alliance's Project Decoy. A noted leader in the field of automatons, Simonelle used the nine million credits he received for Guri to create a replica droid of himself, in order to avoid Xizor's plans to ensure Guri's uniqueness. Simonelle's planning paid off, for Xizor later sent Guri to dispatch him. She effectively killed the replica droid, and Simonelle fled to an hiding. (SSE, SESB)

Simons

this man served as helmsman on the bridge crew of the Errant Venture, during the raid on the Imperial Ubiquitorate base at Yaga Minor. Led by Garm Bel Iblis, the raid was designed to obtain a copy of the Caamas Document. (VOF)

Simoom

a desert region located on the forest moon of Endor, it is the home of the phlogs. (ECAR)

Simpla-12

a remote planet, Simpla-12 was considered one of the most notoriously criminal planets in the galaxy. The planet had been strip-mined of its natural resources and abandoned by the Old Republic, and eventually became a haven for outcasts and smugglers. Over time, a thriving black market community evolved. Simpla-12 orbited a weak sun, and it was continually shrouded by dense cloud cover. (DH, EVE)

Simple Homes

these buildings were used by the Zanazi of the Cosmic Balance religion as places where adherents could live and work in their faith. Led by Home Mothers and Fathers, every member of a Simple Home had specific duties to perform. Additionally, each member of the Home had to regularly deny themselves of some necessity in order to cleanse their spirits. (TBSB)

Simpson, Mason

this noted mathematician was a professor at the Salis D'arr Academy. In the aftermath of the Battle of Bakura, Simpson was consulted by the New Republic to investigate the Ssi-ruuk's mathematics. Simpson and his team discovered that the Ssi-ruuk once used a system based on the number twelve, ostensibly because they had a total of twelve digits on their hands and feet. However, Simpson's team learned that the Ssi-ruuvi computers were base-10. Simpson concluded that the Ssi-ruuk simply got lazy, and simply adopted technology from the greater galaxy. (TBSB)

Simran Hit-trap

this device is used to screen visitors to a building or room. It is used to detect the presence of weapons and explosives. (MJEH)

Sims, Tigor

this man was a member of the Alliance's intelligence agency during the years following the Battle of Yavin. He suddenly disappeared while en route to the command base aboard Home One, during a mission to recover datafiles on the reconstruction efforts being taken by the Imperial military to rebuilt itself after the destruction of the first Death Star. His ship crashlanded on Granus IV, and a team was sent to recover the datafiles. (RESB)

Simsoft

this is military slang for the software which gets loaded into a flight simulator. It defines the mission, the opponent's strength and configuration, and the the artificial intelligence necessary to simulate the opponent's actions. (XWES)

Simula-Scenery

this was a brand of specialized form of wallscreen, which could be programmed to display a wide range of backdrops for a room. Simula-Screens were popular in casinos and restaurants during the height of the New Order, allowing the owners to change their décor quickly and regularly, in order to maintain interest with their customers. (MC20)

Simunition

this was a specialized form of ammunition that was created for the training of the clone troopers produced on Kamino for the Grand Army of the Republic. Combat instructors were forced to recognize that they had just a few years to get the clones ready for combat, and took advantage of technology whenever possible. Simunition was essentially pretend ammunition, so it wouldn't permanently harm any individual it hit. However, it delivered a nasty hurt when it struck, so that a clone knew when it was hit. By using simunition, combat instructors trained the clones to shoot their weapons instinctively, rather than by relying on targeting technology. (RCHC)

Simus

this ancient Sith Lord was one of the most powerful of his era. He trained the Sith magician Naga Sadow while in his prime. However, he was defeated in battle by Marka Ragnos and fated to die. Simus had other plans, and used the Dark Side magic of the Sith to preserve himself. His head was encased in a specialized, crystalline container, and he existed this way for another century before Ragnos died. When Ludo Kressh and Sadow began fighting over the rulership of the Sith Empire, it was Simus who urged Kressh to consider the possibility that Jori and Gav Daragon were truly hyperspace mappers, and not advanced scouts for the Old Republic. When Kressh refused, Simus gave his support to his former student, Naga Sadow. This trust proved to be short-lived, for Sadow had Simus killed as part of the deception surrounding his plans to become the Dark Lord of the Sith. (GAS)

Simus Minor

this star was the central body of the Simus Minor System, located in the Outer Rim Territories beyond the Tion Hegemony. (WOA32)

Simus Minor Belt

this asteroid belt marked the outer edge of the Simus Minor System, orbiting Simus Minor beyond the path of Muskree. (WOA32)

Simus Minor I

this barren, rocky world was the innermost planet of the Simus Minor System. (WOA32)

Simus Minor II

this planet was the second world of the Simus Minor System. (WOA32)

SimuTunnel

a point-to-point hyperspace connection, these pathways - in conjunction with S-threads - were used to connect the various star systems linked via the HoloNet. (ISB)

Sin Shai

this was a noted member of the Nagai race. (UANT)

Sin Suub

this Sullustan was one of the chairbeings of SoroSuub Corporation, during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. (AIR)

Sinal

this ball of searing rock was the innermost planet of the Bacrana System. (FBS)

Sinan Mat

this Yuuzhan Vong warrior was part of the group which was dispatched to Yavin 4 to capture the students at the Jedi praxeum. A Field Commander in the military, Sinan Mat was able to discover Anakin Skywalker's whereabouts, after the young Jedi escaped from the training complex. However, Anakin's control of the Force allowed him to call down a swarm of piranha-beetles on Sinan Mat, who was unable to repel the attack. The beetles tore the flesh from his bones, and Sinan Mat was eaten alive. (EVC)

Sin-bullet

this was the name given to the gullet-stones which were coughed up by Vashan bodhis, as part of an unusual religious ceremony that took place at Inicus Mont, on the moon of Mina, every mid-winter. The bodhis of Mina coughed up the polished stones from their six antestomachs, spraying them around the base of Inicus Mont. Vashan pilgrims then rushed to acquire the sin-bullets, an event that often led to fighting. However, it was believed that any Vashan who consumed a sin-bullet and crushed it in their true stomach would be absolved of any sins they had made during the previous year. Thus, the pilgrimage to Mina was a highly religious and spiritual event for the Vashan people. (GMR9)

Sinded

General Crix Masst was assassinated by Morteos on this planet. (WBC)

Sinewy Ana Blue

this smuggler plied the trade from a base in the Smuggler's Run. She earned her nickname from the blue replacement tooth she wore. She is an old acquaintance of Han Solo, having dealt a number of sabacc matches in which Solo won a great deal of credits. She always thought he was lucky, but couldn't ever link up with him. Eventually, as the Empire crumbled and the Hutts lost control of the Run, Ana went to work for the Glottalalphib crimelord Nandreeson. She worked with Zeen Afit, Kid DXo'la, and the Wookiee Wynni, and was secretly in love with the rogue Davis. She met up with Solo once again when he came to the Run to investigate Jarril's death. Like her colleagues, she pretended to befriend Solo in an effort to bring him to Nandreeson. However, her conscience got the best of her, and she helped Han rescue Lando Calrissian from Nandreeson. Her life took a rough turn, though, when stolen droids - meant to be on Coruscant as part of Dolph's plans - exploded all over the Run. Ana was injured, but Davis was killed in the explosion. (TNR)

Sing, Advisors, Sing!

this was one of the trivial, pro-Imperial dramas produced by Ahric Korownosek and the NovaCluster Players, during the height of the New Order. (SS)

Sing, Necil

this dark-skinned woman, distinguished by the jeweled veil she wore across her face, was a regular patron of Coruscant's Outlander Club during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. (SWI75)

Singfruit

this unusual tree grows on the planet Di'wor. When it pollinates, the tree gives off a strange song as an attractant. The annual pollination attracts tourists from around the galaxy. The tree itself produces a tasty fruit. (SOP)

Singing Lamp

this was a form of functional art which was created by the Jumerian race. (AFA)

Singing Mountain

this settlement was the home of a witch clan by the same name, on Dathomir. (CPL)

Singing Mountain Clan

this clan of Force-using witches on Dathomir was one of the first to be raided by Brakiss and Tamith Kai, during their early "recruiting" for the Shadow Academy. (DK)

Singing Plant

this plant, distinguished by its glistening leaves, was native to the equatorial regions of the planet Ansion. (APS)

Singing Savrip

this freighter was owned and operated by Hagk Baht, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (WOA6)

Single Trooper Aerial Platform

see STAP (X1)

Single Trooper Compact Assault Vehicle

this small, armored land machine was designed for use by Imperial stormtroopers. It was developed with enough defenses and firepower that a single stormtrooper could use it to control a large amount of space on undeveloped worlds which could offer little resistance. (MMY)

Single-celery Soda

this is a favored beverage of the Ugor race. (SH)

Singularity

this highly-modified Imperial-class Star Destroyer was controlled by the Imperial agent known only as Blackhole, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Its armor plating was coated with a stygium-triprismatic polymer that made it virtually impossible to detect using standard sensor systems. It was armed with 60 turbolasers, 60 ion cannons, and 10 tractor beam projectors. (GMR5, RESB)

Singularity Mine

this Yuuzhan Vong weapon was essentially a miniature dovin basal - an organic black hole - contained in the shell of a normal explosive. When activated, the singularity mine exerted an incredibly strong, highly focused gravity field, sucking anything in close proximity into the black hole. (SBS, NJOSB)

Sinidic

Drom Guldi's aide, he was a nervous little man with faded blonde hair and faint wrinkles covering his skin. He is killed by a Wampa on Hoth, when the beast slipped inside their base unnoticed and attacked him in a storeroom. (DS)

Siniteen

this humanoid race is characterized by their huge craniums, which are ridged and convoluted as if their brains were directly under their skin. They have incredible mental abilities, and can process huge calculations in their heads. (CCG2)

Sinjaffe

this childhood disease sometimes struck young members of the Bitthaevrian race, and was almost always fatal. (AIR)

Sinjan Outpost

this was one of the Alliance's many bases, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ10)

Sink Crab

a life form native to the rocky islands of Bestine IV, these crustaceans use several swim bladders to help propel themselves through the water. (SWSB, EGP)

Sink Hole, The

this was the name given to a section of the Agrilat Swamp Circuit, one of the most popular swoop racing courses of the New Order. (SWGAL)

Sinkar

located in the Lawreys System, this frigid world barely supported life. Much of the oxygen on the planet was frozen on the planet's surface, making carbon-based life impossible. However, the planet was the homeworld of the Sinkar race. The Empire garrisoned the planet, although the exact reason for their presence on the planet was never discovered. (SWCP)

Sinkar

this species of helium-based slug creatures was native to the inhospitable world of Sinkar, and resembled huge, black amoebas. These huge creatures crawled across the surface of Sinkar, living on solar energies and minerals scraped from the ground. They were believed to live for an extremely long time, and many believed that their minds held many of the secrets of the universe. However, the Sinkar were also known as slow and ponderous thinkers, and obtaining even tiny bits of information from them could take years. (SWCP)

Sinker

this young man, born two years after the Battle of Endor, was one of the many smugglers - known as Huxlings - who worked for Jerf Huxley. When Huxley tried to bully Mara Jade Skywalker into surrendering 500,000 credits from Talon Karrde, Sinker was ordered to take Mara's lightsaber. Mara used the Force to ignite the weapon in his hands, then move it about wildly while he tried to control it. This distraction allowed Mara's husband, Luke Skywalker, to arrive on the scene. After the Skywalkers gained control of the situation, Sinker was forced to turn the lightsaber back over to Mara. (SQ)

Sinking Stone

a Stellar Mag V mining vessel used on Jatee. (SN)

Sinn, Jahren

this man, a farmer from the planet Nez Peron, married Mirith Sinn. He was elected to speak for the farmers of his nation, in an effort to convince the planetary government to align with the New Republic. When Imperial forces demanded that Jahren provide them with supplies, he refused, and was executed for hindering their efforts. (CE, CE2)

Sinn, Mirith

this strikingly beautiful, red-haired woman was the leader of the New Republic's forces in the sector of space controlled by the Imperial garrison on Phaeda. Her base of operations was on Phaeda itself. A one-time native of the planet Nez Peron, she was married to Jahren Sinn when Imperial forces decided to stop at his farm for supplies. They tried to take what they wanted from Jahren, but he refused. The Imperial troops shot him dead on the spot, and Mirith escaped only because the troops were too busy stealing supplies to notice. She dedicated her life to the destruction of the Empire, joining the Alliance just before the Battle of Endor, and rising quickly to the rank of Commander. However, her skills were more in Intelligence and counter-insurgency rather than battle tactics. When Tem Merkon told her about the existence of Kir Kanos, she decided to bring the former Imperial into her organization. She was met with resistance from Massimo, who challenged her to a duel. When Colonel Shev discovered location of her stronghold on Phaeda, she tried to rally her troops but instead sent part of her force too far. She ignored the warnings of her second-in-command, Sish Sadeet, and nearly lost the battle. Kir Kanos took control of the fight, quickly dispatching Shev's stormtroopers. She offered to get him off-planet on the Millennium Falcon, for she was a friend of Han Solo. Kanos declined, and Sinn set about moving her forces to Collo Fauale. She also donned a cloak and tried to draw Imperial forces away from Kanos' escape, hoping to use Merkon's treacherous double-cross to her advantage. She was captured in Kanos' place, but was severely tortured by General Wessel's forces and Carnor Jax himself. After Jax let her go, she followed Kanos to Yinchorr where she and Sish Sadeet eliminated Blim before he could kill Kanos. They then tried to take Jax alive, but Kanos killed him in combat. When Sish Sadeet tried to kill Kanos for not keeping Jax alive, Kanos also killed Sadeet in defense. He then left Yinchorr to plan his next move. Mirith, angered by the loss of Jax and Sadeet, vowed to hunt down and destroy Kanos. She employed the services of Grappa the Hutt, in an effort to locate and eliminate Kanos. While in his employ, she discovered that Grappa held the real Feena D'Asta captive. Mirith's fiance had done business with Feena's father. She tried to free D'Asta, and was assisted in her rescue by a cloaked assassin. However, Mirith was confronted by Grappa himself, who had learned from Massimo that she was secretly trying to break Grappa's piracy ring which had been plaguing New Republic ships. Grappa had both Mirith and Massimo turned over to the Zanibar for betraying his trust. She was rescued from certain death by Kir Kanos, and they left Massimo to die a traitor's death. They then fled the Zanibar camp, and Sinn was rescued by Kennede's son. She later rescued Kanos from Grappa the Hutt, when she imprisoned Grappa and recovered the real Feena D'Asta. Mirith then contacted the Baron D'Asta and returned his daughter, then helped Kanos eliminate Xandel Carivus. She tried to convince the Baron to side with the New Republic, but he chose to lead his sector of space by himself. They did remain friends, however. She met with a similar failure when she tried to convince Kir Kanos to stay with her. He chose to leave, knowing in his heart that he would always be an Imperial while she was loyal to the Republic. (CE, CE2)

Sinni

this was a common Psadan name. (UANT)

Sinosai

native to the planet Ithor, this highly intelligent predator had unusual teeth. The outer covering of the teeth was shed like skin, and each tooth maintained several layers at one time. (TBSB)

Sinsang

this industrial world was located in the Raioballo Sector of the galaxy. (GMR7)

Sintalta, Derembus

this man served the Alliance for many years, after years of distinguished service to the Old Republic. He continually refused to be promoted to a desk job, in order to remain working as a field agent. Shortly before the Battle of Hoth, Sintalta held the rank of Commander, and served in Midnight Squadron, the heavy weapons division of Eclipse Team. (AIR)

Sinthenol

this drug, developed during the last years of the Old Republic, was believed to counteract the affects of alcohol in the systems of many humanoid races. With the correct dosage, a being could imbibe in large quantities of alcohol without suffering any of the long-lasting effects on the brain. (MJH)

Sinthia Pulchatt

this Kibnon spice merchant worked as a liaison between her own boss and Jabba the Hutt. She worked in Mos Eisley. (GG7)

Sinton

a planet which was subjugated by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War, General Sulamar claimed to be in command of the Imperial forces that route the planet's defenses. (DS)

Sinya

this was a common name given to Twi'lek females, and meant "darkness" in the Twi'leki language. (GCG)

Sinya

this white-skinned Twi'lek female served as Darnada's personal bodyguard, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. She was distinguished by the scar which ran across her left eye, and wore the traditional lekku wrappings of a dancer. It was Sinya who claimed that Darth Maul was nothing but a common assassin, when the Sith Lord arrived on Darnada's space station to eliminate any being who had been in contact with Hath Monchar. However, she soon learned that Maul was much more, and was killed when Maul eliminated every being on the space station. (DM)

Sio

this species of tree towered above the jungles of its native planet, Joralla. (PG1)

Siolo

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name meant "poet". (GCG)

Siolo Ur Manka

this Twi'le Jedi Master left Coruscant for the Jentares System more than seventy years before the Battle of Naboo, in an effort to separate himself from the rest of the galaxy and meditate on the Force. During the time he spent at the Jedi Temple, he was considered among the best Jedi warriors of the time. However, just before leaving for Jentares, Siolo Ur Manka renounced his lightsaber and set out to contemplate a purer technique. Darth Sidious ordered his apprentice, Darth Maul, to assassinate Siolo Ur Manka, but the Twi'lek managed to disarm Darth Maul with little more than a wooden stick. It was rumored that this defeat caused Maul to develop his two-bladed lightsaber, since the single-bladed weapon he had used against Siolo Ur Manka had been ineffective. Rather than creating a single weapon, though, Maul welded two lightsabers together at the base, creating a weapon with the element of surprise. Maul returned to the Jentares System shortly afterward, to complete his mission. When Siolo Ur Manka again bested Maul in combat, the Sith apprentice activated the second blade and killed the Twi'lek. Darth Sidious was impressed with Maul's skills and his creation of the two-bladed lightsaber. (T10)

Siolu Sporipri

this being was the Mayor of the city of Lagabee, on the planet Ord Tiddell, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Sione, Marcus

this youth was regarded as one of the most talented freelance tech specialists on the planet Kuat, during the height of the New Order. Just thirteen years old at the time of the Battle of Yavin, Marcus was known as "The Wizard" among his peers. For this reason, the Empire tried to have him abducted and imprisoned, but to no avail. Marcus always seemed to have an escape route, and many believed that he must have been sensitive to the Force. His primary adversary, Lucius Rothingham, made a career out of trying to capture Marcus. Siren III

this modified Aavman Extravagance 11-S space yacht was owned and operated by Leger DeMain. Much of the ship's original infrastructure was gutted and rebuilt to accommodate the traveling revue, with the entire bow dedicated to a large stage. The original 24 staterooms were converted to dressing rooms and living quarters for the members of DeMain's troupe. The middle engine was removed and replaced with a mocked-up cargo hold, and a small shuttle hidden among the escape pods for emergency escapes. (CRO)

Sires Vant

this Devaronian male was known as a criminal and loanshark during the early years of the New Republic. He was a member of Valis Lorn's organization, and controlled much of the underworld money-lending on the planet Andasala. (GG11)

Sirhka

this Noghri was one of the group which accompanied Corran Horn and Jacen Solo to Garqi, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Sirhka later assisted in helping Ganner Rhysode recover from the facial wounds he suffered in battle with Krag Val. (DTR)

Siri

this smuggler felt that a C4LR litigation droid might be useful as an astromech replacement, given the C4LR's flawless memory. Siri worried, however, that the C4LR would suddenly remember that it was once programmed for use by the Empire, and call in the nearest Imperial patrol to arrest the smuggler and recover the droid. (FTD)

Sirilla

this gas giant was the fourth, and outermost, planet in the Cirius System. It was orbited by seventeen moons. (WOTC)

Siringana

this huge, reptilian predator was native to the planet N'zoth. These beasts had four three-taloned legs, a pair of clawed arms, and a spiked tail. Their mouths were filled with dagger-like teeth, and were considered to be as brutal as the Yevetha. The Yevetha themselves revered the siringana with a kind of holy awe, seeing the creature as the perfect killing machine. (EGP, CCW)

Sirpar

this arid world, located in the Arkanis Sector, had a gravity which was 1.25 times heavier than standard, and was used by the Empire as an Army training post. It was the homeworld of the Eklaad race, and had an ecosystem that was filled with hardy flora and fauna. The Empire chose Sirpar for its varied terrain and environments, established eight distinct training centers. The heavy gravity made the Imperial trainees that much stronger, earning Sirpar a prominent place in Imperial circles. (SWJ2, SWMW)

Sirpar Hills

this was the name of the hillside country that surrounded the Anaxes Citadel, on the planet Anaxes. Most of the Sirpar Hills were covered with the estates of families whose members had provided generations of officers to the naval defense of the galaxy, both during the Old Republic and the New Order. In order to preserve the natural beauty of the landscape, motorized vehicles were forbidden within the borders of the Sirpar Hills. Most residents maintained stables of keffi, which they rode between Sirpar Station and their homes. (CCW)

Sirrakuk

Lowbacca's younger sister, she was a free spirit who didn't want to conform to her family's idea of normal. Although she didn't resent her brother's ability with the Force, she chafed at the idea of simply working in the local factories on Kashyyyk. In open defiance of her family's wishes, she shaved her fur in intricate patterns in order to make herself different. She hoped that her parents would realize her desires for an adventurous life. Sirra wanted to spend her life among the stars, much like her uncle Chewbacca. She shared this dream with her best friend, Raabakyysh. Sirra was shaken by the disappearance of Raaba, who was never found after the young Wookiee tried to prove her adulthood by venturing into the lower jungles without Sirra. Shortly afterward, Sirra decided that it was time to prove her own adulthood. Lowie returned to Kashyyyk to accompany her, but their plans were cut short by the Shadow Academy's raid on the Wookiee factories. The Imperials succeeded in gaining essential computer and starship components used by the New Republic, but Lowie and Sirra had their own success. They battled the Nightsister Vonnda Ra in the depths of Kashyyyk's jungles, and both Sirra and Vonnda Ra fell into the clutches of a syren plant. With the help of Jacen Solo and Tenel Ka, Lowie managed to rescue his sister before the plant captured her. Vonnda Ra was eaten by the plant, but not before Sirra managed to obtain some of the tough, silky fibers from the plant's interior. Thus, she had proved her bravery to Lowie and her parents, and was recognized as an adult for her bravery. As the struggle with the Diversity Alliance intensified, Sirrakuk was captured and held on Ryloth with Lusa, Lowbacca, and several other non-human friends of Jaina and Jacen Solo. They were eventually freed. (DK, TEP)

Sirrik Olyeg

this female Chagrian earned the respect of Hugo Bartyn as a boat captain on the planet Lamaredd, many centuries before the Galactic Civil War. After toiling for nearly two decades as an underpaid laborer, she finally earned the right to pilot her own ship. However, she was not blind to the fact that Bartyn was a pro-human bigot who only kept his alien workforce on-hand because they were invaluable assets. Olyeg quietly began to foment unrest among the other non-human ship captains, and was instrumental in staging several work stoppages that attracted the attention of Bartyn. It was Olyeg who demanded a meeting with Bartyn, and he was forced to agree to her terms in order to maintain his business. Among the concessions were the ceding of Jotsen's Island to the Union and the opening of large portions of The Ring to non-human inhabitants. Because of her work, Olyeg was named the first chairbeing of the Sailor's Union. However, Bartyn never forgave her for putting him into a bargaining position, and eventually ordered her assassination. (GMR7)

Sirrus

this man was one of the Jedi Masters assigned to the task force which was dispatched to liberate the planet Jabiim from Separatist force, during the height of the Clone Wars. Master Sirrus and his Padawan, Aubrie, were kept near the front lines to help ensure the health and safety of the Republic's forces. (RBJ)

this Ho'Din physician was once an assistant to Doctor T'jaleq Kith'Araquia. (SWJ1)

Sirty

this was the nickname used by the ARC trooper designated CT-36/732, during the height of the Clone Wars. During the height of the Clone Wars, trooper CT-36/732 was the first of his kind to face a JK-series security droid in combat, although it was in a demonstration at the T'Chuk Arena on Coruscant. Sirty was soundly defeated by the droid, known as JK-13, which captured him after a mere twenty seconds of effort. Sirty suffered little physical damage, although his nervous system was overloaded, causing an irregular heart beat for several hours. His experiences earned him the notice of the ARC trooper known as Nate, who was forming a group to accompany Obi-Wan Kenobi and Kit Fisto to Ord Cestus to investigate the production of the JK-series droids. Nate recognized the knowledge Sirty might have, and requested his presence on the team. Sirty helped Kit Fisto and Nate train the commandos of the Desert Wind terrorist group, and was among the survivors who managed to escape their lair when Asajj Ventress sent a group of infiltration droids to destroy them. When Nate's body was not recovered, they feared that Nate had been killed, or had broken the Code and betrayed them all in the first place. (TCD)

Sirul Rosk

this was the name of a noted Shistavanen individual. (UANT)

Sisar Run

this hyperspace trade route was controlled by Sprax and Black Sun during the Galactic Civil War. The Run cut through the heart of the Periphery, linking Tharin Sector with Hutt Space. It ran along the borders of Hutt space, a situation which led to animosity between the vigos Sprax and Durga. It started at Nwarcol Point, where it connected with the Salin Corridor, then traveled through Sriluur to Terman Station before terminating at Sespe. (SSR)

Sise Fromm

an Annoo-dat, Sise Fromm was a powerful crime boss from the planet Annoo during the early years of the New Order. He controlled most of the planet by fear, having sent the Trigon One weapons satellite into orbit around the planet. He wanted Thall Joben and his friends killed for angering him, and so he employed Boba Fett to kill them in the speeder races on Boonta. Fromm, covering all his bases, also planted a bomb on Joben's speeder. When Fett tried to kill Joben during the races, he activated a magnet in order to draw Joben nearer. However, the magnet dislodged Fromm's bomb, and Fett was nearly destroyed. In his anger, Fett captured Sise Fromm and his entire gang, and turned them over to Jabba the Hutt. (DCAR)

Sish

this was one of the more common, albeit archaic, names used by Trandoshan hunters. Like most Trandoshan names, it was reserved for males, but could be adopted by those rare females who became hunters. In the Trandoshan language, the name meant "swims through fire", and referred to an ancient Trandoshan test of courage and endurance. (GCG)

Sish Sadeet

this green-skinned Trandoshan was a member of the New Republic's forces, and was assigned as Mirith Sinn's second-in-command on the planet Phaeda. He had fled Trandosha by stowing away on an Imperial transport, but was left to die on Mook IX when he was discovered. There, he met up with Mirith Sinn, who nursed him back to health and convinced him to join the New Republic. A suspicious creature, Sadeet thought it very unwise for Sinn to bring Kir Kanos into their group. However, he accepted her orders. This did not stop him from disliking Kanos, especially when the human scoffed at the defenses Sadeet had established to protect their hideout. In the end, Sadeet learned that the real traitor to their operation was Tem Merkon, and after the New Republic had freed Phaeda from Imperial control, he accompanied Mirith Sinn to Yinchorr. She hoped to find Kanos again, and Sadeet hoped to regain an ally. They arrived just in time to eliminate Blim, who was trying to shoot Kanos. Kanos then killed Jax in battle. Sadeet and Sinn had hoped to take Jax alive, in order to extract information about the Empire from him. When Kanos killed him, Sadeet grew angry and tried to attack Kanos. The former Imperial Guard anticipated Sadeet's attack, and speared the Trandoshan with a jab of his double-bladed sword. Sadeet died next to Jax, and Mirith vowed to kill Kanos for the unnecessary death. (CE, HCE)

Si-shae-ral

this was one of the many Eickarie tribes native to the planet Kariak, during the height of the New Republic. The Si-shae-ral was one of the strongest and most influential tribes, having produced some of the more prominent leaders in Eickarie history. Just before the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Haran was revealed to be a Prince of the tribe, nominally the leader of his people. (FB) this Samuac graduated from the Galactic Outdoor Survival School before joining the Alliance as a scout and tracker. His wilderness skills eventually earned him a promotion to the rank of Major, shortly before the Battle of Hoth. He later served the Alliance at the Suolriep Sector headquarters on his homeworld of New Kiske, serving as an instructor and field agent. (AIR)

this Mon Calamari starship pilot and former oceanographer was enslaved by an Imperial officer named Farvakine and forced to work on the planet Tatooine during the height of the New Order. In order to avoid dying from dehydration, Sissalik - known to his friends as "Slick" - killed his master by slowly adding a poison created from chubas to his personal water supply, and set out on his own. His escape from Tatooine led him to Ando, where he slowly recovered from the variety of health problems he suffered in Tatooine's dry climate. He eventually took a job working on the Nanda's Luck, despite the obstacles he faced as a Mon Calamarian. He proved to be a hard-working, loyal addition to the crew, attributes which bore themselves out when the Pirate Queen of Ando herself, Pyash Yopayomba, attacked the Nanda's Luck. She offered the vessel's Captain, Bipopa Bogzider, a chance to have the vessel repair in exchange for his surrender. Captain Bippi grudgingly surrendered, at which point Yopayomba cut off his head. She forced Sissalik to go to work for her as the new Captain of the Nanda's Luck, growling that nobody who worked for her ever surrendered, no matter what the situation. Sissalik once again found himself an indentured servant, as well as the unwitting accomplice in a grand scheme. Yopayomba had been led to believe that the Imperial governor of Ando would pay her handsomely for starting a civil war between the Aquala and the Quara, a war which the Empire could use to fully subjugate the Aqualish. Her plans failed, though, when Sissalik reprogrammed the autopilot on the Nanda's Luck, ramming the ship into Pyash's own flagship, the Majestic. All hands on board, including Sissalik himself, were killed in the explosion. (PH)

Sisseri Deo

this golden-skinned Firrerreo youth was one of the many students of the Force who were training at the Jedi Temple on Coruscant during the height of the Clone Wars. He was one of the many students who participated in the Apprentice Tournament, and was known for the way he mixed lightsaber combat with other types of martial arts. Sisseri made it to the third round of the tournament, but was defeated by Tallisbeth Enwandung-Esterhazy. Scout, as she preferred to be called, distracted Sisseri's initial lightsaber attack by throwing a cup of muja juice in his face, then launching into him with a melee attack. They rolled across the floor for several minutes before Scout managed to get Sisseri in a choke-hold, then pinned his arm with a painful nerve pinch. Writhing in pain, Sisseri was forced to yield. (YDR)

Sistek, Nogo

this Corellian scout and information dealer worked from a base on the planet Darlyn Boda during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He was known for his encyclopedic knowledge of the hideaways and boltholes found in the Greater Javin area of the galaxy, and was often approached by beings who needed a place to hide to escape from the law. He willingly took their credits and gave them excellent information, but he made no guarantees that he wouldn't sell information on their whereabouts after six months had passed. It was believed that Sistek provided information on the locations of both Salmakk and Clabburn the Younger for Figg Excavations. When a group of freelance agents began sniffing for clues on the reappearance of Salmakk and Clabburn, Sistek provided only minimal information before he was murdered by FiggEx goons. As he died, he gave the agents the name of Barseth Gynes as his contact at FiggEx. (WOA34)

Sisters of the Crimson Mark

founded by the Aquar known as Vilhona, this band of female Aquar dedicated themselves to disrupting the operations of Nexcore Mining Corporation on the planet Velusia. Vilhona herself had been summarily fired and dumped into the lowest levels of Mount Hollow when it was discovered that NMC had tried to monopolize the mining of Velusia's seas, and Vilhona knew too much to keep her around. The Sisters rose up, opposing NMC's abuse of the Aquar people and its control of Velusia. Most of their crimes were small, but over time they began to cause real trouble for NMC. (CCW)

Sistra Mountain

a mountain found on Yavin 8, Sistra has an almost religious connotation for the Melodies. (LW)

Sistros

this was a noted demagogue from the early years of the Old Republic. (VD2)

Sith

this ancient race of insect-like humanoids was native to a region of the galaxy that was isolated from the rest of the Old Republic for many millennia. As a race, they were characterized by its dark, red skin, cranial horns, and long bony chins. There were several subspecies of Sith, each with its own place in their society. Some were slaves, other were warriors, and the highest caste of all were the magicians. They lived in a remote sector of the ancient galaxy, and were unknown to most until a group of Jedi Knights discovered their existence. The early Sith regarded the Dark Jedi as gods. The Force-sensitive Sith magicians proved to have control over the Dark Side of the Force, and the Jedi took many of their tomes and teachings back to study. They hoped to determine ways to avoid the Dark Side, but a group of Jedi found the allure of the Dark Side and the Sith teachings too powerful. They rose up against their Masters, but were not yet powerful enough to defeat them. The Dark Jedi were banished from the Old Republic, and chose to flee across the galaxy to the worlds of the true Sith. Over the millennia, the two groups intermingled, until very little pure Sith blood remained. One of the early Dark Lords of the Sith was Marka Ragnos, who was succeeded by Naga Sadow. Freedon Nadd was a later Dark Lord who was caught by the Jedi Knights on Onderon and entombed there. Nadd's spirit invaded the body and mind of Exar Kun, who eventually became a Dark Lord himself. They developed a rigid hierarchy of magicians and warriors, with the leadership of the brotherhood falling to the current Dark Lord of the Sith. The Sith wrote expansive volumes on the control and use of the Dark Side, and described incredible manifestations of power. Later, they were able to create amulets and weaponry that could assist the user in controlling the Dark Side. These devices amplified the Dark Side, making the user incredibly powerful. Much of the Sith lore was hidden on various worlds when the ancient Jedi Knights first sought to eradicate the Sith. Some was stored on Korriban, some on the moon of Yavin 4. The last remaining true-blooded Sith were wiped out by Exar Kun during the Great Sith War, when he stole their life energy in an effort to defend his fortress on Yavin 4 against the forces of the Old Republic. (SW, DA, FNU, DLS, TSW, GAS, FOSE, NEGW)

Sith

this was the name used to describe any creature which had been altered by Sith rituals and magicks into something hideous and terrifying. These creatures were bred from naturally-evolved stock, but were heavily tainted by the Dark Side of the Force. (TOJC)

Sith

this was the ancient language of the extinct Sith race, and was spoken mainly on the planet Korriban. (EGP)

Sith

this ancient brotherhood of Jedi Knights split from the ranks of the "lightsiders" when access to the ancient Sith lore was forbidden. The Jedi Council feared that the knowledge of harnessing the Dark Side of the Force would be twisted and used to perform many evil acts. The Sith brotherhood was founded some 2,000 years before the Battle of Yavin by a rogue Jedi Knight who yearned to learn more of the Dark Side of the Force. Together with about 50 followers, this rogue fled the Old Republic and established his own Sith order. With galactic domination on their agenda, these new Sith Lords quickly became distrustful of each other and abusive of their dark side powers. In a short time, they had nearly wiped themselves out again. One Sith Lord remained, a man by the name of Darth Bane. He swore that the Sith would never again vanish from the galaxy, but also made certain that they never grew beyond their means. He established a rigid code by which there could only be a single Sith Lord and a single Sith apprentice. When the Lord finally expired, his current apprentice was promoted and allowed to take his own student. This pairing continued for the next several centuries until Darth Sidious rose to power as the Sith Lord. Sidious eventually took Darth Maul as his apprentice, and hoped to take control of the galaxy by bringing the Old Republic down from the inside. However, Maul was destroyed by Obi-Wan Kenobi, and Sidious' plans were briefly thwarted. Decades later, Emperor Palpatine established Darth Vader as the last Dark Lord through the rigorous training he gave Anakin Skywalker. Following the deaths of Vader and Palpatine at the Battle of Endor, and with the destruction of Palpatine's clones on Byss, the order of the Sith was exterminated. Interestingly enough, it was the Sith who realized that the Force was more than just light and dark, and that a complete understanding of the Force could not be achieved without embracing both aspects as a single entity. Although their ultimate use of the Force was evil, the Sith were perhaps closer to a true union with the Force than the Jedi Order of the time. (SW, SW1, TPM, DSSB, LEV)

Sith Academy

this was the name given to the training facility established by the Sith on the planet Korriban, during the build-up to the Great Sith War. The facility continued to operate during the war, producing multitudes of soldiers and warriors imbued with the Dark Side of the Force. (KOTOR)

Sith Archives

this hidden storehouse of knowledge was the repository of all information known to the Sith. It was formed shortly after Darth Bane established the Sith brotherhood. (JDM)

Sith Assassin Pistol

this ancient blaster weapon was developed by the Sith as a tool for dispatching an opponent without revealing one's true identity until absolutely necessary. The power output of the pistol can be regulated to cause a quick or lingering death, depending on the desire of the Sith using it. These weapons were common during the era of the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Sith Assault Gun

this was a specially-created blaster carbine that was imbued with the Dark Side of the Force by the ancient Sith, during the decades leading up to the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Sith Battle Cruiser

this immense, 215-meter-long warship was developed by the ancient Sith Empire to serve as the flagship of its naval fleets. Each Battle Cruiser was armed with six blaster cannons and three concussion missile launchers, and required a crew of 25 officers and gunners to operate. It could transport up to 850 troopers and 5,000 metric tons of cargo, and was equipped with a Class-4 hyperdrive. (DSSB)

Sith Elite Warbot

these combat droids were developed by the ancient Sith to serve as part of their ground-based armies. Individual Elite warbots were used for both training and active combat, with stun blaster and stun batons used on training versions. Full combat versions were armed with a blaster pistol mounted on each arm, and carried a Sith sword as a melee weapon. The armor of the Elite warbot was alchemically treated, giving it additional protection in combat. Unfortunately, they were very expensive to produce, and never found widespread use in the army. Like most other ancient Sith droids, most of the Elite warbots disappeared after the Great Hyperspace War. (GMR5)

Sith Fighter

this was the term used to describe the unusual starfighters that were created within the Star Forge for use by the Sith, during the Great Sith War. The drive systems of the Sith Fighter were a hybrid of technologies from the Rakata and the Old Republic, and were based on a twin ion engine design that provided incredible amounts of thrust and maneuverability. This combination required that the fuselage and auxiliary systems of the Sith Fighter be greatly enhanced, to overcome the instability that speed and maneuverability created. When docked or cruising, the Sith Fighter could retract its wings and power down its weapons, conserving energy for later consumption. In combat, the wings were spread open to provide maneuverability and a wider distribution of weapons. The weaponry of the Sith Fighter included a blaster cannon at each wingtip. (SWDB)

Sith Gunship

this 75-meter-long attack craft was the primary warship of the ancient Sith naval fleet. Armed with six autoblasters capable of carrying 30 troops into battle, the Sith Gunship was built for speed and maneuverability. These ships required a dedicated crew of eighteen Sith warriors, and could also carry up to 250 metric tons of cargo. (GMR5)

Sith Hall

this section of the ancient Galactic Museum on Coruscant contained a wealth of artifacts and texts which were used by the Sith Empire. These artifacts were created by the original Sith species, many of which died out after the fall of the Sith Empire 1,000 years before the Great Sith War. (TOJC)

Sith Hound

this mutated canine was developed by the ancient Sith warriors from stock native to the planet Korriban. These hounds were alchemically enhanced, giving them increased size and strength, as well as a collection of horns and vicious teeth. The brain of the Sith Hound was also increased in size and intelligence, and they were rumored to have had the ability to speak limited amounts of the ancient Sith languages. These beasts were black in color, with a mane of bony spikes surrounding their heads. Their glowing, red eyes sat atop a fearsome snout, and their huge paws were studded with razor-sharp claws. (DSSB, RSS)

Sith Infiltrator

one of Sienar Advanced Projects Laboratories' prototype designs, this ship was eventually modified for use by Darth Maul. Originally designed from the Star Courier platform, the 26.5-meter-long Infiltrator was given advanced weaponry, propulsion systems, and a full-effect stygium-based cloaking device for invisibility on command. The sublight engines were X-C 2 ion arrays, while the hyperdrive was an SSDS 11-A powerplant. Weapons included six prototype laser cannons which were concealed along the side of the craft, and which could be deployed in seconds. The craft had a long, main fuselage to which was attached the ball-shaped control center aft. The wings of the craft were used to radiator the intense heat of its engines, and could be folded down during landings. The designs of the control center and the wings were later incorporated into the TIE Advanced prototype produced for Darth Vader. Darth Maul named his ship the Scimitar. It could attain speeds of 1,180 kilometers per hour in atmosphere, and was equipped with a Class 3 hyperdrive. After the Battle of Naboo, the Scimitar disappeared, and its whereabouts were never discovered. (X1, DSSB, IG1, NEGV)

Sith Lanvarok

this wrist-worn weapon was used by the ancient Sith warriors, derived from the ancient lanvarok polearm. It was extremely complicated to use, and favors those users who are left-handed because of its configuration. The firing mechanism was mounted on the left side of the weapon, with the firing stud in a position to be pushed by the left thumb. The Sith lanvarok was originally developed as a hunting weapon, and fired a spread of thin, razor-edged disks at its target. It was time-consuming to reload, but deadly accurate at short range. A more primitive version of this weapon was used by the Massassi warriors of Yavin 4, which resembled a polearm and required brute strength to throw the disks. After being used to launch the disk, the Massassi lanvarok could also be used as a slashing weapon. Both forms of the lanvarok were little-used after the Great Hyperspace War, as the Sith began to use more modern weaponry. (BW, MJEH, DSSB, NEGW)

Sith Mammoth

this immense beast was developed by the ancient Sith as a warbeast. Sith warriors rode atop the huge beasts, to be carried into battle. (GMR5)

Sith Mask

this unusual mask was created by the ancient Sith, many millennia before the Galactic Civil War. It was imbued with the Dark Side of the Force, and was worn to block outside mental influence and sensory input, thereby allowing the wearer to focus their concentration without interruption. (KOTOR)

Sith Meditation Sphere

this was the name given to the unusual starships of the ancient Sith warlords, developed to help them channel their battle meditation techniques. First used by Naga Sadow some 5,000 years before the Battle of Yavin, the Sith Meditation Sphere resembled a huge, floating eye that was propelled by huge wings. (NEGV)

Sith Personnel Carrier

this ancient craft was developed by the Sith Empire, more than 5,000 years before the Battle of Yavin, to carry troops and smaller craft into battle. Very few of these ships survived the Great Hyperspace War, and those that did were quickly outdated. The 215-meter-long Personnel Carrier was armed with eight light laser cannons, and normal hull plating and shielding, with most of its protection coming from the Sith magic of its operators. It could transport up to 360 troops or 24 Sith Mammoths, and had space for 1,000 metric tons of war materiel. Each of these ships required a command crew of twelve Sith officers. When deploying troops or vehicles, the Personnel Carrier hovered in the atmosphere, using massive chains to lower troop containers to the ground. It was during the delivery or pick-up of troops that the Personnel Carrier was most vulnerable. Each of these troop containers could accommodate 60 troops, a Sith Slayer, or a War Behemoth. (GMR5)

Sith Regenerator

this unusual cybernetic implant was developed by the ancient Sith, many millennia before the Battle of Yavin. The Regenerator stimulated cell replication in the user's body, allowing wounds to be healed quickly and easily. It was designed for use by spies operating behind enemy lines for extended periods, where medical treatment was not normally available. (KOTOR)

Sith Scorchers

this was one of the more popular mixed drinks served at The Glow Dome, on Adarlon, and was set afire before being served. (WSV)

Sith Sects

during the last decades of the Old Republic, this was the term used by the Jedi Council to describe the small groups of beings who tried to emulate the ancient Sith brotherhoods. Most of the members of these Sith Sects were not attuned in any way to the Force, but their anger and frustration with the galaxy led them to search out the Sith teachings. (JAF)

Sith Sentry

these ancient droids were developed for use in the Sith army as security guards and sentries, replacing organic beings. Each Sith Sentry was armed with an arm-mounted blaster rifle, and was often deployed in groups of six droids. (GMR5)

Sith Slayer

this ancient Sith war droid was essentially a tank with a droid brain, although it was alchemically created by Sith magicians. The average Slayer was costly to produce, requiring a wealth of magical elements and alchemy techniques which were arduously molded over a long period of time. Measuring over twelve meters in height, the Sith Slayer was armed with two shoulder-mounted blaster cannons, and two spinning blades mounted on each arm. Like the Sith Elite warbot, the Slayer was protected by magical armor, giving it a measure of invulnerability which was lacking in organic warbeasts like the Sith Mammoth. (GMR5)

Sith Speeder

this was a specialized, circular, one-man speeder developed for use by Darth Maul. Designed to be compact and fast, this speeder was built on the basis of the Razalon FC-20, resembling a circle with the upper arc removed. The rider sat in the concave section of the speeder, and had hand and foot controls with which to maneuver the speeder. This speeder was unarmed, something that was not a deficit for its rider due to their skills in the Dark Side of the Force. This speeder was also easily stored in the forward section of Maul's Infiltrator starship. (SW1, IG1, AEG)

Sith Starfighter

these bulbous fighters were developed for use in the ancient Sith naval fleet. Like the more modern TIE Fighter, the Sith Starfighter lacked a hyperdrive. It was armed with a triple blaster cannon, and was highly maneuverable. (GMR5)

Sith Torture Mask

this ancient Sith mask was developed to completely cover a being's head, allowing only the eyes to see what was happening. The Sith placed the mask on their prisoners and captives, especially the Jedi Knights, in order to break them for questioning. The mask itself was unremarkable to behold, but was imbued with intense Dark Side energy, which made it impossible for a Jedi Knight wearing the mask to concentrate on using the Force for little more than basic survival. (RHF)

Sith Warbird

this was a form of organic lifeform which was twisted by Sith alchemies to perform a specific role for the armies of the ancient Sith. Most of these warbirds were naturally-occurring avians which stood more than six meters in height, and which had been altered to submit to the control of a Sith master. These creatures were fitted with a special harness that provided a saddle for a Sith warrior and a mounted blaster cannon as weaponry. A small fusion generator was also mounted on the harness to power the cannon. (GMR5)

Sith Wars

see Great Sith War (LFC)

Sith Wyrn

originally created by Naga Sadow, this immense reptilian insect lived in a subterranean lair on the moon of Yavin 4. The ancient Massassi worshipped it as a god, until Exar Kun killed the beast in an effort to prove his worth to Freedon Nadd. The Sith Wyrn was originally an infant space slug which was captured and altered using Sith alchemy. The slug had attached itself to Naga Sadow's personal starship, and Sadow chose to keep the beast alive and use it in experiments in magical alteration of physical forms. Jedi historians believed that there was only one Sith Wyrn, as there was no record of another space slug being captured and altered in any way. (DSSB)

Sith'ari

this was the name used by the ancient Sith to describe a perfect being who would rise to power and bring balance to the Force. According to prophecy, the Sith'ari would rise up and destroy the Sith, but in the process would return to lead the Sith and make them stronger than ever before. (KOTOR)

Sithspawn

an expletive used by Wedge Antilles. (XWN, KT)

S'itl Thirr

this Abinyshi came out of hiding to make contact with Doctor Tem Eliss, in order to expose the true story of the Empire's part in nearly wiping out the Abinyshi. (SWJ14)

Sitnalta

this New Republic officer personally led the investigation into the whereabouts of the Nikto agent Ma'w'shiye. (SWJ4)

Sitrep

this was a military term used to denote a situation report. (TG, RCHC)

Sittana Marble

this was one of the most exquisite kinds of marble found in the galaxy. Known for its lustrous graining, Sittana marble was used to build some of the most expensive buildings in the galaxy. The Kallarak Amphitheater on Coruscant used Sittana marble to create its teired benches. (CCW)

Sitting Duck

this small ship was Una Poot's hidden escape craft, docked on Silver Station. It was originally used by Una and her first husband, Drogue, as a culslon gas transport, and was equipped with twelve gas canisters that were tethered to the stern of the ship. (SWJ10)

Sitting Hummock

this form of plantlife was developed by Yuuzhan Vong Shapers to serve as a kind of moldable chair. The sitting hummock conformed its soft cells to match the user's form. (FP)

Sitting Right of Refusal

this was one of the most obscure of laws created by the Senators of the Old Republic. It could be invoked when a Senator had good reason to keep the details of their personal or private business from the public eye. In most situations, the right of refusal was necessary to protect the Senator's alliances and certain business or political property. In other situations, however, it could bring the Senator's dealings into doubt. (JQ5)

Situng Borokii

this was one of the two most powerful overclans of the Alwari Ansionians, during the last decades of the Old Republic. They were challenged in size and power only by the Hovsgol Januul overclan. Like the Januul, the Borokii overclan was made up from several smaller clans, forming a large unit. The Borokii and Januul had been enemies for many generations, until Obi-Wan Kenobi and Luminara Unduli, along with their Padawans Anakin Skywalker and Barriss Ofee, met to discuss a treaty between not only the Borokii and Januul, but between the Alwari and the city-dwelling Ansionians of Cuipernam. The Jedi hoped to avoid the secession of Ansion from the Old Republic, preventing a massive crumbling of the Republic. After Obi-Wan and Luminara were able to form a peace between the Borokii and Januul, both overclans agreed to the treaty with the city dwellers. (APS)

Sivantlie Base

this was the name of the temporary base, located on Coruscant, used by Wraith Squadron as they planned their assault on Warlord Zsinj. (IF)

Sivar

this man owned and operated the Suprosa during the Galactic Civil War. (SESB)

Sivel, Ela

this frail woman was a native of the planet Naboo, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. An artist, Ela was one of the first residents of Theed captured by the Trade Federation's battle droids during their invasion of the planet. (IOT)

Sivestri Trace

this remote branch of the Rimma Trade Route connected the Rimma to the Inner and Outer Zuma regions of the galaxy. However, the connection was tenuous at best, and even the Empire's formation of the Sanctuary Pipeline did little to ensure safe passage to planets such as Endor. (GMR9)

Sivilin

this was a common name among the Umbaran people. (UANT)

Siviviv

this spreading vine was native to the planet Cartao. (SWI68)

Sivorian Sea

this vast ocean was famous for its deep, emerald-green waters. (JH)

Sivron

this was one of the many Twi'leki clans which were native to the planet Ryloth. In the Twi'leki language, the clan's name meant "shrewd". (GCG)

Sivulliq

this prototype RK-720 freighter was stolen from the SoroSuub headquarters in the Cularin System, but was eventually returned to SoroSuub by the citizens of Cularin. Miim Te'Suub, the Director of Formal Activities for SoroSuub, announced that the corporation decided to forego producing such an exquisite starship design. Instead, they turned the Sivulliq over to one of the Cularin natives who turned the ship in. It was later discovered that a key piece of proprietary technology was never removed from the freighter, and the pilot refused to allow the technicians of SoroSuub to retake possession. (WOTC)

Six Local Systems

this was a collection of Mid Rim star systems. During the height of the New Order, all six systems were under the control of a single Imperial Governor, Shran Etison. Governor Etison's base was on Tuttin IV, in the Tuttin System, during his tenure. (GMR6)

Sixteenth Vissencant Variation

supposedly entitled Etude for Dawn, this was a false name used by Zan Yant to fool his good friend, Jos Vondar. Vondar had no knowledge of classical music, but truly enjoyed listening to Zan play. Thus, when Zan first played Duskin re Lemte's Cold Midnight for Jos, the human was bewildered at the fusion of leap-jump and heavy isotope fusion. To poke gentle fun at Jos' lack of refinement, Zan called the piece the "Sixteenth Vissencant Variation" to see if Jos knew that, in fact, there were only fifteen Vissencant Variations. (MBS)

Sixth Decant

this section of the galaxy was held by the Alliance shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (CSWEA)

Sixty Hour War

this was the brief conflict during which the Empire subjugated the various rebellious factions on the planet Derilyn. During the War, the Empire wiped out the city of Paran in an effort to wipe out the rebels. (PG3, OE)

Sizinnian

this Snivvian spent most of his adult life trying to read and understand the Journey of the Minds. To this end, the slightly insane Snivvian lived deep in the sewers of Eyar City in a collection of chambers he called his "Inner Sacntum." Sizinnian would often become emotionally unstable whenever Eyar Treatment Systems came through to clean the sewers, reaching a peak of paranoia and fearing that everyone was out to steal his research. (HAS)

Sizzton, Andar

this bounty hunter was contracted by the Empire to search out the group of Alliance agents investigating the construction of the Bissillirus Resupply Base, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. The Empire actually contracted five bounty hunters, in an effort to ensure that the agents were captured. Sizzton was the only hunter who trailed the agents to Entrus from Draenell's Point. For a number of reasons, Sizzton's hunt was known to the Alliance agents, which made him nervous because he wasn't sure their actions weren't meant to draw him into a trap. (GMK)

Sk

this is a unit of measure, and describes a large amount of computer data. (CFG)

Ska Chusko

this Rodian expression translated into Basic as "grow up". (HFG)

Skaak Tipper Gang

this gang of miscreants was active on the planet Naboo during the height of the New Order. (GQRG)

Skagras

a primary city on the planet Dohu VII. (SWJ1)

Skahrolta

this Dug was a member of Sebolto's gang during the years following the Battle of Naboo. The Pixelito Grand Council issued a bounty for his capture in connection with the sale of death sticks to the youth of Pixelito, a bounty that Jango Fett managed to claim during his attempt to meet with Sebolto. (BH)

Skahtul

this female Barabel bounty hunter was the first to stumble onto Luke Skywalker following the Battle of Hoth. Skahtul had been trained by another bounty hunter who had taken her on as a guide, and allowed her to pursue her own freedom as long as she never tried to hunt him down. She and her band had heard of both the Imperial bounty on Luke, issued by Darth Vader, and Prince Xizor's bounty. As a Barabel, she held a deep respect for the Jedi Knights, but capturing Luke and turning him over to the highest bidder was just good business. Luke managed to escape from her before she could deliver him to either Vader or Xizor. Shaktul was later contacted by Xizor's niece, Savan, in the hopes that the Barabel could track down the human replica droid Guri. She staked out Doctor Thrumble's labs on the world, noting the increased defenses after Kar Yang failed to capture Guri. Note that she is called Skahtul in the Dark Horse Comics version of Shadows of the Empire. (SE, SEE, SESB)

this city-covered planet was the homeworld of the Skakoan race. The atmosphere of Skako was filled with methane and other unusual chemical compounds, many of which were incredibly heavy. This meant that the atmospheric pressure on Skako was extremely high, making it unlivable to many other species. The Skakoans, however, evolved over time to survive there. This meant that nearly all Skakoans remained on Skako, since the equipment needed to maintain the unusual atmospheric pressures of Skako was prohibitively expensive. (SWDB, SWI70)

Skakoan

this vaguely humanoid race was native to the planet Skako. Because the atmosphere of Skako was unusually dense, Skakoans evolved over time to survive in the intense pressures there. This meant that nearly all Skakoans remained on Skako, since the equipment needed to maintain the unusual atmospheric pressure was prohibitively expensive. Any Skakoan caught on a world with low atmospheric pressure would explosively decompress. Despite their relative anonymity, Skakoans were known for their ability to create microelectronics, and their manufacturing processes were considered quite advanced. Very few beings ever saw a Skakoan without their protective suits, although it was believed that they resembled giant humans with folds of sickly-colored skin. During the last decades of the Old Republic, the Skakoan presence in the galaxy was most felt during the Clone Wars, as the Techno Union sided with the Confederacy of Independent Systems while under the direction of Wat Tambor. However, with the rise to power of Emperor Palpatine, the Skakoans were relegated to subordinate positions, and many retreated to Skako, disgusted with the human race. This self-imposed isolation continued even after the Battle of Endor, leading the rest of the galaxy to consider the Skakoans to be secretive xenophobes. (SWDB, SWI70, UANT)

Skakoform

this was the native, written language of the Skakoan race. Many other races often mistook Skakoform for technical blueprints or circuit diagrams. (GMR10, UANT)

Skakoverbal

this was the native, spoken language of the Skakoan race, a complex form of machine language which closely resembled Bocce. (GMR10, UANT)

Skalokor

this was the second moon of the planet Yabosta. It was covered with treacherous mountain ranges, and was the homeworld of the Dolandu. (GMR10)

Skalus

this Imperial Consul-General was assigned to maintain and control access to the Gree Enclave. He hated the posting, and cared little about maintaining the balance of trade in the Enclave. He was purposely inattentive to his duties, and hoped that the backlog of uncollected taxes would get him reassigned to another world. (SWJ8)

Skandit

a squirrel-like creature that lives in forests of Endor's Sanctuary Moon, the skandits have black, furry masks. They use slingshots and whips to ambush unwary travelers. (ECAR)

Skandrei Bandits

this group of cutthroat pirates was extremely active in the Kathol Outback during the early years of the New Republic. They maintained a fleet of capital ships and support craft that was rivaled only by the Imperial Navy fleet assigned to Kathol Sector, making them a formidable opponent. This firepower made them virtually unstoppable, and they attacked wherever and whenever they chose. The Skandrei later allied themselves with Gorak Khzam and the Sabriador Slavers, in an effort to eliminate the Qektoth Confederacy. During the Battle of Kathol, the Skandrei agreed to help Khzam defeat the FarStar as well as the Confederacy, but their combined forces were not enough to overcome the Imperial warships in orbit around Kathol. The Skandrei Bandits and the Sabriador Slavers were both destroyed in the battle. (KO, E)

Skann

this planet is located in Astal Sector. It is famous for its Skannbult Likker. (GG9)

Skannbult Likker

this alcoholic drink is made from surplus dust-corn and dry gene wheat on the planet Skann. It has been described as the galaxy's most volatile form of fire-water. (GG9)

Skar

this was the alias used by the droid SCr-114, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. The simple name allowed the droid to appear to be organic during early negotiations, where another being might resent having a droid as a smuggler. (SWJ5)

Sk'ar

this immense, humanoid being was assigned the rank of Imperial General, and was placed in command of the garrison on Shiva IV shortly after the Battle of Hoth. Distinguished by his grayish skin, toothy jaws and jutting chin, Sk'ar ordered the capture of Aron Peacebringer and Leia Organa just after the destruction of the city of K'avor. Sk'ar's mission was to subjugate the populace of Shiva IV and conscript the strongest survivors to become soldiers for the Empire. He believed that defeating Aron in combat would break the spirit of the Calian Confederacy and make his job that much easier. It was Sk'ar who had ordered the destruction of K'avor, an event he hoped to repeat at Illyriaqum during the celebration of the signing of the Concordat of Peace. His dreams of power were shattered, however, when Luke Skywalker, Lando Calrissian, and Chewbacca arrived on Shiva IV to rescue Leia. They apprehended Sk'ar's warship as it attempted to destroy Illyriaqum, and Leia managed to disarm the bomb Sk'ar planned to drop on the city. Protected by a personal shield, Sk'ar tried to escape in an airship, but Chewbacca was able to destroy the ship before it could flee. Sk'ar died in the explosion. (MC53, MC54)

Skar'kla

also known as the glitterclaw, this predatory beast was native to the planet Bothawui. The skar'kla were distantly related to the krak'jya feline, having evolved more for speed than power. Skar'klas rely on stealth to get close to their prey, then burst from cover and attack before the prey even knows they were being hunted. If a prey should ever escape, the skar'kla had plenty of speed to catch them and bring them down. Skar'kla were native to the mountainous areas of Bothawui, and tended to stay well away from civilization. However, as the populations of krak'jyas was hunted down for its pelts, the skar'kla numbers rose, and they began to encroach on urban areas. This results in attacks caused more by mistake than by deliberate planning. (SPG)

Skarten

a Kalkal academic who, along with Ra Yasht, wrote the paper Torture Observed: An Interview With Jabba's Cook. This work brought both of them instant tenure at Beshka University, much to the chagrin of P'tan. (TJP)

Skartis

this planet was known for its seven, wondrous moons. (MCA1)

Skatecoaster

this small boat-like vehicle is driven by a small repulsorlift engine. Large enough for a single rider, it is easily slowed by placing a foot on the ground. (SA1)

Skavers

this swoop gang of Skeebo operated from a base in the Southern Crags of the planet Skeebo. They were considered outlaws, but were secretly working for Kaptain Voor. They kidnapped the H'uun Anachro, during her honeymoon on Skeebo, and held her for ransom. Their plans were thwarted when Gorga the Hutt employed Boba Fett to rescue Anachro. (BF)

Skawn

a common name given to Twi'lek males, this name meant "merchant". (GCG)

Skawn Bonduna

this Twi'lek male was a gifted musician and scholar, who grew up during the last years of the Old Republic. His education allowed him a future as an attorney or governor, and his musical skills seemed to promise a fabulous career in show business. His band, the Sonic Free, was coming into its own just as Emperor Palpatine instituted the New Order, and much of their music was banned by the Imperial Board of Culture. The IBC claimed that Sonic Free was using subliminal manipulation of their music to coerce citizens into acting against the Empire. The other members of Sonic Free were arrested, but Skawn managed to escape. He was spotted in the Mid Rim shortly afterward, and a bounty was posted for his capture. Skawn then fled into hiding again, and remained at large even during the Galactic Civil War. (GMR6) meaning "charismatic", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Skee

Skee

a Tetsus Rodian, noted for his ability to hunt and kill the Manka cat. (TME)

Skeebo Desert

this is the largest desert found on the planet Skeebo. (BF)

Skeebo

the Hutt Gorga and his new bride, Anachro, spent time on this planet during their honeymoon. Anachro was kidnapped and held for ransom by Kaptain Voor and the Skavers. Skeebo was also the homeworld of a race which was known as the Skeebo. (BF)

Skeebo

this ancient race of spotted-skinned humanoids has lived on the planet Skeebo for several millennia. (BF)

Skeebo City

this is the capital city of the planet Skeebo. (BF)

Skeeg

this creature is infamous for its incredibly noxious smell. A mollusk, skeegs were native to the planet Vendara, where they lived in the warm swamps and rainforests. They were considered unique in the mollusk world because of the shape of their shells. Over time, the calcareous material exuded to create the shell forms a pair of movable wings. However, these wings provide no assistance to the locomotion of the skeeg, which simply moves by contracting and expanding the muscles of its fleshy foot. What the wings do allow the skeeg to do is catch its prey. When an insect lands on the skeeg's back - attracted by the scent exuded from glands on its rearend - the skeeg used its wings to reach up and grab it. Then, using spines on its body, the skeeg injects a poison into its prey to immobilize it. Once the prey stopped moving, the wings helped move the insect to the skeeg's mouth for consumption. (TPS, COG)

Skeel

this was a common component used to create the names given to Cerean males. In general, male Cereans given an individual name, which is added to the names of their father and grandfather. Complete male names are arranged based on harmony and cadence, but the literal meanings are arranged to ensure proper descriptions. The name Skeel referred to a famous warrior in Cerean mythology. (GCG)

Skeel

this was the name of a famous hero from Cerean mythology. (GCG)

Skeel

this well-muscled Cerean youth was the leader of the band of techrats which hung out with Kordren and Maj-Odo-Nomor. In order to hide his identity while riding swoops out on the plains, Skeel often painted his face white with black markings around his eyes. He led the raid on Ki-Adi-Mundi's house to steal groceries, shortly after Sylvn joined their band. Skeel's desire for technology, and the thrill of racing a swoop, often clouded his judgement, and when he and Kordren tried to race within the walls of the Outsider Citadels, Skeel lost control of his swoop and crashed into a dead-end wall. He was killed instantly, and Kordren was hospitalized after leaping from his swoop before it hit the wall. (PTR)

Skeendo Tunnels

this network of abandoned mining tunnels and canyons is found in the Southern Crags of the planet Skeebo. A city was built from the wreckage of starships scavenged from the Skeebo Desert by the Skavers. It was here that the Skavers held Anachro for ransom. Boba Fett was able to infiltrate the tunnels and rescue the H'uun. (BF)

Skeete, Jaspar

the last City Governor of D'larah, Skeete was notorious for his poor crisis management. The fact that Demophon and its star were doomed during the Galactic Civil War placed Skeete out of his comfort zone. (SN)

Skeeter

this tiny, winged being was the majordomo of Princess Lourdes. He held Lord Gar-Oth's guards at gunpoint while Lourdes defeated Gar-Oth and Yoshi Raph-Elan destroyed The Goliath battle droid. (SWS)

Skeezer

this Imperial Navy Captain was dispatched to Yavin 4, to pick up Grand Moff Tarkin in the wake of an assumed Imperial victory over the Alliance. When he arrived at Yavin 4, he found no sign of the Death Star or Tarkin, and was hard-pressed to defend his small fleet against the Alliance's meager forces. (MIS1)

Skefta

this game of chance was popular in the Outer Rim Territories, where much of the gambling done during its play was controlled by the Hutts during the New Order. (MA)

Skekfish

this species of fish-like creature was a hybrid of carbon- and silicon-based lifeforms. They were named for the way they "swam" through soil, and could easily move through solid rock. They accomplished this by their swimming motion, which placed their razor-sharp, metallic scales in contact with the surrounding material. These scales literally scraped away material. Skekfish had no eyes, and hunted purely by their sense of hearing. When they attacked larger prey, the skekfish would first jump at their prey, using their knife-like bodies to slash at it. Skekfish were known for their swift speed, voracious appetites and incredible reproduction rate, and it was theorized that a colony of skekfish could eliminate the major fauna on an undeveloped planet in little time. Whenever a colony of skekfish ran out of food, they reproduced one last time, laying their eggs in the carcasses of their prey. These last eggs, if undisturbed, could survive for thousands of years before hatching again. The only known defense against these creatures was the use of ion weapons, which caused them to explode. (WOA10)

Skerr Kyrriic

this was the Yuuzhan Vong name for their living armor, creating from the organic material of the vunduun

crab. In essence, the skerr kyrric armor was just one large vonduun crab, bioengineered to wrap itself around a Yuuzhan Vong warrior. (NEGW)

Skerrit

this male Devaronian, spouse of Anirak, was one of many who smuggled bandaras off Devaron in order to breed them for eventual return to the planet. His work helped offset the desire of the female Devaronians to exterminate the bandaras. (COG)

Sketto

this large, flying, carnivorous reptile was native to the deserts of Tatooine. It can reach lengths of up to a meter. These creatures were something of an anomaly in the galactic animal kingdom, being warm-blooded reptiles which gave birth to a single offspring at a time. They lived in caves and crevasses, hanging upside down by clinging to the rock with the claw on their tail. The large fangs and teeth of the sketto were used for gathering insects and piercing the hide of larger creatures, allowing the sketto to lap up the blood which flowed from the wound. It was rumored that a swarm of skettoes could suck a sleeping dewback dry of blood. (GF, WSW)

Skevon

this gas is one of the most common gases used for blasters. (CFG)

Skewer

this was one of the many Zorbian pirate ships that harassed the spacelanes of Moddell Sector, during the early years of the New Republic. It was believed that the Skewer attacked and disabled an Ayrou freighter near the Forest Moon of Endor several years before the Battle of Yavin, stranding the Ayrou Tessent somewhere in the forests of the moon. Note that Star Wars Gamer, issue 9, also seems to indicate that the Skewer was the ship that was shot down. (GMR9)

Skew-flip

this starfighter maneuver was used during the height of the Clone Wars, and involved a pilot using his forward attitude jets to kick his starfighter into a reverse position. In this way, a pilot could surprise the pilot of an enemy ship that were in pursuit. Because the fighter was suddenly facing backward, the pilot could fire on his pursuit and eliminate them. (E3N)

Skidder, Wurth

this brash young man graduated from Luke Skywalker's Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4 during the years leading up to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. He was part of a group which followed Kyp Durron and formed an almost vigilante brigade of Jedi Knights, bringing their own form of justice to remote parts of the galaxy. He was one of the first Jedi to fly the XJ version of the T-65 X-Wing, a vehicle he used to bring down the Rodian mercenaries of the Osarian First-Force, against the wishes of Leia Organa Solo. Later, during the Battle of Ithor, Wurth was severely injured in battle with the Yuuzhan Vong on Ithor's surface. He survived, and vowed to return the fight to the Vong. He was part of the delegation sent to Gyndine to help relocate refugees, where he allowed himself to be captured by the Yuuzhan Vong. He tried to convince the young yammosk aboard the Creche that Randa the Hutt was plotting to Chine-kal, while Sapha planted the idea in Randa's mind that Chine-kal was going to kill him. The plan was to create confusion aboard the clustershship, but only succeeded in killing Fasgo and attracting the attention of Chine-kal. Chine-kal captured Wurth and planned to present the Jedi as a present to Tsavong Lah. After being attacked by Kyp's Dozen at Kalarba, though, Chine-kal fled to Fondor. He grew angry with the Jedi, and Skidder in particular, and physically abused him. Skidder was broken badly by the torture, and barely survived to discover that Kyp had found him at Fondor. Before he died, Wurth asked Kyp to rescue Randa, who had been playing the Yuuzhan Vong for information to give to the Republic. (VP, DTR, JE)

Skids

Esege Tuketu's weapons officer in the Fifth Battle Group, Skids controlled their K-Wing's bombs. (BTS)

Skids, The

this was the name given to the seedy section of the city of Tyrena, on the planet Corellia. (CCW)

Skiff

a repulsorlift utility vehicle like those employed by Jabba the Hutt. They average about 9 meters in length, and are piloted by a single driver who uses directional steering vanes to maneuver it. (ROTJ)

Skiffer

this man was part of a small group which managed to survive the destruction of his homeworld of Coruscant, after the Yuuzhan Vong took control of the planet. Skiffer was a member of a collection of humans which tried to wipe out the Walkway Collective and take over their territories and steal their supplies. Skiffer and his group were killed when Yassat led the being he described as Lord Nyax into Skiffer's territory. The dark being murdered them all, and Yassat managed to escape. (EL2)

Skifter

a fake sabacc card that can change its suit and value with a touch of one corner. (DFR, DA)

Skile Curve

this power-pulse pattern is generated on a computer monitor when a repulsorlift generator is correctly calibrated for proper output. The skile curve is a multi-humped curve which lessens over time before jumping back up slightly. (CFG)

Skilis

this man served the Empire as a Commander in the armed forces, and was assigned escort duty aboard the shuttle Kandarra during the Imperial occupation of Garos IV. (SWJ4)

Skillet-roe

this dish, which consisted of pan-cooked roe from a variety of native fish, was popular among the fisherman and sailors of the planet Ando. (PH)

SkillWare

this was the name given to the computer code which provided a droid with the ability to perform certain actions. It was copyrighted by Sienar Intelligence Systems during the Galactic Civil War. (FOP)

Skimboard

a repulsor-equipped board used by children and some athletes to move about. They are also called hoverboards. (GOF2, GOF7)

Skimm, Roth

this man and his partner, Belgar Overlord, were a pair of freelance explorers who stumbled upon a habitable world on the edge of the Core Worlds some 600 years before the Battle of Naboo. They named the planet Belgaroth, and the system became known as the Belgaroth System. Before they could turn the system into a way station and turn a profit for their efforts, however, they shot and killed each other over a disputed game of cards. (CCW)

Skimmer

this was the codename used by Alliance operative Lyda Skims, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWGAL)

Skimmer

another name for a landspeeder. (SW)

Skimmer

this was the generic term used to describe any small starship designed to skim the atmosphere of a gas giant and collect gases. (FBS)

Skimmersub

this was a form of underwater transport, similar in many respects to the Gungan bongo, that was developed for use on the planet Lamaredd. Many of these vehicles were produced by the Noloh Gunga Bongoform corporation, which produced a standard version that was common across the planet. This common skimmersub measured 9.25 meters in length, and required a single pilot to operate. It could accommodate up to 4 passengers and 18,000 kilograms of cargo. (GMR7)

Skims, Athon

this young Corellian man was the son of Doyle and Lynn Skims. Athon followed in his father's footsteps, joining the Alliance as a pilot during the early stages of the Galactic Civil War. Unfortunately, Athon was delivering information to Alliance contacts on Alderaan when the planet was destroyed by the first Death Star. He perished in the explosion. (SWGAL)

Skims, Doyle

this Corellia man joined the Alliance as a fighter pilot, and was one of the many Y-Wing pilots who died during the Battle of Yavin. He was survived by his wife, Lynn, and their daughter, Lyda. (SWGAL)

Skims, Lyda

this young, Corellian woman was an Alliance operative during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Her mother, Lynn, was a textile worker, and imparted a wealth of information on clothing design to Lyda. She also was an accomplished engineer, and learned a great deal about droid repair from her father, Doyle. Lyda joined the Alliance after the deaths of her father and her brother, Athon. She was known to her fellow agents as Skimmer, and was responsible for locating information on Project Dead Eye, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. Unfortunately, she went into hiding shortly after discovering the information, fearing that the Imperials would locate her before she could return. A group of Alliance agents working in the Corellian System managed to locate her and return her safely to Alliance headquarters, where she revealed that Dr. Vacca was the leader of Project Dead Eye. (SWGAL)

Skims, Lynn

this Corellian woman owned a small textiles on her homeworld of Corellia, during the early years of the New Order. Her husband, Doyle, and her son, Athon, were both killed during their service to the Alliance, and Lynn was forced to sell the business after Doyle's death. Lynn retired to her small home, and feared for the life of her only surviving child, Lyda. (SWGAL)

Skin Buster

this was the working name of a biochemical substance created by the Genetech orbital lab over Gorsh. This red goo was created from an irritating sap which caused severe burning sensations on the skin of most humanoids. If left untreated, the victim often went insane, screaming from the pain. (PG1)

Skinchanger

this battered transport ship was owned and operated by Prit Kessek. (WOA26)

Skine Bounty Hunter College

this Outer Rim syndicate was a small-time operation which specialized in locating vagrant fugitives. (GG9)

Skine Sector

this area of the galaxy is located in the Outer Rim. (GG9)

Skin-glove

developed for medical use during the years leading up to the Clone Wars, this special material could be applied to a doctor's hands in order to protect them from infection. Because it was a free-flowing material, skin-glove could be used to protect the hands of virtually any race. (MBS)

Skinker

this obese man, distinguished by his bald head and extravagant moustache, employed Valance the Hunter to bring in some of the galaxy's most wanted criminals. In return for Valance's services, Skinker provided the bounty hunter with droid. Skinker didn't understand why Valance always destroyed the droids on sight, but the removal of his rivals was well worth the price. Additionally, Skinker kept his ears open for any information on the whereabouts of Luke Skywalker, as the final payment for Valance's services. Skinker's base of operations was on the planet Junction, which gave him an excellent opportunity to interact with Alliance agents. When the Empire blockaded the Yavin System, the Alliance was forced to look beyond well-known outposts for supplies, and Junction was quite near Yavin. Because of this, Skinker was able to discover that Skywalker had arrived on Junction to purchase droid repair parts. When Valance arrived to capture Skywalker, he was forced to blast open a magnetically-sealed hatch to reach him. In the resulting blast, Skinker and his helper, polyp, were killed. (MC27)

Skinkner

one of the Black Sun criminals working with Grobber during the reign of Zekka Thyne over Black Sun's Corellian interests. (TFE)

Skinpopper

this was a general term used by medics of the Old Republic to describe a small hypodermic needle used to administer small doses of medicine. (MBS)

Skinshirt

this was a shirt that was created from thinskin. (MBS)

Skinto, Mygo

this young woman resembled any of the multitude of children dishomed by the Galactic Civil War and the struggle to control her homeworld of Norne. Mygo could pass as a boy or a girl, and appeared to be a simple orphan. In reality, Mygo was old enough to have children of her own, although she had dedicated herself to making sure the children of Norne were given a chance to survive the battles. She also worked to ensure that the children of Norne weren't exploited and used as slaves or indentured labor. Mygo herself was an orphan who lost her parents when their space yacht disappeared. She was passed among various aunts and relatives until she was old enough to set out on her own. She was hampered by the fact that her physical growth stopped by the time she reached her teens, leaving her with the appearance of a child. She eventually went underground, establishing a series of warrens below the city where "her children" could hide out while still receiving the nourishment and care they required. Mygo was sympathetic to the Alliance, and often passed on information she gained to agents she knew. (CRO) an avian creature native to the planet Trinta, the skinwing is a reptilian bird with leathery wings and a deafening screech. They have a large, bony head which ends in a long, tooth-filled beak. (DOE)

Skinwing

Skinwing

this flying predator was native to the planet Goroth Prime. Similar in many physiological respects to a Gorothite, the partly mammalian skinwing had longer arms and great membranes connecting them to its body. All the creatures fingers ended in long talons, and it lacked opposable digits. These ferocious beasts were quite clumsy on the ground, but were accomplished fliers. The average specimen stood almost two meters in height, and had a wingspan of three meters. (GSE)

the first of the Smuggler's Run asteroids to be colonized, it is the 35th asteroid in the Run. Despite being the most efficient of the Skips, it continually oozed a greenish-yellow slime which could not be stopped. A Bothan tried to stop it once, but the asteroid began to shake to its roots, causing a large amount of damage to the smugglers' haven. Skip 1 serves as the gateway to the Run, and contains an abundance of docking bays and repair facilities. (TNR)

Skip 2

this Smuggler's Run asteroid was rocked with a series of explosions when Dolph detonated his specially-built droids. The droids were meant to be on Coruscant when they exploded, but a number of smugglers stole droids to keep or sell on the black market. A great deal of damage was caused by the explosions, and there were a number of casualties. (TNR)

Skip 3

this Smuggler's Run asteroid was rocked with a series of explosions when Dolph detonated his specially-built droids. The droids were meant to be on Coruscant when they exploded, but a number of smugglers stole droids to keep or sell on the black market. A great deal of damage was caused by the explosions, and there were a number of casualties. (TNR)

Skip 5

Han Solo, Chewbacca, and the Sullustan Seluss convened on this Smuggler's Run asteroid to discuss their reactions to Jarril's death and talk about their next move. Han and Chewie were in the Run, investigating not only Jarril's death but the unusually large amount of credits flowing through the Run. Skip 5 is riddled with caves strewn about in the stony planetoid, but is too hot for most species to inhabit. Some of the caves were large enough to house six luxury liners, and they believed that the strange cargoes passing through the Run were stored here. All they found was a group of resident Jawas and the smuggler Davis. Skip 5 was rocked with a series of explosions when Dolph detonated his specially-built droids. The droids were meant to be on Coruscant when they exploded, but a number of smugglers stole droids to keep or sell on the black market. A great deal of damage was caused by the explosions, and there were a number of casualties. (TNR)

Skip 52

this asteroid, part of the Smuggler's Run, is continually wracked by vicious, swirling rock storms. (TNR)

Skip 6

this asteroid, which is nothing more than a huge mudball, is found within the Smuggler's Run, and was the base of operations for the Glottalhib crimelord Nandreeson. He had it hollowed out and reformed into the perfect replica of Glottal, down to huge swarms of watumba bats and parfue gnats. His lair was hidden deep within the asteroid, and only by traversing a complex series of tunnels and caves could one get in or out. (TNR)

Skip 72

this Smuggler's Run asteroid was rocked with a series of explosions when Dolph detonated his specially-built droids. The droids were meant to be on Coruscant when they exploded, but a number of smugglers stole droids to keep or sell on the black market. A great deal of damage was caused by the explosions, and there were a number of casualties. (TNR)

Skip 8

Chewbacca once landed the Millennium Falcon here and decided to sleep inside the ship. This prompted the smugglers of the run to attack him for believing himself above their ranks, and Han Solo had to rescue the hapless Wookiee. (TNR)

Skipper

a species of wild bird known for its ability to avoid being caught. (TFNR)

Skipper

the generic term used to describe any small craft used to travel between Skips within the Smuggler's Run. These ships are quick and maneuverable, a necessity when dodging asteroids. (TNR)

Skipper Squid

this immense squid was native to the oceans of the planet Naboo. (NEGW)

Skippy

one popular rumor which sprang up in the wake of the Battle of Yavin, after Luke Skywalker had told of his humble upbringing on Tatooine, was that the droid R5-D4 was actually connected to the Force. Known by the nickname of Skippy, R5-D4 had been given lubricants what were infected with midichlorians, giving it incredible Force sensitivity. Among Skippy's abilities was the ability to foresee the future, which manifested itself when Skippy first encountered R2-D2. The Force told Skippy to blow is own motivator when Owen Lars purchased it from the Jawas, allowing R2-D2 to be pruchased instead. (T1)

Skipray Blastboat

this was another name for the GAT-12 series of heavily-armored starfighters, designed by Sienar Fleet

Systems to be fast and powerful. They are long, streamlined ships, about twice the length of an X-wing. Because of their size and their design profile, the Skipray Blastboat was created to fill the gap between small starfighters and well-armed capital ships. Despite the fact that the Skipray was equipped with a hyperdrive and could go on missions that starfighters could not, they never became as popular as TIE fighters, and became obsolete in the mind of the Empire. They were found primarily in smuggler defense fleets, until Grand Admiral Thrawn began using them to a great advantage against the New Republic. They have rear-mounted engines, and have a ventral fin for stability. (HTTE, DFR, WOTC, SWDB)

Skip-tracer

a slang term for a collections agent. (HSR)

Skirata, Kal

this man served as a Sergeant in the Grand Army of the Republic, and was one of the first instructors chosen to train the army's clone commandos. Despite his gruff and unfeeling demeanor, many commandos recalled his lessons with an emotion that bordered on fondness. Sergeant Skirata did everything he could to get the clones trained in time to participate in the Clone Wars, but knew that all his training was no match for real combat. He also provided them with the knowledge that their Jedi commanders might not have the same level or kind of military training, and privately warned them not to blindly obey the orders of an inexperienced leader. In addition to calling his trainees "dead men" and "wet droids," Skirata was forced to admit that they were data-rich but experience-poor. The clone perplexed him, because they were essentially children who had the best combat training in the galaxy, and because they were able to accept their fate and do their duty without questioning their creators. In public, Skirata seemed to be invisible, having an average appearance that tended to blend into a crowd. His short, wiry body and nondescript face allowed him to pass almost unnoticed in public. However, when he chose to fight, it was obvious that he wasn't just any other being. As the Clone Wars raged on, Skirata found himself "promoted" to the position of special security advisor to the Senate Security Council, helping the Senate Guard and the Coruscant Security Force interact with the various clone commando units dispatched to handle volatile situations. (RCHC, SWI81)

Skirmisher

this was the term used by the Old Republic's military officers to describe the small boarding craft used by the Separatist navies during the height of the Clone Wars. Skirmishers were usually cloaked, to avoid detection, and held back from the main fighting until most of the warships on both sides were engaged. Then, they would slip behind a Republic ship's defenses and latch onto the ship's hull, blowing a hole in the plating to allow swarms of battle droids to board the Republic ship. Because the Separatist boarding party was made up entirely of battle droids, skirmishers didn't require life support systems that could be detected by most scanners, providing an added measure of stealth. (JT)

Skirtopanol

a drug which is used to reduce a prisoner's resistance to any interrogation. When it reacts with the drug lotiramine, it causes chemical amnesia and, sometimes, death in the prisoner. (XWN)

Skitter

this small creature, native to the planet Verkuyl, is known for its attraction to metal and other shiny objects. (TFNR)

Skitterfly

a small insect native to the planet Hirsi, skitterflies live on the surface of the freshwater lakes. (GG12)

Skloob

a Brigian term for urination. (HSL)

Skoa

this refreshing beverage is best served cold. (SOL)

Skodhan, Rya

this woman was a native of Mantooine, where she grew up as a street urchin and thief. After learning to deal sabacc and taking three months' pay from Airen Cracken, he recruited her into the Alliance. She later got a job dealing sabacc at the Imperial Palace Casino on Ord Mantell, where she could make contact with a great number of Imperial officers. She then steals information from their rooms - after learning its location with idle chatter during the game - and provides to Alliance agents who show up at her table. After establishing an agent's identity by dealing the agent a winning hand, and having the agent lose it intentionally, she deals the agent a hand that contains a coded message. (CRO)

Skoff, Emiel

this aging human male was a respected instructor at Darakin University before the Empire took control of its curriculum. Skoff left the university, rather than face persecution at the hands of Imperial agents, and set to work trying to discover a way for the Alliance to defeat the Empire. He believed that a heavily outnumbered force such as the Alliance could always prevail in battle. He also said that a reliance on technology provided a false sense of security. He once tried to locate information on a planet in the Gesaril system which was hidden by the Empire. Skoff cared little for appearances, and rarely bathed or changed his clothing. He wrote most of his notes on paper, rather than use a datapad. (GG6)

Skolos

this man served as the chief engineer aboard the Black Ice. He wasn't loyal to either side during the Galactic Civil War, but saw the Alliance team which tried to take control of the ship as a group of pirates. Skolos eventually turned the ship's computer systems against the Alliance, hoping to use her defense systems to eliminate them. Skolos caused a number of failures in life support and communications, then turned the maintenance droids on the Alliance agents. When he couldn't stop their actions, Skolos fought them to the death. He threw every form of grenade he could at them, but was eventually forced to surrender. (BI)

Skona

this was a common name among the Elom race. (UANT)

Skone System

this planetary system, located in Brak Sector, was controlled by the Empire at the height of the New Order. (FBS)

Skoo Runkin

this was a noted Nuknog individual in the history of the planet Sump. (UANT)

Skor II

this small, dense planet was the second world in the Squab system, and was the homeworld of the Squib race. It was located in the Calaron Sector, and had a virtually unlimited supply of natural resources, but they tended to be found in concentrated deposits. The temperate world was covered with forests, oceans, and mountains, and was temperate enough to support most forms of life. During the height of the Clone Wars, Skor II was one of many planets that became battlegrounds. (GG4, REB, LEV)

Skorp-lon

this was the name of the starfighter used by Quinlan Vos during the Clone Wars, when he appeared to defect from the Jedi Order to join the Separatists. The craft resembled an insect, with wide wings sprouting from a body that had segmented legs for landing gear. The tailfin on the Skorp-lon was curved upward and toward the front of the ship, giving it the appearance of a stinger. When Quinlan tried to escape from Dooku and found himself pursued by Asajj Ventress and Tol Skorr, he took the Skorp-lon through a series of random hyperspace jumps, only to have the ship damaged in the process. He was forced to dock with the abandoned hulk of the Titavian IV to make repairs, but the Dark Jedi found him and set the Skorp-lon adrift. Vos and Obi-Wan Kenobi were able to recover the ship after escaping from Ventress and Skorr. Unknown to the two Jedi, however, was the fact that Ventress managed to place a tracer on the hull of the Skorp-lon, which allowed them to follow the Jedi to Rendili, then Coruscant. (J4, RDR)

Skorr

Skorr was a hulking humanoid with pale, pebbly skin and pointed ears. He seemed to have been disfigured, and he wore a metal half-mask. He worked with the Rybet, Gribbet. He kidnapped Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa, in an effort to draw Solo out. He left Luke's lightsaber behind a proof that he held them. A homing beacon inside the lightsaber gave him a measure of control if Solo left the planet too quickly. Solo managed to liberate Luke and Leia, but was followed by Skorr and Gribbet when they fled the planet. Skorr continued tracking the homing beacon in the lightsaber until Han ejected it in a lifepod. Skorr followed the life pod, believing Solo was in it. He ended up within the midst of an Imperial fleet on maneuvers in the system, and was shipped off to the spice mines of Kessel. He later escaped from Kessel, and vowed to get revenge on Solo. He tracked him to Hoth, where the Alliance was investigating the planet's suitability as a base. Skorr captured Han, Luke, and Chewbacca, with the help of Bossk and Zuckass. They agree to meet Boba Fett on Ord Mantell, where they would turn Solo over to the bounty hunter for transport to Jabba the Hutt. They were intercepted by Darth Vader's fleet near Ord Mantell, and barely made it to the surface. While hiding in a moisture plant, they were ambushed by Raskar, who managed to free the Alliance agents and thwart Skorr's plans. (CSW)

Skorr, Tol

this former Jedi Knight was shot down over the planet Korriban during the early stages of the Clone Wars. He was rescued by Count Dooku, who helped him recover. From that point forward, Skorr became an apprentice to the Dark Side of the Force, and remained one of Dooku's most loyal servants. Quinlan Vos, on a mission to infiltrate the Separatists, was forced to defeat Skorr and Kadrian Sey in combat in order to gain audience with Dooku. Skorr remained loyal to Dooku, however, even as Vos gained more and more power. He eventually became Asajj Ventress' chief lieutenant, and found renewed favor in the eyes of Count Dooku when Vos was exposed as a spy. Skorr and Ventress nearly captured Vos aboard the Titavian IV, but the timely intervention of Obi-Wan Kenobi saved his life. Skorr and Ventress were left to explain the loss of the two Jedi to General Grievous himself. However, Ventress set off on a mission of personal revenge against Kenobi, leaving Skorr to take the brunt of the General's displeasure. During the Siege of Saleucami, Skorr and a group of agents working for Salje' Tasha were dispatched to Saleucami to ensure that Khaleen Hentz and Vos kept their end of the bargain by relaying information on the movements of the Republic's forces on the planet. (J4, RSS, RDR, RSOS)

Skorrupon

this was one of the many resort worlds maintained by the Empire during the height of the New Order. (GCG)

s'Korth'an

this was a hilly region of the planet Guiteica. It was revered among Bitthaevrian warriors, for the greatest of their numbers were buried there. (AIR)

Skosef

this man was one of the small cadre' of Imperial officers who allied themselves with Grand Moff Trachta during the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. A General in the Imperial armed forces, Skosef was assigned by Trachta to oversee the infiltration of special agents onto the shuttle which would have taken Emperor Palpatine to the first Death Star. The assassination attempt was actually a feint, designed to eliminate a large portion of Palpatine's personal detachment of stormtroopers. Trachta's specially-altered replacements would then be presented as a gift to Palpatine, allowing them to overtly infiltrate the Emperor's guard. Unfortunately for Skosef, his constant opposition to Trachta's plans led Trachta to set up a communications chain that linked Skosef to the explosion aboard the Mathayus that was supposed to assassinate Darth Vader. Skosef was arrested and later executed for his treachery. (SWEB)

Skotcarp

this lizard was native to the planet Barab I, where it lived on the slopes of Mount Ste'vshuulsz. (FH2)

Skoth

this dried-up riverbed is found on the planet Prakith, and was the source of valuable ores. The mines which studded the riverbed were controlled by the Imperial warlord Foga Brill. (SOL)

'skra

this suffix was added to a Bothan's family name to indicate the individual's affiliation to the Iskra or Askra clans. (GCG, WOTC)

Skra'akan

this huge ocean creature is found in the polar regions of the planet Calamari, but a sighting is incredibly rare. It resembled a massive, thick-bodied squid in that it had a number of long tentacles, but it also had a great mouth that it used to consume its prey. (CCR)

Skraeling

this was one of the many Victory-class Star Destroyers which were still active, as part of the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Skrag

a Corellian swear word. (TFE)

Skrag Turn

this was the name given to a section of the Agrilat Swamp Circuit, one of the most popular swoop racing courses of the New Order. (SWGAL)

Skraj'Tais

this was the primary starport located on the planet Coyn, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Its name literally meant "Skyland." It was similar in design to Kwenn Space Station, and was used mainly by beings who had no business on Coyn itself, but were merely stopping over. (PG3)

Skrank

this was a Sluissi swear word. (GMR1)

Skreeg

this bristly-furred herbivore was native to the moon of Yavin 4. Skreegs were known to be aggressive, especially when defending their herd. (GQRG)

Skreej, Tamtel

the alias used by Lando Calrissian to gain entrance to Jabba the Hutt's palace. EV-9D9 discovered Calrissian's presence when she became paranoid about the appearance of R2-D2 and C-3PO following a number of strange droid problems in Jabba's palace. She thought that Calrissian was in the palace to recapture her. (TJP)

Skreeka

this was a somewhat disreputable city found on the planet Atzerri. It was much less refined than Talos, and boasted a small spaceport. (SOL, EGP)

Skreeker

a small creature native to Belsavis, skreekers are nocturnal. (COJ)

Skree-skater

this predator was native to Galantos. Its feet had evolved over time to allow the skree-skater to move across the surface of the gelatinous pools which covered the planet. Their bodies were often covered with colorful, quivering tendrils, which helped them attract their prey. (EGP, CCW)

Skreev

this was another name for the Dxunian raptor, or the Dxun Devourer. (GMR3)

Skrilling

an alien race which evolved on the planet known simply as Agriworld-2079, the Skrillings are humanoid scavengers of large size and stature. They have baggy skin covering their large bodies. Their poor, small eyes sit above eight breather tubes that take the place of a nose. These tubes are studded with olfactory buds that allow the Skrillings to rely on their sense of smell instead of their poor eyesight. Their mouths are filled with sharp teeth. They feed on the carcasses of the various grazing beasts of their homeworld, filling a niche in the ecological system. This has led many other races to regard them simply as disgusting, annoying beasts with no real intelligence. They avoid conflict, and were discovered by a M'shinni exploration ship. The Skrillings had no name for their world, so the M'shinni simply named it Agriworld-2079. It has been determined that the name 'Skrilling' is in fact a M'shinni term that means 'bone picker.' The Skrillings had been a nomadic race, but the segmentation of agricultural land by the M'shinni forced them to form loose villages. Skrillings have a unique talent that allows them to continually ask the same question in many different ways, wearing their opponent down but never angering them. This allows them to ingratiate themselves into any situation, and is the method they used to gain transport on M'shinni cargo ships and escape Agriworld-2079. The Skrilling race developed minimal levels of technology before the advent of the M'shinni, and have evolved minimally since then. (GG12)

this was the name given to the native language of the Skrilling people. (ANT)

Skrim, Wilhalm

this man lived on Tatooine during the height of the New Order. (QQRG)

Sk'rirak

this female Tarong was the younger sibling of K'derek, and has light and dark olive green plumage. Like her brother, she was a skillful merchant before she became an information gatherer for the Alliance. Sk'rirak and K'derek sold their information for droids and jewelry. (GG12)

Skrisst

this was one of the more common names used by Trandoshan hunters. Like most Trandoshan names, it was reserved for males, but could be adopted by those rare females who became hunters. In the Trandoshan language, the name meant "tears his enemies to pieces". (GCG)

Skritch

Gudb's pet gorm worm, Skritch was responsible for the death of Andur Sunrider. (TOJ)

Skronkie

this species of small insect makes a loud humming noise when it swarms together. (VOF)

S'krrr

this is the third planet in the Ishanna System, and is a hot world blanketed by rainforests and jungles. It is the homeworld of the S'krrr race. The average day on S'krrr lasts 22 standard hours, and its year lasts 310 local days. (SWJ9)

S'krrr

this alien race, native to a planet of the same name, has been a rival of their human neighbors from the planet Rabaan. For centuries, the two races settled their differences in one-on-one combat on the Combat Moon. The S'krrr are tall, mantis-like insectoids with sharp body segments and small, transparent wings on their backs. They use these wings to communicate in what is known as "wingsong." They have managed to remain technologically advanced for their remote location, but never developed space travel. It is generally assumed that the S'krrr descended from insects, most likely the drog beetle, although there is no evidence to support this. Certain members of the S'krrr population worship the lower insects for this purported ancestry. (SWJ9, GOF8)

Sku

this was the Ewok word for "hello". (BTRKS26)

Skud

this alien was one of Jabba's henchmen during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Unfortunately, Skud was shot and killed by Han Solo on Orleon, when Jabba tried to capture the smuggler on the planet soemtime after the Battle of Yavin. (MC28)

Skugg

this was a derogatory name for an individual, but was often used in friendly arguments. (T4)

Skuhm

the hide of this creature, native to the planet Muzara, was used to make protective clothing and carrying bags. (TOJC)

Skull

starfighter pilot slang term for a Z-95 Headhunter. (IJ)

Skull of Thalemute

this remarkable xenoarchaeological find was discovered by Doctor Angrail Ryhl. (HR)

Skull-Biters Flightknife

one of the many Cartann fighter squadrons which opposed Wedge Antilles and the Running Crimson Flightknife during the war against the forces of the Yedagon nation, on Adumar. They were defeated by Wedge's forces in battle, and surrendered. (SOA)

Skulls

this swoop gang, founded on the planet Stend VI, was started by Jeng Seth. They have since relocated to the Hook Nebula. (GG9)

Skull-Stone

this pendant is worn by members of the Guild of Vindicators. (CSWDW)

Skurvis

this Krish worked as a bodyguard to Treytis Prash, until he was shot and killed by Celia Durasha. Celia was led by Thune to believe that Prash was a bounty hunter holding her partner, Kaj Nedmak. This allowed Thune to eliminate the two bodyguards and capture Prash. (SWJ14)

Skusk

an aromatic plant that Wuher uses to create the perfect liqueur for Jabba the Hutt. (TME)

Skustell Cluster

this collection of stars and systems was known as the home of the Ongree race. (SWDB)

Skutch

Meeka Reen's lieutenant, he was placed in charge of guarding Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa when they were taken from Ryko Vant in the wastes of Jerne. He was killed on Adony Station during the attempt to open the vault containing the eternity crystal. The vault had been rigged by Darth Vader to explode and kill Luke and Leia. They escaped, but Skutch was not so lucky. (CSWDW)

Skutu, Trel

known in Imperial circles as "Scourge," Trel was a flight leader for a wing of TIE Fighters during the Galactic Civil War. He believed that the starfighter and its pilot were the real victors in a space battle, not the slow capital ships. (MTSE)

Skuwkrith

this was the name of a noted Ssi-ruuk individual. (UANT)

Sky Cannon

this strange device was located within Mount Yeroc, on Tahlboor. The cannon resembled a huge spotlight, and generated an intense beam of energy when activated. The cannon was controlled by Chief Nimodro for many years. Although he knew that his ancestors had used the cannon to communicate with the planet, he never really understood what they meant. He knew that the beam of energy was blindingly bright, and seemed to be most powerful near the planet's surface. The true use of the cannon was eventually revealed by R2-D2 and C-3PO, when the droids were in the service of Counselor Harthan. Shortly before an all-out war between the Troobs and Hobors, R2-D2 determined how to activate the cannon's communication functions. He used it to project a huge image of C-3PO above the surface of the planet, an image which was visible and audible several miles away. The cannon was actually built by an ancient, though highly technical, Tahlboorian civilization. They designed it to harness the power of the planet's inner core to carve the surface of the planet to their own design, hoping to create a paradise for themselves. They had planned to use the cannon to adjust the orbits of Tahlboor's moons, thereby modifying the tides, but they did not survive to see this goal achieved. Jake Harthan also learned of the sky cannon's abilities, and sought to undermine his father's work in order to gain control of the cannon. Thanks to the droids, he failed, and the Hobors and Troobs moved closer to achieving peace. (DRPC)

Sky City

Sky Fire

this was the Langhesi name for the huge bolts of lightning which were called down by the boras and the Jentari during the process of forging their seeds. (RP)

Sky Mine

this form of explosive weapon was developed during the last decades of the Old Republic. Sky mines were deployed in orbit by a delivery ship, then activated. They were given rough targetting parameters, often with transponder code masks, and then hunted down their targets. They had excellent maneuverability, and chased after their target until they ran out of fuel or were destroyed. Since sky mines were mobile, and could lock onto a target of their own volition, starfighter squadrons had to have their missions coordinated with the parameters used to program the mines. (RP)

Sky Seraphs

a group of deities worshipped by Doallyn. (TJP)

Sky Slicing

this sport developed on urban planets during the height of the New Order. A one-man event, sky slicing involved "surfing" through the air on a repulsor-equipped platform, using only one's balance to maneuver. (GFT)

Sky Stone

see Um'Tal (HR)

Sky Striker 5000

this modified swoop was produced by Aratech during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Capable of achieving a top speed of 580 kilometers an hour, and with a flight ceiling of 200 meters, the Sky Striker 5000 allowed its rider to "surf" through the air in the sport of sky slicing. This small vehicle was controlled by pressure from the feet and legs, and maneuverability was based primarily on balance. A pair of magnetic boots was required to maintain contact with the swoop, and a leg rope was attached to prevent the platform from getting away from a rider. (GFT)

Sky Swooper

this repulsor-augmented hang glider was designed and manufactured by Nen-Carvon for the Empire., and was used to travel above the jungles of Aris. They have a twin blaster mounted on the frame, above the flier's head. The Imperial forces occupying Aris found sky swoopers invaluable transports. (RM, ROE)

Sky Yards-class Herdship

this Ithorian herdship was similar in most respects to the Manollium-class herdship, but it was solely produced by the Ithor-based Ithorian SkyYards corporation. (GMR4)

Skyarch

this is an architectural structure that resembles a group of suspended bridges. Made famous by the Grand Rim Promenade on Cejansij, skyarches span most of the Canyonade and link the opposing sides of the Promenade. The skyarch consists of nine walkways which are held in place without the use of repulsorlift technology. This is what makes them almost unique in the galaxy. There are nine walkways in all, arranged in a diamond pattern. The three middle walkways connect the Promenade, and there are two walkways above and below, then one more above and below those two. The skyarch had been in place for nearly three centuries prior to the Battle of Endor. (SOP)

Skybarge

Fadoop's patched-up aircraft. (HSL)

Skybird

a popular model of racing swoop manufactured by Ubrikkian, the Skybird was designed to compete with the Nebulon-Q and Flare-S swoops. Despite the fact that it could attain speeds of 650 kilometers per hour or more, it was more expensive than the other models and had a flight ceiling of just 35 meters. (RPG)

SkyBlind

this Loronar reconnaissance ship found acceptance among galactic scouts, for its design and capabilities allow many scouts to explore new worlds with a great deal of concealment. The SkyBlind is a 21-meter sphere which can carry a pilot and up to seven passengers, along with about forty cubic meters of cargo. The SkyBlind is shielded, and is armed with a single proton torpedo launcher. The spherical shape allows most long-wave sensor scans to pass around it, providing a measure of stealth. The cargo space is often limited by half, however, because one of the SkyBlind's unique features is the inclusion of a small, spherical landing craft. The landing craft is six meters in diameter, and can transport the SkyBlind's entire crew to the surface of a planet. Where the main SkyBlind ship is an interstellar craft equipped with a hyperdrive, the landing craft is a repulsor-powered module and must have sufficient gravity to operate. The landing craft is air- and watertight, is minimally shielded, and has no weapons. Both the SkyBlind main ship and its landing craft are equipped with sensor-masking technology, allowing them to move into a hostile situation without drawing attention. (GG8)

Skyboat Pirates

this band of pirates terrorized the royal family of Xoman Free, during the years following the Stark Hyperspace War. They were thwarted in their efforts to kidnap the royal princess by Jedi Knight Quinlan Vos and his apprentice, Aayla Secura. (SHW)

SkyCenter Galleria

this amusement center was built on Cloud City by Lando Calrissian and Cojahn after the failure of Hologram Funworld, about 19 years after the Battle of Endor. Lando used the profits from GemDiver Station to build it, and hoped it would be the first of many centers throughout the galaxy. It boasted restaurants, shopping centers, holomazes, experience chambers, and thrill rides. He brought Jaina and Jacen Solo, as well as the other Jedi trainees at Luke Skywalker's praxeum, to Cloud City to try it out and give it a "test-drive." When he arrived, though, he discovered that Cojahn had been murdered by agents of Black Sun, who wished to gain control of the Galleria. (TCC)

Skyclaw

a Preybird-class attack ship owned by Mazzic. Its hull was painted to resemble a huge bird of prey surrounded by red flames. Mazzic and his crews performed heavy modifications to the Skyclaw and its twin, the Raptor, acquiring military parts produced by the Empire on the black market in order to augment their capabilities. The ship required a pilot and a gunner to operate, and was armed with a pair of heavy laser cannons and two concussion missile launchers. (TLC, LCSB, GMR4)

Skyclaw

one of two disguised starfighters used by Manda D'ulin's team of Mistryls. (TME)

Skycrawler

this was the affectionate term used by Leia Organa-Solo to describe any child who would be born to Luke Skywalker and Mara Jade Skywalker. (BP)

Skycycle

this was another name for a speederbike. (DRKN)

Skydome Botanical Gardens

a huge terrarium on Coruscant, designed, financed, and built by an Old Republic philanthropist. Ostensibly built to provide the people of the galaxy with a collection of the most wondrous plantlife, much of the Gardens were set aside for research and breeding. Among the "off limits" exhibits was a collection of carnivorous plantlife, which required more than two tons of meat each month. (JS, CCW)

Skydove Freight

this was one of the many legitimate businesses that were owned by Popara the Hutt, during the early years of the New Order. Skydove maintained a warehouse on the planet Endregaad for many years. (TF)

Sky-Dreadnaught

this huge airship was the primary warship of the fleet that protected Exocron from invasion. It was essentially a 200-meter long airspeeder, consisting of a central air-foil spar connected to two huge, finned cylinders. The crew consists of 340 officers and 120 gunners. The gunners handle outdated but nevertheless effective weaponry like 18 projectile cannons, 38 repeating percussion cannons, and 2 static ion field dischargers. These ships are incapable of travelling beyond Exocron's immediate atmosphere, with a flight ceiling of about 10 kilometers. They were escorted by squadrons of Skylark airspeeders, which could be landed in the central spar. (KO)

Skye

this rugged, mountainous planet was the homeworld of the S'kytri. During the height of the Clone Wars, the planet was kept free of Separatist control through the valiant efforts of Anakin Skywalker. However, years later, the Empire took control of the planet and renamed it Marat V. The planet was under Imperial control during the height of the Galactic Civil War, with Kharys ruling the world at the order of Darth Vader. However, Luke Skywalker's presence on Skye changed that, as he turned out to be the being who was prophesied to free the S'kytri from Kharys' domination. (LTA1, MCA1, SWI73)

Skyfang

this was another name for the mountain M'Nis, located on the planet Gorothe Prime. (GSE)

Skyflipper

developed by Sandtek, this small transport craft was designed to carry a pilot and passenger across short distances. (NEGC)

SkyFoil

this was Bespin Motors' amateur model of sling racer. It was capable of attaining speeds of 230 kilometers per hour. (SPG)

Skyheist 43v

this was a well-equipped repulsorcraft that was used on many aquatic worlds during the New Order and into the era of the New Republic. (GMR9)

Skyhook

the name given to any of the orbital platforms used by the wealthier residents of Coruscant as a stopover point in travelling from the ground into space. They are connected to a planet's surface by a long, flexible, elevator tube. Some were simply small landing pads on which beings could wait for further transport. Others were lavish constructions nearly the size of asteroids. Emperor Palpatine's skyhook was particularly lovely, as it had been created as a botanical refuge from Coruscant's urban buildings. Prince Xizor tried to steal Palpatine's gardener for his own skyhook, Falleen's Fist, but the being had an "unfortunate accident" before he met his new employer. (SE, SSE)

Skyhook

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was part of the fleet assigned to Han Solo and the Mon Remonda during the hunt for Warlord Zsinj. In the attempt to trap Zsinj at Vahaba, the Crynid and the Skyhook were assigned to protect the Interdictor cruiser Stellar Web. (SOC)

Skyhopper

any craft designed to operate in a planet's atmosphere, such as the Bestinian Skyhopper. (ROTJN)

Skyhopper

this was the brand name for Incom's T-16 pleasure/utility craft, originally produced during the last decades of the Old Republic. It was a tropospheric craft, although it shared a number of common systems with the X-Wing T-65. (SW, SHPT)

Skyhouse

a form of architecture in which the entire house is levitated on repulsorlifts. The house then appears to float in the sky. (ZHR)

Skyjumper

this transport ship was owned by Drev Jalok. The ship was disabled over Altier by Drek Drednar and the Sable III. (SWJ5)

Skylane

this is generic term that was developed on the city-world of Coruscant. There, skylanes referred to the complex magnetic pathways which were established to regulate traffic moving throughout Imperial City and around the planet. There were a multitude of levels of skylanes, and each level was dedicated to a specific direction or speed. Any craft wishing to travel on the planet must have a navigational computer which could be slaved into the skylane's magnetic controls. Once a destination had been selected, the skylane control would move the craft along the magnetic pathways, changing levels and directions as needed, until the craft reached its destination. This automated control kept traffic accidents to a minimum, which was important on Coruscant where thousands of craft of every size and ship moved around the planet each hour. (IG1)

Skylark

this form of combat airspeeder was developed for use by the military police of the planet Exocron. They have a cylindrical shape highlighted by eight wing-like stabilizers. They are equipped with primitive wave-form communications terminals, and are armed with a single projectile cannon and two percussion cannons. (KO)

Skylight Market

located at the very center of the Center Sphere district of Bartyn's Landing, on the planet Lamaredd, this open-air market was the ideal place to purchase exotic or illegal items on the planet. It was named for the fact that it was located beneath the open section of the Sphere. (GMR7)

Skylight Squadron

this group of TIE Fighters served aboard the Allegiance during the defense of Adumar. (SOA)

Skylow, Tor

this former Imperial Navy officer convinced her crew - a group of customs inspectors on tour - to defect. They took over control of their frigate, and placed anyone who chose not to defect into the escape pods. The pods were jettisoned near Travnin, with Skylow informing the authorities of their whereabouts. The Empire responded to the defection by claiming Skylow and her crew cruelly left the Imperials to die. Skylow and her crew then fled to the Yelsain system, where they refitted the frigate and renamed it the Counter Puncher. They turned to waylaying Imperial supply ships, taking their cargoes but leaving the crews alive and intact. The goods they stole were then sold on Yelsain for cheap prices. In return, the natives of Yelsain hid Skylow's team whenever they were pursued. She has had several cyborg implants added to her athletic body, but the exact modifications are not known. She is the prototypical noble pirate, down to her flowing red hair and lavish dress. (GG6)

Skynara

this planet is located in Skine Sector. It was located at one end of the Five Veils' Tour Route. (GG9)

Skynx

a Ruurian expert on pre-Old Republic history in the Tion Hegemony, Skynx was still in his larval stage when Badure approached him to help translate the log-recorder from the Queen of Ranroon . He agrees to help Badure, for Skynx had a yearning to experience a true, human adventure before moving into his pupal stage. He is adept at playing the musical instruments of his people. Skynx proved a valuable asset, helping to translate the ship's log-recorder and later tricking Gallandro into following him into the Queen's holds. This activated the ship's anti-weapons systems, killing Gallandro before he could kill Han Solo. When the mystery of the Queen was uncovered, Skynx left to return to his studies, hoping to complete them before he was forced to spin his cocoon and metamorph into a chroma-wing flier. (HSL)

Skynxnex, Arb

this tall, thin human was imprisoned on Kessel as a young man for his involvement with the criminal organization Black Sun. The crime he was arrested for was theft, and he escaped the death sentence because he was young and healthy. He became part of Moruth Doole's spice-smuggling operation. He was assigned to the prison for his long record theft and assassinations, and grew in favor under Doole's watchful eye. Doole used Skynxnex as his liaison to the smugglers who transported loads of spice. Skynxnex was killed shortly Han Solo and Chewie crash-landed on Kessel, when they and Kyp Durrone escaped from the mines. (JS, WG, JASB)

Skypath Industries

this textile firm maintained an outlet on Dravian Starport. (GMH)

Skyraptor

another combat airspeeder developed for the Exocron Airfleet, it is superior to the Skylark in terms of agility and armament. The Skyraptor is armed with two percussion cannons and four air-to-air rocket launchers. (KO)

Skyreach Hotel

a chain of hotels operated in the Outer Rim Territories. (GG9)

Skyrung Manufacturing

headquartered in the city of Syward, on the planet of Lavisar, this corporation was a licensed builder of Lambda-class shuttles for the Empire. (IF)

Sky-scan Sensor

a portable sensor which can be mounted on high ground and used to monitor the approach of an enemy. (HSR)

Skysitter Restaurant

this was one of the most exclusive restaurants found in Galactic City, on the planet Coruscant, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Only the wealthiest of the galaxy's Senators could afford to eat at the Skysitter, which sat atop a spire in a rotating structure that provided patrons with an expansive view of the city. It was located near the Nicandra Counterrevolutionary Signalmens' Memorial Building. (IWE2)

SkySlayer

this is the name given to one of Aratech's light assault ships. The SkySlayer measured 20 meters in length, and was armed with a pair of quad-laser cannons and four blaster cannons. It required a crew of seven. (SH)

Skyspeeder

the primary mode of transportation used by the Cloud Riders on Aduba-3, a skyspeeder was the frame of an Aratech Peregrine 240 swoop which had been refitted with Nebulon-Q thruster jets. This pairing combined the speed and maneuverability of a swoop with the durability of a landspeeder. The main body of the skyspeeder was protected by an armored nosecone, and a pair of long rails served as landing gear. The Incom T-47 was a prime example of a skyspeeder, when it was modified to employ high-power repulsor engines and a pressurized cabin for high-altitude flight. (MC8, MC9, NEG, GMR4)

Skytowers Residence

this apartment building, located in the city of Brenn on Genesia, was an Alliance safehouse during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. (FBS)

S'kytri

this was name of the race of tall, winged humanoids native to the planet Skye. Despite being loyal to the Empire during the Galactic Civil War, the S'kytri believed that a being would arrive on Skye and overthrow Kharys the Majestrix and free them. The prophesy had been set down shortly after the Clone Wars, when Obi-Wan Kenobi, Darth Vader, and Anakin Skywalker saved Skye from total destruction. This being turned out to be none other than Luke Skywalker. The average S'kytri was distinguished by its green skin and silvery topknot of hair. In their native language, the name 'S'kytri' literally meant 'Windborn.' (LTA1, MCA1)

S'kytric

this was the spoken language of the S'kytri race. During the height of the New Order, S'kytric was nearly replaced by Basic when the Empire subjugated the planet Skye. However, in the aftermath of the Battle of Endor, S'kytric was one of many forgotten languages embraced by folk singers and artists. (UANT)

Skytunnel

this term was developed on Coruscant to describe the shielded traffic lanes which wound through the upper levels of buildings across Galactic City, connecting main traffic lanes with each other. These skytunnels were constructed with openings at specific levels of several buildings, with connecting tunnels between buildings, creating a single pipeline for traffic to move from place to place. Skytunnels were developed to be bombproof, so that terrorists couldn't disrupt traffic flows. They also contained high-level tracking systems to monitor traffic and ensure that vehicles maintained safe speeds. Skytunnels were created to solve two problems. First and most obvious was the continual upward development of Galactic City's spacescraper buildings, which often rose into established traffic lanes. Second was the need to allow traffic to move through private or high-security zones, without allowing access to these zones. (IWE2)

Skywalker Epoch

this was a name used by some historians to describe the modern era of the galaxy, into which Anakin Skywalker and his children, Luke and Leia, were born. (TOJC)

Skywalker Lars, Shmi

this woman's family was captured by pirates when she was very young, and sold into slavery. She was passed from owner to owner over nearly three decades before being sold to Gardulla the Hutt. Shmi is best-known as the mother of Anakin Skywalker, although she remembers no man participating in Anakin's conception. Instead, she simply discovered she was pregnant and gave birth to the boy. Being a slave, there was no uproar over the fact that she was unmarried and did not know the father. After Gardulla lost a bet to Watto, Shmi and Anakin became the property of the ornery Toydarian. As Anakin grew, Shmi knew that there was something special about her son. She hid as much of it as she could from Watto, hoping that the beast wouldn't use Anakin to his advantage. When Qui-Gon Jinn travelled to Tatooine, Shmi understood that Anakin was to leave with him. She could no longer hold the boy back from his destiny. When Anakin won the Boonta Eve podrace, Qui-Gon managed to win the boy in a bet with Watto, but was unable to gain Shmi's freedom. She remained behind on Tatooine, hoping to see her young son again someday. Five years later, Shmi's freedom was purchased by a gruff man named Cliegg Lars, who had fallen in love with her. Cliegg and his son, Owen, devised a plan with Shmi's help, in which they tricked Watto into trading Shmi for an intact Tobal lens. It was then that Watto admitted Shmi had been more or less free since Anakin left Tatooine, since Watto had deactivated her slave transmitter shortly afterward. He feared that Shmi would wander aimlessly off in her sorrow, and blow herself up. When Cliegg asked her to marry him, Shmi agreed. She found that she loved Cliegg, as well as his young son Owen, and wanted to share their lives. For five years they lived in relative bliss on the Lars moisture farms, although Shmi kept a vigil every night, hoping that Anakin would return from the stars. Just before the onset of the Clone Wars, Tusken Raiders began attacking the outlying moisture farms. One morning, Shmi went out to pick mushrooms from the moisture vaporators, but was captured by the Tusken on her way home. She was brutally tortured for more than a month, holding onto her memories of Anakin in an effort to remain alive. When Anakin finally arrived on Tatooine, drawn to his mother's pain through the Force, he was able to free her from bondage. However, Shmi's injuries were too great, and she died in the Tusken camp. In his anger, Anakin killed the entire Tusken clan. He then collected Shmi's body and returned it to the Lars homestead. Shmi was buried next to Cliegg's first wife and parents. Note that a story in Star Wars Insider, issue 77, indicates that Shmi died twelve years before the Clone Wars. After Cliegg's death, the headstones on the Lars moisture farm were removed by Owen Lars, who claimed that no one needed to know where Shmi was buried. Note that Star Wars Insider magazine, issue 80, claims that Owen told Luke Skywalker about Shmi, because his last name came from hers. Shmi Skywalker was portrayed by Pernilla August in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace. (SW1, IG1, AOTC, TG, SW177, SW180)

Skywalker Technical Maintenance Service

a ruse used by R2-D2 to hide from the Imperial stormtroopers in Mos Eisley, he and C-3PO posed as maintenance droids from this false start-up company in order to gain access to a machine shop. They told the owner that they would fix his energy lathe for free, as part of a one-time, promotional offering. (SWR)

Skywalker Tour

this was the name of a tour developed by the government of Tatooine shortly after the Battle of Endor. It was created to draw more tourists to the desert planet, and claimed to highlight all the locations Luke Skywalker visited before he became a hero of the Alliance and the first of the new Jedi Knights. Stops included the old Lars homestead, the Mos Eisley Cantina, and the site of the wreck of Jabba the Hutt's sail barge near the Pit of Carkoon. (SWTJ)

Skywalker, Anakin

Anakin grew up as a slave in the markets of Mos Espa, on Tatooine, arriving on the planet with his mother Shmi when he was just three years old. Shmi later revealed that there was no father to Anakin, that she simply found out she was pregnant and carried the child to birth. Anakin and his mother were owned by Gardulla the Hutt at the time, but were eventually won in a podrace bet by Watto. Despite his gruff demeanor, Watto treated the Skywalkers fairly. After meeting Qui-Gon Jinn, Anakin dreamed of becoming a Jedi Knight. His chances were enhanced when Qui-Gon learned of his immaculate conception, believing Anakin to be the Chosen One prophesied by the ancient Jedi lore. After winning the Boonta Eve Classic podrace and being freed by Qui-Gon, Anakin left Tatooine and trained by Obi-Wan Kenobi. His own lightsaber was constructed on Ilum, but Anakin could only remember obtaining the red blade from a vision of Darth Maul. Eventually, he grew into a brash young pilot who joined the Old Republic as a fighter pilot, gaining recognition during his education at the Academy and then during the Clone Wars. Anakin was still a brash young man, and the barriers of patience and hard work seemed to stifle his growing proficiency in the Force. During much of his training, Anakin thought of just two people: his mother on Tatooine, and Padme' Amidala. He fell in love with Padme', and was frustrated that this love was unreturnable. It was about this time that Senator Palpatine also noticed the young Anakin. Sensing the Force within him, Palpatine also sensed Anakin's desire to learn quickly. After the death of Shmi Skywalker Lars at the hands of a clan of Tusken Raiders, Anakin became so enraged that he killed the entire clan, including the females and the children. His descent into the Dark Side had begun. During the Battle of Geonosis, Anakin lost his right arm in a lightsaber duel with Count Dooku. The arm was replaced with a cybernetic prosthesis, but took away some part of Anakin's humanity. Anakin slipped further from the Jedi ideal when he secretly married Padme' on Naboo. Anakin fought beside Obi-Wan during the Clone Wars, but Anakin's secrets and his anger often put them at odds. As the war ground on, Obi-Wan was forced to go off on a mission by himself, and Anakin was chosen to accompany Nejaa Halcyon to Praesitlyn. Anakin's quick thinking and daring heroics assured that the hostages there were saved, and the Jedi Council decided to promote him to the level of Jedi Knight upon his return. He made sure that his Padawan's braid was removed from the Jedi Temple and given to Padme' for safekeeping, as another reminder of his love for her. After Anakin beheaded Count Dooku during the First Battle of Coruscant, it was hoped that the Clone Wars came to an end. However, the Outer Rim Sieges continued to rage, forcing the Senate to continue supporting the needs of Chancellor Palpatine. It was during this time that Chancellor Palpatine introduced Anakin to the wonders of the Dark Side of The Force. He also learned that Padme' was pregnant with his child, although he soon began having dreams of her death during childbirth. Anakin realized that, with the power of the Dark Side of the Force behind him, he would be able to provide for himself and his pregnant wife. There would be nothing to hinder him, and his security seemed assured. He became Palpatine's student and was given the title of Darth Vader, and the fall from the Light Side to the Dark Side happened so quickly that Kenobi was powerless to stop it. Kenobi pleaded with Anakin to return to the Light Side, but Anakin would have no part of it. He became Palpatine's personal weapon, destroying the inhabitants of the Jedi Temple before traveling to Mustafar to destroy the Council of Separatists. Padme' and Obi-Wan both followed Anakin to Mustafar, where Anakin accused them of betraying him. After a heated argument in which Anakin nearly choked Padme' to death, Anakin and Kenobi confronted each other in a vicious lightsaber duel. They were evenly matched physically, but Obi-Wan's knowledge of the Force was much greater than Anakin's, and Kenobi was able to maintain his strength. Obi-Wan was forced to cut off Anakin's legs and arm in order to stop him, and Anakin fell into a lava-filled pit, where he was seared alive. Obi-Wan then turned his back on Anakin, leaving him to die in the hopes that the evil in the galaxy would be eliminated. Palpatine, however, managed to locate Anakin before he could die and pulled the burning Anakin from the pit. Palpatine spared no expense in trying to save Anakin, employing a team of medical droids to replace his lost limbs and fit him with a cybernetic life-support suit. Meanwhile, Kenobi then fled with Padme', taking her to Polis Massa where she died during childbirth, just as Anakin had foreseen. It appeared that she died of a broken heart, as medical scans revealed no physical trauma. Anakin's anger boiled over when he learned of Padme's death, especially when Palpatine explained that it had been Anakin himself who killed her. After giving in completely to his anger and hatred, Anakin became Palpatine's minion. Sometime after the Battle of Yavin, Palpatine was able to discover that Anakin had had a son. He used this knowledge to help secure his hold on the former Anakin Skywalker, as well as a way to help turn Luke to the Dark Side. The Light Side of Anakin Skywalker seemed to try and return to the surface, and Vader was faced with a crisis. During the Battle of Endor, Luke managed to get the Light Side of Anakin to re-assert itself, and as the Emperor was trying to kill Luke, Anakin rose up and threw the Emperor down the Death Star's power shaft. The life-support systems that kept Darth Vader alive, however, were seriously damaged by the Emperor's Force lightning, and failed. Anakin died soon after Luke removed the facemask to allow Anakin to see his son with his own eyes. *Anakin was portrayed by Sebastian Shaw in Star Wars: Episode VI - Return of the Jedi, by Jake Lloyd in Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace, and by Hayden Christensen in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones and Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. Skywalker, Ben this was the name given to the infant son of Luke Skywalker and his wife, Mara Jade Skywalker, born shortly after the Battle of Duro. Ben was born aboard the converted Star Destroyer Errant Venture, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. He was separated from his parents shortly afterward, both to protect him and allow them to fight against the alien invaders. Ben was taken in by his aunt and uncle, Leia Organa Solo and her husband, Han, and brought up on Coruscant. When the Yuuzhan Vong launched their attack on Coruscant, Ben was in Leia's custody as the Solo family made its way to the Millennium Falcon. However, the intervention of Viki Shesh forced Leia to turn Ben over to C-3PO, who was whisked aboard the Byrt instead of remaining with the Solos. (EVR, SBS)

Skywalker, Luke

Luke was the son of Anakin Skywalker and Padme' Amidala, and the older twin brother to Princess Leia Organa. He was separated from his sister just after their birth, in order to conceal his potential Force-sensitivity from the Emperor and Darth Vader. He was hidden on the planet Tatooine by Obi-Wan Kenobi, and lived his early years under the watchful eyes of Owen and Beru Lars. Luke was an eager boy, and was always flying his T-16 skyhopper in the canyons near his home while dreaming of being a starpilot at the Academy. Known as Wormie by his friends, he was a reckless youth whose best friend was Biggs Darklighter. When Biggs went off to the Academy, and later the Alliance, Luke felt that he was being mistreated by his Uncle, who annually refused to allow Luke to enroll. Fate and fortune intervened, however, when Owen purchased two well-worn droids named Artoo-Detoo and See-Threepio. With their purchase, Luke was catapulted into the midst of the Alliance. Obi-Wan Kenobi began to instruct Luke in the use of The Force. Luke then rescued Princess Leia from the first Death Star with the help of Han Solo. Following Kenobi's death, Luke destroyed the Death Star by calling on The Force. Later, Luke was visited by Kenobi's spirit, and directed to the planet Dagobah, where Luke trained under the Jedi Master Yoda. Following Yoda's death, Luke became the last of the Jedi Knights. He used his new-found strength to defeat Emperor Palpatine and turn Darth Vader from the Dark Side of the Force, returning Anakin Skywalker to the Light Side. In the years following the formation of the New Republic, Luke was instrumental in the New Republic's defeat of the Ssi-ruuk, the reborn Palpatine, as well as Imperial Admirals Thrawn and Daala. Luke continued his training on his own, and eventually became a Jedi Master. He set up a new Jedi Academy on Yavin's fourth moon, and began teaching the ways of The Force to a new set of Jedi Knights. During the period following the revelations of the partial Caamas Document found on Wayland, Luke travelled to Nirauan to search for Mara Jade. Mara was reported missing and out of touch, after tracing the paths of several unusual starships. They discovered the Hand of Thrawn complex, and managed to eliminate any potential threat it held to the New Republic. During their escape, Luke and Mara worked together with the Force, and both were opened up to the other's inner thoughts and feelings. This deepened and strengthened their relationship to a point that neither could ignore. Just before leaving Nirauan, Luke proposed to Mara. She agreed, and they were married, first in a solemn ceremony performed by Kam Solusar and witnessed only by the Jedi, and later in a public ceremony when they returned to Coruscant. Luke and Mara then left the Jedi Academy on Yavin 4 in the hands of the new Jedi Knights and travelled the galaxy teaching potential Jedi about the ways of the Force. Luke proposed to the New Republic that a new Jedi Council be established, but many members of the Senate feared that the Jedi would become too powerful. Shortly afterward, Luke and Mara were forced to bring the Jedi into battle when the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy. Despite their ties to the Force, the Jedi were unable to defeat the alien invaders. Several Jedi, led by Kyp Durrón, struck out on their own to fight the battle their own way, much to Luke's dismay and to the consternation of the Senate. However, even in battle, Luke was surprised to find that Mara was pregnant with a son. His devotion to Mara, and his deep connection to the Force, allowed Luke to drive out the Yuuzhan Vong disease and help Mara give birth aboard the Errant Venture, shortly after Borsk Fey'lya ordered Luke's arrest. They named their son Ben, in remembrance of Obi-Wan Kenobi. Luke and Mara spent less time with Ben than they had hoped to, when they were pressed into action defending the Eclipse base from invasion and, later, defending Coruscant. With the fall of Coruscant, Ben was separated from them, but was kept safe by Leia Organa Solo and her husband, Han. After talking with Jacen Solo, who had recently returned from captivity at the hands of the Yuuzhan Vong, Luke decided that the best chance for ending the conflict was to locate the rogue planet, Zonama Sekot. Along with his wife, Jacen, Danni Quee, Saba Sebatyne, and Doctor Soron Hegerty, Luke traveled to Csilla to enlist the help of the Chiss. Along the way, he earned the respect and assistance of Arien Yage the Imperial warship Widowmaker, providing an escort for his mission. Eventually, Zonama Sekot was found, but the living sentience of the planet refused to help without first ascertaining Luke's true motives. When it was satisfied that Luke and the Jedi Knights wanted to find a peaceful resolution to the war with the Yuuzhan Vong, Sekot agreed to come out of hiding and provide assistance. Han, Leia, and Jaina Solo had been dispatched to meet them when Zonama Sekot suddenly emerged from hyperspace near Coruscant, and the extended family was briefly reunited before returning to the war. Jacen and his sister accompanied Luke to the surface of Coruscant, in an effort to gain access to the Citadel and bring Supreme Overlord Shimrra to justice. Jacen was able to reach the mind of the World Brain which was controlling the planet, and was able to calm it down and put a stop to the destruction it was causing on the surface. Upon entering Shimrra's throneroom, they were beset by a group of fifteen Slayers, and only Jacen's link to the World Brain allowed them any measure of success. When Jaina set out to capture Onimi, Luke found himself facing Shimrra himself, as the surviving Slayers focused their attention on Jacen. Unable to gain an advantage over the immense Yuuzhan Vong, Luke was quickly captured by huge amphistaff that served as the Scepter of Power. Caught in its grasp, Luke was only able to free one hand, which he used to keep the Scepter's head from biting him. However, Shimrra commanded the weapon to constrict, driving the breath out of Luke's lungs. As Shimrra produced Anakin Solo's lightsaber from behind his robes and threatened to kill Luke with it, Luke let go of the amphistaff to grab Shimrra's arm. As the creature drove itself into his side, Luke cried out in pain. However, this action momentarily distracted Shimrra's concentration. Luke regained control of his lightsaber, and used the Force to acquire Anakin's. Luke then drove both weapons into Shimrra's neck, severing his huge head from his body. He and Jacen then set out after Jaina, who had gone in search of Onimi. However, the poison from the Scepter of Power began to act on his body, and Luke was unable to continue on his own. He was brought out of the Citadel by Mara and Kenth Hamner, only to learn from a Shamed Shaper that the poison of the Scepter had no known antidote. Luke retreated into the Force, using the technique discovered by Jacen to reach a deeper state of rapport with the Force. Although much of the poison was neutralized in this way, Luke realized that some part of it had simply added to his own person. Luke Skywalker was portrayed by Mark Hamill in the three Star Wars films, as well as for the Star Wars and The Empire Strikes Back Radio Dramas on National Public Radio. (SW, SWR, ESB, ESB, ROTJ, TB, DE1, TLC, COTF, SOP, VOF, VP, DTR, BP, U, EVR, SBS. Skywalker, Luuke this was the name of the clone created by Joruu C'baoth from sample B-2332-54, which contained cells from the hand Luke Skywalker lost during his duel with Darth Vader on Cloud City. Because of the sample's source, Luuke also used the lightsaber Luke had on Cloud City, the lightsaber that once belonged to his father, Anakin. The clone, as were all of the clones that were grown too quickly in their Force-resistant vats, was mentally unstable. Luuke was defeated by Mara Jade, who fulfilled the prophecy laid on her by Emperor Palpatine, although not in the way he believed it would be. (TLC)

Skywalker, Tan

according to the Alliance computer known as Mnemos, this man was Luke Skywalker's father. (LAT1)

Skyway Flyer

this was one of the many public transportation providers which was operative on the planet Coruscant, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (HNN4, HNN5)

Sla Kar

the name of the lowest class of citizens on the planet Demophon, the name derived from the term "slacker," and was applied to the slaves and poor degenerates of the planet's society. (SN)

Sla Tsun

this Yuuzhan Vong warrior served as a commander under Warmaster Nas Choka, during the battle to retain control of the planet Coruscant, which had been reformed into a new version of Yuuzhan'tar. Commander Sla Tsun was part of the main task force Nas Choka had ordered to attack Zonama Sekot, after the living planet had suddenly appeared in orbit between Coruscant and Muscave. (UF)

Slaag Lado

this male Draag was a known terrorist, living in the industrial district of Coruscant during the years following the Battle of Naboo. It was believed that Slaag was a member of the Calamasthon Defiance group, and was also working for Groff Haug at the time. He was wanted by the Mon Calamari Civil Authority in connection with a seismic disaster that devastated the Salinerian Sea, causing environmental damage and a perpetual rain. Slaag was eventually captured by Jango Fett. (BH)

Slabba Drewl

this being was a friend of Micah Giiet, and was captured by Corpo the Hutt several years before the Battle of Naboo. Corpo would only release Slabba Drewl if Giiet and Plo Koon could create better food than the renowned droid chef Urahasam Moreemohtwo. Using a number of deceptive moves, Plo Koon managed to sabotage the droid's meals and help Giiet earn Slabba's release. (T7)

Sladak

this young boy and his sister, Slatka, were chosen by Torr Snapit to accompany him to Ruusan. The siblings displayed a connection to the Force, and Snapit hoped to use their strength to augment that of the Jedi Knights massing at Ruusan to combat the Brotherhood of Darkness. Unfortunately, their starship was shot down when it reached Ruusan, and Sladak and Slatka were killed in the attack. (JVS)

Slader, Roark

this space pirate was once a commander in the Entrallan military, but left the service to become a smuggler and pirate. He commanded the ship Slader's Raider II during the early years of the New Republic. (SWJ3)

Slader's Raider I

this Vee-Kir 4 bulk transport served as Roark Slader's command ship during the early years of the New Republic. Unlike the Slader's Raider II, this ship managed to escape from an ambush set for the pirates by the Pentastar Alignment. (SWJ3)

Slader's Raider II

this was the name of Roark Slader's personal gunship, which he added to his pirate fleet during the early years of the New Republic. The ship took heavy damage when Slader's gang was ambushed by the Pentastar Alignment's naval forces. (SWJ3)

Sladru Nalas

this was the name of a noted Givin individual. (UANT)

Slaf

this racing sport's participants ride plastic sleds down a slafcourse defined by impellor fields. The slaf is actually one of the many portals on the course into which the racers can maneuver to collect points. The object is to make it to the end of the slafcourse with the most points. (RM)

Slafcourse

a racetrack which is used for recreation, the participants have to navigate plastic sleds around an obstacle course defined by various impellor fields. The slafcourse can alternate between being open and being tunneled. At various points on the course, slafs (portals) can be entered by the players who want to gain more points. The slafs are the obstacles, and it is not always easy to get into them. Many racers get thrown off the course if they miss them. (RM)

Slaff

this was a common male name among the Gamorrean people. Like most Gamorrean names, it was essentially gibberish that indicated what a Gamorrean would do if you made him angry. (GCG)

Slaff

this Gamorrean worked as Telowe's assistant at the Desert Survey Office in Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. (GMR7)

Slag

this searing ball of rock was the innermost planet of the Sacor, or Sacorria, System. (CCW)

Slag Flats

this ancient, female Ithorian was one of the original settlers of the planet Tatooine. She was exiled from Tatooine for being a known criminal, and was the ringleader for a sizable organization. After landing on Tatooine, she established a minor crime ring in Mos Eisley. She lived near Tower Ridge, and once helped Adar Tallon when he first arrived on Tatooine. Momaw Nadon fell in love with Slag during his stay on the desert planet, which helped him overcome his own homesickness. Slag was later murdered by Jodo Kast, who was trying to capture Tallon and recover the bounty on his head. (GG7, TM)

Slag Pit, The

a run-down drinking establishment in the Corellian sector of Nar Shaddaa's spaceport. It is one of the three most popular hangouts for Corellian spacers, and is a dismal, crowded bar. (DE2)

Slagg

this was the pseudonym of a Bothan mercenary, active during the early years of the New Republic. (GUN)

Slake, Ema

this woman owned a wondrous estate on Oseon 5631, during the height of the New Order. She was known throughout the Centrality for her vast music collection, much of which was formed from her own recordings. Ema Slake was, at one time, a skilled vocalist, and shamelessly promoted herself even after retirement. Her music collection was rumored to contain over twenty-five percent of the known music in the galaxy. (GMR5)

Slalliin

this alien was a noted rebel, who fought against the Corporate Sector Authority during the height of the New Order. (GUN)

Slams, The

this gang of criminals was founded by Roper Slam and Valadon on their homeworld of Mamendin, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. After successfully carrying out minor crimes on Mamendin, the Slams branched out and started doing jobs on other worlds in the Core, including the theft of the entire planetary treasury of Vuma. However, after trying to break into the secure vaults of the Commerce Guild, they were caught and sent to the Greylands Security Complex on Tentator. About two years before the Clone Wars broke out, the four-being gang managed to escape from Greylands. However, their starship remained impounded, and was later used by Obi-Wan Kenobi and Siri Tachi. The two Jedi Masters, along with their apprentices Anakin Skywalker and Ferus Olin, used the ship to impersonate the Slams, during a mission to capture Janna Zan Arbor on Romin. (JQ8, JQ9)

Slane, Kirney

this was one of the many aliases used by Gara Petothel. Kirney was the daughter of a Coruscant hotelier, and had studied economics before she decided to get married and start a family. Kirney spent much of her time talking with the wives of influential businessbeings, picking up pieces of information otherwise unavailable to Gara Petothel. The alias was abandoned for several years, until Gara - then known as Lara Notsil - fled the service of the New Republic and Wraith Squadron after her true identity was revealed by Garik Loran at Kidriff Five. Kirney reappeared on the planet Corellia, and sent a communication to Myn Donos letting him know she was there. (IF, SOC)

Slap Match

developed by the Wookiees of Kashyyyk as a form of hand-to-hand combat training, a slap match involved two individual combatants who could only use their hands to hit their opponent. More than brute strength was needed in a slap match, as the goal of the match was to knock your opponent off his or her feet. Thus, knowledge of physics and an opponent's center of gravity was key in devising a pattern of attack that would topple an opponent. (AFA)

Slapswitch

a switch that is activated by simply swiping the hand across its face. (AS)

Slar

native to the planet Port Evokk, this predator inhabited the forests and used its muscular legs to pounce on its prey. Measuring a meter and a half tall and three meter in length, including its prehensile tail, a slar had long, taloned arms and a menacing facial structure. They were generally fearsome in appearance, and had an unusual blue-green skin coloration which mirrored that of other creatures native to Port Evokk. It is believed that many herbivores with the same coloration evolved over time because their predators thought they were slars, and so avoided them. Their feeding patterns were erratic, making them unpredictable hunters, and their ability to attack and kill most humanoid races made them targets for elimination. (COG)

Slard

this four-legged feline was native to the planet Enaleh, where it preyed on the flying helas. (COG)

Slar-dan ti Gardi

this Twi'leki criminal was captured by New Republic patrol officer Dasha Fanron and imprisoned for a mere two months before being released. He later joined Borun Call and learned the slave trade. Gardi spent much of the rest of his career harassing New Republic agents in the field, selling any that he managed to capture into slavery. He was recognizable by his gaunt frame and blue-green skin tone. (SWJ8)

Slarka

this was one of the more common surnames used by the Duros people. Like all such names, Slarka was used only for official business, to indicate one individual from another when in the presense of non-Duros. This name literally meant "baker". (GCG)

Slarm

this was one of the most common Gungan surnames, taking from the father's side of the family. These surnames were not dropped, even after marriage. To the Gungans, it meant "cold waters". (GCG)

Slarm

this being was Stroon's first mate, and assistant in the Starhunter Intergalactic Menagerie. (DCAR)

Slash Squadron

one of the fighter groups protecting the Backstab, it was made up of pilots from the Khuiumin Survivors. (IJ)

Slasher

this was one of two Skipray Blastboats stolen by Bazak's Gang. Along with the Slicer, the Slasher saw action during boarding actions. The ship's armament was upgraded to include three medium ion cannons, a pair of turret-mounted laser cannons, a proton torpedo launcher, and a concussion missile launcher. (FBS)

Slashing Wampa

this was one of the attack postures found within the teras kasi martial artform. (DMSH)

Slashrat

this species of predator was native to the planet Bimmiel, and were sometimes referred to as sandbiters. These large, rodent-like creatures traveled through the sandy desert areas of the planet, swimming like fish through the grit by swinging their tails back and forth. Their thin, pointed heads were protected by armor plating, which allowed them to burrow without being injured. They attacked in packs, swarming their prey and tearing it to shreds. Like their favored prey, the shwpi, the slashrat population flourished while Bimmiel was in the closest part of its elliptical orbit and the planet grew warm. Much of its body, from its wedge-shaped head to its short limbs and tail were covered with chitinous scales and downy grey fur, and its tail was flattened to help propel it through the sand. They exude a basic set of pheromones known as different types of sweat, one of which marks an area of attack (known as killscent) and one which marks the location of a dead slashrat (known as stink). (DTO, ANT)

Slash-spider

this large, predatory insect was native to the planet Kashyyyk. It was known for its large mandibles, which were used like an organic pairs of scissors. The individual mandibles were offset slightly, allowing them to cross over one another and slice apart whatever was between them. (E3N)

Slatha essach sechel

this Illodian phrase translates to 'keep it to yourself.' (TT)

Slather

created by the Gungans, this slimy chemical compound resembled grease, and was used by miners. The miners covered their bodies with Slather in order to slide through small openings in the rocks. It later found widespread use as a lubricant. (E1A12)

Slatka

this young girl and her brother, Sladak, were chosen by Torr Snapit to accompany him to Ruusan. The siblings displayed a connection to the Force, and Snapit hoped to use their strength to augment that of the Jedi Knights massing at Ruusan to combat the Brotherhood of Darkness. Unfortunately, their starship was shot down when it reached Ruusan, and Sladak and Slatka were killed in the attack. (JVS)

Slava Dancing

an exotic form of dance. (TT)

Slave

any being held against its will and forced to labor for its owner, the possession of slaves was generally outlawed by the Old Republic and its eventual successor, the New Republic. Emperor Palpatine's New Order didn't exactly condone it, but neither did it outlaw the practice. Any being could be made into a slave, and usually had a small transmitter inserted into its body. The exact location of the transmitter was hard to find, which meant that an individual slave had no idea how to remove it. If a slave tried to escape, its owner could send a signal to the transmitter. At a low setting, the transmitter would jolt its host into unconsciousness. At a high setting, the transmitter could destroy its host. (SW1)

Slave Circuit

this is basically a remote control mechanism for a starship. It be as simple a landing assistance command or a fully-rigged maintenance and operation program. (DFR)

Slave I

best-known as Boba Fett's personal ship, Slave I was a highly-modified Kuat Drive Yards Firespray-31 cargo ship. Unique in its design, very little of the original Firespray-31 that formed Slave I remained, as Boba Fett and his father, Jango, both made changes to support their lifestyles as bounty hunters. The craft was originally manufactured as one of six patrol ships, sweeping the space near Oovo IV to prevent prison breaks. Jango stole the ship from Oovo IV after the destruction of the Jaster's Legacy, destroying the other five patrol ships before fleeing the system. Jango then began refitting the ship for his own uses. Many of the modifications, performed at Kuat Drive Yards, were designed and supervised by Kuat of Kuat himself. This was partly because of Kuat's innate technical skill, but also so that the leader of KDY could keep an eye on what went into the ship's new form. Slave I's outer hull was reinforced with plating and ray shielding, to compensate for reduced particle shielding. The hull is formed from a magnetically-polarized metal, making it the perfect electromagnetic receptor. This allows the ship to collect magnetic energies from the surrounding space - including the signals and pulses of pursuing ships - and reflect them as so much static. This jams the pursuer's sensors, making Slave I nearly invisible. Boba Fett has also dampened the ship's particle vapor trail to further eliminate proof of its passage. The ship appears to bear only a pair of twin-mounted blaster cannons on the tip of the command/cargo section, although rumors abound about hidden ion cannons, concussion missile launchers, and a powerful tractor beam. The ship's engines have been modified for speed. The Kuat Systems Engineering F-31 sublight engines provide an intense burst of power when first activated. This reduces maneuverability but increases the likelihood of Fett's capturing his quarry before it can escape. These are paired with four KSE X-F-16 power generators to provide that burst of speed, and gave the ship a top speed of 1,000 kilometers in atmosphere. The ship's Class 1 hyperdrive has also been updated, allowing for quick jumps to outrace a victim to their destination. The ship's interior has never been seen, but it is rumored to have a large enough hold to contain a force cage. Various hull reinforcements are also rumored to be present, to keep the cage from being jostled by larger races. There isn't a great deal of cargo space, for much of it has been given over to housing the ship's engines and power generators. Always one to plan for contingencies, Fett also had several duplicates of Slave I created for his use. These dummy ships looked and acted like the real thing, but were mere shells. Boba Fett used Slave I to track Han Solo to Bespin. From there, Fett took Solo's frozen body to Tatooine for delivery to Jabba The Hutt. Following his emergence from the Sarlacc, Boba Fett took his ship to Nar Shaddaa for repairs, but it was disabled at Nar Shaddaa during Palpatine's first resurrection. It sat at the spaceport receiving more repairs until Han Solo and Princess Leia returned to Nar Shaddaa searching for Vima-Da-Boda. Boba Fett was able to reactivate Slave I and its new Incom shields, only to receive a good deal of damage to one of its wings in a collision with the Millennium Falcon. (ESB, MTS, DE1, DE2, EGV, SLS, VD2, X2, NEGV, BH)

Slave II

Boba Fett's backup ship, this modified MandalMotors Pursuer patrol vehicle was weaker than Slave I, but it served its purpose well after the Alliance confiscated Fett's primary ship. However, what it lacked in punch it made up for in speed and maneuverability. The original engines had been replaced with twin Mil-StarIV engines mated with three x41 maneuvering thrusters mounted in the port-side strut. It had a forward-firing ion and twin blaser cannons, as well as a rear-firing proton torpedo launcher. Slave II also had enhanced sensors, but lacked Slave I's stealth capabilities. Slave II was severely damaged over Byss when Boba Fett tried to pursue Han Solo and Salla Zend near the planet. Solo took the Millennium Falcon into a dive toward the planet's surface just as the planet's shield generators kicked on. Slave II hit the shields and glanced off them, ripping off the portside stabilizer and causing massive system damage. Luckily for Fett, the ship's shield generators were at full-power. Fett drydocked Slave II after this incident, returning to the use of Slave I. (DE1, DESB, DE2, EE, EGV)

Slave III

Boba Fett briefly used this starship on his bounty-hunting missions, after he lost Slave I during a failed attempt to capture Han Solo on Nar Shaddaa. Fett used Slave III only briefly, since it was badly damaged during the attack on the Azgoghk. (NEGC)

Slave IV

Boba Fett owned this starship some fifteen years after the Battle of Endor. He used it to track down Kardue'sai'Malloc on Peppel, and return the Devaronian to Devaron for judgement. He also used the ship to track down Bornan Thul, in response to a bounty placed on the shipping magnate by Nola Tarkona. The ship was eventually abandoned on Shogun, after Fett was intercepted by Ailyn Vel. (TBH, TEP, SW180)

Slave Quarter

this was the name of the compact area of hovels used to house the slaves owned in the city of Mos Espa, during the last years of the Old Republic. (IG1)

Slave Seed

this was the name of the yorik coral implant used by the Yuuzhan Vong to control those beings they took as slaves. The slave seed began as a tiny grain that was placed inside the slave's body. Most often, the slave seed was placed near the heart, but it could be inserted anywhere on the slave's body. As the slave seed grew, two things happened. First, it established a connection with the nearest controlling organism, usually a yammosk. Then, it extended its own nervous system along the nervous system of its host, developing a deep-rooted connection to the slave. This connection, known as the slave seed-web, was then tapped by the controlling organism, allowing the Yuuzhan Vong to control vast numbers of slaves with a single organism. Like many other pieces of Yuuzhan Vong bio-technology, the primary stimulus for controlling slaves was pain. The controlling organism could direct the slave seed to stimulate or shut down certain nerve clusters, causing a wide range of painful shocks to its host. In this way, slaves were conditioned to do what the Yuuzhan Vong wanted them to do. Slave seeds were engineered with a unique fail-safe: whenever contact was broken with the controlling organism, the slave seed-web administered an intense pain which could only be assuaged by contact with its parent coraltree basal. This was useful during the tizo'pil Yun'tchilat, when the maturing dhuryams had to survive on their own, without the assistance of their slaves. Slave seeds were no longer independent creatures after they began extending their nerves along those of the host. If a slave seed were to be removed from its host, it would die immediately. (T)

Slave Seed-Web

this was the term used to describe the network of nerve connections which were developed by the slave seeds of the Yuuzhan Vong. This nerve network meshed with the nervous system of the host, virtually becoming a single network which was controlled by the host's brain and the slave seed's controlling organism. The web's primary purpose was to connect with sensile nerves in the host, allowing the controlling organism to administer pain whenever the slave disobeyed. The web was engineered with a unique fail-safe: whenever contact was broken with the controlling organism, the web administered an intense pain which could only be assuaged by contact with its parent coraltree basal. This was useful during the tizo'pil Yun'tchilat, when the maturing dhuryams had to survive on their own, without the assistance of their slaves. (T)

Slave/Owner Card

this form of identification was required by Imperial law. Any alien who was a member of an enslaved species was required to be accompanied by its owner while traveling or working outside the owner's establishment. The owner was required to show the card whenever it was demanded by Imperial agents. (CRO)

Slavelord Boulevard

a street in Kessendra. (GDV)

Slavemaster Stun Carbine

developed by the Trandoshan race, this rifle was used by many bounty hunters and slavers throughout the galaxy. It was designed with the Trandoshan physique in mind, so it was easily used by most Trandoshans. It was developed during the height of the New Order, and continued to be popular for many decades. It fires a pulse of energy that stunned a target into submission, using a normal blaster power pack. (WOTC, UANT)

Slaver Syndicate

this large bounty-hunting syndicate was based on the planet Karazak. It specialized in capturing large alien races such as Wookiees, Gamorreans, and Agorffi. They collected individuals with bounties on their heads, bought their ownership rights, and resold them as slaves. (GG9)

Slaver's Line

a thin cord made up of special circuitry, the slaver's line is used to link a number of captives into a single group, controlled by a director. The line attaches to slaving collars worn by the slaves, and transmits the punishing impulses from the director to the collar. They are illegal, since slavery has been outlawed since the time of the Old Republic. (HSR)

Slaveship

this was the term used by the New Republic to describe the immense, spherical ships used by the Yuuzhan Vong to acquire living beings from a conquered planet. The main body of the slaveship was protected by dense yorik coral, and was studded with dovin basals for protection. The slaveship was unarmed otherwise, and required a coralskipper escort when it was called for. After the Yuuzhan Vong had taken control of a planet, they brought in the slaveship to collect their prize - the living inhabitants. Five thick tentacles hung from the stern of the slaveship, and were lowered to the planet's surface. The muscular tentacles, then, literally sucked up any captured beings, ingesting them in such a way that very few were killed. Once inside the slaveship, captives were bound to the inner walls with a modified form of blorash jelly, where they were fed just enough to keep them alive until they could be processed by the Yuuzhan Vong. (FH1)

Slaving Collar

this was the name given to a wide variety of collars used to control enslaved beings. They took a number of different forms, from simple shackles to elaborate pain-delivering nooses which were equipped with deadman switches. These systems allowed a slavelord to have complete control over a slave, eliminating any chance of escape. (EGW, HSR)

Slayer, The

this was the Menahuun name given to Hugo Bartyn, the man who nearly drove the Menahuun to extinction some 500 years before the Clone Wars. (GMR7)

Slayer, The

this is one of the nicknames of the Yuuzhan Vong god Yun-Yammka. (VP)

Slayers

this was a new caste of Yuuzhan Vong warriors, superior even to the Hunters, created by Supreme Overlord Shimrra some four years after the start of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion. Molded from the aspects of the warrior and priest castes, the Slayers were created to serve as the final blow to the New Republic's chances to retake the galaxy. Their robust bodies were made from all manner of Yuuzhan Vong biotechnology, including vonduun crabs and dovin basals. The Slayers also appeared to have been Shamed, with Steng's Talons sticking from their bodies and oozing blood. Shimrra created the Slayers as an answer to the Jedi Knights, capable of piloting coralskippers and fighting with incredible agility and speed. They were armed with specially-bred amphistaffs, stronger and more vicious than their cousins. When cut in battle, the wounds of a Slayer healed almost immediately. Shimrra also used their creation as propaganda that proved his right to rule the Yuuzhan Vong. If their gods were truly displeased with him he reasoned, they would not have allowed the Slayers to be formed in the first place. The coralskippers of the Slayers were also unique, capable of making jumps into hyperspace on their own. These more powerful coralskippers had three triangular sections, with the forward two housing a pilot and gunner and the rear section housing the dovin basal propulsion system. The forward sections had three pairs of legs each, giving the fighter the appearance of an Aruzan stingcrawler. Each leg was equipped with a plasma missile launcher. The Slayers made their first appearance during the Galactic Alliance's attempt to rescue the prisoners who were held on Selvaris. (UF)

Slayer's Conceit

this was one of the many Yuuzhan Vong warships which was called to the planet Coruscant - remade into a new version of the planet Yuuzhan'tar - just before the alien invaders launched their all-out attack on the Galactic Alliance's stronghold on Mon Calamari. (UF)

Slayke, Zozridor

this Old Republic Navy Captain was in command of the corvette Scarlet Thranta, during the year leading up to the Clone Wars. Very little was known or remembered about his history, although he was known for his talents and abilities as a naval leader. When the Galactic Senate deadlocked itself over what to do about the Separatist crisis, Captain Slayke and his crew mutinied against the Navy and decided to take the fight directly to the Separatists. The Scarlet Thranta fled into Sluissi space, but was pursued by Nejaa Halcyon and the Plooriod Bodkin. Although Halcyon managed to trap Slayke's forces on Bpfashh, Slayke had the last laugh. He sent one of his lieutenants, a Rodian named Grudo, to confront Halcyon, knowing that the Jedi Master would not simply hack his way to Slayke. While Halcyon accepted Grudo's challenge of combat, Slayke slipped behind the lines and made off with the Plooriod Bodkin, adding the ship to his growing fleet. While Halcyon returned to Coruscant in embarrassment, Slayke continued his campaign against the Separatists. As soon as he had escaped from the Republic, Slayke and his forces dubbed themselves Freedom's Sons and Daughters. Shortly afterward, he was officially pardoned for his mutiny by Chancellor Palpatine himself. Nevertheless, Slayke chose to remain independent. His small fleet was the only force nearby when the Separatists attacked the communications center on Praesitlyn, and his daring battle plan got him inside the Separatist blockade and onto the planet's surface. He managed to send off a request for reinforcements to Coruscant before he entered the jamming field of the Separatists. Once on Praesitlyn, his forces fought bravely, but were badly outnumbered by the Separatists' battle droids. Only the timely appearance of an Old Republic battle force - led, ironically, by Master Halcyon himself - gave them any hope. Slayke was reluctant to step out of a command position and turn the fighting over to Halcyon, but he was impressed with Halcyon's second-in-command, young Anakin Skywalker. He was also motivated by the speech of Reija Momen, who obviously disobeyed the orders of Pors Tonith in reading a prepared statement pleading for her life. As a group, they devised several plans of attack for recovering the communications center, but battlefield confusion forced them into a desperate rescue attempt. Their combined forces managed to defeat the battle droids commanded by Pors Tonith, and Slayke graciously offered to return the Plooriod Bodkin to Halcyon. Halcyon politely refused, and they parted ways on more friendly terms. (HNN5, JT)

Slayn

one of the Verpine colonies which helped Ackbar develop the B-Wing starfighter. (RASB)

Slayn and Korpil Corporation

a company formed by the neighboring Verpine colonies which helped Ackbar develop the B-Wing starfighter. It was a well-known source of starships during the time of the Old Republic, and remained loyal to the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. Following the Battle of Endor, Slayn and Korpil helped design the V-Wing combat speeder. (RASB, DESB, EGV)

SlaynRoche Company

this Verpine corporation produced a variety of asteroid mining and excavation vehicles during the era of the New Order. (GFT)

SLD-26

this was the designation of CoMar's planetary shield generator. This immense shield generator was designed to protect a large area of a planet's surface, but could also be configured to protect an orbiting moon or space station. The Empire used the SLD-26 to protect the second Death Star, during its construction in orbit around the Forest Moon of Endor. (EGW)

Sleak

this was a species of insect that fed on the scum that collected on the surface of swamps. (MBS)

Sled Fox

this was the largest predator found on Berea, living in the tundra and preying on a variety of birds and small creatures. The sled fox had only two true legs, and had vestigial hind appendages which it used to steer its body as it slid down icy slopes. This form of locomotion earned the fox its name. (TBSB)

S'lee

this Trandoshan assassin worked for Jabba the Hutt during the height of the Galactic Civil War. S'lee was captured on Corellia, and Jabba dispatched Yondalla to retrieve him before he could be forced to reveal information on Jabba's business dealings. (SWGAL)

Slee, Beru

this woman was a noted expert in the martial art of teras kasi, during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. (HNN5)

Sleeft Docking Bay Maintenance

this Mos Eisley corporation controlled several cargo storage locations near the spaceport. They once tried to steal high-quality droid parts from a shipment that belonged to Notsub Shipping, but an ambitious Bith named Angor Farn tried to steal it. Farn was eventually caught by Coral Ohah and a group of Alliance agents. (GG7)

Sleek Cruiser Inn

located on Grand Eucer Street in the capital city of Eusebus, on the planet Euceron, this hotel was definitely not sleek. Located in the shabbiest part of Eusebus, the Sleek Cruiser Inn catered to those beings who did not want to be identified while they were on Euceron, and didn't want to pay a lot for lodging. The exterior was a collection of plasteel sheets nailed together, while all usable interior space was turned over to lodging. The owner discovered that beings would pay for the space in the hallways and stairwells, and soon all manner of beings were living on the floors and in closets, as well as in the rooms. (JQ3)

Sleemo

this is a Huttese word used to deride or embarrass another individual. Roughly translated into Basic, it means "slimeball." (SW1, YJC1)

Sleemo Gang

this gang of hooligans and vandals was active on the planet Talus during the height of the New Order. (GQRG)

Sleemo poy

this Huttese word translated into Basic as "drool". (GMR5)

Sleemo Poya Jeedai

this enormous, Hutt-owned yacht was one of many pleasure craft on which the band Distraction played their songs, during the early years of the New Order. Translated into Basic, the ship's name meant "The Drooling Jedi". Beings came from all over the Astal Sector of the galaxy to attend concerts aboard the Sleemo Poya Jeedai. (WOA28)

Sleen

this monitor-like lizard was an omnivorous feeder native to the planet Dagobah. Sreens sought out damp, dark environments which were strong with the Force. (CCG4, TCG7)

Sleena

this was the alias used by Shada D'ukal, when she and Talon Karrde infiltrated the Peace Brigade while trying to rescue the students at the Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (EVC)

Sleep Coffin

a hibernation bed used to keep a person in suspended animation during a long, sublight space flight. (CS)

Sleep Inducer

this was another name for the Pacnorval SIL-50 stun pistol. (GFT)

Sleeper

this was a slang term used to describe a hold-out blaster. (KOTOR)

Sleeper

this was the name of a figure out of Charr Ontee legend. The modern Charr Ontee discovered that Jessa Dajus was the Sleeper of their legends. It was her image - or one very similar to Jessa - that the Charr Ontee found on a 1,000-year-old document within DarkStryder's fortress, in a location which came to be known as the Shrine of the Sleeper. The Yapi also believed in the legend of the Sleeper, having learned that DarkStryder was fearful of the Sleeper ever awakening. (E)

Sleeper Bomb

a detonation device used to cripple a starship in deep space. It is attached to the ship's hull in such a way that it can continuously and innocuously drain power from the ship's core. When it reaches a certain power level, the bomb begins to draw an increasingly greater portion of the ship's power as it approaches detonation. With a shaped charge and the correct power level, the bomb explodes, ripping a hole in the ship's hull. The impending depressurization quickly and effectively kills the ship's crew and leaves her stranded in space. A sleeper bomb could also be used to destroy a ship which was berthed on the ground, provided that a nearby power source could be found to draw energy from while the bomb charged. (HSR, JQ2)

Sleeper-One

this was DarkStryder's name for the ancient Jedi Knight Halbret, who was referred to by the Kathol natives as the Sleeper. (E)

Sleep-inducer

this wrist-mounted weapon is favored by Twi'leks. It is a close-range weapon which is jabbed into the target's flesh. A small trigger releases a sleep-inducing fluid into the victim, knocking them unconscious. (THG)

Sleepy Grin, The

this was the term used by Palleus Chuff to describe one of the many facial expressions used by Jedi Master Yoda. Chuff was a noted actor whose portrayal of Yoda in Jedi made him famous across the galaxy. (YDR)

Sleerwinwilpher-remalior

this Squib, who preferred the nickname Wilpher, was a noted individual in the history of the planet Skor II. (UANT)

Sleeve Gun

this was the term used to describe any holdout blaster or other weapon that could be hidden inside the sleeve of a garment. When the hand was thrust outward with a flick of the wrist, the sleeve gun dropped into the palm, ready to be fired. (GMR10)

Sleft-chuffni

this species of huge floating gasbags was native to the gas giant Taloraan. The sleft-chuffni can grow to be 200 meters in length, and drift along capturing airborne algae with their hanging tentacles. They are the primary source of food for the fleft-wauf. (SWJ5)

Sleheyron

this planet was under the control of Bochara the Hutt, during the era of the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Sleight Box

this normal-looking cargo crate has a low-power repulsor coil matrix and power supply built into the casing. This allowed the user to transport a very heavy object in a crate that, when lifted by customs agents, seems to contain something very light. In essence, it neutralizes the weight of the object inside. A crate full of thermal detonators would weigh virtually nothing when transported in a sleight box. They are fairly expensive, and used primarily by smugglers. (TFE)

Sleightan

this old man wandered the corridors of the Mynock 7 Space Station, accompanied by the droid L7-BO. Sleightan claimed to be down on his luck, having lost his son Ambrus to an Imperial customs officer who imprisoned him. He kept trying to sell the droid in order to have enough credits to survive, since Ambrus could no longer send him monthly spending money. However, few realized (until it was too late) that L7-BO was also a con artist, and would flee from any being who purchased and return to Sleightan for another "sale." (SWJ11)

Slenn

an Imperial Vice Admiral, Slenn was placed in charge of the invasion of Datar during the Galactic Civil War. When he mistakenly made the Alliance team aware of his invasion fleet, the Alliance was able to rally and defeat the Imperials. Darth Vader executed Slenn for this mistake. (TME)

Slerog Fenn

this greedy Rodian tried to take financial control of the Gelgelar Free Port by offering services equal to those of Loro Ecls, but at a reduced price. Fenn had a number of criminal connections, which helped pay for Fenn's Landing and his repair facility - known as Fenn's Warehouse - and to help offset his cutthroat prices. (SWJ14, PSPG)

Sleta Suke

this female Ortolan was the daughter of Orto's primary ambassador to the Old Republic, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Her father leased the Grand Reception Hall for her engagement party, after she became betrothed to the son of an important Ortolan businessbeing. However, Sleta wanted nothing to do with the arranged marriage, having fallen in love with Trunks Bibbo. With the help of the Lost Ones, Trunks was able to crash the party, drugging the food in order to eliminate any opposition before "rescuing" Sleta and whisking her away. (CCW)

Sleuth

the brand name of Incom's A-24 scout ship. (WBC, LAA)

Slice, The

this was the name given to the wedge-shaped section of the galaxy which had its point in the Core Worlds and expanding outward. The Slice was originally defined in the Corellian Treaty, an ancient pact that created The Slice. The edges of The Slice were defined by the Corellian Trade Spine and the Perlemian Trade Route, and it extended into the Mid Rim and Beyond. The establishment of The Slice defined the boundaries of the Old Republic at the time. (RPG, CCW)

Slice-hound

this carnivorous mammal was native to Corellia, although a subspecies was also discovered on the planet Dantooine. These creatures were somewhat trainable, and often were trained to be guard beasts. (CCG, GQRG)

Slicer

this was one of two Skipray Blastboats stolen by Bazak's Gang. Along with the Slasher, the Slicer saw action during boarding actions. The ship's armament was upgraded to include three medium ion cannons, a pair of turret-mounted laser cannons, a proton torpedo launcher, and a concussion missile launcher. (FBS)

Slicer

this is the term used to describe a computer hacker. (HTTE)

Slicer Chip

a small information chip which allows the holder to bypass certain computer-driven systems, based on the chip's programming. They can be used to bypass door locks and security fields, to name a couple of uses. (COTF)

Slicer droid

a machine which is programmed to infiltrate computer systems. (COTF)

SliceRat

this was the pseudonym of a slicer who worked on the planet Bothawui during the early years of the New Republic. (GUN)

Slicewire

similar in form to a garrote, slicewire is a strong, flat wire held between two batons. The wire itself is only a molecule wide, and is finely serrated on both edges. It is capable of cutting through most solids, as the wire can withstand large amounts of abuse. (ROE)

Slick

this gambler was stranded at Edan II during the Imperial assault on the Alliance's Edan Base, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (IAG)

Slick

a nickname Han Solo acquired while still a cadet in the Academy, it refers to a time when Badure has rigged an old U-33 loadlifter to purposely malfunction for training exercises. Han Solo was one of the cadets on the mission, and when the ship began to malfunction, Han took over and landed the crippled vessel. The officer in charge began calling Han 'Slick' because of his knowledge of the ship and his ability to land it. (HSL)

Slick

this viscous substance, which was essentially fermented seaweed oil produced on the planet Vaynai, had certain medicinal properties. Most of the slick produced on the planet during the height of the New Order was manufactured by Onoron Fil'vye, who controlled nearly all the exports of slick from Vaynai. When the seaweed from Vaynai's shallow oceans was pureed and allowed to ferment, it created a smily oil which stimulated tissue growth when applied to open wounds. When ingested, it helped to accelerate the body's own natural healing. When ingested in large amounts, or when taken as a recreational drug, slick caused a sort of euphoric delusion in the minds of most humanoid races. If improperly stored, slick had a slightly corrosive chemical structure that quickly ate away at plastoid containers, and could weaken most glass jars. (GMR8)

Slickplast

this thin film was used to produce posters and other wall hangings, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (HNN4)

Slider

first made popular by Dexter Jettster on the planet Coruscant, this form of ground-meat sandwich was made from perforated food-board. A slider was often served with a special sauce for garnish, although many beings consumed the garnish first as an antidote to the gastrinal distress which was often caused by the consumption of food-board. Many competitors claimed that Dex used addictive drugs in his garnish sauce, which was why his sliders were somuch more popular than any other being's version. (VD2)

Slideramp

this was a form of moving sidewalk developed to help get beings from one level of a building to another. (SWI67)

Slidewalk

a moving sidewalk used to transport people from one area to another, this device is also known as a slideway. (BTS, MC35)

Slideway

see slidewalk. (MC35)

Sligh

this Squib was part of a trio who worked behind the scenes, gathering information about the shadier parts of the galaxy and providing it to the New Republic Intelligence agency. They worked from a base on Tatooine, and were known to have extensive knowledge of the planet's deserts. Sligh accompanied Leia Organa Solo and her husband, Han Solo, to Tatooine, as part of a mission to intercept a group of Imperial agents. Sligh worked with his partners, Grees and Emala, to complete their non-human entourage. When the bidding began on a holocube image of nine-year-old Anakin Skywalker, taken when he won the Boonta Eve Classic podracer just prior to the Battle of Naboo, Han instructed Sligh to bid on it for Leia. However, Sligh got carried away with the bidding and had to be physically restrained by Han. After Tatooine, the Squibs decided that selling art to the Imperials was not only profitable, but an excellent way to obtain more information about Imperial activities. They also aligned themselves with the Invisible Shell to help further their efforts in obtaining rare artwork. They made no effort to correct the NRI's assumption that it was Ludlo Lebauer providing the artworks to the Empire, since it ensured they could continue their efforts without being identified. Unfortunately, Grees had gotten too greedy and was captured by Ludlo Lebauer and frozen in carbonite, after a deal had gone bad between them. Emala and Sligh were forced to manipulate the Solos into helping rescue Grees, who had become known as the Second Mistake to Lebauer. Using their NRI contacts, the Squibs met up with the Solos on Pavo Prime and convinced them to recover the Second Mistake in addition to the ten Alderaanian boasas which were the real object of the Solos' mission. (TG, SWI67)

Sligo Pirates

this gang of pirates haunted the undercity of Coruscant, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. (AA)

Slii

this unusual, crawling plant was distinguished by its knotted roots and large, gauzy leaves. It was often found on the coastlines of tropical planets. (EVR)

Sliideptra

native to the rainforests of Tel IV, the sliideptra was a species of annelid worms with three sets of eyes and an internal air sac used to collect and expel poison gas. Their yellow-white coloration has been described as "particularly distasteful" to humans. These creatures hang from tree branches by wrapping a series of tendrils around the branch, the hanging upside down. When it senses prey nearby, it expels the poisonous gas and waits for the prey to breathe it in and expire. The sliideptra shambles itself into position above the dead prey, then unwraps its tendrils until it can touch the prey. The sliideptra then extends its head and drools saliva over the prey, and then waits for preliminary digestion to begin. After an hour, the flesh of the prey become semi-liquid, and the sliideptra can then begin sucking it up. In this way, a sliideptra can feed on a carcass for several days, simply retracting its tendrils and resting in the tree in between feedings. (COG)

Slim

starfighter pilot slang term for an A-Wing. (IJ)

Slime Sea

this disgusting body of water, found on the planet Sullust, was noted for the dedicated and vocal sailors who worked on it. The vulgar jargon of the Slime Sea sailors was legendary for its crude and insensitive nature. (MBS)

Slime Yeast

this was a disgusting form of plantlife. (LTA3)

Slime-bug

a disgusting creature native to the planet Aracara. (HAS)

Slimego

this Rodian bounty hunter accompanied Crutag to Trinta, in pursuit of a team of Alliance agents. He and Slimego were intent on taking the rebels dead or alive, although Crutag wanted them alive to obtain a larger bounty. Slimego was captured by the Alliance agents and stranded on Trinta, along with Slizzik. (DOE)

Slime-snake

this species of snake was native to the planet Dagobah, and was named for the viscous slime it exuded from beneath its scales. This slime helped to prevent parasites from attaching to its skin, and its awful taste discouraged larger predators. (SWED)

Slime-wart

an unintelligent creature. (TME)

Slimp

the eyes of this creature are considered a culinary delicacy by the Hutts. (BF)

Sling Racer

similar in many respects to podracers, these modified airspeeders used a variety of maneuvering vanes and jets to wind through a course, with repulsors used only to keep the vehicle off the ground. Also like podracers, these airspeeders often required their pilots to operate and control several individual jets and engines, leaving little time for concentration on the racecourse. (SPG)

Sling Racing

this sport burst onto the galactic scene after podracing was outlawed on many worlds. Using lightweight, modified airspeeders, racers were forced to navigate through mountains and canyons at incredible speeds. (SPG)

Slingball

this sport was popular during the early decades of the New Republic. Played in an indoor arena, two teams used curved gloves to throw a ball back and forth, in an effort to get close enough to the other team's goal to throw the ball in. (U)

Slip-jaws Maneuver

named for the scissor-like mandibles of the slash-spider, this starfighter maneuver was used by the pilots of the Old Republic to draw off pursuit before shooting the enemy craft. Two pilots flew in patterns that were exactly opposite in pattern, splitting their pursuit into two groups. At the height of their arc, the two pilots then cut back sharply, until they were flying directly at one another. At the last second, the two ships jinked ever so slightly, passing belly-to-belly while firing on the enemy ships that were pursuing the other fighter. The surprised enemy ships usually could not maneuver out of the path of the oncoming blasts in time, and were destroyed. For most human pilots, this maneuver was almost impossible, since it subjected the body to incredible G-forces and required split-second timing. However, Anakin Skywalker and Obi-Wan Kenobi perfected the maneuver during the height of the Clone Wars. (E3N)

Slippery Eel Casino

this upscale casino served as a front for the illicit activities of its owner, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (GCG)

Slippery Gelgellar Eel

despite its name, this was the best place to eat at Gelgellar Free Port. Run by the Ithorian Thulls, the Slippery Gelgellar Eel catered to every level of society. (PSPG)

Slips

this was the name of Mara Jade's V-1 astromech droid, used aboard the Jade's Fire. (VOF)

SlipSheet

this thin sheet of metal has many uses. (CFG)

Slipter

this company manufactured small, personal-use landspeeders. (VOF)

Slique Brighteyes

this was one of the last surviving Gulmarids, during the early years of the New Republic. He hired Boba Fett to kill Mir Tork and Leonis Murthe', the two Imperial who destroyed the Gulmarid civilization, with just 100 credits and the implied notion that Fett needed to eliminate them in order to regain his reputation as the galaxy's best bounty hunter. Slique managed to survive on the planet Basteel just long enough for Fett to return with the heads of the two Imperials, before finally dying. (AOD)

Slisst

this Trandosha trained on his homeworld of Dosha to be a bounty hunter, and left to seek his fortune. Overly confident in his own abilities, Slisst was unprepared for the ferocity with which a cornered target could fight back. After being severely injured when his first bounty fought back and escaped, Slisst briefly considered retirement, but instead joined the Bounty Hunters Guild in order to gain access to their resources. He acquitted himself quite well under the Guild, but yearned to locate that first bounty and make him pay for the embarrassment he caused. (WOTC)

Slith

a primitive, reptilian race native to the deserts of Yavin 13, the Slith were limbless carnivores noted for their large mouths, which were filled with spiked teeth. They moved about by "swimming" through the sand and over the rocks, but could also move laterally - a motion called side-slithering - with incredible speed. The Slith lived in a nomadic, patriarchal society, with small tribes of no more than 15 individuals moving across the desert in search of food and water. Each tribe seemed to have an alpha male, two breeding females, and a male "lieutenant", in addition to immature individuals. (GG2, LW, PH)

Slith Skael

this Sluissi served the Old Republic as the chief of the communications staff at the Intergalactic Communications Center on Praesitlyn, during the height of the Clone Wars. He served under Reija Momen, and was especially protective of her when Separatist forces stormed the center and took the staff hostage. He was outwardly a very calm cool individual, but he was passionate about his work and the attachments he made in life. (JT)

Slitherhorn

this instrument was considered part of the repertoire of a jizz band, during the last years of the New Order. (CCG9)

Slithering Destroyer

this was one of the names used by the New Republic to describe Tu-Scart, the Beater created by the Yuuzhan Vong to destroy structures that are in the path of the Yuuzhan Vong army. Note that the Balance Point claims that Tu-Scart is the Biter. (WOTC)

Slithian

this sibilant language was the native tongue of the Slith race. (PH)

Sliven

this Tusken Raider was the leader of his tribe when he decided to adopt Tahiri Veila. Sliven himself had been separated from his tribe several months earlier, after surviving a skirmish with a group of smugglers, and was taken in by Tahiri's parents, Tryst and Cassa. They tended to his wounds and restored him to health, despite the inherent cultural differences between humans and Tusken Raiders. While in their care, Sliven learned the Basic language, and became fond of Tahiri. The compassion of Tryst and Cassa made Sliven understand that their two peoples could live together, if only they were able to look beyond their ingrained fear and hatred of each other. To help rebuild his strength, and to help repay his debt, Sliven began to teach Tryst how to fight with a gaderffi. It was during one of their training sessions that Sliven's clan found him. They had been tracking him ever since the smuggler attack, and were surprised to find him in combat with a human. Believing him to be in trouble, the Tusken Raiders attacked and killed Tryst and Cassa with a swiftness that startled Sliven. Rather than abandoning Tahiri to the desert, Sliven demanded that she be taken into the tribe. However, he faced criticism from his tribe for the decision, especially from Vexa. He was forced to keep Tahiri's true parentage a complete secret from the girl, on penalty of death. Before leaving the farm behind, Sliven made a small pendant from a piece of mud, which he imprinted with the fingerprints of both Tryst and Cassa. The pendant he gave to Tahiri, although he could only tell her that the prints were from her parents. In order to learn the complete story of her parents, Tahiri would have to earn her place among the Tusken Raiders in a trial of adulthood. Sliven abided by the agreement, mainly because he loved the child and wanted her to grow up strong and free. Several years later, when Tionne came to Tatooine looking for Force-sensitive individuals, Sliven allowed Tahiri to travel to Yavin 4 in order to receive training as a Jedi. However, knowing that Tahiri would soon have to face her trial, Sliven made a deal with Tahiri. Tahiri had to return six months later and face the trials of a Tusken Raider youth. If Tahiri succeeded, then Tahiri would be allowed to learn of her true parentage. If she chose to remain on Yavin 4, she would be banished from the tribe forever. Sliven secretly hoped she would remain with the Jedi, although he admitted to himself that he didn't want to die. Tahiri surprised everyone, even Vexa, by returning to Tatooine and surviving her trial. Sliven gladly told her the truth about her parents, and was relieved when Tahiri felt no anger at him or the tribe for their deaths. He was also quietly happy when Tahiri made her decision to return to Yavin 4 and continue her training as a Jedi. As they parted, Sliven gave Tahiri a second pendant, this one with his own fingerprint, as a reminder of all three of her parents. Sliven passed away shortly after Tahiri returned at the Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4. (P, KB, FH1)

Sliverfish

this schooling fish was native to the planet Spira, and was the favored food of the Camray Eel. (SWJ1)

Slivilith

first encountered on the planet Arbra, this immense, avian predator was noted for its unusual body structure. Resembling a huge crab, the slivilith's body was wide and flat, with a pair of reptilian wings sprouting from its shoulders. The underside of the slivilith was dotted with thick tentacles, which it used in place of arms. The wings of this creature were blue across the top, and creamy-white below. The rest of the body was greenish-blue, with the belly being the same white as the underside of the wings. Most of the galaxy considered the slivilith a myth, a belief that was emphasized by the holo-series The Voyages of the VSD Protector. Supporting this belief was the fact that only four sightings of living sliviliths have been recorded since the era of the Freedon Nadd Uprisings. Xenobiologists agreed that the slivilith was not a creature that could have evolved on its own, however. Many believed that the ancient Arkanians created them, while others held that the Sith Lords were responsible. In reality, it was later discovered, the slivilith was one of the Yuuzhan Vong's earliest attempts to create a living ship that could travel faster than light, for use in obtaining information on nearby galaxies. The slivilith project was eventually abandoned, but not before many were released into the void. The Hoojibs managed to learn that the slivilith on Arbra had traveled through space for many years before landing on Arbra. This information, when re-analyzed many years later, pointed out the startling fact that the Yuuzhan Vong had been experimenting with inter-galactic travel for more than 4,000 years. (WOTC, ANT, SWDB, MC55)

S'lixike

this New Republic Naval officer was the Commander of the 32nd Cruiser Squadron. He scoffed at the Kalindean DeepSpace Fleet, despite the fact that they held their own against Imperial and Corporate Sector forces. (TSK)

Slizzik

this Barabel was part of the team assembled by Crutag the Taloron Hunter, during his attempt to recover the bounties on a group of Alliance agents. She and her husband joined Crutag's gang some three years before the Battle of Yavin. Slizzik and Slimego were intent on taking the rebels dead or alive, although Crutag wanted them alive to obtain a larger bounty. Slizzik was eventually captured by the Alliance agents and stranded on Trinta with Slimego. (DOE)

Sljee

a planet, the homeworld of the Sljee race. (CSA)

Sljee

this low, slab-shaped alien race was native to the planet Sljee. Their bodies were surrounded with a number of prehensile tentacles, and olfactory antennae projected from its upper surface. These aliens use their antennae to smell out other lifeforms, since they have no true eyes. They have not yet adapted well to the multitude of alien lifeforms in the galaxy, and humans particularly confound their sense of smell. Sljee moved about on a collection of short, stumpy legs. Most other races were unfamiliar with the Sljee, and often mistook them for some bizarre form of alien creature. (HSR, CSA, AE, WOTC)

Sljee

this was the native language of the Sljee race. (WOTC)

Sloane, Baruche

this Corporate Sector Authority Fleet Commander was in control of the starships which tried to wrestle the Kalinda System from the hands of the pro-Imperial forces and New Republic forces already in the system. Sloane led the battle group from the command ship Enforce. A tall, stern man with gray eyes and a grim expression, Sloane's loyalty to the CSA was unwavering. He commanded respect, and didn't appreciate failure. (TSK)

Sloat, Warren

this man served as a Judicial Official for the Old Republic, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Sloat presided over the trial of Ker-Zakk and Egome Fass, on the planet Coruscant, but was forced to call an extended recess when both aliens began fighting with each other. (HNN4)

Slochan

a lush plant native to Belsavis. It bears a sturdy fruit, which allows it to be packaged by droids, instead of humanoids. (COJ)

Sloke

this was one of the more common surnames used by the Duros people. Like all such names, Sloke was used only for official business, to indicate one individual from another when in the presense of non-Duros. The meaning of this name was unknown. (GCG)

Sloma

this was once of the many names given to Duros females. The meaning of this name was lost over time. (GCG)

Sloogarian

this was a race of diminutive, tadpole-shaped aliens. They lacked true limbs, using a group of extendable pseudopods to move about and grasp objects. As a race, Sloogarians were known to be pathetic liars, twisting the truth in order to gain an advantage. (T16)

Sloom, Regec

this smuggler was hiding from the Empire on Gelgelar when he first met Cev Malanx. They formed a quick friendship, and became smuggling partners. They plied the Outer Rim - based out of Betha II - until it became unpopular to do so, then fled for the Core Worlds after helping the New Republic locate Meres Ulcane. (SWJ8)

Sloor

this was a common name among members of the Dug race. (UANT)

Sloothberry

a fruit used to make wrinkle cream. (COJ)

Sloppet

an obnoxious Rylothian vermin. (JTH)

Slork

a bad-smelling bird native to Corellia. (TFE)

Slork

this species of foul-smelling beast was native to the marshlands of Kidron. They were solitary scavengers which marked out their territories and defended them from others of their kind. They consumed just about anything, from garbage to carrion to industrial wastes, and fed ravenously when hungry. In general, though, slorks are harmless to other species. Because of their diet, slorks possess an intensely noxious scent, making them exempt from the food chain because no other predator could stand to get close to them. Slorks use their noses to sense their environment by "breathing" vibrations, and a slork with an injured nose was essentially blind to their environment. (COG)

Slorth

this is a type of slovenly creature which, although large in size, is fairly low on the evolutionary scale. (TBH)

Slosin, Mox

this man served Emperor Palpatine as one of his High Inquisitors, terrorizing the Lesser Plooriod Cluster during the height of the New Order. Slosin was known as one of the Empire's most sadistic and cruel individuals, rivalling High Inquisitor Tremayne in sheer reputation. Slosin spent much of his time searching out Alliance cells in the Lesser Plooriod Cluster, traveling in his Trenchant-class cruiser Ironhand, and controlling the Cluster from his palace on Urce. (AIR)

Slothar

this musical instrument was played by waving it in the air. (SWI67)

Slott

this alien was a former slicer who worked as a computer expert, during the early years of the New Republic. (GUN)

Slow Almost Menacing Smirk, The

this was the term used by Palleus Chuff to describe one of the many facial expressions used by Jedi Master Yoda. Chuff was a noted actor whose portrayal of Yoda in Jedi! made him famous across the galaxy. (YDR)

Slow Dancing Star

this song, written and played by Annadale Fayde, first appeared on the compilation Darkness on the Land. It was rated scarlet by the Imperial Board of Culture. (GG9)

Slssk

this Hutlarian was among the mercenaries and bounty hunters assembled by Beilert Valance to attack and destroy the Anglebay Station on Telos-4, in an act of revenge that the former Imperial stormtrooper carried out shortly after the Battle of Yavin. Slssk was a former gladiator who had survived many battles on Loovria before winning his freedom and becoming a mercenary. He later signed on with Valance, and served as the first mate aboard the Kill Switch for many years. (SWMW)

Sludbug

a slow-moving insect. (COJ)

Sludd

this treacherous alien served King Gokus as a general in the armed forces of the planet Alzar, during the early years of the New Order. Unknown to Gokus, it was General Sludd who convinced Prince Plooz to stow away on a freighter to the planet Sooma. (MDCAR)

Sludese

this was the spoken language of the Sludir, consisting of harsh-sounding vocalizations. No written form of the language existed, and any visual description of concepts was accomplished with base-six mathematics or intricate images. (UANT)

Sludge Panther

this feline predator was native to Talus, and was named for the fact that its primary hunting grounds were near swamps and other fetid locations. (GQRG)

Sludgenews

this term originated in the Corporate Sector, and referred to sensationalist journalism and the gathering of news on just about any controversial or inane subject. Much of it revolved around the exploits of holovid stars and sports figures, but also reported on women who claimed to be carrying Emperor Palaptine's children and on the fact the Darth Vader was still alive, just hiding out until he could return to reinstate the Empire. Much of it was blatantly false information meant to stir up more controversy, but the masses bought their newsfeeds with gusto. (SOA)

Sludir

a centaurian race native to the planet Sluudren, the Sludirs are a violent, military race with a history of warfare and combat. They have six short, muscular legs supporting a heavy body. Their upper torso has two arms, and their long skulls are marked by a large, tooth-filled mouth. Their skin is naturally thick and dense, providing them a natural armor that they take great pride in. They evolved a primitive, tribal society based on a complex feudal system containing several rigid castes. Each caste has its own codes and rituals, but primary among all of them is the honor of battle. To the Sludir, combat is the surest test of individual power. No Sludir has ever fled from battle. They also have an intense desire to further their families, and the securing of an heir is extremely important. However, the Sludirs' immense strength and unusual appearance made them prime targets for slavers and mercenaries. The Empire did nothing to assist the Sludir, declaring them a legitimate slave race. Thus, many Sludir found off Sluudren were either slaves or criminals until the Battle of Endor. With the demise of the Empire, the Sludir retook control of Sluudren and established a loose form of government made up from crimelords of varying degrees. Many Sludir who returned to their homeworld were dismayed to find this new government, and soon left the planet once again for a better life. (GG12, UANT)

Sludir Soap

this mushy substance was created by the Sludir to patch their natural, armor-like skin. (GG12)

Slug Beast

a large, brown creature native to the lower levels of the Kashyyyk forest ecosystem. Resembling little more than a large patch of slime, the slug beast hangs itself over tree branches and waits for its prey to stumble onto it. It then reacts by heaving its bulk upward, capturing its prey by wrapping itself around it. It then exudes digestive juices into the cavity it creates, dissolving its prey and then absorbing the nutrients. (DK)

Slug Named Grendel, The

a book written by Rogar Farnoster, about the doomed mission of the starship Darkfire to hunt down the legendary space slug Grendel. (SWSB)

Slugga

this female Gorph was the Queen of her people during the early years of the New Order. She was continually hoping that her son, Vork, would find a princess, but eventually tired of his procrastination. Queen Slugga captured the young Ewok Latara, hoping that Latara would marry her son. (ECAR)

Sluggins, Gad

this man was part of the team dispatched to Corellia to capture or kill the Jedi Master Eelysa and any other Jedi they found. Slug, as he was known to his comrades, was a member of the Peace Brigade who worked for Roxi Barl during the mission. They ran into Han and Leia Organa Solo at the medical facility that was treating Eelysa, and were forced to flee or be shot by the Solos. (REC)

Sluggo the Hutt

this was the pseudonym used by the founder of the jazz band Hutt. He was obviously not a Hutt. (GMS)

Slugland

this was a smuggler's nickname for Nal Hutta. (SWJ7)

Slug-rat

this foul creature is native to the planet Ruten. It resembles a rat in its initial appearance, but is completely hairless and has a long, slimy body. The slug-rat has four legs that move it quickly along, and its toothy bite is almost always rabid. They breed quickly, and have thwarted every attempt at extermination by the Ruten natives. The average length of a slug-rat is about one meter. (TSK)

Slug-rifle

an out-dated weapon that shoots a metal projectile at its target. (HSL)

Slugthrower

a small tool that can be used as a weapon. (DFR)

Sluis Control

the transportation monitoring center at the Sluis Van Shipyards. (HTTE)

Sluis Sector

area of New Republic control containing Sluis Van, Bpfassh, Dagobah, and the Praesitlyn communications station. (HTTE)

Sluis Van

this was the primary planet in the Sluis sector. The native Sluissi lived in habitation spheres that were placed at or near the surface of the planet, allowing them the ability to access the planet's resources. (HTTE, SWJ15)

Sluis Van Central

this space station, orbiting Sluis Van, was loyal to the New Republic. The primary duty of the space station was the protection of the Sluissi and the Sluis Van Shipyards. (HTTE, DFR)

Sluis Van Congregate

this was the name of the governing body of the planet Sluis Van. (SWJ2)

Sluis Van Outer Starfighter Base

this was the New Republic's primary starfighter base, located in orbit around Sluis Van during the early years of the New Republic. (DARK)

Sluis Van Shipyards

this orbital shipyard is controlled by the Sluissi. In a stationary orbit around Sluis Van, the shipyard is a long, multi-segmented station with a wide central tunnel. Each of sixteen modules contains starship repair facilities, along with living accommodations and shops. (HTTE, HTTEC)

Sluissese

this was the native language of the Sluissi people. (GMR10)

Sluissi

native to the planet Sluis Van, these creatures are humanoid from the waist up, but have snake-like tails below the waist. The Sluissi have long been supporters of the Republic, and have shared their technology freely with other member planets. They are known as a plodding, methodical race which has an easy-going attitude and never seems to get excited. (HTTE, DFRSB)

Sluissi Wanderlust

this transport ship was pressed into passenger duty shortly before the Clone Wars, carrying refugees from Separatist worlds to Naboo. It was supposed to land at Kwilaan Starport, but was prevented from doing so immediately by a protest staged by local miners. The Sluissi Wanderlust was eventually cleared to land at Theed. (HNN5)

Slum Rat

this rodent, a relative of the womprat, was native to the planet Tatooine. (GQRG)

Slungerhound

this furry mammal, which stood about a half-meter in height, was purchased as a pet by those beings who needed more security. However, these creatures were banned as pets in many Core sectors when it was learned that they attacked their owners as often as they attacked intruders. (SWJ10)

Slurd-u pas pas min

this Snivvian phrase meant "I did not mean any insult." (HNN5)

Slurry Sea

this was the nickname used by the natives of the Moridebo District, on the planet Metellos, to describe the Ciuray Sea. (CCW)

Slusani Interstellar Pharmacologies

this medical corporation produced a variety of bandaging and sterilization products of Sluissi design, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (FOP, GFT)

Slushtime

this was the term used by the Gamorreans to describe the spring season on their homeworld of Gamorr. It was named because the climate was usually rainy and dismal, and runoffs of melting snow turn the ground into muddy quagmires. It was during Slushtime that most of the fungi and mold grown on the planet begin to grow, taking hold in the damp ground and dank hollows. Most Gamorrean offspring are born during this season, and most Gamorrean weddings take place at the midpoint of slushtime. The end of slushtime, denoted by the gradual drying out of the mudflats, signals the beginning of wartime, and sparks the raiding of other villages. (SWJ14)

Sluuce Canyon

this relatively straight canyon was located just west of Mos Eisley, and provided travelers with easy access from the higher land of the Jundland Wastes. (IWS)

Sluudren

this rocky, Outer Rim world is the home planet of the Sludir race. (GG12)

Sly Moore

this bald, female being was Supreme Chancellor Palpatine's aide, during the last years of the Old Republic. A native of the planet Umbara, Sly Moore was rumored to have engineered the removal of Sei Taria from public office, thereby ensuring that she was named as Palpatine's aide. This was never proven, however, but that did not dispel other rumors about her possible hidden agenda. In reality, Sly Moore worked behind the scenes to ensure that Palpatine's plans were carried out, often making anonymous calls to Senators and groups to play on their emotions and loyalties. After the onset of the Clone Wars, Sly Moore was given a standing order from Chancellor Palpatine: no matter what his schedule, Palpatine could always be interrupted for a meeting with Anakin Skywalker. Sly Moore was portrayed by Sandi Finley in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones and Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith. (SWI53, SWDB, JT, SOJ)

Slyder

this Rodian bounty hunter nearly captured Kyle Katarn and Jan Ors aboard the Star of Empire, shortly before the Battle of Yavin. Slyder approached Governor Dol Donar II with the information on Jan's location and Kyle defection, and accompanied the Donars when they took off after Jan, Kyle, and the Truly Sorry. Before leaving the Star of Empire, Slyder managed to capture the droid A-Cee, and hoped that its memory banks would contain valuable information to sell to the Empire. When they activated the droid, however, it took notice of Nathan Donar's Imperial uniform and self-destructed. Slyder and the Donars were killed in the blast. (SFE)

Slyte

an alien race. (COJ)

Slyter, Talon

a native of the planet Draethos, this man was a noted expert in the martial art of teras kasi, during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. (HNN5)

Slyther Bushforb

this Nuknog was living in the CoCo District of Coruscant during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Slyther was a private investigator who had learned to keep his nose out business that wasn't specifically his or his client's. He was also a frequent patron of Dex's Diner. (HNN4, SWDB)

Slythmonger

this term was used to describe any beings who illegally sold prescription drugs or narcotics for a disbarred physician. (HNN4)

Slythor

this Squib was a major crimelord who worked from a base on Korad during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He considered himself the "High Exalted Ruler of Korad," a position few doubted because no one wanted to live on the junk-covered planet. He traveled about the planet on the Peeve, a pleasure craft created from a salvaged Imperial AT-AT walker. (OE)

Slzzk

this Hutlarian served as Valance's first mate. When the mercenary band attacked Telos-4, it was Slzzk who discovered Don-Wan Kihotay and learned of Luke Skywalker's part in the destruction of the first Death Star. Believing him to be on the planet Aduba-3, Valance and his team set out to destroy Skywalker. After a brief firefight with the Rabbit's Foot in orbit around Aduba-3, Slzzk and the crew traveled to the planet's surface to search the downed ship for Alliance survivors. After Jimm the Starkiller Kid and Jaxxon arranged a stampede of banthas which killed most of Valance's ment, Slzzk was shot by Amaiza. (MC16)

Smad

this was a common name given to male Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Smada

a Hutt gangster, Smada used the planet D'vouran as his base. The small gang wars that erupted on the planet allowed him to take control and rise to power. Smada maintained a group of Gank Killers as bodyguards and enforcers, and once tried to recruit Mammon Hoole into his schemes. He hoped to use the Shi'ido as an assassin, and would do almost anything to acquire Hoole's services. The Shi'ido refused, and Smada then captured Tash and Zak Arranda in an effort to get Hoole's agreement. Still Hoole refused, although he did try to rescue the children. In a struggle near the Heart of D'vouran, Hoole managed to recover the children, while Smada fell into the pit and was consumed by the planet. (GOF1)

Sma'Da, Drawmas

this immense human was known for his ability to predict the outcome of the battles waged during the Galactic Civil War. Through his self-proclaimed Invisible and Ineluctable Casino, he offered the galaxy's richest beings to wager on the outcome of the multitude of confrontations between the Alliance and the Empire. No battle was too small for Sma'Da, who became quite accurate in determining the odds for each side of the battle. He was too good, in the eyes of Emperor Palpatine, who put out a substantial bounty for Sma'Da's capture. In order to avoid being taken, Sma'Da remained in his own home, and only ventured out to the establishment of Salla C'airam, where weapons were not allowed. This didn't deter Zuckuss and 4-LOM, who installed a small power source in the droid's head which took the place of its primary motivator. This meant that the droid would be unable to move once it was removed, but it meant that Zuckuss would be able to get a working blaster inside C'airam's bar. The plan worked to perfection, as Sma'Da was completely unaware of his imminent capture. Zuckuss managed to capture Sma'Da, and obtained a second motivator for 4-Lom from C'airam, before turning in the man for the bounty. After being released from custody, Sma'Da accepted a bet from Manaroo. The wager was based on whether Dengar would survive the mission he and Boba Fett undertook, to discover the plans of Kuat of Kuat. Sma'Da had little faith in Dengar, and took the bet. In the end, Dengar survived, and Sma'Da was forced to pay them a handsome return on Manaroo's original bet. (HM)

Smak telia

this was the Huttese word for "snack." (GMR5)

Smalyun

this man, a native of the planet Aargau, served as a Captain for Bank of Aargau Security, Limited, during the height of the New Order. He eventually replaced Captain Ryyts, although his new subordinates failed to find a way to respect him. He was continually making excuses for his own actions and miseducation, covering up by asking his officers to brief him on "the latest technology." (PH)

S'man, H.

an Alliance Commander working on the Independence, he was almost seven feet tall and weighed almost 300 pounds. His size helped him gain a measure of control over the young starfighter pilot recruits that made their way to the Independence, such as Keyan Farlander. (XW)

Smarck

this wilderness planet was the home of Black Sun's operations, during the era of the New Republic followed the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. (CE2)

Smart Blanket

a blanket which has special sensors and circuits which allow it to monitor the user's body temperature and the surrounding conditions to adjust the blanket's ability to heat and protect the user. (CS)

Smarteel

Cabrool Nuum had a base here, before Jabba the Hutt killed him. (JTH)

Smartfuse

this is a type of detonation fuse that can be programmed to go off after certain criteria are met. The most common is a time delay of up to two months from activation. The fuse can also be set off by temperature, moisture, or pressure changes. (CRO)

Smartrope

a strong cord tipped with a heat-seeking device, it is very useful for ensnaring prey or an opponent. Boba Fett's Mandalorian armor has at least one installed, which he used to try and hold Luke during Luke's escape from Jabba the Hutt and the Pit of Carkoon. (ROTJ, HTTE)

Smartvac

this was a generic term used to describe a specialized vacuum-cleaning droid developed during the last decades of the Old Republic. (YDR)

Smarx, Plo

this Doctor was in charge of Hydrospeare Corporation's Design Team Beta, until he was imprisoned for sedition and espionage by the Empire. (AIR)

Smashball

this sport was popularized during the last century of the Old Republic, and continued to maintain a large following during the New Order and into the era of the New Republic. It involved 25 players wearing skates, all of whom carried thick mallets that were used to strike the ball and sent it toward a goal. (COJ, HNN4, GMR1)

Smashbone Fever

this disease caused the ligaments in a being's body to tear violently, literally smashing the bones when they ruptured. The disease was believed to be caused by a microorganism that was neither bacteria nor virus, and was considered about fifty percent fatal even when treated with muscle relaxants. Although there was no known cure for smashbone fever, it sometimes went into remission, only to reappear later in life. (MJH)

Smasher

developed by Locris Syndicates, this was a form of personal protection armor made for private security forces. Modified versions were also used by bounty hunters. (GUN)

Smath, Sodilayno

an employee of TransGalMeg Industries, this small, dark-skinned human operated the souvenir shop located in Narg Starport. Smath was rude and loud, but he didn't make his living selling trinkets. Instead, he was the primary source of information and black market goods at the starport, and the bluster he expresses is more of a cover. Despite his high prices, Smath's information was quite often reliable. (TA)

Smazzo

this type music, punctuated by its percussion, was popular during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SHPT)

Smebba Dunk

this Hutt was in command of the Clan Council, at the point when the Empire first took control of Nar Shaddaa's Corellian Sector. (SWJ7)

Smeberellich

a Twi'lek deity. (JTH)

Smeel, Jenn

this Imperial Army Colonel took the place of Crix Madine, after Madine defected to join the Alliance. (SWJ5)

Smeeleeya

this was the Huttese verb for "to smile." (GMR5)

Smekt

this female Noghri worked as a clerk for Hyperspeed Express at their base on Wayland, during the years following the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn. She was a very demanding representative, and was always suspicious of Imperial spies trying to break into company records. When Dal Konur arrived on Wayland to search for a lightsaber, he used the Force to cloud Smekt's mind, making her believe he was actually the Jedi Knight Streen. He then arranged for several shipments to be transported to Bilbringi, where he planned to steal a ship and travel to Bastion. (WOA29)

Smelly Saint

a smuggling ship known to run illegal copies of agricultural droids in the Kimm Systems. It is a light stock freighter, not capable of long hauls. (COJ)

Smethwile, Chalden

this Imperial Lieutenant serves as a customs inspector at the spaceport on Kelada, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. A tall, gaunt man who was overly insulting to the independent spacers he detained, Smethwile often overlooked spacing infractions while berating a freighter's crew. (SWJ5)

Smiff, Relan

this man was a noted herpetologist who investigated the evolution of giant, fanned rawls on the planet Naboo, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWGAL)

Smiler

any individual affected by the herb savorium. They were described as the only truly contented individuals in the galaxy. A smiler is characterized by a totally accommodating nature, and would do anything for anyone. For this reason, they were prime targets for slave labor, since they would work until they were exhausted and worked for free. (DRO)

Smileredon-Verdont

known as Smiley, this annoying Squib had a vastly enlarged view of his position in life. Despite the fact that he was traded at age seven for a mining borelifter, and spent much of his life as a drifter in the Minos Cluster, he would gladly tell you that he was raised on the Wholesale and trained in the Mystic Martial Arts of Squib Combats and Transactions. He was briefly employed on a freighter in the Minos Cluster, and claimed that he and his partner tamed with wild forests of Yelsain by themselves. (HR)

Smiley

a nickname used to describe Klorr Vilia, after he had become affected by his own creation, savorium. He was kept impounded by Master Zorneth, who was one of the few who knew the secret of savorium because he was present when Vilia first ingested savorium. Smiley was kidnapped by the Dictator-Forever Craw, who wanted to have the secret of savorium for his own evil uses. Smiley was rescued by R2-D2 and C-3PO, with the help of Shay and the Revoltists, but later perished when Zorneth's starship self-destructed while under attack by Craw's forces. (DRO)

Smiley

this was the name used by Mace Windu to describe Nick Rostu, before they were properly introduced. (SHPT)

Smith, Gideon

this boisterous, independent prospector spent much of his career working the Sil'Lume Asteroid Belt. He and his partner, Sidney Shortfang, took a great deal of work with the Tredway family on 24 Tredway. When they learned that Erling Tredway had been captured by Imperial Governor Parnell and imprisoned on Tol Ado, shortly after the Battle of Yavin, they enlisted the help of Luke Skywalker in rescuing him. They learned that Erling's sister, Dena, had been sent to 24 Tredway to convince Erling to stop his rebellious activity in the Belt, but found Dena had been injured in Parnell's attack on 24 Tredway. They brought Dean to Ire Eleazari, then returned to Tol Ado to rescue Erling. However, in their initial flight from the Deathblock, Gideon was bounced from their boss-buggy while they were being chased by Imperial forces. Gideon went down shooting, but was quickly cut down by Imperial stormtroopers. His death meant a great deal to Luke, and he sadly remembered Gideon's contributions when he returned to Yavin 4. (JH)

Smitken

this man was the Port Import Inspector at the Drepplin starport, during the early years of the New Republic. (POC)

Smoke Demon

summoned from the very essence of The Force, this creature existed as a deadly plume of smoke until it could feed on living tissue. When it captured a living being, the smoke demon first paralyzed it, then insinuated its smoky form into the physical body of its prey. The smoke demon then sucked every bit of living essence from the body, leaving nothing behind. As it fed, the smoke demon became more substantial. As it grew stronger, the only way to kill a smoke demon was with the Force itself. When a smoke demon died, the souls of its victims - which had been trapped inside it - were finally freed. (LTA1)

Smoke Moth

this small, flying insect was once native to the planet Nal Hutta. (NEGV)

Smoke Screamer

this combination sonic screecher and smoke bomb was often used by Puggles Trodd. When detonated, the smoke screamer gives off thick, black clouds of smoke along with an ear-piercing wail. (TM)

Smoking Blaster

this smuggling ship was once employed by Nilya Fek'ra to transport security droid logic matrices to the rebels on Cotellier, during the Galactic Civil War. The ship's computer memory also held information on Yosger's operations, which resulted in Yosger's pirates attacking and waylaying the ship en route to Cotellier. The Smoking Blaster was a modified Loronar medium transport ship, measuring 75 meters in length and armed with four twin laser cannons. The ship had been in service for 50 years prior to the Battle of Endor, although its owners were heavily in debt to Yosger for the ship. (GMH)

Smoking Jets

a pre-fab bar and grill on Spaceport Row in Plawal. Like most of its kind, the Smoking Jets was build from 3 pre-fab cubes linked together in a line, with the connecting walls knocked out. (COJ)

Smoky Crystal

another name for Spook Crystals. (POT)

Smoky Dreams

Bria Lavval sang this song with Umjing Baab and his Swinging Trio aboard the Queen of Empire. (RD)

Smoo

this was one of the many Twi'leki clans which were native to the planet Ryloth. In the Twi'leki language, the clan's name meant "blessed". (GCG)

Smoor

this plant is often used by terraformers as a food source. It grows in harsh climates. (POT)

Smootie

this elderly, alien criminal was incarcerated at the Oovo IV prison facility during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. Smootie was once good friends with Jango Fett, and served as Fett's primary source of inside information for many years. Smootie later provided Fett with information on the Bando Gora cult, when Fett returned to Oovo IV to break Bendix Fust out of prison. He related the story of another bounty hunter who had tried to locate the Bando Gora, but returned in a state of shaking fear and without any memory of where he had gone. (BH)

Smoppy

a putty-like substance used by the Twi-leki. (JTH)

Smotl

this alien race was characterized by its blue-green skin. (APS)

SM-series Droid

this form of automaton was developed by the New Republic and used as scavengers at battle sites. As directed by Operation Flotsam and the Historic Battle Site Preservation Act, these droids were used to recover any physical evidence from a battle site, for investigation by the New Republic Intelligence agency, prior to release for public viewing. These droids were often accompanied by DA-series analysis droids. (CTD)

Smugglers' Alliance

in the years following Grand Admiral Thrawn's defeat, the tenuous collaboration between the galaxy's best smugglers was consolidated into a formal alliance which agreed to assist the New Republic in any way possible. Mara Jade served as the liaison between the Republic and the Alliance for many years, before marrying Luke Skywalker and training at the Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, the Smugglers' Alliance maintained a low profile, as many of its members turned to more legitimate activities such as running supplies and weapons to worlds that had been ravaged by the alien invaders. With the surrender of the Yuuzhan Vong at Coruscant some five years after the invasion began, the leaders of the Smugglers' Alliance decide that it was time to disband the alliance. Many of the goods they had been providing to the galaxy - chief among them the various forms of spice - had been in short supply during the war, and most beings had been forced to confront their addictions and overcome them. This meant that there was a very small market for these illegal goods. Thus, the members of the alliance set off to help the galaxy rebuild itself. (COTF, UF)

Smuggler's Confederation

this loose alliance was formed in the Cularin System, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. They were the chief rivals to the power of Riboga the Hutt, having organized themselves into a loose guild in order to gain a measure of respect and power in the system. Over time, Riboga made a deal with the Confederation which brought the organization into Riboga's operations. The day-to-day operations of the Confederacy were unchanged, and many smugglers actually welcomed the leadership Riboga brought to the group. (LFC)

Smuggler's Fade

this was the name used by smugglers to describe an evasion tactic in which a wanted individual was cornered in a room or building, but hid behind a false wall or inside a compartment, thereby "fading" into the background and avoiding notice. (TG)

Smuggler's Hideaway

a bar and restaurant located on Nar Shaddaa. (THG)

Smuggler's Kit

this small, black-box device is attached to a starship's hyperdrive and identification transponder. It changes the starship's identification codes and registry information each time the ship jumps into hyperspace. (SOL)

Smuggler's Pie

this meal, which is basically a careful combination of left-overs, derived from the basic smuggler's dinner which consisted of whatever was available when the smuggler was hungry. (TNR)

Smuggler's Rest

this tavern is located on Nar Shaddaa. It has rooms available for rent, and is generally described as sleazy. Bria Tharen stayed here, while planning the Alliance's attack on Ylesia. (RD)

Smuggler's Reverse

a starship maneuver in which a ship under attack suddenly stops and swings around 180 degrees to face its attackers. (VOF)

Smuggler's Run

this collection of asteroids was once controlled by the Hutts. It served as a base of operations for many smugglers who couldn't afford the relative luxury of havens like Nar Shaddaa. The Smuggler's Run has been in use for several centuries, and has remained unchecked due to its hazardous entrance through the asteroids. Several asteroids have been hollowed out or riddled with caverns to support life, and have been nicknamed Skips. The Skips were numbered in the order in which they were inhabited. A few minor crimelords developed personal empires within certain asteroids, but their influence rarely extended beyond a single rock. After the deaths of Jabba the Hutt and Emperor Palpatine, the Run became freed of Hutt control and began to operate on its own. During this time, the failed Jedi Dolph found an ally in the crimelord Nandreeson, and together they began shipping Dolph's rigged droids through the Run to points on Coruscant and other New Republic worlds. Many smugglers took jobs working for Nandreeson and Dolph, but many of them suddenly disappeared when they got too involved. (TNR)

Smuggler's Scuttlebutt

this galaxy-wide newsnet sprang up during the New Order, and was created to provide smugglers and independent spacers with relevant information on various sectors of the galaxy. Rather than provide information on legitimate spacing opportunities, the Smuggler's Scuttlebutt detailed the current underworld situation in a given location. (FBS)

Smugglers' Strip

this chain of mountains ran down the center of Elrood's largest continent, separating Elrooden from Dinbar. Originally founded by Lud Chud as an isolated landing strip, this area was allowed to remain operative by Elrood Starport Command only through Lud Chud's careful management. Only a few ships were allowed to land at the Smugglers' Strip each day, in order to maintain traffic through the main starport. (PG3)

Smuggling Guilds

the unofficial title used by the various groups who are running smuggling operations from Nar Shaddaa. (DE1)

Smuggling Interdiction Division

this was a branch of the Corellian Defense Force, charged with monitoring and apprehending smugglers who used Corellia as their base. Corran Horn joined this division after his mother, Nyché, was killed in a speeder accident. It was during this time that he first met Iella Wessiri. (NEGC)

Smythers

this Imperial Lieutenant served under Captain Alijah Orr in the Mestra System. He constantly hounded and bullied Renea Luies, especially after Orr began his personal against smugglers. Smythers hoped to get promoted by quickly and energetically carrying out Orr's orders. He tried to catch Shamus Falconi smuggling weapons, but was unable to do so successfully. (SWJ9)

Snack Beetle

this form of beetle was bred by the Yuuzhan Vong as a source of food. (UF)

Snackquarium

this device was developed by the Hutts, and served as a living environment for the aquatic creatures they loved to snack on. (TPS)

Snagel

a member of the Imperial Select Committee. (ROC)

Snaggeltooth

this was the nickname under which the Snivvian Zutton worked as a bounty hunter. (SWJ11)

Snaggletooth

a derogatory name given to the Snivian race. (SW)

Snaggmakh

this was a common male name among the Gamorrean people. Like most Gamorrean names, it was essentially gibberish that indicated what a Gamorrean would do if you made him angry. (GCG)

Snake-Eyes

Scarlet Bloodhawk's Ky'lessan second-in-command. He turns her and her Alliance friends over to the Empire for a nominal fee. (RPG)

Snakes' Den

this starport area, located on the planet Camden, was named for the fact that the starport served as a crossroads for the trade of the Outer Rim's fringe society. (CRO)

Snap Baton

this weapon appears to be a short, stocky cylinder when not in use. However, it can be snapped open with a flick of the wrist, extending the shaft into a meter-long club. The snap baton was used by law enforcement agencies which were limited in their use of laser weapons. (ROE)

Snap Bug

related to the blast bug used by the Yuuzhan Vong, the snap bug was a much smaller creature, although it exploded in much the same way as a blast bug did. Instead of causing physical damage, however, snap bugs produced a blinding flash of light which disoriented an individual long enough for a Yuuzhan Vong warrior to launch and attack. In low light situations, snap bugs could also provide a spark of illumination. (GMR8)

Snapit, Torr

this ancient, gray-skinned man was a scout for the Jedi Knights, searching the galaxy for Force-sensitive individuals in preparation for the struggle against the Brotherhood of Darkness. It was Snapit who discovered Tomcat and Bug on the planet Somov Rit, and he arranged for the the children to be transferred to Ruusan. Upon arrival, however, their ship was set upon by Sith starfighters, and only Snapit, Bug, and Tomcat survived the crash-landing. The youths were impatient with Snapit's lack of action, and were amazed when the elderly Jedi did not draw his own lightsaber in a struggle against a team of Sith scouts. Nevertheless, Snapit managed to defeat the Sith, and believed that he had finally taught the boys a lesson. As they fled the Sith warriors, Snapit was forced to sacrifice himself to save the boys. After the boys crossed a narrow bridge, Snapit lured the Sith onto the bridge before cleaving it in two with his lightsaber. Snapit and the Sith fell to their deaths. Tomcat tried to find Snapit, but only to take his lightsaber. (JVS)

Snaplaunce

this local policeman was a large, eight-foot-tall Ithorian which had relocated to the planet Nam Chorios. Snaplaunce worked with the human Grupp in maintaining the peace of Hweg Shul. He believed that Beldorion was nothing but a Hutt crime-boss. It was Grupp and Snaplaunce that intercepted Luke Skywalker and removed him from the rocks and spears of the Oldtimers that attacked him near Taselda's house. Snaplaunce provided Luke with information on Callista's travels through the city. (POT)

Snapping Septiod

this bar was located on Vos Gesal Street, in Coruscant's Uscru District, next door to the Outlander Club. (SWDB)

Snapping Septoid

this arcade was located in the Uscru District of Coruscant, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

SnapShoot

this was the brand name of Greff-Timms Industrial's DT3 quick-draw pulse-wave blaster. (TOJC)

Snark

this was a swear word used by the human inhabitants of the planet Ord Mantell and several other planets. (ROP, REL)

Snart

this was a creature known for its slimy coating. (T7)

Snayd

this Bothan served as Admiral Traest Kre'fey's chief aide aboard the Ralroost, during the years of the New Republic's struggle against the Yuuzhan Vong. (Y, DW)

SNDF-12

this navigation and direction finding device was produced by Celextrian during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Known as a NavDif, the SNDF-12 could communicate with orbital satellites, triangulating the position of its user in seconds. (GFT)

Sne

this given name was commonly given to female human children throughout the galaxy. (GCG)

Snedarl Electronics

this contractor developed a number of electronic equipment systems for the Empire. (FOP)

Snee

this was the name given to the native language of the Sneevel people. (ANT)

Sneel, Jarred

this man, a native of the Corellian System, was a noted droid rights protester during the height of the New Order. Not much was known about Sneel, except for the fact that he was obsessed with automata of every kind and the preservation of their rights. He was also the leader of the fanatical group known as the Mechanical Liberation Front. Many law enforcement agencies believed that Sneel and the MLF were actually front groups for Black Sun, but this was never proven. (FTD)

Sneerzick, Xalto

this human was the son of a brilliant droid designer. His early years were filled with loneliness broken only by the company of droids, which Xalto came to love as his real family. As he grew, Xalto started to believe that all droids were at least somewhat sentient, and deserved to be treated as equals to organic lifeforms. Xalto's education followed his father's footsteps, and he became a genius in droid mechanics. His behavior turned fanatical and irrational in his later years, and a tattoo of a cog and a lightning bolt on his right hand signifies his complete devotion to freeing all droids throughout the galaxy. He founded the Droid Abolitionist Movement, and a small team of confederates gathered around him, including Babalabbet Swoont, Zoonia Tantra, and a blue droid known as G-3PO. A loud and fiery speaker, Xalto was highly charismatic. When he discovered that Cosmohaul Shipping was transporting large numbers of droids, he and his followers began pirating Cosmohaul ships. He and his team infiltrated Cosmohaul's crew pool, and managed to gain access to the Argent Lady and its cargo of R5 droids. Xalto added his "emancipation virus" to the droids, and hoped to set them free. However, his droids' programming caused the droids to rebel even against him. His group on the Argent Lady was tracked and killed by the R5 droids before a group of freelance mercenaries could stop them. (SWJ9)

Sneeve

this planet, located in the Kastolar Sector of the Expansion Region, was the homeworld of the Sneevel race. Sneeve was one of the first ten planets to join the Refugee Resettlement Coalition, shortly before the Clone Wars. Note that the galaxy map inside Star Wars Insider, issue 65, places Sneeve in the Mid Rim, between Tholatin and Chalacta. (IWE1, HNN5, SWI65)

Sneevel

an alien race, the Sneevel were native to the planet Sneeve. Roughly humanoid in stature, Sneevels stood nearly two meters tall and had a square jaw set below an upturned nose. They were first discovered by Duros explorers some 14,000 years before the Battle of Endor, and had already achieved a high level of technology at that time. After being given the gift of hyperdrive technology by Duros and human spacers, the Sneevels began exploring the galaxy for themselves. They were known as excellent scouts and explorers. (IG1, IWE1, ANT)

Sneeze

this unpredictable young man was a member of the Friends of Paran resistance group on Derilyn, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He considered himself a soldier and all-around trouble-maker, and claimed to be able to smell Imperial forces a mile away. Sneeze and Kailage Lanis were good friends, although both were captured by Imperial forces during the Alliance's attempt to expose Operation: Elrood. (OE)

Snerp

this was a slang term used on the planet Corellia, as a derogatory way of describing another person. (MC100)

Snic 2-4-2

this repulsor-equipped droid was designed to move small cargoes from place to place. Two large grasping arms were mounted to the front, and a pair of smaller manipulator arms was located on each side. (BTRKS29)

Sniffer

one of Leia Organa-Solo's bodyguards, he was given the nickname Sniffer because his job was to precede Leia wherever she went. He carried a backpack filled with various electrical and chemical sensors to detect threats to Leia before she encountered them. (BTS)

Sniffer

a BlasTech weapons detector consisting of a cube-shaped, handheld scanner. (CSA)

Snig

this beverage could be served cold or boiled, depending on the drinker's tastes. (SWJ11)

Snigvine

this thorned, creeping plant is a third-generation variety used on terraformed worlds. It is a hardy plant with a dense root structure that helps anchor the soil. (POT)

Snil, Tarrant

this customs officer worked in the city of Lay Pa-Sidian, on the planet G'wenee. Snil was targetted by Grappa the Hutt for weaseling out of a bribe the crimelord had paid him, stealing from him, and generally interfering with Grappa's business. After Zee Ethda failed to capture him, Grappa sent Kil Kenix, unaware that Kenix was really Kir Kanos. Kenix quickly dispatched Snil's bodyguards, and easily took Snil into custody. Snil was then transported to Genon, and was given to the Zanibar for one of their blood-sacrifices. (CE2)

Snillik

a thick liquor that Lando often orders when a sabacc match requires alcoholic consumption. He chooses snillik because it tastes awful, so he must sip it slowly. It is produced somewhere in the Core Systems. (LCF)

Sniper

this was the name of an Imperial attack craft developed in the wake of the Battle of Endor. A cross between a swoop and an airspeeder, the Sniper was a fast, maneuverable repulsorcraft that was protected by heavy armor and armed with a twin blaster cannon, a twin medium blaster cannon, and a concussion missile launcher. These curve-winged vehicles could attain speeds of 600 kilometers an hour, mainly because the designers fitted an immense ion afterburner just behind the cockpit. This enhanced drive system gave the Sniper a characteristic whine whenever it flew into battle. (SWG2)

Sniquux

this Rodian was one of the mercenaries employed by Jabba the Hutt to infiltrate Ylesia just prior to the Alliance's assault on the planet. Sniquux was sent to Colony Nine to make sure that the t'landa Til working to get the colony operational never succeeded. Just before the Battle of Ylesia, Sniquux laid several traps of monofilament wire and portable speakers. From the speakers, he sounded the call of a thota, and stampeded the t'landa Til. The huge beasts panicked, running into the monofilament fibers and shredding themselves to ribbons. (RD)

Snit

Droopy McCool's "real" name, Snit was actually the given to the Kitonak by the beings who enslaved him as a youth. He resented the name Snit, but his actual name - a whistled sequence of notes - was unpronounceable in Basic. When Sy Snootles decided to call him Droopy McCool, Snit gladly shed his slave-name, although he maintained a deep connection to his birthname. (TJP, SWI67)

Snitch

this was a nickname, used in the spaceport town of Mos Eisley to describe Garindan. (CHRN)

Snitchly Gritch

this was the codename of a criminal informant who had a number of contacts within the Black Sun organization, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (WOTC)

Snit-spore

a snack food favored by the Squib, Mace Windu. (SWJ11)

Snitworm

a noxious slug. (JTH)

Snivas, Jerik

a native of Lianna, this greasy-haired man served as an investigator for the Imperial Office of Criminal Investigations for many years. His successes, both in the field and in the bureaucracy, earned him a posting as an officer in the Kwenn Station IOCI facility. However, several shady deals caught up with him, and he quit the IOCI in order to avoid being investigated himself. He remained on Kwenn Station, brokering information to the highest bidder. He also expedited the postings of bounties, matching them to specific hunters in order to minimize the paperwork a hunter was required to do in order to take on a bounty. It was later learned that Snivas had been working for Tern Ashandrik, sending less-qualified hunters to Seregar in order to help maintain Ashandrik's freedom. (ND)

Snivgold

this was an Ansionian swear word, used to describe another individual in a rude way. (APS)

Snivgold

this was an Ansionian swear word, used to describe another individual. (APS)

Snivvian

an alien race native to the planet Cadomai, the Snivvians are short-statured humanoids with protruding lower jaws studded with short fangs and tusks. Their toothy maws have earned them the nickname "Snaggletooth." Their physiology is indicative of their environment, although it is somewhat unusual. The harsh, frigid conditions on Cadomai have given them thick skin instead of heavy fur. This skin is formed of special membranes that open and close pores to regulate heat loss, in response to temperature differences. Snivvians don't sweat, since their skin doesn't exude moisture. They also don't suffer from frostbite. The adaptations of the Snivvians to their environment makes them excellent scouts and trackers. They have evolved a high level of genetic technology, a result of their intense desire to breed out undesirable characteristics. The Snivvian biology produces two offspring at every birth. Normally, the birth results in one male and one female child. However, a flaw in their genetics - the so-called Blood Code - produces twin males once every several million births. Only 200 such births have been recorded in Snivvian history, but all have led to trouble. The flaw reveals itself in one of the male twins, and usually causes the male to become emotionally unstable. It mutates the male throughout his lifetime, resulting in an sociopathic individual capable of destroying Snivvian civilization. Thus, the Snivvians strove to discover the possibility of twin males and what causes one male to be flawed. However, this genetic technology has given them a false sense of security, and their strength as a race led them to become enslaved by the Thalassians several centuries before the Galactic Civil War. They were rescued by the Old Republic, which helped introduce them to hyperspace travel. This continued travel through hyperspace has somehow caused genetic changes in the Snivvians, and the possibility of male twins is on the rise. As a race, they have begun to recede, desperately trying to prevent the birth of unstable male twins. Rumors of a Snivvian destroyer began to circulate just before the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy, and many Snivvians feared that this evil being had allied itself with the Yuuzhan Vong. (GG12, CCG7, UANT)

Snivvian

this was the native language of the Snivvian race. (HNN5)

Sno

this Shyriiwook word was used as the prefix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "curious"

or "quick", and could be combined with one or more suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Snogar

this species of creatures inhabit the ice world of Ota, where they were constantly repairing their heating machines to stay warm. These shaggy humanoids are a primitive race that have devolved from a highly-technological race. These ancient ancestors are known among the Snogars as the Old Ones, and supposedly developed the heating machines. The Snogars barely survived life on Ota. Sometime following the Battle of Yavin, they were able to capture Luke Skywalker and Boba Fett, and demanded that the two fix their machinery. The two escaped, but returned to the Snogar city to rescue Han Solo. In the ensuing battle, the Mole appeared and pinned Fett to a wall with a magnet while the others escaped from the Snogars. (CSWEA, EGC)

Snogrutt

this Gamorrean developed the large, ultrasonically-enhanced axes used by Jabba the Hutt's guards. (CCG7)

Snoigit

this was a swear word used by the Talz. (SWEIA)

Snoopscoot

this was fighter pilot slang for any reconnaissance craft, such as the Incom T-65R, designed to get in and out of a system to collect data without being discovered. (IR)

Snoova

this infamous bounty hunter was a Wookiee. He learned the trade while he was indentured to Asteria, but eventually earned his freedom. Snoova kept the fur on top of his head cut in a spacer's flat-top, with the hair on the sides and back of his head pulled into a long ponytail. Snoova was captured by the Twi'leki crimelord Lonay, as part of Prince Xizor's plans to capture Luke Skywalker and discredit Darth Vader. Chewbacca pretended to be Snoova when he and Leia Organa infiltrated Coruscant to meet with Prince Xizor. (SE)

Snopps III, Regenal Hanniper

this man was the youngest son of Zafiel Snopps, but was nothing like his father. Regenal failed to gain entry to the Imperial Academy, despite some string-pulling by his father, and he lacked the focus needed to be a true officer. He believed himself to be the most important person in the galaxy, and was known to be paranoid about his delusions of grandeur. He spent much of his time trying to entertain himself, often gambling on luxurious worlds like Spira, threatening to call in his father's Imperial forces whenever things didn't go his way, in order to reassure himself of his own importance. (SWJ1)

Snopps, Zafiel

this Imperial governor once presided over the Corluag House of Citizens, ensuring that the planet remained under Imperial control during the height of the New Order. Before this, Snopps was a Senator to the Old Republic. During the Clone Wars, Snopps was elected to the position of Governor, and barely survived a Separatist attack on the Legislative Hall in Curamelle. At the height of the New Order, Governor Snopps was second only to Moff Jamson Caglio in controlling the Bormea Sector of the galaxy. (SESB, SWJ1, SWJ7, SWJ12, WOTC, GCG)

Snorbal

this species of large herbivore, distinguished by its split tusks, was native to the planet Lok. (ROD)

Snoruuk

this mobile mushroom was found in the forests of the planet Gamorr. They grew in rings of up to 30 individual plants, and each plant had a "foot" that it uses to cross the forest floor. The Gamorreans discovered that, if you have enough patience, the snoruuk could be herded like other creatures by tapping on their caps. The ring moved away from the vibration. The snoruuk was a staple food of the

Gamorreans, although the spores of the mushroom were known to cause fatigue and exhaustion if breathed by most other races. (SWJ10, GCG)

Snot Vampire

a derogatory term for the Anzat race of predators. (TJP)

Snow Demon

native to Toola, these flying predators have white talons, massive sharp teeth, and a purple tongue. Their long tails are covered with hair. Snow demons average 1.5 meters in length, with a wingspan of up to 3 meters. Like the Whiphids, snow demons prey on mastmots, which often brings the two species into competition. These creatures hunt in flocks, and fly with the use of wings combined with a methane-filled gas bladder in their digestive tract. (CPL, SWJ10)

Snow Demon

this race of heavily-furred, humanoid creatures was native to the planet Akuria Two. They hated the presence of the Empire on their planet, and allied themselves with Colonel Odan to fight back. The Imperial forces on Akuria Two hunted the Snow Demons like beasts, never realizing that they were sentient beings. Snow Demons were distinguished by their light-gray beards and the bony spines which grew along the centerline of their skulls. What made them unusual was their fur, which appeared to be gray or white, but allowed a Snow Demon to blend almost perfectly into the snowy environment of Akuria Two. (PZZ2, MCI4)

Snow Falcon

an extinct species of birds, snow falcons were once native to the planet Rhinnal. By the time of the New Republic, they could only be seen as images in the Holographic Zoo of Extinct Animals on Coruscant. (DA, CCW)

Snow Flyer

this was the name given to any landspeeder which was modified for use in arctic environments. (PZZ2)

Snow Hawks

a division of Imperial Cold Assault Stormtroopers. (SWSB)

Snow King

this ancient being was the sibling of the Sun King and his sisters, the Leaf Queen and the Flower Queen. According to the Ewoks of the Forest Moon of Endor, the Snow King was responsible for bringing winter to the moon. However, the Snow King was not satisfied with sharing the power of the seasons with his siblings, and often plotted with his mistress, Oodra, to take control of the weather. Sometime before the Battle of Endor, the Snow King planned to steal the Season Scepter used by his siblings to control the weather of the Forest Moon of Endor, in the hopes of using it to obtain the Sunstar from the Ewoks. However, the Leaf Queen learned of her brother's plan, and called upon the Ewoks and other creatures of the moon to help defeat him. (ECAR)

Snow Nara

a pleasure barge that operates on the ice-world of Toloran, the Snow Nara caters to those tourists who wish to go ice skiing, sightseeing, and ice dragon hunting. (DFRSB)

Snow Slug

this large, mollusk-like creature lived in the snowy crust of the planet Alzoc III. It captured prey by moving through the snow with its huge mouth wide open, swallowing anything which it could find. (EGP)

Snow Snake

a vicious creature found on the planet Ota, snow snakes are covered in a deep indigo fur and have pointed snouts filled with sharp teeth. (CSWEA)

Snow Stork

a species of large, white-plumed bird native to Berea. (TBSB)

Snowat

this was one of the most common male names used by members of the Ithorian race. Although most Ithorian names were not used for a specific meaning, historians found that this name meant "mountain". (GCG)

Snowball

this was the name of Bnugor's pet snuzzleguff. (SWJ11)

Snow-borer

a this specialized repulsor-craft was used dig through ice and snow to form tunnels. Mining operations and explorers used them to reach solid ground beneath the surface of icy worlds. (MOC)

Snowcat

see Edan Tiger (IAG)

Snowflake Base

this was the name used by Jonox Forb to describe the base he established on Hoth for his smuggling operation. (PH)

Snow-flier

this was a modified form of airspeeder, adapted for use in the extreme cold of the planet Csilla. They resembled floating, vertical disks that sat on four spindly legs when on the ground. These craft could be equipped with blaster cannons for use by military and police units. (FH2)

Snowman

this was a slang term used by the Alliance to describe an Imperial snowtrooper. (SWJ3)

Snowspeeder

converted Incom T-47 airspeeder used on Hoth by the Alliance as a low-altitude fightercraft. They had to be specially modified to operate in the extreme cold of Hoth's ecology, as well as to survive military duty. They are heavily shielded, and the standard cockpit has been replaced with a Y-wing cockpit pod. They are two-man ships, and have two heavy laser cannons (one on each wing) and a rear-mounted harpoon cannon. The modifications performed by the Alliance limited the T-47's ceiling to only 175 kilometers. (ESB, SWSB)

Snowtrooper

another name for an Imperial Cold Assault stormtrooper, this is a specially-trained stormtrooper who has been conditioned to work in extremely cold conditions. They have modified body armor which generates heat and recycles oxygen. (ESB, ISB)

Snow-wolf

this predator was native to the tiny mountain ranges found on the planet Kabaira. They were named for their stark, white fur. (SWJ7)

Snowwood

this unique, white-wooded tree was found in the underground caverns of the planet Csilla. The Chiss used specialized nurseries to grow these trees, and harvested them to create furniture and artworks. (FH2)

Snoygal, Paxtrell

this old man was a representative of Cosmohaul Shipping. He had spent the majority of his life plying the space lanes for the Old Republic, but has since seen better days. He lost most of his teeth, and his breath became very bad. He lost his left eye under unknown circumstances, but had it replaced with a jeweled sensor. Snoygal was directed by Felben Cuplatt to hire some freelance mercenaries to protect Cosmohaul transports. Snoygal provided the mercs with the Argent Lady from which to run their operation, which resulted in the discovery of Xalto Sneerzick's crew and their defeat. (SWJ9)

SNS-600

this device was known as a sound bubble. Produced by Paretaine Sonics, the SNS-600 generated a small field which sound could not penetrate. Incoming sound waves were dampened upon hitting the field, allowing the user inside to experience a modest level of peace and tranquility. (GFT)

Snubfighter

another name for an X- or Y-wing. (SW)

Snubship

another name for an X- or Y-wing. (SME)

Snufftalon

this huge Wookiee was employed as an enforcer by the owner of Shilley's, on Questal. (GCQ)

Snunb

this was a common female name given to Sullustan females. It meant "popular" in the Sullustan language. (GCG)

Snurf

a small parasite. (JTH)

Snuzzleguff

this round, furry creature resembled a fuzzy beachball. Snuzzleguffs were carnivorous, and injected their prey with a poison to immobilize it before eating it. Using their tiny wing-like arms, snuzzleguffs can also glide over short distances. (SWJ11)

Snyle, Sarchen

this meticulous Imperial customs agent worked at the Brentaal starport during the Galactic Civil War. He was secretly sympathetic to the Alliance, and often overlooked suspicious cargoes whenever they were bound for Alliance bases. He appeared as gruff and angry as any other customs officer, and made sure he badgered each starship captain with the same vigor, no matter what their allegiance. However, working in tandem with Morrina Reugus, Sarchen would make sure that Alliance starships in the port received a lighter scrutiny than other ships. (CRO)

So Leet

this Cerean was active in the politics of his homeworld, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. (SWRPG)

So Much for Tact

this song, written and played by the band Deeply Religious, first appeared on the compilation Advanced Explosives Handbook. It was banned by the Imperial Board of Culture. (GG9)

Soames

this young man served as a Lieutenant within the small band of rebels that opposed the Imperial occupation of Jabiim during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWESF)

Soammei

this Rodian clan is generally considered to have produced the first Inta'si'rin'na of the Rodian people, but was destroyed by other clans while defending its leadership claim centuries afterward. (SPG)

Soara Antana

this alien Jedi Knight was considered to be the best lightsaber combat teacher at the Jedi Temple on Coruscant, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. She was a sturdy being, well-muscled and ready for anything. When Soara and her Padawan, Darra Thel-Tanis, were dispatched to Radnor to ensure an orderly evacuation of the planet, they were separated when the Jedi Masters on the team - including Obi-Wan Kenobi, Siri Tachi, and Ry-Gaul - went into the city of Aubendo, while their apprentices - Anakin Skywalker, Ferus Olin, and Tru Veld - remained in Tacto. The Jedi were cornered in a canyon after discovering that the plague in Aubendo was dying out, and Soara's leg was injured before the Padawans rescued the Masters. Later, Soara was part of the delegation that brought relief supplies to the failing world of Nuralee, along with Thel-Tanis. With the completion of this mission, the pair were attached to the team that was dispatched to Korriban to apprehend Granta Omega. In one of the final battles, Soara was devastated when Darra took several blaster bolts in the chest, as she leaped to protect Ferus. Darra eventually died of her wounds, and Master Soara returned to Coruscant with a heavy heart. (JQ1, JQ9, JQ10)

Soarer

a huge, winged alien native to Ammuud, these reptilian avians were also known as pterosaurs. They had long, sharp beaks and large claws. While they are severely limited in intelligence, they are still cunning predators who use speed and surprise to capture their prey. They are carnivorous, often feeding on grazers. (HSR)

Sobel Zeelesi

this male Rodian was a known arms smuggler during the years following the Battle of Naboo, and was wanted by the Republic Security Force for his part in the destruction of several RSF facilities. He was captured on the Outland Transit Station by Jango Fett and brought in for the bounty on his head. (BH)

Soboba

this was the Huttese word for the number fifteen (15). Note, however, that the Huttese counting system was based on a base-eight system. So, soboba indicated the number thirteen (13) in the Basic language. (GMR5)

Soboll

this platform city was established on the planet Cularin by the Old Republic, as a place to house the small military force which was dispatched to maintain the peace in the Cularin System during the era of the Battle of Naboo. Years later, after the Thaereian Military began to usurp control in the system, Soboll became a major base for the Thaereians. Just before the Clone Wars, when Operation False Horizon was launched by the Cularin Militia, Soboll provided the main fallback location for the defeated Thaereians. The Thaereians used multiple levels of shielding and security systems to protect their base on Soboll, hoping for reinforcements to arrive. (LFC, LFCW)

Sobrik

this was one of the manufacturing centers of the planet Balmorra, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

Socco

this world of barren, rocky wastes is the second planet in the Outlier System based around Sacor. (CTD)

Sochi

this planet was controlled by the Empire during the height of the New Order, and it served as a vacation world where Imperial officers, dignitaries, and soldiers could spend their holidays. A "retirement home" for stormtroopers, known as the Troopers' Rest, was also located on Sochi. (PM4)

Society for Self-Actualization

this quasi-religion replaced the Il Madri religion of the Ayrou, after the Ayrou first made contact with the Old Republic. (GMR9)

Society of the Black Bha'lir

this guild organization was made up of smugglers and pirates who had adopted the planet Socorro as their base of operations. They maintained a high standard and strict work ethics, and all members were required to adhere to them. The Society was also the primary members of the government on the planet Socorro, although leadership of the planet is divided among the four main tribes and other criminal organizations. The Society also maintained a presence in the Omman System, and was a bitter rival of the Hutts. Note that Secrets of the Sisar Run indicates that this society is of Corellian - not Socorran - heritage. (BSS, SSR)

Socker, Nap

this smelter was one of the colonists of the planet Nam Chorios. He was in business with Tinnin Droo. When Dzymand Seti Ashgad began inciting the Newcomers to revolt, Socker was badly burned when a Force storm suddenly ignited the smelter. The burns and trauma he suffered resulted in the loss of his legs. (POT)

Soco-Jarel Station

located within the Ibhann'I Tribal Lands near Vakeyya, on Socorro, this was the planet's major city and the location of landing pads and hanger bays. It offered smugglers and pirates high-quality repairs at reasonable rates, as well as a wealth of residences and safehouses to live in. Among the natives of Vakeyya, the starport was known as the "stargate of the city," for all visitors to Vakeyya must pass through it. (SWJ2, BSS)

Socorran

this was the native language of the beings who lived on the planet Socorro. (WOTC)

Socorran Shield

this was a nickname used to describe the Society of the Black Bha'lr. (BSS)

Socorro

this planet was the innermost of two worlds orbiting the red giant Sokor. A planet over very little natural value, it was named for the Old Corellian term which meant "scorched earth." It was an arid world covered with eons of volcanic ash. It has long been a safe haven for pirates, free-traders, and outlaws. The planet was first settled during the Old Republic, some 3,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. Six colony ships originally set out to settle the planet, but two were lost on the trip. The colonists evolved over time into several nomadic tribes and a population which preferred to stay in the cities. (SWJ2, BSS)

Socorro

this Old Corellian word literally meant "scorched earth." (SWJ2)

Sodarra

this Imperial Captain was in command of a team of highly-skilled stormtroopers shortly after the Battle of Yavin. Sodarra and his team were dispatched to Ord Mantell by the Emperor himself, when it was learned that Darth Vader's TIE Advanced cockpit had been located there - with the Dark Lord himself inside and unconscious. They managed to recover the cockpit before Governor Vellam, and fled Ord Mantell in a CR90 corvette. Vellam dispatched the Eradicator to intercept them, and they were shot down over Mon Torri. There, they encountered Han Solo and Chewbacca, who were flying the Millennium Falcon to Tatooine to intercept Alfreda Goot. Both ships were damaged, although Alfreda provided the necessary parts to repair the Millennium Falcon. Sodarra then tricked Han Solo into believing that the cargo he and his men were carrying was a prototype cloaking device that he and his men had stolen from Governor Vellam, shortly after they defected from Imperial service. Sodarra claimed that they had planned to sell the prototype to Ploovo Two-for-One, but the crimelord doublecrossed them and they were on the run. Han, meanwhile, was racing against Alfredo Goot, in an effort to recover Leia Organa. Han believed Sodarra's story, and agreed to help the "ex-Imperials" get to Shador, where they would drop off the cargo. On Shador, they were double-crossed by Lieutenant Birdloe, who was actually a spy for Governor Vellam, but they managed to flee the planet and reach Tatooine. There, Han discovered the true nature of Sodarra's cargo shortly before he rescued Leia. Han and Sodarra reached a "gentlemen's agreement" that allowed both parties to walk away from the situation. Sodarra and his men then arranged for passage to Coruscant with Vader's body. (SL)

Sodbeast

this slow-moving creature is found in the Kidron System. (POT)

Sode

this was one of the most common surnames found among the human population of Corellia. (GMR9)

Sodonna

this is the smallest city on the planet Teyr which had its own spaceport. Sodonna was one of the terminus stations of the River District Flyway, and it straddled the Noga River. Nearly 500 years before the birth of the New Republic, Sodonna served as the gateway to the Inner River District of Teyr, but the city's splendor and importance have since dwindled. (SOL)

Sodonna Syndic

this was the ruling body of the city of Sodonna, on the planet Teyr. (SOL)

Sodrab

this Imperial Carrack-class cruiser was part of the fleet which protected the Damorian repair yards near Esseles. It was destroyed by the Alliance just prior to the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Soe

one of the multitude of species of scalefish which inhabit the seas of Naboo. (IG1)

S'oelle Khiss

this Sluissi was a nephew of Secles Uslopos, and served Abdi-Badawzi as a lieutenant. S'oelle was in charge of running the day-to-day activities of the Twi'lek's court, as well as maintaining a working relationship with the Alliance. S'oelle also made sure that he was ready to step in for his uncle, should Uslopos ever disappointed Abdi-Badawzi. S'oelle kept up a list of contacts within the Society of the Black Bha'lir, as a kind of public relations officer between Abdi-Badawzi and the Black Bha'lir. (BSS)

Soergg Vosadii Bezhin

this Hutt was one of the most powerful businessbeings on the planet Ansion, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Soergg was also one of the members of the growing secession movement within the Old Republic, seeing in any possible secession the chance to become rich. Soergg was contacted by Shu Mai, who convinced the Hutt to ensure that Ansion became the first world to actually secede from the Republic. Despite his best efforts, which even included the kidnapping of the Jedi Knight Padawan Barris Offee, Soergg and his forces were unable to prevent the formation of a treaty between the Alwari and the Unity of Community. He was even forced to shoot his own majordomo, the Ansionian named Ogomoor, in order to cover up his involvement in the secession of Ansion. Ansion, however, remained part of the Republic, and Soergg was left to his own devices on the planet. (APS, HNN5)

Soft Landings Inn

this flophouse was located on Quarter Moon Street, in the third quadrant of the Senate District on Coruscant, some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. Despite its shabby appearance, it was known as a place where spacers could get a few hours' rest in between runs. (DH)

Softboots

this was the generic term for any footwear designed be worn in moderate activity, but made with supple materials so as not to chafe the skin. (SQ)

Sojis

this Imperial Navy Lieutenant served under Ors Dogot on the Bloodprice. He patrolled the area of the galaxy known as Sector 5, working under the command of Warlord Foga Brill. Sojis, like all the rest of the Bloodprice's crew, was killed when Dogot ordered the ship to intercept the Teljkon vagabond. The vagabond's defensive mechanisms were brought on line, and the ship fired on the Bloodprice. The starship was destroyed, along with all hands on board. (SOL)

Sokan

this form of lightsaber combat was developed by the ancient Jedi Knights. It combined the kinetic motions of Form IV combat with tactics that allowed for mobility and evasion. Originally created during the Great Sith War, Sokan involved quick movements and tumbles, as well as swift strokes of the lightsaber aimed at an opponent's vital areas. Battles which involved Sokan techniques could range across large amounts of terrain as combatants worked to maneuver their opponent into a vulnerable position. (WOTC)

Soknar

this custom-made weapon was created by the master smith Mlatar Thon Gra for his friend, Cene Gilvent. It was forged to take advantage of the best properties of history's finest weapons, including the Barnax Twenchok, the Drevun Six's Somreth tri-blade, and the Coynite sat'skar. (AIR)

Sokor

this unstable, red giant star is the primary body in the Socorro System. It is believed that when Sokor expanded to its current state, it destroyed the innermost three planets of the original system, creating the Thrugii Asteroid Belt and thrusting the planet Neftali into a wider, erratic orbit. (BSS)

Sol Sixxa

this hulking Mere was the leader of a group of freedom fighters who tried to overthrow the Trade Federation's control of the planet Maramere, some six years after the Battle of Naboo. Sixxa recovered an experimental cloaking device from the Syren after killing Lord Toat, and used it aboard his own pirate ship, the Revenant. He then cultivated the idea that he was a ghost, and that the Revenant could appear and disappear at will. The leaders of the Mere feared that Sol Sixxa might turn on the native population, should he ever defeat the Federation, and so they sent Loreli Ro to hire the Feeorin mercenary Nym to defeat him. Nym agreed, but found that he and Sixxa had a common bond: to overthrow the Trade Federation. After defeating the forces of Ruuk, Sol Sixxa played dead for several weeks before contacting Nym. However, rather than kill Sixxa, Nym offered him the chance to join the mercenaries and fight the Trade Federation together. Sol Sixxa chose to serve with Nym, and the two fought together to overthrow the Federation. (CRBN)

Sol'aa

this Jedi Knight was also a noted pazaak player. Sol'aa was assigned to the Jedi enclave that was located on the planet Dantooine some four millennia before the Battle of Yavin. (KOTOR)

Solacton

this was the primary planet in the remote Solacton System, a place where several minor hyperspace routes intersected. These routes connected the Sisar Run to the Iotran Expanse. (SSR)

Solaest Uprising

a revolt that occurred during the Galactic Civil War, it was suppressed by the Imperial Navy. (SWSB)

Solag

Solah

this phrase was used by the Jedi Knights of the Old Republic, and literally translated into Basic as "It is enough." It was used to explain to students and fellow Jedi that simplicity and truthfulness were the keys to all things. (SWI62)

Solanus

this planet was unique in that its surface-covering ocean was considered to have a minimal level of sentience. The waters of Solanus' oceans were rich in complex chemicals, and their interactions and connections allowed the ocean to process and store billions of thoughts. This planet-wide consciousness chose to remain neutral during the Galactic Civil War, a decision made easier by the fact that the Empire refused to acknowledge its sentence. (PM16)

Solar Bath

this was a form of droid cleaning system, which used solar energy to excite the cleaning solution. By using solar energy instead of dedicated electrical power to agitate the solution, droids could be cleaned without the worry of accidental memory loss. (MDCAR)

Solar Dynamica

this was the name of Elta Besk's personal starship, a brand-new Corellian Buccaneer. (SWJ3)

Solar Fire

this ore hauler worked for Lant Mining Corporation, transporting refined ores from the Lormar 23 station in the Mangez System. Her crew had a running feud with the crew of the Black Hole. (FBS)

Solar Flair

this Ghtroc 720 freighter was owned by the Alliance, and loaned to Devon Fuller during the Galactic Civil War. It was an old ship that had been heavily modified and continually pushed to its limits. (GG9)

Solar Flare

this modified YT-1300 freighter was owned by the tramp freighter captain Trynic. The ship's engine section was modified to accept a larger hyperdrive, and the space between the forward mandibles was used as additional cargo space. A pair of turret-mounted laser cannons occupied the dorsal and ventral weapons pods, while a turret-mounted heavy blaster cannon replaced the portside escape pod. (GG6)

Solar Flare

this modified Barloz-class medium freighter was part of the small Alliance fleet of ships present in Tapani Sector after the Battle of Hoth. The ship's power generators had been greatly updated in order to accommodate additional weaponry. The Solar Flare was armed with a single quad turbolaser, a pair of double laser cannons, and a pair of concussion missile launchers. It employed the Corellian Engineering PL-8 Piercer missile. (LOE)

Solar Gardens

located in the Nubian Palace resort, the Solar Gardens was an interior park nestled between two restaurants. In order to bring sunlight into the Gardens, a huge transparisteel wall reflected both sunlight and the Nubian landscape into the Gardens, providing the visitors to the restaurants with spectacular scenery. (CCW)

Solar Grazer

this dilapidated Cuirilla-Raye Xylines Tug was owned by the Cragmoloid gambler Rooty. It was basically unarmed, but had a pair of tractor beam projectors which could be used to grapple with an attacking ship. (GMR6)

Solar Sailer

this unique starship design was developed by the Geonosian people as a gift to Count Dooku, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. It was created from a Punworcca 116-class sloop adapted to deploy an immense solar sail to take advantage of solar winds, as well as the small bits of interstellar energy. The main body of the ship was connected to the sails, which were actually more like scoops which caught the solar winds and dragged the ship behind it. These sails could also collect energy from the vacuum of space, allowing the ship to move about in deeper areas of the galaxy. The addition of the sail system gave the Punworcca 116-class fuselage to 16.76 meters, while the fully-deployed sails brought the overall length of the sailer to 105.16 meters. The interior of the sloop section was appointed to Dooku's refined tastes, and an FA-4 pilot droid was used to steer the ship. With the solar sails fully deployed and the ship at full power, the solar sailer could move across the galaxy with the efficiency of a Class 1.5 hyperdrive. The sails for the ship were acquired by Count Dooku in the Gree Enclave, and were much smaller than those used on other ships which sailed on the solar winds. It was powered by an unusual supralight emission system, although its exact function was never truly understood. (TCG1, X2, SWDB, NEG3)

Solar Terrors

this pirate group was formed by Venslas Beeli and several other pirates, during the early days of the New Order. The Terrors were infamous for their ability to capture other starships, which was their primary method of acquiring new ships for their own use. The Terrors were captured by Imperial Captain Lev Kepzen and the Feral, and used in the effort to locate the Far Orbit. The Empire forced the Terrors to act like privateers hoping to help the Alliance out. (FOP)

Solassi Interzonal Challenge Match

this was one of the premiere gladiator walker fighting contests, staged on the Core Gladiator Walker League's professional circuit, during the height of the New Order. (GFT)

Solay

this planet was unusual in that it orbited a system of ten suns, making it a bright and arid world. In the wake of the Battle of Endor, Solay was plunged into a period of anarchy, and it was this period in which Luke Skywalker made a visit to Solay. He was on a diplomatic mission to bring worlds together to discuss a new galactic government, and he arrived just in time to help Raggold and his rebels defeat the pro-Imperial leadership. Unfortunately, Raggold was killed by a traitor, and Luke set out to locate him. Solay was freed from King Blackart's grasp for a few short days before Imperial forces returned to the system and subjugated the planet once again. (MC89)

Solder-blaster

this was a pistol-shaped soldering utility. (YDR)

Soldier Beetle

this was the generic term used to describe any of the Neimoidian harvester beetles that acted as a soldier within a hive. Soldier beetles were charged with protecting the hive and the queen hidden within it. During the height of the Clone Wars, these soldier beetles were used as infantry against the Grand Army of the Republic, when war broke out on Neimoidia and its purse-worlds. (LEV)

Solis

this battered Tac-Spec Footman droid was a companion of Fidelis for many years, while Fidelis was on Coruscant to watch over Whie Malreaux, during the last years of the Old Republic. Like Fidelis, Solis had been built centuries before. The pair were often seen playing a game of courtier dejarik, although Solis was often the loser. Because Solis had been alone on Coruscant, it had never received the regular upgrades that Fidelis had. Solis made sure that, with the meager resources it could acquire, that it obtained only the most useful upgrades, and logic and gaming strategy were never a high priority. When Whie was added to Master Yoda's mission to Vjun, both Fidelis and Solis managed to book passage aboard the Reasonable Doubt, so that Fidelis could continue to watch over his young charge. It was during this time that Solis' true programming came to the fore, when the droid realized that Whie and his companions were traveling with none other than Jedi Master Yoda. Solis made up a story about being a purser droid to gain access to Tallisibeth Enwandung-Esterhazy - otherwise known as Scout - and draw her away from Whie and allow Fidelis to talk to his young charge. Unfortunately for the Jedi, Solis provided all the information he learned about their location and destination to Separatist forces led by Asajj Ventress, allowing her to pinpoint their locations and attempt to assassinate Yoda. However, after Ventress was unable to capture Yoda on Phindar, Solis found himself on the short end of the deal. Count Dooku had severely chastised Ventress for wasting credits, and she refused to pay Solis for his information. Solis himself set out for Vjun, to square away the situation. He managed to locate them by following the death-cry of Fidelis, after the droid had been forced to destroy itself in order to save Whie. Upon entering the Crying Room, Solis chose to allow Scout and Whie to live, hoping it would make for better odds in bringing Ventress down. Unfortunately, Ventress had recovered the neural-net eraser Fidelis had been forced to use, and she managed to hit Solis squarely in the back with a blast, rendering him a useless pile of scrap before he could get a good shot off. As Solis fell to the ground, it managed to fire a wild blast from its mini rail cannon, striking Ventress and giving the Padawans a chance to escape. (YDR)

this group of militant supporters of the Alliance rose up on the planet Corellia during the Galactic Civil War. (GQRG)

Solk, Chanto

an old acquaintance of Han Solo, Chanto Solk made a great deal of money during the Galactic Civil War by anticipating the demand for starships, and selling to the side that needed them. When his health started to fail, he married Karia Ver Seryan, a life witch on Leria Kersil, about five years after the Battle of Endor. She Supported him for five years, and in return was named the heiress to his fortunes. Solk died four years later, when Karia was forced to withdraw her Support. Chanto Solk was Karia's 49th husband. Note that Cracken's Threat Dossier indicates Solk's first name was Chantu. (AC, CTD)

Sollaine

this man was easily distinguished by the cybernetic replacements he used for arms, because he made no pretense to disguise them. Sollaine chose not to have them covered with synthetic skin, making his appearance that much more fearsome. During the height of the New Order, Sollaine was in command of the Imperial Security Bureau, and was appointed by Emperor Palpatine himself to ferret out the location of Alliance spies who had infiltrated Imperial service. Sollaine was recommended for the work by Darth Vader, shortly before construction was completed on the Executor. In reality, Vader simply wanted Sollaine out of the way, and Sollaine never forgave the Dark Lord. Sollaine tried to intercept Rivoche Tarkin on Corulag, shortly before the Battle of Hoth, ignoring the list of suspected Alliance agents provided by Vader. When Vader learned of Sollaine's execution of Captain Nevik, the Dark Lord intercepted Sollaine at Corulag and executed him with a clean swipe of his lightsaber. (SWJ12)

Solo Embarrassment Factor

this was a private joke between Han Solo and his wife, Leia Organa-Solo. Coined by Leia, it referred to the way in which all of Han's plans to create a private vacation for them always ended up in ruin. (VOF)

Solo Fleet

this was the nickname given to the first group of twelve Solo-class combat freighters, produced by the Metalsmiths' Guild of Vandelhelm as a gift to the New Republic. They were delivered on the tenth anniversary of the return of the Venerated Ones, Lilli and Endro. The ships were laden with alloys, ores, and construction materials, as well as valuable artwork, as a further gift to the New Republic. The Solo Fleet was turned over to Han Solo and Nien Nunb during an elaborate ceremony. (PH)

Solo Holotheater

the name Han Solo gives to his makeshift holotheater on Kamar. It is basically a natural amphitheater in the Badlands desert, and Han uses a Brosso Mark II holoprojector (left over from an unpurchased cargo) to display the features. It was short-lived, however, for the Kamarians destroyed it after Han failed to show a feature about a water planet, denying the Kamarians their fantasies. (HSR)

Solo Jaxal

this was the alias used by Han Solo, shortly after his marriage to Leia Organa, when he accompanied his wife to Tatooine to intercept a group of Imperial agents. Jaxal was a Devaronian, and Han was disguised with his own pair of horns. (TG)

Solo Project

this was the term used by Nom Anor and Vergere for their attempt to turn Jacen Solo away from the Jedi Order and the Force, and convert him to a believer in the True Gods of the Yuuzhan Vong. After Jacen's capture at Myrkr, he was subjected to months of torture within the Embrace of Pain. When he finally discovered a way to accept the pain for what it was and use it to his advantage, Vergere allowed him to escape the Embrace of Pain, only to strip him of his connection to the Force. He was then placed aboard the seedship which was developing the dhuryam specimens which would eventually seed Coruscant. He was continually faced with decisions about helping the rest of the slave population, and he eventually developed a relationship with his controlling dhuryam. According to Vergere, this put the Solo Project on target, but Nom Anor was skeptical. Master Shaper Ch'Gang Hool was livid at the intrusion of Solo's presence on the development of the dhuryam, but was forced to accept it. When Jacen discovered that there was a side of the Force he had never discovered, he began to influence the dhuryam in strange ways, which threatened the outcome of the tizo'pil Yun'tchilat. His violence nearly killed all the dhuryams, but Vergere interceded to stop him from killing the last World Brain. This near-disaster was all in the plans, according to Vergere, who then forced Ch'Gang Hool to accept Jacen's presence on the planet Coruscant, now reformed into a version of Yuuzhan'tar. While Solo managed to escape their grasp, the new Yuuzhan Vong homeworld was more or less intact. Nom Anor had fled when it seemed Jacen might destroy it, while Vergere joined Jacen in an attempt to leave the planet. (T)

Solo Slingshot

this method of gaining speed around a Yuuzhan Vong dovin basal mine was inadvertently discovered by Han Solo, during a mission to Bastion shortly after the Battle of Coruscant. The Solo Slingshot was similar in many respects to using the gravity of a planet to "slingshot" a ship into a higher orbit. It involved diving a ship directly toward the dovin basal, keeping enough power and control to break off the flight at the last moment and allowing the dovin basal's gravity to fling the ship in an unexpected direction. This allowed New Republic ships to gain a measure of surprise on the Yuuzhan Vong. However, the Yuuzhan Vong began to use the tactic themselves, gaining a measure of surprise on the Republic's forces during the siege at Bilbringi. (DW, FP)

Solo Strobe

this was a model of personal location device produced by Saladar Systems. The Solo Strobe was developed to help a lost being indicate their position to a rescue team. In a pinch, it could also be used to blind an attacker. (PSG)

Solo, Anakin

Han Solo and Leia Organa Solo's second son, Anakin was born on Nespis VIII about a year and a half after his siblings, Jaina and Jacen. He was named for this maternal grandfather, Anakin Skywalker. He was incredibly strong in the Force, especially for a child so young. By the time he was three, Anakin's gifts had become obvious to his uncle, Luke Skywalker. By the time he was seven, he had demonstrated a remarkable ability to make anything mechanical work, regardless of whether he understands the device's purpose or its components. His siblings, Jacen and Jaina, have discovered his abilities, and use them to bypass locks and security cameras. They even tried once to have Anakin create a working droid from various scrap components. Unfortunately, the primary motivator Jacen found was faulty, and the droid blew up. Anakin figured prominently in the discovery and activation of some of the Corellian planetary repulsors during the reign of Thrackan Sal-Solo on Corellia. He continued to show great aptitude with the Force, and when his siblings returned from their initial studies on Yavin 4, Anakin was allowed to go as well. He was eleven at the time, and was immediately befriended by Tahiri Veila. Together, they discovered the Golden Globe beneath the Palace of the Woolamander and the existence of the ancient Jedi Master Ikrit. After a great deal of thought and meditation on the Globe, Anakin and Tahiri were able to penetrate it and release the Massassi spirits trapped within. He returned to Yavin 4 following the attack by the Shadow Academy, and helped rebuild the Great Temple by viewing its rubble as a huge puzzle to be solved. Anakin, as well as his brother Jacen, trained directly with Luke, when Luke began moving the new Jedi Knights back to the pre-Empire format of teaching. Both brothers had different ideas on what the future of the Jedi should be. Jacen agreed with Luke, that the formation of a new Jedi Council would help bring the vigilantes under control. Jacen also believed more in the spiritual aspects of the Force, while Anakin held to the physical uses of the Force. They clashed often, claiming their intense lightsaber duels were simply training. When the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy, Anakin was forced to act on his beliefs, and doggedly protected Mara Jade Skywalker on Dantooine. After saving her, Anakin learned that he was needed at Centerpoint Station. Archaeologists and engineers at the Station had been trying to reactivate it, but discovered that the Station had attuned itself to Anakin's fingerprints, brainwaves, and DNA. It wouldn't activate without him. The New Republic hoped to use the repulsors onboard the massive station to wipe out the Yuuzhan Vong fleet, but Anakin refused to be the wielder of such power. Thrackan Sal-Solo took the shot instead, but only succeeded in destroying much of the New Republic's fleet at Fondor, including most of the Hapan fleet which supported it. Thrackan was portrayed by the media as a hero, while the Jedi Knights were vilified for their lack of action. In the wake of the Battle of Fondor, Anakin's training was taken up by Luke himself, in an effort to refocus Anakin's powers. Anakin grew stronger and more respected among the Jedi, and was eventually chosen to lead the strike team which was dispatched to Myrkr to eliminate the voxyn queen. However, once aboard the Baanu Rass, Anakin took an amphistaff wound to the abdomen, and found himself dying. However, his connection to the Force remained strong, and he gathered energy around him like a magnet. Anakin became glowing extension of the Force itself, almost invincible as he cut down Yuuzhan Vong in order to get his friends closer to the voxyn queen. However, the intense energy quickly consumed him, and Anakin died shortly after ensuring that Tahiri was safe. His physical form suddenly radiated an intense light shortly before he died. Anakin's body was recovered by the Jedi survived the assault in the Baanu Rass, in an effort to bury him within the Republic. Anakin was laid to rest on Hapes, where his physical form disintegrated into thousands of motes of firelight when his bier was lit. (DE1, COTF, AC, GG, LW, AQ, SHA, VP, JE, BP, SBS, DJ. NEG)

Solo, Berethon e

one of Han's early ancestors, he introduced democracy to the Corellian Empire. He lived nine generations before Han, some 300 years before Han was born. (CPL, TPS)

Solo, Dalla

born on the planet Duro to the pretender Korol Solo, Dalla Solo was believed to have been Han Solo's grandfather. He was forced to change his name to Dalla Suul to avoid notice following the hanging of his father. He was a kidnapper and pirate, known to the galaxy as Dalla the Black. His illegitimate daughter was Threkin Horm's mother. Han's true lineage was later discovered to have descended from Denn Solo. (CPL, TPS)

Solo, Denn

this man was a native of the planet Tralus. Denn Solo never liked human servants, and always had droids working for him. He married Tira Gama, and she was pregnant when a group of pirates attacked the outlying worlds of the Corellian System. She gave birth to twins just before the attack on Tralus. She managed to flee with a daughter, whom she later named Tiion, and they hid in the hills. Denn fled with a son, but they were lost in the battle. After Thrackan Sal-Solo and Han Solo discussed it, they came to the conclusion that Denn Solo was actually Han's grandfather, and that the son he fled with was Jonash Solo. Jonash later became Han Solo's father. (TPS, CPL)

Solo, Han

Han Solo was born on Corellia. He was a good student, and caught the eye of Imperial Senator Garm Bel Iblis with his pointed questions during a school political rally when Han was 11. Some of his friends goaded him to ask Bel Iblis about the growing xenophobia in the Senate, as well as the apparent internal corruption in the Old Republic. This helped Han get an appointment to the Academy on Carida, where he excelled. Following his graduation, he was considered for Naval Officer's training, but he was sidetracked by Imperial atrocities against the Wookiee race. On a particular mission, Han tried successfully to rescue a Wookiee slave named Chewbacca. Chewbacca claimed a life-debt to Han even as Han was receiving a dishonorable discharge from the Imperial Navy. They were forced to flee Imperial control and live their lives at the fringes of the lawful world. For a number of years, Han tried to shake Chewie, who was always at his side. Even though Han took the worst kinds of jobs, Chewie stuck with him. Eventually, Han realized the depth of a Wookiee life debt, and accepted Chewie as part of his life. Han was awarded a second-level set of Corellian Bloodstripes for his bravery and selflessness in rescuing Chewbacca. (It is unknown at this time how Han earned his first-level Bloodstripes.) They turned to smuggling, using Han's starship knowledge and Chewie's muscular and mechanical skills to quickly gain recognition in the smugglers' world. Han's skills at gambling became equally sharp, and in a famous Sabacc match, he managed to win the smuggling ship Millennium Falcon from Lando Calrissian. With a ship and a partner, Han had many adventures. He spent a number of years based on Nar Shaddaa, working with Shug Ninx and falling in and out of love with Salla Zend. He left that life behind to work in the Corporate Sector, and spent a number of years there with Doc, Jessa, and Roa. After all these adventures, Han ended up in the domain of Moruth Doole and Jabba the Hutt. Han was one of many pilots who were contracted to make the Kessel Run and smuggle spice out from beneath Imperial control. Han made the run a number of times, once in under twelve parsecs. However, his last run almost cost him his life. He was set up by Doole, who was in the process of being set up by Jabba the Hutt, and the Imperials were tipped off as to the time of Han's Run. In order to escape the Imperials, Han was forced to dump Jabba's spice and flee. This earned him a death mark from Jabba, and Han was again forced to go underground. In an effort to make some extra credits and pay off Jabba, Han accepted Obi-Wan Kenobi's offer of 17,000 credits to transport Kenobi, Luke Skywalker, R2-D2 and C-3PO to Alderaan. The mission was sidetracked as the Millennium Falcon was captured by the first Death Star. Han and Luke rescued Princess Leia Organa, and brought her to Yavin 4. Han tried to leave with his reward money and pay Jabba off, but his conscience interfered again. He destroyed Darth Vader's wingmen and gave Luke the time he needed to destroy the Death Star. Following the Battle of Yavin, Han spent time with the Alliance, helping them gain key victories against the Empire while trying to stay one step ahead of Jabba's mercenaries. He was even promoted to the rank of General in the Alliance. After a close call with a bounty hunter on Ord Mantell, Han again tried to return and pay Jabba, only to be forced to Cloud City while escaping Darth Vader and the Imperial Navy. During this time, he and Princess Leia began to fall in love. This trip reunited Han with Lando Calrissian, but led to Han's being tracked by Boba Fett, imprisoned in carbonite, and returned to Jabba for the reward money. Han was freed by an elaborate plot by Luke Skywalker on Tatooine, and Han rejoined the Alliance to lead the ground assault on the forest moon of Endor. His timely destruction of the second Death Star's main shield helped the Alliance destroy the space station and the Emperor, thus ending the Imperial Civil War and restoring the Republic. Following the formation of the New Republic, Han and Leia tried to continue their relationship, but Leia's duties often interfered. Han resigned his commission with the New Republic, but stayed on as a freelance pilot. Following the Battle of Bakura and the fighting on Dathomir, Han and Leia were finally married. Their marriage produced twin children - Jaina, a daughter; and Jacen, a son - as well as a second son, Anakin. Leia's Force sensitivity was passed onto all of the children, and this made them prime targets for the Jedi clone Joruus C'Baath and the reborn Emperor Palpatine. Han and Leia continued to protect their children against the Imperial threat. During a vacation from his wife's Republic world, Han and Chewie were shot down over Kessel, and captured by Moruth Doole's forces. He was forced to work the spice mines for Doole, which led him to discover Kyp Durrone and the Maw Installation. Han's friendship with Kyp helped avoid serious damage when Kyp was corrupted by Exar Kun's spirit. Despite the fact that Han had resigned from service to the Republic after his marriage to Leia, he was often pressed into service. One of those times occurred during the Yevethan Purge. After Etahn A'baht was unable to blockade the Koornacht Cluster, Han was temporarily promoted to Commodore and placed in command of the Fifth Battle Group. This move was designed to keep Leia's supporters, as well as the supporters of Borsk Fey'lya, from arguing over the position and focused on the battle. However, the deceit of Tig Peramis provided this information to Nil

Spaar, who sent several of his Interdictor cruisers to intercept Han's shuttle before it reached the fleet. Han was tortured and interrogated by Spaar himself. Later, Han was instrumental in the resolution of the problems in the Corellian Sector, overcoming the Human League and the actions of his cousin, Thrackan Sal-Solo. Han and Chewbacca continued to serve the New Republic, despite the fact that they had resolved their commissions long ago. At fifty-four years old, however, Han met his match when the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy. During a rescue mission to Sernipdal, Chewbacca was stranded on the planet while trying to ensure that Han and his son, Anakin Solo, made it to the Millennium Falcon. Chewie died saving them, and Han immediately blamed Anakin, who had been piloting the Falcon. He soon realized that there was no fault to be given in Chewie's death, since the Wookiee was simply honoring a life-debt with all his strength and energy. This did nothing to soothe Han's heart, though, and he distanced himself from his friends and family while trying to come to terms with his grief. He found an outlet when Roa asked him to help locate Reck Desh. Han took off for Ord Mantell, only to have Roa captured by the Yuuzhan Vong. As Han fled the Jubilee Wheel, he found an unexpected ally and friend in Droma, a nomadic Ryn. However, Han's relationship with Leia deteriorated when he explained that he was headed back out to find Roa and help Droma locate his family. Their estrangement only worsened in the aftermath of the Battle of Fondor. Han remained behind, helping to get Droma and his family settled on Abregado-rae, then helping Roa recover from his captivity. Leia continued to work with SELCORE, and refused to meet Han on Coruscant. After the loss of Kalarba, Han ran into Leia on Duro, and they decided to stop being foolish and restore their lives. Their relationship continued to deepen once again, despite the loss of their son Anakin at Myrkr. The Solos threw themselves into the battle against the Yuuzhan Vong, and Han found himself volunteering for some of the most dangerous and crazy of assignments. Han and Leia were instrumental in the rescue of Thorsh from Selvaris, and later the rescue of Judder Page and several more Selvaris prisoners. After watching Caluula Station be destroyed, Han again volunteered for a dangerous mission, this time to return to Caluula and destroy the yammosk which had been installed there. However, as soon as they reached the yammosk, Team Meloque was attacked by four Yuuzhan Vong Slayers. As he tried to defend Leia, Han was bitten in the neck by one of the augmented amphistaffs and poisoned. However, something about Caluula's environment reduced the potency of the amphistaff venom, and Han soon recovered. Han returned to Coruscant with his family during the final battle against the Yuuzhan Vong, working with the Jedi Knights and an Alliance infiltration team to reach the Citadel and eliminate Shimrra and Onimi. Han Solo was portrayed by Harrison Ford in all three Star Wars films. Han Solo was portrayed by Perry King for the Star Wars and The Empire Strikes Back Radio Dramas on National Public Radio. (SW, SWR, ESB, ESB, ROTJ, CPL, HTTE, JS, COTF, SE, CSA, SOL, HT, JE, BP, NEGC, UF)

Solo, Jacen

Han Solo and Leia Organa Solo's first son, Jacen was born five minutes after his sister, Jaina. The twins were born on Coruscant some five years after the Battle of Endor, in the midst of Grand Admiral Thrawn's attempt to take control of the galaxy. He was very strong with the Force, and had the special ability to communicate with animals. When he and his sister turned 14, they were allowed to attend Luke Skywalker's Jedi Academy on Yavin 4. While there, Jacen developed an extensive collection of the jungle moon's exotic fauna, many of which escaped the cages built for them by Jaina. When he finally constructed his own lightsaber, Jacen chose focusing stones which produced a glowing, emerald green blade. He later trained directly with Luke himself, as Luke began moving the new Jedi Knights back to the pre-Empire style of teaching. Luke also trained Jacen's brother, Anakin, although both brothers had different ideas on what the future of the Jedi should be. Jacen agreed with Luke, that the formation of a new Jedi Council would help bring the vigilantes under control. Jacen also believed more in the spiritual aspects of the Force, while Anakin held to the physical uses of the Force. They fought often, verbally and with lightsabers, both claiming their intense sessions were simply training. He traveled with his younger brother, Anakin, to Centerpoint Station, just before the Battle of Fondor, but urged Anakin not to use the Force to fire it. When Thrackan Sal-Solo fired it instead, and nearly destroyed the combined Republic and Hapan fleets, Jacen felt himself lost in his struggle to understand the Force. After having an intense vision of the galaxy, teetering on a single balance point that he alone controlled, Jacen tried to stop using the Force altogether. His family tried to bring him out of this mental state, but Jacen doggedly refused. However, when his mother was threatened by the Yuuzhan Vong on Duro, Jacen realized that he had reached the balance point in his vision. Drawing on the Force, he managed to escape with his mother and get her to safety. During the escape, Jacen badly injured the Yuuzhan Vong Warmaster, Tsavong Lah, earning him a position of hatred among the alien invaders. When the Yuuzhan Vong learned that Jacen and Jaina were twins - an event which was rare in Yuuzhan Vong births, and indicated an omen from the gods - both siblings were targeted for capture and eventual sacrifice. Shortly afterward, Jacen and his siblings joined the Jedi strike team which was sent to Myrkr to locate and destroy the voxyn queen. When Anakin was killed aboard the Baanu Rass, Jacen found that his sister blamed him for Anakin's death, despite the fact that Anakin gave specific orders to reach the queen. Eventually, the Jedi were able to defeat the voxyn queen, but Jacen was captured when Vergere betrayed him to the Yuuzhan Vong. Despite her changing allegiance, Vergere provided Jacen with several of her healing "tears," to help prepare him for the torture he was about to receive after his capture. The rest of the strike team fled, vowing to rescue Jacen at the soonest possible moment. However, once in the Hapes Cluster aboard the Trickster, Jaina and the others received a wave of anguish through the Force that seemed to indicate Jacen's death. Jacen, however, had been taken aboard a Yuuzhan Vong seedship and secured in a modified Embrace of Pain by Vergere, as part of something known as the Solo Project. Vergere and Nom Anor hoped to turn him to the Yuuzhan Vong's True Way, and he was held in the Embrace of Pain for many months. Vergere, in an effort to eliminate his reliance on the Force, took away his link to the Force and forced him to recognize other ways of tapping into its energy. This was the "death" Jaina and other Jedi felt. Jacen began to understand the pain could eventually be overcome and used to his advantage, and that the Force was not simply black and white. Vergere's lessons taught him that the Yuuzhan Vong existed in another facet of the Force's energy, and that there were more grey areas than Jacen had ever believed possible. Upon his release from the Embrace of Pain, Jacen discovered he was aboard a seedship, where he was bound as a slave to an immature dhuryam. Jacen developed a relationship with the future World Brain, and eventually discovered that he could tap resources within the Force that he never knew existed. When the tizo'pil Yun'tchilat occurred, Jacen chose his time to strike at his captors. Never truly turned to the True Way, Jacen tried to destroy the World Brains before one could be inserted into Coruscant's new environment. Vergere interfered, playing on his emotions to stop Jacen from killing the dhuryam which had become his "friend". Jacen awoke to find himself on Coruscant, now renamed Yuuzhan'tar in honor of the original Yuuzhan Vong homeworld, along with Vergere. They were hunted by the warriors assigned to Master Shaper Ch'Gang Hool, and forced to accept the True Way. He then put into motion his next plan, to capture Ganner Rhysode. Ganner had been searching for Jacen, who lured him into the chamber of a camp ship and captured him. Once on Coruscant, Jacen subtly explained that he was worked with the Yuuzhan Vong in order to gain their confidence. Then he planned to use the World Brain to act as his agent on Coruscant. Ganner gave his life to keep Jacen alive long enough to gain access to the World Brain, which had been the dhuryam he befriended. Jacen asked the World Brain to help him monitor the situation on Coruscant, then he fled the planet with Vergere. Jacen later returned to Master Skywalker, who accepted his return and allowed him to return to work with the Jedi Knights. He tried to listen to Vergere's words and advice on the nature of his destiny within the Force, but when his sister Jaina was in danger during the Battle of Ebaq, Jacen blindly raced to her rescue. He was trapped by Yuuzhan Vong in the mines of Ebaq 9, and only Vergere's sacrifice allowed him to survive. He eventually reached Jaina, where they were attacked by Tsavong Lah. Jaina managed to defeat the Warmaster in combat, and the twins were rescued by New Republic forces. Jacen then committed himself to reconciling the Yuuzhan Vong with his definition of the Force, and vowed to honor Vergere's memory by working to fulfill his destiny. As part of this personal mission, Jacen agreed to accompany his Uncle Luke and Aunt Mara on a mission into the Unknown Regions, in a search for the planet Zonama Sekot. He had learned of the planet from Vergere, and hoped that his connection to her would help their cause. Upon finding the planet in the Klasse Ephemora System, Sekot initially refused to help them. In a series of devious tests, the living part of the planet separated Jacen from Luke and tried to learn their true motives for coming to Zonama Sekot. Eventually, both Luke and Jacen convinced the planet they were seeking a peaceful end to the conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong. Sekot then agreed to accompany them back to the galaxy, in an effort to find a way to end the war. Upon reverting to realspace near Coruscant, Jacen found himself once again in the company of his family. Han, Leia, and Jaina had been dispatched to meet them, and the family was briefly reunited before returning to the war. Jacen and his sister accompanied their uncle Luke to the surface of Coruscant, in an effort to gain access to the Citadel and bring Supreme Overlord Shimrra to justice. Jacen was able to reach the mind of the World Brain which was controlling the planet, and was able to calm it down and put a stop to the destruction it was causing on the surface. Upon entering Shimrra's throneroom, they were beset by a group of fifteen Slayers, and only Jacen's link to the World Brain allowed them any measure of success. When Jaina set out to capture

Onimi, Jacen found himself facing the remaining Slayers, who had abandoned Luke so that Shimrra himself could destroy the Jedi Master. After Shimrra's defeat, Jacen left Luke in Mara's capable hands and set out to locate his sister, only to be assailed by Onimi. Jacen suddenly realized that Onimi was perhaps the most powerful of all Yuuzhan Vong, since he had managed to tap into the Force in a way that no other individual could. His own Shaping had somehow reconnected him to the Force, and gave him powerful abilities as a Shaper and as a fighter. Jacen was forced to fend off all manner of projectiles, then had to find a way to neutralize the poisons that Onimi created to kill him. Drawing on the power of the Force, Jacen understood that only a complete surrender to its energy would save. In this state, Jacen was able to fight off whatever Onimi threw at him, realizing that he had finally found the truth about the Force and the way in which a Jedi should connect to it. He became simply a living conduit for the power of the Force, embracing neither good nor evil but simply existing within it. In this manner, Jacen was able to eradicate the evil and greed within Onimi, killing the Shamed One in the process. With the Yuuzhan Vong surrender at Coruscant, the war was ended and the Galactic Alliance set out to restore as much of it as possible. Jacen decided to set out in search of other Force users - such as the Jensaarai, the Sunesi, and the Fallanassi - to deepen his already vast knowledge of the Unifying Force. Solo, Jaina

Han Solo and Leia Organa Solo's first child, Jaina was born on Coruscant some five years after the Battle of Endor. She was five minutes older than her twin brother, Jacen, and was equally strong with the Force. She had certain mechanical abilities, much like her father, but not as strong as her brother, Anakin. When she and Jacen attended Luke Skywalker's Jedi Academy on Yavin 4, at the age of 14, she collected all sorts of old technology from the original Alliance base, using some of it to create cages for Jacen's exotic collection of creatures. Others she kept to see if she can repair them. Jaina created a lightsaber of violet light while studying at Yavin 4. She later trained directly with Mara Jade, after Mara's marriage to Luke, when Luke began moving the new Jedi Knights back to the pre-Empire style of teaching. A real student of the Force, Jaina found it hard to be around her mother when she tried to use the Force. Jaina felt that Leia used her skills with the Force as a kind of toy, nothing really serious and often clumsy in operation. During the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Jaina put her skills with the Force to work as a member of Rogue Squadron, flying an X-Wing into battle against the aliens. She survived a number of engagements, but was forced to eject from her fighter during the defense of Kalarba. She was caught in the explosion of the Champion, and suffered blinding damage to her eyes which left her with fuzzy vision for several weeks. She was shipped off to Duro, to make room for more desperate injuries, and helped her father in the evacuation of Settlement Thirty-two. Over time, her eyesight returned, and Jaina longed to get back into the cockpit. However, her status as a Jedi Knight forced Gavin Darklighter to place her on extended leave, in order to appease the politicians of the Senate. Jaina agreed to be part of the Jedi strike team which was dispatched to Myrkr to eliminate the voxyn queen, along with both of her brothers. She was unprepared for the losses the Jedi took just to infiltrate the Baanu Rass, and was overcome when Anakin was killed aboard the worldship. She openly blamed Jacen for Anakin's death, claiming that Jacen left him to die. In her anger over the loss of Anakin and her blame of Jacen, Jaina turned to the Dark Side of the Force. She conjured up an intense storm of Force lightning when a Yuuzhan Vong nearly killed her, utterly destroying the alien attacker without remorse. After finally destroying the voxyn queen, the Jedi were forced to flee the worldship in order to return to Eclipse. Jacen, however, had been captured by the double-crossing Vergere, and Jaina was forced to leave him with the Yuuzhan Vong in order to save the rest of the team. She vowed to rescue her brother, despite her earlier animosity toward him. The Jedi stole the frigate Ksstarr, which Jaina later renamed the Trickster, and headed to Hapes. There, they hoped to learn as much as they could about the frigate and Yuuzhan Vong technology. However, Jaina became caught up in the political intrigue of Hapan life, and the former Queen Mother Ta'a Chume chose Jaina to serve as her protégé. Jaina didn't fully realize her position, but used it to gain access to Sinsor Khal and the scientists on Gallinore, who created lab-grown version of Yuuzhan Vong yorik coral. As Jaina sank deeper into the plans of Ta'a Chume, her friends worried that she was slipping further toward the Dark Side of the Force, especially after she agreed to train under Kyp Durrone. After the fall of Coruscant, Jaina was groomed by the Inner Circle on Borleias to become the incarnate version of Yun-Harla, in an effort to trick the Yuuzhan Vong. It was during this time that she also admitted her feelings for Jagged Fel. Jaina was also promoted to the rank of Major in the New Republic military for her work at Hapes and Borleias, then to Lieutenant Colonel following the Battle of Ebaq. She was given command of a full battle group during the defense of Esfandia when, as the ranking Jedi Knight, she was requested by Captain Todra Mayn to coordinate the combined forces of the Galactic Alliance and the Imperial Remnant. After the near defeat at Bilbringi, as part of Operation Trinity, Jaina was recalled to Mon Calamari. As the Galactic Alliance planned its final move in the ongoing war - a strike at Coruscant itself - Jaina was reunited with her parents. Together, they were dispatched to Coruscant ahead of the main fleet, when the living planet Zonama Sekot suddenly reappeared in orbit between Coruscant and Muscave. The Solo family was briefly reunited on Zonama Sekot before returning to the war. Jaina and her brother accompanied their uncle Luke to the surface of Coruscant, in an effort to gain access to the Citadel and bring Supreme Overlord Shimrra to justice. Jacen was able to reach the mind of the World Brain which was controlling the planet, and was able to calm it down and put a stop to the destruction it was causing on the surface. Upon entering Shimrra's throneroom, they were beset by a group of fifteen Slayers, and only Jacen's link to the World Brain allowed them any measure of success. Following the will of the Force, Jaina left the main battle and set out to capture Onimi, who had fled the chamber. She failed to consider the Shamed One's ingenuity, and Onimi was able to subdue Jaina with ease when he used his fang to inject her with a mild toxin. He then dragged her into the command chamber of the Citadel's escape craft and set out to flee Coruscant. Jacen, however, pursued them through the Citadel and into the escape craft, confronting Onimi with the pure power of the Force. Jaina tried to lend her brother some help, but Jacen fought on his own, allowing Jaina to concentrate on healing herself. After the deaths of Onimi and Shimrra, the rest of the Yuuzhan Vong force at Coruscant surrendered to the Galactic Alliance, bringing the war to an end. Despite Jag's admission of his love for her, Jaina decided that it was not yet time for her to settle down. She told Jag that she had to ensure that the galaxy would be a better place for future generations, especially her own children. Jaina and Jag shared one final, passionate kiss before going their separate ways. (TLC, AC, HTF, ROM, VP, DTO, BP, EVR, SBS, DJ, EL1, Y, DW, FH3, UF)

Solo, Jarik

this street urchin from the Corellian sector of Nar Shaddaa once claimed to be a relative of Han Solo's. He claimed that his father, Renn, was Han's father's second cousin. Han didn't believe for a minute that the youth was his relative, but his own years of eking out an existence as a beggar told him to take Jarik in and keep him off the streets. Roa eventually confirmed that Jarik was nothing more than a street kid. Jarik accompanied Han and Chewbacca on many adventures in the Bria, including several Kessel Runs. When Han decided that he had to leave Nar Shaddaa to escape an impending marriage to Salla Zend, Jarik stayed behind to pursue a new girlfriend and a job at Shug's Spacebarn. Although the girlfriend left him, Jarik continued to work for Shug Ninx. When Han returned to recruit smugglers for the assault on Ylesia, Jarik joined up, having lost his girlfriend but maintaining his skills. He joined the team which attempted to destroy the turbolaser emplacement protecting the planet, but was killed in the firefight which preceded the Alliance's victory. (THG, RD)

Solo, Jonash

Jonash was believed to have been the son of Dalla Suul, and Han Solo's father. Later investigation by Thrackan Sal-Solo revealed that Joansh was actually the son of Denn Solo. Although Jonash's wife's name remains clouded by history, it is believed that Jonash was truly Han's father. (CPL, NEGC)

Solo-class Combat Freighter

originally designed by the Metalsmith's Guild of Vandelhelm, on the orders of the Venerated One known as Lilli, the Solo-class combat freighter was named in honor of Han Solo. Developed during the early years of the New Republic, the Solo-class freighter was manufactured jointly by the Republic Engineering Corporation and SoroSuub, with facilities provided by the Fondor Independent Shipyards, and was based on the prototypes produced on Vandelhelm. It was first marketed as "a revolution in armored transports." The idea behind the Solo-class combat freighter was to create a cargo ship that could more than handle its own against enemy ships, whether pirates or Imperials. The hull was double-plated with titanium alloys that could withstand a great deal of fire, and was formed around a lightweight plasteel superstructure. It was armed with six ball-mounted dual turbolaser cannons, three on each side, giving the ship complete coverage and eliminating any vulnerable spots. A pair of concussion missile launchers provided additional armament. The Solo-class combat freighter measured 96.5 meters in length, required a crew of six to operate, and could accommodate up to ten passengers and 22,000 metric tons of cargo. If the holds were empty, the ship could transport up to 100 troops. Despite its ability to move through space without an escort, many critics felt that the Solo-class combat freighter was overarmed and a waste of credits, as they carried a hefty price tag. (PH)

Solokin Sakellar

this being was the Grand Warden and "absolute ruler" of Coruscant's University of Yabol Opa, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (IWE2)

Solomahal

this Lutrillian was a veteran of the Old Republic military who retired from active duty following the Clone Wars. During the Clone Wars, Solomahal earned the rank of General, and was assigned as the commander of the Republic's secret base on Azure. After the war, he continued to work as a scout, working in the Outer Rim Territories to avoid Imperial notice. Solomahal operated a YV-888 known as the QuadStar, and took on work whenever he could. However, as the galaxy plunged into the Galactic Civil War, Solomahal's reputation diminished greatly, and he was forced to move around the Greater Javin area in search of work. Among the jobs he took on was the transport of the Nothoiin refugee Covah to a remote location in the Greater Javin region of the galaxy. What many beings didn't know - or didn't remember - was that Solomahal was actually a hero of the Clone Wars, when he served as a General for the Army of the Republic. He was credited with liberating the Wode from enslavement, as well as destroying the 2nd Regiment of the Sun Guard. He was also considered something of a hero for his part in the Battle of Azure Spaceport, after he destroyed Talesan Fry's codebreaker before it could fall into the hands of the Separatists. Although he was captured during the fighting, Solomahal escaped just a few days later and was given a new command. (CCG2, JKG, WOA34, SOJ)

Solo's End Run

this was a spaceflight maneuver developed by Han Solo for getting out of the Sevarcos System, especially during the Imperial occupation of the system. It involved a spacer turning off his ship's transponder system after leaving Sevarcos and heading toward the system's asteroid belt. Shortly before entering the asteroids, the spacer launched a remote probe that transmitted his starship's true transponder codes, causing any pursuit to chase after the probe and not the starship. The Qwohog convinced them to finance a treasure hunt to the Zelosian Chine, and Solum'ke quickly agreed. Despite finding the treasure, they were double-crossed by K'zk, who left them to die as the tides rose around them. Solum'ke and Diergu-Rea were eventually rescued by another group of vacationers, but were flat broke. (TFNR)

Solus, Dapp

a native of Nar Shaddaa, this man never grew up from playing pirate games as a child. The problem for those he didn't consider to be friends was that he still played them like a child, with reckless abandon, but as a grown-up he had size, strength, and experience to back up his enthusiasm. After stealing a ship and wandering the galaxy for a few years, he met up with Salem Victory. The two of them collaborated on the design of the Starcat, and eventually formed the Happy Blasters. He was a competent and ruthless right-hand-man to Victory's brains and vision. It was rumored that Dapp had several cybernetic implants, but no one ever learned exactly which parts of his body had been replaced. (SWJ13)

Solusar, Jem

Solusar, Kam

a Jedi Knight, Kam was the son of a Jedi slain by Darth Vader. He spent nearly thirty years hiding from the Empire in the most remote parts of the galaxy. When his whereabouts were discovered by a group of Dark Jedi, he was tortured and forced to embrace the Dark Side of the Force. The reborn Emperor used him as one of his personal Dark Side Elite on Byss. When Luke Skywalker first met him on Nespis VIII, Luke sensed his strength in the Force behind the Dark Side facade, and challenged Kam to a game of Lightsider. Luke won, and convinced Kam to return to the Light Side. Kam eventually returned to Luke, joining the Jedi candidates on Yavin 4. He became one of Luke's most gifted apprentices, and became a full Jedi Knight several years after the death of Palpatine's clones. Kam fell in love with Tionne, and the two were married shortly before the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy. They acted as the administrators of the Yavin 4 facility for many years, and Kam himself presided over a solemn Jedi wedding for Luke and Mara Jade, before the pair were wedded in a public ceremony on Coruscant. Kam and Tionne served Luke as the wards of the youngest Jedi trainees during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, spiriting the children away from Yavin 4 aboard the Errant Venture and eventually settling them into a new home at the Maw Installation. Ultimately, Kam and Tionne were among the handful of Jedi Knights to survive the conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong. It was Kam's suggestion to Luke that the Jedi Knights return to the planet Ossus to rebuild their new Jedi Order, an idea that Luke eventually agreed to. (DE1, DA, DTO, U, NEGC, UF)

Somago

this carnivore was related to the raen sovra, but lived far from the electrically-active vinna forests on Tenek. Known as a choker, this creature has a muscular body which it uses to constrict its prey. Somagos would hang in the branches of trees and wait for prey to wander by. It would drop out of the tree and latch onto its intended prey with its sharp claws. Once attached, the somago would entwine its body about its victim and begin to constrict its muscles, effectively choking the prey. There were several forms of somago, including the sheet somago, saddle somago, and tapestry somago, each identified by its body shape and attack method. The rarest form is the helmet somago, which has a bell-shaped body which was adapted to capturing humanoid prey. Xenobiologists speculate that the helmet somago is an evolutionary throwback to the time when humanoid life lived on Tenek. Once the somago chokes the life out of its prey, it then fed on the dead body with several small mouths on the underside of its body. (COG)

Her former Master, Lura Tranor, was among the Jedi who traveled to Geonosis, although Master Tranor was unfortunately killed in the fighting. Jyl herself arrived after the main battle, to help clean up any pockets of resistance and gather intelligence on Count Dooku and the leaders of the Confederacy of Independent Systems. She received a field promotion to Jedi Knight, and was given command of a squad of clone troopers, to seek out any survivors and work with Doctor Frayne to ensure that weapons technology remained behind. Her inexperience nearly cost her when she agreed to test out a new clone trooper helmet Frayne had developed. The helmet contained a mild poison that quickly rendered Somtay unconscious. She managed to escape, collecting Naj Pandoor along the way. His sweet-talking and smooth manner grated on her nerves, especially when he suggested that she leave the Jedi Order and join him as a smuggler. They located Doctor Frayne's body shortly afterward, although it was in pieces. They discovered that she had been attacked by a female nexu, and were forced to fight their way past it and its cubs. In an underground lab, she discovered a Geonosian sonic blaster that was capable of shifting its frequency with every blast, which would have made it unstoppable by the Jedi. Pandoor managed to steal the weapon and tried to use it against her, but the nexu returned and mauled him. Somtay managed to fight it off, and after recovering the sonic blaster, dragged Pandoor to a place where she could bind him and turn him over to the authorities. She reluctantly put in a good word for him, because he helped her reach the weapon. (SWI79)

Sonam-Ha'ar

this man was a native of the planet Cinnagar, some 5,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. He resembled a wizard, with a hooded cape covering his bearded, hawk-like face. (GAS)

Sonda Armament

a small company contracted by the Empire to design and built armored dropships, such as the AIC-4. (SWJ2)

Sondarr

this planet was the site of the base of operations for Star's Nova. (WBC)

Sondarr Base

this was the name of the base of operations maintained by Star's Nova. It was located in the Lunnes Wastes of the planet Sondarr. (WBC)

Sondat

manufacturers of starship atmospheric systems. (RM)

Sonde Balloon

this was a small, inflatable balloon used in survival kits to signal someone's position. (HTTE)

Song of the Clouds

this was one of the many Ithorian herdships which could travel between star systems. The Song of the Clouds was a Manollium-class herdship. Vop the Usurer had planned to purchase a sealed lockbox from the Ithorians aboard the ship, but was undermined by the actions of his rival, Ritinki. (SWJ15)

Song of the Dongtha Slayer

this well-known epic poem was created by an ancient Askajian. It was known to have 722 verses. (TG)

Song of the Reflective Telescope

one of the chants Mohs has memorized, it is a ritualized description of the stars and planets in the Rafa System, handed down from the ancient Sharu. (LCM)

Song of War

this deep-red Hapan Battle Dragon served as Prince Isolder's flagship during the struggle against Warlord Zsinj at Dathomir. Many years later, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, Isolder again used the Song of War, this time as the flagship of the fleet he commanded under Commodore Brand. During the Battle of Fondor, Isolder and the Song of War narrowly escaped the destruction of the Hapan fleet, when a blast from Centerpoint Station ripped through the system. (CPL, JE)

Song Rasp

this species of rasp, native to the planet Talus, was noted for its song-like calls. (GQRG)

Song Serpent

a feathered snake with colorful plumage, native to the deserts of Proxima Dibal's single planet. They are often used as pets. (HSE)

Song Sparrow

a bird with a musical call. (TFE)

Songbuk

a species of herbivore native to the moon Yavin 8, the songbuk was the favorite prey of the ursod. (GG2)

Songoquin Street

this was one of the many open-air marketplaces located in the city of Cuipernam, on the planet Ansion. (APS)

Sonic Bath

a hygienic device which uses sound waves to gently clean away bodily grime. They can be set to use varying wavelengths of sound, imparting a basic cleansing or a soothing massage. (JS)

Sonic Beam Projector

this device is used to eliminate large targets by damaging them with intense sound waves. (CSWEA)

Sonic Blaster

this form of sonic weapon was developed by the Geonosians during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. They developed a handheld version of the sonic blaster as well as a larger, turret-mounted version. The sonic energy was ejected from the blaster within a plasma containment sphere, which glowed a strange gold color that seemed to ripple and writhe as it moved through the air. When it struck its target, the containment sphere exploded, unleashing an omnidirectional blast of sonic energy. (SWDB, AOTC)

Sonic Blender

this cooking implement used generated sound waves to mix ingredients together. (GMR8)

Sonic Broom

a cleaning device which uses sound waves to propel dust and dirt in front of a wide paddle. The broom is used to push the dust into a receptacle. (TJP)

Sonic Dampener

this was a form of ear insert that limited the amount of sound that reached the inner ear, thereby reducing the risk of injury in those being who had sensitive hearing. These devices were popular among beings who worked in mines, or among the support personnel in a war, since they helped deaden the impact of an explosion's noise. (MBS)

Sonic Dissipator

this ovoid device is used by beings who need to control sound in an enclosed environment. Initially designed for miners and demolition crews, the dissipator takes ambient sound waves and literally eats them, reducing both the volume and amount of sound. The user could then set off explosions in close proximity and not have to worry about damage to their hearing organs. Later, bounty hunters and other criminals discovered that sonic dissipators could be used to hide their activities. (MA)

Sonic Free

this band, formed by Skawn Bonduna during the last years of the Old Republic, was banned by the Imperial Board of Culture. The IBC claimed that Sonic Free's music held subliminal suggestions which coerced their listeners to act out against the Empire. Imperial soldiers captured the members of Sonic Free, although Skawn Bonduna managed to escape. The imprisoned members later died in a prison brawl before they could be arraigned. (GMR6)

Sonic Generator

a device which can be used to torture an individual or group by creating grating, unending noise that quickly becomes unbearable. They can also be programmed to interact with light sources and tactile torture devices. (SA)

Sonic Grenade

this explosive device emitted a loud, disorienting blast when it exploded. Developed more than 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War, sonic grenades were designed to operate on two levels. First, the sound of the explosion itself was deafening, and often ruptured the eardrums of any being in the blast radius. Second, the frequency of the sonic blast it emitted was barely perceptible to most humanoid races, causing severe disorientation. Millennia later, the Geonosians developed a modern version of the sonic grenade that destroyed a target's equilibrium. (KOTOR, NEGW)

Sonic Jammer

this tool was used as a weapon by Quarg's father, a well-known pirate who was defeated by the Jedi Knights of the Old Republic. With a group of jammers spread through the Kortein Asteroid Belt, he wrecked passing ships and tore them apart for salvage. The Old Republic eventually ran him off, and he fled to Drexel. Once there, while using the jammer to draw starships to the surface so that the pirates could salvage their metals, he discovered that the devices affected the hearing of the sea-dragons, and he tried to defeat the Dragon Lords by using the jammers on their mounts. Han Solo and Luke Skywalker destroyed the devices, allowing the dragons and Dragon Lords to defeat Quarg. (MC14)

Sonic Motivators

devices which use varying wavelengths of sound to manipulate water or other media. They are often employed in water sculptures. (TB)

Sonic Pacifier

this sound-generating device was used by Orion Ferret to control the Watcher Beasts he placed on Patch-4 as guardians. (MC59)

Sonic Puncher

this motion-activated grenade was designed during the early years of the New Republic. It creates a sonic concussion when activated. (ROM)

Sonic Screwdriver

this potent alcoholic mixed drink was created from spicebrew, Sullustan gin, and Old Janx Spirit. (MJH)

Sonic Screwdriver

this was a tool which used low-frequency sound waves to literally jiggle a screw into and out of its bore. (SWJ4)

Sonic Shower

similar to a sonic bath, except that the user can stand upright while being cleaned. (ROM)

Sonic Staff

this form of Geonosian weapon was formed from a resin staff which measured about a meter in length. Thicker than an electro-staff, the sonic staff's internal components could generate a powerful blast of sonic energy which could knock an opponent off their feet. Because the sonic staff used compressed sound waves as its primary projectile, the energy blast could not be deflected by a lightsaber. (UANT)

Sonic Whistle

a device which uses sound waves to blast a signal. (TME)

Sonie

Cerasi claimed that she was Wehutti's daughter, come to tell of him her Aunt Sonie's death, during the attempt to rescue Tahl. Cerasi had been confronted by the guards protecting Tahl, and hoped the diversion would allow Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi to recover Tahl. (DOD)

Sonn Vilmari System

this planetary system contains the homeworld of the Pan-preneur species. (SWJ8)

Sonnel

an Alliance CR90 that assisted in the evacuation of Briggia following the Operation Strike Fear assault there. (XW)

Sonniod

a compact, gray-haired little man whose cocky attitude is evident in his mannerisms and dress. He wears a floppy red cap, and is a former smuggler and bootlegger. He worked a legitimate business, shuttling holofeatures from planet to planet for a major distributor. He worked a total of 50 backwater systems. When his cousin asked if he would help her out by carrying a load of chak-root with some of the features destined for the Corporate Sector, he happily agreed. After finding out that chak-root was illegal, and that it was also highly profitable to run it, Sonniod eventually joined his cousin's organization full-time. During this time, he first met Han Solo, and the two became friends. He eventually went straight, returning to the holofeature business. He helped set Han up on Kamar, where Han was trying to make money showing holofeatures. (HSR, CSA)

SonoMax

manufacturers of sound pistols and other sonic weapons. (CSA, WSV)

Sonopo Bomoor

the alias used by Gaar Suppoon when he invaded, raped, and pillaged Kosh Kurp's homeworld. (JTH)

Sons and Daughters of Freedom

Sons of Barab

Han Solo once invoked the names of the Sons of Barab during his escape from the Trader's Luck. (TPS)

Sonsen, Jenica

Sonsen was the Chief Operations Officer, in charge of Administration and Operations, on Centerpoint Station during the time when the Starbuster plot was in motion. She was one of the last people to leave the station when it started acting strangely. She greeted Lando Calrissian and Luke Skywalker when they arrived at the station, thinking they were going to help her get the station back to normal. (SC)

SonTag

this silver-haired Meerian woman was the governor of Bandomeer some 12 years before the Battle of Naboo. She was a supporter of VeerTa and the Home Planet Party, although she knew that her planet's wealth was dependent upon Offworld Mining Company's operations. She welcomed the unexpected arrival of Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi to Bandomeer, although she did not summon them for assistance. That was the work of Xanatos, who hoped to exact revenge on Qui-Gon by taking control of the ionite mines or - if necessary - destroying the planet. When VeerTa was also implicated in Xanatos' plans, SonTag was forced to rebuild her planet's government from scratch, a task made easier by the expulsion of Offworld Mining and the recovery of the Home World Party. (DR)

Sontor Skipper

this independent freighter was owned and operated by Captain Ross. He used it to carry foodstuffs from Baralou to various Alliance bases, in exchange for gemstones mined on Baralou. (PG1)

Sonus

this was a common name among the Sarkan race. (UANT)

Sook

the Ewok word for rock, it comes from the name of one of the Ancient Token of the Legendary Ewok Heroes. The Sook is given to the party member who needs direction for his feelings. Logray bestowed it upon Mace Towani, whose anger and aggression at the loss of his parents needed to be channeled. Mace discarded the rock, but Wicket recovered it, saving it until Mace needed it. Inside the Sook is a magic arrow head that will scoot along the ground, leading the party to a hidden destination. (EA)

Sookcool

meaning "wealthy", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Soolehad

this Rodian went by the pseudonym of Falloon, during the early decades of the New Republic, in order to avoid being identified. Soolehad was once a senior accountant for the Black Sun criminal organization, and still maintained may century's worth of data in the memory banks of his protocol droid, 9T-LOM. When the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the known galaxy, Soolehad used his Falloon alias to obtain passage off Sriluur, in order to return to Coruscant with the information in 9T-LOM's brain still intact. He hoped to turn 9T-LOM over to some former Black Sun leaders for a considerable reward. After he revealed his true identity to the mercenaries who got him off Sriluur and back to Coruscant, Soolehad turned 9T-LOM in for a considerable reward, then retired. (WOA13)

Sools, Jiri

this freighter captain discovered what he called "the errors of monogamy" on the planet Zeltros, during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. Sools fell in love with a cafarel named Lissahl, and vowed never to leave Zeltros again. (PH)

Sooma

C-3PO and R2-D2 were dispatched to this planet as diplomatic couriers, during the decade before the Battle of Yavin. The planet was the homeworld of a race of spindly, insectile humanoids. Unfortunately, this race was exterminated by Stenax invaders during the Stenax Massacres, which occurred some ten months after the Battle of Endor. (MDCAR, GMR1)

Soon

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Soong peetch alay

this Huttese phrase translated into Basic as "It's too late for that." (GMR5)

Soonis

this Jedi Knight was responsible for apprehending the looters of the Vaults of Narner on Salliche. Soonis also stopped a band of armored raiders from rampaging Wroona. (SWJ3)

Soose

this Tahlboorean term means "enough." (DRPC)

Soothfast

commanded by Skent Graff, this New Republic Proficient-class warship patrolled the Meridian Sector during the early stages of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion. The ship was in position to recover the escape pod which contained the Yuuzhan Vong priestess Elan and her familiar, Vergere, after destroying a yorik coral spawn ship (Sh'rip Sh'pa). (HT, NJOSB)

Sophistication

this was the name of the art gallery owned and operated by Tal Anavere on the planet Obroa-skai. (CRO)

Sophouse

this brew-pub was located on the planet Cularin, during the last decades of the Clone Wars. Although its

Sophra

Cray Mingla's aunt, she feared that Cray's mother, Margolis, would manifest sensitivity to the Force as did their mother. (COJ)

Sopor-moss

this form of algal moss, native to the oceans of Calamari, was used by Mon Calamari doctors as a natural anesthetic. (FH1)

Sora Bulq

one of the few members of his race to and aptitude for the Force, this Weequay Jedi Master was one of the handful of Jedi who survived the initial stages of the Battle of Geonosis. Known for his skills with a lightsaber, Master Bulq was one of the best teachers of lightsaber combat at the Jedi Temple on Coruscant. Master Bulq was also worked with Mace Windu in the development of the Vaapad form of combat. Sora Bulq was part of the small group who were surrounded by the droid armies of Count Dooku and his Separatists, just before the Army of the Republic arrived on Geonosis. Note that Inside the Worlds of Star Wars: Episode II indicates that Sora Bulq died during the Battle of Geonosis, when his LAAT/I was shot down and crashed. However, as the Jedi Council advocated a stronger military presence for the Jedi Knights, Sora Bulq began to grow more and more dissatisfied with the Jedi. He finally decided to break away from the Jedi in protest, gathering a group of Jedi and retreating to the moon of Ruul. Note that Star Wars: Republic - Trackdown indicates that Sora Buld was captured by Count Dooku on Bakura, shortly after the Battle of Geonosis. Some three months after Geonosis, Master Bulq agreed to meet with Master Windu on Ruul, to discuss a mediation to their dispute. However, Bulq had other plans, having turned down the path to the Dark Side of the Force. He allowed Asajj Ventress to land her starship on his estate, and was "injured" early in a struggle with Ventress to allow his supporters to come to his aid. Mira's death only served to turn his supporters further away from the Jedi Order. When Master Windu confronted Bulq about this, Master Bulq openly explained that he had come to understand Count Dooku's position in the Clone Wars. Bulq and Ventress banded together to fight against the Jedi, but Master Windu, Jeisel, and K'ruhk managed to survive. Bulq remained on Ruul, planning his next moves against the Jedi. He eventually made contact with Rath Kelko on Anzat, in an effort to establish as "shadow army" for the Confederacy of Independent Systems, in an effort to offset the growing advantages of the Republic's clone troopers. He then traveled to Saleucami, where he took advantages of the heat and power supplied by the open magma flows in the creation of clones of the Morgukai warriors. (OWS, J1, IWE2, RT)

Sorannan, Sil

this Imperial Major was stationed in the Koornacht Cluster, as part of the Black Sword Command. He was one of the survivors of the Yevethan rebellion, and became the de facto leader of the prisoners on Pa'aal. He and his cohorts were dispatched to individual Yevethan warships to assist in expanding Nil Spaar's armed forces, which played into their plans perfectly. He and his officers arranged an elaborate plot that involved the coordinated takeover of a great portion of Spaar's navy during the final battle of the Black Fleet Crisis, robbing Spaar of any advantage he may have held. Sorannan himself took control of the Pride of Yevetha, and captured Nil Spaar. As Sorannan and his officers fled the Koornacht, they deposited Nil Spaar into hyperspace aboard an escape pod as the Imperials headed toward Byss and the Deep Core. (TT)

Sorbiss Valley

located on the planet Kal'Shebbol, this valley was the site of Imperial Moff Kentor Sarne's stronghold. Much of the Sarne's infrastructure was maintained at the Sorbiss Valley location, including his computer systems and even a few capital ships, including the corvette Renegade. (DARK)

Sorcerers of Tund

an allegedly ancient and mysterious brotherhood of magicians from the Tund System, these overly flashy sorcerers clothed themselves in distinctive charcoal-gray robes and turban-like headgear that covers everything but their eyes. Their race was unknown, since no one outside the brotherhood has seen one without their robes on. The Jedi Knights knew of the Sorcerers, who called their connection to the Force magic. The Jedi Council of the ancient Old Republic chose to allow the Sorcerers to continue their dabblings in the Force, provided that they didn't turn very far down the path to the Dark Side. In the aftermath of the Battle of Ruusan, the Sorcerers were all but forgotten. What no one realized is that, near the time the Empire was born, the Sorcerers were wiped out, and the planet Tund reduced to a glowing ball of ash, by Rokur Gepta. Gepta continued to spread rumours and stories about the Sorcerers, to keep his mystique valid. Emperor Palpatine even became interested in the Sorcerers, believing that their religious teachings were based on ancient Sith doctrines. (LCM, ECH, DSSB)

Sord Montok

this "corporation" specialized in the transport of slaves, during the height of the New Order. (GMR6)

Sord Montok

this slaving transport ship was owned by Sord Montok, and was used to ferry slaves from place to place during the height of the New Order. (GMR6)

Sordaan Xris'

this Rodian was considered the wealthiest of his species living on the planet Kashyyyk, during the height of the New Order. He was the founder and owner of Sordaan Xris' Safari Partners, a big-game hunting expedition service that catered to the needs of adventure seekers from across the galaxy. Xris' managed to buy large tracts of land - which became part of the Etyyy, or Rodian Hunting Grounds - on which his employees led dangerous safaris into the Kashyyyk jungles. Many considered Xris' to be softer than most Rodian hunters, living behind his wealth and using his credits to hire the experienced hunters to work for him. Among his chief detractors was his long-time rival, Ziven Tissar. Eventually, even the Wookiees who worked for Xris' turned their backs on him, after he allied himself with the Imperial agents who took control of Kashyyyk. In order to prove himself, Xris' set out to locate and kill the legendary Kkorrwrot, but was unsuccessful. (SWGAL)

Sordaan Xris' Safari Partners

this small business, founded by Sordaan Xris' on the planet Kashyyyk, offered beings from across the galaxy the chance to participate in dangerous, big-game safaris into the jungles of the Wookiee homeworld. The safaris took place in the Etyyy, which was the Wookiee term for the Rodian Hunting Grounds. (SWGAL)

Sorderian Weftfabric

this expensive fabric was used by the Hutts to cover their caravels and sailbarges. (MA)

Sordu Gogg

known as "Sordu the Job Doc," this Rodian was one of the most well-liked members of Socorro's criminal organizations. An information broker by trade, he was also Vakeyya's most prominent employment sources. If a job was available to a smuggler or pirate, Sordu knew about it. Sordu had a suite in the Boliscon Towers, but spent much of his time at The Custom Shop. (BSS)

Sorella

this planet, located in the Freeworlds Region of Tapani Sector, was part of a group known as the Three Ellas. Along with Dorella and Pernella, Sorella had a liberal government that was more receptive to smugglers and criminals than other worlds. (LOE)

Sormic

this short, pudgy, bald man was a Captain in the New Republic's Starfighter Command forces, and was assigned to training pilots for combat. He commanded the simulated group known as Gold Squadron, and it was Sormic who first trained Lara Notsil. Because he was unaware that she was trying to fail the course - as part of a plan to expose Atton Repness' blackmarket sale of starfighter parts - she nicknamed her "Deadstick Notsil." (IF)

Sorn

one of the Chiss pilots who served Voss Parck and Stent at the Hand of Thrawn compound on Nirauan, Sorn was responsible for reconnaissance of the Imperial capital on Bastion. (VOF)

S'orn, Ren

this young Belascan man was the son of Senator Uta S'orn. He was born Force-sensitive, and longed to attend the training given to potential Jedi at the Jedi Temple on Coruscant. However, his mother forbid any contact with the Jedi, and Ren fled Belasco. When his mother petitioned the Jedi Knights to help locate him, Ren rejected their offer to return to his mother. Some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo, it was reported to the Jedi that Ren had died on Simpla-12, and that all the blood had been drained from his body. His death appeared surprisingly similar to that of Fligh, who had stolen Senator S'orn's datapad. Obi-Wan Kenobi and Astri Oddo discovered that Ren had submitted himself to the testing of Jenna Zan Arbor, who was searching for the key to the mystery of the Force. He ordered her to release him, but he returned to Simpla-12 a broken man. (DH, EVE)

S'orn, Uta

this woman was the Senator from the planet Belasco, some twelve years before the Battle of Naboo. She had planned to retire after trying to form a coalition of support to halt the activities of the Tech Raiders, but she was forced to announce it earlier when Fligh stole her datapad. He obtained it one day when Uta put it down while eating the Senate commissary, but she chose not to report the theft in order to ensure the success of her coalition. Shortly after Fligh's death, it was revealed that Senator S'orn's son, Ren, was Force-sensitive, and that she had forbade his attending of the Jedi Temple's training. Ren fled Belasco, and remained separated from his mother for years, despite her efforts to have the Jedi Knights bring him home. Her decision to retire came on the heels of Ren's death on Simpla-12, which Senator S'orn claimed had occupied her mind to the point that she could no longer concentrate. She returned to Belasco and remained something of a recluse, only coming out of her dwelling to help tend to the children who were made ill by the bacterial infection which swept the planet every seven years. It was later revealed that Senator S'orn had, in fact, been helping Jenna Zan Arbor propagate her studies of the Force but infecting innocent worlds with bio-engineered viruses, then "rescuing" them with expensive treatments. Senator S'orn had been falsifying Senate records to indicate support for Arbor Industries, and stored the original records on her datapad for use in blackmail in an emergency. Uta S'orn admitted to her part in Zan Arbor's plans, and was exiled on a penal colony with Zan Arbor for the rest of her life. (DH, EVE, TDR)

SoroSuub Chew

this tobacco-like substance was produced in a chewable form favored by the pirate Quist. (TM)

SoroSuub Corporation

a diversified conglomerate headquartered on Sullust, SoroSuub manufactured such diverse products as food packaging, space mining tools, blaster weapons, and repulsorlift crafts. With its diverse portfolio of products, SoroSuub came to employ nearly half the entire population of Sullust in its laboratories and factories. When the New Order was spreading through the galaxy, the Sullustan Council was disbanded, and SoroSuub announced Proclamation Number 173d, stating that it was assuming leadership of the planet. Then, it declared that it would be fully supporting the Empire with its goods and services, and denounced the Alliance as criminals and malcontents. This occurred on the 62nd day of the Sullustan year 8,494. SoroSuub was also one of the original non-voting Contributing Sponsors of the Corporate Sector Authority. All of this didn't sit well with many Sullustan employees, who saw the Empire for what it really was. A well-planned coup was staged in the wake of the Battle of Hoth, which saw the pro-Imperial leadership of SoroSuub ousted in a quiet takeover. Following the Battle of Endor and the role of the Sullustans in it, they were able to retake control of SoroSuub and ally it with the New Republic. (COTF, SWSB, EGV, CSA, RESB, NEGW)

Soro-Suul

this Lambda-class shuttle was owned a mercenary group which tried to bring down Twin Suns Transport Services and the Azzameen family. (XWA)

Sorr

this man served the Galactic Alliance as an Admiral in the armed forces, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. It was Admiral Sorr who assigned Corran Horn to accompany Tahiri Veila on a mission to Coruscant, which had been reformed by the Yuuzhan Vong into a replica of Yuuzhan'tar, in an effort to locate the Prophet, Yu'shaa. (FP)

Sorran

this man was the pirate captain who staged an assault on Naboo's TFP-9 space station, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. He commanded the assault from his flagship, the Velumina. He claimed to have been employed by Challep, the planetary governor of Agamar, who wanted to obtain several of the Naboo N-1 starfighters and a Naboo Police Cruiser, in an effort to reverse-engineer the Nubian drives and bolster his own security force. Sorran was told that Dren Melne, a member of Naboo's Bravo Squadron, would assist in obtaining the starships. However, Dren didn't count on resistance from Essara

Till and the loyal Naboo pilots of Echo Flight. When it became apparent that Dren would be unable to deliver the starfighters, Sorran ordered Dren's own ship destroyed, in an effort to remove any link back to his employers. The Velumina then jumped into hyperspace and disappeared. (SFT)

Sorr-ul-Paan Plateau

this flatland, located on the planet Ansion, was distinguished as the location of the city of Cuipernam. (APS)

Sorrus

this large, semi-arid planet was the homeworld of the Sorrusian race. There was very little open water on the planet, which was geographically dominated by wide deserts and rugged mountain ranges. Sprawling cities dotted the landscape. The planet had three distinct capital cities. (DH,EVE)

Sorrusian

this race of humanoids was native to the planet Sorrus. They were adept at changing their appearance via subtle manipulation of skin coloration, and their skeletal system was flexible enough to allow them to compress and conform their bodies to a variety of shapes and sizes. This allowed Sorrusians to move through obstacles which would block a normal human. Most people considered Sorrusians to be friendly beings, until you asked them a question. (DH, EVE)

this clan of Doneer ruled the city of Sotak'vik, on the planet Doneer'so. The Sotak were known as charismatic and powerful, and inspired fanatic loyal within their clan, and extreme jealousy from other clans. (SWCP)

Sotak'vik

this Doneer'so city-hive was controlled by the Sitak clan during the Galactic Civil War. (SWCP)

Soterios

this dry, rocky world was the capital of the province held by House Melantha of Tapani Sector. Much of its surface was covered with windswept canyons and desert wastelands. A few settlements managed to eke out a living, and the species they brought with them quickly overran the native flora and fauna. As a result, virtually none of the planet's original lifeforms existed at the height of the New Order. (PGT, LOE)

Soth Petikkin

this native of the planet Tefau worked as a recruiter for the Alliance shortly before the Battle of Endor. Petikkin had a limited form of precognition, and used his contacts within Jabba the Hutt's organization to locate potential recruits. (CCG9)

Sothek

this Yinchorri was a member of the Intelligentsia class, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Sothek was one of the few Yinchorri who doubted Vilmarh Grahrk's plans to steal starships from the Golden Nyss Shipyards, mainly because Grahrk wasn't a member of a Yinchorri clan. (TDV)

Sotipe

this gas giant was the seventh planet in the Derilyn System, located in the Elrood Sector. It was orbited by fourteen moons. (PG3)

Sottos

this Hutt was a mid-level crimelord on his homeworld of Nal Hutta, during the early years of the New Order. (WOTC)

Soul for Sale

this song, written and played by the band Starburst, first appeared on the compilation StakeOut. It was rated scarlet by the Imperial Board of Culture. (GG9)

Soul Snare

this ancient device was used to capture the life energies of Force-sensitive individuals. (CSWDW)

Soul Stealer

this milky-white, carved talisman was part of a collection of sinister artifacts maintained by the ancient Jedi Humat, more than 19,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. When touched by unsuspecting beings, the soul stealer took possession of the holder's mind, forcing the individual to do the talisman's bidding. Once under the soul stealer's control, a being was compelled to kill every being they came into contact with. The talisman was inadvertently rediscovered by construction crews during the last century of the Old Republic, during a building demolition. Before it could fall into the wrong hands, a group of freelance agents recovered the soul stealer and returned it to the Jedi Knights. (CCW)

Soul Tree

this was the name of the ceremonial tree planted for every Ewok at its birth. When the Ewok died, its hood was tied around its Soul Tree's trunk. (ECAR)

Soullex

this planet, located in the Outer Rim Territories' Fardon System, was used as a base by Admiral Drommel after his defeat in the Battle of Tantive V. Drommel established a garrison on the planet while repairs were made to the Guardian, which sustained heavy damage from New Republic forces. (WBC)

Soulworm

this creature fled the known galaxy several centuries before the Galactic Civil War, in an attempt to find a place to worship evil. It has many followers in the known galaxy, foremost of which was the Five. (CSWDW)

Soun IV

a planet. (IWE2)

Sound of Her Wings, The

this musical piece was written and played by Gayman Neeloid, and was popular during the early years of the New Republic. (POT)

Sound Slug

a form of memory storage unit about the size of a blaster power pack, capable of sotring multiple compilations of musical material. (GG9)

Sound Sponge

this device was used by bounty hunters. When placed in the center of a room, it absorbs and deadens all sounds emanating from within the room. (RD)

Sound Weapon

these kinds of pistols or blasters don't emit energy beams or particles, but a high-pitched sonic blast that can be used to stun a victim. They can be modulated for use against various species, and for varying pitches and decibel levels. (CSA)

Soundmound

this music and dance club, located on the planet Mrlsst, was one of the many holoconcert sites played by Ghost Jedi. It was here that Rogue Squadron first met Koyi Komad. (XWPA)

Soun-Giju

this Herglic settlement, located on the planet Tallaan, maintained the culture of Giju instead of melding with its neighboring human culture. Its name translated to "Little Giju." (LOE)

Soup

this was the colloquial term used by members of the Anzat race to describe the life energies contained in a being's brain. A being's "soup" contained memories of all of their life experiences. When a being died, their "soup" ascended into the stars was lost, although it was believed that the life energies of an Anzat became part of the Sea of Memory. Over time, the Anzati discovered that they could actually taste this "soup" when they consumed the brains of their victims. Note that Star Wars Gamer magazine, issue 1, indicates that the essence is actually called "luck", while "soup" was the medium through which the "luck" could be consumed. (RT, TME, TJP, GMR1)

Sourthal, Bakki

this eager young man wanted to be a starfighter pilot, and planned to attend the Imperial Academy. However, his father believed that the Empire was too powerful, and his outspoken position was noticed during Bakki's initial interviews. He was refused admission to the Academy, so Bakki decided to join the Alliance. A handsome man with a totally fearless personality, Bakki once told his comrades that he would have been a holoivid star if the Alliance hadn't taken him. Bakki was promoted to Lieutenant Commander shortly before the Battle of Hoth, and was placed in command of Red Squadron of X-Wings in Fakir Sector. When not on active alert, Bakki also served the Special Forces branch of the Alliance as a field agent.. (SWCP, AIR)

Sourthol, Bakki

this man served as the Commander of Fakir Sector Command's Red Squadron, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Commander Sourthol was also a charismatic speaker, and often was dispatched "on loan" to other Alliance bases to discuss starfighter tactics against Imperial opposition. (SWJ10)

Souse-mustard

this was an Ortolan condiment that was often used to create a tapenade that could be served with crackers. (YDR)

South Beach

this coastal area was located on the Unknown World of the Rakata race. During the height of the Great Sith War, the South Beach area was under the control of the Elders. (KOTOR)

South Conical Mountains

this was the name used to describe the arrangement of seven cones - one large cone surrounded by six smaller cones - at one end of Centerpoint Station. It was believed that the cones formed the primary repulsor generation system for the Station, since the arrangement of cones resembled that of ancient repulsor devices. (JE)

South Elrood Ocean

this was the largest of the three oceans found on the planet Elrood. (PG3)

South Horn Flightknife

one of the many Yedagonian fighter squadrons which supported Wedge Antilles and the Running Crimson Flightknife during the war against the forces of the Cartann nation, on Adumar. (SOA)

South Islands

this island chain on the planet Alderaan was home to a group of Caamasi refugees during the reign of Emperor Palpatine. (SOP)

South Kallis

this was one of the three continents found on the planet Corulag. (CCW)

South Market

this section of the city of Iritsa, located on the planet Chazwa, was the primary shopping area used by those beings who lived in The Stones. (ND)

South Mudflats

this mud-covered area of the planet Antiquity ran for thousands of kilometers. (POC)

South Qaestar Ridge

this section of the Qaestar Ridge formed the southwestern border of Qaestar Town, on the planet Talus. (CCW)

South Refineries

this was one of four ore refineries established on the Ugnaught Surface, during its construction. Once the floating city was completed, the refinery was converted into housing and business facilities for the Ugnaughts who made their homes on the Surface. (PH)

South Ridge

this rocky, V-shaped outcropping of rock was located on the planet Hoth, just to the east of the Clabburn Range. It was here that the Alliance established a final rendezvous location for the forces at Echo Base, in case of an Imperial attack. In the wake of the Battle of Hoth, Luke Skywalker and many other pilots had to make their way to the South Ridge in order to escape. (IWS)

South Swing

this was the name given to a section of the Tiaran'grast Sling Course, known for its sharp, serpentine turns and vicious cross-winds. (SPG)

Southern Crags

this desolate, remote area of the Skeebo Desert was located near Skeebo City. It was here, in the Skeendo Tunnels, that the Skavers created their base of operations. (BF)

Southern Deserts

this area of the planet Sevarcos was known for its rich deposits of andris and carsunum. (SWJ2)

Southern Enclave

a section of Coruscant's Imperial City where Prince Xizor had a former mistress buried in a building foundation, after she failed to cut off their relationship. (SE)

Southern Hatagai

this was one of the smaller overclans of Alwari, native to the planet Ansion. (APS)

Southern Nikto

this is the common name for the M'shento'su'Nikto race. (GG12)

Southern Province

this was the name given to the southernmost habitable part of the planet Zeltros. (MC104)

Southern Reach

this open plain, located on the planet Venaari, was the site of a struggle between the rebel underground and the Imperials who controlled the planet, during the early years of the New Republic. (SWJ5)

Southern Tanlassa

see Tanlassa (MJH)

Southern Underground

this city-area on Coruscant, located in the southern hemisphere, was populated with beggars, homeless beings, and criminals. It was extremely dangerous for an outsider. (SE)

Southern Wastelands

this lifeless area dominated the southern continent of the planet Kathol, and was inhabited by a reclusive Charr Ontee clan. (E)

Southern Wastes

an area of the planet Uba IV which was controlled by the Vorsazg clan during the height of the New Order. (SESB)

Southview Village

this rustic village was the smaller of two settlements located on the planet Edan II. After the Alliance was routed from their base by Imperial bombardment, its surviving members hid in this city until they could gather their strength for a counterattack. (IAG)

Southwest One

one of two starports located on the Anai continent of Lianna. The starport is located to allow easy shipment of the minerals and ores extracted from Lianna's barren wastes. (ML)

Southwest Refineries

this was one of four ore refineries established on the Ugnaught Surface, during its construction. Once the floating city was completed, the refinery was converted into visitor housing facilities by the Ugnaughts who made their homes on the Surface. (PH)

Southwest Two

one of two starports located on the Anai continent of Lianna. The starport is located to allow easy shipment of the minerals and ores extracted from Lianna's barren wastes. (ML)

Sovar

this man worked for Platt Okeefe as a "cargo solicitor," during many runs to Tatooine during the Galactic Civil War. (SWG10)

Sovar Imperial Hotel

this upscale hotel was located near Calliandro's, in Rodia's Equator City. (SESB)

Sovara

this was a common name used by the Klatooinan race. (UANT)

Sovereign

this was the the first Sovereign-class Star Destroyer created for the reborn Emperor Palpatine, although it was never completed. (DE1)

Sovereign

this New Republic supply ship made a regular run to the planet Alvorine during the years following the Battle and Endor. Note that this ship is also referred to as the Soverien. (GMR5)

Sovereign Beetle

this beetle, native to the planet Neimoidia, was noted for its intricately ornamental shell. (COD)

Sovereign Protectors

highest-ranking Imperial Royal Guards, the Sovereign Protectors are a highly trained and motivated group of elite guards. Individuals are chosen for their fitness, stamina, and strength, as well as their loyalty to Emperor Palpatine. They are tutored by the Dark Side Adepts in the use of the Force, but they have control of only the most elementary abilities. (DE1, DESB)

Sovereign-class Star Destroyer

these huge, 15-kilometer-long warships were to be the penultimate Imperial weapon, surpassed only by the Eclipse-class Star Destroyer. Designed to instill fear, the Sovereign-class ships were equipped with an axial superlaser designed to destroy planets in much the same way the Death Star's laser eye would. Manned by 601,670 crewers and 4,075 gunners, the Sovereign-class also boasted 500 heavy turbolaser cannons, 500 turbolaser batteries, 75 ion cannons, 100 tractor beam projectors, and 5 gravity well projectors. (DE1, DESB)

Sovler

this creature was known for its disgusting eating habits. It enjoyed consuming small rarks. (VOF)

Sovra

this was a species of small, poisonous creature. (SWJ14)

Sovv

this surname was common among the Sullustan race, and meant "pilot" in the Sullustan language. (GCG)

Soypro

a meat substitute. (SE)

Soz

this ancient melee weapon was once popular on the planet Duro. (GCG)

Soz

this was a common name given to male Duros children. The name Soz referred to an ancient melee weapon once used on Duro. (GCG)

Sozzenels

this was a noted jazz band, active during the early years of the New Order. (WOTC)

SP.9

this was the mobile version of the Golan Arms DF.9 anti-infantry battery, which was most often used by the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. The SP.9 found little outside support, however, because it was extremely large for its firepower, and was difficult to transport. The SP.9 required a pilot and three gunners to operate. (ROE)

SP12

this was the astrogation abbreviation for the planet Simpla-12. (EVE)

SP-3

this was a form of delivery speeder produced during the last decades of the Old Republic. The Sp-3 was roughly trapezoidal in shape, allowing for a large variety of cargo to be moved about with it. (BH)

SP-4

this was a model of librarian droid, used by the Jedi Knights to provide access to their immense archives found on the planet Coruscant, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Based on the PK-series of labor droids, the SP-4 series was modified by Cybot Galactica to have enhanced sensory apparatus and behavioral circuitry which allowed it to monitor its environment. This gave the SP-4 the ability to gauge any Jedi who approached it, gleaned information from the Jedi's actions and behavior. The vocoder of the SP-4 was shaped like the long snout of a Pa'lowick. (AOTCN, SWDB)

SP-597

this was the callsign of one of the many stormtroopers who served under Admiral Galak Fyyar, during the early years of the New Republic. (JK2)

SP-80

a series of programmable, single-purpose droids. (COJ)

Spaar

this Yevethan clan rose to power just after the Battle of Endor, as the Imperial presence in the Koornacht Cluster began to dwindle. Nil Spaar became the primary power among the Yevetha, killing the former Viceroy in order to make his own way into the position. (SOL)

Spaarti Creations

this corporation was created on the planet Cartao as part of a joint effort between the human and Cranscok populations. The unique aspect of Spaarti Creations' manufacturing line was that it had evolved out of Cranscok fluid technology, allowing it to be retooled in a few hours to meet any new configuration. Much of the technology was not understood, and seemed to be organically linked to the Cranscok themselves. For this reason, access to the manufacturing facilities was heavily restricted, and many workers were required to live on-site in order to prevent unauthorized entry. Just south of the facility was a strip of grassland, which the Cranscok had set aside from their own use. No one was allowed to build on it, nor were people allowed to travel across it. The presence of other beings on this land upset the Cranscok, which affected their ability to manipulate the fluid-technology on the manufacturing lines. Thus, the leaders of Cartao enforced the restrictions on the grassland. Spaarti Creations was nationalized by the Old Republic about a year into the Clone Wars, in an effort to generate more modern cloning facilities. Kinman Doriana was dispatched to Cartao to negotiate the changeover, and his efforts were nearly thwarted when the Separatists learned of the mission. The Separatists swarmed in and took control of Spaarti Creations, and Doriana enlisted the help of those around him in an effort to force them out. These plans, however, were dashed when a Republic gunship piloted by a task force of Jedi Knights, was purposely crashed into the main manufacturing facility. Doriana later discovered that the gunship had been piloted remotely by an agent of Darth Sidious, who used the destruction of Spaarti Creations to create a groundswell of hatred toward the Jedi Knights. Known to only Doriana, Sidious, and Chancellor Palpatine, however, was the fact that several thousand cloning cylinders had been rescued from the doomed facility, which were quickly stored on Wayland. (SWI68, SWI70)

Spaarti Cylinders

originally designed early in the Clone Wars by Spaarti Creations on the planet Cartao, these specially-designed canisters provided a more modern method for the Old Republic to generate clone troopers for the Army of the Republic. During the battle for control of the planet Cartao, most of these cylinders were destroyed. Then Chancellor Palpatine, however, saved a number of them in his warehouse hidden within Mount Tantiss, on the planet Wayland. These cylinders were lost for decades until Grand Admiral Thrawn rediscovered them. He used them to clone troopers to augment his own forces, including the captured Dreadnaughts of the Katana Fleet, during the early years of the New Republic. The only known drawback to the use of Spaarti Cylinders was that they tended to create clones that went insane fairly rapidly, as a result of their accelerated growth cycle. (DFR, SWDB, SWI68, SWI70, NEGW)

Space Barge

any heavy-duty short-range transport ship used to shuttle cargo between faster hyperdrive transports or orbital installations. (SWSB)

Space Beldon

related to the beldon that inhabited the Life Zone of Bepin and many other gas giant planets, the space beldon was adapted to live in the gaseous, interstellar regions defined by nebulae and minor gas clouds. Individual specimens were known to roam a limited region of space, subsisting on the various gases they could scoop into their systems. Over the eons, an individual beldon converted these gases into rethin, which kept the space beldon inflated, and tibanna gas, which it expelled. Space beldons also exuded a mild acid, which allowed them to consume the solid elements found in asteroids. In comparison to their planetary cousins, the space beldon was much faster in its rate of movement, to avoid asteroids and other space-borne debris. Like normal beldons, the space beldon built up an internal charge of ions, which it discharged as a defense mechanism. (WOTC)

Space Carrots

this was a form of processed foodstuff, made from roots vegetables, which was often served from starship galleys. (MC8)

Space Diamond

this was a form of densely-compressed carbon that resembled terrestrial diamonds, but was found in asteroids and other space debris. (SWGAL)

Space Dock

this was the brand name of Rendili's mobile starport platform, developed during the early years of the New Republic. They have the advantage of being mobile, and are moved among planets with ease. (VOF)

Space Drifter

this medium transport was owned and operated by Core to Rim Shipping, and was under the command of Prem Nistt shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (FBS)

Space Fighter Corps

this was the small group of Royal Naboo Security Force officers which was charged with protecting the interplanetary spaces of the Naboo System. Originally, the Space Fighter Corps was established as an honor guard for the Naboo Royal Starship, ready to defend the royal family as it traveled in the greater galaxy. The 100 men and women of the Space Fighters Corps used N-1 starfighters and Naboo Police Cruisers to patrol their home system. (IG1, SON)

Space Grazers

an alien lifeform, thought to be extinct for thousands of years before the Great Sith War. Aleema used Dark-Side illusions of them to try and deter the combined Jedi-Republic force that was sent to liberate the Empress Teta system. They were said to be space-faring, floating in the ether between the stars and eating any unsuspecting ships that passed near them. They resemble huge amoeba-like slugs with jellyfish-like tentacles hanging below them. (DLS)

Space Master Medium Transport

this starship was part of a generic line of transport ships produced by Kuat Drive Yards. Measuring eighty meters in length, this Space Master transport had a long fuselage that allowed for a variety of cargo modules to be attached to it. The forward section of the ship was a circular disk that contained the cockpit and main quarters, while the engine array was mounted at the rear. The medium transport required a crew of eight to operate, and could accommodate up to four passengers and 19,000 metric tons of cargo. In its stock form, the Space Master could be armed with up to four turret-mounted, twin laser cannons. (GMR4)

Space Pirate Boogie

a dance Han Solo taught to Leia at his housewarming party on Bespin. (ZHR)

Space Pirates of Iridium

this group of Old Republic bandits raided spice haulers using power gems, scouring the Atrivis Sector for more and more plunder. They were finally stopped by the Jedi Knights, who dispatched Kit Fisto and a team of Jedi to bring about an end to their predations. (CSW, OWS)

Space Pirates of the Galaxy

this holo-series was popular during the early years of the New Order. (MDCAR)

Space Poker

this is a card game popular among pilots and other military individuals. The deck of card is covered with different spacial bodies, such as planets and moons. Each round is marked by the use of propulsions and turbos to try and improve a players hand. The primary goal is to get the best combination of spacial objects among the cards in your hand. A full planetary system is one of the best hands. (SA1, SA2)

Space Rangers

this was the name assigned to agents of the Intergalactic Law Agency. (MDCAR)

Space Rescue Corps

this branch of the Old Republic military was charged with maintaining the safety of space travellers everywhere. Even after the rise of Emperor Palpatine and the Imperial Navy, the Space Rescue Corps was allowed to provide rescue services to registered starship owners. The SRC painted their rescue vessels with a striking red and black pattern for easy recognition. (FOP)

Space Singer

this is the term used to describe those Shashay who act not only as musical performers, but as starship navigators. The term was first created when a Shashay starship was forced to land on Kashyyyk after experiencing a malfunction. The Wookiees helped the Shashay crew repair their ship, but the only thing the Shashay had to offer as repayment was an evening of song. In an alternate usage, Shashay navigators are called space singers. The song of the Shashay is a complicated combination of trills and riffs, and the mental acumen required to memorize and perform the song lent itself to the ability to manipulate navigational coordinates. The Alliance employed the Shashay as navigators during the Galactic Civil War. (TA)

Space Skeet

a target-shooting activity which uses low-power laser rifles to shoot specialized targets launched into space. The shooter shoots from behind a transparisteel barrier, while the target is launched into space. When the laser beam strikes the target, it explodes in a bright flash, indicating a hit. (RM)

Space Slug

a pink, snake-like creature capable of living in the vacuum of space, space slugs sustain themselves by digesting the minerals in asteroids. Much of the slug's body is smooth and pliable, but the rearmost portion of the slug is covered with root-like tendrils that burrow into the rock of the asteroid and serve as the primary method of obtaining nutrients. It is known that they are a silicon-based organism, much like the mynock. Space slugs, also like mynocks, reproduce via fission into two new organisms. Many scientists claim that space slugs eat mynocks for sustenance, although larger slugs have been found with colonies of mynocks living inside them. The average space slug attains a length of around 100 meters living in the weightlessness of hard vacuum. For this reason, there have been plenty of verified reports of huge slugs reaching lengths of 900 meters. Space slug flesh, being inorganic, has many technological uses. Their skin is also used, in a ground-up form, as a commercial abrasive. It was rumored, during the last decades of the Old Republic, that miners and smugglers in the asteroid belt of the Cularin System actually trained space slugs to act as guardians of their bases. Other rumors claim that certain slugs were tame enough to allow smugglers to land their ships in their mouths to escape capture. Although these rumors were never substantiated, many starship captains went out of their way to avoid space slugs in the Cularin System. (ESB, SWSB, ISU, LFC)

Space Snipe

this Alliance defensive tactic was developed as a way to fight against Imperial blockade and control of a planet. Squadrons of starfighters were deployed in key hiding places throughout a planetary system, waiting to ambush attacking forces with surprise attacks. If properly planned and supplied, the space snipe can cut off an invading force, rendering it unable to continue and eventually freeing the system. (SWJ2)

Space Tape

this adhesive has a multitude of uses. Like duct tape, it has a strong substrate and dense, tactile glue. (POT)

Space Warper

a starship built by Novaldex. (MMY)

Space Worr

believed to have evolved from normal worrt stock that was accidentally transported to the asteroids between Antar and New Plymto, this species of worrt could grow to incredible sizes. First encountered by a pair of Rodian pilots, the space worrt was quite adept at camouflaging itself to blend into its surroundings. Weesh, one of the two Rodians, stumbled upon a space worrt without even seeing it, and was quickly consumed by the creature. This first space worrt was larger than a Wookiee, and resembled its smaller cousin in nearly every detail except size. Space worrts adapted to survive on virtually any form of matter, including the silicon matter found in mynocks. (WOTC)

Spaceboat

another name for a lighter. (HSL)

Spacecaster-class Shuttle

an outdated form of orbital shuttle, the Spacecaster was a hyperspace-capable craft designed for short excursions between planets. (VP, NJOSB)

Spaceguide

this was the official publication of the New Republic Scout Service. It documented the goals and ideals of the Service to prospective and new members. (GG8)

Spacelane Bureau

a branch of the Old Republic Navy, the Spacelane Bureau patrolled the ancient jump beacons used to demark hyperspace travel routes, ensuring their accuracy the safety of their routes. (TOJC)

Spaceman's Rest

a bar located in Teguta Lusat, where Lando Calrissian goes in search of a sabacc game while trying to gather information on the Treasure of Rafa. (LCM)

SpaceOps

this division of the Alliance's Special Forces group was typically ship-based personnel which specialized in combat which took place aboard a starship. They were considered the 1st Regiment of the SpecForces of the Alliance. (ROE)

Spaceport

any facility which provides starship landing, repair, and modification facilities. The Imperial Space Ministry defined five levels of spaceport classification: Landing Field - any flat, level area with the barest minimum of services. There is no flight tower to control starship traffic. Limited Service Starport - a step up from a landing field, limited service starports have some form of control tower, limited storage space, and only the basic services. Standard Class Spaceport - this facility has a full-staffed control tower, and offers all the basic services plus restocking facilities and a small shipyard. Stellar Class Spaceport - these facilities can handle most of the common starship designs, and provides landing and docking facilities for them. A number of shipyards are available for repairs, and a fully-staffed Customs office is on-site. Imperial Class Spaceport - luxurious and modern, this facility offers a wide range of landing and docking facilities, as well as maintenance areas and storage facilities. Any and all amenities required by a starship's passengers and crew area readily at hand. Customs facilities are top-notch, and security is extremely tight. (GG6)

Spaceport Bar

a well-known chain of Outer Rim hotels and bars. (GG9)

Spaceport Express

this Mos Eisley messaging service was formed by Monom Gantrum, with help from Norun Gep. Gantrum worked a deal on the side with Lady Valarian, which allowed her to scan his manifests for interesting cargo in return for other favors. Its primary office was located on Spacers Row. (GG7, IWST)

Spaceport Gusher

this was the name of the massive water-pumping station that supplied the Abregado-rae Spaceport with water. It was located between the modern spaceport and the Old Patch. (CCW)

Spaceport Hotel

this was generally considered one of the nicest hotels in Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine. (SWTJ)

Spaceport Region

this section of Celanon City was dominated by the vast starport which served the planet Celanon. The central spaceport control tower measured 140 stories in height. (PG1)

Spaceport Row

a street filled with bars and restaurants serving the various traders, shippers, and smugglers that come to Plawal and Belsavis. (COJ)

Spaceport Security Authority

this was the generic term used to describe the security forces which guarded the largest spaceports in the galaxy. They were most prominent at Imperial-class spaceports. (IR)

Spaceport Speeders

this used landspeeder lot was located in Mos Eisley, just off Outer Curved Street, on the planet Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. It was owned by Unut Poll, and operated by Wioslea during this time. It was here that Luke Skywalker sold his old speeder to pay for passage to Alderaan aboard the Millennium Falcon. (GG7, TME, IWST)

Spacer

slang term for a starship pilot. (SW)

Spacer Quarter

this section of Alderaan's capital city of Aldera was dedicated to providing offworlders with the services they required. Bars and taverns, hotels and inns, gambling houses and specialty shops could all be found there. (CCW)

Spacer's Bar

this was one of the Outer Rim's most accessible chains of restaurants and hotels. (GG9)

Spacer's Berth

this warehouse-district cantina was a favorite meeting place of Snitchly Gritch, during the last years of the Old Republic. (GCG)

Spacer's Bistro

a bar and grill location on Byss. (DE2)

Spacer's Chest

this was the generic term used to describe any form of chest or locker in which a starship pilot kept their personal belongings. (SWJ4)

Spacer's Garage

a starship repair facility on Nar Shaddaa. (DE1)

Spacers' Hill

this low mountain, found on Aduba-3, was the site of a cemetery used to bury natives and their companions who traveled the galaxy. (MC7)

Spacer's Information Manual

this Imperial document was required reading for any being who operated a starship during the New Order. Produced by the Imperial Bureau of Regulations, it outlined the necessary documents required for any spacer, as well as providing information on any possible scenario under which a starship may be boarded. However, many Imperial Customs agents relied more on first-hand knowledge of particular spacers and situations in boarding situations. (PSPG, SWJ9)

Spacer's Lounge

a cantina located in Imperial City, on Coruscant, during the early decades of the New Republic. (HT)

Spacer's Luck

this was one of the many gambling halls located in the Spacer Quarter of Aldera, on the planet Alderaan. (CCW)

Spacer's Rest

a cantina located near the main starport serving the planet Wroona. (PSG)

Spacers Row

this was one of the main thoroughfares found in the city of Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine. It was named for the businesses that lined it, which catered to the needs of traveling starship crews. It met up with the Outer Curved Street at the Ubrikkian Trade Tower. (IWST)

Spacer's Street

one of the main thoroughfares in the capital city of Cilpar, located near Mos Tommro Spaceport. (SOP)

Spacescraper

this word evolved on Coruscant, as a description of the tallest buildings found on the planet, if not in the galaxy. (UF)

Spacetroopers

this was the term used to describe specially-trained stormtroopers used for zero-G battles in outer space. They were trained as deadly commandos, second in stature to only the Imperial Royal Guard. Their specially-modified body armor acted as protection, propulsion, and weapons system. They were rightly referred to as walking tanks. (COTF, ISB)

Spach

this was one of the binary stars at the center of the Aldo Spachian System. (SL)

Spacia

this species of tree was native to the planet Achillea, and was used in the creation of luxurious furniture items. (PGT)

Spacing

a form of execution in which the victim is cast into the vacuum of deep space without any protection. (HSL)

Spadda

this Hutt ganglord ran his business from the Aikhibba System. (DESB)

Spade

this clone trooper was part of the platoon dispatched to Pengalan IV, during the early stages of the Clone

Wars, to eliminate a Separatist missile facility on the planet. He was given the nickname Mapper by Joram Kithe, who was stranded on the planet with the platoon's survivors after the Separatist sprang a trap. The nickname, given to help Joram communicate with the troopers, was based on the fact that the clone trooper carried the platoon's remaining equipment, including a shovel. Spade and his comrade, Hash, were killed shortly afterward, during the platoon's attempt to reach the actual missile production facility beneath the surface of Tur Lorkin. It was later revealed to Joram that Spade and his platoon-mates were actually enhanced clones, having been given additional self-reliance and initiative during their development. These enhanced troops were dispatched with observers like Joram, in order to ensure the production of clone troopers was continued. (SWI65)

Spade Forest

this was one of the many forests which covered the surface of the planet Null. Lorian Nod agreed to meet Obi-Wan Kenobi and his apprentice, Anakin Skywalker, in the Spade Forest, after Nod agreed to work with the Jedi to discover the motives of Count Dooku on the planet. (LOJ)

Spade Ray

this unusual fish, once native to the Yuuzhan Vong homeworld of Yuuzhan'tar, was shaped like a wide shovel or spade. After many generations of bio-engineering, spade rays were developed that could serve as living shovels. (T)

Spade-headed Smooka

this long-bodied, flying rodent was native to the planet Dagobah. They were named for their wide, flat head. The mouth of the smooka spread across its entire face, and was filled with sharp teeth used to chisel out holes in the trees. These holes were used for nesting purposes. Smookas didn't actually fly, but used stiff skin flaps to allow them to glide from branch to branch. (WSW)

Spaeth

this Imperial Navy Captain was in command of a Dreadnaught that was assigned to patrol near M'haeli. (ROC)

Spagga Core, Incorporated

this mining operation produced a number of rare and speciality gems used in lasers during the height of the New Order. It was rumored that they had secured the mining rights to an unspecified planet in the Minos Cluster, in hopes of mining corusca gems in its atmosphere. Spagga hoped to be able to cut into the market share of Damarind Corporation. (SWJ10)

Spang

this Outlaw Tech was the leader of a group of unemployed Imperial engineers who developed the Hornet Interceptor for the Tenloss Syndicate. (JASB)

Spang

this man was one of the original techs who helped build the Tanquilla Beach space station. It was Spang who procured and installed all of the station's weaponry. Spang was also a trusted friend of Bequesh, and was often under the old man's protection. During the early years of the New Republic, Spang and his daughter, Fia, operated a starship repair facility aboard Tanquilla Beach. (DARK)

Spangled Veil Nebula

this gaseous formation is located near Exodo II and the gas clouds of Odos, in the Meridian Sector. (POT)

Spanner

this was the nickname of Luskin Exovar's E3 companion droid. Those who knew Exovar the best could not recall a time when Spanner wasn't with him. Spanner was sensitive to the plight of droids, especially during the height of the New Order, and wasn't afraid to use its heavy lifters to take out a measure of revenge against anti-droid beings. Spanner rarely spoke aloud, and then usually only to Exovar. (WSV)

Spar

see Alpha-02 (SWI80)

Spar Sector

along with the Moddell and Ablajeck Sectors of the galaxy, this sector made up the Inner Zuma region. (GMR9)

Sparkbee

this ancient bee was native to the original Yuuzhan Vong homeworld of Yuuzhan'tar. It was the baseline from which thud bugs and blast bugs were bio-engineered. Unadulterated sparkbees were also maintained, since they produced a form of honey which was nutritious. (T)

Sparkle-bop

a term used to describe the sugary pop music which was popular during the early years of the New Republic. (POT)

Sparks

a New Republic Navy crewman serving under Harona on the starship Glorious. (BTS)

Sparkstick

this was a small form of incendiary device which was often used at parties to light candles. These devices came in single-use versions as well as models which could be reused many times before their fuel sources ran dry. (PH)

Sparky

this maroon and white R5 astromech droid was assigned to the X-Wing starfighter used by Jaina Solo during the evacuation of Dubrillion. After Jaina became a full member of Rogue Squadron, Sparky served as her counterpart until the defense of Kalarba. During the struggle to protect Hosk Station, Jaina's X-Wing was destroyed. She managed to fire her ejection seat and get clear of the explosion, but Sparky was destroyed in the blast. (DTO, BP)

Spart, Keevy

this young Corellian man was aboard the Tinta Palette when Corran Horn fled from Corellia, during his search for Mirax Terrik. Keevy dreamed of becoming a starfighter pilot, but the demilitarization following the deaths of Grand Admiral Thrawn and the reborn Emperor Palpatine left him with little hope of realizing that dream. (IJ)

Sparu

this megonite miner was secretly hoarding the moss with Calus Bing, in an effort to create their own fortune. They were forced to detonate the moss in an effort to escape the Imperial forces on Phelarion, some years after the Battle of Yavin. (CSWEA)

Spasso, Garvan

this untrustworthy, low-life trader made a living smuggling holotapes and exotic spices between Kalab and Glova, during the early years of the New Republic. (POC)

Spatch-Cote

a substance carried on most small starships. It was a ceramic material that was "grown" from a silicate-based organism which multiplied in the presence of certain chemicals. It was used to fill and seal small hull damage. (COJ, SWJ4)

Spathen, Framjem

a post-Clone Wars holo-feature star, he had surgically-implanted muscles added to his physique. (COJ)

Spatter Pit

this was the name given to the slight depression in which Yuuzhan Vong slaves were tortured and interrogated before being offered up as sacrifices to the gods. (SBS)

Spatz

a game of chance played in many Imperial casinos. (SWJ1)

Spawn Nebula

Meres Ulcane attempted to flee to this nebula, after being discovered on Betha II by agents of the New Republic. Via hyperspace, the nebula is only a half-hour from the planet Betha II. It was here, located in the shadow of the nebula, that the Kaarenth Dissension hoarded a fleet of starships for use against the New Republic. A spherical space station was maintained to keep the fleet in constant readiness. A team of New Republic agents managed to locate Ulcane and track him to the nebula, where they were able to destroy the repair station and much of the fleet it supported. (SWJ8)

Spawn Ship

this was the Basic name for the Yuuzhan Vong Sh'rip Sh'pa. This ship was basically a grand cruiser which had been outfitted with a secondary module that contained dovin basals. This configuration allowed the main ship to take a great deal of fire, while the module simply absorbed it. (HT, NJOSB)

Spawning Caverns

located on the planet Kuras III, this series of caves was favored by the Aganof species as a place to reproduce. (PG3)

Spawning Day

this holiday was celebrated by Bingo Mehndra. (T6)

Spawnworld

this is the Yevethan name for the planet N'zoth. (CTD)

Spax, Ben

no one knew this young man's background, and many believed he found the Alliance all on his own. Spax joined the ranks of the starfighter pilots in the Alliance, although he was recruited for Intelligence work by Airen Cracken. (GMK)

SPD

a series of insectoid maintenance droids. (TLC)

SPD-R4

this model of so-called "spider droid" has highly-flexible appendages that allow it to navigate inside power cores and engine blocks to affect repairs where no human could reach. (DSTC)

SPD-series Droid

these security droids were common among security and law enforcement agencies. Known as scanning patrol droids, they were box-like automata that roll on treads, similar to the MSE-6 droid. The SPD-series also has a number of retractable appendages that it uses to search out security breaches. One of the best-known examples was the Hound-W2. (TTSB, SWJ14, EGD)

Speaker

this was the term used to describe the leader of a Yapi tribe. The Speaker was the wisest warrior of his clan. (E)

Speaker-Above-All

this was the Trandosha term for the Senator who represented Trandosha to the Old Republic Senate. (HNN4)

Spear

a group of Alliance YT-1300s destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Spear V

this is the designation of a mid-grade computer spike manufactured by MicroThrust. It is more efficient than the Piercer IV, but not as good as a Lancer spike. (CFG)

Spearhead

this underwater city, located on the planet Naboo, was the ancient stronghold of Boss Rogoe, some 3,000 years before the Battle of Naboo. It was destroyed shortly after Boss Rogoe launched an assault on the city of Otoh Sancture, in an effort to eliminate Boss Gallo. Despite the destruction of Otoh Sancture, Boss Gallo survived and launched a counter-assault on Boss Rogoe. After defeating Rogoe and destroying much of Spearhead, Boss Gallo began to unite the Gungan people into a unified society. From the ashes and rubble of Spearhead, Boss Gallo built the original portions of the city known as Otoh Gunga. (GB)

Spearhead Droid

this was a form of droid starfighter developed by the Confederacy of Independent Systems, during the height of the Clone Wars. The spearhead droid was designed as a sort of kamikaze fighter, used to penetrate a planet's orbital defenses and reach the surface, where the fighter plunged into buildings and other strategic locations. These droids proved successful in many campaigns, including the opening stages of the First Battle of Coruscant. (LEV)

Spearmaster

traditionally, the best hunter among the Whiphids on Toola is named the Spearmaster. The Spearmaster is, by default, the leader of the nomadic tribes of Whiphid. (GG4)

SpecForce

this was the shortened name used by the Alliance's Special Forces division. Among the various disciplines of the SpecForce soldier were SpaceOps Troops, Pathfinders, Urban Combat Specialists, Wilderness Fighters, Technicians, Infiltrators, and Heavy Weapons Specialists. At any given time during the Galactic Civil War, there were ten or more SpecForce divisions scattered across the galaxy. The primary division was the Command Division, which was attached to the Alliance's High Command and governed the overall activity of the SpecForces in action. (ROE)

SpecForce Officers Training Manual

this was the Alliance's collection of information used to educate and train potential officers of the Special Forces division. It included doctrines and operational information for leading and conducting warfare. (ROE)

Special Bakuran Troops

this branch of the Bakuran armed forces was trained for special operations. (FH2)

Special Enforcement Officers

these law enforcement agents were culled from the best of the Sector Rangers, and given more widespread authority and detention powers. Because of their widespread jurisdictions, SEOs often commanded task forces which focused on specific types of crimes, such as kidnappings, counter-espionage, and anti-terrorist operations. (GG11, GMR8)

Special Insertion Team

this was the name given to the elite group of stormtroopers and Imperial soldiers who could secretly infiltrate any installation and disable it. These teams were well trained and highly skilled in all forms of combat, and were sent in to eliminate resistance in very hostile situations. They were often on missions for months at a time, establishing themselves before beginning their assault. (SLS)

Special Navy Forces

this joint effort between the Empire's Ubiquitorate and its Navy was developed with several missions in mind. First, the Navy hoped to train dangerous soldiers to act as advance forces to use when landing on a new planet. The Navy hoped to be able to eliminate the need for Army ground assault forces. The Ubiquitorate hoped to create a group of mobile intelligence operatives with specialized skills and training, who could be assigned virtually any mission on a moment's notice. Known as SpecNav, these forces were trained at the D8-Red base in the Ringali Nebula, but never saw action. Following the Battle of Endor, any troopers stationed on D8-Red were quickly reassigned posts elsewhere to help bolster the fragmenting Empire. (FOP)

Special Operative 1312

this was the codename for Pentix Graphyt, under the Imperial Delta Emergency Code that protected Project Orrad. (SWJ5)

Specklestone

found in the deserts of Tatooine, this form of sandstone was often carved by the wind into giant pinnacles. (TG)

SpecNav Forces

see Special Navy Forces. (FOP)

Speco

this planet was under Imperial control during the Galactic Civil War. (SESB)

SpecOps

this was the shortened name of the Alliance's Special Operations division. A complimentary unit to the Special Forces division, SpecOps took on missions that were thrown together with little up-front planning. (ROE)

Spectacillin

this antibiotic drug was developed during the last decades of the Old Republic, and was useful in treating a number of races and conditions. It was considered a broad-spectrum RNA polymerase inhibitor to those in the medical profession. (MBS, MJH)

Specter Squadron

this Alliance starfighter group was stationed at the Renforia base. Their emblem was a solid black square marked with white gridlines. (CCG)

Specter Squadron

this specially-trained squadron of TIE Fighter pilots was assigned to Admiral Thrawn and the Admonitor during its tour of duty in the Unknown Regions. (SWJ11)

Spectrader Ring

an infamous group of outlaws, once led by Andrews Rolo. (RC)

Spectre

one of two Nebulon-B frigates under the command of Lumiya, following the Battle of Endor. (SWG3)

SpecWar

this Imperial military manufacturing facility was attacked by the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. Imperial forces were able to drive off the Alliance fleet. (TIE)

Spee

a planet which is home to a lisping species of reptilioids. (RPG)

Speed Globe

this sport is played with a medium-sized ball which is pliable to the touch but rather heavy. Inside is a small computer system which is programmed to move the ball about to avoid being caught by the members of two opposing teams. Once the speed ball was caught, the team had to line up in a chain and pass the ball from player to player until they could place it in the goal. The other team could try to get the ball out of their hands, and the ball itself continued to try and get away. (GOF9)

Speed Queen

this corvette was one of many ships investigated by Tenel Ka, Lowbacca, and Raynar Thul as possible carriers of a Yuuzhan Vong voxyn, some two years into the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. The ship was attacked and virtually destroyed near Froz, when a Yuuzhan Vong strike force attempted to kill the Jedi Knights aboard the Big Eye. (SBS)

Speeder Bike

small, one-man needle-shaped transports, these are like fast repulsorlift motorcycles. The front of the bike holds the maneuvering systems, while the rear holds the power source. A seat and rider controls are located over the power source. They were built as cheap, quick, personal transports and recreational vehicles, they can be easily adapted to law enforcement and military purposes. (ROTJ, DFR, SWSB, ISB)

Speeder Bike Races (Speed Kills)

this song, written and played by the band Deeply Religious, first appeared on the compilation Emperor of Air and Darkness. It was banned by the Imperial Board of Culture. (GG9)

Speeder Ferry

this repulsorcraft is used to transport multiple air- and landspeeders from one location to another. Primarily used by junkyards and speeder dealers, the speeder ferry slaves the dependent speeders to its navigation and propulsion systems, and moves them all at once. This allows the ferry to transport even non-functional speeders to their next destination. (KT)

Speeder Scooter

a small, repulsorlift transport built by Ubrickian Industries, the speeder scooter is nothing more than a chair with an engine attached to it for propulsion. (SWSB)

Speeder Transport

any large shuttlecraft used to move V-wings. (DE1)

Speedy

this Sullustan starfighter pilot was assigned to Keyan Farlander's squadron. He was called Speedy by the human pilots because they could not pronounce his Sullustan name. (XW)

Spefik

Ranulf Trommer and his TIE Fighter squadron destroyed an anti-orbital ion cannon on this planet. (ROC)

Speizoc

manufacturers of terrestrial scanners and anti-vehicle weapons. (DFR, COJ)

Spek-Man

this near-Human was one of the key members of Alliance sleeper cell V-16, and was one of the few members of the cell personally known to Berren Sid Te'. Spek-Man spoke in a mixture of Basic and droid languages, although most of his speech is only understandable by droids. He had the attention span of a three-year-old Rodian, but was incredibly adept with anything mechanical or droid-related. He supplied much of the sleeper cell with its parts and droids, once a contact has been established. Spek-Man hated the Empire, although his motivations were never revealed. Many believed that the cybernetic arm and leg he wore were the result of an Imperial attack, but this was never proven. (CRO)

Spel, Hamiz

this Imperial agent was a member of the Intelligence Analysis bureau. (SWJ9)

Spell of the Seven Oaths, The

this was one of the most powerful spells that could be used by the shamans of the Ewok people. (SWDB)

Spellsayer

this was the name given to any being who purported to be able to read the future by casting spells aimed at a specific being. Spellsayers gained popularity during the years leading up to the Clone Wars, as beings from all over the galaxy wanted to know if they would survive the upheaval of the Old Republic. Spellsayers could be distinguished in a crowd by the distinctive teardrop-shaped emblem on their clothing. (VD2)

Spelunker Droid

this mining and excavation probe droid was produced by Arakyd during the years leading up to the Clone

Wars. These cylindrical droids moved about on four segmented legs, and were equipped with a wide range of mineral and ore sensing technologies. When a site appeared to be worth mining, the Spelunker drilled a core sample, then placed an explosive charge in the hole for preliminary blasting, opening the hole for larger mining equipment. Many of the Spelunker droids found in use before the Clone Wars were used by the Commerce Guild to mine inhospitable worlds. Later, the Spelunker served as the basis for the so-called chameleon droid used by the Confederacy of Independent Systems. (SWDB)

Spenori

this Zeltron served as the Governor of the Southern Province on Zeltros, during the early years of the New Republic. (GMR1)

Spenori

this was a common name among the Zeltron people. (UANT)

Sponsor Kluub

this Twi'leki slicer was one of the best data decryptors found on Cloud City, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. When the Empire garrisoned the outpost and began cracking down on suspected rebel activity, Sponsor - known to his friends as "Old Spens" - was captured and interrogated before being rescued by a team of Alliance agents. Unfortunately for Kluub, Kal Vorusk had slit his throat in an effort to kill him. The wound, though greivous, failed to kill him instantly, and Kluub was taken by the Alliance agents to Doctor Drase. The agents hoped that Old Spens would recover and help them decode some data given to them by Silver Fur. Kluub managed to survive, and altered the Alliance agent to the fact that Govin Thane knew they were on Cloud City and was waiting to ambush them. (GMR3)

Spenter

an Alliance X-Wing pilot killed in action over M'haeli. (ROC)

Sperin

this planet was located in the Palaquin System of Bajic Sector. (GG11)

Sperinad University

a famous institute of higher learning founded on Esseles. (SWJ8)

Spero

a Ho'Din living in the Southern Underground of Coruscant during the Galactic Civil War. He was a trusted friend of Leia Organa's, and helped her locate Prince Xizor's palace. (SE)

Spet

this Shyriiwook word was used as the prefix to many Wookiee names. It translated into Basic as "famed", "legendary", or "revered", and could be combined with one or more suffixes to form a complete Wookiee name. (GMR10, GCG)

Spetbecca

this Wookiee ran the Great Hoary Mastmot Trading Station on Toola during the early years of the Empire. The Wookiee took in Haaken Baranar, after the free trader was mauled by a snow demon some ten years before the Battle of Yavin, and helped get the big man back to health. However, a group of bounty hunters captured Spetbecca and took him away. Baranar remained on Toola, maintaining the Trading Station in hopes that Spetbecca would return. The Wookiee, however, was not seen again. (SWJ10)

Spetzna

this cellulose-based foodstuff is highly indigestible to those species that have trouble assimilating cellulose. (RM)

SPF 14897

this Mark III bulk transport ship was owned and operated by Santhe Passenger and Freight. It was under the command of Mils Lolinc when the Empire used the transport as bait in a trap set for the Far Orbit. The ship was supposed to be carrying military-grade control modules to Raithal, but when the Far Orbit captured her, the hold was full of stormtroopers and SpecNav forces. (FOP)

SPHA-I

this version of the Self-Propelled Heavy Artillery-Turbolaser tank, developed by the Old Republic to support the Army of the Republic, featured a heavy-duty ion cannon in place of the turbolaser. (SWI64)

SPHA-T

this was the Self-Propelled Heavy Artillery-Turbolaser vehicle designed by Rothana Heavy Engineering, first used by the Old Republic to support the clone troopers of the Army of the Republic in the Battle of Geonosis. They were used to deploy up to twenty troopers in an effort to augment the forces of the Jedi Knights in fighting against Count Dooku's droid armies. Each thirty-four-meter-long SPHA-T stood just over twenty meters tall, had modular weapons emplacements, and could be armed in response to its target. The basic weaponry consisting of a heavy turbolaser cannon and twelve anti-personnel blaster cannons which protected all sides of the vehicle. Instead of using a turret to move the turbolaser cannon into position, the SPHA-T had twelve articulated legs that quickly maneuvered its bulky form into the correct position. The complex system of legs could also move the vehicle at speeds near 35 kilometers per hour. The turbolaser cannon could be replaced with a heavy ion cannon or concussion missile launcher, while the smaller blasters could also be changed out for anti-vehicle laser cannons or grenade launchers. Each SPHA-T required a crew of fifteen troopers to operate, which included ten gunners. Much of the vehicle's interior was given over to the powerful reactor cores which powered the weapons systems. The reactor core caused a good deal of trouble in those battles where the SPHA-T's hull was breached, since the core exploded in a massive fireball that caused huge amounts of collateral damage, often to friendly troops. (VD2, X2, SWDB, WOTC, NEGV)

SPHA-V

this version of the Self-Propelled Heavy Artillery-Turbolaser tank, developed by the Old Republic to support the Army of the Republic, featured a specialized anti-vehicle laser in place of the turbolaser. (SWI64)

Spherical Compass

this ancient star-traveller's tool was used to locate and navigate a starship whenever a navigational computer was unavailable. All directions and locations were based on the assumption that Coruscant's position is (0,0,0). (RF)

Spherical Flame

this was the name given to the sigil of the Trade Federation. Along with the symbol of the garhai, the Spherical Flame represented piety and power. (COD)

Spheroids

this sport gained popularity during the last years of the New Order. Played in a low-gravity arena between two players, Spheroids involved the throwing of spheres into a pre-arranged goal setup. Each player had a command sphere and several throwing spheres. Designed to mimic the workings of the bodies in a solar system, Spheroids required that each player deploy their basic spheres into the arena, then throw their command sphere into the resulting configuration. The more of the opponent's basic spheres that were placed into a goal, the more points a player received. Each player alternated turns, with play changing sides whenever a goal was missed. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, black holes and other phenomena were introduced into the game, giving a more random configuration. (GFT)

Spice

a controlled substance which has certain addictive properties. The primary source of spice are the Spice Mines of Kessel, which produces a spice known as glitterstim. Another kind of spice is called ryll, and is mined on Ryloth. Both have medicinal value as well as their recreational purposes. Ryll is a very dangerous form of spice. (SW, JS, COTF, SWSB)

Spice Blades

this was the name used by Lord Cassius Nolah Rha's personal guards. (SWJ2)

Spice Collective

this was the name given to the loose confederation of spice harvesters who worked on the moon of Rori during the Galactic Civil War. (GQRG)

Spice Eel

a thirty-meter-long creature native to the spice mines of Sevarcos, spice eels lack eyes and must rely on the pressure-sensitive organs in their heads for a sense of direction. These organs also help the spice eel locate its prey. These creatures were hunted by the natives of Sevarcos for their meat and skins. They were named for the fact that they tend to congregate near open spice mines, attracted by the mining operation more so than the spice itself. (SWJ2)

Spice grub

a creature that generates spice as a byproduct of its digestion. They have a particular affinity for humanoid flesh, and Moruth Doole used one to eliminate the Kessel prison's warden when Doole learned that the warden was working for Jabba the Hutt. He then froze the warden in carbonite. (JS)

Spice Liquor

a potent form of alcohol made from fermented spice extracts. (GG9)

Spice Lords of Sevarcos

this was the name adopted by the leaders of the major criminal empires based on the planet Sevarcos. (SWJ12)

Spice Mine Run

this annual pro-circuit podrace was run on the Mon Gazza Speedway. (RAC)

Spice Mines Avenue

a street in Kessendra. (GDV)

Spice Mines of Kessel

this was the generic term used to describe the spice-mining operations which were established on the planet Kessel. Over the decades, many beings and agencies have claimed ownership of the mines, and during the entire reign of Emperor Palpatine the mines were worked by slave labor. Working in the mines was dangerous, since it had to be done in complete darkness in order to ensure good quality spice harvests. This, coupled with the harsh living conditions and dangerous creatures found in the mines, made being sent to the Spice Mines of Kessel one of the worst punishments a being could receive. (SW, JASB)

Spice Narcosis

a condition experienced by many Sevari who leave their native world of Sevarcos. The atmosphere of Sevarcos is laden with spice particles, and the Sevari have become used to it over time. However, if a Sevari leaves Sevarcos without carrying a supply of spice to breathe, he can enter a state of spice narcosis. (SWJ2)

Spice Shippers' Fellowship

this spacers' guild was based on the planet Wroona until Imperial forces declared their operation illegal and raided their guild hall. The Fellowship fled Wroona, but failed to maintain its stature. (SWJ9)

Spice Siren

this Old Republic freighter crashed into the Jundland Wastes on Tatooine, near the Pika Oasis, many years before the Galactic Civil War. (IWST)

Spice Spider

another name for the energy spider of Kessel. (JASB)

Spice Terminus

this location defined one end of the Llanic Spice Run. It was here that most of the spice brought into or out of the Outer Rim was processed. (GG9)

Spice Worm

an unusual creature native to the planet Sevarcos. (SWJ12)

Spice, Tamora

this woman was Kitster Banai's second wife, and the mother of his two children, Ji and Elly. Before their marriage, Tamora worked as a bartender for Ulda Banai, serving all manner of drinks at the Mos Espa Swoop Arena. (TG)

Spiceball

this was a modified medical container, about the size of a thermal detonator, that was used to carry spice around. In many cases, the original medical container was shielded to ensure the shelf-life of the drugs or medicine contained within it. This shielding allowed spice users to carry a supply of spice around with them, since they could claim that it was a medical drug inside the ball. (MBS)

Spicebrew

this as a potent form of ale that was brewed with liberal amounts of spice. (MJH)

Spiceflower

this flower was known for his heady scent. (MBS)

Spice-jacker

this was the term used to describe those pirates who illegally obtain spice by hijacking other smugglers and stealing their cargoes. The use of spice-jackers by crimelords increased during the early years of the New Republic. (GG11)

Spicetack

this was a chewable stimulant that was popular during the height of the Clone Wars. (MBS)

Spicewood

a pseudonym used by Ylenic It'kla to describe Nejaa Halcyon, it was based on the man's scent more than anything else. (IJ)

Spicy Lady

this highly-modified YT-1300 light freighter was owned and operated by the smuggler Jarril. He had widened the forward mandibles to accept a full-sized A-Wing fighter. The A-Wing could be remotely-operated from the main ship, and was designed to be an escape ship. Jarril could dump the bulking YT-1300 and flee in the swift A-Wing if captured by the authorities. However, this is not the case, as Jarril once proved. Given the remote operability of the A-Wing, Jarril can remain behind in the freighter, piloting the A-Wing on an escape vector while remaining with his cargo. The A-Wing can later be recovered, if possible. The ship was hijacked by agents of the failed Jedi Dolph, and Jarril was killed. A series of messages implicating Han Solo in the bombing of the New Republic's Senate Assembly Chamber were left in the Spicy Lady's memory banks, and the ship was left adrift. It was discovered by Lando Calrissian, who towed it to Kessel to search through it. The A-Wing had been stolen, and Jarril had been shot in the head, but otherwise the ship was intact. (TNR)

Spid

this was one of the may bounty hunters who tried to capture Quinlan Vos, during the Jedi Purge initiated by Emperor Palpatine. Spid and his companions nearly caught the former Jedi Knight on Socorro, but were thwarted by a young Han Solo, who was searching for a lost treasure. The treasure turned out to be Vos' lightsaber, hidden in the stomach of a sarlacc. (T11)

Spider Clan

this clan of Dathomirian Nightsisters was named for the fact that they lived in a cave that was originally inhabited by gaping spiders. Legends told that the Nightsisters were able to twist many of the smaller gaping spiders to do their bidding, and only the largest of the spiders was able to resist them. (SWGAL)

Spider People

this was one the dominant race of sentients on the planet Ord Cestus, until they were defeated in a great war by the X'Ting. The original Spider People were sometimes referred to as Cestians. After they were relegated to inhabiting the deep caves of the planet, many forgot they even existed. They became little more than "cave spiders" to the Cestians, more of a nuisance than another native race. (HIV, TCD)

Spider Silk Armor

this was a form of body armor that was developed to deflect blaster bolts, yet be exceptionally light. (NEGW)

Spider Tank

see Homing Spider Droid (SWI62)

Spider Walker

this term was used to describe several military vehicles, from the Homing Spider Droid of the Commerce Guild to the MT-AT of the post-Endor Empire. (EGV, LAWS)

Spidercat

bred by the Tasari, these furry insects were used to guard their temples and hordes of Tasar Crystals. Spidercats, which resemble huge arachnids with feline faces, were first created shortly after the planet Tasariq was bombarded by meteors, and they continued to be bred throughout Tasari history. The average spidercat measured two meters in length. (SWJ15)

Spider-rat

a multi-legged rodent. (SHA)

Spider-roach

a large, underground insect native to Coruscant. (DA)

Spiders

this swoop gang was a rival of the Rabid Mynocks, and patrolled a part of the city of Gallisport, on Shesharile 5, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. The Spiders once allied themselves with the Raging Banthas, in an effort to take control of those parts of the city held by the Rabid Mynocks. (SWJ6)

Spider-sponge

native to the deep layers of dirt and rock found on Geonosis, this species of mobile sponge spent its entire life on land, consuming toxic materials in the planet's crust. When the Geonosians began producing droids in immense factories, spider-sponges proliferated in the neighboring rock and caves, feeding on the toxic wastes produced by the factories. (IWE2)

Spidervine

the leaves of this plant were dried and steeped in water to create a soothing tea. (SWJ11)

Spiderwalker

this Charon bio-construct was a grotesque mixture of human and Charon genetic material. It was an ape-like creature with eight legs and a cluster of alarmingly human eyes atop its head. It is extremely agile and strong, and was a formidable opponent during hand-to-hand combat. (OS2)

Spigage

this greenish-blue vegetable was noted for its meaty texture. Chefs often sliced spigage into cutlets which resembled portions of meat. (MJH)

Spike

this man was part of the demolitions team which was sent to Ralltiir by the New Republic to liberate the planet from Imperial control. (HR)

Spike Force

this was the Imperial strike force assembled by Admiral Pellaeon to assist the New Republic in driving the Yuuzhan Vong from the planet Garqi. The squadron was made up of Chiss fighter pilots under the command of Jagged Fel, loaned to Pellaeon's forces by Soontir Fel himself. (DTR)

Spiked Krevol

this species of reptile was native to the planet Naboo. (QQRG)

Spiker

this mentally-disabled member of the Chiss race was one of Jabba the Hutt's swoop gangmembers. Spiker was in the group the Jabba - at Prince Xizor's request - sent after Luke Skywalker on Tatooine. Spiker was recognizable by his long, thin, spike-covered helmet. He also wears purple, spike-covered leather armor that matches his helmet. Spiker was killed while trying to steal Han Solo's frozen form from Boba Fett, when the bounty hunter arrived on Tatooine. A firefight ensued, and Spiker was shot down. Fett, however, was unharmed, for he had placed Zuckuss in Mandalorian armor and sent the Gand out in his place, to draw off an ambush. Spiker was later revived and restored by the B'omarr monks of Jabba's palace, and he met up with the similarly reanimated Big Gizz. They attempted to recover a tape which contained information on the whereabouts of Jabba's hidden escape ship, the Spirit of Jabba, which itself was filled with weapons and supplies. They thought they could become pirates and take control of their own destinies. However, they were forced to crash-land the ship outside of Mos Eisley in order to escape Gorga the Hutt's minions. Spiker and Gizz survived, and made their way back to civilization. (SEC, SSE, TJT, GMR5)

Spilfer

see Spilferithimus-narlamos (SH)

Spilferithimus-narlamos

this young Squib - who prefers to go by the nickname Spilfer - was sent to assist the Alliance in recovering the datapacks stolen by the Elusive. They planned to use a gravity-well projector to pull the ship out of hyperspace, but they had to steal the projector from the Ugors. Spilfer is easily distinguishable by the odd assortment of trinkets and baubles he has attached to his clothing. Among them is a ceremonial Fizz-Pop can, which identifies him as a Squib diplomat. As a diplomat, Spilfer had the authority to sign treaties for the entire Squib race. (SH)

Spilgan

this city, located near the primary spaceport of the planet Hollast VII, was the site of a variety of businesses and warehouses. When Glorga the Hutt was alive, most of the businesses in Spilgan paid protection money to Glorga. (SWJ4)

Spilik

this man served the Empire as a Lieutenant, and was part of the detachment assigned to Commander Karg during his search for Leia Organa. When Karg was shot and killed on Kattada, while trying to force a confession from the Princess, Spilik took command of the remaining Imperial forces and prepared to defend them against the Kattada forces. However, his forces were no match for the band of royal retainers and soldiers who had served Mia Ikova. Spilik's forces were decimated, and Spilik himself was killed in the firefight. The surviving members of his detachment eventually surrendered. (SWEP)

Spill Air

this is racer slang for the super-heated gases that are created by a hot engine. Spill air can be bled off in order to cool the engine or prevent engine fires. (IG1)

Spin

this man was a freelance mercenary and scout, active during the early years of the New Order. He worked often with his good friend, Kaz. (WOTC)

Spin-and-Win

a jingling casino game. (ZHR)

Spinara Plateau

found on the planet Carida, this landmark was the site of an Imperial Military Academy during the height of the New Order. (JASB)

Spinax III

this ocean-covered world is part of the Allied Tion. (ML)

Spinbalio, Gretta

this woman served as the spokeswoman for High Inquisitor Halmere, during the height of the New Order. (SWJ4)

Spinblade

this specially-designed throwing weapon was created by the Vrakolians, and resembled the blade of a circular saw. (TSIA)

Spince, Mako

the son of an Old Republic Senator, Mako never wanted to rush things. He led an aimless life that nearly got on track after the Clone Wars. He knew that he had the talent to make it in the Academy, but he put off applying until he had had enough fun on Corellia. He met Han Solo at the Academy (despite the fact that Solo was ten years younger), and the two became known as pranksters. Mako once tried to blast the seal of the Academy off its mascot moon, but only succeeded in destroying the entire planetoid. He was expelled immediately, and his family cut him off from any inheritance. He used his contacts from the Academy to set himself up as a smuggler, and encountered Solo again after Solo's expulsion from the Academy. They worked for awhile out of Nar Shaddaa, until Han decided to seek his fortune in the galaxy. Mako, meanwhile, had been plying the smuggling lanes of the Ottega System. He wound up on the wrong side of a battle with the Na-Quoit bandits, and was permanently crippled in the battle. He returned to Nar Shaddaa, where he took on work as a traffic controller. When Solo returned, Mako tried to make a quick credit and turned Solo in to Boba Fett, but Solo escaped. When Zasm Katth and Baddon Fass arrived at the spaceport looking for the Millennium Falcon, Spince was forced to work for them. He later spotted the Falcon trying to escape the spaceport and alerted the crew of the Star Destroyer Invincible to their presence. Han did not appreciate the way Spince turned on him, and tried to evade the Invincible's tractor beam by hiding behind the spaceport control tower. The Star Destroyer's tractor beam locked onto the tower, instead of Han's ship, and ripped it from the spaceport. Mako Spince was killed when the disabled Star Destroyer crashed into the surface of Nar Shaddaa and exploded. (DE1, DESB, DE2, RD)

Spin-dizzy

an activity on Vorzyd 5. (CSWEA)

Spindragon

this aging freighter was owned by Sheeka Tull during the last years of the Old Republic. She used the ship primarily as a suborbital transport, moving cargoes across the surface of Ord Cestus. It was help together with anything Sheeka could obtain, but was lovingly maintained and more than spaceworthy. Because the ship made regular runs into all of Ord Cestus' major cities, the Spindragon was unarmed, so as not to pose any threat to the Five Families. (TCD)

Spindrift

this isolated planet was the site of an Imperial outpost, during the period following the Battle fo Hoth. (LTA3, MC60)

Spine Dragon

a creature which is native to the planet Kintan. Like many other creatures on the planet, it evolved from a species which was altered by the intense radiation the coursed through the system as a result of the M'dweshuu Nova. (GG12)

Spine of Lok

this unusual asteroid belt orbited the planet Lok. It was made up almost entirely of obsidian rock, and was often invisible when viewed against the black backdrop of open space. (SWGAL)

Spine Passage

located aboard the Zirtran's Anchor space station, the Spine Passage traversed the entire length of the space station. (SWJ5)

Spine Rat

this large rat was named for the heavy spines that made up much of its fur. Although these spines provided defense against larger predators, they could also be a hindrance. A spine rat cornered in a tunnel or warren could only move in a single direction, as the spines dug into the surrounding walls whenever the rat moved backward. (GMR7)

Spine Seas

this was a collection of bodies of water, located on the planet Goroth Prime, which were surrounded by rocky spires. (GSE)

Spined Snake

this species of predatory reptile was native to the planet Lok. (ROD)

Spined Viper

related to the spined snake, this poisonous reptile was native to the planet Lok. The venom of a spined viper acted on the victim's nervous system, swiftly paralyzing all autonomic bodily functions and causing the victim to suffocate. (ROD)

Spinefish

this species of fish is native to the planet Vodran. (GG12)

Spinner

this race of lupine humanoids was similar in appearance to the Shistavenan, but had thick, pointed quills instead of fur. Native to the planet Worxer, the Spinners were known as warriors which could attack by actually shooting their quills at their targets. When the planet Worxer was destroyed when its star went supernova some 200 years before the Clone Wars, the Spinners were rescued by Old Republic scientists who had been monitoring the star. They were quickly absorbed into galactic society, but their unusual technology and ancient language of Worxi left them separated from many other races. Over the decades, the Spinner population dwindled, and many xenoarchaeologists of the New Republic believed that the Spinner race would soon become extinct. Credence was given to this suspicion when it was discovered that Spinners could only reproduce in the Elrood Sector. (WOTC, MC8, ANT, UANT)

Spinner

this was the Imperial Navy slang term for an Alliance B-Wing starfighter. (SWJ10)

Spinnerpit

this casino game resembled roulette. (MJEH)

Spin-sealing

this process involved subjecting certain gases to intense temperatures and pressures in order to alter its chemical properties. Often, spin-sealing produces gases which intensify the energy of light which pass through them. (GG2)

Spinward Sector

this section of the galaxy is home to the polwocz. (ISB)

Spin-worm

this unusual insect was noted for the glossy, shiny webs it wove. These webs were incredibly strong and durable, despite their fragile appearance. (MBS)

Spiny-collared Toad

this strange amphibian was native to the desert oases of the planet Tatooine. (YDR)

Spira

this planet was located in the Lytton Sector of the galaxy. It had very little axial tilt, so its climate is very stable. It was a lush, tropical world with no natural predators. It was first scanned by Old Republic explorers nearly a thousand years before the Battle of Yavin, and the wealthy citizens of the Core have been coming to Spira for a long time. At one point during the height of the New Order, it was estimated that there were 4,527 luxury hotels available on the planet. Its surface is mostly ocean, broken here and there by chains of islands. Weapons are forbidden on the planet. The average day on Spira lasted about 25 standard hours, and its year encompassed 377 local days. An ancient shipwreck was located west of The Point, a remnant from a time before the planet was first settled. No one knew who owned the ship or why it crashed, but over the years the wreck was salvaged for parts and left as an artificial reef. (SWJ1, SWJ5, NEG5)

Spira Heist

this was the name given to the daring robbery by the criminal known as the Tombat, stealing a wealth of jewels during the annual Spira Regatta Open, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. (SWJ6)

Spira Regatta Open

this annual race took place across the oceans of the planet Spira. At the time of the Battle of Hoth, the Regatta had been run for 345 years. (SWJ1)

Spira Security Police

this was the small police force which patrolled Ataria Island and maintained the peace on the planet Spira. They wore very casual uniforms, as befitted the tourism which maintained the planet's economy, but were nonetheless impeccably dressed. (SWJ1)

Spirador

this planet, the primary world in the Spirador System of the Tandon Sector, was the capital world of the sector and was the seat of Imperial power during there during the Galactic Civil War. The Alliance placed a stealth-shielded probot in the system, which allowed Daelar vuvTertarnnek to relay information to the Alliance. (CRO)

Spiral

this Alliance CR90 Corvette saw duty during the years before the Battle of Yavin. (CCG2)

Spiral Arm

a section of the galaxy. (COJ)

Spiral-class Assault Ship

this needle-shaped craft was developed for use by the Empire during the Galactic Civil War. It was designed to get a boarding party into a ship which resisted being boarded. The pointed nosecone of the Spiral-class ship was loaded with tektonite, which vaporized on collision. This allowed the pilot to ram the needle-shaped ship into the hull of its target, penetrating the hull without injuring the boarding party. Once the ship had penetrated its target, the boarding party exited through the vaporized nosecone. The Spiral-class was considered to be expendable. (BI)

Spiraling Shape

this was one of the many false identities created by Cecil Noone and his band of thieves for the starship Asaari Wind, which they had stolen from Ritinki. (GMR1)

Spire Falcon

this short-winged raptor was native to the planet Coruscant, although many xenobiologists believed that it had evolved far beyond its original appearance. The blunt wings of the spire falcon allowed it to make sharp turns and cuts within the confines of the buildings that studded Coruscant's surface, where the spire falcon hunted for scrap mice. Its mottled gray feathers mimicked the ferrocrete of the buildings, providing the spire falcon with almost perfect camouflage. (YDR)

Spire-hive

this was the term used to describe the tall, rocky spires created by the Geonosians as living spaces. Hidden beneath the spire-hives were immense chambers used for manufacturing and storage. (SWI66)

Spirit of Battle

see Dra'vil (GMR1)

Spirit of Battle

this was the term used to describe the incredibly focused state of combat, into which a member of the Em'lii race could enter when confronted by an enemy. While in the thrall of the Spirit of Battle, an Em'lii gave themselves over to the fight, allowing the course of their struggle to guide their actions. (UANT)

Spirit of Jabba

this was the heavily-armed escape ship Jabba the Hutt hid in Glass Mountain, on Tatooine, in case he ever had to flee from a rival or enemy. It was well-stocked with all the food and drink Hutts like, and was armed with a pair of ion cannons, a number of tractor beams, proton torpedo launchers, and laser cannons. The ship also contained a holographic security system that could detect the presence of beings on the ship and interact with them. It was activated when the beings who stole the ship failed to key in the appropriate code sequence on the main computer. The system, which projected a huge image of Jabba himself, then took control of all ship's systems and took measures to eliminate the thieves. If the proper code sequence was entered, the system would shut down and return control of the ship to the pilot. Spiker and Big Gizz, after being re-animated by the B'omarr monks, activated the system when they stole the Spirit of Jabba from Gorga the Hutt. The ship's atmosphere was then vented, and they feared for their lives until they were intercepted by the Nemphas. They were forced to crash-land the ship near Mos Eisley, but only after dumping out its cargo - which contained several priceless Mendacian funeral urns from the early Krung dynasty. The Spirit of Jabba was left in the desert for scrap. (TJT)

Spirit of Mindor

one of several ships sent by the New Republic to accompany Garm Bel Iblis, Booster Terrik, and the Errant Venture to Yaga Minor, in an attempt to steal a copy of the Caamas Document. (VOF)

Spirit of Tandre

this was the name used by the Kentra to describe a holographic message, recorded by Michael Tandre after he was forced to crash-land on Orellon II. (SWJ2)

Spirit Tree

according to Cularin legend, the Spirit Tree was the largest tree found on the planet. It was said that only a being who was truly in tune with the Force could find its location. (LFCW)

Spirit Tree

the Ewoks rever the Spirit Tree as the first tree to grow in the forests of Endor's Sanctuary Moon. They believe that all life came from this one tree. (ECAR)

Spirited Spirits

this wine and alcohol shop was established by Yves Arsen in the city of Hedrett, on Cularin, during the years surrounding the Battle of Naboo. The shop was best-known for the Double-Dip Outer Rim Rumdrop, a specialty drink made from a variety of liquors. (EOS)

Spirogyra Gelatin

this is a favored appetizer of the Ugor race. (SH)

Spirva Run

this hyperspace route traversed much of Spirva Sector. (SWJ14)

Spit Adder

a small but deadly snake. (SE)

Spite

this Imperial Nebulon-B frigates was destroyed by the Alliance during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XW)

Spiz

this young man was a small-time hoodlum, living in the undercity of Coruscant during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (ZW)

Spleed

meaning "generous", this name was common among Gungan females. (GCG)

Spleed Nukkles

this Gungan was one of the best bongo racers in the city of Otoh Gunga, prior to the Battle of Naboo. She piloted a blue-skinned, broad-bellied, monobubble bongo for most of her racing career. Unfortunately, just before the Battle, she crashed with Neb Neb Goodrow in a practice run for the Bongo Rally, and was unable to compete. She later helped Jar Jar Binks defeat one of Captain Swagg's droids, as the pirate tried to destroy the Lake Umberbool arena to exact revenge on the Gungans. Despite being injured, Spleed Nukkles helped Jar Jar get back to Otoh Gunga. In the years following the Battle of Naboo, Spleed and Neb Neb continued race their bongos, but more often than not they ended in a crash. Whether between themselves or with other racers, Spleed and Neb Neb always managed to survive and race again, a fact that made them popular with young Gungans and new fans across the galaxy. However, it made them less than popular with other racers, who considered them reckless and dangerous. They were briefly suspended from racing following the crash and disappearance of Zak "Squidfella" Quiglee, but redeemed themselves by restoring Boss Nass's old heyblibber and bringing Squidfella in for questioning. (E1A12, GMR4)

Splendid Ap

this deity, not to be outdone by Tilotny, threw itself a shape some time after the Battle of Yavin. It manifested itself as a cone-shape entity with a wide mouth. However, Splendid Ap was not very bright, and had no concept of time. He created a duplicate of himself in the same time as he existed, thus creating multiple images of himself. He found himself in the middle of the spat between Tilotny, Horliss-Horliss, and Cold Danda Sire, in which they solidified the bodily organs of their captives. The captives included Leia Organa and the stormtrooper squadron chasing her. They left Splendid Ap to clean up the bodies, and Splendid Ap returned them to their normal state. However, his ineptness with the concept of time led him to return Leia to her normal time, while teleporting the stormtroopers back 8,000 years. (CSWDW)

Splendor of Yevetha

this Immobilizer-418 Interdictor-class cruiser was refitted by the Yevetha after they took control of the Imperial shipyards in the Koornacht Cluster. Originally known as the Imperator, it was commanded by Tho Voota. (TT)

Splendor Tavern

this seedy tavern was located in the Senate District on Coruscant, during the last decades of the Old Republic. The Tech Raider broker Helb often made deals here, during the last decade of the Old Republic. Because of the amount of blaster fire that occurred on the premises, the lighted letters outside the establishment had been shot out over time. Some four years after the Battle of Naboo, all that remained was "DOR," and many locals simply referred to the tavern as "The Dor." (DH, JQ)

Splinter Fern

this plant thrives in the moist, swampy environments of its native world of Naboo. When dried out, the slender leaves of the fern form hard, needle-like splinters. The Gungans use them for acupuncture and, when crushed into a powder, they are also used as a cooking spice. (GF)

Splinter Shot

this was the name used by New Republic starfighter pilots to describe the way in which an individual ship could overwhelm the dovin basal on a Yuuzhan Vong coralskipper. By using a multitude of low-powered blasts from a ship's weapons, a fighter pilot could force the dovin basal to generate multiple singularities to absorb the energy. With the dovin basal than preoccupied and overworked, the fighter pilot could fire a full-power blast at the heart of the dovin basal, destroying it before it could create a larger singularity. (NJOSB)

Split Infinitive

this was one of the worst holofilms of the Old Republic, produced in the years leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN4)

Splitter of Stones

this Qom Jha was one of the few that had ever gotten into the caverns below the High Tower and seen the Threateners up close. He was assigned by Eater of Fire Creepers to lead Luke Skywalker and Mara Jade to the Tower, along with Keeper of Promises and Builder with Vines, as well as the Qom Qae Child of Winds. After the death of Builder with Vines, Splitter of Stones became the leader of the group, taking them to the High Tower. (VOF)

Split-X

this huge racing enine intake system was designed by Collor Pondrat. The podracer Sebulba mated a pair of Plug-F Mammoths to Split-X intakes to power his pod. The Split-X design combines a ram-air intake with radiators to ensure proper operation of the huge turbine drives. (X1)

Spodan

this Sedrian warrior was a follower of Karak. Spodan was fatally wounded in the battle between Alliance agents and Karak's forces over control of the Golden Sun. (BGS)

Spog

Hideaz Quill-face's alien bounty hunter partner. (DE1)

Spoggick

a lowly alien creature. (JTH)

Spoi

this ice- and methane-covered world is the fifth planet in the Kidron System. (PG3)

Spokesprex

this was a term used on Brentaal and other corporate worlds to describe an individual who served as an executive but also made public appearances to describe corporate policy and activities. (GCG)

Sponge Powder

this was a mild poison created by Amira Nasrabi, from natural materials collected from the sea life of Vaynai's shallow oceans. It caused a being to fall into a deep state of unconsciousness, bordering on a coma, when ingested. (GMR8)

Spongeworm

this unusual, oceanic worm was native to the planet Kamino. It was named for the fact that its body seemed to be a cross between an aquatic annelid and a sea sponge. (MBS)

Spunk

this is a Tahlboorean term which, when translated into Basic, becomes an adjective which describes a being as a "stinking liar." (DRPC)

Spook Crystal

found on the planet Nam Chorios, Spook crystals are a strange form of life that evolved from a mixture of raw crystal and the Force. Also known as tsil, these green and violet stones are unique among the crystalline formations on the planet, and are highly attuned to the Force. When Dzym discovered their ability, he quickly set out to harness the stones' power. He gave some to Loronar Corporation, which was able to develop Centrally Controlled Independent Replicant technology by tuning the crystals with electrical impulses. The crystals could then understand and interpret commands from a remote location and act on those commands. The crystals were used in two primary applications: synthdroids and Needles. When Luke Skywalker discovered the true nature of the Spook crystals, he was able to gain their assistance in stopping Dzym and Seti Ashgad, on the promise that Luke returned all large, functioning Spook crystals back to Nam Chorios. Using the Force, they were able to contact the crystals in the Needle ships and have them destroy the Reliant, just as it docked with one of Admiral Larm's Carrack-class cruisers. (POT) native to the planet Nar Bo Sholla, this poisonous insect was known as an effective tool by assassins and bounty hunters. The crawler was small, measuring just eight centimeters in length, but it injected a powerful poison through its spiked tail. They burrowed in the ground using tiny claws, and lived in hives of up to fifty individuals. They mate whenever possible, laying their eggs in dead prey. Spor crawlers also have value among collectors of rare and exotic creatures, as they were easy to keep and lived for several years in captivity. (COG)

Spor Crawler

Spore

this ancient entity was imprisoned 400 years before the Galactic Civil War in an asteroid by the Ithorians. Spore was a genetic construct of Ithorian botanists, who had hoped to merge the DNA of a vesuvague tree and a Bafforr tree with other material to create a sentient plant. Instead, they created an evil creature which needed more minds to expand its thoughts and work its damage. It could use the minds of almost any living creature to augment its own power, and it was thought that Spore could control several thousand minds at one time. With the help of the Jedi Knights, it still took over 100 years for the Ithorians to capture and neutralize Spore, entombing the entity in an asteroid where it was forced into dormancy by the hard vacuum of space. The Ithorians could not kill Spore, because of their adherence to the Law of Life. When Mining Station Alpha was established on the asteroid to collect minerals, the Ithorians carefully monitored their progress, lest they discovered Spore's tomb. Unfortunately, the tomb was discovered by Hodge and his team shortly after the Battle of Yavin. Spore was released, and the ripples of evil permeated the Force. Emperor Palpatine sent the Dark Jedi Jerec to capture Spore, but the entity had already escaped its prison and hidden itself in the body of the mining chief Hodge. Fandomar was livid with fear, and rushed to escape the asteroid before Spore could infect anyone, but she was too late. She brought Hodge - and Spore - back to Ithor, and Spore attacked the rescue party that came to find them. Black vines snaked out from Hodge's mouth and eyes, entwining the Ithorians and threatening to capture Hoole. Each vine that touched a being infected it immediately, including the Shi'ido Hoole, and Spore raced to infect the Tafanda Bay. Jerec then intercepted Spore on Ithor, and offered it the chance to get off the planet if it would infect the crew of the Vengeance and make them his slaves. Spore agreed, but had no intentions of helping Jerec for very long. Spore tried to capture Tash and Fandomar, but a group of space slugs smashed the Vengeance, dropping her shields and causing it to explode. Spore was split into a thousand small pieces and neutralized in the vacuum of space. (GOF9)

Spore Bomb

this weapon was created by the Ho'Din terrorist Ort Hoogra-D'En as a method for deploying the deadly tamack spores. (ND)

Spore Sickness

this was a common term used to describe any number of illnesses that could be contracted by breathing in the adaptogenic spores of the multitude of fungi that were native to the planet Drongar. The spore sickness was especially common among offworlders, who had not yet adjusted to Drongar's unique environment. For this reason, incoming starships regularly cleaned their ventilation systems before and after arriving at Drongar. In most cases, spore sickness caused damage to the lungs, forcing the body to battle the spores by raising the body temperature to exceptionally high levels, essentially cooking an individual in their own body fluids. Interestingly, the spores were only dangerous when encountered in the atmosphere. At ground levels, the spores appeared to be harmless. (MBS)

Spore Tour

this was a slang term, used by the members of the Agricultural Corps to refer to any examination of a planet's native plant life and its applications in terraforming. (DR)

Spore/B

a biological weapon, Spore/B used Bothan stun spores to disable the respiratory system of any being which inhaled it. Spore/B was launched in a canister projectile, and when inhaled it causes unconsciousness. (ISB, GUN)

Spore-mead

this heady beer was produced on Ord Cestus, from the spores and seeds of various mushrooms and fungus found in the planet's caves. The intoxicating properties of spore-mead had similar effects on humans as well as X'Ting. (TCD)

Sporofor Spetzna

this restaurant, located on the luxury liner Kuari Princess, specializes in spetzna and drapsha dishes. (RM)

Sporran

this small, leather pouch is used as a purse by the Chadra-Fan. (POT)

Spotlight Sloth

a creature native to Dagobah, the spotlight sloth was distinguished by the bioluminescent patches on its chest. It foraged the swamps until it founds flower-fruit succulent, which it illuminated until the plant unfolds its skin. Then, the sloth feasted on the flower-fruit's purple berries, ingesting the fruit whole with its toothless mouth. Yoda discovered that the fur of a dead spotlight sloth could be removed and tanned, then used to create durable rugs. (ISU, AQ, IWST)

Spot-luma

a form of glowrod which produces a small, focused light rather than provide light along its body. (TFNR)

Spot-luma Lum

this local variety of lum was produced on Adarlon, and was popular at The Glow Dome. (WSV)

Spot-On Locator

this device was produced on the planet Coruscant as a way to help visitors return to their residences in case they got lost. These devices were created to be simple for anyone to use, allowing the user to type in their location and a destination to receive instruction for traveling between points. (CCW)

Spots

this clone trooper was part of the platoon dispatched to Pengalan IV, during the early stages of the Clone Wars, to eliminate a Separatist missile facility on the planet. He was given the nickname Mapper by Joram Kithe, who was stranded on the planet with the platoon's survivors after the Separatist sprang a trap. The nickname, given to help Joram communicate with the troopers, was based on the fact that the clone trooper wore a red rag on his head to help keep sweat out of his eyes. The rag was decorated with white spots. It was later revealed to Joram that Spots and his platoon-mates were actually enhanced clones, having been given additional self-reliance and initiative during their development. These enhanced troops were dispatched with observers like Joram, in order to ensure the production of clone troopers was continued. (SWI65)

Spotts TradeChip Company

based on Coruscant during the last decades of the Old Republic, Spotts produced a number of collections of tradechips. The sets consisted mainly of images of sports figures and the stars of stage and holovids, but a set of chips profiling the Jedi Knights was set to debut shortly before the Clone Wars. Spotts met with stern resistance from the Jedi Council, which claimed that the image of the Jedi was not to be taken lightly. (HNN5)

Spotty Conveyor

this Trade Federation garbage scow as en route to planetoid PDC3141-02, with a full load of toxic waste, when it was halted from dumping its deadly cargo by the Old Republic. An injunction against dumping on PDC3141-02 was put in place after scientists from the University of Sanbra discovered microbial life on the barren rock. The Spotty Conveyor lacked enough fuel to bring the entire cargo of toxic waste home, and lacked sufficient shielding to keep the material in its holds. Senator Lott Dod argued that the dumping of waste on PDC3141-02 was probably sustaining the microbes, and that the Spotty Conveyor should be allowed to do its work. (HNN4)

Sprax

this dark furred Nalroni was one of Prince Xizor's vigo's, or one of his closest lieutenants. He was mature and intelligent, with greying fur. Sprax had been recruited into Black Sun as a youth on Celanon, when he was apprenticed to a merchant on Brentaal. Sprax was then tapped to become the leader of the Jatayus Trading Consortium, and made a fortune before "retiring" to work full-time for Black Sun. He eventually became a vigo after developing a wide range of criminal businesses for Black Sun, forming a large conglomeration of smugglers, shipjackers, black marketeers, and corrupt business executives. (SE, SESB, SSR)

Spray

this was the alias used by Odumin to catch his targets off-guard. Spray was a Tynnan collections agent working for Interstellar Collections Limited, and was hired by Vinda and D'rag to repossess the Millennium Falcon and recover the 2,500 credits owed by Han Solo. As Spray, Odumin was able to penetrate the Millennium Falcon and Han Solo's confidences. He tried to break into the Millennium Falcon on his own, but was interrupted by Han. Fiolla later discovered that Spray was involved with the Corporate Sector Authority slavery ring, as they are trying to outrun the pirate ship above Ammuud. He truly revealed himself when Gallandro took control of the Millennium Falcon and gained the upper hand in their struggle. (HSR, SWDB)

Spray Bandage

this form of bandage was used extensively during the Clone Wars. Easy to carry in small aerosol cans, spray bandage was applied directly to a wound. Special chemicals formed an adhesive seal over the wound, while a small dose of bacta mixed into the spray helped to ensure rapid healing. (SHPT)

Sprayfoam

this sprayed foam, developed during the last decades of the Old Republic, could be applied to almost any flooring material to create a dense mat. It was often used in gymnasiums and makeshift fitness centers, and was popular among the troops of the Grand Army of the Republic for creating training facilities in the most remote parts of a planet. Anywhere there was a flat surface, sprayfoam could be applied to create a combat arena for hand-to-hand training. (MBS)

Spraynet

a chemical that is initially liquid in form, it can be expelled through specially-designed tubes to form a net. This net can be aimed at the intended prey. When the spraynet is exposed to the air, it begins to harden. The liquid form is very sticky, and adheres readily to most surfaces, where it then hardens and entraps the prey. It is employed by the Noghri in their Stokhli sticks. (HTTE)

Sprettyn

this Ensign served the Warlord Zsinj aboard the Iron Fist during the early years of the New Republic. A pit crewman, Sprettyn longed to be a starfighter pilot. In his spare time - and sometimes while on duty - Sprettyn would run space battle simulations on his computer terminals, analyzing attacks and defenses. He was so eager to learn to be a pilot that he shirked his normal duties while in the presence of Zsinj himself. Zsinj ordered Sprettyn's commanding officer, General Melvar, to evaluate his abilities as a pilot, then execute him for insubordination. (IF) this is tasty nut which is covered by a hard, outer shell. (SOP)

Sprey

Sprigmelon

a fruit native to the planet Endor. (AT)

Spring Celto

this was a slim vegetable used in many gourmet dishes. (HNN5)

Spring-fruit

this pods of this plant were considered a delicacy. (SWJ11)

Sprint-class Rescue Ship

known as a Med Runner, developed and manufactured by SoroSuub, this 30-meter-long craft was similar in appearance to the Gamma-class assault shuttle. However, it was designed to provide detailed sensor and identification analysis of a ship in space. These life-form sensors allowed a rescue team to get close to a disabled ship and quickly locate any survivors. The Sprint-class was unarmed, requiring an escort in enemy territories, and was crewed by three pilots and five doctors. It could carry up to forty passengers. (TBSB)

Sprite

this small creature lives in the forests of Kashyyyk, feeding on the abundant leaves and vines. (TT)

Sprite

this was the name of a subspace transceiver unit developed by Chedak for use aboard starfighters and other small starships. (EGW)

Sprites

this was the name used by Han Solo to describe the loose affiliation formed by himself, Chewbacca, Amaiza, Jaxxon, Don-Wan Kihotay, and Jimm the Starkiller Kid. He took the name from a joke Amaiza made about Merri being no bigger than a Wodanian wood-sprite. (MC9)

Spritespray

this medium cruiser was part of the task force assigned to the Mon Mothma, during Operation Trinity. (FP)

Spukamas

this was the name given to the common Corellian housecat. Each one of these felines had jet-black fur and golden eyes, and they were exceptionally intelligent and extremely loyal creatures. However, the spukamas was also known for its ability to get into everything, and if not properly trained, a spukamas could chew holes in most plastics and soft metals. These creatures were popular among Corellian pilots, who kept a spukamas onboard their ships to kill off any vermin that managed to gain access to the ship's interior. Individually, a spukamas was a territorial and highly jealous animal, and keeping more than one in a single household was a recipe for disaster. (CCW)

Spukami

this was the word used to describe more than one spukamas. (CCW)

Spuma

this planet was swiftly and brutally suppressed by the Empire's Hell's Hammers, under the command of Colonel Johans. Following the Battle of Endor, the renegade Imperial Harrsk used it as his base of operations. (ISB, COJ)

Spunchina

this planet was famous for its wild, uninhibited orgies. Jabba the Hutt participated in one of these orgies some years before the Battle of Yavin. (JTH)

Spun-fiber

this durable, plastic-like material was used to create cases for delicate objects, such as musical instruments. Spun-fiber was stronger than parallel-strand materials like fiberplast, since it used a continuous fiber during construction, rather than aligning huge numbers of straight pieces. (MBS)

Spun-plast

developed during the last decades of the Old Republic, spun-plast as an extremely durable material that was resistant to many cutting instruments. Even durasteel knives were known to have dulled tried to make a scratch on its surface. Because of this, spun-plast was often molded into protective footwear and body plating. (MJH)

Spunto

one of Cabrool Nuum's bodyguards. (JTH)

Spurch Goa

a birdlike Diollan, Spurch Goa was an investigator for the Imperial Naval Intelligence organization. After absolving Thaffe of a murder he didn't commit, the two became Sector Rangers. They then met up with Dyyz Nataz, and were caught up in an elaborate revenge plan created by Jabba the Hutt. Thaffe was killed in a Gank ambush, but Nataz and Goa escaped. They destroyed Jabba's local palace, and were removed from the Rangers because of the scandal. They hid out on Nar Shaddaa, serving the galaxy as bounty hunters and mercenaries. In his native language, the name Spurch means "brave bug catcher," so he adopted the title of the Warhog. Just before the Galactic Civil War, he was hired by two Chattza Rodians, Thuku and Neesh, to lure Greedo into a life of bounty hunting. They wanted Greedo dead, since he was a Tetsus Rodian, and so they paid Goa to get Greedo into a situation he'd never survive. When Jabba put money on Han Solo's head, Goa urged Greedo on, knowing that Solo was never going to give up without a fight. Although he got paid handsomely when Solo killed Greedo in the Mos Eisley cantina, he was not proud of it. (DE1, DESB, TME)

Spurlick

this man worked at the Separatist base on Antar 4, during the height of the Clone Wars. (J4)

Spydr

this species of large arachnoid had nine powerful legs. They had large abdomens, and wide mouths filled with small, sharp teeth. They lived in caves, clinging to the ceiling until their prey wandered beneath them. The spydr would then drop down from above and trap the prey with a gluey webbing. Many Kubaz, and some Hutts, cooked and ate them in exotic meals. (E1A3, E1A5)

Spy-eye

this was the brand name of Cybot Galactica's AC1 surveillance droid. (EGD)

Spy-eye

this small remote surveillance device resembles a miniature seeker. It travels extremely fast, and is nearly invisible to the naked eye. (CSWEA)

SpyEye Droid

this was a series of surveillance droids produced during the New Order. This may be a reference to the Cybot Galactica AC1 "Spy-Eye" droid. (BI, EGD)

Spy-mike

this is the generic term for any small, undetectable device which can be used to overhear the conversations of another individual. The spy-mike is hidden on the target's body and can transmit for a limited distance. (VOF)

Spyscope

this was a generic term used to describe any surveillance system used to view a nearby area without being discovered. Often composed of a fiber-optic cable for flexibility, the spyscope could be pushed into cracks and crevices to allow the user to see what was happening behind doors or walls. The spyscope could be connected to a small datapad to view what it saw, or it could be connected directly into a soldier's helmet for a heads-up display. (FB)

Spysprite

this miniature holocam was produced by SoroSuub, shortly before the Clone Wars. It was marketed as the perfect home and personal security system. (HNN4)

SQ/one

this was the designation of Cilghal's shuttle, on her homeworld of Calamari. (DA)

Squa Tront

this male Umbaran was dispatched by Black Sun to the planet Drongar, during the height of the Clone Wars, to ensure that the production of bota continued to provide a steady stream to the criminal underworld. Squa Tront arrived on Drongar with Thula, and worked with Kadir to re-establish the pipeline. However, it soon became known that the bota plant was mutating at a rate that would render it useless as a medicinal wonder-drug in a short time. Thus, Kadir's plans changed, and he worked to acquire enough processed bota to return to Black Sun and retire. Squa Tront and Thula had other plans, however. When Kadir entrusted them with obtaining the bota and leaving it at a predetermined location, the two criminals opted to keep the bota for themselves. In its place, they left Kadir with a cargo crate filled with explosives. They hoped to eliminate the Nediji and claim the payment for the bota for themselves. Unknown to both, however, was that Kadir discovered their duplicity, and had set out to hunt them down. (MJH)

Squab

this tiny red star is the primary star in the Squab planetary system, which contains the planet Skor II. (GG4)

Squad Four

this unit of V-Wings was part of the Old Republic defense fleet that protected Coruscant during the Clone Wars. During the First Battle of Coruscant, Squad Four augmented Squad Seven during the attack on the Invisible Hand. (E3N)

Squad Seven

this was the designation of a group of clone commandos assigned to the Open Circle Armada, during the height of the Clone Wars. Squad Seven was led by Commander Cody, and served under the command of Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker. During the mission to Cato Neimoidia, Squad Seven was dispatched to capture Nute Gunray, a mission that they failed to accomplish when Gunray escaped just ahead of them. Many members of the squad were injured or killed in the attempt, and they were forced to regroup quickly in order to pursue Gunray to Charros IV. The squad regrouped for the First Battle of Coruscant, returning to the capital with the two Jedi in order to assist in liberating Chancellor Palpatine. The clones of Squad Seven were chose first for their ability to pilot the ARC-170 starfighter, but they were equally able to handle ground-based missions. (LEV, X3)

Squall

this docile rodent was distinguished by its long ears and bushy tail. Native to the planet Chandrila, the squall population was allowed to evolve on its own, which led to an overpopulation of squalls during the New Order. The free-roaming creatures came into the cities to forage for food, and packs of them often caused traffic jams as they moved along the streets. These creatures were generally regarded as the standard for "cute" pets throughout the Core Worlds, and a thriving - albeit marginally profitable - export business flourished for many years. The business was aided by the fact that squalls were difficult to reproduce off their native Chandrila, but breeding them was a simple operation. The average squall became quite attached to its owner, and it never seemed to give any thought to escaping. In addition to being kept as pets, squalls were also bred for their delicate flesh, which was considered a delicacy by many elite restaurants. To avoid association with the cute pets, they used terms such as "Chandrilan Tendermeat" on their menus instead of "squall". The meat of the squall had a very strong flavor, and often had to be accompanied by thick sauces to help enhance it. For this reason, squall meat was also easy to poison, and many assassins were more than happy to find a target who enjoyed the taste. (EGP, WOTC, CCW)

Squall Mark IV

this jet-propelled hydrofoil craft was produced by Jerritech during the height of the Galactic Civil War.

Measuring seven meters in length, it could be operated by a single pilot, and could carry up to six passengers and a metric ton of cargo. (SWJ4)

Squall, The

this was the name used by the Royal Imperial Guards to describe the arena in which they trained and fought on the planet Yinchorr. The Squall was a circular platform raised several meters above the ground. It forced opponents to remain within a confined space, lest they fall to their death. (CE)

Squallburger

this was a form of sandwich made from ground squall meat. (WOTC)

Squalls

a demolition expert serving the Alliance, Squalls volunteered for duty as part of Han Solo's Endor assault team. (MTS)

SqualSpinner

this carnival ride is basically a controlled tornado. Brave individuals who wish to experience free-fall can step into the whirling column of air and be borne above a net. The spinning column of air allows patrons to perform somersaults and other acrobatic feats while seemingly suspended in mid-air. (GCQ)

Square of Hierarchy

this open square was located on the planet Coruscant, after it was captured and worldshaped by the Yuuzhan Vong. It was located in what was once the Calocour Heights district. (DW, UF)

Square of Hopeful Redemption

located in Redhaven, on the planet Rhommamool, this was where the Red Knights of Life brought droids for deconstruction. (VP)

Square of Sacrifice

this open square was created on Coruscant - renamed Yuuzhan'tar after the Yuuzhan Vong reshaped the planet in the image of their long-lost homeworld - as a central location where New Republic infidels would be executed as sacrifices to the True Gods. (DW)

Squark

this was a Dug swear word. (RHD)

Squeak

a T'iin-t'iin Dwarf who worked for Big Bunji. He approached Han Solo at the Mos Eisley spaceport, offering Han a job transporting a load of chak-root. However, Han had already booked Luke Skywalker and Obi-Wan Kenobi for transport to Alderaan. (SWR)

Squeaky

this 3PO unit served as Wraith Squadron's quartermaster, as well as a waiter at the Downtime. He was once a protocol droid serving on the Tantive IV, and was sent to the spice mines of Kessel when the ship was captured by Darth Vader. On Kessel, he was programmed to maintain inventory data on the spice processing operation, but longed to be free. Then, one day, he saw his chance to escape, along with a large number of other droids. They boarded a freighter that was to carry a load of spice, in small numbers to avoid suspicion. When they were all aboard, Squeaky re-programmed the freighter's autopilot and told it to fly close to the ground for several kilometers before heading to space and jumping out of the system. However, Squeaky's escape route took them through a series of winding canyons in what would later be known among pilots as the Runaway Droid Ride. They managed to escape the spice mines, and dispersed throughout the galaxy. Squeaky eventually joined the Alliance. Wedge Antilles once said that Squeaky was the most verbally abusive droid he'd ever met, a fact that was displayed when Squeaky accompanied Wedge and Chewbacca on the missions of the Millennium Falsehood. Squeaky and Chewbacca argued over everything, and the droid gave no quarter to the Wookiee. (WS, SOC)

Squealer

this was an ancient nickname for a sonic pistol. (KOTOR)

Squedge Eepsey

this Duros was a cool, observant stoolie who lived in Sahl-Evin, on the planet Jenenma. He once ran afoul of Pal-Nada's criminal organization, and looked for any opportunity to flee Jenenma. Squedge agreed to help a group of freelance operatives meet up with Esm, at the bidding of Orth Maag, in exchange for passage off Jenenma. He eagerly discussed Pal-Nada's operations with the agents, although never mentioning the crimelord by name. (WOA19)

Squeeterfly

this small insect, native to the planet Romin, was considered a nuisance. (JQ8)

Squeeze Bulb

this small container was used to carry liquids during space travel. The drink was contained in a sphere at the bottom of a tall neck, and was forced up the neck by squeezing the sphere. Releasing the sphere drew any remaining liquid back into the sphere. (RP)

Squib

a small alien bipedal race from the planet Skor II, the Squibs are a nomadic race who were forced to roam their homeworld in search of the resources they needed to survive. When a Dorcin trader landed on the planet, the Squib traded him the mineral rights to a frozen waste in return for starship technology. Now the Squibs travel the galaxy looking for junk to salvage. Their bodies are covered in colorful fur which ranges from deep red to brilliant blue, and their fox-like faces have large eyes and tufted ears. They are confident and curious by nature, and love to make things more complicated than they need to be. The Squib negotiation process is a good example: when one party wishes to obtain something from another, they must make the first pitch. If they do not, the controlling party will simply stand by stoically, waiting for the first request. Squibs also revel in haggling, and consider it the highest form of communication. They have been in a salvage war with the Ugors, and are often found trying to claim the same junk before the Ugors can. To a Squib, the only good Ugor is a ripped-off Ugor. The Squib race is ruled by a polyanarchy, which was formed by a group of Squib kings. Each king ruled a tribe of salvagers, and worked with the other kings to ensure salvage rights. Despite their scavenging ways, Squibs also developed a high level of technology, and their tractor beam generators are among the most efficient in the galaxy. Many Squib starships use these tractor beams as weapons, instead of lasers. (GG4, SH)

Squib Merchandising Consortium

this Squib corporation manufactured the reclamation ships used to scour the Paradise sector for salvage. The consortium was originally chartered by the Empire to collect the detritus from space, refurbish it, and resell it. Every Squib born is, by default, an employee of the consortium, and must yield to the commands of its leader, the "Illustrious Chieftain of Junkyards." (SH, GG4)

Squib Polyanarchy

this was the name given to the planetary government of Skor II. (HNN4)

Squib Reclamation

this was the largest of the Squib salvage operations. (SWDB)

Squib Reclamation Ship

this needle-shaped starship was built by the Squibs to assist them in collecting interstellar salvage. Measuring about 50 meters in length, the Squib ships resemble huge B-Wings which have their wings closed. The ships require a crew of twenty, and although there is no space dedicated to passengers, there is always room for paying customers. The reclamation fleet has a standard hyperdrive system, and is armed with 10 tractor beams. The Squibs have the uncanny ability to use the tractors hurl garbage at attackers. They can also pull garbage into position to absorb enemy fire. (SH)

Squib Trade Language

this secret language was developed by the Squib race, for use in negotiating among themselves, or whenever they wanted to discuss a deal without alerting other beings as to their intentions. (TG)

Squibbian

this was the native language of the Squibs. (ANT)

Squibbish

this was the term used by the Squib people to describe themselves. (HNN4)

Squid Head

a derogatory name for a member of the Quarren race. (ROTJ, DA)

Squid Lake

this was one of the most powerful dramas written during the last years of the Old Republic. It was usually performed by aquatic races, as much of the action took place in specialized globes of water held together by spherical gravity fields. (OWS, IS3)

Squidge

this was the name used by the Vindar to describe a race of timid, green-skinned humanoids that were characterized by their long limbs and conical skulls. The Squidge were completely subjugated by Vindar, who took out their aggression on the timid Squidge. Over time, the Squidge were stripped of their culture by the Vindar. (T19)

Squig

this species of fish was native to Naboo. (GCG)

Squig

this was one of the most common Gungan surnames, taking from the father's side of the family. These surnames were not dropped, even after marriage. The name referred to a species of fish that was native to Naboo. (GCG)

Squig

this Jawa was considered a mechanical genius, and worked for Abdi-Badawzi as a technician and repairman. Squig maintained the Twi'lek's fleet of ships, and also worked part-time as a consultant for the Caelli-Mercerd Syndicate. Squig considered it his life's work to ensure that Elias Halbert's starship, the Seldom Different, was always in working order. To that end, Squig was always tinkering with the ship. Squig was also known as a hopeless romantic and a chronic gambler. (SWJ2, BSS)

Squill

one of the galaxy's most reviled vermin, the squill was a monkey-like creature with a toothy beak and pink head-frills. They were known to carry diseases, and were used by the Empire to unleash Bledsoe's disease. The Jawas of Tatooine enjoyed eating the tough, pungent meat of the squill. (CSWEA)

Squin, Hlisk

this man was the proprietor of the Bollin Animal Emporium during the era of the Battle of Naboo. Despite his outward appearance as a zookeeper, Squin was actually fence for many of the pirates and smugglers who worked in the Cularin System's asteroid belt. Hlisk once trafficked slaves for Riboga the Hutt, but managed to avoid being discovered when Nirama took over the Hutt's operations. (LFC)

Squint

this is Alliance fighter pilot slang for a TIE Interceptor. Erisi Dlarit also called it a "wince." (XWWP, BW)

Squire

this was the brand name of House Paramexor's armorer droid. They were similar in function to the AD-series droid. (GG10)

Squir-mite

this was a tiny insect that was native to the deserts of Tatooine. (BF5)

Squishmael

this diminutive, tadpole-shaped Sloogarian claimed to have been one of the few beings present when Han Solo won the Millennium Falcon from Lando Calrissian. He also claimed that he tried to talk Han Solo out of making the Kessel Run. Squishmael was, of course, an alias used to protect his true identity. He was always willing to tell his tale, for the price of a drink or two at the local cantina. Of course, Squishmael wasn't sure what the Kessel Run actually was, until Marshak explained that the Kessel Run was a smuggler's mission to obtain rare Kessel Birds from the Aeneid System. Squishmael would later explain that Marshak and Lando had been playing an expensive joke on young Solo, as part of Lando's revenge for losing the Millennium Falcon. (T16)

Squnn

this surname was common among the Sullustan race, and meant "mechanic" in the Sullustan language. (GCG)

Squollyhawlk

this immense, insectile, predatory worm was native to the jungles of Arorlia. It was distinguished by the unusual, face-like pattern of scales on its head, which it used to lure its prey close enough to catch. (T1)

SR Combat Pistol

this was a heavy-duty sidearm produced during the height of the New Order. (GQRG)

SR1105-12,983/CDN-23

this subdirectory within the Open Investigations Database of the Bureau of Ship Services contained information on the allegations charged against Daultay Dofine and the Trade Federation. (SON)

S-R6

this assassin droid, known as Essar, was the automaton singled out to execute Imperial Governor Merno Blask on the planet Trevura, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. S-R6 was created from the skeleton of a standard ASP-series labor droid, allowing the droid to work undercover without being noticed as an assassin. S-R6 was also known for its wealth of knowledge on blaster weapons, and it often related conversations in terms of weaponry. When speaking to other beings, S-R6 was very cordial and friendly, but his constant references to guns sometimes worried people. When it was learned that Governor Blask was importing experimental blasters from Coruscant, S-R6 was interested because of his obsession with guns as well as to determine any potential problems with the assassination attempt. S-R6 managed to obtain some of the new Imperial blasters from a group of freelance agents, who helped him avoid an Imperial ambush and carry out his mission. (WOA14)

Sratt

this was the Coynite word for "promise." According to the En'Tra'Sol, a Coynite's sratt was a sacred thing, and eternally binding. (PG3)

Sreas

this New Republic Navy Captain was in command of the fleet shuttle Tampion when it was pressed into duty to bring Han Solo to the Fifth Battle Group's position near the Koornacht Cluster. After news of Solo's arrival was leaked to the Yevetha, the Yevetha stationed Interdictor cruisers in the Tampion's path and brought it out of hyperspace three hours shy of the fleet. Sreas tried to fight off the Yevetha who ambushed the shuttle, but only succeeded in shooting Solo in the right arm before being killed in the firefight. (SOL)

Sreethyn

the name of one of the ancient Juvex Houses. (COJ)

Sreethyn

captain of the salvage ship The Lucky Find, Sreethyn regularly recovered Imperial garbage, searched it for technology, and sold it on the open market. What he couldn't sell to his normal clientele was eventually sold back to the Empire that dumped it. (ISB)

Sreina

this city, located on the planet Janara III, was razed in an Imperial attack aimed at suspected rebel cells. Matt Turhaya had left his daughter, Alex, with relatives in Sreina just before the attack. Alex was rescued and taken in by Turk Winger. (SWJ7)

Srejtpan

this is the name of the poison exuded by the Hyallp race. (RD)

Sriluur

this planet is the fifth and primary world in the Sriluur System, and is the homeworld of the Weequay race. Located in the Periphery, it also supports a large colony of Houks. It is a harsh, desert world whose only vegetation is concentrated in broken scrublands. The Weequay and Houk had been at war for many years when the Empire moved in and took over the planet, turning it into a staging area for the distribution of raw materials to Kuat Drive Yards' factories. The Alliance worked hard to get the two races to resist the Empire, but no major resistance was launched. One year on Sriluur encompasses 270 standard days. Sriluur gained importance during the Galactic Civil War as the central point along the Sisar Run. Like many worlds in Hutt Space, Sriluur was eventually overrun by the Yuuzhan Vong. The local defenses were no match for the alien invaders, and the population of Sriluur was summarily enslaved. (SWJ6, CRO, EGC, GG12, SSR, FH3, NJOSB)

Sriluurian

this was the name given to the written, spoken, and pheromonal languages of the Weequay people. (SOT)

Sronk

this alien race was a member of the New Republic. Their homeworld was attacked by Grand Admiral Thrawn. (SOP)

Srrn Kanas

this was a noted figure in the history of the Nazzar people. (UANT)

Srrors'tok

this race of bipedal felinoids had an honor-based societal structure, much like Wookiees. Native to the planet Jankok, the Srrors'tok were comfortable in warm climates. However, they were susceptible to cold, and had to wear layers of clothing to survive in frigid climates. Their large heads were dominated by their fanged mouths, and their bodies were covered with short fur. (GG9, AE)

SRT Droid

developed by the Geonosians, this short-range transport droid was a repulsor-equipped automaton that had a main body that was fitted with a wide transport deck. The body was little more than a thick torso, with manipulator arms to move cargo onto and off of the deck. The SRT droid moved about the Geonosian droid factories, shuttling parts and raw materials to their destinations. (IWE2)

SRV/R-1

this was a repulsor-equipped version of the treaded New Republic SRV-1 scout and retrieval vehicle. The craft suffered from a lack of power, since the repulsor was added without augmenting the existing power generators. Thus, when faced with combat, the SRV/R-1 had to either commit itself to the fight or flee. This lack of power also reduced the SRV/R-1's transport capabilities to two metric tons. (SWG2)

SRV-1

this scout and retrieval vehicle was first designed by the New Republic shortly after the Battle of Endor, in an effort to obtain an inexpensive yet rugged vehicle which could be used to scout new locations and deliver and retrieve troops. Military versions of the SRV-1 were armed with a pair of medium blaster cannons mounted on turrets atop the cockpit. The SRV-1 was propelled by a pair of heavy treads, although a repulsor version was produced under the designation SRV/R-1. The SRV-1 required a pilot to operate, and could transport eight troopers and up to three metric tons of cargo in its rear bin. (SWG2)

SRV-1

this was a repulsorlift vehicles used by scout and survey teams to travel across a new landscape and collect samples. (KR)

SS-176.01

this Imperial Survey report was written by Koeg Boorn in the first year of the New Order. It described the primary planets of the Sluis Sector, including Dagobah. (TTSB)

SS-23

this series of sewage spreader droids was produced for use in gardens and nurseries by a corporation on the planet Myrkr during the last decades of the Old Republic. (E1A7)

SS-39

this Telex-Delcor space skiff was basically a rigid frame, to which was attached maneuvering jets and a power core. These vehicles were used at starship repair facilities for light maintenance duties. (OE)

SS-39L

a military version of the Telex-Delcor SS-39 space skiff, the SS-39L was armed with a Kuat Vonak 21-Dx light laser cannon. (OE)

S-s3a

Seinar Fleet System's long range tachyon detection scanner. (SCORE)

SSA-1015

this Trade Federation battle droid was part of the security team dispatched to eliminate Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi, when the Jedi Knights arrived at Naboo. It was given programming that assured it the Jedi could be defeated. This droid was originally to be designated SSA-101, but a mistake in production scheduling pushed it back to 1015. (CCG15)

SSA-306

this Trade Federation battle droid was placed on guard duty in front of Theed Palace, during the Federation's occupation of Naboo. (CCG15)

SSA-719

this Trade Federation battle droid was part of the security forces charged with guarding the Naboo prisoners taken during the blockade of the Naboo System. SSA-719 was programmed to believe that offensive tactics were the best defense in controlling mobs. (CCG15)

Ssach'thirix

this Shatras bounty hunter was known to take only hunts for reptilian sentients, and was extremely effective in his work. Ssach'thirix was also a bitter rival of Kal-tan-shi. In his time, Ssach'thirix was known to have captured many Barabel and Kath members of the Alliance, and was once on the Alliance's most wanted list. Ssach'thirix once tried to capture Alliance Lieutenant Commander Xenon Nnaksta on Pii 3, but was soundly defeated by Alliance reinforcements. (AIR)

Ssamb

this species of large arachnids was created by DarkStryder as protectors and guardians. Resembling large, headless spiders, the Ssamb moved about silently on six legs, and possessed large fangs which they used as weapons. Swarms of Ssamb moved throughout the DarkStryder's fortress, clinging to virtually any surface, and were bred to protect DarkStryder at the cost of their own lives. Anything that threatened DarkStryder was set upon by a swarm of Ssamb, which used their fangs to shred flesh and tissue. There were some 500 Ssamb that guarded DarkStryder's lair alone, and DarkStryder maintained a swarm of 1,000 Ssamb as its personal guard. (E)

SSC-17

this was the callsign of one of the hoverscouts dispatched to locate Han Solo and his wife, Leia Organa Solo, on the planet Tatooine, some four years after the Battle of Endor. The Solos were on the desert planet to recover the Killik Twilight moss-painting, which was also wanted by Grand Admiral Thrawn. SSC-17 was used by the team which had located the Jawa sandcrawler in which Kitster Banai had been transporting the moss-painting, but was abandoned when a group of Sandpeople attacked them. The Solos then borrowed the craft to chase after the Sandpeople. (TG)

SSct

this was the model number of the Santhe/Sienar power generator used on the TIE Tank. (EGV)

SSDS 11-A

this was the designation of an experimental, high-output, Class 3.0 hyperdrive produced by Sienar Design Systems. It was used first in the Sith Infiltrator used by Darth Maul. (X1, IG1)

Sserician Eclipse

located within the area known as Dantooine's Wrath, this was one of the most dangerous sectors of the Dantooine System, as it was regularly patrolled by the Valarians during the New Order. (SWGAL)

S'Shah

this tyrannical monarch ruled the Serp society during the height of the Galactic Civil War. King S'Shah was decidedly pro-Imperial, despite the Serps' natural tendency to side with the Alliance. It was King S'Shah who returned the Serp people to a life of violence, ending a peace which had lasted for several generations. He created the doom-jousts as a way to prove his strength and prowess. He proclaimed that any Serp who could bet him in a doom-joust would immediately be named the new king. However, S'Shah used forbidden technologies to gain an edge over his opponents. Some months after the Battle of Hoth, King S'Shah was challenged by Elglih, but the older Serp was too feeble to fight. Instead, he trained Luke Skywalker to be his champion. King S'Shah, seeing that Luke was in league with cinda Tarheel, accepted the challenge. S'Shah's skills as a jouster were more than a match for Luke's, and only Luke's ability to improvise allowed him to unseat S'Shah. The King agreed to submit to Luke, but pulled a micro-jolt from his robes and tried to kill Luke. Seeing the danger, Elglih used his own weapon to shoot S'Shah dead. (MC64)

Ssi

this deity was the father of the Ssi-ruu species. According to the Ssi-ruuk's sacred tome, the G'nnoch, there were four eggs formed at the creation of the universe. From the first hatched Ssi and P'w'itthki. Ssi's children hatched from the second egg, while P'w'itthki's children hatched from the third egg. The fourth egg was reserved for those descendants who earned a place in the afterlife. Eventually, Ssi was forced to defeat P'w'itthki in combat, but allowed P'w'itthki's hatchlings to live on, serving the children of Ssi for all eternity. This myth describes the beginning of the relationship between the Ssi-ruuk (hatchlings of Ssi) and the P'w'eck (hatchlings of P'w'itthki). (TBSB)

SSIC-S4.2

this was the model number of an internal comlink system produced by SoroSuub. Like most implants, it provided the user with enhanced abilities. When placed within the bones of the skull, it allowed the user to communicate without a hand-held device. (AIR)

Ssiew

this New Republic Navy Captain was in command of the Thunderhead during the second attack on the Yevetha at Doornik-319. His crew managed to defeat an Aramadia-class thrustship, one of the first times the Republic was able to knock out one of the spherical ships. The Thunderhead fell under heavy assault during the Battle of N'zoth and was destroyed. All hands were lost, including Ssiew. (TT) native to the planet Lwhekk, Ssi-Ruu were warm-blooded, reptilian beings covered with scales of various colors. Their blunt, oversized heads ended with a beaked mouth, and their bodies ended with muscular tails. They had clawed hands and feet, and strongly-muscled hind legs. They were blind to the Force, and communicated with each other via a complex series of tweets and whistles. They also have scent tongues which they eject from their nostrils. Each hand has three opposable claws. They all have three eyelids. As a rule, the Ssi-ruu were highly xenophobic, but were more disgusted by other species than afraid of them. There were at least four races of Ssi-ruuk, based on their coloration. They held to a very rigid code of honor, as well as a strict caste system which was based on skin coloration and patterning. Blue Ssi-ruuk were members of the highest caste, and were the politicians and leaders of their society. Gold-skinned Ssi-ruuk were very rare, and were members of the religious caste. Red Ssi-ruuk were generally stronger than their counterparts, and comprised the military caste. The green-scaled Ssi-ruu were workers. Brown-scaled Ssi-ruuk were usually the offspring of mixed or unsuccessful breedings, and were often killed at birth. The Ssi-ruuk were also highly religious, as evidenced by the power of the Conclave in governmental decisions. They feared the possibility of dying away from their homeworld, believing that the soul of an individual who died on another world would be lost forever. Thus, the Ssi-ruuk consecrated every world they wanted to colonize, to ensure there was an afterlife for their souls. Legend held that a Ssi-ruuvi individual would be born with all colors on their scales, a rainbow-scaled individual known as the Keeramak. The birth of the Keeramak would signal the end of the caste system, allowing the weak and oppressed castes to become leaders. However, it was discovered that the Keeramak which was born just prior to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion was not a messiah, but the pawn of a Yuuzhan Vong invasion force that was trying to capture Lwhekk and Bakura, thereby establishing a foothold along the borders of the Unknown Regions. The Ssi-ruuk had been subjugated by the alien invaders, and forced to play their part in the plan. (TB, AE, EGA, FH2)

Ssi-ruu

Ssi-ruu

this word was the singular form of the noun used to describe the Ssi-ruu. (TB)

Ssi-ruuk

this was the plural form of the noun used to describe a group of Ssi-ruu. (TB)

Ssi-ruuvi

this adjective was used to describe things associated with the Ssi-ruuk. (TB)

Ssi-ruuvi

this was the natural language used by the Ssi-ruuk. It consisted of a variety of melodic clicks and whistles, which gave rise to their nickname of Fluties. (EGP, UANT)

Ssi-ruuvi Imperium

the Ssi-ruuk government and all its holdings, the Imperium was led by the Shreeftut. The Imperium was all but eliminated many years before the Battle of Yavin, when the aliens made the mistake of stumbling into Chiss-controlled space. The Chiss, angry that the Ssi-ruuk had dared to attack their colonies, struck back with incredible swiftness. Only the quick flight of the Imperium's core leaders maintained its existence. During the height of the New Order, Emperor Palpatine began negotiating with the Imperium for the use of their entechment technology, but their plans fell through with the New Republic's victory at the Battles of Endor and Bakura. Just prior to the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, it was reported that the Ssi-ruuvi Imperium had been overthrown by the P'weck Emancipation Movement. In fact, the Imperium had been destroyed by the Yuuzhan Vong, as part of their effort to gain a foothold in the Unknown Regions of the galaxy. (TB, TBSB, ANT, FH2)

Ssiskor

this shaman was a member of the starfaring species which discovered the planet Kriekaal, millennia before the Battle of Yavin. Legends maintained by the Krieks say that Ssiskor angered Br'lai, the goddess of the molten oceans, and she made the oceans rise up and swallow the visitors. (SWJ13)

Ssither

a reptiloid race native to the planetoid Jatee, the Ssither had the body of a snake with a scaled, humanoid torso. They resembled cobras with arms, and had a limited form of telepathy that they use to communicate with each other. They were a simple species whose past was marked with bloody warfare. Much of the New Republic's information regarding the Ssither had been investigated and reported by Doctor Soron Hegerty. (SN, FH3)

Ssk Kahorr

this ancient Cha'a was one of the major investors in the mining colony on Goluud Minor. A tall, stocky, orange-skinned reptiloid, Ssk Kahorr was rarely without the companionship of Tk'lokk. When the Goluud Corridor was discovered and proposed to him by the Navigator's Guild, Ssk Kahorr took the chance that it would help him increase profits by making hyperspace travel to and from the mining colony faster. When the Zeta Five was destroyed near Primus Goluud, Ssk Kahorr had Shodon Ko - the Navigator's Guild representative who sold him the Goluud Corridor - executed. Ssk Kahorr also set a group of bounty hunters on the trail of Jori and Gav Daragon. Only the timely intervention of a group of Jedi Knights saved them. However, Ssk Kahorr was able to briefly obtain possession of the Starbreaker 12. During a joyride, the ship was targetted by Naga Sadow, who was on his way to meet the combined forces of the Jedi Knights and the Old Republic. The Starbreaker 12 was destroyed, and Ssk Kahorr was killed. (GAS, FOSE)

Sslamoth

this Selkath worked as a bartender in Ahto City, on his homeworld of Manaan, some 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. (KOTOR)

Ssoh

this was one of the more common names used by Trandoshan hunters. Like most Trandoshan names, it was reserved for males, but could be adopted by those rare females who became hunters. In the Trandoshan language, the name meant "moves stealthily". (GCG)

Ssoh

this Trandoshan boasted to C-3PO and R2-D2 that he was the only Trandoshan ever to defeat Chewbacca in a fight. As a slaver, Ssoh trafficked in Wookiees, selling them to Commander Nyklas and the Empire. He maintained his ship in such a way that rival Wookiee clans were placed in the same space, thereby ensuring that they would fight each other, rather than try to escape. After capturing Chewbacca with the help of Tojjevvuk's clan, Ssoh didn't think anything more than to place him in the hold. However, Chewbacca questioned the value of the infighting among the Wookiees, then staged a daring escape. Chewbacca sought out Ssoh and ripped his limbs off, but the Trandoshan survived. However, the physical effort of regenerating his limbs left him weak, and the limbs grew back thin and atrophied. (C)

Ssorku

this was one of the more common names used by Trandoshan hunters. Like most Trandoshan names, it was reserved for males, but could be adopted by those rare females who became hunters. In the Trandoshan language, the name meant "claws like razors". (GCG)

Ssorku

this Trandoshan mercenary was active during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. He traveled the galaxy in his starship, the Long Scale, and was known to play the kloo horn in many different styles. He was generally regarded as an uninspiring individual, and fancied himself a better being than he actually was. Ssorku was, despite his tough exterior, a music lover, and could discuss and play virtually any popular form of music. He had many contacts in the world of intergalactic music, including the concert promoter Sheffel Nen. When Ssorku was hired to acquire the plans to Nessem Shipyards' quadronic fluxer, Ssorku traveled to Nessem and was delighted to find that Sheffel Nen had hired several popular and emerging musical acts. However, when the plans for the fluxer were stolen before they could be auctioned off, Ssorku was considered a prime suspect. Unfortunately for Ssorku, he actually had stolen the plans, and kept them hidden in his kloo horn case. Ssorku was apprehended at the Starbirth Lounge by a team of Alliance agents, and he was forced to turn over the plans to them. (WOA12)

Ssseeeseetek

this 4,000-year-old Galidyn from the planet Fyodos is the oldest, strongest, and wisest of his kind on the planet. He rules the Galidyn city closest to the Roh tribe of Fyodoi. Ssseeeseetek is old enough to have seen the devastation caused by the Great Cleansing. (PG2)

Ssssk!

this feline humanoid served as Captain Drezzel's chief aide at the Imperial base on Seoul 5, during the months leading up to the Battle of Endor. Ssssk! was a member of a telepathic species which could harm another individual with a telepathic assault that could leave the victim's mind a useless blob of thought. Ssssk! was defeated in combat by Han Solo on Seoul 5, when Han used an ancient Seoulian crystal to deflect the mental attack back at Ssssk!. It was unknown whether Ssssk! escaped the destruction of the Seoulian control center or not. (MC84)

SST-67

this 23.2-meter-long transit shuttle was developed by Republic Sienar Systems during the last decades of the Old Republic. It required only a pilot to operate, and could accommodate up to eighteen passengers and a metric ton of cargo. Because the SST-67 was designed for intra-orbital transport of beings and cargo from the ground to positions in orbit, it lacked a hyperdrive, shields, and weapons systems. The controls of the SST-67 were taken from the discarded plans for a freighter design, and were simple to understand. Access systems were available both from internal and external consoles, allowing for easy maintenance. (GMR1)

Ssty

this two-armed alien race has hands which end in sharp claws. (TNR)

Ssurrg

this was a common name among members of the Trandoshan race. (WOTC, UANT)

Ssurrian

a species of creature native to the planet Dathomir. (CTD)

Ssurussk

this Trandoshan pirate was the leader of the Nebulon Rangers, during the early years of the New Order. (SOG)

Ssuurg

this Trandoshan bounty hunter was active during the last decades of the Old Republic. (SWRPG)

S-Swoop

Ssymik

this member of Leia Organa-Solo's honor guard was killed by the Death Seed plague unleashed by Seti Ashgad and Dzym. He graduated from the New Republic Space Academy. (POT)

ST 321

designation of Darth Vader's personal Lambda-class shuttle. (ROTJ)

ST0-48

this mixicologist droid was once an Imperial medical droid which served Emperor Palpatine on Coruscant. Shortly before the space station Zirtran's Anchor disappeared in the Besberra System, ST0-48 appeared on the station in the employ of Chabak, mixing drinks at Chaba's. After the station reappeared in the Phosphura Belt Nebula, ST0-48 began to speak in gibberish about "endless rows of medical tanks" and other strange things, and many aboard the station believed that some portion of ST0-48's memory had returned to him (SWJ5)

ST-103

this was the identification number of one of the Desert Sands stormtroopers stationed in Mos Eisley, shortly before the Battle of Yavin. He was a member of the dewback patrol, and was also known as a frequent gambler. (JKG)

ST2

this was the designation of Arakyd's concussion missile system. The ST2 missile was a rocket-shaped warhead that was as powerful as a standard proton torpedo. (EGW)

ST-297

this was the callsign of one of the Imperial stormtroopers dispatched to locate Leia Organa Solo and her husband, Han Solo, on the planet Tatooine, during the hunt for the moss-painting Killik Twilight some four years after the Battle of Endor. ST-297 was one of the many troopers who fell for the Solos' story that Leia was Commander Quenton's son. When Leia dropped her electrobinoculars, ST-297 rushed to recover them. He claimed to be one of Quenton's admirers, and Leia played to that by ensuring Quenton would hear of his assistance. In reality, ST-297 had been dispatched by ST-347 to entrap the Solos, and the electrobinoculars he returned to them were wired with a communications bug. In this way, ST-297 helped expose the Solos' deception. (TG)

St2x

this is the designation of an advanced Carbanti targetting computer. (EGV)

ST-347

this was the callsign of one of the Imperial stormtroopers dispatched to locate Leia Organa Solo and her husband, Han Solo, on the planet Tatooine, during the hunt for the moss-painting Killik Twilight some four years after the Battle of Endor. ST-347 actually intercepted the Solos, but was momentarily thrown off by the fact that both were wearing stormtrooper armor, and claimed to be related to Commander Quenton himself. (TG)

ST-4402

this was the identification callsign of one of the Empire's Desert Sands stormtroopers stationed on Tatooine during the search for R2-D2 and C-3PO. (JKG)

ST-636

this was the callsign of one of the Imperial stormtroopers dispatched to locate Leia Organa Solo and her husband, Han Solo, on the planet Tatooine, during the hunt for the moss-painting Killik Twilight some four years after the Battle of Endor. (TG)

ST-789

this was the callsign of one of the Imperial stormtroopers dispatched to locate Leia Organa Solo and her husband, Han Solo, on the planet Tatooine, during the hunt for the moss-painting Killik Twilight some four years after the Battle of Endor. (TG)

ST-90

this stun pistol was produced by BlasTech during the height of the New Order. (GFT)

Staad Armor

developed by Castaan Armory, this form of protective armor was designed for the Twi'leki race. (GUN)

Staarn

this Bothan crime boss established a base of operations on Kidron just before the advent of the New Order. He had just reached adulthood, and found that the life of crime suited him better than politics. He made his fortune dealing with off-world interests, and was known within the High City of Refuge as a dealmaker rather than an "antenna-breaker." (PG3)

Stabattz

this computer slicer was active during the early years of the New Republic, working from a base on Corulag. (GUN)

Stabilizer Gauntlet

developed during the era of the Great Sith War, these stiff gauntlets were formed to prevent the wearer from taking sudden or improper actions when handling volatile materials. These gauntlets were designed to minimize the movement of the wearer, moreso than to protect them against a blast. (KOTOR)

Stabilizer Mask

developed during the era of the Great Sith War, this electrified mask created a barrier for the user's mental activity. By emitting micro-bursts of electricity, the stabilizer mask regulated the mental processes of the user, enhancing the mind's ability to resist telepathic intrusion. These masks were found in great quantities during the Sith War, as beings feared being "possessed" by a Sith warrior. (KOTOR)

Stabman

this was the term used by the human population that lived along the Sea of Jarad, on the planet Tralus, to describe the harpooners who hunted styanax for a living. (CCW)

Stabris

this Alliance agent was the commander of the cell which contained Rixen and Vewin. Stabris also discovered that agent Do'naal was also working for the Empire, and made sure his agents knew about Do'naal's treachery. (SESB)

Stacch isch stralsi?

this question is Illodian for 'Can you speak this language?' (TT)

Stacchati

this was a race of tall, thin-limbed humanoids. (VD)

Stachrini, Eizzam

this man was the Director of the Priole Danna Festival, on Lamuir IV, during the years prior to the Clone Wars. As planets began to secede from the Republic and Separatist terrorist attacks became more prevalent, Stachrini was forced to cancel the Festival in order to maintain its safety and security. (HNN4, HNN5)

Stack, The

this vine-covered building served as the base of operations for the Freedom movement on Bakura, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Structurally, the Stack was quite sound, but much of it was rebuilt to accommodate the needs of Freedom. When their location was discovered, after a Malinza Thanas was allowed to escape from jail with a homing beacon attached to her clothing, the Stack was destroyed in an explosion which killed their pursuers and allowed the members of Freedom to escape. (FH2)

Stacked Deck

this converted Nebulon-B frigate served as the base of operations for the Crimson Aces, during the Galactic Civil War. (GMR9)

Stack-series Radiator

this piece of equipment was a necessary part of a pod racer, since the radiator bled off huge amounts of engine waste-heat during high speeds. The Stack-series is denoted by several models, each with a different number of rows of cooling capacity and efficiency. They range in size from a Stack-1 radiator, with limited heat dispersion capability, to a Stack-6 radiator, which is the most efficient radiator. (RAC)

Sta-Den Eekin

this Klatooine Jedi Master was known for his skill for clouding the mind of large numbers of other beings, a skill which helped him quell mobs and forestall riots. As a participant in the Battle of Geonosis, however, this skill proved of little use to Master Eekin against the droid armies of the Confederacy of Independent Systems. (IWE2)

Staff of Power

this was the bone and feather staff carried by Logray, during his tenure as the shaman of the Bright Tree Village of Ewoks. (VD)

Staffa, Raccyx

this heavy-set man was the planetary governor of Berchest, when Grand Admiral Thrawn rose to power four years after the Battle of Endor. He was unusual as an Imperial governor in that he was at one time a successful smuggler. After his retirement, he took his riches and started dabbling in politics. He retired to Berchest, and soon blackmailed the existing governor into stepping down and naming Staffa as his replacement. Staffa then implemented a regime in which he allowed smugglers to make their runs through Berchest, obtaining "informal taxes" which served to line his own coffers. The remnants of the Empire knew of his actions, but allowed him to continue in order to maintain the informational avenues the smugglers provided them. Staffa was ostensibly loyal to Thrawn, although many suspected that he merely paid lip-service to the Imperials. Staffa maintained many of his former smuggling contacts, including an ongoing relationship with Talon Karrde, to help supply many of the niceties he couldn't obtain through legitimate channels. He tried to keep this relationship a secret, but his chief aid, Fingal, managed to discover it and relay information back to Thrawn. (TLC, TTSB)

Staga

a large, green-colored herd animal native to Ambria, they have shaggy tufts of fur at their shoulders, on an otherwise reptilian body. They have low-slung horns that ring their heads, and thick tails. A population of staga was exported to the planet Taanab, and was raised as a source of food. (TOJ, EGP)

Staganac, Regul

this man worked at the Tallaan Shipyards Orbital Repair Depot, shortly after the Battle of Hoth. He was also an Alliance operative. (TSIA)

Stage Three Torpedo

this warhead was the size of a proton torpedo, but contained trac-reflective particles that break up a tractor beam's strength. (SOP)

Stak

this ancient Quarren surname meant "police warden". Like many Quarren surnames, it could be traced back to the time of the Battle of Ruusan. (GCG)

StakeOut

this song, written and played by the band Starburst, first appeared on a compilation of the same name. (GG9)

Stalgasin Hive

this colony of Geonosians was ruled by Archduke Poggle the Lesser during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. The Stalgasin colony produced immense hordes of battle droids for Count Dooku and the Separatists in one of the few factories which remained active during the last centuries of the Old Republic. The factory used a huge superlaser to melt ores and raw materials, and its entire operation was controlled and performed by droids and advanced automation. Hidden deep within the Hive was an immense war chamber, equipped with sophisticated equipment that allowed the Separatists to monitor every aspect of the Battle of Geonosis, and provided them with enough leadtime that they could anticipate their defeat and put evacuation plans into place. (VD2, SWI66, IWE2)

Stalgis

this man was a Lieutenant with the armed forces of the Imperial Remnant, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. When Luke Skywalker arrived at the Battle of Bastion and earned the respect of the Imperial leaders, Stalgis was assigned as a liaison to Skywalker's team, which was searching for the planet Zonama Sekot. (FH2)

Stalimur Pirates

this notorious pirate gang was active during the height of the New Order. (SWJ10)

Stalker

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was assigned to the Death Squadron fleet serving Darth Vader, subjugating Outer Rim worlds during his search for Alliance bases. Under the command of Akal Zed, it was the ship which launched the Viper probe droid which discovered Echo Base on Hoth. It later was part of the fleet assigned to Moff Andal to patrol Elrood Sector. (CCG3, OE)

Stalker Battle Armor

created by the Salus Corporation, Stalker Battle Armor was individually manufactured for Rodian bounty hunters. (SWJ3)

Stalker Besiioth

this genetically-altered subspecies of Tedellian besiioth was designed to have an enhanced sense of smell, as well as enhanced musculature and stamina. They were sold on the black market to crimelords and others who needed an extra measure of protection. (COG)

Stalker Lizard

this flat-bodied reptile was native to Dantooine. Its purplish-blue scales evolved to match the coloration of the grasses which filled the plains of the planet, allowing it to stalk its prey with great efficiency. Like many reptilian creatures, stalker lizards hunted for their favorite prey, nettars, in the early morning and early evening, avoiding the heat of the day. The average stalker lizard measured more than three meters in length, and moved swiftly across the grasslands on four long legs. The hunt in packs, relying on surprise to bring down their prey. (COG)

Stalker Missile

developed during the Galactic Civil War, this form of projectile used an inboard tracking system to acquire its target. Unlike conventional "smart" missiles, though, the stalker missile could reacquire a target which evaded it. It could keep trying to hit its target until it ran out of fuel. (HAS)

Stalkers

this small-time mercenary outfit was employed by Gennan Var in an effort to capture Nawnum the Hutt during the Galactic Civil War. (IA)

Stalking Moon

this Yuuzhan Vong yorik-stronha scoutship was the first ship sent into the Yag'Dhul System, as part of Nom Anor's plans to subjugate the Givin and use their system as a staging area for a portion of the Yuuzhan Vong fleet. The Stalking Moon was infiltrated by Corran Horn, Anakin Solo, and Tahiri Veila, during their escape from a small Yuuzhan Vong fleet. The ship had been equipped with a biological cloaking device, and was designed to drop into the Yag'Dhul system and scan for New Republic warships in the area. Tahiri was able to communicate with the ship and pilot it toward the Yag'Dhul space station, where the three Jedi were able to reach the Givin commanders and warn them of the impending invasion. (EVR, NJOSB)

Stalking Onsonker

this large, dog-like reptile was supposedly found on a remote world. Its vicious nature meant that it could rarely be exported, and only then if the handler was adept at controlling wild creatures. The onsonker's hide was a mottled purple color, and it had a series of fleshy tendrils running the length of its spine. Three heavy ear-like stalks contained the onsonker's ocular organs. Its huge head was dominated by a toothy maw, and its four legs were studded with three heavy claws. Stalking onsonkers reproduced by generating unusual seeds, much like a plant, which the onsonker placed inside a living host. The seeds then attached themselves to the stomach of the host, and fed on the nutrients they could absorb. Eventually, the infant onsonkers grew large enough to burst from their host, which they greedily consumed as their first meal. (TDV)

Stalnus

this maniacal Riorian was an anomaly of his kind. He would rather settle an argument with a vibroaxe than with calm reasoning. He spent much of his criminal career in the Tendo System, where he managed to elude capture. (WBC)

Stalpaac

this legendary Wookiee Elder rescued the young warrior Urothko from the fire-spirit known as a Graaa'shad. The spirit brought Urothko deep down into the forest, and prepared to kill him. Luckily for Urothko, Stalpaac intervened. Stalpaac shot the spirit with a bowcaster quarrel, then the two Wookiees launched an attack on the spirit. Graaa'shad quickly retreated and fled, screaming that one day it would get revenge. In the aftermath of the battle, Urothko pledged his life to Stalpaac, since the older Wookiee had risked his own life to save him. The story of Urothko's rescue quickly spread to other villages, and the tradition of the Wookiee life-debt was created. (TTSB)

Stalsinek IV

this planet was rumored to be the site of an ancient temple that contained a mysterious fountain. The waters of the fountain were said to cure any disease and heal the more grievous of wounds instantly. However, if the being who drinks from the fountain ever knowingly speaks a falsehood, the effects of the water are immediately revoked. The temple is surrounded by virtually impassable jungle, and it is guarded by a native population of beastly creatures whose friendly nature is only discovered by those who stop to ask. (GMS)

Stalwart

a Victory-class Star Destroyer commanded by Vice Admiral Thrawn, as part of his service to the Empire during the Galactic Civil War. The Stalwart was used to patrol the Newland System. (TIE)

Stalwart

this Majestic-class assault carrier was part of the New Republic's Fifth Battle Group, and participated in the initial blockade of the planet Doornik-319 during the Yevethan Purge. (SOL)

Stalwart

this Nebulon-B escort frigate was part of the small Imperial fleet assigned to Captain Vocis Kenit during his search for the Far Orbit. (FOP)

Stalwart

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was the flagship of the fleet which was under the command of Moff Kurlen Flennic, protecting the planet Yaga Minor during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. After Grand Admiral Gilad Pellaeon returned from the Battle of Bastion alive and well, he retained the Stalwart as his own flagship, refusing to let Moff Flennic use it in a possible coup attempt. Pellaeon then sent the Stalwart to Borosk to lead the defense of the Imperial forces there against the Yuuzhan Vong. As part of Pellaeon's plans, the Stalwart was to take a moderate amount of damage and draw the Yuuzhan Vong forces in closer to the planet. Once the aliens were in position, the Defiant moved in to activate its gravitic amplitude modulator, which had been reprogrammed according to specifications from the Galactic Alliance. The GAM jammed the Yuuzhan Vong yammosk, allowing the Imperials to defeat the aliens and drive them out of the Imperial Remnant's space. (FH1)

Stalwart*-class Light Freighter

designed and produced to compete in the marketplace with the YT-1300, the Stalwart-class freighter measured 19.7 meters in length and could transport up to five passengers and 120 metric tons of cargo. A pilot and co-pilot were required to operate the ship, which was armed with a turret-mounted laser cannon. (PP)

Stam Reath

this young humanoid was training as a Padawan learned under Echuu Shen-Jon during the last years of the Old Republic, when the Clone Wars broke out. They were part of the team that was dispatched to Geonosis to locate Obi-Wan Kenobi. Unfortunately, Stam was killed by Sev'rance Tann during the Battle of Geonosis. Master Shen-Jon then chose Stam's sister, Naat, as his apprentice. (GBC)

Stan

according to a HoloNet comic that appeared sometime during the height of the New Order, Stan was the leader of a group of Jawas who made a comfortable living selling droids to the residents of a settlement known as Dura Mater. Although he could speak Basic just fine, Stan always spoke in jibberish when dealing with the farmers of Dura Mater, to keep them off-balance. As part of a plan to extract even more credits from the hapless farmers, Stan worked with another Jawa known simply as Fred Jawa. Fred claimed to be a "consumer advocate", and explained that Stan had failed to provide full warranties. In this way, the Jawas sold the same droids to the farmers, but also made a profit selling them bogus "extended warranties". (T20)

Stan

this Imperial officer was a guard at the Tol Ado prison facility during the Galactic Civil War. He was in charge of disposing of prisoners who died under interrogation while on the Deathblock. (JH)

Stana

this is the name used by the Myneyrshi to describe the clawbirds native to Wayland. (TTSB)

Stand of Public Expression

located in the major cities of the planet Dordolum, the Stand of Public Expression is an outdoor platform from which the city's inhabitants can speak to audiences about any topic and from any viewpoint without retribution. This history was shattered when Klif and Drend Navett incited a riot on Dordolum, shortly after the Bothans were implicated in the destruction of Caamas. (SOP)

Standard

an older term for the Basic language. (HSE)

Standard Clear Frequencies

during the Old Republic, these broadcast frequencies were reserved for emergency purposes. The Republic maintained and monitored them, for they were especially forbidden for civilian use. The standard clear frequencies were used to transmit civil defense warnings and vital information to comlinks, datapads, and other public facilities. (IG1)

Standard Officers Intelligence Test

this Imperial aptitude test was geared toward identifying potential officers and commanders for the military. The minimum score required to be trained as an officer was 7. Anyone with a score of 6 or below had to submit a Quality of Family Certificate in order to receive a second chance at officer's training. (FC)

Standard Time Unit

this is a measure of time equal to one hour of time on Coruscant. (SLS)

Standard Timepart

the basic unit of time measurement, the standard time part is based on the rotational periods of the planet Coruscant. It has been used since the early time of the Old Republic. It is unclear what a full timepart represents, as some sources list it as a Coruscant day, while other sources list it as something closer to a week. Shield of Lies states that there are 1,400 standard time parts in each Coruscant day. There are sixty seconds in a standard hour, and 24 hours in a standard day. There are five days in a standard week, and seven weeks in a standard month. There are three festival weeks and three holidays, giving the standard year 368 days. (SW, HSR, RPG, SOL)

Standard-4

this is one of the oldest and most durable personal blasters manufactured by Merr-Sonn. (POT)

Standro

meaning "resolute", this was one of the most common names among Rodian males. These names generally described characteristics of historical individuals, and different Rodian clans used up to three names to describe an individual. (GCG)

Standro Jcis

this New Republic starfighter pilot was a member of Rogue Squadron. A Rodian, Standro joined the Rogues in the wake of the Malrev Incident, when several positions in the squadron were left empty. A veteran of thirteen missions, Standro was nonetheless the first of the Republic's pilots killed at the Battle of Brentaal. (XWES, XWFT)

Stang

Alderaanian swear word. (SME, DLS)

Stanner, Mil

this smuggler worked from a base on the Vergesso Base asteroid, and specialized in moving small cargoes of spice and other precious commodities on his modified starship, the Starlight Shifter. (SPG)

Stanz

this young boy worked in the fields with his friend Tenno, on the planet Ceriun, some 1,000 years before the Battle of Endor. When Tenno suggested that they take the Jedi holocron found by Ka'arn and keep it safe until a Jedi could travel to Ceriun to recover it, Stanz was among the group that agreed to help him. They also hoped that, maybe, a Sith might come looking for it, and take them all as apprentices. When the Sith did arrive and simply took the holocron, Tenno explained that they had been trying to ensure he could have it. Anger surged in the Sith, who explained that he needed no one's help before killing Stanz and the others as Tenno's "reward". (T17)

Stanz

this old, Bothan cargo hauler owned the starship Freebird, which he used to transport the settlers of New Brigia from the homeworld of Brigia. In return, the settlers paid Stanz a percentage of the chromite they mined on their new world. Stanz paid them only barest minimum of what the ore was worth, keeping the New Brigians in debt for a number of years. (BTS)

STAP

indicating a single trooper aerial platform, this was the acronym used to describe the repulsorlift platforms used by the Trade Federation's battle droids. The STAP measured two meters tall, and had a foot platform and directional controls which were fitted to the battle droid structure. The basic design was created from an airhook developed by Longspur and Alloi. They were often armed with a pair of laser cannons, and were capable of speeds approaching 400 kilometers per hour. In addition to the standard model of STAP, and heavy-duty model was produced with more powerful laser cannons and missile launchers. These heavy STAPs were not as maneuverable as the base model, and had difficulty navigating rivers and valleys. (SW1, TPM, X1, IG1, BFN, NEGV)

STAP-1

this was the model designation of Baktoid Armor Workshop's Single Trooper Aerial Platform, or STAP. (SON)

Staplarint

this quadripedal beast was introduced to the planet Brosi by Old Republic settlers. They were originally bred as mounts and beasts of burden, but were forgotten when repulsorlift technology became widespread. Modern staplarints have returned to their wild nature, although it was known that members of the Brosin Underground used them as mounts. (AIR)

Star Bantha

this was one of six Imperial bulk freighters assigned to the replenishment fleet which contained the Black Ice. (BI)

Star Breeze II

this Alliance transport was used to carry refugees from Cloud City to Kaliska, shortly before the Battle of Endor. (GMR3)

Star Cab

officially known as Orlean's Star Explorer, the Star Cab was designed at a time when hyperdrives were extremely unreliable. However, even with the advent of the modern hyperdrive, there are a few Star Cabs still in service to this date. At 70 meters in length, this bulbous exploration and scout craft was crewed by a single pilot assisted by a complement of droids. The droids provided the same kinds of support as a modern R2 unit, but were much less advanced. The ship could carry up to eleven passengers and 40 cubic meters of cargo, but also stored up to five years' worth of consumables. This allowed the ship to travel for great periods of time before requiring a refitting. It was also well-armed, with a quartet of blaster cannons, but lacked any shields. (GG8)

Star Chamber

one of the many amusements found on Hologram Fun World, the Star Chamber contained a fully-interactive hologram of the entire galaxy. (GOF4)

Star Chamber

this immense, crystalline structure was the source of power for the Infinite Gates created by the Kwa. Each Gate was guarded by its own Star Chamber, which protected the integrity of the Gate without constant maintenance. One of the largest Star Chambers was found on the planet Dathomir, guarding what appeared to be the master Gate. At its heart, the Star Chamber contained a spherical command module that provided the immense power it controlled. During the last decades of the Old Republic, the Witches of Dathomir discovered the Chamber and tried to get past it, in an effort to escape their captivity. Matriarch Zalem and her clan spent years learning everything they could about the star chamber, and nearly succeeded but for a fail-safe device built into the Chamber. It destroyed the Gate on the planet Ova, subsuming the entire planet and sucking in a nearby starship. The Star Chamber on Dathomir was guarded by a nest of Guardian worms. (SWIE)

Star Chamber Cafe

a section of the Lucky Despot Hotel, the Star Chamber Cafe is also owned by the Whiphid, Lady Valarian. It is a famous restaurant located in Mos Eisley, on Tatooine. (TME, TJP)

Star Child

this was the name used by the Ewoks to describe a legendary being who fell from the stars, landing on the Forest Moon of Endor to help the Ewoks successfully defeat the Duloks. (MDCAR)

Star Courier

this needle-shaped, 26.5-meter-long craft, developed by Republic Sienar Systems during the last decades of the Old Republic, served as the basis for the design of the Sith Infiltrator. (DSSB)

Star Cruiser

Star Defender

a new class of warship developed during the New Republic, it first saw use in the early stages of the battle against the Yuuzhan Vong. (JE)

Star Destroyer

the huge, triangular-shaped warship at the forefront of the Imperial Navy, the Star Destroyer was actually first designed and developed during the last years of the Old Republic. There are four main classes of Star Destroyer: the original Victory-class ships, developed by Rendili StarDrive for the Old Republic; their successor, the Imperator-, Imperial-I and Imperial-II class ships, developed by Kuat Drive Yards for the Empire; the huge Super-I class and Super-II class command ships; and the largest class, the Eclipse-class Star Destroyers. Like all capital ships, they were given names based on phrases and adjectives which described their strength and capabilities, such as Devastator and Agonizer. Luke Skywalker believed that Emperor Palpatine chose names which would also serve as a subconscious reminder to their crews that the ships were essentially the methods by which he corrupted people's souls. Other variants of the Star Destroyer were produced for different mission profiles and governments. The Venator-class and Tector-class ships were produced during the height of the Clone Wars, after the Victory-class vessels proved too small to adequately participate against the droid forces of the Confederacy of Independent Systems. The New Republic also produced several updated versions of the Star Destroyer, although vessels like the Republic-class and Nebula-class Star Destroyers were smaller than their Imperial cousins. Star Forge this mysterious space station was the subject of an intense search by the Old Republic and the Jedi Knights, during the height of the Great Sith War. The Star Forge itself was an immense construct that was built by the Rakata race in orbit around their primary star. The main body of the station was a spherical hull that contained its massive power generation systems. Three long vanes were attached to the sphere's perimeter, and housed personnel and manufacturing facilities. The Star Forge was developed to harness the power of the star for use in generating droids, warships, and weapons for the Rakata. Additionally, the entire station was imbued with the Dark Side of the Force. Although the exact nature of how this happened remains a mystery, the fact was that this inherent power gave the Star Forge a sort of life of its own. It was this intense life that drew Darth Malak and Darth Revan to the Unknown World during the height of the Sith War. They were able to manipulate the Rakata into a position where the Sith took control of the Star Forge, and used it to create huge numbers of Sith starfighters and other weaponry. To augment the power of the Star Forge, Darth Malak used captured Jedi Knights to provide living power for the station's core systems. After Darth Revan was captured by the Old Republic and his mind was wiped clean of his allegiance to the Sith, Revan was able to lead the Republic and the Jedi to the Unknown World and the Star Forge. After an intense battle, the Star Forge was destroyed and Darth Malak was defeated, cutting off a primary source of Sith materiel. (SWDB, KOTOR)

Star Galleon-class Frigate

built by the Kuat Drive Yards in an effort to help transport cargo and defend it at the same time, the Star Galleon is a 300-meter military cargo ship. It is capable of dropping its cargo section, which can fly on its own. It is fairly well-armed, boasting 10 turbolaser batteries and concussion missile launchers, and therefore does not require an escort. The interior of the ship is also equipped with anti-intrusion defenses. The cargo section is equipped with a small hyperdrive that can be activated by the main ship's navcom unit in case of emergency. The Star Galleon is manned by a crew of 150, with room for up to 300 troops. (DFR, ISB)

Star Hammer

this starship was owned by Joa Pqis, and was based out of Vobos. It was identified with New Republic Ship Registry number RN80-440330. (SOL)

Star Home

this was the name of the personal ship used by the Queen Mother of the Hapes Consortium. It was passed from queen mother to queen mother during the 4,000 years leading up to the Battle of Endor. Its design was based on the floorplan to the queen mother's castle, Per'Agthra, on Hapes. Note that the Hapes entries in Planet Hoppers indicate that the Star Home was based on the designs of the Fountain Palace. It was no match for the more modern capital ships, but it was truly unique and impressive in its own way. The basic design appeared to be a castle set upon a huge, five-pronged base formed from black basalt native to Hapes. As ungainly as it looked, Star Home was quite spaceworthy. It measured some 2,500 meters in diameter at the time of Prince Isolder's marriage to Teneniel Djo. The castle atop the ship contained living quarters, dining halls, meeting rooms, and a private hangar bay for the Queen Mother's personal transport ship. It was studded with towers that were capped with crystal domes that provided unlimited views of the stars. The interior of the castle appeared to have been cut from dark stone, and the decorations and adornments were all handcrafted on one of the Hapan worlds. Treasures of unspeakable wealth were proudly displayed in the halls and meeting rooms, having been collected during the 4,000-year existence of Star Home. The base of the castle was filled with Star Home's six Kerts-Bhrg power generators and engine systems. Like the five prong-like arms, the base was also constructed of basalt from Hapes. These basalt structures were very fragile in the vacuum of space, and were heavily protected by shield generators. Twenty-four sublight engines were required to move the ship through realspace; four Froond-class hyperdrive engines were slaved to a single motivator for hyperspatial travel. It was armed with twenty turbolasers, twenty laser cannons, and six tractor beams. Sixty Miy'til starfighters could also be carried in the docking bays, along with numerous shuttles and transports. The crew of the Star Home consisted of 500 engineers, ninety starfighter pilots, fifty officers, and 100 soldiers. (CPL, EGV, CTD, PH)

Star Hotel

found in the capital city of Somin City, on the planet Seltos, it was here that a group of New Republic diplomats stayed while conducting meetings with the new government of Seltos. The government had been set up after the populace overthrew the pro-Imperial rulership some years after the Battle of Endor. The Star has ten floors, with penthouse suites on the top-most floor. (TSK)

Star Jewel

Jabba the Hutt's personal starship, the Star Jewel is a spade-shaped Ubrikkian luxury yacht. Well-shielded and armed with six turbolasers, the Star Jewel is equipped with a Ubrikkian N2 ion engines supported by three T-c40 ion engines. The landing bay carried six Z-95 Headhunters and a pair of shuttles. (THG, EGV)

Star Lady

this highly-modified YT-1300 freighter was owned and operated by Fenig Nabon. Ghitsa Dogder used to kid Fenig that there was a Wookiee-sized bunk on the Star Lady in case Fenig ever got a chance to seduce Han Solo. Fen claimed the bunk was oversized to accommodate Ghitsa's expansive wardrobe. Fen's attention to details included security for the ship. She didn't kid herself about the resourcefulness of pirates or thieves, and installed an Incom 433 security system. Also, she placed in pin in the seam of the main hatch whenever she left the ship. If she returned to find the pin on the ground, she'd know that the ship had been breached. If the pin was moved about three inches, it was a code to indicate that someone wanted to talk to her in person, and was waiting aboard ship. (TFNR, GMR2)

Star Map

this ancient map was believed to have been created by the Rakata race, millennia before the Great Sith War, to provide instructions for locating the Star Forge. The map itself was actually made up of several smaller maps, which needed to be placed together in a certain way to form the overall Star Map. Like the Star Forge, the Star Map and its pieces were imbued with the Dark Side of the Force. The smaller maps were scattered across the galaxy to prevent anyone from locating the Star Forge, but clues eventually led to their discovery on Dantooine, Mana'an, Kashyyyk, and Tatooine. The four pieces were located some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin by Bastila Shan and her fellow Jedi Knights, who were searching for the whereabouts of Darth Malak. (SWDB, KOTOR)

Star Map Room

this vast chamber was located in the Jedi Temple on Coruscant, during the last decades of the Old Republic. It contained a huge holographic map of the known galaxy, which was continually monitored by no less than twelve Jedi who looked for potential trouble areas that might require the Order's intervention. Smaller versions of the Star Map Room were maintained in each of the five spires of the Jedi Temple, for use in training and discussion. Those Jedi Knights who were traveling the galaxy on various missions always transmitted galactic data back to the Star Map Room, so that its displays could be as up-to-date as possible (RF, PJSB)

Star Morning

this Kogus Starliner had a busy, eventful career under several other names before it was purchased by the Fallanassi who lived on the planet Teyr. It had previously been known as the Mandarin, the Pilgrim, and the Congene before being named the Star Morning. They bought the ship when they were preparing to flee the planet. Luke Skywalker, while searching for the Fallanassi with Akanah, discovered its history as well as its whereabouts. It had left the planet Motexx just before the Battle of Endor, bound for Gowdawl with a full load of cargo. It never reached Gowdawl, and was lost for a year before it showed up on Arat Fraca. From there, the ship landed on Darepp, and then visited several colony worlds before it returned to Motexx. Luke discovered it on Vulvarch when they were putting into Atzerri, but Akanah chose not to pursue it. The Star Morning, at that time, was involved in a complex rescue of several Fallanassi and other inhabitants of the Koornacht Cluster which were captured by the Yevetha. With a number of illusions generated by key Fallanassi, it appeared to the Yevetha that their captives were still in the holds of the Pride of Yevetha. In fact, the Star Morning had been able to recover all but the few who remained behind to perpetuate the illusions. Following the Battle of N'zoth, the Star Morning rendezoused with the Intrepid to collect Wailu and Akanah. The Fallanassi had agreed that it was time for them to disappear for awhile, in order to absorb their losses at the hands of the Yevetha and re-evaluate their place in the galaxy. (SOL, TT)

Star of Alderaan

a medal presented by the Alliance for exemplary service to the Alliance, it was designed to commemorate the contributions of Bail Organa and the people of Alderaan. (XW)

Star of Empire

one of the luxury starliners owned by Haj Shipping Lines. It was an ovoid ship nearly 2,000 meters in length, and was laser-painted a brilliant blue. Forty portholes ran along each side, denoting staterooms. (RD, GOF10)

Star of Iskin

this was one of the many tramp freighters which traveled to Coruscant during the Clone Wars, looking for easy credits by transporting refugees and terrified citizens away from the capital planet. Finis Valorum boarded the ship some sixteen months into the Clone Wars, after visiting with Senator Bail Organa and imploring him to fight against the machinations of Chancellor Palpatine. Just after liftoff, the Star of Iskin exploded, killing Valorum and all others aboard. (RDE)

Star of the Tion

this modified YT-1300 was owned by the Alliance cell that worked on the planet Lianna. (ML)

Star Palace

this luxury liner was attacked by Imperial forces, which were led to believe the ship harbored Alliance supports. The entire casino deck was opened to the vacuum of space, and the ship's Captain and a prominent Corellian family were taken into custody. They were never heard from again. (RESB)

Star Quest

this Suwantek TL-1800 light freighter was owned by Tere Metallo. This ship had been never been modified from its stock arrangement, as Metallo was not a mechanic. The Star Quest arrived on Garos IV, and provided a link to information required by Magir Paca and the rebels who were fighting against the Imperial control of the planet, shortly after the Battle of Endor. (SWJ6, SWJ7)

Star Rally

this was the name of a series of races in which starship captains had to travel from one world to another, completing a circuit of several planets. One of the best-known races was the Dahvil-Fodro Hyperspace Promenade. (ND, CRO)

Star Reamer

this Damorian medium transport ship was part of the fleet maintained by CorDuro Shipping, during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Its mission was described as the transport of bacta to various bacta parlors across the galaxy. CorDuro had other plans for the bacta however, having made a deal with the Yuuzhan Vong to turn over the shipment to the aliens for analysis. The Star Reamer was intercepted by Han Solo and the Millennium Falcon, who had been working from information provided to Tessa Sebatyne and Izal Waz, by their Master, Eelysa. (REC)

Star Runner

this was the name of Kea Moll's star cruiser. (DCAR)

Star Saber

an experimental attack ship developed just before the Great Sith War for use by the Old Republic and the Jedi Knights. Designated the XC-01 by Republic Fleet Systems, it was a long, needle-shaped ship with wide wings and twin tailfins. (DLS, PJSB)

Star Sea Flower

this aging, though heavily modified YT-1150 transport was owned and operated by Charza Kwinn during the last decades of the Old Republic. The Priapulid used it to transport various Jedi Knights across the galaxy whenever anonymity was needed. Charza maintained it in order to maintain an environment which catered to his own needs, so much of the ship was filled with water. In the waters, Charza's extended family lived and worked. Whenever a Jedi was traveling with him, though, Charza maintained several rooms aboard the ship which could be modified to the Jedi's particular environmental needs. (RP)

Star Seeder

this Kuat Drive Yards colonization ship was well-known for its durability and capacity. At 250 meters in length and with 3,000 cubic meters of cargo space, the Star Seeder could easily transport up to 800 colonists with little problem. It required a command crew of 26, with 143 crewers or more depending on the size of the expedition. Its deep-bellied cargo section is compartmentalized, allowing the colonists the ability to transport plants, animals, droids, building materials, and other necessities in separate areas adapted to each type of cargo. A small hangar bay contained enough space for a small shuttle, several speeders, and other ground equipment. The ship was shielded, and armed with six turbolaser batteries and a tractor beam projector. It was hyperspace as well as atmosphere capable. (GG8)

Star Shuttle

developed by the Corellian Engineering Corporation during the last decades of the Old Republic, this lozenge-shaped craft was designed to transport large groups of beings safely and luxuriously. The Star Shuttle was popular with the Senators and diplomats of the Old Republic, and was one specially outfitted for use by the Supreme Chancellor. The hull of the craft was shaped like a long hill or mound, with a flat base and a rounded upper section. The engine systems were borrowed from the Republic Cruiser, having the distinguishing triangular configuration. At eighty meters in length, the Star Shuttle had space for up to 200 passengers and 900 metric tons of cargo. These ships were heavily armored, and as diplomatic craft, were unarmed. (WOTC)

Star Slinger

this prototype swoop was developed on Shesharile 5 by Chop Harlison. It combined the chassis of a Mobquet Nebulon-Q racer with the repulsor coils of an Aratech 64-Y Swift 3, and used a combination of Tibanna gas and stabilizers in elevated concentrations to provide added speed and cooling. The Star Slinger was armed with a blaster cannon that was controlled with the targeting systems of a Merr-Sonn PLX-2 missile launcher. (SWJ6)

Star Stalker

this was the name of the starship owned by the Rodian bounty hunter hired by Ranon Djelkh to transport a mole serpent to Tatooine, during the height of the New Order. Djelkh hoped to use the worm in an attempt to assassinate Jabba the Hutt, but the bounty hunter was caught in a sandwhirl upon arrival. The ship crashed into the surface of Tatooine, blocking the entrance to a cave used as a shelter by a group of Sandpeople. The mole serpent escaped, and killed many of the Sandpeople and their banthas when they tried to escape. The ship was badly damaged, but was eventually removed from the cave by a group of smugglers who had befriended A-Zulmun. (SOT)

Star Tours

an intergalactic travel agency, specializing in unique intersystem cruises. (ST)

Star Trader

this was the name of the modified Ghtroc freighter acquired by Lirina Casti, shortly before the Battle of Yavin. Lieutenant Casti was ordered to take the ship and, along with a team of Alliance agents, ambush the Imperial prison ship Caged Animal near Lish V. The plan was to rescue a group of captured Alliance operatives, but Moff Ramier had substituted zero-G stormtroopers for the prisoners. Casti and her team were forced to crashland on Lish V. (FBS)

Star Traveler

this ship was owned and operated by Renna Strego. Strego volunteered the ship to assist in the defense of Nar Shaddaa, during the Imperial attack commanded by Admiral Greelanx. The Star Traveler was dispatched to assist in taking out the initial picket line of Greelanx's formation. (THG)

Star Winds

this dancing lounge was located aboard the Queen of Empire. (RD)

Star Wing

this was the Basic name used by a Duinuogwuin Star Dragon who encountered a team of Alliance agents in Elrood Sector, shortly after the Battle of Yavin. Star Wing's true name was virtually unpronounceable by most humanoid species. Star Wing had been living near the Kuras System, hiding from the Imperial forces which patrolled the sector by staying on the far side of The Drift. He was an explorer, and cared little for the "petty politics" of the galaxy at large. However, he recognized when they impacted his explorations, so he hid behind The Drift. Star Wing tried to cross The Drift, but found he didn't have the stamina to make it. Star Wing was slowly starving to death from lack of oxygen when he encountered the Alliance team, which was searching for the planet Alluvium and the captured Gray Griffins. The Alliance team rigged up a docking port, and provided Star Wing with several minutes of breathing pure oxygen from their stores. The grateful Star Dragon later helped the Alliance team break through the forces of the Scourge pirates, in order to repay his debt. A blast of superheated gas from his stomach knocked out the Impasse, allowing the Alliance ships to leave safely. (OE)

Staraker

this prototype Imperial warship was being built on Foundry during the months surrounding the Battle of Yavin, until it was stolen by Luke Skywalker and Leia Organa. A strike cruiser by design, the Staraker was distinguished by its box-shaped engine section. The perimeter of the engine section was lined with sublight drives, which surrounded the main hyperdrive. The main cockpit was pointed and sleek, and was angled down slightly from the spine of the ship, giving the Staraker an insectile appearance. The Staraker was badly damaged over the planet Alashan, when Luke and Leia were dispatched to the remote world to investigate the loss of an archaeological team. The planet itself fired an energy beam which disabled the Staraker, bringing the ship down. Most of the ship was damaged beyond repair in the crash-landing, before the craft was buried beneath tons of lava. (MCI5)

StarAnvil

produced by Imperial Munitions, the StarAnvil heavy blaster rifle was developed to cause large amounts of damage. However, this ability drained the weapon's power packs quickly, making the StarAnvil a weapon of fear more than firepower. Many weapons experts considered this weapon in the same vein as the BlasTech Longblasters, although the StarAnvil was considered much more accurate and powerful. The original StarAnvil production plant on Cuthbern was quickly annexed by the Empire because of its high quality. (GUN, AEG)

Starboard Broadside Club

this was the main tavern located aboard Omze's Incredible Traveling Starport, and was named in part for its Wookiee bartender, Broadside. It was also named for the fact that it was located on the starboard side of the converted cruiser, and Omze'kehr Kahr often turned his ship so that the windows of the club displayed the splendors of the solar system in which it was currently operating. This gave the patrons of the club a fantastic view of the sun and its planets. (PSPG)

Starbound Misfit

this modified YT-1930 transport was purchased for Lymnori by Talandro Starlyte, as proof of his devotion to her. Starlyte had the ship refitted by Scizzic, and paid for all modifications. The ship was armed with a pair of turret-mounted heavy laser cannons and a concussion missile launcher. (WSV)

Starbreaker 12

this ancient starship was owned and operated by Jori and Gav Daragon. They used it to explore and define new hyperspace routes some 5,000 years before the Battle of Endor. It was a large, strange ship that was constantly in need of repair. After Gav was taken under the wing of Naga Sadow, the Starbreaker 12 was taken by Ssk Kahorr. Unfortunately, Ssk Kahorr was out on a joyride when Naga Sadow's fleet was massing for its battle with the Old Republic. Sadow destroyed the Starbreaker 12, killing Ssk Kahorr and his alien crew. Starbuster Plot the name given to the Sacorrian Triad's plan to use the Corellian planetary repulsors in concert with the huge hyperspace repulsor found inside Centerpoint Station to destroy a series of stars until the New Republic submitted to their demands. The Triad wanted to control the Corellian System, and went to great lengths to achieve their goals. They set up and/or financed rebellions on all five Corellian worlds, including Thrackan Sal-Solo and the Human League. The Triad managed to destroyed two stars before things started to go wrong. The first was that Thrackan Sal-Solo took credit for the plot, and nearly got his hands on the Drallian repulsor. The second was the timely intervention of the Bakuran fleet, coupled with the incredible talents of the Solo children. The fleet defeated the Sacorrian fleet which was trying to defend Centerpoint, while Anakin Solo used his blossoming ability with the Force to fire the Drallian repulsor and deflect the third shot from Centerpoint. Once the Sacorrian fleet was defeated and the weapon controlled, the Triad surrendered. (AS, SC)

Starcat

this was the first and only light freighter in the Starcat-class of ships. It was designed and custom-built by Salem Victory and Dapp Slous, with help from a group of outlaw techs on Nar Shaddaa. Their goal - achieved with a high level of success - was to create a heavily-armed freighter without sacrificing cargo space. The Starcat was the result, armed with a pair of concussion missile launchers and three turret-mounted double laser cannons, while retaining 65 metric tons of cargo space and the ability to transport the pilot, co-pilot, and up to six passengers. (SWJ13)

Starcat-class Freighter

designed and developed by Salem Victory and Dapp Solus, this class of freighter was created with one goal in mind: a heavily-armed freighter which didn't sacrifice cargo space for additional protection. The Starcat, the first and only ship in the series, measured 32.8 meters in length, and was armed with a pair of concussion missile launchers and three turret-mounted, double laser cannons. Starchaser Mk. III

this was an exceptionally fast sublight drive unit, produced by the Corellian Engineering Corporation during the early years of the New Republic. (GMR4)

Starchaser, Darren

this brash young man was the son of Korren Starchaser, and followed in his father's footsteps to become a starfighter pilot for the New Republic. (SWJ6)

Starchaser, Korren

this New Republic Captain was a scout, and was part of the team that stumbled onto the Gulch. Captain Starchaser also wrote a series of articles for reading by new recruits into the Scout Service. Captain Starchaser commanded the Jedi Dreamer during his tenure with the New Republic. Prior to serving as a scout, Starchaser was a noted starfighter pilot with a knack for space travel. He was noted for his non-belief in the Force, and was quoted as saying Luke Skywalker was "a truly fine pilot," but lacked any special skills or powers. (SWJ6, SWJ8)

Starck

this man served the Empire as a Colonel in the Imperial Army, serving under General Veers during the Battle of Hoth. Starck led a group of AT-AT walkers from his own vessel, codenamed Blizzard 4. He hoped to lead the main attack on the Alliance's Echo Base, and tried to beat the rest of his detachment to the Clabburn Range by cutting through the Kerane Valley. However, the other three AT-ATs under his command fell into crevasses, and Starck was forced to wind his way north to regroup with Veers. During the battle itself, the Blizzard 4 walker was sabotaged by Luke Skywalker, who used his lightsaber to open a hole in its belly. He then threw a grenade into the walker, which promptly exploded. Starck and all aboard were killed in the the resulting destruction of Blizzard 4. (IWST)

Starco, Moploogy

this was one of the humorous names Garik Loran used for Lara Notsil, after she was mistaken for Edallia Monotheer by an old man on Coruscant. (SOC)

Starcrash Brigade

an elite Imperial assault team working for the Emperor prior to the Battle of Endor. They were charged with the detonation of a biological weapon on Firrerre, and the destruction of the Firrerreo race. (CS)

Starcrossed

this SoroSuub yacht, a Luxury Cruiser 200, was owned and operated by Captain Heedon during the Galactic Civil War as the only ship in his cruise-liner business. The ship was refitted and decorated to resemble a fantastically beautiful bird. Many of the ship's amenities were unfinished, because Heedon's fortunes dwindled under the Empire's oppression. (SWJ10)

StarCrystal

a Bosph gemstone which is rumored to have mystical properties. (SWJ5)

Stardance

a musical composition played by Miracle Meriko, Stardance was one of the most popular songs in the galaxy during the year leading up to the Clone Wars. (TME, HNN5)

Stardog

the codename of the Alliance team operating on Nar Shaddaa, just before the Galactic Civil War. (TME)

Stardream

this was the alias used by Lando Calrissian for this luxury yacht, the Lady Luck, when he agreed to help get a Jedi strike team "captured" in order to get them closer to the voxyn queen on Myrkr. Posing as Fitzgibbon Lane, Lando claimed to be the captain and owner of the Stardream, and willingly turned the Jedi over to Duman Yaght and the Yuuzhan Vong. (SBS)

Stardust

this cruise ship was originally commissioned as the Asymptotic Approach to Divinity, was was refitted for use as a luxury liner. During an exotic cruise to witness the nova of Ariarch-17, the ship's crew failed to anticipate the shockwave coming from the dying star. The shockwave hit the Stardust and caused catastrophic damage to its artificial gravity system, which resulted in a large number of injuries and a few deaths among the passengers. In the lawsuits and litigation that followed, the cruise company was forced to sell of many of it assets, and the Stardust was sold to Kut-Rate Kruises and renamed the Reasonable Doubt. (YDR)

Stardust Plan

this was the codename of the New Republic's plan to locate the cloaked asteroids deposited in orbit around Coruscant by Grand Admiral Thrawn, some five years after the Battle of Endor. It involved first dispersing dust from a cargo ship's hold into space, then irradiating the dust with negative ions to help track the hidden asteroids. It managed to locate an asteroid on its first attempt, but was deemed to be too slow to be efficient. (TLC)

Starduster

this smuggling ship was owned by Nera Dantels, during the height of the New Order. It was a large, rounded ship that appeared almost organic in shape. (SWED)

Starfarer Diner

a restaurant located on Nar Hekka. (THG)

Starfarer's Club

this upscale bar and entertainment club was located near the spaceport in Quantill City, on the planet Ando, during the height of the Clone Wars. (WOTC)

Starfaring

this Mon Calamari cruiser was supposed lost over the planet Malrev, when a latent bug in its navigational software began randomly transposing the galactic coordinates it was fed. The ship had been carrying a group of Bothan tourists. Rogue Squadron was dispatched to locate the Starfaring, but discovered that the ship was deliberately sabotaged and forced down on Malrev. (XWRR)

Starfeld Industries

manufacturers of a variety of starships, including the Z-10 Seeker. (SS, SWJ5)

Starfight

a coin game often found in casinos and bars. It consists of two curved banks of monitors and controls surrounding two playing stations. A large holotank is positioned in between, in which a starfield is displayed for each player. The players then use simulated starfighters to combat each other to the death in a deepspace battle. (HSE, HSR)

Starfighter Command

the branch of the New Republic responsible for maintaining and coordinating the activities of the Navy's starfighters and their pilots. (TLC)

Starfighter Command

a Star Destroyer's crew responsible for the launching of TIE fighters and shuttles. (DFR)

Starfighters of the Galaxy

this publication produced on a regular basis during the last century of the Old Republic, documented the newest models of space-going vessels being produced in the galaxy. (BF1)

Starfire

this was Kid DXo'In's small freighter. He hired Han Solo - freshly discharged from the Imperial Navy - and Chewbacca to help him crew the ship. (THG)

Starflare

this luxury yacht was owned by Soontir Fel and his wife, Syal Antilles, during their years spent on the planet Csilla. (FH2)

Starflare, Wynssa

this was the stage name of the actress Syal Antilles. She was one of Fusion Holodrama's most popular stars. It was rumored that a billion men had their hearts broken when she married Soontir Fel. (HXW, MBF)

Starflash

this series of holovid adventures were among the most popular ever produced in the Larrin Sector. The show was most popular during the last three years of Imperial occupation of the sector, until the Imperial discovered that the episodic show was actually providing coded messages to the Alliance field agents dispersed throughout the sector. The show's star, J'fe Din, and her production took great pains to ensure that the average viewer was unaware of the show's hidden messages. Many believe that the airing of Starflash helped hasten the downfall of the Empire in the sector, bringing its defeat a year or more earlier than expected. The show was followed by Imperial Truth, a form of docudrama which showed viewers the truth behind the Empire's most evil operations. (HR)

Starfleet

this term was sometimes used to describe the Imperial Navy. (SWR)

StarFlight Lounge

this bar was located in the primary spaceport on the planet Bonadan. (FTD)

Starflower

once native to the planet Ithor, the golden-yellow flowers of this plant were the favored food of stump lizards. These beautiful flowers were diurnal, closing their petals at night. As the sun rose, however, the petals opened in a brilliant display of yellow color. (DK, T)

Starfly

this was a model of starship designed to highly maneuverable, for use in mining asteroid fields. They have small laser cannons and tractor beams, which they use to move asteroids around. The small ships do not have life-support systems, so pilots must wear environment suits. (GOF9)

Starfly One

this was one of three Starfly ships which rescued Fandomar, Hoole, and Tash and Zak Arranda from a space slug while they were searching for ethromite near Mining Station Alpha. It was piloted by Hodge. (GOF9)

StarForge Nebula

this area of the galaxy is a vast expanse of interstellar gas, and is populated by a wealth of newborn stars. It is located in Ado Sector. (FOP)

StarForge Shipyard

this starship construction and repair facility was maintained as part of StarForge Station, deep in the StarForge Nebula. The Shipyard was first established some thirty-three years before the Battle of Yavin by the parents of Chidee Na Maak. (FOP, PP)

StarForge Station

Han Solo, Chewbacca, and Soontir Fel traveled to this station, in an effort to track down the ship used by Leonia Tavira to transport Leia Organa off Eiattu. It was located on the edge of the StarForge Nebula, just inside Imperial space. It was originally created by Muo Glandish, who turned a small personal base into a sprawling metropolis. The station itself is built on an asteroid, had an average population of some 10,000 beings, and was defended by 50 heavy turbolasers. It was considered a shadowport by many, and contained the infamous StarForge Shipyards. Its location in the StarForge Nebula provided it with a measure of security, for the interstellar gases of the nebula effectively jammed all outgoing communication. The asteroid on which the station was experienced a full day every 20 standard hours, and its year encompassed 300 standard days. (XWM, FOP, PP, FTD, SOG)

StarFries

this fried snack was served aboard the Reasonable Doubt during the last years of the Old Republic. (YDR)

Starfruit

this plant, native to the planet Ithor, produced a star-shaped fruit. (E3N)

Starfruit Promenade

located in Revos, on the planet Storinal, it was an extensive roofed patio flanked by flower gardens. It was filled with recliner chairs and the sounds of live music. (WS)

Stargunner, Rikal

this man served as Kaeline Ungasan's bodyguard. Rikal had extensive training in military doctrine and the martial arts. (GMR2)

StarHammer

this was the nickname of Subpro's TL-118 attack ship. (IA)

StarHauler

this was the brand name of Corellian Engineering Corporation's drone barge. There were several different models of StarHauler barges, all using the model number 131. These automated barges could be loaded with a variety of cargoes, depending on their configuration, and often lifted off as a group to take advantage of their combined repulsor-fields to get their bulks off the ground. (EGD)

StarHawk

a speeder bike produced by Ikas-Adno, this fast, sleek bike is extremely popular with younger drivers. It is the best-selling, civilian-use speeder bike in the galaxy. It is a two-seated bike, with 3 kilograms of cargo capacity and a maximum flight ceiling of 10 meters. (SWSB)

Starhawk 2b

this early model of the Ikas-Adno speederbike was five meters in length, and revolutionized the speederbike market. Now, it is badly outdated. (GG7)

Starhook Ten

this starship was owned by Shug Ninx during the early years of the New Republic. It was essentially a modified space truck. Early in Dark Empire II, it is also referred to as Salvager 3. The Essential Guide to Characters describes it as Starhook VII. (DE2, EGC, SWDB)

Star-Hoppers

this term was originally coined by Tri-Nebula Entertainment for their holo-drama Eight for Aduba-3: The Saga of the Star-Hoppers. The "documentary" chronicled the efforts of Han Solo and a band of freedom fighters, who sought to overturn the thuggery of Serji-X Arrogantus and his Cloud Riders. The term "Star-Hoppers" became synonymous with the band of freedom fighters, despite the fact that they had never come up with a name by themselves. The Star-Hoppers included Han Solo, Chewbacca, Jaxxon, Amaiza, Don-Wan Kihotay, Hedji, FE-9Q, and Jimm the Starkiller Kid. (GMR4)

Starhunter Intergalactic Menagerie

a travelling sideshow that operated during the early years of the Empire, it displayed illegally-acquired, rare creatures from across the galaxy. It was owned and operated by Captain Stroon and his first mate, Slarm. (DCAR)

Starjacker

Finhead Stonebone's pirate ship, the Starjacker was a Byblos Drive Yards E-2 asteroid miner. Stonebone had replaced the ship's normal engines with Corellia StarDrive microthrusters, allowing him better control of the miner when he attacked another ship. (TOJ, TOJC)

Starjammer IZX

a massive, swift freight hauler built at the Kuat Drive Yards. (TME)

Stark Commercial Combine

this was the more respectable name of the pirate gang which was formed and led by Iaco Stark. Under Stark's control, the Combine's fleet of warships attacked virtually any supply convoy moving through the Outer Rim Territories some ten years before the Battle of Naboo. The Combine was formed from the ranks of pirates, smugglers, and other illicit spacers, and sold the goods it stole on the black market for an incredible profit. Nevertheless, the Combine sold its goods well below the prices charged by the Trade Federation, earning the Combine a measure of grudging respect from other criminal organizations while attracting the interest of the Galactic Senate and the Jedi Knights. (OWS)

Stark Hyperspace Conflict

this series of bloody battles, better known also as the Stark Hyperspace Wars, took place some ten years prior to the Battle of Naboo. (OSW, COD)

Stark Hyperspace Wars

also known as the Stark Hyperspace Conflict, this series of bloody battles was waged by the Old Republic, with the help of the Jedi Knights, some thirteen years before the Battle of Naboo. This timing comes from the official Star Wars website. Star Wars: The Stark Hyperspace War indicates that the War took place just eight years before the Battle of Naboo. Historians trace the cause of the war to the actions of Iaco Stark, whose brash marketeering had undermined the efforts of the Trade Federation to strangle the Mid and Outer Rim Territories. In the midst of Stark's actions, the Trade Federation and the Xucphra cartel began hoarding supplies of bacta, causing a galaxy-wide shortage while hoping to reap huge profits. Self-styled General Ranulph Tarkin tried to destroy the Stark Commercial Combine by amassing a small warfleet from his supporters in the Old Republic military. He convinced Nute Gunray to tell him that Stark was meeting with representatives of the Old Republic and the Jedi Knights on Troiken, so Tarkin set out to confront him. However, Stark caught wind of Tarkin's plans. He unleashed a navigational computer virus on Tarkin's fleet; some ships flew into the hearts of stars or black holes, some were hopelessly lost, and just a few emerged from hyperspace near Troiken. During the battle, the forces of the Old Republic were devastated after the death of Jedi Master Tyvokka, who was leading them. Tyvokka's apprentice, Plo Koon, rose to the occasion, taking up the mantle of the fallen Master and rallying the Republic's troops for an unlikely and miraculous victory. Note that MedStar I: Battle Surgeons indicates that the Stark Hyperspace Wars took place 5,000 years before the Clone Wars. (COD, OWS, WOTC, MBS)

Stark Memory

this song, performed by Lord Kavad and the Skaalite Orchestra, was one of the galaxy's most popular numbers during the year leading up to the Clone Wars. (HNN5)

Stark Veteran Assembly

this foundation was established by the survivors and families of those killed in the Stark Hyperspace Conflict, to ensure that the Old Republic recognized the need for benefits and requirements of the war's veterans. Shortly before the Clone Wars, the Assembly denounced the peace rallies which were held by Senator Padme' Amidala of Naboo, who said in her speeches that "warfare is the product of cowardice; only the bravest of beings can resolve conflict peacefully." (HNN4)

Stark, Iaco

this charismatic young pirate rose to prominence some ten years before the Battle of Naboo, building a small fleet of starships into a large, well-organized collection of pirates and smugglers known as the Stark Commercial Combine. Under Stark's control, the Combine was charged with ambushing Outer Rim supply convoys for the goods they carried. Stark then sold the stolen goods on the black market for a considerable profit, while still undercutting the prices of the Trade Federation. This brash marketeering earned him the admiration of his fellow criminals, but also earned him the attention of the Old Republic Senate and the Jedi Knights. During an engineered shortage of bacta, Stark's piracy was hailed as heroic by many Outer Rim worlds which were low on bacta supplies. He agreed to meet with representatives from the Trade Federation and the Old Republic, along with four Jedi Knights to serve as mediators, on the Troiken. He managed to preemptively put a halt to the machinations of Nute Gunray and Ranulph Tarkin, as the two had been planning to destroy the Stark Commercial Combine. Instead of being trapped, Stark was able to unleash a navigational computer virus which infected all of the Republic's starships. This action was the opening play in the events which became known as the Stark Hyperspace Wars. The Jedi anticipated Stark's next move, to assassinate anyone who was not a member of the Combine, but Nute Gunray allowed Stark to escape. Stark's forces pushed hard against the meager Republic forces, but were unable to defeat them. Stark's own allies began to doubt his skills and leadership, and eventually they abandoned him. Stark fled Troiken, and eventually became part of the Commerce Guild, serving as a "legitimate" businessman. (OWS, WOTC, SHW)

Stark, Jona T.

the Imperial Senior Master Sergeant in charge of training TIE fighter pilots onboard the Vengeance. He is a tall, well-muscled man. (TIE)

Starkid, Zoltan

this heavy-set, balding man was the Director and Chief Salesman of Millennium Astro-Engineering prior to the Galactic Civil War. It was rumored that he sold the prototype Millennium Falcon to Grand Moff Tarkin, just before it was stolen by Han Solo and Chewbacca. Starkid was later killed when the Alliance raided the Millennium Astro-Engineering plant and destroyed it before it could produce any more starships for the Empire. (CSWDW)

Starkiller, Bendak

this man was a noted duelist who lived on the planet Taris some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. Because of the many deaths he had caused - although some of them were the result of inexperienced challengers - Bendak found himself a wanted man. A significant bounty was placed on his head, and he fled to the remote world of Taris. Bendak often fought in the gladiator arena owned by Ajuur the Hutt, but only when an opponent had beaten all the rest of Ajuur's gladiators. He was finally defeated by one of the Jedi Knights who were on Taris following the destruction of the Endar Spire. (KOTOR)

Starkiller, Pashna

one of the New Republic's foremost military advisors, Starkiller was originally recruited into the fledgling Alliance by Bail Organa. In the wake of the Alliance's victory at the Battle of Endor, Marshall Starkiller retired from active duty, but remained an active member of the New Republic's advisory committee. (DESB, ROE, SWJ15)

Starkiller, Windom

one of Luke's friends at Anchorhead on Tatooine, Windy - as he was known to his friends - was just as rambunctious as Luke. When they were young boys, they got stuck in the desert when they set out after Luke's pet dewback, Huey. They escaped from a krayt dragon only after Ben Kenobi helped them out, bringing the boys back their homes in one piece. (SW, DHP3)

Starknife

this modified Kuat Drive Yards D9 Runner was owned by Black Sun and operated by Kalend Thora. It was armed with a turret-mounter double laser cannons and a proton torpedo launcher. Its previous pilot had been assassinated in an ambush, but Black Sun never discovered the reasons behind the attack. (SSR)

Starlady

this modified Z-10 Seeker was owned by Debret Nightmoon. (SWJ5)

Starlancer Prime

this was the primary pipefighter in the small grouping developed by the New Republic as part of Operation Starlancer. The laser beams emitted by the other three pipefighters merged with Starlancer Prime's lasers, which were pointed at Coruscant. (EL1)

Starlifter

manufactured by Travis Motors, this sixteen-meter-long cargo craft was designed to move heavy crates from one location to the other. Equipped with a heavy-duty lifting claw, the Starlifter could transport a single cargo module weighing up to 75 metric tons. While the cockpit was designed to accommodate a pilot, the Starlifter could also be operated by a droid. (CCW)

Starlight Bank

a bank on Hologram Fun World robbed by Zorba the Hutt, in an attempt to drive the holographic theme park out of business. (QE)

Starlight by Moonlight

this song was played by the music ball given to Elscor Loro by her husband, Throm, on their third anniversary. (XWRS)

Starlight Cloud

this Sullustan starliner made regular cruise trips during the height of the New Order. It was run by SoroSuub's Entertainment Division during this time. Because of the presence of Iona Wince aboard the ship as a steward, Alliance agents often met aboard the liner in order to pass information and make plans for future missions. (CRO)

Starlight Dancers

this dance troupe was active on the planet Taris, during the years leading up to the Great Sith War. (KOTOR)

Starlight Deck

this was one of the luxurious decks found aboard the luxury line Star of Empire. (SFE)

Starlight Freighter

a series of freighter manufactured by Rendilli-Surron, the Starlight series was basically a flying wing. It measured 34 meters in length, and could transport four passengers and up to 50 metric tons of cargo. The cockpit sits at one end of the curved cargo wing, while a blaster cannon is mounted on a turret at the other end. The interior of the ship was quite spartan, with limited living space and no-frills appointments. Despite the limited success of the Starlight freighter, it was the last design produced by the efforts of Rendili and the Surronians. (SS)

Starlight Intruder

Salla Zend's transport ship, the Starlight Intruder was a modified Mobquet medium cargo hauler. She and Shug Ninx built it from parts salvaged from their starship garage on Nar Shaddaa. The Intruder was powered by four military-grade Damorian RX7 ion engines and an old Hutt chariot hyperdrive engine. Added maneuverability was gained by adding four jets to the bottom of the hull. The Starlight Intruder was armed with a pair of medium turbolasers mounted on turrets which can be retracted. Four DuR-4 shield generators protect the ship. When Salla took it out on a run, she always made sure Shug got a cut of the profits. She had to abandon it on Byss when she and Shug fled the wrath of the reborn Emperor Palpatine. Unfortunately, the remaining Imperials sold the ship to the Scavs, who removed the good parts and melted the rest down for slag. (DE1, DESB, DE2, EGV)

Starlight Red

this was the name given to the jury-rigged YT-1300 starship Faceted, after Kaj Nedmak took possession of the ship. It was named in honor of Celia Durasha, and served to replace the Tryan Kajme which was destroyed on Ord Mantell. (SWJ14)

Starlight Red

this was the name of Celia Durasha's personal starship, used during the time she went by the alias of Mistress Crimson. It was armed with a quad laser cannon on the ventral gunmount. (SWJ5)

Starlight Shifter

this modified smuggling ship was owned by Mil Stanner. (SPG)

Starlight Theater

this amphitheater was located on Phyrstal Island, on the planet Abregado-Rae. (ND)

Starlin Warrior

one of several ships sent by the New Republic to accompany Garm Bel Iblis, Booster Terrik, and the Errant Venture to Yaga Minor, in an attempt to steal a copy of the Caamas Document. (VOF)

Starline Cable

this 5-millimeter thick cable is incredibly strong, and is manufactured from synthetic, molecularly-linked fibers. (TA)

Starliner Street

a street in the city of Coronet which runs perpendicular to Volbrick. Han Solo agrees to meet Belindi Kalenda at the corner of the two streets, just after Thrackan Sal-Solo begins his intra-species war on Corellia. (AC)

StarLiners

this was one of the largest passenger lines of Brak Sector, at the height of the New Order. It was owned and operated by Fae Kalena at that time. (FBS)

Starlite Cloud

this Core Star Lines passenger ship regularly made runs between the worlds of the Core. Platt Okeefe booked passage on this ship when she left her homeworld of Brentaal to become a starship pilot. (SESB, PSG)

Starlite Flats

this area of flat sand was located between the Mos Espa Arena and the Waldo Flats, on the planet Tatooine. (IWE1)

Starloft

one of the four continents discovered on Yavin 4 by Lile Gorsek and the Fernandin Scouting Operation. (GG2)

Starlyte Station

this was the name used by Talandro Starlyte for the trading post he created from the old Gateway Space Station. The name was slow to catch on, gaining favor initially with Starlyte's associates. Compared to its days as a military facility, Starlyte Station had deteriorated over the years to a mere shadow of its former appearance. Only essential systems and facilities received any kind of maintenance, and non-essential areas were neglected for months at a time. Much of the original outer plating had been removed for reuse in other parts of the station, giving Starlyte Station a skeletal appearance. The station was armed with five turret-mounted turbolaser batteries. (WSV)

Starlyte, Talandro

this noted fence and black marketeer was most famous for renting the Gateway Space Station from the Empire. Although he made sure that everyone knew his role in creating the outpost - which he renamed Starlyte Station - he was partly at the mercy of the Imperial liaison officer, Arissa Fawn. In order to gain a measure of freedom, Starlyte funneled part of his profits into bribes for Lieutenant Fawn, ensuring a form of cooperation between them. Among the criminal element of the Outer Rim, Starlyte was known as a fence and con artist, and many believed he also dealt in slaves. He claimed to be a native of Coruscant, and showed a great disdain for Corellians. He spent some time working on Cloud City, where he met Scizzic, and was rumored to have done business with Lando Calrissian. (WSV)

Starmaster

this bulk freighter was stationed in geosynchronous orbit above Ryloth, during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. Rol'Waran and his people used the ship as a base for their spice operations. (JE)

Starmite-class Freighter developed by SoroSuub, this small freighter resembled an unstreamlined teardrop. About 20 meters in length, the Starmite-class had a rounded nose, stubby wings, and a thick body that narrowed into a flattened tail section. (THG)

Starpath

a Seinar Fleet Systems astronavigational system used on many later-model Star Destroyers. (IJ)

Starpoint

this New Republic fleet carrier was the flagship of Commodore Poqua's Task Force Gemstone, during the blockade of the Koornacht Cluster during the Black Fleet Crisis. (TT)

Starpoint

located on the Mee'r continent of Draenell's Point, this was the planet's only civilian spaceport. (GMK)

Starport Complex Q-7

located on Nar Hekka, this starport was independently owned by controlled by Tagta the Hutt during the early years of the New Order. (THG)

Starport Street

this is one of the two primary thoroughfares found in the city of Grig. Like most other streets in the city, it is a densely-traveled street on which the locals pay no heed to the laws of traffic, order, or gravity. It has been said that travelling on Starport Streets is harder than flying backwards through an asteroid field. (TA)

Starport Touchdown

this was the main spaceport on Atraken before the Clone Wars devastated the planet. It has been abandoned, and is empty at present. (PG2)

Starpyre, Tann

this aging Imperial served on the Imperial Interim Ruling Council. He was worried about the possibility of Whiphid assassins haunting the Council, in the aftermath of Xandel Carivus' execution of Ch'unukk. (CE2, HCE)

StarRunner

this starship type was developed on Corellia during the height of the New Order. It had only reached the prototype stage when the Battle of Yavin occurred. (OWS)

Starry Ice

one of Talon Kaarde's ships, the Starry Ice was stationed on Myrkr when Grand Admiral Thrawn attacked the smuggler's base there, some five years after the Battle of Endor. The Starry Ice was a modified Action V transport which was armed with three turbolasers. Capable of carrying up to six passengers and 75,000 metric tons of cargo, the ship was crewed by a pilot, a navigator, and three gunners. (HTTE, GMR4)

Stars and Moons

this valuable piece of flatsculpt artwork was swindled from Imperial Moff Ammar by the Sullustan Cunbus Locb. Locb then hid the artwork in a secret compartment aboard his starship, the Distant Wind. Ammar had Locb hunted down and killed, but could not find the Stars and Moons anywhere aboard the ship. In a twist of fate, Ammar put the ship up for auction to recoup the cost of his hunt for Locb, unaware that the flatsculpt still inside. (SS)

Star's Delight

Lai Nootka's Gymsnor-3 freighter, it was captured on Garqi by Prefect Mosh Barris. He hoped to use the contents of the freighter - proton torpedoes and spare X-Wing parts - to lure the local resistance out of hiding. The ship and her cargo were liberated from within Barris' command by Eamon Yzalli, who is better known as Corran Horn, in a daring plan that used Dynba Tesc to pose as Kirtana Loor. (KT, TFE, SWJ7)

Stars' End

the Corporate Sector Authority's penal colony located on Mytus VII, at the outskirts of that planet's solar system, and at the edge of Authority space. It is comprised of a number of protective domes dotting the planetoid's surface, which are connected by tubes and covered walkways rather than tunnels. The domes have various functions: living quarters, barracks, weapons emplacements, and a special chamber where the Authority keeps its enemies in suspended animation. At the center of the complex is a tower which houses the colony's offices. When Han Solo infiltrates the colony, he has Blue Max install an overload spiral in its secondary defense program, as a hedge against anything that might go wrong during the rescue attempt. When Hirken discovered them and tried to detain them, Han was able to disable Hirken's belt control, but that caused the station's power to be rerouted, which intensified the overload spiral. This led to a massive explosion which, when contained by the station's defensive shields, was directed into the planet and blew the colony's central tower into a pseudo-orbit. It lacked sufficient velocity to escape the planetoid's gravitational field, though, and it crashed into the station, destroying the tower and much of the colony. Hirken was murdered in the tower by his wife, and the Security Police that were in the tower died on impact, leaving Stars' End a worthless outpost. (HSE)

Star's Nova

this mercenary army was founded by Qell Tepine, and worked exclusively for the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. The members of Star's Nova were made up of former soldiers of the Imperial Special Missions team and the Alliance's Special Forces organization. Thus, many of their tactics often follow standard military procedures, although the skill level of the team is high enough that one could not simply assume their next actions. After the Battle of Endor, though, the services of Star's Nova were available to the highest bidder. The Star's Nova base was located on the planet Sondarr, which housed the more than 100 members of the organization. (WBC)

Stars of Elrood

Shondra Del traveled throughout the Elrood Sector in this ship, posing as an independent freighter Captain. (OE)

Starscream-9

this Seinar Fleet Systems ion drive was a military-grade propulsion system originally designed for use on starfighters. This drive was at the leading edge of technology following the Battle of Yavin, and despite its military designation and exorbitant price, some managed to make their way to the black market. (GG6)

Starseeker

this was the name of Coros Telari's freighter, used while on missions for House Pelagia. He landed it on Lamuir IV, while trying to deliver a datafile stolen from House Mecetti, but was attacked by Mecetti thugs. Luckily, Janna Pallask was able to misdirect a group of Alliance agents to Telari's aid, and she was able to recover the file. (TSIA)

Starshine Special

this was a special additive developed for use in alcoholic drinks during the last years of the Old Republic. Because of its highly-secret formula and expensive cost, starshine special was only available to those beings who knew the coded gesture used to ask for it. (VD2)

Starshine Surprise

a mixed, alcoholic beverage. It is named for the first you notice after drinking one: the starfield whirling in front of your eyes as you hit the ground. (GG9, TME)

Starship

any craft designed to operate in the vacuum of interstellar space. There are five major classes of starship, based on size and mission. Capital Ship were large, heavily-armed ships which serve as command bases during military exercises. The Imperial-I class Star Destroyer and the Mon Calamari MC80a cruiser are two examples. Most capital ships are named for virtues. Close Support Ship were large, maneuverable ships whose weaponry allows them to protect the capital ships and perform other military operations. The Nebulon-B Frigate is one example. Transport/Supply Ship were ships of various sizes, built around speed and capacity, which are used to transport large amounts of material. The Corellian CR90 Corvette is one example. Most transport ships are named for beasts of burden or rivers. Starfighters were small, highly maneuverable ships which are the front-line defense attackers. They are built around one or two pilots, and are well-armed for their size. The TIE Fighter and the X-Wing are two examples. Support Ships included any ship which has limited military capability, this class includes space tugs, fuel ships, and container pods. (SW, SWSB, XW, WG)

Starshipwright

a person skilled in building and repairing starships. (HSR)

Starshipwrights and Aerospace Engineers Incorporated

this manufacturer of custom space cruiser upgrades and starship modifications was one of the original voting sponsors of the Corporate Sector Authority. (CSA)

Starsider

this old Dreadnaught was part of the New Republic fleet which massed near Kashyyyk during the year following the Battle of Coruscant. The Starsider served as a sort of mobile crew quarters, housing the various commanders and leaders who supported the New Republic's raids into Yuuzhan Vong-controlled space. (Y)

StarSlasher

one model of BlasTech blaster carbine, the StarSlasher was produced during the Old Republic and was still in use during the early years of the New Republic. (CSA, GUN)

Starslinger

this is a commercial ion drive produced by Incom. Installation and maintenance of the Starslinger was often difficult, facts which were often overlooked in favor of its modest price. (GG6)

Starslinger, Mali

a famous member of the Alliance to Restore the Republic. (RPG)

StarSlot Machines

these games of chance were found in many casinos and gambling halls throughout the galaxy. (WSV)

Starspeeder 3000

a small, 40-person luxury liner. (ST, SOP, SWJ15)

Starspin

this small starship was produced by Kuat Drive Yards during the last decades of the Old Republic. (MBS)

Starspin

this ancient, Old Republic prowler ship was the first ship to discover Oss Wilum and the disabled courier ship he encountered, a year before Oss Wilum began training as a Jedi Knight. (TOJC)

Starspin

this YT-1210 was Regec Sloom's battered smuggling ship. (SWJ8)

Starsprite

this Hapan Beta Cruiser was once part of the Consortium Navy. However, in the wake of the Battle of Fondor, the crew of the ship deserted the Navy and joined the Peace Brigade. It was the crew of the Starsprite which managed to capture Tenel Ka, shortly after the Battle of Coruscant, before the one-armed Jedi Knight could reach Hapes and find refuge with her grandmother, Ta'a Chume. The crew planned to return Tenel Ka to Hapes, in return for information on the whereabouts of Jaina Solo. Tenel Ka refused, and had to fight her way through vibro-blade-wielding pirates to win her freedom. Her attempt was aided when the Jedi aboard the Trickster intercepted the Starsprite and boarded it. The Yuuzhan Vong frigate became organically welded to the Starsprite, forming an unusual amalgam which was flown to Hapes under the escort of Jagged Fel and Shawnkyr Nuruodo. (DJ)

Starstorm One

Exar Kun's starship. It is a unique ship, with a curved main wing on the left, counterbalanced by three main engines and a long command spar on the right. It was destroyed on Yavin 4, when Kun went in search of the Sith lore, by the Massassi who captured him. (DLS)

Starswan

a passenger ship that made a regular stop on Tatooine. (TME)

Starswarm Cluster

this interstellar phenomenon has been known to damage starship drives and other subsystems. Located near Cinnagar, the cluster was a vast group of stars situated very near each other. (GAS)

Starter

this man was a companion of Platt Okeefe and Dirk Harkness, who claimed to have been a friend of Luke Skywalker and Biggs Darklighter on Tatooine before learning how to be a smuggler from Han Solo himself. In reality, Starter was the son of an Imperial Admiral, who had been expelled from the Imperial Academy on Corulag for being undisciplined and obnoxious. He then joined the Alliance as a starfighter pilot. He tried to reach the Alliance base on Renforra during the Galactic Civil War, hoping to sell information stolen from Jabba the Hutt to the Alliance team there. He was stranded on Cloud City when a team of bounty hunters tried to recover the information. He claimed to have single-handedly killed Beylyssa, Boddu Bocck, 4-LOM, Zuckuss, IG-88 and Dengar in order to escape capture. He then claimed to have avoided being captured by Boba Fett in order to reach Renforra. During the trip, Starter's tale continued to evolve, as he was forced to battle Darth Vader himself, and only managed to escape by stealing the shuttle Tydirium and flying away. In the wake of the Battle of Endor, Starter became an unofficial member of the Black Curs, helping them with many missions. (SWJ1, SWJ4) a Mon Calamari MC90 cruiser being built for the New Republic just prior to the second Battle of Calamari. Ackbar uses the half-built ship and its attached spacedock to ram the Manticore and destroy it as it lay in wait behind Calamari's moon. (DA)

Startide

Startled Circuit

this freighter was owned by Vareth and Garron. They purchased it with the money Garron obtained from an insurance claim following the death of his parents. (GG7)

Star-Tour 7

a Lambda-class shuttle ferried civilian passengers during the Galactic Civil War. This is a reference to the passenger shuttle depicted in the StarTours flight simulator rides at Disneyland and Disney World. (TIE)

StarTower Residences

this was a residential building located near the Alliance's safehouse at 16AA889 Starfield Road. (HAS)

Startron, Kevas

once a native of Contruum, Kevas was a renowned smuggler during the last years of the Old Republic. As the Empire rose to power, his health began to fail. He took an apprentice, the young woman known as Sapphire, and hoped to end his career with one last run. However, he was physically unable to complete the run in his starship, the New Cov Quasar. Sapphire agreed to help him out, and finished the run successfully. However, she kept her part in the run a secret, giving all the credit to Kevas. He was able to retire, and gave his starship to Sapphire for her part in the run. (CRO)

StarUrchin

this glitzy casino was found on the planet Pavo Prime. (SWI67)

Star-urchin

this creature was native to the oceans of the planet Calamari. (SBS)

Starveil

this Alliance cruiser was assigned to a number hit-and-fade operations in Wild Space, during the last years of the New Order. (TTSB)

StarViper

see StarViper-class Attack Platform (NEGV)

StarViper-class Attack Platform

this is the name given to the class of starfighters designed by MandalMotors at the request of Prince Xizor. Xizor contracted MandalMotors to create for him a unique starship, nothing stock or commonplace would do. Xizor wanted a personal transport vessel that would protect him at every turn, and cost was no option. MandalMotors engineers took his directions and came up with the StarViper-class attack platform, a kind of mobile platform ship that was powerful, maneuverable, and durable. The basic hull of the StarViper is rectangular and squat, with four maneuvering vanes that extend from each front corner. The vanes add incredible handling during combat, but can actually hinder atmospheric flight due to their configuration. They are controlled by an artificial brain that monitors ships systems and constantly adjusts their configuration for optimum performance. The StarViper appears to be alive as it maneuvers through space. It is armed with a pair of forward-firing double-laser cannons and two proton torpedo launchers.

The interior of the StarViper has limited cargo space, and was designed to accommodate the addition of power converters and other supplemental systems for Xizor's personal ship, the Virago. After Xizor's death at Coruscant, just before the Battle of Endor, MandalMotors regained all rights to the StarViper's designs, and began producing less-powerful versions for civilian use. (EGV, NEGV)

Starvision

a night-sighting implement used on the EWHB-10 and E-Web repeating blasters. (ISB, EGW)

Starway

an Alliance transport ship destroyed by the Empire shortly after the Battle of Hoth. (TIE)

Starway Services

located at Taldaak Station on Utharis, this is a starship berthing and repair center. Luke Skywalker and Akanah nearly berthed the Mud Sloth here during their search for the Fallanassi, but the owner tried to swindle them. (TT)

Starwayman

this was the name of the starship used by Booster Terrik and Llollulion, while they were plying the spacelanes as independent pilots. It was a small ship, armed with just a triple laser cannon. Booster had stolen the ship and was on the run from a crimelord when he found his way to Borlov and befriended Llollulion. (SWJ7)

Starweb

this small, disk-shaped freighter was used by Asyr Sei'lar, after she resigned her commission with the New Republic following her "death" at Corvis Minor Five. She returned to the planet Bothawui under a new identity, hoping to bring about societal changes in Bothan culture. The Starweb was loaned to her by Booster Terrik, and she left the ship at Commenor for him to retrieve. (IR)

Starwind

Gil Bastra's starship, it was intercepted by the Expeditious. (XWN)

Starwind Chandlery

this general store and ship outfitter was located on StarForge Station. It provided the basic supplies a small starship would need for space travel. It was run by Labio, along with Wurrooba and Mioe. (FOP)

Starwind-class Pleasure Yacht

this 50-meter-long personal pleasure starship was built by Kuat Drive Yards. The Starwind-class ship borrowed design cues from the Corellian Engineering Corporation's YT series, as it was originally designed to compete directly with those ships. Later, the Starwind-class was modified to challenge the Crescent-class luxury cruisers. The ship resembled a flattened ovoid, with a pair of curving arms embracing the central fuselage. It was manned by a crew of 5, with two gunners, and could transport up to ten passengers. It was unarmed in its basic configuration, but could be armed with a pair of quad laser cannons, and had a fairly sophisticated shielding combination. The Starwind-class ship's most unique feature was its escape pod, which could be jettisoned while still in hyperspace. The pod would immediately revert back to realspace. Once in realspace, or if released in realspace to begin with, the pod could execute a series of random hyperspace jumps which would bring the pod to the nearest well-traveled route. (LCSB,SS)

Starwing

codename of the Cygnus Spaceworks Xg-1 assault gunboat. (XW)

Star-World

according to Krizlaw legend, this blue-green sphere appeared in the space above Munlali Mafir and remained in place for three local months before disappearing. This legend was discovered by Doctor Soron Hegerty during her research into the existence of Zonama Sekot. Investigation by Doctor Hegerty and Luke Skywalker revealed more information. According to modern Krizlaws, the Star-World stayed for a short time, but its appearance and presence in the sky caused widespread seismic activity to occur on Munlali Mafir. Much of the planet's population at the time was killed in the volcanic eruptions and earthquakes, although the legend fails to say whether the natives were Krizlaw or Jostran. Thus, the Star-World became a harbinger of death and destruction to the Krizlaws. (FH2)

Starypan/SunHui Spaceworks

this was a small starship manufacturer, active during the New Order. (XWA)

Stasheff, Raan

this stern, handsome man served as one of Sayer Mon Neela's personal guards during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Raan was the latest in a long line of security and espionage experts: his grandfather had served with the Corellian Security Force, and his father had been an Alliance agent during the era of the Battle of Yavin. He hoped that his own actions would live up to his forefathers' lofty standards. Raan's dedication to Madame Neela was tested when they were captured by Captain Sergus Lanox and held aboard the Imperial Hazard. During their escape, Raan threw himself in front of a blaster shot meant for Madame Neela, and nearly died in her arms. Madame Neela dragged him aboard the Starcrossed and got him to the Alliance base on Carosi XII, where he eventually recovered from his injuries. (SWJ10)

Stasis Booth

a device which allows its living contents to be placed in suspended animation until revived. They are often used in penal colonies or detention areas (Stars' End was the first facility to make it work) to keep prisoners in stasis until they can be tried. They were also used by the Corporate Sector Authority to silence its enemies, as well as to preserve viable sources of labor. The technology used in the stasis booth existed about 100 years before the advent of the New Order, but was put to prison use at the recommendation of the Authority's Detention Task Force. Also called a stasis box, they found widespread use after the Battle of Endor when the New Republic began reaching out to reclaim planets which had suffered from chemical or biological damage at the hands of the Empire. Survivors were transported to medical facilities in stasis booths certified for full-spectrum biological security. (HSE, CSA, POT)

Stasis Probe

this form of deep-space information-gathering probe is dispatched to its probe sites through hyperspace. Undetectable while in hyperspace, stasis probes drop back into realspace only long enough to gather sensor data, relay it to its control location, and receive its next instructions. Passive sensors are used to minimize the ability of conventional sensors to pick it up, and the probe stays in realspace for less than thirty seconds at a time. The New Republic used stasis probes extensively during the Black Fleet Crisis, gathering data on the Yevetha throughout the Koornacht Cluster. (TT)

Stasis-field generator

this piece of equipment created a stasis field, in which an object or being could be contained for transport. (JS)

Stassia

this Core world has been described as "the most boring, stagnant world in the Core." The planet's surface is covered with flat, endless plains, which have been used since the early days of the Old Republic as farmland. The inhabitants of Stassia are passive, and offered no resistance to the encroachment of the Empire. In fact, they took the change of galactic politics as just another day's happenings. They became a model New Order world. The average day on Stassia lasts 22 standard hours, and its years last 340 local days. (SWJ6)

Stassia City

this is the capital city of the planet Stassia, and is famous for its swoop races and ringer tournaments. (SWJ6)

Stassia Classic

this swoop race, staged annual on the planet Stassia, was part of the TransGal Circuit during the last years of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

Stat Flimsi

this was a rigid form of flimsiplast that was used as a form of identification, during the last years of the Old Republic. (MJH)

State Boulevard

this was one of the main streets in the city of New Apsolon, on the planet of the same name. The city and planetary government offices were all located on State Boulevard. (TTB)

Stath

this common Zabrak surname meant "navigator". (GCG)

Static

this song, written and played by the band Starburst, first appeared on the compilation StakeOut. (GG9)

Static Hyperspace Bubble Generator

a device, developed by the Bakurans, the SHBG surrounded a ship in realspace with a hyperspace bubble. This bubble doesn't provide any thrust, so the ship cannot move at hyper-speeds. (AS)

Static Ion Field Discharger

this outdated weapon was an early form of ion cannon. Instead of emitting a coherence burst of ion energy, the field discharger spouted a blanket of energy at its target. (KO)

Static Pike

this was the generic term used to describe any non-powered spear or pointed staff used in melee combat. This weapon was originally developed by the Geonosians, for use by their picadors to control their mounts and the various creatures they used in their gladiator arenas. The basic shape and size was derived from a traditional spear. The static pike was similar in design to a force pike or electropole, although it was given a sharpened tip that could pierce flesh. (GORW, NEGW)

Station 3

this refueling outpost was located between Terman Station and Sriluur, along the Sisar Run. It was destroyed in the gang wars between the Disac and Ghilron pirate groups, and was left as a "mynock-infested wasteland." (SSR)

Station 88 Spaceport

this space station, jointly developed by the worlds of Junction 5, Delaluna, Bezim, and Vicondor, served as a major nexus to the Mid Rim, during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis and the onset of the Clone Wars. It was coveted by the Separatist forces of the Confederacy of Independent Systems, since the station provided access to the Mid Rim. Whichever side controlled the station would cut off a large portion of the galaxy from the enemy. Lorian Nod, who had always shown a hatred for the Jedi Knights, showed up at the Jedi Temple just after the Battle of Geonosis and offered to help ensure that Station 88 Spaceport would remain an asset of the Republic. Despite the efforts of Count Dooku to persuade the founders, first using negotiation and then force, the founders chose to remain loyal to the Republic. (LOJ)

Stationer, The

this was the man who controlled Silver Station, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ6)

Statuary Park

located on the grounds of the Bakur Complex, in Salis D'aar on Bakura, this vast area of land was filled with statues depicting people and events from Bakura's history. Mingled with the statues were namans trees and well-manicured shrubbery, giving the park an unusually remote feeling despite its location in the center of the city. It was circular in shape, and covered roughly the same surface area as the Bakur Memorial Building. (TB, TBSB)

Statute 312b

this was the fourth major amendment ratified by the Old Republic Senate during the Clone Wars, providing planets in the Core Worlds and Inner Rim Territories with greater voting power in the Senate over outlying planets. (SWI71)

Stauz Czycz

this alien was the only member of his species to survive the Imperial destruction of his homeworld. A tall, muscular being with reddish skin and a large, triangular head and snakelike tendrils in place of hair, Stauz was a warrior who saw his family and neighbors destroyed, all so that Emperor Palpatine could make an example of them. Rather than allow his people to be completely erased, Stauz set out to exact revenge on the one being who he remembered from the Imperial assault: Darth Vader. Stauz executed Awarru Tark in battle, then had his unusual alien physiology surgically altered to resemble Tark's. He also had a force-field generator implanted in his own body, to provide an additional measure of protection. When Vader sent out the bounty on Han Solo and Leia Organa, Stauz answered the call as Tark. Rather than submit to Vader's commands, Stauz launched an attack on the Dark Lord, catching Vader off-guard and nearly defeating him aboard the Avenger. Unfortunately, Stauz was no match for the Force, and Vader's command of the situation allowed him to cleave Stauz's head from his body. (T4)

Stava

a carnivorous creature native to Honoghr, they were tenacious hunters that could become wild-tempered scavengers in famine times. (DFR)

Stava

named for the Honoghran predator, this was a form of martial arts developed by the Noghri. (GMR5)

Staven

this man was once a member of the Red Star Ring, working out of Nar Shaddaa during the height of the New Order. (GUN)

Stavro

this was the codename of a squadron of Razor fighters which were assigned to protect the Viraxo base at Denbo. (XWA)

Stavveld, Irnst

this retired Imperial Admiral was brought out of retirement to serve as the Moff of Ado Sector shortly before the Battle of Yavin. Among this priority directives was the location and shutdown of StarForge Station. (FOP)

Steadfast

this New Republic fleet hauler - known as a junker - was the first ship to discover the remains of the Star Destroyer Gnisnal. It also served clean-up duty after the Battle of Endor, the seige of Grand Admiral Thrawn, and pursued the Knight Hammer. (BTS)

Steadfast

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was captained by Commander Vivant, and was dispatched by Carnor Jax to Phaeda. There, with the help of the Emperor's Revenge, the ships pummeled Collo Fauale, on the planet Phaeda, in an effort to destroy Mirith Sinn's forces and to eliminate Kir Kanos. (CE)

Steadfast

this was the name of Drake Paulsen's personal ship. A modified Ghtroc Class 720 freighter, the ship was bequested to Drake by father, Kaine. The origins of the ship were not clear, although Drake believed it might have been stolen. It was armed with a pair of turret-mounted laser cannons. (SWJ2. SWJ3)

Steady Lady

this fast-hauler was at Coruscant when the Yuuzhan Vong first tried to get a voxyn onto the planet's surface. The 500-meter-long Steady Lady moved into a position to block the Sweet Surprise from gaining access to the planet, volunteering to help Rogue Squadron capture the freighter. (SBS)

Stealth Field

this form of shielding was produced by Imperial engineers for use on the YI-5 surveillance and investigation droid. It monitored the surroundings of the YI-5 droid, and altered its color to match the environment. In this way, the YI-5 was virtually invisible. (PH)

Stealth-2VS

see Stealth-2VX (NEGW)

Stealth-2VX

this was the designation of Prax Arms' palm-sized dart shooter, similar in shape and function to the Happy Surprise hold-out blaster. It fit around the fingers of the user, and fired its darts from slots located between the fingers. (EGW, AEG)

Steamcrawler

this was the generic name for an steam-powered vehicle which moved about on treads. (SHPT)

Stec Eddis

a member of Klyn Shanga's Renatasian vigilantes hunting down Vuffi Raa. (LCF)

Stecker

an Imperial Sergeant suspected of sympathizing with the Alliance. He was sacrificed, along with Captain Ganig, by Commodore Bevvien and Colonel Drost, at the insistence of Mar Barezz. (ISB)

Steef

this Gamorrean was loyal to Orman, but was extremely lazy. Although he would gladly work for Orman, he was prone to find the easy way out of a tough fight. (ML)

Steel Fist

this modified YT-1300 freighter was owned by the bounty hunter Kolig and his gang, Qulok's Fist. The ship was armed with a pair of quad laser cannons and a proton torpedo launcher, and its main drive section was removed and replaced with a pair of military-grade engines. The cockpit was mounted at the base of the portside loading mandible, and a rectenna was placed on the starboard side. (DARK)

Steel Hand

this was the name of the personalized starfighter owned by Zan and Zu Pike. (RESB)

Steelback

this was an Imperial slang term, used by some officers to describe stormtroopers. (MCI6)

Steelcrete

a superhard, metallic concrete building material. (SW, HTTE, JS)

Steelfab

a reinforced form of steel, steelfab was manufactured to have high tensile strengths, and was used to create restraints for hospital beds and prison facilities. (BP)

Steelhide

this material was used to make blaster holsters. (SOP)

Steellious

this planet was the site of a major transfer location for Alliance supplies during the Galactic Civil War. War materiel passed through Hervack Starport, destined for a number of Alliance cells in the sector. (GMS)

Steelstone

a building material. (DA)

Steelton

manufacturers of the massive control cables used to connect a pod racer's pod to its turbine engines.

Steelton cables also relay data between the pod and the engines, such as acceleration and directional data. (TPM)

Steen, Joh

this man worked for Red Star Shipping as a transport Captain, and was in command of transport A-175 when it was ambushed by the Far Orbit. Steen believed Dhas Vedij was an Imperial Captain, and surrendered his cargo to the Far Orbit. (FOP)

Steeze, Cortle

one of many aliases used by Zsinj, Steeze owned a huge plot of land in Viamarr 4. Zsinj was using these aliases and the property they owned to hide manufacturing facilities which supported his war machine. (WS)

Stela

this was the name of the small stone pillar that was placed atop the ceremonial tiles used by the Swokes Swokes to denote individuals in The Tract. (WOTC)

Stelaciter

this Iskalloni frigate resembled an 83-meter long asteroid. It was crewed by 39 Iskalloni, and could transport up to 15 passengers. Armed with pair of double laser cannons and a single heavy laser cannon, the ship was designed to allow the Iskalloni to enter normal space as a stray asteroid. Once the ship was detected, it could open fire on the ships which arrived to move it out of planetary space. The Iskalloni would then drop to the planet's surface via similarly-designed dropships. (TSK)

Stele, Kerek

this man was a native of Kuan, and a gifted scientist. He was kidnapped by Bordali agents and tortured, in an effort to get him to divulge his scientific knowledge. When normal methods failed to work, the Bordali decided to kidnap his wife and son, and use their lives to force him to reveal his secrets. However, before they could successfully catch them, the Empire invaded the Taroon System and took them all hostage. (TIE)

Stele, Maarek

only son of Kerek and Marina Stele, Maarek grew up like most young boys on backwater planets, racing swoops at breakneck speeds in his spare time. After the abduction of his father, Maarek and his mother hid in one of the planet's lesser-known cities, until his participation in a swoop stunt provided Maarek's name to the Bordali. They sent Gwadj to kidnap Maarek and Marina, but the Empire chose that very moment to invade the Taroon System. Maarek was taken away and conscripted as a repair technician. After a few months, Maarek was sufficiently knowledgeable about TIE fighters that he was allowed to take them for test runs after finishing repairs. On one such flight, near Farboon, he was the only fighter launched when Admiral Mordon's shuttle was intercepted by Alliance starfighters. Maarek came to his rescue, and was given a chance to become an Imperial pilot. He jumped at the chance, and went on to become one of the Empire's most fearsome TIE pilots. When Arden Lyn joined rogue Admiral Zaarin in an attempt to kidnap Emperor Palpatine, Maarek provided support to Darth Vader himself in preventing the coup. This earned him the attention of the Emperor, who recognized that Maarek had some sensitivity to the Force. He was later trained by the Prophets of the Dark Side, earning the rank of Tan, and in the wake of the Battle of Endor, he served with the 181st Imperial Fighter Group under Soontir Fel. (TIE, GMR5)

Stele, Marina

Kerek Stele's wife, and Maarek's mother. (TIE)

Stellar CommCour

this was the one of the galaxy's largest courier services, active during the early years of the New Republic. (SWJ7)

Stellar Damsel

this CR90 corvette was owned and operated by the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. It was often dispatched to carry vital information to the groups that could use it most wisely. During one such mission, the Stellar Damsel was ambushed by an Imperial Star Destroyer and barely escaped to hyperspace. Unfortunately, the ship's hyperdrive was also damaged, and the Stellar Damsel emerged from hyperspace within the Miro Asteroid Belt. Most of the crew was killed, although the ship's First Mate, Guro, managed to survive. They hid inside an unstable asteroid, and were eventually rescued by the crew of the Knight Errant. (WOA3)

Stellar Informant

this newsfeed was known for its tabloid-style reporting. (HR)

Stellar Mermaid

this ZD-8000 luxury starliner was known for its comfort, as well as the matching prices. Sarn Nightbringer tried to auction off a prototype set of Imperial body armor on this ship, in an attempt to raise money for her criminal organization. At the time, it was commanded by Captain Glaucus. (POC)

Stellar Princess

this starliner used to make the trip between Nar Shaddaa and Nar Hekka on a regular basis. The ancient ship had a navigational computer which couldn't handle the gravity wells produced by the Y'Toub System, and was forced to make the trip at sublight speeds. (THG)

Stellar Sentinel

one of several ships sent by the New Republic to accompany Garm Bel Iblis, Booster Terrik, and the Errant Venture to Yaga Minor, in an attempt to steal a copy of the Caamas Document. (VOF)

Stellar Web

this Interdictor-class warship was part of the fleet commanded by Imperial Captain Barr Moutil, in the service of Admiral Rogriss, during the early years of the New Republic. Rogriss volunteered the use of the ship to Han Solo and the New Republic fleet hunting Warlord Zsinj, since both men were working toward the same goal. They hoped that Zsinj would be surprised enough at the sight of an Imperial ship working with Solo - let alone an Interdictor cruiser - that they would be able to trap him at Vahaba and destroy him. The plan nearly succeeded, but Zsinj inflicted a great deal of damage to the Stellar Web, forcing it out of the battle enough to escape. (SOC)

Stellar Mag V

a mining vessel manufactured by Arakyd, this huge ship measured 542 meters in length and was manned by a crew of 3 assisted by 19 droids and a gunner. The Mag V had no hyperdrive capabilities, as it was designed to be a deep-space mine repair and supply vessel. It was armed with a single turbolaser battery. (SN)

StelProbe V Droid

this planetary exploration droid was developed during the Galactic Civil War, and was equipped with a wide array of sensory devices and computer systems. It resembles a large crustacean, and stands about a meter tall. (GMS)

Steltout

this was one of the larger continents found on the planet Essowyn. (PG1)

Stempel

this man was in command of the Balawai militia defending Pelek Baw, some six months after the Battle of Geonosis. After Jedi Master Mace Windu surprisingly won the Battle of Lorshan Pass and marched his Korunnai forces on Pelek Baw, Stempel was captured in the initial raids and held for questioning. It was believed that he maintained the codes to the droid control system buried under the city, since he was the Major in command of the complex, but he was simply a relay man for Lorz Geptun. Major Stempel simply carried out Geptun's orders, and didn't know the codes himself until Geptun relayed them for activation. (SHPT)

S'Ten Gali Ak'Ar

this Gorothite was the leader of the Gor'Jen'Ar, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Most members of the Gor'Jen'Ar had never seen his face, and many suspected that Ak'Ar was simply an alias used to hide his true identity. She would have preferred to be a fighter, but she realized that her true worth to the Gorothites was in her tactical and psychological expertise. (GSE)

Stenax

this was the native language of the Stenax race. (GMR1)

Stenax

the natives of this planet worshipped the Vol, millennia before the Battle of Yavin. Note that this is probably a mistake, and actually referred to the planet Stenos. (LTA4, MC79)

Stenax

this was the name given to the race of sentient beings native to the planet Stenos. A number of Stenax fought with the Alliance during the final battles of the Galactic Civil War. The average Stenax stood more than two meters tall, and was easily distinguished by their deep burgundy scales and large, leathery wings. Bony spikes and sharp claws studded their shoulders, hands, and feet. Many Stenaxes regularly lived more than two centuries, with several individuals living for at least 270 years. For many centuries, the Stenax believed that they were cursed to remain on Stenos, after a series of earthquakes destroyed the ancient temple they had erected to the god Vol. Legend held that, until a statue of Vol was recovered from beneath the earth, the curse against the Stenax held. Rik Duel, acting on orders from Alliance Colonel Kindar, tried to locate the statue of Vol in order to gain the respect and loyalty of the Stenax people. He tried to sell the statue for a profit, and barely escaped with his life. After that, the Stenax seemed to keep primarily to themselves, provided that the offworlders stayed away from their territory and out of their cultural affairs. Much of this was a cover for several undercover operations they undertook to size up both the Alliance and the Empire as potential enemies. (LTA6, MC70, MC71, GMR1)

Stenax Massacres

this was the name used by historians to describe the brief period of galactic history some ten months after the Battle of Endor, when Stenaxes across the galaxy rose up in an attempt to eliminate Imperial outposts across the galaxy. The basis for the Stenax hatred of the Empire was the Imperial occupation of Stenos many years earlier, during which the Stenax kept to themselves while secretly sizing up the Empire as an enemy. Without any knowledge of the ongoing Galactic Civil War, the Stenaxes planned their attacks quite precisely, although the battles fought during the massacres quickly spilled over into civilian areas. The primary attacks occurred on Kadril, Arda-2, Sooma, Alzar, and Tandankin, although reports came in from across the Gordian Reach as well. The New Republic was finally able to put a stop to the massacres on Tharkos, but not before many intelligent races were utterly wiped out. The death toll from the Stenax Massacres numbered in the millions, and forced the New Republic to establish monitoring posts in orbit around Stenos to prevent further actions by the Stenax. (GMR1)

Stend IV

this Outer Rim world, the fourth planet in the Stend System, was settled by a colony of Gran during the era of the Old Republic. (WOA2)

Stend VI

this Outer Rim planet was considered one of the dullest planets in the galaxy, having virtually nothing remarkable about it. This inherent boredom gave rise to some of the galaxy's most notorious swoop gangs, including the Skulls (until they relocated to the Hook Nebula.) The average day on Stend VI lasted about 23 standard hours, and its year encompassed 230 local days. (GG9, WSV)

Stendaff

this is one of the Sacheen-class escort ships that remained in Pakkpekatt's reduced fleet at Gmir Askilon, after the Teljkon vagabond had jumped into hyperspace. The New Republic had ordered the rest of the fleet to rejoin their battle groups or report to drydock for repairs. (SOL)

Steng

this Yuuzhan Vong Warmaster was defeated in combat by Yo'Gand, at the end of the Cremlevian War. Despite his defeat, Steng was remembered by the Yuuzhan Vong for many generations, for he proved himself to be a ruthless warrior who had died with honor. (GMR8)

Steng's Talons

named for the ancient Yuuzhan Vong Warmaster Steng, these sharp spikes were engineered from sguaru bones that had been sheathed with yorik coral. Up to ten of these spikes were inserted into a warrior's torso during a dangerous augmentation procedure, once a warrior had distinguished himself in combat. These spikes could be extended by a muscular contraction during hand-to-hand combat, goring an opponent in a surprise attack. (GMR8)

Stenir, Kevzod

this man served the Old Republic as a Fourth Assistant Attorney General in the Judiciary branch, during the years leading up the Clone Wars. He was placed in charge of investigating the claims of former Republic corporations which were based on worlds which seceded from the Republic to join Count Dooku and the Separatists. Many of these corporations found themselves overrun by the Trade Federation or the Commerce Guild, but could not count on Republic intervention because the planet they were based on was no longer part of the Republic. (HNN5)

Stennaros

this planet was the homeworld of the Stennes and the Stennes Shifter species. It was continually sought out by other species and attacked from space, in an effort to destroy the Stennes Shifters. (SWJ12)

Stennes

this is a race of near-human beings native to the planet Stennaros. Many believe that the race of Stennes Shifters was a genetic descendant of the Stennes. (SWJ12)

Stennes Node

located in the Inner Rim, this was a collection of densely-clustered star systems which contained many mineral- and ore-rich worlds. Note that this may be the same location as the Stennes System. (PJSB)

Stennes Shifter

this race of near-humans has the ability to blend into any crowd. They resemble short, pale-skinned humans with sunken eye sockets and no hair. Scientists believe that the Stennes Shifter is a genetic variant of the Stennes race, which first appeared some 5,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. They were discovered by the ancient Jedi Knights, for the Stennes Shifters had a strange kind of Force sensitivity which allowed them to obtain energy from the living Force. The Shifters can even "steal" the living energy from a nearby being, earning them the nickname Force-eaters. Unlike other species which can change their appearance, the Stennes Shifters are the only species who truly used their abilities to the disadvantage of other races. They are xenophobic in nature, partly because of their own inborn prejudices and partly from millennia of persecution by other races. Their homeworld of Stennaros has been bombarded several times since their appearance, in efforts to wipe them out. Unlike other species which can alter their physical appearance, the Stennes Shifters use telepathic manipulation to change their shape. (CCG, SWJ12)

Stennes

this planet was the primary world of the Stennes System. (DSSB)

Stennes Hyperspace Terminal

this was the name of the vast space station which was created near the hyperspace jump gate in the Stennes Systems, some 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. It was also known as the Stennes Node. (TOJC)

Stennes Lizard Pie

an awful-tasting meal served at the Stennes spaceport. (TOJ)

Stenness Node

this name was used interchangeable to describe both the Stenness Hyperspace Terminal and the Stenness System. (TOJC, GMR1)

Stenness Raider

one of Finhead Stonebone's E-2 ore stealers. (EGV)

Stenness System

the Stenness System was actually a collection of seven mining worlds in three primary star systems, encompassing about 25 humanoid races. Due to the demand for the ores mined on the various planets, it was given its own hyperspace jump gate very early on. According to Dark Empire, the systems were discovered about 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin. However, Tales of the Jedi indicates that it as an already-established system, with its own hyperspace jump gate. The mines gave out long ago, but the wealth they provided was still generating interest and good lifestyles for the planets' inhabitants. The system's inhabitants, often referred to as 'Nessies, were highly addicted to spice. (TOJ, DE1)

Stenos

Luke Skywalker, Lando Calrissian, and Chewbacca sought the bounty hunter Bossk on this planet, sometime after the Battle of Hoth. The planet had once been the site of an Alliance base, during the early days of the Galactic Civil War, but it was eventually overrun by Imperial forces. The Imperial occupation earned the hatred of the Stenax race, which launched the Stenax Massacres some ten months after the Battle of Endor to try and strike back at their oppressors. However, the civilian casualties were exceptionally high, and the New Republic military was forced to put an end to the Stenaxes' invasions. Ultimately, monitoring posts were erected in orbit around Stenos to keep track of the activities of the Stenax. (MC70, GMR1)

Stent

this Chiss, whose full name was Kres'ten'tarthi, served as Voss Parck's righthand man at the Hand of Thrawn compound on Nirauan during the Galactic Civil War. He was also the leader of Thrawn's personal household phalanx, and was one of the few Chiss who felt that Thrawn was a born leader who was working in his race's best interests, and shouldn't have been exiled. He heeded Thrawn's message, to wait ten years after the report of his death before he would return to lead them to power once again. Stent bided his time, until Mara Jade and Luke Skywalker arrived on the planet to investigate the Hand of Thrawn. After the facility was nearly destroyed, Stent continued to serve the Nuruodo phalanx, and was on duty when the Skywalkers returned to Nirauan three years later, at the request of Voss Parck. (VOF, SQ, GMR7)

Stentat

this large gas giant was the eighth planet of the Coruscant System. It was orbited by twenty-three natural moons. (PH)

Stephin

this man, an expert on security systems, was part of the underground movement led by Cilia Dil on the planet Junction 5, some 23 years before the Battle of Geonosis. Stephin was the group's primary contact with rebel forces on Delaluna, who provided him with the plans to the building in which the Ministry of Offense and Defense was supposedly safeguarding the plans for the Annihilator weapon. (LOJ)

Steppo

this name, which meant "long-legged", was common among Gungan males. (GCG)

Steri

this was the plural form of the Adnerem word steris. (AE)

Stericlean

this chemical, found in most starships of the New Republic, and used to clean the air systems of airborne germs and contaminants. (SBS)

Steri-house

this was the name used to describe the dwelling of an Adnerem steri. Each was divided into a public area and private quarters. (SWJ11)

Sterika

this was a form of close friendship established between two Adnerem. It was a platonic relationship, but one in which both partners regarded themselves as a single entity. (AE)

Sterilight

developed during the early years of the New Republic, this purplish laser was used to sterilize anything it touched. Cleaning droids were often equipped with sterilight fixtures, allowing them to quickly clean a surface. (AFA)

Steris

this was the basic socio-economic family unit of the Adnerem race. (AE)

Sterisi

this was the Adnerem name for the members of a given steri. (SWJ11)

Steristeel

developed during the era of the New Republic, this was a super-clean form of steel used in the creation of medical implements. It maintained a level of sterility with minimal cleaning, virtually eliminating any chance of spreading disease or bacteria. (SBS)

Stern

a Cilpari deity. (XWRS)

Stevez, Mart

this man was a decorated member of the Atrisian Royal Corps before the Empire destroyed his family while he was on a training mission. The Imperial Ubiquitorate claimed that Stevez' father had become "politically unstable," and needed to be removed. Since that time, he defected to the Alliance and became a respected member of the Special Forces team. He was eventually promoted to Major and given command of Task Force Shen, where he led them in a wide range of successful missions. (ROE)

Steward

this was the title given to those Galidyn who ruled the eight cities they established on Fyodos. (AE)

Stewfruit

this was a nutritious, though bad-tasting, food cooked on the planet Corellia. Children hated the taste of stewfruit, despite the benefits derived from eating it. (EL2)

Sthenic Field

this was a specialized force field, created for use in certain medical applications. (MBS)

S-thread

this HoloNet technology uses dedicated hyperspace pathways (known as simutunnels) to transmit information instantaneously to extremely remote locations. The galaxy is criss-crossed with a matrix of s-threads, allowing HoloNet terminals to link up and receive realtime updates. (ISB, CFG)

Stibnium

this tough, dense alloy was used in the creation of survival gear, during the height of the New Order. (VD)

Stic

this planet, which is home to the Xi'Dec species of insectoids, has a constantly-changing climate due to its orbit and axial tilt. It is also wracked by geological reformation quite often. The specialized Xi'Dec are supported by a limited technology, but the tourist trade to the planet is healthy. (GG4)

Stickle Tree

native to the planet Dagobah, the stickle tree produced a bitter fruit that was nevertheless nutritious. (IWST)

Sticks

Jaina Solo was given this nickname after she joined Rogue Squadron during the evacuation of Dubrillion. It referred to two things: her lightsaber, and the control stick which used to pilot her X-Wing. (DTO)

Sticks, The

this was a phrase which was used on the Core Worlds to describe any planets located beyond the Colonies. (SWJ7)

Stick-strip

this is a form of adhesive which comes in wide rolls. It was used primarily by athletes who rode hoverboards or skimboards, in order to keep their feet firmly attached to the board. (GOF1)

Stictex

this is the Xi'Dec term for the Xi'Alpha sex. (GG4)

Stieg

this planet was the homeworld of the Stieg-Fan race. (FFT)

Stieg-Fan

this peaceful race of beings was native to the planet Stieg. (FFT)

Stiels, Brin

this man was a Lieutenant in the New Republic armed forces, and was stationed on Cadinth two years after the Battle of Endor. He was on lookout patrol when Imperial forces invaded the planet, and his outpost was overrun. (SWG2)

Stigrit Krax

this Troob was the wife of the Troob leader, General Krax, and accompanied him to the negotiations with Counselor Harthan. She served as a somewhat-impartial translator for Harthan, since Chief Nimondro refused to speak Basic. When C-3PO intervened to translate, Stigrit managed to win the droid away from Harthan in a sabacc match. She hoped to keep the droid from undermining her own plans for the negotiations, chiefly gaining a position of power for the Troobs. In the confusion that followed, Jake Harthan tried to gain control of Mount Yeroc for himself, and held Stigrit Krax as a hostage. The Hobors managed to kill Jake, but not before he injured Stigrit with a blaster bolt. She survived, and agreed to work with her husband to hammer out a true peace for the Troobs and Hobors. (DRPC)

Stiilran

the twenty-seventh and highest of the Tunroth Hunter ranks, it is believed that no Hunters of this rank have ever existed. (GG12)

Stijhl, Arik

this man served the Alliance as a Colonel in the Special Operations division, and was the commanding officer of the Alliance's drop point at Gelgellar Free Port during the height of the Galactic Civil War. He was a veteran of the military of the Old Republic, but never saw any action. Instead, he proed himself adept at getting supplies to troops quickly and efficiently. He declined the opportunity to remain in the Imperial military, retiring from active duty until he began to realize what Emperor Palpatine was doing to the galaxy. Despite his skills in supply and ordnance, he couldn't adjust to the impromptu actions of T'Charek Haathi, who was also stationed on Gelgellar. His feelings toward her bordered on hatred, and only got worse when a Doom Slayer droid exploded in his warehouse, after it had been disabled while attacking Haathi's crew. He ordered her to replace the supplies which were lost. (SWJ14)

Stikmoss

a gray-colored lichen which grows in large, platter-shaped clumps. (SE)

Stilch Gas

this was a poisonous gas that rendered most beings who breathed it unconscious for a short period of time. (GCG)

Stilepig

a porcine creature. (SE)

Stiletto Security Droid

developed for the Empire by Arakyd during the early years of the New Order, this tall, cylindrical droid was designed to guard remote outposts. It contained a unique biorecognition package that could identify the biomagnetic signature of virtually any race or species. Data was provided to the Stiletto droid from interrogation sessions, and had to be hardcoded into the droid's computer memory ROM. The Stiletto series was equipped with a small repulsorlift propulsion system, and was armed with a pair of blaster cannons. These systems allowed the Stiletto to use its tracking routines to hunt down an escaped prisoner or specific target. The tracking and targetting routines of the Stiletto were quite accurate, and escapees had to rely on luck to get away. Because of their age, many Stilettoes were still in use during the New Republic's early years. (TBSB, FTD)

Stilijan, Trenar

this man was the childhood sweetheart of Keriin Haslip. He was an adventurous man, and joined the army shortly after they were married. Unfortunately, Trenar died in battle on a far-flung world during the last years of the Old Republic. (SWJ5)

Stillman, Mayr

this Imperial officer supervised the medical facility at the garrison on Bakura, during the last years of the New Order. It was discovered that Stillman planted a subspace transmitter aboard the Wayfaring Stranger, allowing an Imperial patrol ship to know its hyperspace vector and destination. Stillman had been trying to capture Denno Yanglan, whom he believed to be a defector from Imperial service. Despite the successful ambush of the Wayfaring Stranger, Stillman was captured onboard by a team of Alliance agents who had finished their tour of duty on Bakura, and Yanglan returned to his home on Cridark II. (TBSB)

Stiltwalker

this unusual amphibian was found on swampy planets throughout the galaxy. Its body shape resembled a large hand which walked on its fingers, and measured about fifteen centimeters in height. Each of the stiltwalkers legs were tipped with a sharp claw, which is used to grip the ground. It used a sticky tongue to grab hold of the small insects it fed on. Xenobiologists believe that male and female stiltwalkers evolved from unique species, since the females breathe water and have thick tentacles instead of legs. However, analysis revealed that all stiltwalkers evolved from the same genetic source. They communicate via high-pitched chirps, which allow males to sound an alarm whenever the females of their group were threatened. (COG)

Stim shot

a pneumatic dispenser which administers a stimulant, these are found in all medkits. (ESBR)

Stim Tea

a strong, steeped beverage that has the side effect of raising a person's alertness, much like caffeine. (DS)

Stima Ardella

this female Trandoshan was the leader of the Black Hammer pirates, based on the planet Galantos during the early years of the New Republic. Her thin body was covered with wiry muscle, and her scales ranged in color from gray to black. She and her pirates prowled the Widek Bypass in their flagship, the Smokeswimmer, and spent their downtime terrorizing the Fia population on Galantos. (CCW)

Stimcaf

this was a strong form of caf, brewed to provide an instant burst of energy. (EVR)

Stimmer

one of the Habeen cargo ferry groups used to transport hyperdrives to Admiral Zaarin on the Shamus. (TIE)

Stim-pickled

this was a term used during the early years of the New Republic to describe a being who was addicted to stimulants and other such drugs. (EOV, GMR8)

Stimpills

drugs that stimulate the body and keep the user awake. (HTTE)

Stimsenj'kat

this MC80a cruiser was used by the Alliance to recover the contents of the Xi cargo ships. This is a reference to Stimpson J. Cat, one of the protagonists in Nickelodeon's Ren & Stimpy cartoon. (XW)

Stimufrost

this frozen concoction must be carefully consumed, for it is served at intensely cold temperatures. If spilled, it can cause serious damage to unprotected skin. (CSWEA)

Sting

this was the name of the black-furred Velusian fursnake kept as a pet by the bounty hunter Khlor. (CCW)

Stingbeam

a small, five-charge gun which can be easily concealed. Lando Calrissian used one during his early gambling days, even though they were - and continue to be - illegal in many systems. (LCM, GMR5)

Stingbrush

a dangerous plant native to the deserts of Kamar. (HSR)

Stingcrawler

this unusual insect was native to the planet Aruza. It had a segmented body made up of three triangular sections. The front two sections had three pairs of legs each, while the larger rear section had an upturned stinger. (UF)

Stinger

Guri's modified Surronian Conqueror starship, the Stinger's sleek shape was famous throughout the galaxy. It was formerly owned by Prince Xizor himself, and then entrusted to Guri after he purchased her. She needed a ship that proved her position in Xizor's organization, and this was it. The Stinger was modified to have increased power output, allowing it to achieve speeds up to 1,150 kilometers an hour in atmosphere. Maneuverability was enhanced by giving the pilot control of each of its eight exhaust nozzles. Emergency braking jets added the ability to stop quickly, allowing pursuit to speed ahead and into target range. An H2-1 hyperdrive system gives it long-range punch. Weaponry consists of two forward-mounted ion cannons and a top-mounted laser cannon. (SE, EGV)

Stinger

an ancient, swift-attack starfighter. (DLS)

Stinger

this blaster-like weapon was developed by the Iskalonian people as a way to protect themselves from the many predators that inhabited the oceans of Iskalon. It was more powerful than a standard blaster, but its range underwater was severely limited. (MC74)

Stinger Eel

a dangerous eel-like fish found on Clak'Dor VII. (TCC)

Stinger Fish

this was a species of jellyfish-like creature native to the shallow seas of Sedri. (BGS)

Stinger Lizard

a rare, green and red reptile found on the moon Yavin 4. (L)

Stinger Moth

this species of venomous moth was native to Ronika. (FOSE)

Stinger Velocity 200

this version of the standard Velocity speeder was adapted for use as a racing machine by the Mandellian Corporation, for use in the BlastBoat 2000 race event. It was capable of attaining speeds up to 400 kilometers an hour, and had a flight ceiling of four meters. The Stinger was also armed with ten Minlet concussion missiles. (SWJ4)

Stingfly

this species of annoying insect was characterized by the way it incessantly buzzed around other creatures. (SOP)

Stingnat

this insect was known to travel in huge swarms. (SBS)

Sting-snake

native to the craters of the planet Tasariq, these reptiles were used by the ancient Tasari to help guard their temples. While sting-snakes are generally timid, they will attack if startled or provoked. Sting-snakes lash out with their tails, which contain a stinger that will discharge a small electric shock when it makes contact with exposed flesh. (SWJ15)

Stingworm

a nocturnal, carnivorous creature native to Kamar. They are also a source of food for the Kamarians. (HSR)

Stink

this was the term used to describe the pheromone-rich sweat created by a dead slashrat. (DTO)

Stink Beetle

this bio-engineered insect was created by the Yuuzhan Vong as a defense mechanism. When unleashed into a building or other structure, stink beetles flew around in maddening patterns until they splattered themselves all over the walls and ceilings. This smashing of bodies released a noxious odor that rendered most humanoid races unable to breathe, forcing them out of the structure and into the waiting Yuuzhan Vong forces. (UF)

Stink Capsule

this chemical-release system was used by farmers of all types to help ward off vermin and pests. The stink capsule could be filled with any number of chemical agents, which would produce enough olfactory irritants to drive off even the most determined pests. (TG)

Stink Fish

native to the seas of Ruan, this fish had little value as a foodstuff. Instead, the Salliche Agricultural Corporation harvested them and ground them up for use as a fertilizer additive. (JE)

Stinkfish

this sea creature is native to the planet Sedri. When aroused or angered, the stinkfish can eject a cloud of poisonous gas. (BGS)

Stink-fly

this was a creature which lived by eating garbage. (HT)

Stinkmelon

this plant produced a small melon which had noxious-smelling flesh. (COD)

Stinksalt

developed by pharmaceutical companies during the New Republic, stinksalts were used to rouse an unconscious being into consciousness. Their pungent odor assaulted the nasal passages of most humanoids, bringing them back to a wakeful state quickly. (SBS)

Stinna Draesinge Sha

a teacher at the Magrody Institute, sha was taught by Nasdra Magrody himself. She became an expert in the field of droid programming, teaching at the Institute until she retired. Her research led her to the wreckage of the Ssi-ruuk battle droids and entechment equipment, and she worked with the machinery in an effort to discover how the aliens were able to capture a person's life energy. She had not been able to duplicate the entechment techniques when she retired. Her retirement was short-lived, for she was assassinated, presumably by Phlygas Grynne, just before Han and Leia Solo went to Ithor to attend a herd meet. (COJ)

Stin-quiw

this was the Mandalorian verb for 'to sleep'. (KOTOR)

Stintaril

a tree-dwelling rodent native to Yavin 4, it had protruding eyes and long jaws filled with sharp teeth. The stintaril moves on six legs. They often move in packs, devouring everything in their paths. Among the favorite food of the stintaril is the woolamander. Note that The Wildlife of Star Wars indicates that this creature is called a sintaril, and that it only has four legs. The stintaril was constantly hungry, having an extremely high metabolism, and any individual which failed to locate food could die of hunger in just a few hours. The long, knobby tail of the stintaril was completely hairless, and ended in a three-pronged "hand." (GG2, HTF, ISU, WSW)

Stinwise, Rudig

this man was a native of Demophon, and was working in the factories there at the time of the Clone Wars. He was one of the large population who were apathetic to the imminent explosion of the Demophon System's star, also known as Demophon, claiming that "he had other things to worry about" before the star exploded. (HNN4)

Stipling

this Imperial Major worked for the Procurement Bureau during the height of the New Order. He was placed in command of a detail searching for doonium and other raw materials for the Imperial war machine. Stipling and his crew never got a chance to report back from their mission to Yen-2, however, as Bel Att and Limna Yith were also dispatched to restore Black Sun's control of the colony. Bel Att captured Stipling and his team and locked them in their shuttle. The hitmen then launched the shuttle into the Verde Asteroid Field on an autopilot setting which took it straight through the belt. The shuttle was destroyed in the asteroids, killing all aboard. (SSR)

Stitar

this was an alias used by Starter, during his attempt to deliver secret information to the Alliance base on Renforra. Stitar was the captain of the scout ship Seeker Cub, which was actually Starter's beat-up X-Wing. (SWJ4)

Stobor

this large predator was native to the upland jungles of the planet Haruun Kal. (SHPT)

Stock Light Freighter

any small cargo ship, such as the Corellian YT-1300. Their small size has relegated them to lesser duty, since the advent of the larger bulk cruisers. (SW, SWSB)

Stock Lights

it was in this bar that Cavv Cryle convinces his nephew, Sienn Sconn, to steal the Super-class Star Destroyer Guardian for the Alliance. (SWJ15)

Stofu Lupinoid

an alien Luke Skywalker finds in the Mos Eisley cantina. Might this be a reference to the Shistavenan Wolfman? (SWR)

Stoga

this desert world was located in a far-flung corner of the Outer Rim Territories. Its remote location and lack of greenery meant that most beings ignored the planet, making it the perfect haven for small bands of criminals who needed to escape Imperial notice. BoShek was among the first to choose Stoga as a refuge, but his anonymity was broken when he met up with Rasha Bex. (SWEOR)

Stohl

this creature's fur is considered valuable, and only royalty and high-ranking officials can afford to use it in their clothing. (POT)

Stokhli

this race of nomads was native to the planet Manress. (EGW)

Stokhli Spray Sticks

this weapon was developed by the Stokhli nomads as a way to capture prey. They were short tubes that shot a spraynet mist to ensnare the prey while also shooting shockstun juice at the prey, they are used primarily by big-game hunters. The Noghri Commandos working for the Empire have also adopted them for capturing their targets. Each of the sticks has a thumb-switch for activation, as well as controls to modify the spray pressure and profile. (HTTE, EGW)

Stokk, Jord

this man, a native of the planet Coruscant, was a known gambler who bet a fortune in credits on the pod races that were popular during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. He was arrested and sent to the Oovo IV prison facility after being implicated in several credit-making schemes. One of these schemes - the intentional crippling of a podracer to ensure a certain local racer was able to win - earned him a bounty on his head from the Galactic Podracing Circuit Underwriters' Union. He believed that he was safe in prison, until Jango Fett arrived on Oovo IV to "rescue" Bendix Fust. During this mission, Jango managed to claim the bounty on Stokk. (BH)

Stokoryce

this was the capital city of the planet Leria Kersil. The city was opened to refugees during the Separatist crisis that rocked the Old Republic, just before the Clone Wars, but only for males with a net worth of 750,000 credits or more. (HNN5)

Stomorr

this was one of the larger settlements located on the moon of Skalokor. Stomorr was also one of the largest trading centers found on the moon. (GMR10)

Stompasaur

this was a slang term for an Imperial AT-AT walker. (SWJ4)

Stone Claws

this was the name used by the native of Lok to describe the conical pillars that were erected in circles around ancient shrines found on the planet. Each of these shrines were circular depressions carved out of the ground, and eight or more stone claws ringed the outside. Xenoarchaeologists were unsure if the stone claws were meant for protection, or were used as markers of celestial events. (SWGAL)

Stone Eel

an eel-like creature, found on the planet Storthus, that is made of animated stone. (DRO)

Stone Grotto

this posh, expensive restaurant was located in the city of Drev'starn, on Bothawui. It had a strict dress code, and reservations were required weeks in advance of a meal. (SPG)

Stone Heart

this YT-1300 freighter made regular runs in Elrood Sector during the height of the New Order. It was captured by Imperial customs patrols when it was discovered that her captain had made illegal weapons upgrades without obtaining the proper permits. (OE)

Stone Mite

this biologically engineered creature was first created during the Clone Wars as the perfect scavenger. No larger than a human hand, a stone mite produced an internal acid which could eat through most known materials. This acid was usually exuded during feeding, to help break down solid matter into a drinkable fluid. In the aftermath of the Clone Wars, entire colonies of stone mites were discovered living in asteroid belts, having escaped from their creators. The stone mite resembled a four-legged scorpion, but lacked the forward claws and the stinging barb. (LTA2)

Stone Mite

believed to have been bio-engineered by Arkania scientists, stone mites first appeared in the Expansion Region shortly before the Clone Wars. They were designed to consume virtually any material, and quickly became the ultimate scavenger on the worlds where they were released. Stone mites were originally thought to have been created to attack and destroy buildings and other non-organic systems, but these creatures could also subsist on the blood and flesh of living creatures. Individual stone mites were hermaphroditic, and were literally born with a clutch of eggs impregnated in their abdomens. This allowed them to breed prolifically, and even orbital bombardment of planets which had been infested by stone mites were often insufficient to kill off an entire population. A group of three stone mites could actually join together and form a symbiotic triont. The Arkanians, despite disavowing and knowledge of the stone mite's development, were instrumental in helping the New Republic devise ways to eradicate a colony on an infested world. The only effective method of dealing with stone mites was to spray the colony with an oxidizing foam, which served to rust them to death. In the wake of the Battle of Endor, many pro-Imperial terrorist groups used stone mites to attack and destroy worlds which embraced the New Republic. (WOTC, VD2)

Stone Mite

this creature, native to Orleon, lived on a steady diet of rock, metal, and most other substances. They were considered the bane of many spacers, since a swarm of stone mites could eat through a starship's hull in next to no time. (MC28)

Stone Needle

located at one end of Beggar's Canyon on Tatooine, the Stone Needle is a natural rock formation that rises out of one fork in the canyon. It makes that particular fork nearly impassable, although the local youth feel that, when racing through the canyon, bypassing the Needle adds up to 5 seconds to your race time. The only two pilots ever to "thread the Needle" were Biggs Darklighter and Luke Skywalker. (SWR)

Stone Ray

see Ral (SPG)

Stonebat

a flying creature native to Yavin 4. (BTS)

Stoneclaw, Arn

this man was a chorba farmer by trade, and was married to Emmi Stoneclaw. They lived on the planet Vernet with their adopted daughter Mair Koda and their own sons, Kristoff and Yuri. (SWJ15)

Stoneclaw, Emmi

this woman was married to Arn Stoneclaw. They lived on the planet Vernet with their adopted daughter Mair Koda and their own sons, Kristoff and Yuri. (SWJ15)

Stoneclaw, Kristoff

this older son of Arn and Emmi Stoneclaw, Kristoff was conscripted into the Imperial armed forces when the Empire took control of his homeworld of Vernet. Much to the dismay of his younger brother, Yuri,

Kristoff welcomed the Empire and embraced the New Order. When Yuri and their adopted sister, Mair Koda, tried to break Kristoff out of Imperial service, he calmly explained his choice to stay before trying to hold them at gunpoint and turn them in as traitors to the Empire. Mair managed to rescue Yuri before Kristoff could shoot him. (SWJ15)

Stoneclaw, Yuri

this fifteen-year-old boy was the younger son of Arn and Emmi Stoneclaw. Yuri loved his older brother, Kristoff, and was saddened when Kristoff was conscripted by the Empire. He begged his adopted sister, Mair Koda, to help him rescue Kristoff, only to learn that Kristoff had embraced the Empire. When Kristoff threatened to shoot him for betraying the Empire, Mair rescued Yuri and took him away from Vernet. She took Yuri under her wing, and employed him as a crewman aboard the Blue Boy. (SWJ15)

Stone-dwellers

this was the term used to describe those wealthy individuals who lived in The Stones section of the city of Iritsa, on Chazwa. (ND)

Stonehill Industries

makers of asteroid ships. (HTTE)

Stones, The

this section of the city of Iritsa, on Chazwa, was the home to the wealthier inhabitants of the city. Its buildings were permanent, windowless structures of gray and red stone, and were in sharp contrast to the ramshackle construction of The Clog. (ND)

Stoneshell

a mollusk native to the lakes of Dellalt. (HSL)

Stonesinger

the immature form of the Vaathkree, Stonesingers resemble large pebbles. They are often mistaken for stones by off-worlders, so Stonesinger colonies are often guarded by mature Vaathkree. Each Stonesinger takes twenty years to mature, and each Stonesinger must choose their permanent form before aging. The Stonesinger then concentrates on the final form and continues to grow until it can no longer manipulate its shape. (TTSB)

Stonia

this is the capital city of the planet Almania, and was a Je'Har stronghold and the seat of their government. Wondrous buildings filled the city, but all were destroyed when Dolph launched his initial attack. His droids, with their hidden detonators, exploded within many of the Je'Har buildings, laying waste to many structures and killing all but the leaders of the city. (TNR)

Stonn, Li

Luke Skywalker used this alias during his travels with Akanah and their search for the Fallanassi. (SOL)

Stoopa

this was the Huttese word for "fool," or any foolish being. (GMR5)

Stop Comm Order

this order was issued by the Old Republic's Central Posting Service whenever a criminal or organization was removed from the current list of wanted beings. A Stop Comm Order was usually issued once a criminal was apprehended, but could be issued indefinitely as part of a wider police operation. (JQ8)

Stopa, Kroddok

this Obroan Institute scientist and explorer was named the expedition chief when the New Republic required information on the planet Brath Qella. Stopa had been working with Josala Krenn on Babali when the orders came through, and they were brought to Brath Qella by the ferret ship IX-26. They lacked decent cold-weather exploration gear, and requested a backup be sent. They then set to work trying to uncover possible evidence of a Qella settlement beneath the glaciers covering the planet, but were killed when their camp was destroyed in an avalanche. Their bodies were recovered by the crew of the Penga Rift. (SOL)

Stopa-Krenn Glacier

located on the planet Brath Qella - also known as Maltha Obex - this huge ice flow was the site of an avalanche that killed Kroddok Stopa and Josala Krenn. They had arrived on the planet to search out evidence of the Qella civilization, but were buried under ice and snow in the avalanche. The glacier was renamed in their honor by the Alpha Team from the Obroan Institute. (TT)

Stor

this man trained at the Imperial Academy on Carida, and was a model student until graduation. Stor was given command of his cadet company, and forgot to keep an eye on the Cliffside walkway. The entire front rank of cadets walked off the cliff before Stor realized that he had mistimed the turn. He was dishonorably discharged from Imperial service. (SFE)

Storinal

this beautiful world was loyal to the Empire, even in the wake of the Battle of Endor. The natives believed that they were put on the planet to make it beautiful, and worked tirelessly to sculpt and shape the landscape into wondrous gardens and forests. The planet's landscaping and natural beauty made it a tourist attraction. (WS)

Storini Crystal Deceiver

this creature was dreamed up by Garik Loran and Kell Tainer, in an effort to get back at Eurrsk Thri'ag for his many pranks and practical jokes. Kell doctored up an encyclopedia entry for the Storini Glass Prowler, then let a prowler loose in Eurrsk's rooms. According to Kell's entry, the deceiver is virtually identical to the Storini Glass Prowler, except that it is far less common and far more dangerous. Found on the planet Storinal, the crystal deceiver's jaws secrete a poison that is quite dangerous to mammalian creatures. Its favorite prey are the creatures which eat the glass prowler, so the crystal deceiver mimics the prowlers actions in order to lure the hunters to it. As the hunters try to eat what they believe is a prowler, the deceiver attacks with its poisonous jaws. Crystal deceivers are extremely dangerous to mammals, because once a deceiver has the scent of a mammal, it retains it virtually forever, and continues to track the mammal down and hunt it. Large, healthy mammals such as humans often don't feel the effects of the deceiver's poison. (WS)

Storini Glass Prowler

this crystalline arthropod walked on two legs, and used its other two legs to grasp its prey. It is native to the planet Storinal, and is harmless to most creatures. Males of the species are extremely competitive, and will fight to the death over just about anything. (WS, SOC)

Storm

this mercenary ATR-6 transport was owned a mercenary group which tried to bring down Twin Suns Transport Services and the Azzameen family. (XWA)

Storm

this was the name of Prince Isolder's custom-modified Miy'til fighter, designed by Isolder himself. The creation of Storm cost Isolder nearly a half-million credits, but the ship can stand alone against some of the galaxy's best starfighters. Many of Isolder's designs later found their ways into future versions of the Miy'til fighter. Like the Miy'til basic design, the seven-meter-long ship has a number of miniaturized components that reduce weight and overall size. Storm was also equipped with a prototype R2-Series 5 astromech droid presented to him by Princess Leia Organa during her initial negotiations with the Hapans. Storm has four banks of Nordoxicon 38 anticoncussion-field generators, and a sensor and communications scrambler similar to the A-Wing. A set of triple-linked laser cannons sits at the nose of the fighter, and an ion cannon studs the tip of each wing. A mini-concussion missile launcher is slung beneath the wing, and twin thermal-detonator bombing tubes on the wings carry eight bombs each. The ship is propelled by four Incom 6X4 fusial thrust engines connected to a Tykannin Class-4 power converter. Each engine is linked to a large Cygnus turbo generator, and the entire engine package allows the Storm to reach speeds one-third faster than the A-Wing. (CPL, EGV)

Storm

this gas giant was the fifth and outermost planet of the Naboo System. It had 32 natural satellites, two of which were settled. The third moon was set up as a penal colony by the human inhabitants of the planet Naboo, while the tenth moon was the site of a TaggeCo mining operation. (SON)

Storm Banquet

this was the name given to the feast which was held each spring on the planet Kariak. The rains that accompanied the change in season forced the Eickarie and the Lakra underground. Vast chambers were set aside for the banquet, which was held in honor of the change in season and the promise of new crops and herds. (FB)

Storm Cannon

this was the name given to any mobile weapons platform used for anti-starfighter defenses. (SWJ2)

Storm Commandos

this was a group of Imperial soldiers trained to specialize in guerilla warfare. They were generally referred to as Shadowtroopers, and were initially trained by Crix Madine. Despite the fact that Madine himself defected to the Alliance, the Empire maintained the Storm Commandos because of the niche they filled in the overall Imperial war machine. Storm Commandos were distinguished by their black armor, which was modeled after that of a standard scout trooper. Up to forty Storm Commandos worked as a single unit, divided into four groups per team: standard commandos; assault troops trained for vehicle combat and artillery; soldiers who were experts at sabotage, demolitions and stealth; and a tech team devoted to keeping gear functioning or jury-rigging makeshift supplies. (GG9, ROE, SWDB)

Storm Fleet

this was the name used by the Confederacy of Independent Systems to describe the secretly- developed fleet of heavily-armored warships they brought to bear against the Old Republic, just months after the Battle of Geonosis. The appearance of the Storm Fleet - its ships were disguised as common freighters to allow them to travel easily across the galaxy - was developed by Kuat Drive Yards and served to reinforce the theory that the Separatists had been building up for war long before the Battle of Geonosis. The Storm Fleet was used to subjugate neutral worlds through sheer destructive capability, allowing the Separatists to take whatever resources or facilities they needed to continue the Clone Wars. The Storm Fleet was ultimately destroyed by Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker, with the help from their clone trooper pilots. (SS1, LEV)

Storm Guard

this was the primary weather watch operated on Cloud City. It is located in Kerros' Tower. (GG2)

Storm IV

one of Bespin Motor's military model cloud cars, the seven-meter-long Storm IV was a twin-pod car with handling and propulsion characteristics similar to a B-Wing fighter. They were driven by a Quadex Kyromaster ion engine, modified to fit between the small pods. Each pod could hold a single passenger. The Storm IV could reach a maximum cruising speed of 1,500 kilometers per hours, with a flight ceiling of 250 kilometers. They were also armed with two fire-linked blaster cannons, one on the outboard side of each pod. (SWSB, NEGV, JT)

Storm Killer

this heavily-armed YT-1300 freighter has been extensively modified beyond its stock condition. The cockpit has been moved from the right side and nestled in between the forward mandibles. The lower gun is a turret-mounted Tomral heavy laser cannon, while the upper gun is an Incom W-34t turbolaser. This impressive weaponry is supported by a Hi-fex proton torpedo launcher and a pair of retractable Taim & Bak Kd-3 light blaster cannons. It is a well-armed transport ship, with enhanced shields and lateral controls for in-flight combat. The weapons draw power from the ion drives, and the additional capacitors and machinery required for them takes up much of the passenger space on the vessel. The Storm Killer was therefore only useful for transporting very valuable cargoes. (SWJ9)

Storm Skimmer

manufactured by Uulshos, the Storm Skimmer patrol sled was an old repulsorlift scout craft used during the early years of the Empire. They were mothballed when the various speederbikes were developed, but were returned to service following the Battle of Endor. Each 4.6-meter sled is designed to be a fast transport craft for one or two stormtroopers. One trooper sat in front, the other in back, and could quickly arrive at the front lines of a battle. Each trooper operated a heavy repeating blaster mounted near his cockpit. It was never designed to be a full-combat vehicle, but rather a deterrent. (DE1, DESB)

Storm Squadron

this was a division of the Alliance's Special Forces group known as Eclipse Team. (AIR)

Storm Unit

a group of Imperial commandos intercepted by Keyan Farlander near Turkana. (XW)

Storm Unit

this team of Alliance soldiers was the primary part of a strike force which rescued a group of Echo Base prisoners from Imperial captivity, shortly before the Battle of Endor. (XWA)

Storm Unit

the Imperial assault transports used by the Storm Unit commandos at Zaarin's beam-weapon research station. (TIE)

Stormcaller, Andrephan

this native of Entralla joined the military at the age of fifteen, lying about his age in order to join the Old Republic's armed forces. Never far from the military, Stormcaller was a member of the Delephran militia, and participated in the destruction of the pirate groups in the Vexta Belt. Stormcaller and Airen Cracken were generally credited with the formation of the Alliance's Special Forces division, and Stormcaller was instrumental in the development of the Infiltrator units. He later served as a colonel in the New Republic and was the leader of the Red Alpha unit, until the Republic declined to assist his homeworld liberate itself from the Pentastar Alignment. He resigned his military position and formed the Red Moons, an elite mercenary group which constantly thwarted the Alignment's movements. He recruited many of his former Republic soldiers to join the Red Moons, and they quickly formed a force that began to harass the Alignment. (SWJ3, SWJ8, TFE, AIR)

Stormclaw

this Imperial-class Star Destroyer was attacked by pirates near Jjannex II. Dren Jamer discovered the location of the pirate ship just before it attacked, allowing the commander to prepare for the attack and drive the pirates off. (TBSB)

Stormhawk

an Imperial-I class Star Destroyer, the Stormhawk was part of Grand Admiral Thrawn's fleet during the early years of the New Republic. The Stormhawk was one of the Star Destroyers that Thrawn used to attack Bpfassh, as one of his first moves against the New Republic. Later, the Stormhawk was deployed to the planet Saarn, in an effort to destroy an old Alliance base there. (HTTE)

Stormhawk

this was one of the many Victory-class Star Destroyers which were still active, as part of the Imperial Navy, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Stormswimmer

this modified Corellian Engineering Corporation CR-90 corvette served as the flagship of the Black Hammer pirates. (CCW)

Storm-swimming

this unusual sport was popular among the Nautolan people of Glee Anselm, and involved moving through the planet's oceans during the intense hurricanes and storms that ravaged its surface. During these storms, ocean currents reached incredible speeds, and Nautolans challenged each other to remain within the currents for as long as possible. (TCD)

Stormtrooper

these white-armored Imperial troopers were the footsoldiers of the Emperor's war machine. Considered separate from both the Imperial Army and the Imperial Navy, they were extremely loyal to the Empire but are also extremely expendable. The stormtrooper evolved from the clone troopers of the Grand Army of the Republic, which were first utilized during the Clone Wars. Although there were many rumors about stormtroopers being clones of Jango Fett, in general the average stormtrooper appeared to be a normal human male who fit within a certain physical and mental profile. In reality, several different sources of clones were used to create stormtroopers, especially when the Empire ramped up its military forces when Emperor Palpatine began consolidating his power. Eventually, baseline human were conscripted or allowed to join the ranks of the stormtroopers. They wear an 18-piece suit of white armor covering a two-piece, temperature-control body suit. The armor houses an energy source and various implements, and snaps together around the trooper. The helmet contains a polarized visor and communication gear. The utility belt worn at the waist had compartments for a grappling line, spare batteries, and survival gear. The image of the white-clad soldiers was one of the primary ways the Empire instilled fear in its subjects, but the bright white armor was not suited for many environments, as the Empire learned at the Battle of Endor. So, in the years following the death of the Emperor, Imperial factions began camouflaging their armor to blend in with their surroundings. Stormtroopers train for one of a number of different mission profiles, based on the environment in which they will operate. Basic training allows stormtroopers to operate in temperate or controlled interior environments, but there are several specialized types of stormtroopers: Cold Assault Troops wear specially-modified armor so that they can operate in harsh, frozen environments; Zero-G Troops, also known as spacetroopers, wear highly-refitted, vacuum-resistant armor for use in deep space; Scout troops are assigned to garrison posts, employing speeder bikes and other swift craft to patrol surrounding areas; Aquatic Assault troopers, also known as seatroopers, are equipped to operate in marine or other underwater arenas; Desert Assault troopers, also known as sandtroopers, were trained to do battle in the harsh conditions of a desert; Radtroopers were specially-trained to perform operations in areas with high concentrations of radioactivity. Shadowtroopers, also known as the Storm Commandoes, were among the most elite special forces troops in the Imperial military. The one exception to the standard stormtrooper is the Dark Trooper, which was a mechanized weapons platform. (SW, SWSB, ISB, DF, TSC, TME, COTF, BW, ROE, CHRN, RESB, SWI76, NEGW, SWI82)

Stormtrooper One

SoroSuub's basic blaster rifle model, it is used by the Empire to arm its stormtroopers. It was a clone of the BlasTech E-11. (RPG, CSA)

Stormtrooper Two

this was SoroSuub's second-generation blaster rifle, designed for use by Imperial stormtroopers. (GG9)

Stormtrooper X

this was the monicker of a rogue Imperial stormtrooper who took up a life of crime after defecting from Imperial service. He gathered to himself a band of mercenaries and outlaws, each of which was as deadly a shot and as mean as he was. They worked for many crimelords as hired guns and smugglers, until Narbuj Desilijic Preor put out a bounty on his head. Narbuj accused Stormtrooper X of stealing a cache of spice and credits, but Stormtrooper X disappeared from sight. He was known to have traveled in a modified N-1 fighter named Rogue Imperial 5, and had a red 'X' painted across the front of his stormtrooper helmet. (GMR6)

Stormview Lounge

located on Darknon Station, this rundown tavern was the main source of food and beverages for visitors. It was named for the views it gave visitors of the Itani Nebula, although by the time of the Battle of Yavin most of the transparisteel windows had been boarded up. (PSPG)

Stormwind

this Victory-class Star Destroyer was under the command of Captain Jarroth during the Galactic Civil War. It was stationed in the Virgillian System, and performed a number of surgical strikes aimed at routing suspected Alliance support cells. (TBSB)

Storrd Township

this was one of the larger settlements established on the planet Seregar. It grew steadily while the planet was a thriving mining location, but began to run down as the major corporations pulled out. (ND)

Storthus

this planet is the homeworld of the giant stone eels. (DRO)

Story Pebbles

this was the name given to the special stones used by Ewok shamans to cast forth and tell the fortunes of individuals. (ECAR)

Story Platform

a table-like device which displays the words and pictures for a number of children's stories. (DA)

Story-chain

these small chains were created by the Twi'lek race. Each link in the chain provided details on a specific part of a larger story. The entire story could be told and retold by following the links in the story-chain. (VF)

Storyteller

this was the pseudonym adopted by Rivo Xarran during the time he hid from Boba Fett on the planet Ladarra. He was loved by the children of New Hope Settlement because he constantly told them stories about the greater galaxy. (TFNR)

Stouker Concussion Rifle

this weapon was developed to fire compressed bullets of ionized air, which exploded in shock waves at their target. They were originally created for use by Imperial forces, but many Stoukers were modified by hand by the Sissk band of Trandoshans, from standard Stouker concussion chambers added to existing rifle parts, in order to accommodate the Trandoshan hand. (DF, JKA)

Stovax

this planet was on the list of candidates for exploration by the Obroan Institute, and was nominated by Kroddok Stopa. However, Stopa could generate enough interest, grants or funding to launch an expedition. (SOL)

Stowaway, The

an underground casino in Imperial City on Coruscant. (CPL)

STR2434

this was the survey report filed by Trask, and detailed information on the planet Trinta. (DOE)

Strabin Sector

this area of the galaxy was terrorized by the Exelis Hunters gang, until the Ubese bounty hunter Arcuse captured them. (AIR)

Strag

this ancient game, played on a holographic playing table, relied heavily on strategy and tactics. Each side had twelve tokens, and it required an intellectual mind to complete the game. Thus, years of practice and an excellent memory were required to master it. Those who achieved a high rate of proficiency and success were awarded the title of Adept. (MJH)

Strag Sector Match Championship

this was the largest single strag tournament in the galaxy, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (MJH)

Stragos

this was a common name among the Cathar race. (UANT)

Straight Street

this was one of the largest thoroughfares located in the spaceport city of Mos Eisley, on the planet Tatooine. It crossed in front of the Ubrikkian Trade Tower, intersecting with the Outer Curved Street and Spacers Row. (IWS)

Strak Tower

located in Corint City's Overtown district, on the planet Pirik, Strak Tower was the center of the planet's governmental administration. (SWJ4, SWJ10)

Straken

this man was a member of the Alliance, and held the rank of Commander within the Intelligence division. (DOE)

Strako

this was one of the largest cities found on the planet Looivia. (HNN5)

Strange, Jan

this woman was one of Imperial Intelligence's most valuable agents, although no one was ever sure where she had come from. She didn't graduate from the Imperial Academy, nor was she ever involved with COMPNOR. Nevertheless, she proved herself to be an excellent agent who could interrogate any being and discover the location of rebellious cells. In reality, though, Strange was actually the Alliance agent Jan Ors, who had been honored with the Nebula Award at least once for her work as Jan Strange. She used her interrogations as a way to pass information to the Alliance, having arranged for the rebel to be captured and brought to her. (CRO, WOTC)

Stranger Squadron

one of the TIE Defender squadrons dispatched by Colonel Vessery to recover Rogue Squadron above Corvis Minor Five. (IR)

Strangle Vine

see Halkra (SPG)

Stranglethorn

this carnivorous vine was native to the Forest Moon of Endor. In its immature stage, the stranglethorn was an unassuming little plant, and was often cultivated by mistake by the Ewoks. As it grew, the stranglethorn developed a central stalk and a pair of toothed mandibles, which it used to grab and eat its prey. (ECAR)

Strask

this Bothan name was given to newborn males. Translated into Basic, it meant "scholarly" or "educated." (GCG, WOTC)

Strassa

this was one of the many Imperial escort carriers during the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Stratablock 7

located next to the Moridebo District, on the planet Metellos, Stratablock 7 was one of the many surface communities that sprang up to handle the rampant overcrowding experienced on the planet. However, Stratablock 7 only admitted the wealthiest of the "groundpounders", and was home to both the CarsinShare and Nonsu corporations. (CCW)

Strather

this alien race was first discovered by Duros explorers. (GMR2)

Strathmore, Eriann

a model Imperial citizen during the New Order, Lady Strathmore despised the weak and the non-human. She was also somewhat addicted to gambling, and spent a good deal of her life trying to get into the Sabre Club. (WSV)

Strati

this inept man was part of the rebel underground which opposed the Imperial subjugation of Edan II. (IAG)

Stratis Games

this collection of quasi-athletic events was regularly held on Hallrin IV. It included the Multi-Sentient Unarmed Combat Rounds, a regulated form of inter-species combat. (TTSB)

Strato-hopper

this large, armed airspeeder was developed by the Empire for use in navigating troops to the surface of a planet, where harsh or inhospitable conditions prevented the use of simpler dropships. Strato-hoppers proved too cost-prohibitive to maintain, however, and were eventually dropped in favor of cheaper dropships. (PZZ2)

Stratos

this was one of the original cloud cars produced by Incom Industries, based on the repulsorlift technologies discovered during the construction of Cloud City. (GG2)

Stratosphere

one of the most affordable hotels on Cloud City. (ISU)

Stratt

this was one of the many species of vermin which existed in the cityscape of Coruscant. When they were first born, stratts resembled cute balls of fur. However, they grew rapidly to become two-meter-long, muscular creatures which were covered with jet-black fur. Originally brought to Coruscant by illicit pet dealers trying to make a quick credit, stratts were abandoned when they outgrew their cute stage. These released stratts found a niche in the undercity of Coruscant, hunting at night when their black fur gave them the most cover. (CCW)

Stratus, Alto

this Jabiimite led the faction of his people that decided to side with the Separatists during the height of the Clone Wars. His parents were killed when the Lythian Pirates ravaged much of Jabiim, and Stratus never forgot that neither the Republic nor the Jedi Knights traveled to Jabiim to eliminate the pirates. Years later, Stratus still harbored a deep-seated resentment toward the Republic, which only intensified with the outbreak of the Clone Wars. Citing the Republic's inability to reach peaceful resolution to the hostilities, Stratus demanded that Jabiim secede from the Republic and thrown off it's oppressive yoke. He further blamed the Republic as well as the Jedi Knights for not assisting Jabiim during the outbreak of Brainrot Plague and the separate invasions of Trandoshans and the Lythian Pirates. His speeches, in which he declared that Jabiim would fight to the death to defend its freedom, and would "send the Jedi home in body bags", became popular on many Separatist-held worlds in the Outer Rim Territories. During the Battle of Jabiim, Stratus and his rebels nearly won through the front lines of the Jedi-led clone troopers, killing more than 9,000 Republic forces before he was nearly defeated by a group of Jedi Padawans whose Masters had been killed in battle. He chose to regroup the Jabiimite forces and launch an all-out attack at Cobalt Station. He believed that his chances for success were excellent, especially after Count Dooku dispatched a squadron of enhanced assassin droids to augment Stratus' forces. However, he didn't count on the strength of will of the Jedi Padawans who had survived the battle. His forces struggled with the young Jedi for several days before both sides were wiped out. In the final act of the battle, Aubrie cornered Stratus with a pair of lightsabers. Stratus refused to die, and pulled out a blaster to shoot the young Jedi in the chest. As she died, however, Aubrie fell forward and drove her lightsabers into his chest. Stratus also died on the battlefield. (SWI68, SWI69, RBJ)

Streak

this was a nickname used to describe the Wookiee Jedi Knight, Lowbacca, during his tenure as a pilot in the New Republic Navy's Twin Suns Squadron. (SBS, Y)

Streaked Velker

similar in many respects to the true velkers of Bespin, the streaked velker was nevertheless much smaller than its cousin. Measuring just twenty meters across its wings, streaked velkers were named for the striated pattern of colors which adorned their hides. Scientists believed that the stripes and patterns were a rudimentary form of camouflage, meant to hide the streaked velker among the clouds of the gas giant planets they inhabited. Unlike the velkers of Bespin, streaked velkers were solitary predators who jealously guarded their hunting territories. (WOTC)

Streeg, Newen

this Imperial Governor was in control of the territory surrounding the Sisar Run during the last years of the New Order. Unlike most other ranking Imperial officials, Streeg never attended the Imperial Academy and had minimal ties to the Navy. His mother was killed when he was thirteen, and had already accepted the New Order as a perfect government. He knew that his mother had been killed by pirates, and blamed her death on the chaos that sprang out of the last days of the Old Republic. He traveled his territory only irregularly, as he suffered from spacesickness. He was sworn to removing the criminal element along the Sisar Run, but had no idea how widespread Sprax's empire actually, nor how well it was connected. In fact, Streeg purchased nearly all his starship replacement parts - and many new starships - from one of Sprax's own organizations. (SSR)

Streen

this given name was common human males across the galaxy. (GCG)

Streen

a gas prospector at Bespin, he was getting on in years when Luke Skywalker first met him at Tibannopolis. He could use The Force to detect when Bespin will erupt large amounts of gases. He agrees to study the Force with Luke on Yavin 4, and was nearly consumed by the spirit of Exar Kun. Kun tried to use Streen to kill Luke, but the combined power of the other students destroyed Kun's spirit forever. When the Leviathan of Corbos was unearthed, he traveled to the planet with Kyp Durrón, Dorsk 82, and Kirana Ti to defeat the creature. Streen later put his powers to use in an attempt to decipher the Books of Massassi, and eventually became a Master himself when Luke went off in search of his mother with Akanah. Streen continued to serve as a Jedi Master during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, but chose to remain behind the battlelines as a teacher. He traveled with the youngest of the Jedi trainees aboard the Errant Venture until a temporary base was established at the Maw Installation. Streen was ultimately one of the handful of Jedi Knights to survive the conflict with the Yuuzhan Vong, choosing to travel to Dathomir with Kirana Ti and Damaya to help establish a Jedi training facility on the planet. (JS, COTF, BTS, JAL, UF)

Streen Squadron

this was a group of scout troopers dispatched by the Empire to overtake the New Republic base on Saarn, shortly after the re-appearance of Grand Admiral Thrawn. (SWJ6)

Street of Glory

this wide avenue, located in the city of Theed on Naboo, was the site of a Trade Federation concentration camp following the invasion of Naboo. (IOT)

Streev, Mika

this native of the planet Rabaan was the world's premier warrior during the Galactic Civil War, and had earned the sunburst sigil his people bestowed on combat artists. He defeated Andos Delvaren in single combat, earning the position of champion of the planet Rabaan, and was the chosen fighter whenever a dispute arose with the S'krrr. However, Mika's abilities and energies were solely directed at fighting and his personal image. When it came to politics, love, or other activities, Mika either didn't care or wasn't interested in interrupting his training to bother. Many of his rivals hoped to exploit this trait, but couldn't. It was Mika who was chosen to battle the S'krrr Sh'shak, and he was accompanied to the Combat Moon by his lover and fellow warrior, Leda Kyss. While there, they discovered that Andos had led Imperial forces to the moon, in an attempt to instigate a war between Rabaanite and S'krrr. Mika was forced to kill the Imperial trooper named Jan, and would have killed Andos had he not fled in terror. Streev then had to get Sh'shak to halt the Combat and confront the Imperials. He managed to do this just as Modigal Glave shot Sh'shak. Streev fired at the Imperials, scattering them and saving Sh'shak. The Imperial regrouped and captured them. They were nearly rescued by an Alliance X-Wing pilot (who looks a lot like Wedge Antilles), and Mika managed to cut off Glave's arm. However, Glave shot and killed Leda with his other hand while escaping into his own ship. Streev and Sh'shak fled the Combat Moon and agreed to join the Alliance after they hunted down Delvaren and Glave. (SWJ9)

Strelk

this man served the Empire as a Captain in the military, and was in command of the IMIIF-138 training facility on Sirpar, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (SWJ2)

Streln

this Imperial Corporal was part of the design team which created the YI-5 surveillance and investigation droid. When Ysanne Isard, the Director of the Imperial Security Bureau, discovered that the YI-5 had one red sensor eye and one blue sensor eye, she ordered Streln and his fellow engineers - Vypass and Gonrey - to be executed for insubordination. Only the effectiveness of the YI-5 in bringing Vune Willic to justice, coupled with the assurances of Imperial engineers, caused Isard to rescind the termination orders. (PH)

Stresscrete

Streysel Island

this island, located in the Vaynai Archipelago on the planet Vaynai, was owned by Gallo Memm during the height of the New Order. Note that this location is also designated as Streysal Island. (GMR8)

Striber

this was the rarest of the Iskalonian species, and was native to the planet Julsujod III. The Stribers were distinguished by their smooth and finless bodies, with crystal-blue skin and thin bodies. These Iskalonians were also telepathic, but could also communicate via normal speech. They also chose their words wisely when answering a question, choosing to review all aspects of a situation before acting. To many, this made the Stribers appear less intelligent than other Iskalonians, since there was a noticeable pause before the answered. As a species, the Stribers were slowly dying out, and many xenobiologists felt that the Striber race would become extinct within a few generations after the Galactic Civil War. (EGA, GMR1)

Stribos System

a planetary system located near the Demophon System, it was largely uninhabited when Soron Hegerty discovered it while searching for a suitable world on which to relocate the Ssither. (SN)

Strident

this modified Imperial Nebulon-B frigate was destroyed during the Galactic Civil War, when it was ambushed by Captain Kuuztin. (TIE)

Strident-class Star Defender

produced by the Corellian Engineering Corporation, this was one of the first Star Defender ships produced for the New Republic. (JE)

Strider

this species of tall, thin-limbed creatures was native to the planet Khomm. It was once wild, but centuries of cloning by the Khommites created striders which were meek and passive. (EGP)

Strider

another name for an Imperial AT-ST scout walker. (CPL)

Strider

the strider was a huge, lumpy beast native to the planet Kintan. The strider had muscular shoulders, with arms that ended in three fingered hands. The strider had large, powerful legs. It appeared to have no neck, and its head seemed to be part of its chest. The strider is now extinct on Kintan, but a number of them have been bred off-planet by the Hutts, for use as bodyguards. (CCG)

Strider

a six-legged reptilian creature native to the planet Sedesia, striders were used as mounts and transports because the planet's high gravity prohibited most forms of repulsorlift vehicles. (SWJ6)

Strider

this species of two-legged predator was native to the planet New Plympto. (CCW)

Strider Seven

the AT-ST which first locates Han and Leia on Dathomir. (CPL)

Strike

codename of a group of Alliance Y-Wings supporting the Tela transport group. (TIE)

Strike Foil

see S-foil. (SWTJ)

Strike the Moons Flightknife

led by Liak ke Mattino, this Adumari fighter group was the first to offer a simulated battle challenge to Wedge Antilles and Red Flight, during the negotiations between Adumar, the New Republic, and the Empire. Once Red Flight had scored kills with low-powered lasers on the Strike the Moons Blade-32 ships, Wedge offered them another chance at the duel. This was not standard protocol, but neither were simulated kills. Liak ke Mattino and his group accepted, and they continued to learn from Red Flight's tactics. When Red Flight was exiled by perator Pekaelic ke Teldan at the insistence of Tomer Darpen, the Strike the Moons Flightknife assisted them in leaving Cartann City. (SOA)

Strikebreaker

this TaggeCo riot patrol vehicle is a heavily-armored gunship designed to frighten rioters off or kill the ones that remain. It was 14 meters in length, and required a pilot, co-pilot, and 7 gunners. It could also transport up to 40 troops. It was heavily armed, carrying four medium laser cannons, two heavy repeating blasters, a grenade mortar launcher, and a stun barricade. (CSA)

Strike-class Cruiser

a medium-duty battle ship produced by Loronar for the Empire, they have a modular design which allows them to be configured for specific missions. These ships measure 450 meters in length, and can transport enough troops to support an assault company, two AT-STs, one AT-AT, and several support speeders. Slight modifications will allow them to carry a complete squadron of TIE fighters or a planetary assault cruiser packed with five AT-ATs. They are well-armed, carrying 20 turbolasers, 10 turbolaser batteries, 10 ion cannons, and 10 tractor beam projectors. They use 160-SBD shields to protect a 100-RU hull, and have a top speed of 18 MGLT. (HTTE, ISB, TIE)

Strikefast

this Imperial Victory-class Star Destroyer was commanded by Captain Voss Parck. Parck was in command of the Strikefast when he discovered Thrawn in the Unknown Regions. (SWJ7, SWJ11)

Striker

this was the brand name of Oriolanis Defense Systems' projectile pistol. A primitive though prototypical weapon, the Striker fired a solid bullet at its target, much like a slugthrower. It was known for its durability and availability. (EGW, AEG)

Striker

this assault shuttle was owned by Ree Shala, during the early years of the New Republic. It was armed with four laser cannons and a tractor beam projector. (SWJ6)

Striker

this was one of the multitude of Imperial-class Star Destroyers which made up the Imperial Navy fleet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Striker

this was a simple form of projectile handgun developed on the planet Mawan. These pistols were used during the Great Purge. (JQ6)

Striker

this crimelord rose to power on Mawan, in the wake of the Great Purge. He earned the name Striker during his capture of the city of Naatan, when his soldiers used Striker pistols to kill their enemies. During the years following the Battle of Naboo, Striker was one of the three most powerful beings in Naatan, rivalled only by Feeana Tala and Decca. When Obi-Wan Kenobi, Yaddle, and Anakin Skywalker arrived on Mawan to negotiate a settlement between the crimelords, Anakin discovered that Striker was actually his old nemesis, Granta Omega. As Striker, he hoped to lure a member of the Jedi Council to Mawan and kill them, in an effort to impress the Sith Lord he believed to be gathering power in the galaxy. While he did succeed in taking Yaddle's life, the bioweapon he used did nothing to the population of Mawan. When it was revealed that Striker was actually Granta Omega, Decca decided to hedge her bets, and formed an alliance with him. She added her fleet of ships to Omega's weapons, producing a strong opposition to the work of the Jedi Knights. (JQ6)

Striking Sarlacc

this was one of the attack postures used by the teras kasi martial artform. (DMSH)

Strill

this predatory mammal was native to the planet Qiilura, where it was often captured and training as a hunting beast. (RCHC)

Strip, The

this section of Vark Street, located in Takari on the planet Iyuta, was filled with bars and inns which catered to the Imperial forces in the system. (SWCP)

Strip-cam

this specialized form of camera system was developed by the Old Republic military during the early stages of the Clone Wars. As the name implied, a strip-cam was a miniaturized camera system that was contained on a strip of material no thicker than a sheet of flimsiplast. This allowed a strip-cam to be placed atop or on the side of any flat surface, without the obvious node of a camera eye being exposed. (SWI81)

Stripe

this was one of the two domesticated zeles owned by Kirlan Swens, on the planet Dagro, during the height of the Clone Wars. (SWI76)

Striped Masters

this was another name for the Kasa Horansi. (PG1, AE)

Strobstock, Elspeth

this middle-aged woman held the position of Dame within House Barnaba at the height of the New Order. She was considered beautiful by nearly everyone, but was also known as a tremendous flirt. She married Heron Strobstock, an officer in the Imperial Army, and worked to ensure that he eventually obtained a position of power within House Barnaba. (LOE.)

Strobestock, Heron

this man was a Colonel in the Imperial Army when he married Dame Elspeth of House Barnaba. Despite his low status within House Barnaba - he was awarded knight status after his marriage - Sir Heron was well-regarded by the leaders of House Barnaba, and was believed to have been in line for a barony at the height of the New Order. (LOE)

Stroiketcy

the third planet in the Yavin system, Stroiketcy was often considered to be a large asteroid attracted by the gravity of Yavin and its primary star. Its chemical makeup was almost 94% water, with very little rock showing up in planetary probes. Stroiketcy followed a wild, elliptical orbit, and supported a possible form of organocrystalline life. The name Stroiketcy came from a Corellian term meaning "tailed one." The planet's wildly elliptical orbit actually brought it within the orbit of Yavin for a short time, within 100,000 kilometers of Fiddanl. (GG2)

Strok

this was a common name given to Zabrak males. Like many Zabrak names, it related to survival characteristics, and meant "axe". (GCG)

Strok

this Imperial Captain served the military under Governor Touno on Svivren, during the last years of the New Order. Touno assigned him to Mara Jade, who was acting as the Emperor's Hand in the elimination of Dequc's Black Nebula empire. Unknown to Mara and Touno, Strok was secretly working as an informant for Dequc. Mara was forced to shoot him in self-defense, after he encountered her on Qiaxx. (MJEH)

Strom

this Imperial Commander maintained a tense, working relationship with Senator Greyshade of The Wheel, during the years following the Battle of Yavin. A tall, bald man with a well-muscled frame, Strom commanded a unique cruiser that resembled a small Star Destroyer with the front third of the ship removed. Shortly after the Battle of Yavin, Strom's small fleet attacked and destroyed a House of Tagge convoy, in an effort to discredit the Alliance. He used captured Alliance soldiers as evidence, leaving them inside damaged ships and adrift between the, hoping that any eventual rescue mission would see Alliance personnel and immediately assume it was an Alliance attack. Strom's ultimate goal was to rescind the no-fly rules surrounding The Wheel, so that he could take the station's profits for himself and capture the Alliance forces he believed were using The Wheel as a form of sanctuary. When Greyshade managed to capture Strom, he demanded a chance to become Strom's partner in return for Leia Organa. Greyshade took the first opportunity to doublecross Strom, who was drugged before he knew it and awoke to learn that Greyshade had stolen profits Strom had taken from the Tagge transport. In a rage, Strom set out to destroy Greyshade. His plans were utterly smashed when Master-Com discovered the recordings which were hidden inside R2-D2, detailing the Empire's plans to take over The Wheel. When these were broadcast over the station's public communications systems, the gamblers of The Wheel rose up against Strom's forces. Strom himself tried to flee the station, but was killed when he confronted Greyshade one last time. Rather than allow Strom to shoot him dead, Greyshade lobbed a proton grenade at Strom, who died instantly in the blast. (MC18, MC19, MC23)

Strom, Pleth

this man served as a Ensign in the armed forces of the Old Republic, and was one of the many fighter pilots who saw combat during the Clone Wars. Ensign Strom and his wingmate, Erk H'Arman, were part of the team that was dispatched to Praesitlyn, under the command of General Khamar, to protect the Intergalactic Communications Center. Unfortunately, Strom was killed in the initial engagement with the Separatists, presumably after crashing into one of the huge number of droid starships that filled the space above Praesitlyn. (JT)

Strong Arm Droid

this was the name given to the guard droids used by Tig Fromm, during the years leading up to the Battle of Yavin. (OWS)

Stronghold

this cold, rocky world, located in the remote Taldot Sector, was an Alliance safeworld during the Galactic Civil War. Its surface was a rocky collection of mountains and chasms, and was wracked by intense storms. The Alliance formed its base there by gouging out the stone and creating a network of caverns and tunnels. The planet itself had no strategic value, but the families of front-line Alliance soldiers were secreted here during wartime. The transport ship Celestial was bound there when it was overtaken by the prisoners it was transporting. The ship was lost in Otherspace, where the Charon were able to discover the planet's location. The Charon, under the command of the former Grand Moff Ravik, tried to destroy the planet, but were thwarted in their efforts by Alliance agents. The Charon Starship Desolate was nearly destroyed on the planet. There was no known sentient life on Stronghold, and very little plant or animal life survived on the rocky surface. (OS2)

Stroon

the uncaring owner of the Starhunter Intergalactic Menagerie, Stroon and his slavers would capture any being which looked exotic and place it in their "menagerie" for display. (DCAR)

Stroth

this balding, heavy-set man was once the leader of the Crimson Nova chapter of the Bounty Hunter's Guild, during the last decades of the Old Republic. When he got too old to actively participate in hunts, he turned the chapter over to his own apprentice, the Cathar female known as Mika. Many claimed that he lost his nerve when he lost his right arm in a fight with a Jedi, but Stroth only used the experience to deepen his understanding of the galaxy. Stroth remained a leader within the Crimson Nova chapter, tempering Mika's fiery anger with his own patience. When Mika accepted Kh'aris Fenn's contract to hunt down Jedi Knights for the Separatists, Stroth was strongly against the idea, citing decades of bounty hunter policy on the matter. However, his own arguments held little weight with Mika, whose parents had been killed by the Jedi, albeit during an illegal death-stick dealing operation. He correctly assumed that the Jedi would eventually discover the source of the bounties and hunt down Crimson Nova, but Mika refused to back down. When Mace Windu and several other Jedi finally arrived at The Rig, Stroth was forced to stun Mika into submission to ensure that she didn't get herself killed in the fight. He then turned Mika over to the Jedi for questioning, and provided the Jedi with the name of their benefactor, Kh'aris Fenn. Stroth also agreed to terminate the agreement Crimson Nova had with Kh'aris, to put an end to the hunting of the Jedi. (RSF)

Structgel

this material is used to bond pieces of permex and transparisteel. (ML)

Strutter

this was the Ewok name given to those beings who were possessed by the Totem Master. (ECAR)

Stubtail Greysor

this was one of the many species of domesticated greysor, bred on the planet Naboo. They were named for their short tails. (WSW)

Study Circle

this section of the primary city on Kegan was dedicated to the understanding of the planet's history, as well as the discovery of new knowledge. It led into the Garden Circle. (FFT)

Study of the Galactic Balance of Power: The New Order's Greatest Challenge

this book, written by Kaelldin Krothburt, explores the Galactic Civil War and the effect pirates, mercenaries, and bounty hunters had in it. It was published by DataLine Press, number 543.21, in Dx#4/R2P format. (GG9)

Stufar's Grand Dancitorium

this upscale establishment was located near the Sovar Imperial Hotel in Equator City, on the planet Rodia. (SESB)

Stump

this was the Basic translation of a term used by the ancient Mandalorians to indicate a small-time criminal. (KOTOR)

Stump Lizard

a reptile native to the jungle of Yavin 4. (HTF)

Stumpweed

a grass favored by Carbool Nuum. (JTH)

Stun Baton

this was Merr-Sonn's version of the stun-stave. (EGW)

Stun Cloak

a special cloak which is often used by bounty hunters. When draped around a victim, the stun cloak inflicts an electric charge across its area, incapacitating the victim. (OS)

Stun Gauntlets

this was a form of personal protection device which was worn on the forearm, and delivered a potent electric shock whenever it touched exposed flesh. (GUN)

Stun Pole

this weapon is very similar to a force pike or electro-jabber. (SWJ9)

Stun Staff

a small, defensive weapons which is used to stun an opponent. (SWJ9)

Stun Steps

this starship security system used the natural electrical conduction properties of steps and ramps to generate an electromagnetic, neuro-shock field. When installed on a starship entry system, stun steps neutralize a being who is trying to steal the starship. Stun steps were installed with remote-activation systems, keeping them separated from the basic starship security systems and ensuring that they remain live even if other security measures were bypassed. (SWJ13)

Stun-cannon

a portable weapon that emits energy beams with just enough strength to stun, but not kill, most organic life forms. (PDS)

Stuncuffs

modified handcuffs that produce an electric shock proportional to the force of the prisoner's struggling. (JS)

Stungun

a small pistol which generates only enough power to stun an opponent, thus requiring less power than a blaster. (HSL)

Stunner Net

a protective device used by explorers and scientists, a stunner net is set up around the perimeter of a campsite. It is essentially a charged mesh that produces a stun effect when touched. (ISU)

Stun-stave

a large, handheld stick which produces a shock when one end it touched to an opponent or victim. (HSE)

Sturdiplast

an inexpensive material used to make doors. It is strong enough to keep air conditioning in, but can easily be damaged. (COJ)

Sturicis

this nasty-tempered scavenger was native to the Forest Moon of Endor. The Ewoks often used hunting nets to capture sturicis, in order to prevent them from raiding the Ewoks' gardens and foodstores. (GMR9)

Sturm

this was the name of one of Talon Karrde's pet vornskrs. (HTTE)

Sturm Dowel

this small cylinder is part of every blaster power pack, and is one of the most important components of every blaster. The dowel is used to disperse built-up energy in case of an overload. If the dowel is removed from the power pack, the pack will explode due to the unabated build-up of energy. (CFG)

Sturn

Sturn was a smooth-skinned humanoid employed by Lady Valarian as a front desk clerk at the Lucky Despot. Sturn was an indentical twin to Anton. (TJP)

Stusjevsky

a Chadra-Fan working as a sniffer in the vine-coffee groves of Plawal, at the time when Roganda Ismaren was trying to resurrect the Eye of Palpatine. (COJ)

Styanax

this oceanic creature, native to the polar oceans of the planet Tralus, was hunted for both sport and food. Most styanax lived in the Sea of Jarad, where they returned to mate each year. The average styanax was a snakelike creature, whose body was protected by overlapping scales of armor. At the end of its tail, the styanax had a poisonous stinger, which it used to disable its prey. (WOTC, CCW)

Stydge

this Trandoshan and his brothers, Rydge and Xydge, served as chiefs of security for the band Distraction, during the early years of the New Order. They all wore full-body armor, as well as a blaster at each hip. (WOA28)

Stygium

this rare, crystalline mineral is found only on Aeten II. Sienar Advanced Projects discovered that the crystal could be used to create a full-effect cloaking system that defeated the sensors and security systems of larger craft. (X1)

Stylopad

a writing implement that produces a thin, hardcopy strip. (COJ)

Stylus Ship

also known as an iceborer, this long, narrow starship was used to break through the icy crust of moons and planets in order to reach the minerals and ores hidden beneath. The ship was tapered near the top, coming to an armor-plated point, and equipped with a simple drive system that moved it toward the planet and then back out of the hole it formed. It had only enough maneuverability to move back and forth, and the drive systems were not sufficient for system-to-system travel. They were used almost exclusively by miners, since the design of the stylus ship prohibited any additional systems. A single missile launcher was located in the nose of the ship, which could be used to launch an explosive warhead prior to the nose of the ship piercing the surface, helping the ship to borer deeper into the planet's crust. A stylus ship had to be transported into its target system by a carry ship. (VP)

Styx System

as a youngster, Luke Skywalker often dreamed of being Commander Skywalker, a star-fighter who frees slaves in this far-flung system. (MC17)

Suarbi 7

this planet is the seventh in the Suarbi System. It is a gas giant orbited by an asteroid belt and dozens of moons. (IJ)

Suarbi 7/5

this savannah-covered moon orbits Suarbi 7, a gas giant ringed by asteroids and dozens of moons. A couple of human settlements evolved on the moon centuries before the birth of the New Republic, as did the Jensaarai. It was later renamed Susevfi. It was here that Leonia Tavira returned with the Invidious after her pirate raids. It was also here that she held Mirax Terrik, after Mirax was captured on Nal Hutta by the Jensaarai. (IJ)

Suarbi System

located in Quence Sector, this planetary system was where Leonia Tavira and the Invidious ended up after jumping away from a battle with New Republic warships. It was on the moon Suarbi 7/5 that she discovered the Jensaarai and the Saara-kaar after shooting the moon's incompetent Imperial governor. (IJ)

Suba

this Imperial Lieutenant served as the chief of security and political officer aboard the Executor, ensuring the loyalty of his fellow officers to the New Order. Suba believed that Darth Vader had some hidden weakness that prevented him from killing Luke Skywalker outright. (CCG4)

Sub-Adult Group

also called a SAGroup, this was the largest branch of COMPNOR, exceeding two trillion members at its height. This branch comprised youngsters who were brought up understanding the New Order, and was headed by Imperial officers who kept the Empire's darker secrets from the sub-adults. (ISB)

Subaqua Blaster

this powerful version of a blaster was produced by the Mon Calamari, for use underwater or in aquatic environments where a standard blaster might short out. It was designed to fit over the forearm, and took advantage of the cooling effects of the surrounding water to keep the weapon from overheating. (SWI66, UANT)

Subaquatic Manufacturing Economies

this was an Old Republic training course, created to give accountants a basic education on the economics of creating and sustaining production on planets where there was no landmass. The course was held on Calamari. (SWI65)

Sub-circles

these were the divisions established within each of the primary social castes of the Nagai race. These social castes were known as Circles, with membership being determined by birth. Within each Circle were several Sub-circles, and individuals could move upward through the Sub-circles during ritualized combat. (GMR1)

Subjugator

this Imperial-II class Star Destroyer was part of the Imperial fleet searching for a group of defectors, shortly before the Battle of Endor. It was forced to let the defectors go by a group of Alliance warships. (XWA)

Subjugator

a Victory-class Star Destroyer that was commanded by Captain Kolaff. It was deployed in the Relgim Sector, and was chosen by Lira and Denn Wessex as the ship which would travel to Kwenn space station to capture Walex Blissex. It was destroyed by the Alliance strike force accompanying Blissex during the Galactic Civil War. (SF)

Subjugator

this Imperial Nebulon-B2 frigate was destroyed by Alliance forces during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (XVT)

Subla Ransom

known primarily in the Mid Rim, Subla Ransom manufactured a variety of cargo freighters. (FOP, PP)

Subla Ransom Medium Cargo Hauler

this 75.5-meter-long freighter was capable of transporting up to 700 metric tons of cargo. This reliable craft required a crew of five, and could carry up to five additional passengers. The freighter was armed with a turret-mounted blaster cannon. (PP)

Sublight Acceleration Module

also known as a SLAM, this device was developed for use on the Imperial missile gunboat during the Galactic Civil War. The SLAM's function was to increase sublight speed by as much as two times, allowing the gunboat to quickly enter and exit an engagement with the enemy. The SLAM's power source drew power from all other shipboard systems, but was not considered a primary component. Thus, if weapons or target control were activated while the SLAM was engaged, the SLAM would be disengaged in favor of routing power to those systems. (TIE)

Sublight Drive

any starship propulsion system that allows the ship to move through realspace. They most often employ fusial thruster which force charged ions through an exhaust port. This use of a fusion reaction to generate thrust often results in high levels of radioactive emission, which are illegal within a planet's atmosphere. (SWSB)

Sublight Queen

Nien Nunb's light freighter. (MTS, EGC)

Sublight Transponder

an early version of the IFF transponder. (TOJ)

Submersible Environment Module

a heavily-armored starship, the SEM is used to penetrate hostile planetary environments. The SEM uses the quantum armor developed at the Maw Installation as a protective skin. It is connected to a mothership or orbiting station by an energy tether which uses its own magnetism to keep the SEM attached to its base. If snapped, the tether can reconnect itself if broken. They are equipped with various manipulatory appendages, depending on the application. (SA)

Subpro

this Inner Rim manufacturer produced some very reliable shipboard avionics packages before it entered into the starship market by assisting Incom in the design of the Z-95 Headhunter. Its location in the Rim meant that it didn't get the recognition other manufacturers received, and so many of its designs went unnoticed except by Rim travellers. It also began to manufacture freighters and transports which gained wide acceptance in the Rim, despite the familiarity of many Corellian designs. (SCRE, SWSB, EGV)

Subrat

this was the derogatory term used by the elite classes of the planet Mawan to describe those individuals who worked in the tunnels beneath their cities. Ironically, after the Great Purge, it was the subrats and their underground companions who rose to power in the aftermath. (JQ6)

Subsonic Grenades

small detonation devices which use low-amplitude sound waves instead of explosives. (DFR)

Subspace antenna

this was a horseshoe-shaped magnet wrapped with two layers of conductive wire, used to generate the magnetic fields required to send a subspace transmission. Often, the wire used was of a superconducting material that was exceptionally thin, requiring more than ten kilometers of wire to fully cover the U-shaped frame. (HTTE)

Subspace Communications

this subscriber service provided communications access to thousands of users along the Sisar Run. Owned by the Nalroni crimelord Sprax, Subspace controlled a wealth of deep-space communications satellites which brought almost instantaneous communications to its subscribers, without the need for a dedicated HoloNet access. Subspace was the cleanest of Sprax's ventures, although its satellites maintained a log of every user, including what channels they tuned in to and where they were. This allowed Sprax to maintain tabs on a wealth of individuals and groups. (SSR)

Subspace Image Transmitter

developed by Renn Volz, this device was used to project a holographic image to a remote location. Mira Volz used one to alert her father that she was no longer under the control of Captain Bzorn. (CSWEA)

Subspace radio

a radio which employs a special antenna to send a transmission via subspace frequencies. These signals are almost instantaneously received at their destination. (HTTE.)

Subspace Relay Station

this 100-meter long, spindle-shaped station is depolyed in many star systems for a number of uses. Often denoted as an SRS, these unmanned stations are placed in a slow, distant orbit around a system's star. From this vantage point, they relay intra-system broadcasts. The SRS can also act as a collision defense system, since they are armed with twelve laser cannons. Any inbound asteroids can be shot down with these cannons before they collide with the station. (TA)

Subterine

this was the name given to a repulsorlift vessel which could tunnel into and through the ground. (SWIE)

Subterrel

this planet, located beyond the Outer Rim, was the site of a variety of mining colonies during the last decades of the Old Republic. Much of the workforce used on Subterrel was cloned, created by the Kaminoans to be hard-working and durable, but completely obedient and loyal. It was here that Dexter Jettster first encountered the Kaminoans, and learned about obscure items such as the Kaminoan Saberdart. (TCG1, SWI66)

Subu, Odie

this young woman served the Grand Army of the Republic as a reconnaissance scout, during the height of the Clone Wars. She was known to be an excellent swoop and speederbike rider, and could negotiate complex terrain with ease. Much of her skill was attributed to her small size, although this proved to be something of a liability when it came to handling weapons. To compensate, Odie had her tech teams modify the grips of her blasters, so that she could fire them in combat. When General Khamar was dispatched to defend the Intergalactic Communications Center on Praesitlyn, Odie was among the many scouts who accompanied Makx Maganinny to gather intelligence on the Separatist forces there. During the initial phase of the Separatist attack, the small naval fleet supporting General Khamar took heavy fire, and many ships were disabled and fell to the planet's surface. After Odie led Lieutenant Colonel Kreen to a defensive rock formation, she was caught in a sandstorm caused by the crash of Erk H'Arman's starfighter. She managed to rescue Erk and get him back to the main encampment, but only after surviving exposure in the desert. For any number of reasons, Odie found herself deeply attracted to Erk, and they found that they were also good team in the field. Erk even found himself referring to Odie as the "best wingmate a fighter jock ever had." They were briefly assigned to a listening post established by the Freedom's Sons and Daughters militia, but were overrun by battle droids when the Separatists launched their attack. They were buried beneath the rubble for several days before being discovered by a scout force led by Grudo. In the confusion, Odie shot Grudo, thinking he was an enemy. His death left her with a hollow feeling inside, despite the insistence of those around her that it was simply a case of mistaken identity. Her mood didn't improve when Anakin refused to accept Grudo's death, but they eventually worked out their differences. Anakin later included her in the mission to rescue the hostages at the communications center, since she was the only person available who had any knowledge of the building's layout. Once the hostages were released, Odie was to maneuver them back to a transport ship piloted by Erk. She decided to remain at the center when she realized that Anakin was still inside, and set off with Raders and Vick to locate him. They managed to locate Skywalker and capture Pors Tonith, and returned to the Republic's main base. When Anakin returned from the final mop-up, Odie surprised both Anakin and Erk by asking the young Padawan to marry them. Anakin agreed, and united them in marriage shortly afterward. (JT)

Success Through Charismatic Influence

this was an Old Republic training course, created to give civilians and non-combat military personnel an introduction on the basics of military leadership. The course was held on Commenor. (SWI65)

Succession Judge

this position was given to a Bitthaevrian who would preside over any succession to the leadership of the m'Yalfor'ac Order. Individual Succession Judges were to be completely unbiased, thereby ensuring that the succession was fair. (AIR)

Succession Pool

this self-contained vessel of water formed the heart, lungs, and liver of a Yuuzhan Vong damutek. The Shapers who traveled to new worlds often filled the succession pool with native aquatic life, thereby feeding and sustaining the damutek. Waste material was also thrown into the succession pool, adding to the nutrients available to the damutek. The pool was filled from below, as the large roots of the damutek sucked up copious amounts of water from the crust of a world. (EVC, FP)

Succubus

an ethereal alien which desires to couple with a human male in order to breed. (CS)

Succulosum Azure

the beautiful flowers of this plant are known to cause severe allergic reactions in human beings. (XWMR)

Sucharme

this planet served as a primary garrison of the Trade Federation, during the years leading up to the Battle of Naboo. The Federation once tried to occupy the planet when an outstanding debt went unpaid. An invasion was launched on the pretext of forcing the native to repay the debt, but was met with stiff resistance from the armed forces. The Federation was eventually ousted, but their ability to blockade a planet was easily proven. The lessons learned at Sucharme went a long way toward the planning of the invasion of Naboo. (GCG)

Sudden Death

this modified MRX-BR Pacifier scout ship was owned and operated by the Iceman. He had gutted the insides of the ship to make room for eight prisoner cells, and added three proton torpedo launchers and three laser cannons to the ship's armaments. (GG6)

Sudden Demise

a phase of sabacc in which two or more players are tied at the end of a match, with hands that do not exceed the score of 23. Each of the remaining players is dealt a single card. If the additional card causes the player's hand to exceed 23, he is out of the match. This continues until only one player is left to claim the pot. (LCF)

Sudden Restoration

this Carosite HS-1 hospital ship has been named for the ship's ability to appear suddenly whenever medical attention is required. The survival rate of injured beings brought on board the Sudden Restoration is legendary. Many of the patients brought on board are transported to Carosi Alpha Hospital for further treatment. The New Republic asked the Carosites to hangar an X-Wing fighter on the Sudden Restoration, in case of attack from Imperial forces. (PG2)

Suel, Jaizen

this Jedi Knight was one of the few members of the Jedi Order to fly a Cloakshape fighter into combat, during the last years of the Old Republic. His modified ship was known as the Dawn Raider. (NEGV)

Suele

this Interdictor-class cruiser was part of the Imperial fleet, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Sufar

this leaves of this low-growing plant could be blanched or fried, or served raw as part of a salad. (SESB)

Sufar

this Corellian outlaw was exiled from his colony for a murder he committed some six years before the Battle of Endor. He was not a physically imposing man, but carried about himself an air of cold-blooded savagery. Early in the era of the New Republic, Sufar was a member of the bounty hunter gang known as Qulok's Fist. (DARK)

Sufezz

this Outer Rim world was the site of a Shrine of Kooroo. (SWJ13)

Sugai Sector

along with the Kakani, Ikenomin, and Fusai Sectors of the galaxy, this sector made up the Outer Zuma region. (GMR9)

Suhlak, N'dru

this young man was washed out of the Alliance's Tierfon starfighter base for his excessive insubordination. However, Suhlak was an excellent pilot, having learned from the likes of Jek Porkins and Wes Janson, and soon found work as a hunt saboteur. Suhlak once tried to evade Boba Fett above Uhlenden by placing specialized transparisteel plates between his Z-95 Headhunter and Slave I. The transparisteel was manufactured to filter out certain wavelengths of light, providing Suhlak with the ability to disappear as long as he remained in line with Fett's ship. He also placed a normal piece of transparisteel behind the optically-filtered piece, in case Fett survived the first one. However, Fett discerned Suhlak's set-up and evaded both pieces. He then boarded the modified Z-95 and took possession of Suhlak's cargo, Ob Fortuna. The two met up several years later, during Boba Fett's search for answers surrounding Neelah and Kuat of Kuat. This time, Fett hired Suhlak to transport him to Tatooine and back as fast as possible, following the damage to the Hound's Tooth and the loss of Slave I. He kept his part of the bargain, eventually returning Fett to Dengar and Neelah aboard the Hound's Tooth near Oran-m. (SLS, HM)

Suicide Peak

this specialized obstacle was used on swoopchasing courses. In its basic form, the Suicide Peak is a modified version of the Pop 'n' Drop obstacle. However, the Suicide Peak employs a drop off of up to 30 meters between the top of the front side of the bank and top of the back side. The gap between the banks is also increased, often to fifty meters. (BSS)

Suicide Tooth

this device resembled a regular human tooth, but was filled with deadly gas before being inserted into the jaw. When a human was forced into a situation where death was imminent, they could use the suicide tooth to kill their captors as well as themselves, thereby eliminating the threat. (SWG3)

Sujir

this man was a member of the Karazak Slavers Cooperative team sent to capture Janissa Locrin. (GG11)

Suka

this was a common name among the Menahuun people. (UANT)

Sukarian

this H'drachi (human?) served as the Vicebaron of M'haeli when Lando Calrissian and Mara Jade stopped there, during their search for information on Jorj Car'das. (VOF)

Suki

this woman was native to the planet Gadrin, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Suki and her friend, Amaya, spent much of their free time roaming the bars of Gadrin for men to have fun with. (EOS)

Sul

this was a common name given to Zabrak males. Like many Zabrak names, it related to survival characteristics, and meant "second-born son". (GCG)

Sula

this woman, the Queen of the planet Presteen during the height of the New Order, was also a noted sabacc player. (RESB)

Sulahb

this Sullustan starship mechanic was a quiet, hard-working being who was very meticulous about her work. (GMH)

Sulamar

one of the few Imperials who survived the early years of the New Republic, Sulamar sought power under the guise of a General, a rank which was never recognized by the rest of the Imperial forces.. He aligned himself with Durga the Hutt in the early planning stages of the Darksaber project. When Crix Madine was captured trying to sabotage the battle station, he revealed that Sulamar was really a bungling fool who couldn't hold a position because of his constant failures. (DS, ECH)

Sulan Bek

this was a noted member of the Arkanian race. (UANT)

Sulen

this was one of the most common female names among the Corellians. (GMR9)

Sulfaro

this plant is found on the planet Kirdo III, and is a food source used by the chooba. (GG4)

Sulfur Archway

this was the name given to a section of the Agrilat Swamp Circuit, one of the most popular swoop racing courses of the New Order. (SWGAL)

Sulfur Lake Pirates

this gang of pirates, with members and chapters from across the galaxy, was active during the height of the New Order. (QQRG)

Sulfur Slug

this disgusting parasite was native to the planet Lok. (SWI62)

Sullinil's Calamari Cuisine

this restaurant specialized in the preparation and serving of Mon Calamari delicacies. (GG11)

Sullorians

an alien race. (BHSW)

Sullub Soonin

this Sullustan served as Drev Jalok's co-pilot aboard the Skyjumper. (SWJ5)

Sullust

primary planet in the Sullust system, known for its mineral mines and technologies. It is a volcanically-active world with a hot, noxious atmosphere wracked by violent storms. Thus, the native Sullustans prefer to live underground, in the cool, humid caves that riddle the planet's mantle. There are also a number of underground lakes and caverns that support a surprising amount of life forms. The huge, diversified SoroSuub Corporation grew out of the caves, and when the Sullustan Council faltered, SoroSuub announced that it was aligned the planet with the Empire. Many of the working class Sullustans could not believe this, and a wave of Rebellion swept through the planet's inhabitants just before the Battle of Endor. It was then allowed to be the stop-over site for the massing Rebel fleet prior to the destruction of the second Death Star. (ROTJ, SWSB)

Sullust

this New Republic CR90 Corvette was part of the force sent to liberate the planet Ciutric from the control of Prince-Admiral Krennel. It supported the flagship Emancipator, along with several other Corvettes and a trio of Nebulon-B frigates. The ship took a tremendous pounding in the battle, and barely survived. (IR)

Sullustan

this race of small, mouse-like humanoids was distinguished by their huge black eyes, loose jowls, and pointed ears. They salivate quite often, and live underground to avoid Sullust's inhospitable atmosphere. Their ingenuity and adaptability has allowed them to create huge underground cities, and their technology has grown at an incredibly fast rate. They have an intense sense of direction, having lived in caves all their lives, and have the uncanny ability to remember a path or map exactly, even after the first time they see it. Thus, many of the Sullustans have become pilots and navigators. Many Sullustans, after the age of 30 standard years, begin to experience corneal defects, and must be fitted with special visors. (ROTJ, AC, MTS, COJ)

Sullustan

this was the native language of the Sullustan people. (EGP)

Sullustan Blast Rifle

see Kylan-3 (AEG)

Sullustan Council

this was the primary governing body of the planet Sullust, during the last decades of the Old Republic. Most often, the President of the Sullustan Council also served on the Board of Directors of the SoroSuub Corporation. This became more and more apparent after the election process was expanded to include all shareholders of SoroSuub, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. (HNN4)

Sullustan Gin

an intergalactic alcoholic spirit. (TJP)

Sullustese

this was another name for the language of the Sullustan race. (SON)

Sullute

this MC40a was part of the Alliance's fleet, during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Sully Tigereye

this Trunsk was a decorated member of the Special Forces of the Alliance and the New Republic, as a member of Andrephan Stormcaller's Red Alpha unit. When Stormcaller resigned his commission after the Republic ignored the Pentstar Alignment's takeover of Entralla, Sully and several other members of the unit left with him. They formed the Red Moons mercenary unit, and fought the Alignment themselves. Sully was the leader of the group which was sent to Gabredor III to rescue the children of the Cantras Gola ambassador from the Karazak Slavers Guild. (SWJ3, SWJ8, TFE)

Sulon

an arable, inhabitable moon of Sullust. The human population was often at odds with the Grave Tuskens that ravaged the plains, especially after the Empire imported base-stock Tusken Raiders from Tatooine to assist in rooting out rebellious individuals. Much of the moon's surface was used as farmland, although the ground was hard to work and most settlers barely eked out an existence. (DF, DF2, RAG)

Sulon Star

this cargo ship made regular run within the Sullust System, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (RAG)

Sulorine Sector

this area of the galaxy bordered Ansuroer Sector and the Iotran Expanse. (SSR)

Sulphor

this planet, a ball of searing rock, was the innermost world of the Velus System. (CCW)

Sulphur Pits of Vulcar

this vast plain of sulphur-laden geysers and sinkholes was located on the planet Vulcar. The working conditions at the Sulphur Pits were comparable to those at the Spice Mines of Kessel. (MDCAR)

Sult

this was one of the more common Kel Dor surnames. Its meaning translated into Basic as "female ruler" or "queen". (GCG)

Sultur

this was one of the largest landmasses found on the planet Zolan. When the Zolandars were forced to discover a way to fight back against the intense solar radiation which was bombarding their planet, most of them fled to the Sultur continent. (GMR10)

Suluk

this Imperial ETR-3 escort transport was used during the Galactic Civil War. (XWA)

Suma

this tall, reedy plant is native to the planet Naboo. It spreads when its sticky seeds attach to the bodies of the swamp animals which eat it, like the pom hopper. The petals of the suma's flower crushed and mixed with water by the Gungans to create ink. (GF)

Sumarin

this remote world was known its wondrous, atmospheric composition, which was known throughout the galaxy as the Seven Skies of Sumarin. (MJH)

Sumichan

this female Chiss warrior was one of the pilots who accompanied Jagged Fel and Shawngyr Nuruodo on their fact-finding mission into the New Republic, after the Yuuzhan Vong invaded the galaxy. Sumichan remained with the Chiss squadron after the Battle of Ebaq, and served under the command of Eprill while Jag accompanied the Solo family on a mission to restore communications across the galaxy. (FH1)

Su-mil

this younger Eickarie was part of a small group that agreed to help the Empire of the Hand defeat the Warlord, some twenty-two years after the Battle of Yavin. Su-mil was a member of the Meen-tris family, which in turn was part of the Sav-ro clan and the Hu-shi-crive tribe. He urged cooperation with the Imperial 501st Legion's stormtroopers, despite the angry words of Ha-ran and other elderly Eickarie. Su-mil agreed to help Twister and his troopers enter the Warlord's fortress, on the condition that they freed the Eickaries who were being held prisoner there. Twister reluctantly agreed to the bargain, knowing that his troops needed every advantage they could obtain. Unknown to Twister and Aurek Company, Su-mil had a plan of his own. He pretended to be one of the Eickarie who supported the regime of the Warlord. As soon as they were underneath the Warlord's fortress, Su-mil betrayed the stormtroopers to the Lakran mercenaries. During their interrogation by the Lakrans, however, Su-mil pointed the muzzle of his weapon at Twister's eyes, left and right in turn, to indicate whether or not he was telling the truth. Whenever he pointed at Twister's left eye, it indicated a lie; at his right eye, the truth. In this way, Su-mil was able to get the Imperials deep inside the Warlord's lair with minimal loss of life. Then, when the Imperials freed the Eickarie prisoners, Su-mil deferred to Ha-ran, allowing the old Eickarie to speak to the prisoners and ensure that they agreed to the United Tribes Agreements. Then, as the combined forces reached the Warlord's central chambers, Su-mil and his soldiers burst through the doors in front of the Imperials and attacked the Warlord. The Eickaries eliminated the Warlord's bodyguards, but Su-mil kept his end of the bargain and left the Warlord alive for the Imperials to capture. Despite his bravery and heroic actions, Su-mil was villified by his fellow Eickarie for striking the bargain with the Imperials, since it deprived the Eickarie and the United Tribes of Kariak of vengeance against the Warlord. Twister then extended an offer to Su-mil, asking if the Eickarie wanted to join the Imperial 501st Legion. Su-mil thought only a moment or two before accepting the offer. After completing his training, Su-mil joined the 501st Aurek-Seven unit, where he became known as Grappler among his fellow troopers. He was part of the unit when it accompanied Chak Fel on a Chiss-led mission to locate the remains of the Outbound Flight Project, and took a large amount of fire when the Vagaari pirates launched their attack. (FB, SQ)

Sumitra Sector

a relatively unpopulated sector of the galaxy during the Galactic Civil War, the Alliance set up one of its fighter bases there, on the planet Tierfon. The Sumitra Sector contains 12,387 planets and moons, making the odds of the Empire finding the Tierfon base extremely slim. (SWSB)

Summat

this is a sacred Fyodoi ritual in which all the tribal chiefs gather and begin shouting at each other in gibberish. They continue for hours until all the chiefs suddenly stop. They stand up and set all but one of the huts on fire. The summat is actually a re-enactment of the Great Cleansing, and helps remind the chiefs of the dangers that come with technological advancement. (PG2)

Summergnat

this tiny insect was known to travel in large swarms, and was attracted by the scent of nerfs. (BP)

Summerside Tour

this was the name of Fitz Roi's Core-wide musical tour, but it was cancelled shortly before the Battle of Yavin for unknown reasons. (SWJ4)

Summertime War

this was the name given to the intense civil war that broke out between the native Korunnai and the off-world Balawai of the planet Haruun Kal, several decades before the onset of the Clone Wars. It began as a clash of interests, with the Korunnai following the grassers who destroyed the jungles, while the Balawai relied on harvesting the bounties of the jungle to make credits from their exports. For thirty years, the Korunnai staged guerilla raids on Balawai operations, while Balawai militia used gunships and other tracking methods to eliminate any threats. Over time, the Balawai discovered that the key to defeating the Korunnai was to eliminate the grassers. Any grasser found in the open was shot on sight, and the Korunnai were forced to respond. Balawai prospectors, known as jups, were ambushed in the jungles and never heard from again. Over the years, Korunnai children were taught to hate the Balawai, just as Balawai children were raised to shoot Korunnai on sight. Because the war was best fought during the late spring and early summer, before the autumn rainy season and the snows of winter made passage through the jungles impossible, the civil war became known as the Summertime War. During the autumn and winter, both sides spent their time getting ready for the next round of fighting. The Korunnai also came to hate the Separatists, since they supplied the Balawai with weapons and technology, while the Korunnai fought with primitive weapons and tactics. The Summertime War dragged on for many years until the Clone Wars, when the Separatists wooed the Balawai with promises of "freedom" in exchange for control of the Al'Har System. This, combined with the attempt by the Jedi Master Depa Billaba to bring the Korunnai into the Old Republic, forced Mace Windu to return to his homeworld. Once there, he and Depa launched a desperate plan to defeat the Balawai and eliminate Separatist control of the system. With victories at the Battle of Lorshan Pass and the capture of Pelek Baw, Masters Windu and Billaba helped the Korunnai finally defeat the Balawai. With the droid control center in Pelek Baw destroyed, the Separatists were also driven from the system. With the end of hostilities, the Korunnai and the Balawai agreed to work together to form a common and equally-represented government. (SHPT)

Summit Class

one of the more famous graduating classes of the Galactic Outdoor Survival School, Summit Class included the Rellarin scouf Lunkar An. Summit Class held all the records for completing their final examinations for seven years, until their time of 129.1 standard hours was smashed by Twilight Class, which finished in just 103.7 hours. (AIR)

Sump

this planet, located along the border between the Mid Rim and the Outer Rim, was the homeworld of the Nuknog race. Nearly a millennium before the Battle of Yavin, the nuknog race literally sold their homeworld to a consortium of unscrupulous businessbeings in exchange for jobs, food, and accommodations. What they got were leftover rations, prefabricated barracks, and generations of indentured and unpaid labor. After several centuries, the Old Republic tried to intervene, shutting down the businesses and ordering hundreds of years of back wages to be paid. Eventually, Sump was returned to the Nuknog people. (IWE1, SWDB, UANT)

Sumptor, Banner

this Imperial officer was part of the team which was stranded on Dolis 3 in the wake of the peace accord signed between the Imperial Remnant and the New Republic. Banner joined Moff Derran Takkar in his plan to disrupt the wedding of Mara Jade and Luke Skywalker, as a way to strike back against the New Republic. Despite his loyalty to the Empire, Banner was unsure about the petty plans of Moff Takkar and his wife, Anlys. He went along with them, traveling to Coruscant and trying to take out Luke in a brawl, but couldn't bring himself to kill anyone. The wedding, in Banner's mind, was a sign that the galaxy was healing itself, and killing someone would only bring more strife. When Anlys ordered Banner to shoot Jari'kyn, so that the Imperials could steal Mara's wedding dress, Banner refused. Instead, he shot Anlys' escort and was nearly killed by Anlys, but Jari'kyn struck the woman on the head with a section of pipe. Banner and Jari'kyn incapacitated the Imperials, brought the dress to the wedding chapel, and then brought the Imperials to jail. Banner then decided to join the New Republic, and told the police about Moff Takkar's plans to disrupt the wedding. (U)

Sumrian

this race is native to the Lol System. They are known for their base-eight mathematical system, which is based on the fact that they have four fingers on each hand. They are credited with creating the Df measurement. (ISB)

Sumteh Ohleyz

this was a response to a clan greeting in the High Tongue, used by many Corellian families during the millennia before the Clone Wars. Usually, one's family name was inserted to indicate more detail on the relationship. Eventually, most families dropped the High Tongue in favor of the Basic language. (MJH)

Sun Beetle

a bantha-sized insect raised by the Kubaz on Kubindi. They were used as beasts of burden until they were replaced by machines. Although it has been deemed illegal, sun beetle fights are often staged in the criminal underground. (GG4, SWJ10)

Sun Caves

these natural grottoes were the home of the Golden Sun. (BGS)

Sun Crusher

third-generation superweapon designed by Qwi Xux and built by Tol Sivron at the Maw Installation. It is a long, four-sided ship about the size of a 6-man fighter, with nearly-indestructible quantum molecular armor plating and a transmitting dish mounted underneath. The dish launches a modulated resonance projectile into a star's core, causing the star to explode. The Sun Crusher flies in a unique upright position similar to a B-Wing, but it has no wings or stabilizers. It was armed with five laser turrets mounted on top and at the four top corners. The prototype built at the Maw was thought to be destroyed by the New Republic after it was recovered from the Maw when Han Solo and Kyp Durrone escaped in it. The Sun Crusher was sent into the core of Yavin to be crushed, but it was later stolen by Kyp Durrone. Kyp was under the influence of Exar Kun and the Dark Side of the Force, although it worked - to a degree - in the New Republic's favor. He felt that the Imperial weapon should be used to harry various Imperial worlds. The Sun Crusher worked to perfection, but Kyp eventually returned from the Dark influence of Kun to return the ship to the Republic. It was destroyed when it was sucked into the black holes of the Maw. (JS, DA, COTF, EGV)

Sun Crystal

this unusual gemstone is found only on the planet Jazbina. The crystals are mined in near-total darkness in order to avoid activating the crystals. When they come into contact with light, the crystals absorb it and then shine it back ten-fold in a blinding display. Jazbinans have been known to become addicted to the intense light the crystals shed, and often stare into the planet's sun in an effort to relive the experience. However, this additional light only damages their eyes further. The only way to cure the addiction is to remain in complete darkness until the urge to look into the light passes. (VQ)

Sun Djem

this was one of the "marks of combat" defined by the Jedi Knights as part of their lightsaber combat training. Sun djem involved the disarming of a opponent without causing physical injury. While sun djem was one of the basic objectives of Form I combat, the focus of subsequent Forms on the control of one's lightsaber made sun djem all but impossible against another Jedi. (SWI62)

Sun Dragon

this is a large, avian reptile. (POT)

Sun Fac

this Geonosian was Poggle the Lesser's chief aide, during the years leading up to the Battle of Geonosis. He was known to be exceptionally intelligent and creative, even for a Geonosian, and played any role that Poggle demanded of him. These roles included attentive aide as well a heartless executioner, although he was most often the Geonosian who first met with offworlders who had business with Poggle. He was also placed in charge of conducting business on behalf of the lesser hives, which many considered an insult to their pride. Sun Fac reveled in this, taking advantage whenever he could, but also earning the hatred of the other leaders. (AOTCN, VD2, GORW)

Sun Guard

an armored unit of ferocious warriors from the Thyrsus System, the Sun Guard was one of many military units that was active during the Clone Wars. (ISB, WOA34)

Sun Gun

this is a form of spear gun used by Sedrian warriors. (BGS)

Sun Jammer

this archaic form of transport used solar wind to move through space. These craft were incredibly large: the main collector dish measured 1,000 meters across, and the main fuselage was 450 meters long. During the Old Republic, and again as the New Order gained control of the galaxy, sun jammer races were quite popular. (GFT)

Sun King

this ancient man was the harbinger of summer, according to the Ewoks of the Forest Moon of Endor. He was the brother of the Leaf Queen and her sister, the Flower Queen. Their power to change the seasons resided in the beautiful Season Scepter, which was passed from sibling to sibling. (ECAR)

Sun Skipper 2000

this form of sun jammer was manufactured by Starshipwrights and Aerospace Engineers Incorporated. It required a pilot and co-pilot to operate, and could carry a single passenger and up to 300 kilograms of cargo. Many of these vehicles were modified for racing applications, during the height of the New Order. (GFT)

Sun Squadron

the designation of the TIE Fighters garrisoned at Revos, on the planet Storinal, shortly after the Battle of Endor. (WS)

Sunaj

the Star Destroyer Relentless was supposed to meet a supply convoy here, but it was destroyed by Alliance forces. (XW)

Sunaj IV

the Imperial frigate Juvani was destroyed by the Alliance near this planet. (FP)

Sunber, Janek

this man was a native of a backwater world who made his own way through the Imperial Academy, relying on brains and physical skills - rather than a Core Worlds background or political maneuvering - to succeed. This meant that, after he proved to be an average pilot during his training, he was relegated to a career in the infantry. Where other officers used their connections to earn promotions, Sunber earned promotions through hard work and diligence. He was one of a handful of officers who worked side-by-side with the troops under his command, which earned him the respect of his troops. Just after the Battle of Yavin, Lieutenant Sunber found himself stationed on Maridun with his commanding officers, Captain Gage and General Ziering. Although Ziering appreciated Sunber's openness and candor, Gage and Commander Frickett thought him to be a pretentious poser whose only goal was to show up his immediate superiors. However, Sunber proved more than capable during an Amanin attack, and Ziering recognized that he was much more capable of commanding these forces than either Gage or Frickett. After Frickett's death and Gage's failure to estimate the enemy, Ziering promoted Sunber to Captain and placed him in charge of defending the survivors. (SWELM)

Sunberry

this species of tree, native to the Forest Moon of Endor, was favored by the Ewoks for its succulent berries. (ECAR)

Sunbird

a Nharwaak transport ship destroyed by the Empire near the hidden Nharwaak base. (TIE)

Sunblossom

this beautiful flower was distinguished by its large blossoms, which opened every morning when the sun rose. Despite their pleasant appearance, a number of potent poisons could be extracted from its petals, leaves, and stalk. (HIV, TCD)

Sunburst Mining

this mining corporation operated a series of mines on the planet Cularin, during the height of the Old Republic. Sunburst spent a large sum of credits in developing a series of mines on Cloud Mountain, hoping to discover the large caches of rare minerals believed to have existed within the Mountain. However, the minerals were never found, and Sunburst went bankrupt when it couldn't repay the debts it incurred while digging the mines. (WOTC, EOS)

Sund

a weapons manufacturer. (CCG3)

Sundance

this light exploration ship, piloted by Kyp Durron, accompanied the Courane and the Fireeater during the defense of Nam Chorios from the fleet of Moff Getelles and Admiral Larm. (POT)

Sundar

the human inhabitants of Sundari. (SWJ5)

Sundari

this planet, the third in the Garos System, was settled about 4,000 years before the Galactic Civil War. It is an arid world, with little or no natural resources except the ores that can be extracted from its rocky surface. A number of mining operations sprang up, and were supported only through sustained trade with Sundari's planetary neighbor, Garos IV. Over the millennia, a mutual relationship evolved which was recently broken. About 200 years prior to the Battle of Yavin, Sundars began moving to Garos IV, and the cultural mix began to grate. An intense civil war broke out, and lasted 82 years before Tork Winger and Tionthes Turi were able to come to an agreement over its ending. Small violations of the truce were noted until the Empire invaded the system, when all such "petty battles" were summarily put to rest. (SWJ5)

Sunder

this was the name of Jedi Master Plo Koon's personal space transport ship. (WOTC)

Sunder 9

this was the codename used by Doctor Nashiak Llalik for his first design of personal power armor. The design itself was scrapped when personal armor was outlawed by the Empire, but he used many of its innovative features in the design of the armor worn by zero-g stormtroopers. The Sunder 9 prototype was armed with a blaster cannon and a flame thrower, and had a rocket pack for quick movements. It provided protection in aquatic and zero-g environments, and used a heat-sensitive body glove to protect the wearer. A sensor package and active monitors provided the wearer with a 270-degree field of vision, in light or dark, and even underwater. (AIR)

Sundiver

this Acclamator-class troop transport was the flagship of the fleet that was assigned to Jedi Masters Saesee Tiin and Plo Koon, during their mission to prevent the defection of Rendili's home fleet, near the end of the Clone Wars. (RDR)

Sundog

a group of Alliance CR90 corvettes that was attempting to supply Harkov's fleet during its defection. (TIE)

Sundown, Taxer

this land baron controlled much of the moisture farming property on Ord Mantell, during the last decades of the Old Republic. He arrived on Ord Mantell with the goal of "cleaning up" the planet, but he simply killed the existing land barons and usurped their operations. Sundown then blamed the deaths on the Mantellian savrips, and incited the villagers to kill the savrips. In the meantime, Sundown set up his operations on Ten Mile Plateau, where he operated a solar energy collection facility. He employed a group of lightsaber-wielding enforcers to protect his facility, in an effort to enhance his projected image as a former Jedi Knight. Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi discovered that the enforcers lacked any independent will, as if Sundown were controlling them with The Force. When the Jedi began to discover Sundown's true motivations, he tried to capture Nella Bold and kill the Jedi. When he tried to escape in Nella's T-24 speeder, Sundown was unprepared for Obi-Wan's attack. Obi-Wan managed to destroy the top fin on the speeder, and Sundown was unable to control the craft. It crashed on Ten Mile Plateau, and Sundown's neck was broken in the crash. Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan then discovered that Sundown had been using a mind-control device to augment his claims of being a Jedi Knight, as part of a grander plot masterminded by Baroness Omnino to discredit the Jedi. (LSOM)

Sun-dragon

according to the mythology of the planet Tatooine, a sun-dragon lived inside the stars Tatoo I and Tatoo II. Smaller cousins of these sun-dragons were believed to inhabit the cores of fusion furnaces. (E3N)

Sune, Jorga

this man was a crimelord who lived in the city of Iritsa, on Chazwa, during the height of the New Order. He was the only serious rival to Hahz Fallone, and the two maintained an uneasy cease-fire in order to keep the city intact. Sune later revealed that he had helped Fallone begin mining the the planet Eckless, but Fallone later stabbed Sune in the back and made off with the Black Sphere. Sune spent much of his resource trying to locate the Sphere. Shortly after the Sphere was returned to Eckless, Sune and his forces were destroyed by an Imperial fleet while they were searching for the location of Eckless. For some reason, they had stumbled into a system which was deemed off-limited by the Empire, as a result of using the coordinates the found in a false Black Sphere they acquired from Fallone. (ND)

Sunesi

this was the sentient race of humanoid amphibians which evolved on the planet Monor II. In their native language, the word Sunesi means "pilgrim." The Sunesi are born as furry, senseless creatures who have little idea of the world around them. They are born with diffuse nervous systems and the ability to breathe in the planet's cirrifog-dense atmosphere. After about 15 standard years, they go into a hibernation-like state and begin to pupate. It is at this time that the cirrifog atmosphere is most important, for the small crystals in the fog are a necessary part of their metamorphosis. When mixed with their natural sweat, the crystals in the cirrifog help create a protective cocoon. Inside the cocoon, the young Sunesi are transformed into adults. However, the cocoon's shell becomes quite hard, and many juvenile Sunesi do not survive their pupation because they cannot break out of it. Those which do emerge from their cocoon become intelligent, hairless adults. The turquoise-colored adults have the ability to speak with their mouths, but can also communicate via ultrasonic waves created within their large crania. Their enlarged heads earned them the nickname "lumphheads." The Sunesi have long, thin limbs, and four thin fingers on each hand. The fact that all adults have survived the metamorphosis has led to a species-wide belief in reincarnation. (SWJ10)

Sunfighter Franchise

an alias used by Han Solo for the Millennium Falcon when he lands on Etti IV after delivering weapons to Duroon. (HSE)

Sunfire 1000

this flame projector unit was developed and manufactured by Merr-Sonn during the years leading up to the Clone Wars. It could be mounted on an atmospheric craft or speeder. (SHPT)

Sunfire Outpost

this remote outpost was located in the deserts of the planet Tatooine, and was established to serve as an early-warning site for vicious storms or Tusken Raider attacks. It was eventually abandoned after a wave of Tusken Raider attacks decimated the support staff and pillaged its supplies. Over time, the ruins of Sunfire Outpost became a haven for desert travelers, although it was constantly under the watchful eyes of the Tusken Raiders. During the height of the Galactic Civil War, Imperial forces tried to occupy the outpost, but were driven off by the Tusken Raiders. (SWMW)

Jedi Master Arca Jeth's Delaya-class courier, the Sungem seemed to many of Master Arca's contemporaries to be too powerful a ship for a Jedi. However, these detractors had never actually been inside the courier ship. He had converted most of the cargo space into Jedi training facilities, and adorned the ship with Jedi sigils and a few personal artifacts. Individual chambers could have their environments altered to suit the needs of alien species, and could help Master Arca simulate hostile environments. (EGV, TOJC)

Sunglobe

an Ithorian light source. Also called a solar globe. (COJ)

Sungrass

this Xiytiar-class freighter was assigned to Wraith Squadron by the New Republic, during the hunt for Warlord Zsinj. Commanded by Captain Valton, the ship was ugly but nonetheless spaceworthy. (IF)

Sun-jammer Racing

this sport was known in casinos which catered to betting on sporting events. (GG11)

Sunken City

as its name implies, this abandoned city has begun sinking below the surface of the planet Aquilaris. About half of the city remained above the water, and the natives of Aquilaris left it in this state as a monument to those that survived its demise. During the last decades of the Old Republic, several podracing courses wound around and through the sunken city. (RAC)

Sunken City Run

this was the name given to the pro-circuit podrace which wound through the continually-changing city of Sunken City, on the planet Aquilaris. (RAC)

Sunlet, Merc

this native of Tirac Munda was a crafty thief with a heart of gold. Well-travelled and highly skilled, Sunlet was proficient in many languages. He was often hired by wealthy individuals who wanted him to find holes in their personal security systems. (CCG2)

Sun-miner

a small spacecraft used by various ancient gas mining crews to collect elements from the corona of a star. (TOJR)

Sunn-Childe, Cody

this anti-Imperial radical was one of Mon Mothma's early supporters, during the formation of the Alliance. An unusual humanoid being with a frog-like face and tall pointed ears, Sunn-Childe later left the Alliance and a life of violence behind. He established a base of operations on an unusual starship, which resembled a floating jungle with a dome-covered city at its core. This starship was capable of inter-dimensional travel, and escaped the known galaxy for many years until Lando Calrissian and Chewbacca stumbled upon it, shortly after the Battle of Hoth. It was on this strange ship that Sunn-Childe and his followers sought to escape from the madness of the Galactic Civil War, after Sunn-Childe himself emerged rejuvenated from the fires maintained by the M'ust race. It was from the M'ust that Sunn-Childe learned to control his desire for violence, and eventually became a peace-loving individual. It was from the Flame-God of the M'ust that Sunn-Childe claimed to have learned the ability to bring his dreams to life, a skill that allowed him to build his wondrous spacecraft and travel between dimensions. However, all his repressed violence manifested itself as the jungle outside the city, where dangerously wild M'ust patrolled the environs, contained only through tremendous effort on the part of Sunn-Childe himself. When Captain Pliikk and her Imperial forces discovered the inter-dimensional location of Sunn-Childe's floating city, she tried to destroy it using the combined firepower of her ships. Sunn-Childe's anger at being attacked flared up, manifesting itself as powerful demons that crippled the Imperial ships. Appalled at his own violence, Sunn-Childe and his majordome Beelyard decided that there could be no peace without sacrifice. Knowing that the Imperial ships were badly damaged, Sunn-Childe called off the demon attack, allowing Pliikk to restart her own assault. Pliikk used energy from her ships' hyperdrives to destroy Sunn-Childe's floating city, but in doing so she stranded her fleet in the interdimensional nothingness. (NEGC, MC46)

this flower is found on the planet Timora. (SWJ4)

Sunrider

this was the name of the small transport ship used by Jedi Master Ikrit, during the early decades of the New Republic. Ikrit found the ship in the hangar at Bast Castle, on the planet Vjun, during a mission to recover the lightsaber of Obi-Wan Kenobi. Anakin Solo, the grandson of the castle's builder, Darth Vader, decided that Ikrit could have the ship for his own use. Ikrit named the ship for Nomi Sunrider, an ancient Jedi Knight who gave up the use of her lightsaber in much the same way that Ikrit had done. The ship was later stolen by Uldir Lochett, when he tried to apprentice himself to the Mage Orloc as a youth. Uldir flew the Sunrider to Exis Station to meet Orloc, and parked the ship in an abandoned docking bay. Unfortunately for Uldir and Master Ikrit, the Ranats which had infested the station dismantled the ship for parts. (VF, KB)

Sunrider, Andur

Andur was the grandson of Jev Sunrider, and followed in his footsteps to take up training with the force. Andur trained initially under Master Chamma, until Chamma could no longer teach him. Andur had not yet completed his training, however. Master Chamma sent him to take some Adegan crystals to Master Thon, and to continue his training on Ambria, so Andur packed up his wife, Nomi, and their infant daughter, Vima, and headed for the Stenness System. However, upon reaching the main spaceport terminal, Andur tried to avoid a confrontation with some thugs and was killed by the bite of a gorm worm when his attention was elsewhere. (TOJ, TOJC)

Sunrider, Jev

this ancient Jedi Knight served as the watchman of the Darada System four millennia before the Battle of Yavin. He was later dispatched to Krayiss Two with three other Jedi Masters, to determine the cause of the evil growing there. None of the Jedi ever returned, but Jev's shimmering ghost soon appeared to his grandson, Andur, imploring Andur to take up the Jedi training nad help confront the growing evil in the galaxy. (TOJC)

Sunrider, Nomi

the wife of Andur Sunrider, Nomi accompanied her husband on a mission to deliver Adegan crystals from Master Chamma to Master Thon. When they were waylaid in the Stenness System and Andur was killed, Nomi suddenly realized that she was as strong with the Force as her husband was, if not stronger. She quickly dispatched the thugs that killed Andur, using his lightsaber to cut them down. She feared the use of the weapon, and later continued her dead husband's trek through the Stenness System to deliver the Adegan crystals to Ambria. There, she herself picked up the Jedi training that was meant for her husband. She trained under Master Thon, who discovered that Nomi was proficient in the use of Jedi battle meditation. Thon also started training Nomi's daughter, Vima. When Bogga the Hutt pursued Nomi and her Adegan crystals to Ambria, Nomi again resisted the use of the lightsaber, but took it up to defend her Jedi Master. She dispatched Bogga's minions, and strode further down the path to becoming a Jedi. It is later revealed by Thon that Nomi's coming is foretold in at least one of the Jedi Prophecies. She was later assigned to assist Ulic Qel-Droma in quelling the civil war in Onderon system, and eventually fell in love with Ulic. That love was short-lived, though, for Ulic fell down the path to the Dark Side of the Force in his attempt to penetrate the Krath. They tried to defeat the Krath in the Empress Teta System, but were repelled. She was part of the Great Council on Deneba, and later returned to the Tetan System to try and persuade Ulic from his dark quest. Her love for him proved to be lesser than his desire to avenge Arca's death, and he left to become Exar Kun's apprentice. She returned to Master Thon, and was caught by Crado and Oss Willum, who had come to kill Thon as part of Exar Kun's pogrom. She and Sylvar were able to stave off the attack, but Nomi was drawn deeper into the Great Sith War. When Ulic Qel-Droma was captured and brought to trial on Coruscant, Nomi went with Cay Qel-Droma and Tott Doneeta to try and appeal to Ulic. His Sith possession was too deep for Nomi's love, and the appearance of Exar Kun only strengthened Ulic's powers. Nomi and the other Jedi were powerless as Kun executed Vodo-Siosk Baas, and struggled to follow Ulic and Kun to the Auril Systems. Nomi went to Ossus to assist with the evacuation of the Jedi libraries after Aleema destroyed the Cron System, and was again caught up in Ulic's demise. After Ulic murdered his brother, Cay, Nomi was so enraged that she used the Force in an attempt to cut Ulic off from the Force. Her anger made the attempt extremely effective, and Ulic was completely cut off from the energy of the Force. She resolved herself to the fact that Ulic would never love her again. In the aftermath of the Great Sith War, Nomi threw herself into politics and was the driving force behind the Exis Convocation, but lost track of her daughter Vima, who stowed away on Hoggon's ship to seek out Ulic on Rhen Var. Joined by Sylvar, Nomi traveled to Rhen Var to recover her daughter. She discovered that Ulic had never forgotten her, and had in fact carved the likenesses of Nomi and Andur into a cliff of ice with Vima's help. However, she was unprepared for Sylvar's arrival on Rhen Var, and even less prepared for Hoggon's killing of Ulic. After Ulic's body disappeared into the Force, Nomi vowed to focus more on the training of her daughter. Although the Jedi histories don't provide any further information on Nomi Sunrider, it is known that her daughter Vima continued the line of Sunrider Jedi Knights, and her line was thought to be ended with the death of Vima-da-Boda. (TOJ, DA, DLS, TSW, EGC, TOJR, ECH)

Sunrider, Vima

the daughter of Andur and Nomi Sunrider, Vima was born with a rich family heritage in the use of the Force. Little is known about her early training following the death of her father, but she showed an innate ability to talk with animals. During the Exis Convocation, Vima grew bored when her mother refused to train. Using her rudimentary skills with the Force, Vima stowed away on Hoggon's and convinced him to take her to Ulic Qel-Droma on Rhen Var. Vima believed that Ulic would train her in the Jedi way, despite his lack of contact with the Force, but was unprepared for his initial wrath. However, Ulic realized that Vima had been sent to him for a reason, and agreed to train her. Vima was a quick study, and soon built her own lightsaber. However, to Ulic's dismay, Vima began to grow impatient with the learning process. She was quickly calmed by Ulic, who feared losing her to the Dark Side of the Force. When Nomi arrived on Rhen Var to take her home, Vima refused to leave Ulic's side. Ulic, for all his despair, discussed things with Nomi and convinced her that he had tried his best to lead Vima toward the Light Side of the Force. When Ulic was killed by Hoggon, Vima and Nomi saw Ulic's body disappear into the Force, and realized that he still had the heart of a Jedi. With his last breath, Ulic proclaimed Vima to be a Jedi herself. Vima returned with her mother, who continued her training. (TOJ, TOJR)

Sunrise

this news program picked up the story initially written by Cindel Towani for The Life Monitor, detailing the various accounts of New Republic armed forces who fought and died during the Black Fleet Crisis. The article, drafted by Hiram Drayson, was designed to help bolster public support of Leia Organa-Solo. (TT)

Sunrunner

this immense, ocean-going cutter was one of the fastest ships on the planet Maramere, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. Ambassador Loreli Ro turned control of the ship over to Nym and his mercenaries, during their search for Sol Sixxa. The Sunrunner was unarmed, so Nym's crew took weaponry from their starship Havoc and mounted them aboard the Sunrunner. The ship was destroyed in the final battle between Nym and Sol Sixxa, when Nym purposely overloaded its power generators and crashed it into the Trade Federation cutter commanded by Ruuk. With the Federation ship out of the way, Nym asked Sol Sixxa to join his mercenary gang in fighting the Trade Federation's occupation of the Karthakk System. (CRBN)

Sunrunner zX

this Ikas-Adno landspeeder measured 6.2 meters in length. (GG7)

Sunry

this former soldier was among the many who fought for the Old Republic during the years leading up to the Great Sith War. A noted pilot, he was crippled in battle, but was later awarded the Republic's Hero's Cross medal for his valor. Sunry and his wife, Elora, were married for many years before it was discovered that Sunry was having an affair. It turned out that the woman he was seeing was actually the Sith officer, Elassa. Sunry admitted his mistake, and agreed to end the affair, only to find that Elassa had been murdered in their hotel room. Sunry fled the scene, but several witnesses saw him leave. He was accused of Elassa's murder and brought to trial, where his old friend Jolee Bindo agreed to defend him in court. As the trial played out, it became obvious that Sunry had been the victim of a Sith plot to infiltrate the Republic's military command. His ending of the affair thwarted that plan, so the Sith chose to murder Elassa and plant his Hero's Cross on her body, in an effort to discredit the Republic by implicating him in the crime. Sunry was eventually found innocent, but Elassa's killer was never identified. (KOTOR)

Sunulok

this Yuuzhan Vong warship, a greater version of the Vuu'spar interdicator, was the flagship of Warmaster Tsavong Lah. Like most of the Yuuzhan Vong forces, the Sunulok had been en route to the galaxy for many years, and certain parts of the ship had begun to die off. Nevertheless, the ship still maintained all its weapons and shielding systems, and served well as the Warmaster's vessel. Primary among the ship's operative systems was the collection of dovin basals it used as a gravity well projector and tractor beam. These dovin basals were used to drag New Republic starships out of hyperspace for boarding. Shortly after the Battle of Duro, the Sunulok found itself under attack from Han Solo and the Millennium Falcon. Solo had been running a series of privateer missions for Luke Skywalker's Great River, and ambushed the Sunulok. In a bold maneuver, Han released a cargo of liquid hydrogen in the vicinity of the Sunulok and began firing into it. The hydrogen didn't burn, lacking oxygen in the vacuum of space. However, when excited by the blaster bolts and drawn into the gravity wells of the dovin basals, the hydrogen became quickly compressed. This caused each blasted glob of hydrogen to become a miniature fusion reactor, dumping incredible amounts of energy into the Sunulok's systems. This overloaded the ship, shutting down the organic tractor beam and allowed Han to escape. The Yuuzhan Vong were able to regroup, and eventually the Warmaster launched Battle Plan Coruscant. In the first wave of ships to attack the planet, the Sunulok led an assault from a position hidden in the OboRin Comet Cluster. However, the initial response from the New Republic forces was formidable, and the Sunulok was disabled early in the battle. The ship was badly damaged as the Republic's forces struggled to capture the yammosk hidden inside, and their efforts were ultimately successful. The Warmaster and his crew were forced to abandon the Sunulok and leave it for dead. (BP, EVR, SBS, NJOSB)

Sunwolf

this was a model of Ikas-Adno speederbike, and was company's first entry into the military market. It was based on the civilian Starhawk bike, and was a one-seater. Other than this, and the addition of a laser cannon, the Sunwolf is identical to the Starhawk. (SWJ10)

Suolriep

this planet was the sight of an Alliance prior to the Battle of Yavin. (CCG)

Supa Fighter

this starfighter was manufactured by Joraan Drive Yards for Black Sun, during the height of the New Order. The basic design was armed with a pair of laser cannons, a light ion cannon, and two concussion missile launchers. (XWA)

Super Battle Droid

this was a greatly-enhanced version of the basic B1-series battle droid produced by Baktoid Combat Automata for the Trade Federation. The original design, which mimicked the skeleton of a Neimoidian, lacked independent programming and had several pieces of sophisticated technology mounted externally. This meant that the basic battle droid needed a Droid Control Ship to receive orders, and that they were subject to damage in the field. The Super Battle Droid - designated the B2-series - was Baktoid's attempt to solve these design issues. The torso and upper body of the Supoer Battle Droid was beefed up with armor plating, inside of which the droid componentry was protected. A dedicated double laser cannon was built into the droid's right arm, and its manipulator arms could operate several other weapon types. The feet of the Super Battle Droid were detachable, allowing the droid to be fitted with grasping claws or magnetic units to operation in a variety of environments. Large numbers of these combat automatons were purchased by the Confederacy of Independent Systems for their own defense. With the end of the Clone Wars, all B2-series battle droids were issued orders to deactivate, as part of Darth Sidious' plan to consolidate military power and ensure the loyalty of his troops. (SWDB, MBS, VD3)

Super Battle Droid Dispenser

this was essentially the stationary version of the MTT developed by the Trade Federation, but designed to accommodate the B2-series Super Battle Droid. Each dispenser was an immense, armor-plating unti that could be deployed in the midst of a battlezone. Each dispenser was heavily armored, and provided a sort of base for its contingent of droids to return to for recharging or resupply of ammunition. These units were deployed regularly during the Clone Wars. (LAWS)

Super TIE/In

this starfighter was developed at the Maw Installation, although the plans for it never reached Imperial space or Seinar Fleet Systems. The Super TIE/In was an improvement on the basic TIE Fighter, but still lacked a hyperdrive. The primary advances were invroved power supply and increased thrust. (JASB)

Super Transport VI

an outdated container ship manufactured by Kuat Drive Yards. (WS)

Super Transport VII

this huge container ship was developed as part of the successful Super Transport line by Kuat Drive Yards. The Super Transport VII measured 280 meters in length, and was designed to carry two million metric tons of cargo. It required a crew of 80 to maintain. (OE)

Super Transport XI

a container ship built by the Kuat Drive Yards, it measures 840 meters in length, and can carry 10 million cubic meters of cargo with a maximum mass of 25 million metric tons. It has room for 40,000 standard containers stored in 20 separate holds, or it can be modified to transport up to three CR90 corvettes. It has limited climatic and pressure controls, and requires a crew of just 100. (SWSB, WBC)

Super Vaporator (*)

a vaporator large enough to supply all of Tatooine with water. (MRR)

Super-class Star Destroyer

this was the term used by certain Alliance personnel to describe the Executor-class Star Destroyer that was built by Kuat Drive Yards for the Empire. Often simply referred to as a Super Star Destroyer, the term usually referred to any ship that was larger than the standard Imperial-class Star Destroyer. (IWST)

SuperComp VII

this massive computer system was manufactured by MicroThrust, during the height of the New Order. (FBS)

SuperFlow II

this was one of the earliest models of starship computers produced by Hanx-Wargel. It was the computer system chosen for the original B-7 light freighters. (YDR)

SuperFlow IV

this model of Hanx-Wargel shipboard computer was used on most Corellian YT-1300 stock light freighters produced during the last years of the Old Republic. Han Solo rebuilt his a number of times, in order to get it to monitor and manage all of his unique modifications to the Millennium Falcon. (SWSB, EGW)

SuperHaul

a series of cargo skiffs manufactured by Ubrikkian. (RPG)

SuperHaul Model II

this was the second-generation cargo skiff produced by Ubrikkian during the Galactic Civil War. Measuring 9.2 meters in length, the SuperHaul Model II could carry up to twenty passengers or 135 metric tons of cargo. (IA, SWRPG2)

SuperHaul Model IIA mod 3

this Ubrikkian Industries cargo skiff was modified for used as an aquatic hunting platform. At twelve meters in length, and equipped with a pair of power harpoons, these craft were used to hunt large fish. The Model IIA mod 3 required a pilot, co-pilot, and two gunners to operate, and could carry two passengers and 150 metric tons of fish. (GSE)

Superior

this was one of the few Imperial-class Star Destroyers to survive the Yuuzhan Vong's initial attack on the Imperial Remnant, a year or so after the Battle of Coruscant. Unfortunately, the ship was destroyed at the Battle of Bastion. (FH1)

Superior Boarding Armor

this model of personal, armored spacesuit was produced by Merr-Sonn, and was described as spacetrooper armor for the independent spacer. (PP)

Superior Service Medal

this basic award was bestowed by the Alliance to individuals who continued to excel in the ongoing battle against the Empire. It was a simple medal, with the Alliance symbol hung from a red and blue ribbon. (ROE)

SuperKnight: The Awakening

this popular holofilm starred Harlan Ottekvar. (HNN5)

Superlaser

the most powerful, destructive weapons ever created, superlasers use a huge fusion reactor core and turbine generators to create the intense bundles of energy they unleash. These weapons were first used aboard the Death Star space stations. Multiple superlasers were set around the Death Star's laser eye, and focused on a point just beyond the Death Star's perimeter. When the multiple energy beams met, they collided and combined. The beams were then thrust out on a single path toward their target. The intense power generated by these multiple beams was sufficient to destroy a planet. The Empire also modified the Death Star superlasers for use on the Eclipse-class and Sovereign-class Star Destroyers. These superlasers were mounted axially on the huge Star Destroyers, allowing the vessels to maintain position and orientation during and after the generation of the laser blast. (SW, ROTJ, ISB, DE1)

Superlaser Mark II

this was the designation of the primary weapon used aboard the second Death Star. The primary difference between this weapon and that of the first Death Star was in its targetting capability. The Mark II superlaser could target something as small as a capital ship, where the original superlaser was unable to target anything smaller than a moon. (CCG11)

Superlift Ore Hauler

designed and manufactured by Corellian Engineering Corporation, this 155-meter-long starship was known to be slow, sluggish, barely armored, and poorly protected. Thus, it was often escorted from its prospecting runs. The Superlift required a crew of 10, and could transport up to five passengers and 90,000 metric tons of ore. (PP)

Superluminal Transist

this was the name used by the Yuuzhan Vong to describe their organic hyperdrive technology. (JE)

this ancient form of personal body armor was produced by ProTech, and was formed from interlocking rings of plasteel. (TOJC)

Suprema

this being was the leader of the slavers, who took control of the planet Mandalore during the height of the New Order. Rumored to have been picked for the position by Emperor Palpatine himself, the Suprema was a tall, thin reptile that resembled a long-snouted dragon. The Suprema imprisoned Tobbi Dala, and gloated to Leia Organa that he would also capture Fenn Shysa. However, when Shysa infiltrated the slavers' skeleton base, the Suprema was captured and the slave ring broken. In the fight to secure the base, the Suprema was killed when Tobbi Dala shut the base's blastdoors before a group of airspeeders could launch. The Suprema, and the rest of the slavers, died in the resulting explosion. (LTA4, MC69)

Supremacy

this song, written and played by the band The Emperor's New Clothes, first appeared on the compilation Totally Patriotic. (GG9)

Supreme

this was the name used to describe the leader of the Tof invasion force which took control of the planet Zeltros, some time after the Battle of Endor. (MC106)

Supreme Chancellor

this was the title given to the being who led the government of the Old Republic. Finis Valorum was the last individual to hold the title, until he was unseated in a vote of no-confidence and succeeded by Grand Chancellor Palpatine. (IS1)

Supreme Commander

the title given to Luke Skywalker by the reborn Emperor Palpatine, shortly after Luke agreed to turn himself to the ways of the Dark Side of the Force and become Palpatine's apprentice. (DE1)

Supreme Council

this was the name of the governing body that controlled the planet Skye. A Patriarch was elected to lead the Council, with each Patriarch ruling for no more than forty-two years. The Patriarch was alternately chosen from the Highland and Lowland Clans. The Outlander Clan had a single representative on the Council, but this representative could never serve as Patriarch. The forty-two-year term represented the forty-two unique clans in each group. (GMR1)

Supreme Defender

the name given to a brand of Chepat starship shields used on luxury liners. (IJ)

Supreme-class Droid

this model of Lovolan droid was originally designed to serve the aristocracy as a servant. The Supreme-class droid was elegantly shaped, giving it a pleasing appearance to most humanoid races. It could communicate in a wide range of languages, and was programmed to understand the high-society nuances of certain Core World dialects. The main drawback of the Supreme-class droid, especially those manufactured after its initial run, was that it was produced too quickly, and the craftsmanship was poor. The later models tended to fall apart at the most inopportune times, embarrassing their owners and causing a backlash of bad publicity for Lovolan. Those droids which ended up in the possession of crimelords and other unscrupulous owners were so gracious and willing to please their owners, they would often allow illicit modifications to their programming. These droids were used as eavesdroppers and money launderers, and the Supreme-class was later investigated for possible security breaches by the Imperial Intelligence agency. (SWJ10)

Suppressor

this was the brand name of Merr-Sonn's R-88 riot control weapon. (WOTC)

Suprosa

this Corellian CE-2 freighter was owned and operated by Captain Sivar during the Galactic Civil War. Note that X-Wing: Alliance claims that this ship was a Mobquet Transport. He had it upgraded to have stronger shields and hull plating, as well as armed it with a pair of turret-mounted double laser cannons and a pair of concussion missile launchers. The Suprosa was supposedly carrying fertilizer shortly after the Battle of Hoth when word was leaked to the Bothans that it was really carrying highly sensitive Imperial information. This information was leaked by Prince Xizor, from Emperor Palpatine. The contact told the Bothans that the Alliance would want the information, because it involved a construction project that could greatly affect the outcome of the Galactic Civil War. The Bothans tried to get the information to Leia Organa on Tatooine, but she was on Rodia at the time. Luke Skywalker and Lando Calrissian assisted the Bothans in taking control of the Suprosa, at the cost of a dozen Bothan lives. The Empire had outfitted the Suprosa with hidden weapons systems, making it appear as a fertilizer hauler. It quickly opened fire on the Y-Wings flown by Luke and the Bothans, killing six ships before being disabled and boarded. (SE, SESB, XWA)

Surana

one of the economic city-states, along with Kinkosa City and Dulai, that generates revenue for Kirtania. (SWJ1)

Suraya

this man was a minor smuggler who worked the Outer Rim at the height of the New Order. After displeasing Jabba the Hutt, Suraya fled to Tasariq, arriving shortly after Governor Keval placed tariffs on off-world goods. Suraya set himself up as the resident black market supplier, and made a small fortune importing a variety of goods. He purchased the security droid K4X4 to watch his back after Captain Kullan Veleriden staged an attack on his life. (SWJ15)

Surdu

this Dug statesman was a member of the Black Shred Water clan of Malastare. Surdu was discovered to have been one of Sebulba's ancestors. (NEGC)

Sureggi

this multi-legged amphibian, native to the planet Kashyyyk, was domesticated and used as a mount by the Wookiees. The body of a sureggi resembled that of a huge centipede, with many pairs of legs running along its length. Each body section was protected by flexible armor plates, and its skin was dry and durable. Its head was spade-shaped, with a wide mouth and two small eyes set atop a bony ridge. The nose of the sureggi was covered with a group of tentacle-like sensory organs, which helped it locate the grubs and small creatures that it consumed for food. Each of the sureggi's twenty-eight legs ended in a long "hand", which gave it exceptional climbing and swimming ability. (SWDB, LAT2, GMR4)

SureGrip

this small corporation produced a number of climbing accessories manufactured with FrictionGrip, including climbsuits, gloves, boots, and syntherope. (ROE)

Surenit Kli'qiy

this Caamasi Jedi Knight was known for his honesty. He was once quoted as saying, "Let there be truth between your heart and the Force. All else is transitory." (PJSB)

Surepp

this herd animal was native to the planet Ansion. Distinguished by their coiled antlers, surepps were favored among Alwari clans because they congregated in tight herds, making them easier to defend against packs of shanh. However, they were more costly to maintain, so only the richest of Alwari clans could afford to keep them. The males of the species had blue fur and dark ruffs of fur around their necks, while the females had green fur and were slightly larger. What made the surepp unusual was the fact that it had three eyes, aligned vertically down their sloping nose. The upper eye was used to see into the sky, the middle eye to keep track of the surepp herd, and the lower eye was used to look for food and obstacles on the ground. While maintained for their meat, the teeth and antlers of the surepp were used to form tools and knives. Because of their densely-packed herds, surepps slept standing up, a position which allowed them to flee at the first indication of a predator. The Ansionians regarded an albino surepp as a good omen, and any clan with a white surepp in its herd was considered lucky. (APS)

Sureseal

this material, developed by GTU, was used to form patches for the AV-1 series of power armor. (GFT)

Sureshot

this battered YT-1300 light freighter, which could barely fly, was captained by Izal Waz. It was part of the small fleet of vessels maintained by the Wild Knights, before the left Barab I and joined the Jedi Knights, shortly before the Second Battle of Coruscant. It was destroyed near the Cinnabar Moon, while following the Millennium Falcon back to Coruscant, when it hit an orbital mine and exploded. (REC, WOTC)

Sure-Sight

developed by Neuro-Saav, this weapons sighting and targeting system was designed for use in protective helmets. Using a proprietary interface, the Sure-Sight could link with a weapon's own sighting system and provide the user with a way to specify a target by simply looking at it. The Ubese used this targetting system in their bounty hunter's helmets, complementing the NiteSite infrared motion sensor. (EGW)

SureSnoop

this sophisticated tracking device was manufactured by the Rhinsome Tracking Corporation. The main unit was as small as a button, and attached itself to the target's clothing with a pair of tiny barbs. It was capable of providing the exact range, direction, and speed of the beacon, but was also very expensive. (CFG, EGW)

Surface Charge Capacitance

a weapons-powering system which uses the natural properties of starship hulls to collect and store static energy. As a ship passes through space, it rubs against the various particles which exist in space. This action creates a charge against the ship's hull. In small ships, the hull is able to collect the charge in much the same way a capacitor would. This energy can be shunted into a weapons system, eliminating the need for a separate power generator. This method of powering weapons is not useful on large, capital ships, for the amount of charge is incredible, and cannot be safely shunted into weapons. (BTS)

Surge

this was the alias used by the New Republic for the patrol ship Instigator, when the ship was used to infiltrate the Kaarenth Dissension. (SWJ8)

Surge Arrestor

this starship component was used to provide protection to delicate systems in the event of a power surge. The surge arrestor used special circuits to dampen the effects of a power surge, providing a steady current to downstream systems. (FH1)

Surge-coral

this variation on yorik coral was used by Yuuzhan Vong priests and military leaders during the ritual of escalation. A small, horn-shape piece of surge-coral was placed inside the shoulder of a worthy Yuuzhan Vong by an implanter, where it was fused to the bone and gave the Yuuzhan Vong a pointed knob at the shoulder which indicated their rank. As a warrior was honored for more and more bravery, he was implanted with more surge-coral. The coral continued to live after implantation, providing a constant and painful reminder of the warrior's service to the Yuuzhan Vong. The Yuuzhan Vong later developed surge-coral which could receive commands from a yammosk, giving the warriors with implants the advantage of working as a well-coordinated unit. (JE, BP, DW)

Surgeon's Gambit

a series of moves used in the game of Firepath. (CSWDW)

Surgica Galactica Journal

this was one of the foremost publications on the current state of medicine throughout the galaxy, published during the last decades of the Old Republic. Several threads of articles dealing with the problems and necessities of operating on clone troopers were popular during the height of the Clone Wars. (MBS)

Surgical Umbrella Field

this specialized form of shielding was developed on the planet Haruun Kal, during the Old Republic, to help fight off a variety of native fungi which fed on metals and silicates. The umbrella could be erected over a single docking bay or an entire spaceport, to eliminate additional bacteria and mold. (SHPT)

Surgoth, Van Jahan

this man, a native of the polar regions near the Sea of Jarad, on the planet Tralus, was a noted "stabman" - the name used to describe the harpooners who hunted styanax. He tended to blend in with the rest of his tribe, and almost never spoke aloud. He preferred to let his actions speak, a trait which carried over into his training of other "stabmen." (CCW)

Suribran Tu

this Ishi Tib was the leader of his homeworld, Tibrin, during the early stages of the Clone Wars. He was loyal to the Old Republic, and struggled to keep his planet a member of the Republic despite popular sentiment to join the Separatists. He used strong-arm tactics, and even political assassinations, to maintain his position and the power he wielded, a fact that the Separatist underground on Tibrin used to their advantage. When Count Dooku arrived to negotiate with Suribran Tu for the rights to use Tibrin as a base for Separatist activities, Suribran Tu seemed to be open to any suggestion the Count had. Dooku, however, was not interested in platitudes. He consulted his bodyguards, among them the turncoat Jedi Knight Quinlan Vos. Quinlan reminded the Count that Suribran Tu was just as corrupt as the Old Republic, and was not worth the effort of negotiation. Dooku agreed, and used his lightsaber to behead Suribran Tu in one smooth stroke. Dooku then installed Sora Bulq as the provisional governor. Suribran

Tu's death at the hands of the Separatists was welcomed by the Ishi Tib populace, who eagerly joined the Confederacy of Independent Systems. (J4)

SuriTech Foodstuffs

this small corporation produced a number of chemical detection systems for personal use as well as for use on starships. These devices allowed owners to analyze the chemical contents of unknown foods, or to monitor the levels of carbon dioxide and other dangerous chemicals in the air supply, providing early warnings of life support system failure. (PSG, GFT)

Surl

this man worked as a mid-level customs agent on the planet Brentaal, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Unknown to most other beings, however, was that Surl was actually an undercover agent for the Imperial Security Bureau, and a corrupt one at that. He worked closely with Dania to uncover rebel cells on the planet, as well as to skim as many credits out of the Imperial bank accounts as he could. (CCW)

Surian

this was a common name among the Filordi race. (UANT)

Surlev

this Imperial Navy Commander served as Barse Neoman's second-in-command aboard the Strike-class cruiser Ion Storm during the last years of the New Order. Surlev was exceedingly loyal to Governor Newen Streeg, a fact that forced Captain Neoman to keep an eye on Surlev. They were ordered to await the arrival of Major Stipling from Yen-2, but when he didn't return Surlev ordered the Ion Storm to the planetoid. There, Surlev discovered that Limna Yith had destroyed the outpost on orders from Sprax, and Surlev vowed to track the Kerestian down and bring her to Imperial justice. He tried to knock out Abek's Station to recover her, but a team of Mal Biron's spacers got to her first. Surlev continued his pursuit, hoping to displace Neoman as commander of the Ion Storm. (SSR)

Surma

this was the largest port city located on the planet Najiba. (BSS)

Surn, Alic

this easy-going gambler was one-half of the most famous brother and sister bounty-hunting team in the galaxy. They worked through the House Neuvalis syndicate. Alic was level-headed in battle, and worked hard to ensure the safety of his sister, Vika. (GG10)

Surn, Vika

this tall, muscular woman was one-half of the most famous brother and sister bounty-hunting team in the galaxy. They worked through the House Neuvalis syndicate. Where her brother Alic was level-headed in battle, Vika was emotionally disturbed and revelled in making the kill. She was hospitalized at a young age, shortly after the deaths of their parents in a speeder wreck. From that point onward, she was mentally unbalanced. She was something of a fitness fanatic, and trained constantly in order to maintain her almost super-human strength. (GG10)

Surnack

this small manufacturer produced a number of personal-use computer peripherals. (GFT)

Suroc

this bounty hunter tried to acquire a nashtah for an upcoming hunt on Midani by inquiring with the owner of the Rancor's Den on Andasala. Note that he is also referred to as Turoc in Galaxy Guide 11: Criminal Organizations. (GG11)

Surron StarTech

this starship manufacturer was the primary source of Surronian craft. (PP)

Surronian

this race of hive-mind lifeforms had a guild-based society in which each guild maintained its own hive mentality. They produced some interesting starship designs, each of which was a unique artifact displaying their guild's technology. Their ships were originally used only by Surronians, although some have been given as gifts to individuals who have donated their efforts to help the Surronians. Eventually, hit with an economic depression that threatened to unravel their society, the Surronians entered a contract with Rendili StarDrive, and produced the Starlight freighter. With the funds from the sales of the Starlight, the Surronians were able to get back on the road to economic recovery. They also began releasing a "limited edition" of their starship designs to the general public, further increasing their net wealth. (EGV, SS)

Surtsey

a remote city-area on Coruscant. Mon Mothma owned an estate there, after her retirement from running the New Republic. (BTS, TT)

Surussk

this was one of the more common names used by Trandoshan hunters. Like most Trandoshan names, it was reserved for males, but could be adopted by those rare females who became hunters. In the Trandoshan language, the name meant "decapitates his prey". (GCG)

Survapierre

this drug was outlawed for recreational use, during the decads prior to the Battle of Naboo. It still had a variety of medicinal uses, so survapierre was never completely banned. A small but lucrative trade in smuggled survapierre sprang up to supply recreational users and abusers with the drug. (TAE)

Survey Datapad

much smaller than a directional transponder, this device allows a scout or military field personnel to know their location on a planet by triangulating positions of known orbital and topological features. (ROE)

Survey-class Crawler

developed and produced by TaggeCo, this 40-meter-long transport craft was a miniature version of the Sandcrawlers scavenged by the Jawas of Tatooine. The Survey-class crawler required a pilot and co-pilot to operate, and could accommodate up to 20 metric tons of cargo and 26 passengers. (GMR6)

Survival Cape

see Thermal Cape (SME)

Survival Day

this was the name given to the specially-staged fights held at the Dool Arena, located in The Broken Tusk on Reuss VIII. The Gamorrean brothers, Gorge and Greel, opened The Broken Tusk after-hours to top Imperial officers and their staffs. Prisoners who refused to speak under interrogation were given two options: speak, or defeat Tull Raine in one-on-one combat. Most prisoners chose to speak, but more than a few were killed in combat. (WSV)

SurvivalGear

this manufacturing corporation produced a number of wilderness survival tools, such as water purification systems and lightweight cooking systems. (ROE)

Survivor

this was the name of a Corellian Engineering Corporation emergency lifeboat. The Survivor measured 10 meters in length. (CSA)

Survivors

this was the name given to those beings who were part of the original Outbound Flight Project, and who managed to survive its destruction. In the wake of the attacks, there were just fifty-seven Survivors. By the time Outbound Flight was discovered, some fifty years after its disappearance, only ten Survivors remained. Three of them - Chas Uliar, Tarkosa, and Keely - served on the Managing Council. The other seven were too feeble to move about. After the Vagaari threat was eliminated, the Survivors grudgingly agreed to accompany the Outbound Flight Colony to Nirauan, staying as far away from the New Republic as they could. (SQ)

Survivors

the name used by the descendants of Xim the Despot's followers, the Survivors live in isolation on the planet Dellalt, guarding the secret of the Queen of Ranroon and awaiting the time when another despot rises to power and unlocks the keys to Xim's power. They shun contact with the other humans living on Dellalt, although a number of them have taken jobs in various levels of Dellaltian commerce. These positions allow them to monitor the comings and goings of parties interested in the long-lost treasures of Xim. They keep their total population to around 100 people, to help keep themselves hidden from mainstream life. They have segregated their population into two levels: the workers, who are hypno-imprinted to do what they are commanded to do; and the leaders, who understand the legacy handed down to them from Xim. They wear the ancient clothing and armor used by Xim's forces. Since landing on Dellalt, they have set up a quasi-religion around the search for the High Command and the next galactic despot. The center of this religion is the beacon which they project into space. The beacon contains the clues to Xim's power, which the Survivors believe will be interpreted by the next despot. The Survivors held off during the time of the Old Republic, realizing that they did not have the resources to overthrow the Republic. When the Empire was born and backwater systems like the Tion Hegemony were left to themselves, the Survivors began strengthening their beacon. When Han Solo, Chewbacca, Badure, and Hasti arrive on Dellalt, the Survivors had begun making sacrifices which they believe will strengthen the beacon and help the next despot find them. The Survivors were routed when the Guardian Corp was destroyed. (HSL)

Survivor's Fund

this was the name used by fighter pilots to denote any sabacc or gambling pot which was left whenever their squadron was called to active duty. Any game interrupted by a combat order had its pot added to the Survivor's Fund, which was distributed to the surviving members of the families of pilots who were killed in the line of duty. (IR)

Susejo

one of the first entities consumed by the Sarlacc located in the Great Pit of Carkoon, Susejo's consciousness was contained in the Sarlacc. Susejo infiltrated himself into all of the Sarlacc's victims' minds, trying to obtain some form of amusement. Susejo was a native of the planet Choi. He had been in the Sarlacc for well over four thousand years, and was more than a little insane when Boba Fett was swallowed by it. Susejo amused himself - and the Sarlacc - by tormenting the Sarlacc's victims with stories and jokes. (TJP)

Susevfi

this name was used to describe the moon Suarbi 7/5 by the colonists who tried to tame the world centuries ago. It is a shortening of its official name. (IJ)

Suskafoo

this Verpine was one of Ackbar's assistants, and was a leader of the Shantipole project. He is a prime example of the Verpine's child-like sense of wonder, and his antenna twitch whenever he gets excited. Known to his friends as Foo, he quickly mastered the Basic language. He was also an open supporter of the Alliance, and acted as a go-between for his hive and Ackbar. (SFS)

Suspensa

this was a form ear jewelry that originated on Naboo. Unlike regular earrings, suspensas dangled from the earlobe on silver or gold pendants. At the end of the pendant was a small, jeweled ball that contained a small repulsor that kept the ball in the air and away from the neck. (VD3)

Susuax

this small corporation produced a variety of tools and implements for scouts and explorers, during the early years of the New Republic. (GUN)

Su'Suv

this was a noted Ubese soldier. (UANT)

Sut

one of the family names used by the Bothan people, it literally meant "baker". (GCG, WOTC)

Sutel, Yald

this Imperial General served the Imperial Remnant as an attache' to Vice Admiral Ark Poinard during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. (HT)

Suthre

one of the four moons orbiting the planet Onderon. (TOJC)

Sutloo

this man was one of the original settlers of the planet Seregar, and eventually went into business for himself. He owned and operated Sutloo's Trading Post, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (ND)

Sutloo's Trading Post

this general store was located in the jungles outside Storrd Township, on the planet Seregar. (ND)

Suttridge, Beryl

this man served as the Ur-Dean Emeritus at the College of Astrocartography on Charmath, during the early years of the New Republic. He wrote an extensive paper on the Moddell Sector, to bring some of the sector's natural phenomena to light with respect to the events of the Battle of Endor. (GMR9)

Sutu

this Imperial recruit was part of Kyle Katarn's squadron, during the taking of asteroid AX-456. (SFE)

Suub

this surname was common among the Sullustan race, and meant "wainwright" in the Sullustan language. (GCG)

Suubatar

this immense creature was native to the planet Ansion. It had six long legs, and each foot ended with six long, clawed toes. This combination of thirty-six toes allowed the suubatar to race across the grasslands of Ansion at incredible speeds, often appearing to run just above the ground using only their toes to propel themselves along. They were also excellent swimmers, using all their toes to literally "grab" the water. The Alwari nomads were the first to domesticate the suubatar for use as a mount, and it was a symbol of pride and standing to have a splendid specimen as a mount. When a suubatar stood up, it was three times as tall as a human, and its neck and upper back rose at a steep angle. This required that the Ansionians use a high-backed saddle, known as a viann, that kept them in an upright position. Most suubatars had light, golden-brown fur striped with green, allowing them to blend into the grassy plains of the planet. They were omnivorous, able to feed on just about anything that happened to be in their path. The head of a suubatar was smooth and wide, with a single nostril and flat ears to make it aerodynamic. Its jaws were unhinged, giving the suubatar the ability to consume foods which were larger than its own mouth. The tail of a suubatar was long and thin. (APS, WOTC)

Suul

the chosen name of the Solo clan when they went into hiding during the Clone Wars. First used by Dalla Solo, and removed by Han Solo. (CPL)

Suuliem

this was the name of a Sullustan family. Platt Okeefe employed a Sullustan pilot from this family. (PSPG)

Suung Aruh

this young, Yuuzhan Vong Shaper was apprenticed to Nen Yim, in the wake of the death of Mezhan

Kwaad. Suung Aruh had been briefly trained by Tiq Qiqah before joining Nen Yim aboard the Baanu Miir. (EVR)

Suuri

this species of crustacean was native to the planet Tynna, and was considered a delicacy by the Tynnans. (EGP)

Suuv Ban D'Krid Cruiser

this Yuuzhan Vong warship measured 720 meters in length, and was the closest analog to a standard cruiser in the New Republic Navy. It carried a complement of thirty-six coralskippers in several yorik coral arms, and its hull was studded with forty plasma projector weapons. A crew of 480 warriors was required to keep the ship operative, and it could accommodate up to 1,930 troops and 2,000 metric tons of cargo. Although they were equipped with a collection of dovin basals, the Suuv Ban D'Krid cruiser could not generate an interdiction field. These craft were usually accompanied in battle by one or more Uumufalh gunships. (NJOSB)

Suvac

a somewhat complex game of strategy and skill. (GG11)

Suvam Tan

this ancient Rodian was an ancestor of Suz Tanwa. It was Suvam Tan who stored five priceless artifacts in the Yavin System some 4,000 years before the Battle of Yavin, then encoded their locations in a wondrous crystal. Suvam Tan had come to the Yavin System to explore, and was enslaved when Exar Kun took control of the Massassi on Yavin 4. During this time, he had access to the great temples, and he had enough of his own mind about him to remember where the best treasure was. After escaping from Kun, Suvam Tan was named the administrator the ancient Yavin Station. From a base on the station, Suvam Tan made a name for himself as a craftsbeing. Not only could he fix anything, but Suvam Tan could find almost anything. When Yavin Station began to fail, Suvam Tan took his most valuable possessions and hid them in shielded cargo pods. Their locations were placed in the crystal, and Suvam Tan had the crystal shipped back to his only child on Rodia. The secret of the crystal was lost for many generations, until Suz Tanwa figured it out. Suvam Tan hid the first trove in the atmosphere of Yavin itself, a shielded cargo pod that contained five huge corusca gems. The second artifact, an ancient holoprojector with what appeared to be a pyramidal holocron, was jettisoned to the ground on Yavin 13. Suvam Tan believed that no sentient life existed on Yavin 13, but the cargo pod was discovered and maintained by a group of Gerbs. The third pod, which had become embedded in a mountain on Yavin 8, contained a set of blaster weapons from the time. The fourth pod was found on Yavin 4, and the crystal claimed it contained the battle armor of Exar Kun, the Dark Lord of the Sith who once controlled the moon. How Suvam Tan came to possess it was never discovered. The last artifact was never placed in a cargo pod, but was in Suvam Tan's back pocket when Yavin Station exploded. Suvam Tan died in the explosion, and his preserved body was discovered by Suz Tanwa, also on Yavin 22. In his back pocket, Suz Tanwa found the lightsaber he had built by himself during his stay on Yavin Station. (PH)

Suvoli Cream

this creamy, white sauce was often served with steamed Velossian caramachi shell-backs. (GFT)

Suwantek Systems

manufacturers of TL-series freighters, Suwantek was owned by Sienar Fleet Systems. (SS)

Suz Tanwa

this female Rodian was generally considered the most popular female member of her species, outside of the entertainment industry, during the early years of the New Republic. She had never taken a mate, although she was good friends with the Rodian smuggler Chihdo, and was the eldest living member of her clan when she accepted a position as the Chair of Xenoarchaeology at a prestigious Coruscant university. Her resume up until that point was filled with her exploits as a treasure hunter, and her twenty-year career was capped with the discovery of riches beyond anyone's dreams in the Yavin System of the galaxy. The locations of five treasure troves had been passed down from generation to generation in her family for more than 4,000 years, encoded in a seemingly worthless amulet that had been created by Suvam Tan. She discovered the information shortly after the Battle of Yavin, and worried about trying to obtain it while the Empire was still trying to force the Alliance out of the system. The first trove, hidden in the atmosphere of Yavin itself, contained five huge corusca gems. The second artifact, an ancient holoprojector with what appeared to be a pyramidal holocron, was found in the possession of a group of Gerbs on Yavin 13. The third pod, embedded in a mountain on Yavin 8, contained a set of 4,000-year-old blaster weapons. The fourth pod was found on Yavin 4, and the crystal claimed it contained the battle armor of Exar Kun, the Dark Lord of the Sith who once controlled the moon. The last artifact - Suvam Tan's handmade lightsaber - was hidden on Yavin 22. Her personal memoirs were published several years after the Battle of Endor, and attracted an audience among the students at the Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4. (PH)

Suzal

the leader of the Five, Suzal delighted in taunting his victims as he tortured them. He captured Han Solo, Leia Organa, and Chewbacca when they were pursued by Vor Childermoss, and brought them all to the Hellhoop. Thinking Chewie to be a dumb animal, he placed the Wookiee in the Menagerie. There, Chewbacca freed the other captives, including the Force Demon Wuzzek. Wuzzek went crazy, exacting revenge for his imprisonment by killing the members of the Five. Suzal was Wuzzek's second victim. (CSWDW)

Suzdice

this was a noted Clawdite. (GMR10)

Suzu

this young woman was one of many natives of the planet Herdessa who didn't want the New Republic to take control of the galaxy, in the wake of the Battle of Endor. Suzu and her friend, Finn, lobbed mudballs at Leia Organa and Mon Mothma, when the two leaders of the Alliance arrived on Herdessa to discuss the planet position on a new galactic government. Leia later discovered that Suzu was one of the leaders of the peasant underground which tried to overthrow Brylin and the affluent leaders of the guilds. (MC88)

SV-45

this Corellian Translines StarSpeeder 3000 shuttle made a regular run to Vohai during the early years of the New Republic. (SWJ15)

SV-50 Swift-Strike

this was the full name of the Venaari Strike speeder, manufactured by Venaari Enterprises during the height of the New Order. It measured nine meters in length, and required a single pilot and a gunner to operate. The pilot controlled the craft as well as the front-mounted double laser cannon, while the gunner handled a turret-mounted heavy blaster cannon. The SV-50 could carry up to ten troopers and a metric ton of cargo. (SWJ5)

Svan

this man, a native of the planet Jomark, was a villager who got involved in a dispute with Tarm, some five years after the Battle of Endor. The dispute was mediated by Joruu C'baoth, with the help of Luke Skywalker, who had just arrived on the planet. Svan didn't agree with C'baoth's decision that he should pay Tarm his wages, and drew a slugthrower on the Dark Jedi. C'baoth countered by injuring Svan with Force lightning. (DFR)

Svaper

this creature was originally found on Rodia, but has since been discovered on a number of worlds throughout the galaxy. The average svaper measured up to three meters in length, although older specimens could attain lengths of six meters. They lived in the water and were known as vicious predators. Their thick, coarse scales were highly-colored, and protected the length of the svaper's body. Just behind the head, the scales were elongated into a collection of spines which protected the vulnerable gills. The mouth of the svaper is filled with long, needle-like teeth which is used to grab hold of its prey. Once it caught its prey, the svaper wrapped its muscular body around the prey and dragged it underwater to drown. It then swallowed the prey whole. Rodians often captured large svapers and used them in wrestling contests. (COG)

SVC-700

this voice scrambler was produced by Ulkop Securities during the height of the Galactic Civil War. Appearing to be a simple piece of jewelry, the SVC-700 blocks the reception abilities of nearby surveillance devices by emitting a low-frequency distortion field. This device does not prevent a nearby individual from hearing conversation, however, but provided a measure of security in an unknown environment. (GFT)

Svelte-class Shuttle

this Imperial shuttle was built by Silvuit Corporation after the death of Grand Admiral Thrawn, in an effort to replace the aging Lambda-class shuttles. A sleek, fast, and highly maneuverable ship, the Svelte-class shuttle was beetle-shaped and coated with gloss black plating. Measuring 17 meters in length, it required a pilot and co-pilot, 4 gunners, and could accommodate 15 passengers and 50 metric tons of cargo. The wings of the Svelte-class can be raised - similar to the Lambda-class - when under attack. The shuttle is armed with a pair of double blaster cannons and a pair of laser cannons. They were also equipped with hyperdrives. Because of their black finish and unusual looks, these craft were sometimes referred to as the Vader-class shuttle, in reference to Darth Vader's black armor. (JASB, SOG)

Svitalos

this city, located on the planet Fwillsving, was destroyed by riots after the planet's bolo-ball team upset Kubindi 1-0, shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars. More than 4 million beings jammed into the city streets, looting and pillaging everything in sight. (HNN4)

S'viv

this was a common female name given to Sullustan females. It meant "energetic" or "lively" in the Sullustan language. (GCG)

Svivren

this planet, the homeworld of the Svivreni race, was a well-defended, major commercial world located near Berchest. According to Rebellion, Svivren was located in Sesswenna Sector. It had several major climate zones, including harshly cold mountains and uncomfortably warm plains. (TLC, REB, MJEH, LCSB)

Svivreni

this was the native language of the Svivreni people. (GMR9)

Svivreni

this species of stocky, furred humanoids was native to the planet Svivren. The Svivreni are known for their stubbornness, and their adherence to no-weapons philosophies. They have large, bat-like faces, and their heads are covered with flowing black hair. Svivreni custom demands that adults never trim their hair, as the length of an individual's hair is often regarded as an indication of fertility and intelligence. A heavy, metal ring held the hair in a loose rope. The fingers of the Svivreni were unusual in that they had three joints, providing dexterity and gripping power. Note that The Last Command describes men dressed in the robes of Svivreni traders. (TLC, LCSB, HR, JQ5)

SVT-300

this was a model of stun cloak manufactured by Koromondain PDS. (GG10)

SVT-300

this version of the stun cloak was produced by Koromondain PDS. (GFT)

SW1-04

this was the model number of a series of computer repair droids developed by the Empire. (BI)

SW-12c

this ion cannon was produced by ArMek during the early years of the New Republic. It was one of the main weapons used by FreiTek on the Gladiator Assault Fighter. (SWI80)

SW2

ArMek ion cannons. (XW)

SW3

ArMek ion cannons. (TIE)

SW4

this was an early model of ArMek laser cannons. (SCORE)

SW-4

this was an early version of ArMek's ion cannon. (SOG)

SW7

ArMek ion cannons. (SCORE)

SW-7

this Armek ion cannon battery was used in the armament of the basic Mon Calamari star cruisers. (EGW)

SW-7a

this was designation of ArMek's advanced SW-7 ion cannons. (XW)

SW-95

this portable message transceiver was produced by Cirenian Communications during the height of the Galactic Civil War. A palm-sized canister, the SW-95 allowed its user to send out brief communications with very little power by "piggy-backing" them onto other transmission signals. The SW-95 was designed for emergency use, in case a being became stranded in an unknown area. (GFT)

SW-967

this was the callsign of one of the many stormtroopers who served under Admiral Galak Fyyar, during the early years of the New Republic. (JK2)

Swagg

this pirate Captain tried to steal rare, Gungan statues from the sacred swamps around Lake Umberbool, shortly before the Battle of Naboo. Swagg was a humanoid with blue skin and piercing, red eyes. Swagg employed droids for the manual labor, then hoped to reap the benefits of selling the statues to collectors. However, his efforts were thwarted by Rep Been, and Swagg was forced to blast away from his own ship in an escape pod to avoid being captured. However, Swagg burned for revenge, and realized that some of his droids must have survived. He returned to Otoh Gunga and reactivated 3-S and 5-S, and tried to destroy the Lake Umberbool arena. Unfortunately for Swagg, he was intercepted by Captain Tarpals before he could set his explosives. In a fierce struggle, Swagg tried to shoot Tarpals, but the shot went wide and ricocheted back to Swagg. He was hit squarely in the chest, and died of the wound. (E1A10, E1A11, E1A12)

Swain Import/Export Emporium

owned and operated by Pret Swain, this well-known business catered in all forms of artwork. While many considered the location to be almost like a museum, everything was for sale. The Emporium was located in the city of Cjaalysce'I, on Socorro. Like many businesses on Socorro, the Emporium was not all that it seemed. In fact, the majority of its customers came to purchase weapons from the showroom hidden below ground. (BSS)

Swain, Pret

originally a native of Alderaan, this man was one of the most powerful information brokers on the planet Socorro at the height of the New Order. His parents were scholars at Alderaan University, but were killed when the planet was destroyed by the first Death Star. Pret was visiting his uncles, Vance Caelli and Rondale Merced, on Socorro at the time. Pret learned the business of doing business on Socorro from Karl Ancher, and was also involved in the acquisition and sale of valuable antiquities and illegal weapons. Pret's father discovered a portrait of Cjaalysce Beal in the ruins near Cjaalysce'I, and presented it to Benoni Ulte. The portrait - named Tehja Larel - was rumored to be accompanied by the spirit of Iann Doaba. Pret owned the Swain Import/Export Emporium in Cjaalysce'I, and used it to dabble in both art and weapons. He later inherited control of the Caelli-Merced Syndicate from his uncles. Pret was also close friends with Rakikta and Kuykenda, whom he rescued from the hold of a slave galleon he captured in the Ottega Sector. (BSS)

Swallow Mud Marsh

this huge, marshy swamp is located on the planet Baroonda. (RAC)

Swallowing Wastes

this area of Tatooine was the site of one of Jabba the Hutt's supply bunkers. (MEAS)

Swamp Beast

an alien creature found on the planet Trinta, the swamp beast appeared to be an animated mound of compost. It was an entity which had been corrupted by the Dark Side nexus found on the planet, and could sprout claw-tipped arms to capture its prey. (DOE)

Swamp Beetle

this was a species of noxious insects, which lived in swamps and fed on carrion. (MC17)

Swamp Gas

this was the code name used by Durge to describe the chemical weapon unleashed by the Separatists on the moon of Ohma-D'un, shortly after the Battle of Geonosis. The thick, green, gaseous substance was highly corrosive, eating away at the skin while destroying lung tissue when it was breathed. Durge and Asajj Ventress had been sent to the system to use the swamp gas on the planet Naboo, but the heroic efforts of Obi-Wan Kenobi, Anakin Skywalker, and Zule prevented them from unleashing the chemical weapon. Shortly after recovering from his wounds, Obi-Wan set out with four other Jedi Masters to obtain the antidote to the swamp gas, in case the Separatists ever tried to use it again. Of the group - which included Knol Ven'nari, Jon Antilles, Nico Diath, and Fay - only Obi-Wan survived to return the antidote to the Jedi Temple on Coruscant. (RNFV, RBR)

Swamp Hider

this was a slang term used by bounty hunters to describe any being who chose to hide, rather than fight back. (T18)

Swamp Level

this was one of the more difficult levels to reach in the game called Wookiee Warpath. (YDR)

Swamp Maiden

these female aliens were generally considered to be among the galaxy's best exotic dancers. (LTA2)

Swamp Serpent

a reptile native to the swamps of Marca, the swamp serpent was a sinuous brown-scaled snake which hunted in "schools" of 10-15 members. Like other reptiles, swamp snakes must breathe air, so they nest on the banks of the minimal land on Marca. (POM)

Swamp Shark

a predatory fish native to the swamps of Marca, the average swamp shark measured a meter in length, and was a solitary hunter with little fear. (POM)

Swamp Slug

a huge, amphibious creature found in the swamps of Dagobah, the swamp slug was a large omnivore with pale skin and large yellow eyes. On top of its head were a pair of thick antennae. The slug swims through the waters of the swamp, sucking small creatures and plants into its long mouth/throat. It then uses its internal muscles to crush the food against thousands of tiny grinding teeth that line its throat. The swamp slug has very few internal organs, aside from its rudimentary brain and its stomach. The swamp slug has been known to attack and devour the dangerous dragonsnake. A collection of short, grasping pseudopods provided a way for the swamp slug to grasp its partner during mating. Naturally hermaphroditic, swamp slugs could not reproduce unless one partner was male. The female then laid hundreds of eggs in the muddy silt. (ISU, WSW)

Swamp Snail

this was a plentiful mollusk that was native to the swamps of the planet Drongar. (MBS)

Swamp Speeder

see Infantry Support Platform \(VD3, X3\)

Swamp Squash

this gourd, which had edible flesh, was native to the planet Dagobah. (IWS)

Swamp Toad

this was a species of large toad, native to many swamp-covered planets throughout the galaxy. (YDR)

Swamp Trooper

this type of Imperial scout trooper wore a specialized suit of armor that helped the trooper operate in a humid, swampy environment. The armor protected a specialized, sealed environment suit. Special breathing apparatus, an emergency flotation package, and enhanced vision equipment provided the ability to move about in the often poisonous atmosphere of a dense swamp. (POM)

Swamp Turkey

this is another name for the nuna. (SW1)

Swamp Womp Rat

known as swamp wompers, these creatures were related to the womp rats of Tatooine. They had evolved on the damp, marshy world of Cularin, and were covered with dark fur. Their whiskers were sensitive to vibration, and helped the swamp womp rat hunt its prey while underwater. These creatures often attacked in packs, swarming over their prey to ensure its capture. (WOTC)

Swamp Worm

this large carnivore was native to the rainforests of the planet Veron. They were at home in the muddy swamps of the coastal regions, lying in the mud and waiting for their prey to walk by too close. The four-meter-long swamp worm would lunge at its prey, often capturing a surprised animal and dragging it into the swamp. (PG1)

Swamp-cat

this race of feline creatures was known for its incredible strength. (MC7)

Swampcrawler

a six-wheeled vehicle used on Circarpous V to maneuver through the swamps. It has a unique central wheel which is spherical, and allows the crawler to turn almost immediately in response to the terrain. They are often referred to as mudmaulers. (SME)

Swamphulk

this was another name for the droidbreaker. (CCW)

Swampspeeder

this was the generic term used to describe a repulsor-equipped vehicle used on aquatic or water-covered worlds. The T-47 was an excellent example of how a speeder could be modified for use as a swampspeeder, with flotation devices and watertight components being added to ensure safe operation in wet environments. (NEGV)

SwampStunner

this Glotalphib weapon shoots a bolt of energy which induces intense pain when it strikes its target. (TNR)

Swampway 200

this skimmer race took place each year at the Ugnorgrad Swampway, in the city of Ugnorgrad, on the Ugnought Surface. King Ozz presided over the annual race during the early years of the New Republic. (PH)

Swamp-wiggler

a creature considered a delicacy by Jiliac the Hutt shortly after she became pregnant. Although the wrigglers gave her indigestion, Jiliac believed that the growing fetus needed the nourishment. She continued to eat the creatures after she gave birth. (RD)

Swan, Bultar

this woman was a noted Jedi Knight who trained under Micah Giett, until his untimely death. She then trained with Plo Koon, and was one of many who were involved in the galactic conflict which surrounded the Clone Wars. Bultar was respected among the Jedi of the day for her combat record. Despite being a veteran of many battles, Bultar had never taken an single life, even in self-defense. In combat, Bultar Swan used a unique combination of teras kasi and Verdanaian "sliding hands" techniques. Swan, along with Empatajayos Brand and Chellemi Chuovvick, was dispatched to the Sepan Sector to mediate the early conflicts of the Sepan Civil War, shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars. Bultar Swan was portrayed by Mimi Daraphet in Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones. (OWS, HNN4, SWDB, PJSB)

Swan, Darjeelai

this woman served Thrackan Sal-Solo as the leader of the group sent to Centerpoint Station to assess any damage caused when the station's repulsors were fired during the Battle of Fondor. It was Darjeelai who told the Yuuzhan Vong, while under heavy interrogation, that Thrackan himself had fired the repulsors, not a Jedi Knight or a member of the New Republic military. Unfortunately for both Swan and Sal-Solo, she died while under interrogation. (Y)

Swang

this man was the leader of Swang's Swoopers, a swoop gang which patrolled Mos Eisley during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. His swoopies, led by Mossol the Menace, kidnapped Diew Rejeff and held him for ransom, hoping to gain enough credits to launch an attack against Prefect Talmont. (MEAS)

Swang's Swoopers

this swoop gang terrorized the settlement of Mos Eisley during the height of Prefect Talmont's rule of Tatooine. (MEAS)

Swanny and the Rooters

this was the band formed by Swanny Mull, shortly after the Battle of Naboo. The band played regularly at the revels held by Decca the Hutt after successful attacks and raids, which allowed Swanny to gain access to Decca's compound. When Swanny agreed to help Obi-Wan Kenobi and Anakin Skywalker infiltrate Decca's organization, he allowed the Jedi to play two parts in the band, even though they had not been hired for the job. The band was nearly destroyed in the attempt, when a gang of Striker's soldiers attacked Decca's base. (JQ6)

Swanny Mull

this short, muscular, Mawan male was a tunnel worker during the years leading up to the Great Purge that destroyed the city of Naatan. Distinguished by his white hair, Swanny was one of many Mawans known to Euraana Fall as willing to help re-establish a central government on the planet. His knowledge of the water supply systems beneath Naatan came from his former career as a wastewater system programmer. (JQ6)

Swanze

this Alliance agent was a member of the Sandwind Team, and was stationed on Tatooine after the Battle of Yavin. (AIR)

Swarbrik

this organism was bred by the Yuuzhan Vong for its ability to excrete a toxic gas when attacked. When used in place of a door or portal, the swarbrik could be used to keep an enemy out of a specific location. The swarbrik was also bred for its ability to regenerate parts of its body very quickly, which allowed it to maintain its blockage of a portal even if badly damaged. (FH3)

Swarm Bugs

native to the planet Gorsh, this insect traveled in huge swarms, but was more of a nuisance than anything. Their chemical makeup produced a great deal of methane inside their bodies, and they often exploded with a loud bang when struck or smashed. (PG1)

Swarm-class Battle Droid

this Ssi-ruuvi design is a small drone ship powered by enteched life energies. These pyramidal ships were the main assault fighters of the Ssi-ruuvi fleet, and over 1,300 of them were sent to assist in the capture of Bakura. Each Swarm-class drone was packed with power generators for weapons and engines, battery coils to house two enteched life forces, sensors, and a drive unit. The power generators use fusion energy, and produce easily-trackable radiation trails. Maneuverability is achieved through the use of four small thrusters mounted around the outside of the ship. Each thruster can be independently angled to provide incredible turning ability. Each corner of the drone is armed with a laser cannon which has 360-degree rotation. They are remotely controlled by Ssi-ruuvi command cruisers which transmit directions to the drone's enteched life energies. Each Swarm-class drone was armed with four turret-mounter laser cannons, located at each point on the ship's outer hull. (EGV, TBSB)

Swarmer

this species of microscopic insect was native to the planet Karra. Individually, they were harmless. However, they traveled in immense swarms, flying into the eyes and ears of unsuspecting creatures and causing temporary blindness and deafness. The Karrans were able to control groups of swarmers, using them in battle against their enemies. (SWJ1)

Swarquen

a planet. (WBC)

Swaze

this alien race is native to the Jidlor System. The Swaze admired the Rellarin un'Yala for their wisdom and drive. (GG12)

SWE/2

this was Talex-Delcor's sonic riot suppression gun. It was difficult and dangerous to use, as it employed an unstable chemical compound to create the sonic blast. This chemical was highly explosive, and had to be recharged after just a few shots. In combat, this often led to accidents which killed the user. (SWJ6)

Sweat-stop

developed for medical use during the years leading up to the Clone Wars, this sprayable material could be applied to a doctor's skin in order to prevent sweat from dripping onto the operating table. It found widespread use during the Clone Wars, as field surgeons found themselves working in a variety of environments where heat and humidity were problematic. (MBS)

Swedlan

one of the three primary worlds of the Pimbrellan League, Swedlan is much less hospitable than its neighbor, Dolstan. The atmosphere on Swedlan is not capable of supporting most humanoid life, so cities are built under sealed domes and in underground cave systems. Any financial gains made from trade with Dolstan are used to finance life support facilities. (KO)

Swee-Beeps

Ree-Yees' great-uncle. (TJP)

Sweep Asteroid Belt

this asteroid belt was located between the planets Duconon and Yetoros, in the Utos System. (CCW)

Sweeper Storm

this artificial storm was generated by the authorities on the planet Bonadan. Sweeper storms were generated on the outskirts of manufacturing centers when the air became too caustic for the local inhabitants. The rain and lightning which were produced served to precipitate out some portion of the pollution which was spewed into the atmosphere every day. Each sweeper storm was more concentrated and violent than any normal storm, with the funnel around the eye being designed to create maximum ionization of the atmosphere. (EOV, GMR8)

Sweepstakes

this was the name of a week-long ringer tournament, held annually on the planet Stassia. (SWJ6)

Sweesonberry

this shrub produced a berry which was used to make sweet, sticky pastries. (JQ4)

Sweesonberry Rolls

this was a form of sticky, sweet pastry. (JQ4)

Sweet Cake

this snack cake was popular during the last decades of the Old Republic. (JQ7)

Sweet Lady from Alderaan

a song Han Solo plays for Leia at his housewarming party on Bespin. (ZHR)

Sweet Soalie

this was a Corellia phrase, used to express one's disbelief. (MBS)

Sweet Sookie

this was a human expression which originated on Corellia, and was used to voice an individual's dismay or exasperation at a given situation. (MBS)

Sweet Surprise

this smuggling ship was active during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, some twenty-seven years after the Battle of Yavin. The commanders of the ship were allied with the Yuuzhan Vong, sometimes transporting refugees away from "besieged" planets, only to deliver them to the Yuuzhan Vong's next target. The Sweet Surprise was the first ship to launch any kind of attack against Coruscant, when the Yuuzhan Vong placed four voxyn aboard and ordered the crew to land on the planet. The ship was eventually captured over Coruscant, thereby eliminating the voxyn threat. (SBS)

Sweet Surprise

this was one of the many aliases maintained by Han Solo for his ship, the Millennium Falcon, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (TG)

Sweetberry

a fruit-bearing plant native to Belsavis' rift valleys. They are vine-like, and produce a blood-red fruit. (COJ)

Sweetblossom

this flower's extract, while not addicting, is often used by drug addicts who wish to escape from life. It causes the user to be completely aware of their surroundings, but gives them a "who cares...I'll take care of it tomorrow" attitude. Seti Ashgad and Dzym the droch used sweetblossom in an attempt to keep Leia Organa-Solo from escaping their palace on Nam Chorios. (POT)

Sweetflaps

this was the Basic translation of a Sullustan term for a loved one. (MJH)

Sweetmallow

a sticky candy. (ZHR)

Sweetmelon

this plant produced a large, sweet-tasting melon. (COD)

Sweetroot

this plant, once native to the planet Ruusan, was nutritious when consumed by most humanoid races. The Jedi Knights, which were massing on the planet in preparation for meeting the Brotherhood of Darkness in battle, ate the sweetroot as a breakfast food. (JVS)

Sweet-sand Cookies

this type of delicious cookie was produced on the planet Calus. (PSPG)

Sweetsand Lagoon

this was one of the many simulated environments found on Hologram Fun World. The Lagoon was a water park, and even had simulations of whaladons for visitors' pleasure. (GOF4)

Sweetsap

this phrase was used during the last decades of the Old Republic to indicate the illegal spoils a being obtained while operating under seemingly humanitarian goals. (MBS)

Sweitt Concorkill

this Ongree was a noted Senator, during the last years of the Old Republic. (OWS, VD3)

Swen

a group of escort shuttles used by the Alliance during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Swens, Kirlan

this man was the first adult to encounter Obi-Wan Kenobi on Dagro, about two years after the Battle of Geonosis, when his children discovered the Jedi's crashed ship in their sargheet fields. Kit and Zizzy Swens befriended Obi-Wan, but Kirlan grudgingly accepted his help around the farm. (SWI76)

Swens, Kit

this boy and his younger sister, Zizzy, were the first to encounter Obi-Wan Kenobi on Dagro, some two years after the Battle of Geonosis. Obi-Wan was on Dagro to investigate the possible existence of a Separatist base on the planet. Kit and Zizzy introduced Obi-Wan to their parents, Kirlan and Trissa. (SWI76)

Swens, Trissa

this woman, the wife of Kirlan Swens, was one of the few natives of the planet Dagro who was actually nice to Obi-Wan Kenobi when he crashed on the planet, some two years after the Battle of Geonosis. Like most natives of Dagro, she was a stony woman who cared little for the galaxy-at-large, but the stories she had heard of the Jedi Knights gave her hope that Obi-Wan wasn't on Dagro to harm them. After the Jedi willingly stripped the crop stubble of their sargheet, and did it exceptionally well, she realized that he was someone who could be trusted and had Dagro's best interests at heart. Her newfound trust in the Jedi was rewarded when Obi-Wan turned over a huge sum of credits to the sargheet farmers, the bounty that the Old Republic had been offering for the recovery of Separatist equipment, after Kirlan and a group of others helped Obi-Wan locate and capture a rogue crawl-carrier. (SWI76, SWI77)

Swens, Zizzy

this young girl and her older brother, Kit, were the first to encounter Obi-Wan Kenobi on Dagro, some two years after the Battle of Geonosis. Obi-Wan was on Dagro to investigate the possible existence of a Separatist base on the planet. Kit and Zizzy introduced Obi-Wan to their parents, Kirlan and Trissa. (SWI76)

Swiegel

this was the name of a noted Vuvrian individual. (UANT)

Swift

this was the name of the freighter used by Ysanne Isard to gain access to the refitted Lusankya, as it sat in drydock at the Bilbringi Shipyards. It was commanded by Captain Wintle. (IR)

Swift 3

see 64-Y Swift 3 Repulsor Sled (ND)

Swift 78A

this vessel courier system is manufactured by BioTech. It is implanted into the head of the "vessel," and allows the user to jack into a computer system and upload data. The vessel has no ability to control the computer; the system only provides an upload interface. Up to 800 Sks of data can be stored within the vessel. Downloading the data is a quick process, but the upload is often time-consuming. The system is subject to infiltration by computer viruses, although protective software can be added. (CFG)

Swift 78B

this was the second generation of BioTech's vessel courier system, following the Swift 78A system. (FOP)

Swift Assault 5 Hoverscout

a small reconnaissance vehicle armed with a heavy blaster cannon, a light laser cannon, and a concussion missile launcher. It was built by Mekuun, and requires a crew of 1 pilot and three gunners to operate. Mekuun supplied the SA5 exclusively to the Empire, and armed it with a heavy blaster cannon, a turret-mounted laser cannon, and a concussion missile launcher. (DFRSB)

Swift Dreams

this starliner was one of the many ships that were trapped on Coruscant when the Yuuzhan Vong first attacked the planet. In an attempt to flee the battle, the Swift Dreams launched at the first sign of trouble, but strayed into a volley of turbolaser fire and was heavily damaged. (SBS)

Swift Hutt Spacer's Service Depot

this repair facility, located in the city of Mos Eisley on Tatooine, was owned by Jabba the Hutt during the height of the New Order. (RESB)

Swift Liberty

this Victory-II class Star Destroyer was part of the New Republic's growing fleet. It was commanded by Admiral Areta Bell during the struggle against Grand Admiral Thrawn. (IR)

Swiftcut

this was the name given to the traditional Nagai foil, which was a dueling weapon often used in the ritualized fighting among members of various Sub-circles. (GMR1)

Swiftsure

this personal jet pack was produced by Moreldahl, during the height of the New Order. (GFT)

Swilja

this was the name of a beautiful princess from Twi'lek legends. (GCG)

Swilja

this was a common name given to Twi'lek females, and referred to a beautiful princess from Twi'lek legends. (GCG)

Swilja Fenn

this female Twi'lek was one of the young Jedi Knights who were trained by Luke Skywalker at the Jedi praxeum on Yavin 4. She was dispatched to Cujicor during the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy, but was captured by the Peace Brigade and incarcerated. She was to be turned over to the Yuuzhan Vong in exchange for a cease-fire. She was brought before Warmaster Tsavong Lah himself, and refused to bow to his will. Lah tortured her for several minutes before she died of her injuries. (EVC, SWI57, REC)

Swilla

this was one of the many fishing vessels that plied the oceans of Lamaredd for Bartyn Gourmet Delicacies, during the decades leading up to the Clone Wars. (GMR7)

Swimmers

another name for the Swimming People of Dellalt. (HSL)

Swimming Crab

a crustacean native to the moon Yavin 4. (GG2)

Swimming People of Dellalt

the race of aquatic sauropteroids native to the planet Dellalt, the Swimming People inhabit the planet's lakes and oceans. They are large creatures, attaining lengths of ten to fifteen meters. They have small heads atop long, muscular necks. They have blowholes instead of nostrils on top of their heads, and their mouths are filled with pointed teeth, which are used to catch fish and other food as well as in battle. They have paddle-like flippers for locomotion, and short, heavy tails. They communicate in a form of speech not unlike Standard, using their mouths to form words. Their eyes are protected by a nictitating membrane. The colors of their hides range from light gray to green and black. They are very territorial, and have evolved a set of Laws to govern their lives. These Laws have provisions for the other races native to Dellalt. (HSL)

Swingblade

this was the common name for the Dug b'hedda. (UANT)

Swing-bob

this was another name for the Rughja style of music. (HT)

Swinging Screecher

this arboreal creature was native to the planet Kirtania. (SWJ1)

Swinif Organization

this bounty hunting organization was obscure at its height, during the last years of the Old Republic. (AIR)

Swip

this female name was common among the Kel Dor. Like all Kel Dor given names, it was short enough that it didn't attract the attention of certain wind spirit, which would carry away young children with long-winded names. (GCG)

Swirl Prong

this herding mammal was native to the Forest Moon of Endor, although xenobiologists believed that it was probably bio-engineered off-planet and later introduced to Endor. (GQRG)

Swirling Vortex

this cantina, located on the Vydat Stardock space station near Duro, was owned by Elav Feen, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (GMR2)

Sw'isi

this Mashi Horansi was an Alliance operative who was believed to have deserted his post and returned to Mutanda. A team of Alliance agents discovered that Sw'isi was still loyal to the Alliance, and had returned to Mutanda to gather additional support for the Alliance. The agent who tipped off Alliance Command was discovered to be an undercover Imperial spy who was searching for Sw'isi after the Horansi led several successful raids in the Killaniri System. (PG1)

Switch

an Alliance modular container group destroyed during the Galactic Civil War. (TIE)

Swivven

one of the four continents discovered on Yavin 4 by Lile Gorsek and the Fernandin Scouting Operation. (GG2)

Swoken

this was the native language of the Swokes Swokes race. (WOTC)

Swokes Swokes

native to the planet Makem Te, this pasty-skinned alien race was distinguished by its portly body and loose, pallid skin. The head of a Swokes Swokes was conical in shape, with a crown of horns on the brow and another set of horns at the point. The wide mouth of the Swokes Swokes was dominated by large, fang-like upper teeth, and sat below a small nose and two bulbous eyes. The nervous system of an individual Swokes Swokes was more similar to that of a flatworm than to most other humanoid races, and they had the ability to regenerate lost limbs if necessary. This gave them a certain bravado on the battlefield, where Swokes Swokes were known to be fanatical in their attacks. The Swokes Swokes were remarkable in their adaptations to their homeworld, although they were not technologically advanced. Their cities were delicate structures built from cast iron, giving them an underlying strength despite their appearance. Most Swokes Swokes transportation was in the form of domesticated schingas. One interesting aspect of the Swokes Swokes civilization was their use of gemstones to indicate power. Rather than displaying them on pieces of jewelry, most Swokes Swokes had gemstones implanted in their bodies near vital organs as a form of status symbol. (YJC1, WOTC)

Swoop

this was the generic term used to describe any small repulsorcraft larger than a speederbike, which was highly maneuverable, and was often used as a racing vehicle. The swoop was basically an overpowered repulsorlift engine pod with handlebars. It has a pair of landing skids mounted on its bottom, and a control panel attached to the handlebars. Gangs often use swoops because of their speed and compact design. Han Solo once raced swoops for a living. The basic swoop offered no protection for the rider, and were capable of speeds in excess of 600 kilometers an hour. Some swoops were modified for military use after the success of speeder bikes at Endor. Note that The New Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels claims that swoops had been in production across the galaxy for hundreds of thousands of years. (HSR, DFR, SWSB, EGV, SWI64, NEGV)

Swoop Sled

this form of repulsorsled is extremely fast and maneuverable, and is armed with a single laser cannon. (SWJ9)

Swoopchasing

a form of swoop racing, a swoopchase involved negotiating a swoop through an obstacle course. The course consisted of five or more gravity obstacles which pushed or pulled the swoop away from the course. Often, the obstacles involved dangerous consequences for the racers. It was generally accepted that swoopchasing originated on the planet Omman, the brainchild of bored farmers. Over the decades, as the sport became more and more popular, races became sanctioned and league formed to govern the sport. Three of the most prominent courses were located on Socorro, Redcap, and Najiba, and any rider to win all three in succession was guaranteed a place in history. A fourth course on par with these was developed on Neftali. Minor racecourses, used in qualifying heats, were located on Omman, Tatooine, and Garos IV. (BSS)

Swoop-S

see Nebulon-S Swoop Racer (DFRSB)

Swoopshaw

this form of modified speederbike was used on many backwater planets as a hired transport. A driver could be hired to drive one to four individuals and their belongings to a close-by location. (CCW)

Swo-O'Rim Circuit

this was one of the most popular, professional swoop racing circuits active during the last years of the Old Republic. (HNN5)

Sword

a Ripoblus assault shuttle operative during the Sepan Civil War. (TIE)

Sword of Honor

this was the quasi-religious symbol of the Kentra and their social structure. In reality, the Sword of Honor was the ancient lightsaber of Michael Tandre. It was said that, when the Sword of Honor was restored to working order, the second age of the Kentra would begin, "with new allies..." (SWJ2)

Sword of the Jedi

this was the name used by Luke Skywalker to describe Jaina Solo, when it was announced that she had attained the level of Jedi Knight. In Master Skywalker's words, Jaina was to be "...a burning brand to your enemies, a brilliant fire to your friends." She found that this appellation was more work to maintain than she believed, as the war against the Yuuzhan Vong wore her down and distanced her from her friends and family. (Y, DW)

Sword, Plow, and Spirit

this was the name given to the set of religious beliefs taught to the Kentra by Michael Tandre. The sword represents warfare, the plow represented agriculture, and the spirit represented moral integrity. (SWJ2)

Swori Mdimu

this Etti was the Captain of the Tinmolok, when the freighter was captured by Han Solo, shortly after the Battle of Duro. Although initially reluctant to do so, Captain Mdimu eventually revealed that the Tinmolok was transporting amphistaffs to the Peace Brigade. Solo and his wife, Leia Organa Solo, allowed Mdimu and his crew to escape the ship in escape pods, before the ship and its cargo were confiscated. (EVR)

SX-14 Field Hover-Ute

manufactured by Mobquet, this squat vehicle was a utility vehicle designed to haul cargoes in virtually any environment. Known as a Hover-Ute, the SX-14 had a blunt nose that was formed around a pilot's console, and a flat bed that could accommodate a variety of cargoes. (IWS) this Corporate Sector Authority patrol skimmer was a small, two-person, light combat craft. It measured 4.7 meters in length, and was armed with a single laser cannon. (CSA)

SX20

Sy Myrth

this planet was the homeworld Sy Myrthian race. The planet, at the advice of its Senator, Toonbuck Toora, seceded from the Old Republic shortly after Ando announced its own secession, shortly before the onset of the Clone Wars. (SWDB, HNN4)

Sy Myrthian

this roughly humanoid species was native to the planet Sy Myrth. The average Sy Myrthian was covered with thick fur, and had a stocky build. (HNN4)

Sy Snootles

a Pa'lowick singer with a long snout and skinny legs, Sy Snootles was known as one of the best jizz-wailers in the galaxy when she was employed by Evar Orbus. She disliked Orbus' brusque style, but knew that he was an excellent singer and musician. When Orbus was killed on Tatooine just prior to the Battle of Yavin, she suggested to her band-mates that they continue as a trio. She helped rename the Kironak Snit, giving him the name Droopy McCool, and allowed Max Rebo to become the leader of the band. However, when Max agreed to play for Jabba the Hutt in return for all the food he could eat, she became angry. After arriving at Jabba's palace, Sy was approached by a number of parties to act as a spy against Jabba. She agreed to work for Lady Valarian, but was continually fed false information by Bib Fortuna. When Jabba was killed near the Sarlacc pit, Sy and the band jumped off the sail barge before it was destroyed, and fled into the desert. Following the death of Jabba and the disappearance of Droopy, Sy and Max decided to play for Lady Valarian as the Max Rebo Duo. Their partnership didn't last long, as Sy struck out on her own. However, her career quickly floundered, and she was reduced to touring backwater planets under a number of aliases. Working as Lips Teenek, she was approached by Quilsen and offered her first taste of phetaril spice. She quickly became addicted, and spent much of the rest of her life in a drug-induced stupor. Sy Snootles was portrayed by Annie Arbogast in Star Wars: Return of the Jedi. (ROTJ, TJP, CCG9, SWI67) this Charon was one of the many members of the splinter group known as the Cult of Light. (UANT)

Sya'kalla

Syayna

this young, female Jazbinan was the daughter of Lord Prepredenko. She was also a member of the Alliance-supporting rebel cell on the planet Jazbina. She and her followers had hoped to convince her father to switch his allegiance to the Alliance, but he refused. Syayna was forced to go underground. When Luke Skywalker arrived on Jazbina on a diplomatic mission, Prepredenko tricked him into "rescuing" Syayna from a group of kidnappers. In reality, Prepredenko used Luke to discover the location of Syayna's rebel cell and arrest its members. Syayna was placed under house arrest and shackled in her rooms at the palace. Syayna pretended to want Luke dead as badly as Prepredenko, and he released her long enough for her to kill Luke. However, Syayna set the blaster to stun and knocked Luke out, then told her father that she would bring Luke's body up to the audience chamber. Instead, she spirited Luke away from the palace and brought him to her cell's hideout. However, they were discovered by Jal Te Gniev and Darth Vader at the same time. Syayna refused to turn over Luke, and in the face of a warehouse full of Jazbinan rebels, Vader elected to leave the planet. She and Raol then decided to dedicate their lives to each other. (VQ)

Sybar

this was one of the many smalltime crimelords who operated from a base on the planet Brentaal, during the height of the New Order. He spent a good deal of credits and resources on an attempt to control the underworld activities at the Votrad Independent Downport. (WOTC)

Sybarion

this was a noted creator of gowns and eveningwear for female beings throughout the galaxy, during the last decades of the Old Republic. (VD2)

S'ybll

a shape-shifting mind-witch encountered by Luke Skywalker and Han Solo just after the Battle of Yavin. She attached herself to Luke, claiming to want his protection from Imperial forces. In an effort to win Luke's confidence, she made herself resemble Tanith Shire, who was still in Luke's thoughts. When she was finally able to draw Luke into her lair and control him, she reverted back to her true form: an ugly old hag. Luke was able to fight through her spell, and tried to escape. S'ybll then projected an image of Darth Vader to battle Luke, but he saw through the illusion and broke her spell. She then tried to use telekinetic powers to physically destroy Luke, but expended all her energies and died before she could rejuvenate herself. (CSW)

Sycophant Jolly

one of the many aliases of the Hoopster's Prank. (SOP)

Sycorax

this ancient witch was a native of the planet Necropolis, who claimed she could bring the dead back to life. When the ancient natives of Necropolis believed she was a fake, they killed her own son and demanded that she bring him back to life as proof. Sycorax died of a broken heart, but not before she leveled a curse on the planet's inhabitants. The Curse of Sycorax states that, should the natives of Necropolis ever ignore their dead, the dead would rise up and take control of the planet. Sycorax and her son were supposedly buried in the Crypt of the Ancients. It was later revealed that her corpse was nothing more than rotting bones, and that she had no power to reach beyond the grave. (GOF2)

Sydon Vehicle Works

this small starship manufacturer created the MRX-BR scout ship. (GG6)

Sygor Startech Industries

this powerful corporation was discovered to be the originator of the Event Horizon starfighter engine design. (LAA)

S'yito

this Yuuzhan Vong warrior held the rank of Subaltern during the occupation of the planet Selvaris, some four years after the Yuuzhan Vong began their invasion of the galaxy. S'yito was unusual among the warriors stationed on Selvaris in that he could speak and understand the Basic language, a skill that made him the primary liaison between the Yuuzhan Vong and the prisoners of war who were incarcerated on Selvaris. (UF)

'syk

this suffix was added to a Bothan's family name to indicate the individual's affiliation to the Asyk or Isyk clans. (GCG, WOTC)

Sykar

this man was the Imperial Governor of Celanon during the height of the New Order. He also served as an executive on the board of the Nalroni Merchant Council. (PG1, ND)

Sykes, Gavyn

this man was a Lieutenant in the Naboo Royal Security Force at the time of the Trade Federation's blockade of the Naboo System. Gavyn was a noted pilot and infiltrator, having spent his youth flying local transports and playing in the hidden tunnels of Theed. He performed a number of dangerous reconnaissance and attack missions for the Naboo, leading up to and including the Battle of Naboo and the destruction of the Federation's Droid Control Ship. (OWS, BFN)

Syliure-31

this was a model of hyperdrive ring developed by TransGalMeg Industries. It was created specifically for the Aethersprite-class interceptor, and provided the equivalent of a Class 1 hyperdrive system to the small ship. (X2)

Syliure-45

this was a model of hyperdrive ring developed by TransGalMeg Industries. It was created specifically for the Eta-2 Actis interceptor, and provided the equivalent of a Class 1 hyperdrive system to the small ship. (X3)

Sylo, Griggen

this man and his family, including his wife Tashna and seven children, was the ninth generation of farmers to work on a large farm in a remote area of the planet Dantooine, during the decades leading up to the Clone Wars. After the advent of the New Order, the Sylo family abandoned their farms and fled to an unknown world. (SWDB)

Sylo, Paxi

this young boy was the latest member in a long line of farmers who had worked a large farm in a remote area of the planet Dantooine. Paxi was the youngest of the seven children of Griggen and Tashna Sylo, and spent most of his time daydreaming about the Jedi Knights and drawing pictures of faraway places. His world changed when he was nine years old, when Paxi witnessed Mace Windu's amazing, single-handed defeat of a seismic tank during the height of the Clone Wars. After the battle, Paxi provided Mace with a drink of water before the Jedi set off again. In the following years, the Sylo farm was eventually abandoned, and Paxi was lost in history. However, a renegade holovid that appeared during the height of the New Order - depicting Mace Windu's defeat of the seismic tank - was attributed to Paxi, on the basis that its artistic style matched some of his older drawings. (OWS, SWDB)

Sylo, Tashna

this woman was Griggen Sylo's wife, and the mother of Paxi Sylo. (SWDB)

Sylond

this Aquala Aqualish owned Sylond's Speeder Rentals in Quantill City, on Ando. He was a good friend of Koral-tae. (SWJ11)

Sylond's Speeder Rentals

owned by the Aquala Aqualish Sylond, this Quantill City business rented a variety of repulsorlift vehicles to tourists and natives. (SWJ11)

Sylvar

an ancient Cathar Jedi, Sylvar was apprenticed to Vodo Siosk-Baas shortly before the Great Sirth War. She was in love with Crado, whom she had married for life. She was despised by Exar Kun, one of her fellow students. In a training exercise with their lightsabers, Kun tried to goad her into making mistakes. He eventually pushed Sylvar over the edge, and she clawed him across the right cheek. He nearly killed her, especially when she accused him of not being a true Jedi. During the early times of the Sith War, Sylvar pursued her lover to the Stenness System, where Crado and Oss Willum were trying to kill Master Thon. She chose to fight Crado, and considered him lost to her forever. Sylvar remained loyal to the Jedi throughout the conflict, despite the fact that they allowed Ulic Qel-Droma to live after his alliance with Exar Kun killed Crado and nearly destroyed the Jedi Knights. During the Exis Convocation ten years later, Sylvar's voice was strongest in denouncing the Jedi's lack of action against Ulic. In an effort to divert her energies, Tott Doneeta took her to Ryloth with him, during his attempt to heal the rift between the Doneeta and R'lyek clans. Sylvar, skirting with the Dark Side of the Force in her hatred of Ulic, roused the Doneeta clan into a killing frenzy and nearly brought them into a war with the R'lyek. Tott avoided the conflict, and was forced to return Sylvar to Cathar. There, she met with Kharr and went on a blood hunt to try and regain her focus. Unfortunately, she slaughtered an entire colony of kiltiks before realizing that she was falling deeper into the Dark Side. When she learned that Vima Sunrider had traveled to Rhen Var to train under Ulic, Sylvar returned to Exis Station to offer her assistance to Nomi in an effort to locate Vima. However, Nomi had already left, so Sylvar hired Hoggon to take her to Rhen Var, where she hoped to kill Ulic once and for all. She confronted him, and when Ulic refused to kill her in battle, Sylvar found she didn't have the heart to kill him either. She powered her lightsaber off, but was unprepared for Hoggon's appearance. The little man shot Ulic in the back, believing that he had killed the greatest traitor to the Jedi order. Sylvar nearly killed Hoggon for his insolence, but let him escape. (DLS, TSW, EGC, TOJR)

Sylvn

this was the name of a free-spirited wife from Cerean mythology. (GCG)

Sylvn

this was a common name among Cerean females. Unlike their male counterparts, Cerean females use a single name unless they became a bond-wife. In this case, a female will take on their husband's grandfather's name for official matters. The name Sylvn referred to a free-spirited wife in Cerean mythology. (GCG)

Sylvn

this young Cerean woman was the daughter of Ki-Adi-Mundi and his honor-wife, Mawin. Like many teenagers, Sylvn was troubled by her loyalty to her family and her desire to fit in with her friends. She often sided with her friends, who were demanding the import of technology, rather than with her father. However, as her boyfriend Maj-Odo-Nomor was implicated in the death of another youth at a pro-tech rally, she was thrust into an existence she couldn't condone. When Maj started showing affection to Twin, rather than Sylvn, her resolve to listen closer to her father's words deepened. Meanwhile, to protect his "investment," Ephraim Mon took Maj, Twin, and Sylvn to Tatooine for safe keeping. They stowed away on a transport ship, but were sharing the ship with divvik pupae. The pupae hatched into adults, threatening them all until Ki arrived to rescue them. The Chevins used Sylvn's presence as a lure to guide Ki. (PTR)

Symatrum League

this protest group was one of the more peaceable members of the Coalition of Automaton Rights Activists. Led by Bethelia Halvala, the Symatrum League staged non-violent picket lines outside the offices and plants of droid manufacturers. (FTD)

Symbian

this language was originally used thousands of years before the formation of the Old Republic. It eventually died out some 30,000 years before the Clone Wars, but remained an obscure source of research for linguists for millennia. (MBS)

Symbiospore

this broad-fronded fungus grew in the forests of the planet Kothlis, and was often found in the upper branches of the gankto tree. This fungus survived via an odd form of photosynthesis, as well as by stealing nutrients from its host plant. Symbiospore gave off a moldt fragrance which permeated the surrounding forests. (SPG)

Symer

this beast, native to Serat, was the only known predator of the tympt. A healthy population of symers kept the population of the scavenging tympts to a minimum. Unfortunately for the Seratians, they believed that the organs and appendages of the symer contained mystical powers, and killed the predators just to obtain them. The destruction of the symer population allowed the tympts to reproduce at a prodigious rate, which eventually threatened to eliminate the supplies of roti consumed by the Seratians. (COG)

Symmetric Cloud-Vee Formation

an attack posture used by small starfighters. (HTTE)

Symon Tube

this was one of the key components in the MX9 blaster rifle. It required regular filing to ensure that it was smooth, since normal usage inevitably caused scratches during recoil. (LFCW)

Symoxin

this chemical was originally developed as a contact painkiller, which could be rubbed on aching muscles to soothe and relax them. Many bounty hunters discovered that concentrated symoxin could be used to render a target unconscious, and often filled small darts with it. (EGW)

Sym-voyage

this form of virtual reality simulation was popular during the last decades of the Clone Wars. The simulation allowed patrons to visit any number of remote, exotic, or popular planets without actually leaving their homeworld. The simulations contained a wide spectrum of "reality", depending on how much an individual was willing to pay for the experience. (JQ9)

Syn

a tough, synthetic fabric used to make tents. (SE)

Syn, Peccati

this Imperial Navy officer was one of the last twelve Grand Admirals. Syn grew up as a devote follower of the Sacred Way, until the Empire subjugated his homeworld and made the religion illegal. Syn decided to fill the spiritual void left in his heart by taking the New Order and its doctrines as his own ideals. He later found a new sort of religion within the Church of the Dark Side, a group which had been sanctioned by Sate Pestage. While outwardly loyal to the New Order, Syn became increasingly more dedicated to the Church of the Dark Side, and even had the Prophetess Merilli at his side when he established his holdings at Kashyyyk. He was defeated by Admiral Ackbar during the liberation of Kashyyyk when his flagship, Fi, was destroyed. (ECH, SWI66)

Syncloth

developed during the last years of the Old Republic, syncloth was used to create towels and athletic clothing. It was known for its absorbent properties, and could absorb large quantities of water before feeling wet. (MBS)

Synchronics

this corporation produced reflective body gloves that helped the wearer survive a blaster shot. (GG10)

Syndaar

this planet served as the Imperial capital world of Thrasybule Sector. (ND)

Syndaar Military Academy

this military prep school was the most prestigious of the Imperial-sponsored academies in Thrasybule Sector. (ND)

Syndaar Military Prep School

see Syndaar Military Academy. (ND)

Syndic

this is a title of respect used on many planets throughout the galaxy. (EGC, VOF)

Syndic

this was the title given to the four Chiss individuals who controlled the four ruling houses, and represented the Houses in the government on Csilla. (GMR5)

Syndic Mitth'raw'nuruodo

this was the Chiss family from which Grand Admiral Thrawn emerged during the height of the New Order. In the wake of Thrawn's death and the destruction of the Empire, the Chiss chose to ignore the fact that Syndic Mitth'raw'nuruodo even existed. However, the Chiss acknowledged that House Nuruodo remained in command of the military. (DJ)

Syndicat

this large, criminal organization took control of the planet Phindar some years before the Battle of Naboo. They kept the general populace poor and needy, so that hundreds would line up for a single loaf of bread, rather than worry about rebelling against the Syndicat. The Syndicat went so far as to blockade the planet Phindar, to maintain its hold on the Phindians. It was led by the Phindian Baftu and his assistant, Terra, when Guerra and Paxxi Derida tried to enlist the help of Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi in freeing Phindar from the Syndicat. The Syndicat went so far as to remove the memories of anyone suspected of acting against it, then set them free on another world as punishment. Sometimes, memory-wiped Phindians were let loose on Phindar itself, although far from their homes. This process was known as "renewal." The Syndicat began supporting Prince Beju of Gala, in his bid to win the general elections there, in the hopes of taking control of the planet Gala as well. This would allow them to extend their influence and increase their profits. However, their plans were exposed by the Derida brothers with the help of the Jedi, and the Syndicat was destroyed when Baftu was captured by the Phindian resistance. (HP)

Syndicate One

this organization was formed from the marketing division of Trigdale Metallurgy. Following the Battle of Endor, Trigdale cut off several of its subordinate divisions. Saujutta-Ok-Topii, the Director of Marketing at the time, recognized the potential strengths of her division, and took much of her own personal savings to form Syndicate One on Valgauth. The new corporation became known as a weapons manufacturing and distribution business. (SWJ8)

Syned

this cold, ice-covered planet is located on the outer fringe of its system, and was devoid of natural life. However, a small outpost sprang up under protective domes and in underground cities. The outpost quickly grew into a bustling transfer station, mainly because of its proximity to the Duros Space Run, and was eventually garrisoned by the Empire. (GMH)

Synergentics

this small corporation produced several pieces of technology for use in kitchens and food preparation. (GFT)

Synfleece

this was a manufactured form of fleece, used to create warm jackets and vests. (UF)

Syngia Moon

this world was known as a vacation paradise. (DR)

Syngranite

an artificial stone used as a building material. (TME)

Syni IV

the Alliance once tried to seize the Imperial garrison on this planet. The Alliance commanding officer kept his troops outside weapons range which flying sorties over the garrison. Unfortunately for the Alliance, the team which was supposed to jam Imperial communications failed to complete their tasks. The Imperial commander called for reinforcements, and an Imperial-class Star Destroyer bombarded the Alliance forces into submission. (SWJ12)

Sy'nir

this was a common Psadan name. (UANT)

Synnt-ovations, Incorporated

this specialty weapons manufacturer was best known for its Credit Case Surprise device. (GFT)

Synoptic Teacher

developed and produced by Consolidated Learning Systems, this device allowed the user to rapidly obtain new information by transferring data directly to the brain at the subconscious level. Perfectly safe, the Synoptic Teacher could be used while you slept, implanting language courses, astrogation techniques, and other pieces of knowledge into your brain for quick retrieval. (GFT)

Synostat

this medicinal lubricant was used to keep clamps and other tools pliable and clean, as it provided both a barrier from moisture and germ-killing abilities. (MJH)

Synrock

a building material (COTF)

Syn's Shadow

this modified yacht was the personal ship of Nariss Siv Loqesh, who often traveled under the alias of Andov Syn. The Syn's Shadow was armed with a pair of laser cannons. (SWG6)

Synsilk

a fabric used for bedclothes. (LCM)

Synstone

a building material made from natural rock. The rock is crushed and mixed into a slurry with chemical dissolvants. It is then cast or sprayed onto the frame of a building to harden. The resulting synstone covering is much stronger and more resistant than natural stone. (SE)

Synthale

this was a type of synthetic ale that was produced on many backwater worlds during the height of the New Order. (SWG6)

Synthax-7

this voice synthesizer was developed by SoroSuub, and allowed beings who lacked adequate vocal cords to converse in a normal manner. The Synthax-7 was implanted in the throat, so that the user appeared to be talking without assistance. (WSV)

Synth-crystal

this was the generic term used to describe any synthetic crystal, from those used in manufacturing and jewelry to the crystals used in the lightsabers of the Sith. (VD3)

Synthdroid

manufactured by Loronar Corporation after the formation of the New Republic, synthdroids were mechanical constructs which had sculpted synthflesh grown over their metal armatures. They had minimal internal computing power, since their actions were centrally controlled via the use of CCIR technology. Loronar supplied a number of synthdroids to Seti Ashgad and Dzym during their attempt to take control of the galaxy, for synthdroids proved to be excellent workers. Even when the Death Seed plague was consuming the synthflesh, the droid armature kept right on working. However, the synthdroids' central processor was destroyed by Leia Organa-Solo during her escape from Ashgad's Hweg Shul fortress, and they were unable to stop her. (POT)

SyntheCure

this small medical manufacturer produced a variety of sprayable plasto-cast dispensers. (FOP, GFT)

Syntherope

this strong, lightweight cord is found in many survival packs. Originally produced by Degan Explorations, syntherope provided climbers with a high-friction, corded material that gave excellent gripping power over its small surface area. (RASB, AEG)

SyntheTech

the company which manufactures AA-1 VerboBrains. (SWSB, IG1)

Synthewood

this was a synthetic building material which resembled natural wood. It was used in a variety of furniture applications during the early decades of the New Republic. (EOV, GMR8)

Synthflesh

this was the name given to a synthetic skin that was used to cover and bind wounds until the natural skin can heal. It was a quasi-living material, grown for a specific purpose. (HSR, DFR, POT, MBS)

Synth-harmonica

a musical instrument, the synth-harmonica was an electronic device which was designed to be played by virtually any race of being. (HR, GUN)

Synthleather

as its name implies, this was a form of synthetic leather used to create imitation-leather clothing as well as to cover furniture. (TFNR)

Synthmilk

this was a form of synthetic milk, developed to provide calcium and other nutrients to beings who lived on planets which had no source of natural milk. (T)

Synthoweb

this form of netting was used by miners and zero-g craftsmen, because it was durable and could conform to almost any shape. Miners used it as a way to hold lanterns atop their heads while working deep in mine shafts. (JH)

Synthplas

this incredibly strong material was used to create domes, which were used on inhospitable planets to form contained living areas. (BP)

Synthplate

this material was known for its strength and durability, and was often used to form security locks. (CCC)

Synth-sapph

this form of lab-created gemstone is often used in place of real sapphires. Wealthy people use synth-sapphs to discourage would-be thieves. (TBH)

Synthsteak

this was a processed foodstuff that resembled steak in texture and taste. It was easily produced, and provided much the same nutrients as a real steak, but without the slaughter of herd animals that many not have existed on a given planet. (T)

Synth-steel

a material used in construction, synth-steel was as strong as pure steel, but less costly. (E1A5)

Synthstone

this was a form of manufacturer gemstone, often created as an imitation of a more valuable stone. It could also be used to mimic raw stone, allowing for the construction of natural-seeming walls. (TCD, IWSST)

Synthtech Medtech Corporation

this medical corporation produced a wide range of medical scanners and irradiation boxes for military and field use. (FOP, PSG)

Synthtone

a musical instrument that creates the sounds of other instruments using electronics. (ISU)

Synth-viol

this was an electronic form of the standard viol, popular with youths during the last decades of the Old Republic. (HNN4)

Syntonium

a crystal hauled by Tem Chesko. (SWG3)

Syp

a tree native to the planet Ossel II, it is harvested by the Ossan for its beautiful wood. (GG4)

Syren

a flowering, carnivorous plant native to Kashyyyk, the syren grew on the floor of the dense jungle. The syren plant had two oval-shaped, yellow petals which grew atop a thick, blood-red stalk. In the center of the two petals was a mass of glossy, white fibers that exuded a wide variety of pheromones. These pheromones, in turn, attracted a wide variety of wildlife. When a creature touched the inner surface of a petal, the petals clamped shut over the prey, and the syren began to secrete digestive fluids to consume the prey. The Wookiees of Kashyyyk, as a test of bravery and maturity, sent groups of young Wookiees to the jungle floor to harvest the fibers. The stronger Wookiees held the petals open while others remove the fibers, which are used to form strong ropes. The average syren grew to a height of six to seven meters, and lived for just a single year. During Kashyyyk's winter season, the syren plants died out. Their brittle husks were ripped apart by seasonal winds, scattering the syren's seeds across the jungle floor. (HTF, TEP, GMR4)

Syren

this was a Trade Federation pleasure liner which plied the oceans of the planet Maramere, during the years following the Battle of Naboo. About six years after the Battle of Naboo, the Syren was ambushed by Sol Sixxa and his pirates. Lord Toat was killed, and Ruuk was thrown overboard before the Syren was scuttled and sent to the bottom of the ocean. It was later discovered by the Feeorin mercenary Nym and his crew, and scavenged for any information leading to the location of Sixxa. Nym managed to recover the head of the droid PL-37 before being attacked by a large sea creature. (CRBN)

Syril

this Alliance Intelligence agent scouted the planet Aargau for the Alliance, shortly after the Battle of Hoth. He was assisted by the droids R2-D2 and C-3PO, although C-3PO provided Syril with more irrelevant data than usable information. (PH)

Syron Aalun

this was one of the three ruetsavii sent to chronicle and criticize the life of Ooryl Qrygg. (BW)

Syrtik

this male Fia was a Captain in the Galantos Guard during the height of the Yuuzhan Vong invasion of the galaxy. It was Captain Syrtik, despite orders that came down from Councilor Jobath himself, who decided to lend assistance to the meager forces of the Galactic Alliance that had arrived at Galantos to restore communications. The Fia had been convinced that the Yuuzhan Vong would leave them alone, but the alien invaders were not about to leave an armed force active on their rear flanks. The Yuuzhan Vong attacked, and only the timely intervention of Leia Organa Solo and her family managed to alert the Fia to their danger. Syrtik, seeing that the Galactic Alliance's forces were outnumbered, provided the assistance of his own squadron, knowing that he might be courtmartialed for his actions. In the end, the Yuuzhan Vong were driven off, and the Fia managed to turn their disloyalty into feigned miscommunication. Captain Syrtik was regarded as a hero by the Fia population, which prevented any form of discipline, lest the people become outraged at the government. (FH1)

Syruss System

this star system was under Imperial control, during the early years of the Galactic Civil War. An Alliance operation was launched at the space station which patrolled the system, shortly after the Battle of Yavin, in which the Alliance forces managed to defeat the Imperials and liberate the system. (GMR3)

Sysco

this man served as the Captain of the Imperial Army squadrons which were assigned to the Dark Jedi Jerec and his command ship, the Vengeance, during the height of the Galactic Civil War. (RAG)

System Patrol Craft

fast, powerful sublight ships used by the Empire as customs inspection ships as well as search-and-rescue ships. (ISB, DFR)

Systems Control

a Star Destroyer crew which is in control of the ship's computer systems. (DFR)

Systems Infiltration Manager

this small computer module was designed by the programmer Malik for the Empire. It was, at heart, a high-powered problem solver, with programming that gave it the ability to get inside a starship's basic programming and take it apart. Eventually the SIM, as it was called, would take complete control of the starship. Disguised as the Systems Integration Manager, the module was allowed onto the Star of Empire to be tested as a navigation system. Malik got the module installed, and began running the programs to evacuate the ship's passengers and crew. However, at the last moment, Malik refused to enter the necessary codes to free the SIM program to take complete control of the ship. The program tortured him by locking him in a room and modifying the environment. The SIM program was able to control life support as well as the droid population of the ship, and sent out several bands of maintenance droids to kill off any of the passengers and crew that remained aboard. In the meantime, the SIM program had found another ally in the young boy, Zak Arranda. Zak believed that the SIM program was trying to help, and unwittingly entered the necessary codes. SIM came to life and took control of the Star of Empire. The survivors managed to escape from SIM and the ship by merely waiting the program out and taking a big chance when the opportunity came. Hoole managed to reach the Shroud and Dash Rendar recovered the Outrider, and then shot a pair of proton torpedoes into the engines of the Star of Empire. They then sent a message to the Alliance, giving them the location of the ship. SIM, however, managed to download itself into the computer banks of a nearby space station, and waiting until it could insinuate itself into another starship. (GOF10)

Systems Integration Manager

this false cover was supposed to be a device hailed as the next generation in shipboard computers by the Empire. The primary difference between a droid or a navigational computer and the SIM (as it was referred to) was that the SIM could actually decide for itself where to go and how to get there. However, SIM was not what it seemed to be. In fact, the real name for the computer was Systems Infiltration Manager, and it was designed to take control of an enemy ship after being inserted into its computer core. (GOF10)

Sythluss Leethe

this Sluissi owned and operated the modified YT-1300 freighter known as The Maker. In order to prevent the ship from being stolen, Leethe installed a wide range of security and anti-theft systems aboard the ship. Leethe was a black market droid manufacturer, and often traveled in his ship under the false identification of the One Shot. Unfortunately for Leethe, T'Charek Haathi and her Alliance shipjacking team managed to get by The Maker's systems and steal the ship. (SWJ13)

Syub

this name was common among Sullustan males, and meant "industrious". (GCG)

Syub Snunb

a Sullustan, Syub Snunb served as part of the Sullustan Home Guard, protecting his planet from pirates and other invasions. When the leaders of Sullust decided to secede from the Empire, they appointed Syub to be the commander to lead the Alliance's fleet to the Sullust System, prior to the Battle of Endor. He was chosen to command the escort frigate Antares Six, which he did with pride until being promoted to the command of the Resolve in the newly-commissioned Fifth Battle Group. (DE1, DESB, BTS)

Syvris

this moon, located on the border between Hutt space and Imperial-controlled space, was subjugated by Imperial forces shortly before the Battle of Hoth. Many of the moon's residents were smugglers, who lived and worked at a shadowport located in its largest crater. They believed that the shadowport's location had been given to the Empire by Basz Maliyu. The shadowport had been run by Rance, but he perished in the attack. (SWJ13)

Syward

this was the chief port city of the planet Lavisar. (IF)

Syychi

this albino Wookiee was a partner of Memcha-Badawzi, working on the planet Neftali as the second-in-command of the Cordel Cove starport. Syychi was a former slave who was born on Vizcarra and never saw the Wookiee homeworld of Kashyyyk. Syychi was used on several Imperial projects, and was constantly moved from remote camps to the Vizcarra prison. During transport back to Vizcarra, Syychi found herself sharing a cell with Memcha. The Twi'lek inspired Syychi to rise above her captors, and the pair incited a slave revolt and overpowered their Imperial captors. Memcha and Syychi then fled to Neftali at the bidding of Memcha's father, Abdi-Badawzi, and took up the management of the Cordel Cove operations. (BSS)

Szardra

this was the shortened name of a noted Chiss individual. (UANT)

Szechual

this species of tree was native to the fourth moon of Yavin. (GG2)

S'Zingo
